THE HISTORY OF THE JEWS, FROM JESUS CHRIST TO The Present Time:

Containing

Their Antiquities, their Religion, their Rites,

The Dispersion of the Ten Tribes in the East,

AND

The Persecutions this Nation has suffer'd in the West.

BEING A

SUPPLEMENT AND CONTINUATION OF The History of Josephus.

Written in French by Mr. BASNAGE.

Translated into English by The. Taylor, A. M.

LONDON,

Printed for J. Beaver and B. Lintot in Fleetstreet, R. Knaplock in St. Paul's Church-Yard, J. Sprint in Little Brittain, A. Bell, R. Smith, and J. Round in Cornhill. 1708.

The History of Joseph:

OR

CONTINUATION

AND

SUPPLEMENT

BEING A

The Portsmouth and Dartmouth Lives now Printed in one Vol.

AND

The Different Lives in one Book

Containing

The Principal Things

TO JESUS CHRIST

FROM

THE NEWS

OF THE HISTORY

OF THE

TO THE

Right Reverend Father in GOD,

JONATHAN,

Lord Biſhop of Wincheſter,

PRELATE

OF THE

Moſt Noble Order of the GARTER.

My LORD,

THAT Apoſtolical Zeal which has always appear'd in Your Lordſhip, for the Advancement of true Religion, and eſpecially for the Welfare of that Bulwark of it, the Church of England, which You ſo Eminently expreſs'd by expoſing your Self to the greateſt Dangers, to ſcreen it from Oppreſſion, makes me preſume to lay this Tranſlation at your Lordſhip's Feet; Becauſe one of the chiefeſt Deſigns of this Book, is to lay before the Scoffers and Deſpiſers of our Religion, an Argument of its Truth in a Language they underſtand: An Argument which if a Deiſt could conſider in that amazing Chain of Providence it is involved in, would effectually convince him, that not a Tittle ſhall fail of all the Promiſes and Menaces of the Goſpel.

If he demand a preſent Miracle for his Faith; Behold! here the greateſt, of more than ſixteen hundred Years Continuance, the Jews wandring, and diſperſed into all Corners of the Earth, by the Malediction of Heaven: Often maſſacred and exil'd in as great Multitudes as came from Egypt; Deſpiſed, hated, perſecuted by all Nations; and tho mingled and confounded with them, ſtill diſtinguiſhed in their Laws, Cuſtoms and Religion, remaining a ſtanding Evidence of Divine Vengeance upon Unbelief, and an indelible Monument of the Truth of Chriſtianity.

It muſt be hard for the moſt unbelieving and impenetrable Temper, to ſtand unſhock'd and unconvinced upon this thorough View of the direful Effects they drew down from Heaven upon their Nation, when they imprecated upon themſelves and their Poſterity, the Blood of the Saviour of the World: And if late Poſterity, in ſo ſtupendious a manner, ſuffer for the Sins and Infidelity of their Anceſtors; What Fate may we ſuppoſe is likely to purſue our Tribes of Atheiſts, Deiſts and Apoſtates, who, not from inbred Prejudices or Education, but obſtinate and wilful Blindneſs, ſtill crucify the Lord of Life and Glory.

'Tis an aſtoniſhing Thought, and worthy to be well-weighed by all the inveterate Enemies and Blaſphemers of the Chriſtian Church, who with uncontroll'd Licenſe and Impunity, wound and tear it, in its moſt Pure and Orthodox (I might ſay) its moſt vital and eſſential Part, The Church of ENGLAND.

That God may long continue Your Lordſhip among us, for the Good of the Church in general, and of your Dioceſs in particular, is the earneſt Prayer of,

My LORD,

Your Lordſhip's

Moſt Dutiful Son,

and Obedient Servant,

THO. TAYLOR.

TO THE
Reverend Mr. THOMAS TAYLOR.

SIR,

IT would be a piece of Ingratitude not to be ſenſible of the Honour you have done me by tranſlating my Hiſtory of the Jews into Engliſh. Tho I can't tell whether this is a Service to me, ſince it makes me appear before thoſe Eminent Men of your Nation, whoſe Learning is ſo profound, well digeſted, and admir'd; yet I muſt acknowledge with Thanks that you have given undeniable Proofs of your good Will towards me. My Book cou'd not fall into better Hands than Yours.

I have had a great many Sheets of your Tranſlation; but it doth not belong to me to beſtow upon you the Encomiums you deſerve for your polite and clear Stile. A Foreigner is not a fit Judge of the Nicety of a Tongue, which he hath only learn'd for the ſake of thoſe excellent Books that are writ in that Language. But I can tell you that I am fully perſwaded, that you have expreſs'd my Meaning; and that as far as I have read and compar'd your Tranſlation with the Original, I found it very exact. I have alſo communicated it to ſome of my Friends, who were of the ſame Opinion. So that I do not doubt but the World will ratify it. If you deſire that this Letter ſhou'd be prefix'd to the Book, I heartily give my Conſent to it; and you may diſpoſe of it as you ſhall think fit. It is an Honour to me that you dedicate my Book to ſo eminent a Prelate as my Lord Biſhop of Wincheſter. I deſire you'll aſſure him of my Devoirs, which I intend to do my ſelf. I am,

SIR,

At Rotterdam, this 27th of January, 1708.

Your moſt Affectionate, and moſt Obedient Servant,

BASNAGE.

THE PLAN OF THIS HISTORY.

THIS is a Collection of all, that relates to the Religion and Hiſtory of the Jews, from the Time of Herod the Great. I have follow'd that Nation into all the Places of the World, where they have fled for Refuge; and reviv'd the Ten Tribes, which ſeem'd bury'd in the Eaſt. I have examin'd what relates to the Schiſms, Sects, Tenets and Ceremonies, which have been introduc'd into their Religion. I have divided the Matters ſo, that they may be recurr'd to without Trouble, and not loaded the Text with Hebrew Characters and Quotations; becauſe I wou'd not thereby diſguſt many Readers, who do not underſtand them.

Perhaps it will be ſaid, that as an Architect, who runs over Plains and Deſarts to gather ſome ſcatter'd Stones, doth not perform his Part, unleſs he builds a ſolid and convenient Edifice with them: Neither have I perform'd mine, tho I have taken a great deal of Pains to collect ſome ſcatter'd Fragments, unleſs they be uſeful and entertaining. But I ought not to judge of my own Performance, and therefore ſhall lay down the Plan of it in few Words.

1. I ought naturally to have began where Joſephus left off, after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; becauſe that Event is ſufficiently known. However, I have thought it neceſſary, to give a general Account of the Government of this Nation, whilſt they, as yet, enjoy'd ſome Proſperity; and that the Family and Succeſſion of the Herods ought to be put in a true Light, in order to explain many Places in the New Teſtament, and to ſupply by ſeveral Remarks and Obſervations what is wanting in Joſephus.

I thought, at firſt, that a few Sheets wou'd have ſerv'd to illuſtrate this; and that I might have included in the ſame Book, the Hiſtory of the Samaritans, Caraites, and other Sectaries; and by that Means give a full Account of the State of the Jewiſh Church in the Time of our Lord. But leaſt I ſhou'd ſwell the firſt Book too much; and that I might diſtinguiſh Matters more exactly, I have made a particular Book of what concerns the Jewiſh Schiſmaticks and Sectaries.

2. The Hiſtory of the Samaritans is ſo much the more curious, becauſe little known, and a great Part of it taken from their Chronicle. We have writ the Hiſtory, not only of the Sects mention'd in the Goſpel, but alſo that of the Caraites, who are Enemies to the Phariſees and Traditioniſts, whoſe Succeſſion and Tenets we have had much a-do to diſcover, tho that Part of the Jewiſh Church ſubſiſts to this Day.

3. The Jews, after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, had Patriarchs in Judæa, and Princes of the Captivity in the Eaſt. They alſo boaſt of different Orders of Doctors, who have handed down their Religion to one another; and therefore we give a diſtinct Account of the Patriarchs, the Chiefs of the Captivity and the Doctors, who have either compos'd or explain'd the Thalmud.

Some perhaps may think, that we are too large upon the Cabaliſts, whoſe myſtical Science is not diſcover'd without Difficulty, and ſeems uſeleſs. But not to examine at preſent, whether it be proper to expoſe the Vanity of thoſe Speculations, three Things have made this Diſcuſſion neceſſary to us. 1ſt. The Gnoſticks and Hereticks of the ſecond Century, had a great Affinity with the Cabaliſts, from whom they borrow'd their Emanations, Æons and barbarous Names. They may be known by one another; and whatſoever can contribute to lay open the Errors of thoſe ancient Hereticks, is of ſome Uſe, and particularly to us, who deſign to write their Hiſtory. 2dly. Beſides, 'tis almoſt a general Prejudice among the Learned, that the Heathens have taken their Cabala and Tradition from the Jews; and that the Religion of the latter hath been receiv'd by the others, either becauſe they read the Books of Moſes, ſaw the Prophets, or elſe that the Jewiſh Religion hath been convey'd to them by more imperceptible Means. This very Prejudice hath engag'd us to run up as high as the Original Source of the Cabala among the Egyptians, to unfold the Principles of Philoſophers, and to ſhew that they did not agree with the Jews, but in Notions common to Mankind; and that the Rabbins have been rather their Diſciples, than Maſters.

ter

Some think to do a great Honour to Religion, to prove, that the Trinity hath been believ'd and taught by the Philoſophers; and that Pythagoras underſtood, * How to reconcile Free-will with Divine Providence, without which Agreement St. Auguſtin affirms, that we can neither believe right, nor live well. For my Part, I do not think the Heathen Sages abler Divines than the Chriſtian Doctors; or that they learn'd the Art † of believing right, and living well, by reconciling Free-will with Providence. For we are perſwaded, that the Myſteries of the Trinity, and of Man's Redemption, which are ſo much above the Reach of human Underſtanding, were never known by the Light of Nature; and that the Revelation, which the Jews had of thoſe great Myſteries, was not clear enough to force the Gentiles to adopt thoſe Truths. They had neither read, nor ſufficiently ſtudied the Canonical Writings of the Jews, or their Tradition, to have believ'd theſe Myſteries, and inſerted them in their Works. In ſhort, we are oblig'd to explain the different Degrees of this Cabala, to ſhew what particularly diſtinguiſhes the Jews from the Gentiles and Chriſtians, who, but too often, follow their Steps. So that we ſhall find, in the 3*d* Book, the Cabala or Myſtick Theology of the Egyptians, who were the firſt Authors of it; and that of the Philoſophers, Poets, Apoſtles, Fathers of the Church, and of other Chriſtians, which we ſhall compare with that of the Jews.

4. The 4*th* Book contains a Syſtem of the Jewiſh Theology. We have not taken it from Scripture, by going ſo far back as the Ages, which preceded the Coming of the Meſſiah; but look'd into the modern Doctors, to find what is moſt likely to explain the Belief of the Synagogue. We have made a Syſtem and Body of Religion of it; which was the more difficult, becauſe the Rabbins often deviate from their Subject, and don't give themſelves the Trouble to make their Tradition coherent. As they divide into different Opinions, we have here given the principal ones, concerning the Creation and Propheſy. Spinoſa hath hereupon preferr'd the Doctors of his own Nation to the Philoſophers, and his great Skill conſiſted in making the Emanations, taught by the Cabaliſts, agree with the Principles of Deſcartes.

The Article of the Meſſiah hath held us much longer than the others, becauſe of greater Moment. We have done three Things upon this Article. Firſt, by leaving our general Method, we have gone back as far as the Prophets to unravel the Characters, which theſe inſpir'd Writers have given of the Deliverer of the Jewiſh Nation; becauſe the Compariſon, that is made thereof with the Notions of the Modern Doctors, doth contribute to the Manifeſtation of the Truth. Thoſe, who think this a Digreſſion, or Controverſy, may over-look it. We have afterwards examin'd the different Means, which the Jewiſh Church had to know the Meſſiah, either by Tradition, or the explaining of divers Types, which was receiv'd by the Doctors at the Time that Chriſt appear'd; and which the Jews have ſince forgot. Theſe Means had been more effectual, if the Divinity of the Meſſiah had been a conſtant Tenet among the Jews, as ſome Learned Men have endeavour'd to prove. As their Arguments have a great Shew of Reaſon, we have thought them worth mentioning. But notwithſtanding it is our Intereſt to be of their Opinion; which beſides ſtrongly concludes againſt the Antitrinitarians; Yet we cou'd not be induc'd to father upon the Jews a Tenet, which they never received, and thereby make their Incredulity, which is but too deplorable, more criminal than really it is.

Laſtly, we have given a particular Account of the different Notions which the Thalmudiſts, or Modern Rabbins have of the Meſſiah; and tho the bare reading of the Toldos Jeſchu, or rather of the Romances they have invented concerning Chriſt, is enough to convince us of the Ignorance and Impoſture of thoſe who have writ them; yet we have taken care to refute thoſe Books, leaſt the Faith of the Weak might he ſtagger'd.

We have alſo explain'd, as well as we cou'd, the different Revolutions of Souls. For tho moſt Jews are of the Sect of Pythagoras, and believe a Metempſycoſis; yet their different Opinions about it, make that Part of their Theology very obſcure. In a Word, we have given an exact Account of their Church and Purgatory, and of what they think of the future Happineſs or Miſery of Souls.

This Book hath frequent Allegories, bold Metaphors, far-fetch'd Explications, ſtrain'd and wild Fancies; yet we have been ſparing and cautious in our Collection, that the Reader might not be tir'd with them; and we ſhall think our ſelves happy, if we have choſen the beſt. But ſince we explain the Religion of the Jews, we were oblig'd to give a Taſte of the Stile and Genius of the Eaſtern Doctors, which differ ſo much from ours. This is neceſſary for the underſtanding of a great many Places of Scripture. In fine, thoſe who diſpute with us about the Metaphorical Senſe of the Words of Jeſus Chriſt, upon the Euchariſt, will be very much

* Life of Pythagoras, by Mr. Dacier, in the Preface. † Ibid.

much ſurpriz'd to ſee at every Turn ſo many Metaphors heap'd upon one another, and the moſt uncouth Figures made uſe of, without ever giving the Reader Notice of them. The Plainneſs wherewith we write in the Weſt, tho it be natural and unaffected, yet ſhocks the Orientals, as much as their perpetual Metaphors and Hyperbolical Stile ſhock us.

5. Ceremonies made a conſiderable Part of the Jewiſh Religion, and therefore we have put them in a particular Book by themſelves. The Thalmud, which contains the Reſolution of Doubts upon this Subject, takes up ſeveral Volumes; and the Tract of Leo of Modena, which is its Supplement, and hath been ſo often re-printed, ſeem'd to us too ſhort. We have avoided the tedious Length of the Doctors, who raiſe and ſolve Scruples about a great many Trifles; as well as the Brevity of Leo, who is not particular enough. The Chriſtians have a particular Intereſt to ſtudy theſe Rites; becauſe they may find in them the Footſteps of the ancient Cuſtoms practis'd before the time of Chriſt; beſides theſe Rites help to explain one another. We have alſo ſometimes recurr'd to their Original, to ſhew how the Modern and Ancient Ceremonies agree, and to facilitate the Explanation of ſeveral Places of Scripture.

'Tis no new thing to maintain, that the Sanhedrim is not ſo ancient as it was thought ſometime ſince. However ſeveral Criticks will not yield to the Arguments which prove this, by fixing the firſt Original of this Great Council to the times of the Maccabees.

If there had been a Sanhedrim in Egypt before Moſes came out of it, as it is affirm'd, it wou'd not be ſtrange, that this Inſtitution had paſs'd into the Commonwealth of Iſrael, and been there preſerv'd. But who can at this day diſcover the Polity and ancient Government of the Egyptians? It is but by uncertain Conjectures that we are aſſur'd * that it was compos'd of Prieſts; that theſe Clergymen-Counſellors wore white Garments, and had a Pontiff at their Head, who was diſtinguiſh'd by ſomepeculiar Ornament, as the High Prieſt among the Jews. But the Name of Sanhedrim can't be given to this Egyptian Council, ſince that Name came from Greece. The Counſellors eſtabliſh'd by Moſes being inſpir'd, and that Divine Inſpiration ceaſing, the Authority of that Council ceas'd too. The Sanhedrim, whoſe Hiſtory we have ſet down, was not ſettled till the time of the Maccabees. We have fix'd its Original to that time, after having try'd to no purpoſe whether it cou'd be fix'd to any other. A Learned Man, very skilful and well vers'd in thoſe Matters, hath ſince objected to us, that the Sanhedrim is found in the Chronicle of the Samaritans, or Book of Joſhua. This Objection wou'd be unanſwerable, was the Antiquity aſcrib'd to the Chronicle of the Samaritans allow'd by us; but we are ſo far from believing it as ancient as the Samaritans make it, that we think that it carries along with it very palpable Marks of its Novelty. What is ſaid of the Sanhedrim is only upon the falſe Notions of the Jews, or rather upon what Moſes ſaid of the Council of the Seventy Elders. The Inſtitution of Synagogues is not older than the Maccabees. For we read no where that they were burnt or demoliſh'd, or prophan'd during the Perſecution under Antiochus. I confeſs, that it is very wonderful, that God who had enjoyn'd the Religious Obſervation of the Sabbaths, had not likewiſe provided means to have them celebrated, by ordering in ev'ry City ſome Places of Publick Worſhip, and Levites at the Head of every Congregation to read and explain the Law. But if all that we have ſaid of the Novelty of Synagogues is ſeriouſly examined, it will eaſily appear, that thoſe, who maintain it, are not miſtaken.

We alſo ſpeak of their Houſes of Judgment and Academies. That of Tiberias flouriſh'd and was famous a long time. The Maſorethes are plac'd there, who have added Points or Vowels to the Hebrew Conſonants. But this was not done but a long time after the firſt Eſtabliſhment of that Academy, (viz.) five or ſix hundred Years after St. Jerome, and about the eleventh Century of the Chriſtian Æra. There were Academies in Perſia for the diſpers'd Tribes, and when the Perſecution deſtroy'd them, new ones were erected in France, whoſe Doctors were highly eſteem'd and reverenc'd. The Authority, which Diſciples give to their Maſters, or rather the Power which Maſters uſurp over their Diſciples or Equals, is exceſſive.

We have dwelt longer upon the Paſſeover than upon any other Feſtival, not only upon the Score of the Ceremonies obſerv'd in it; but alſo becauſe it lay upon us to explain how that Feſtival was regulated by Intercalations. This Fact is ſo conteſted among the Learned Criticks, that we have been oblig'd to unfold their Sentiments, and the Difficulties wrapp'd up in them, that they may be weigh'd, and the right Side more eaſily taken.

We have not forgot to ſpeak of the Novelty of Excommunication. It was not known till after the Inſtitution of the Sanhedrim. So that in the time of Chriſt it was not venerable for its Antiquity, tho it was very formidable, becauſe very ſeverely inflicted.

This Preface would be too prolix and tedious, ſhou'd we give a particular Account of the other Rites, which are explain'd in the Fifth Book. I will therefore come to the Hiſtory of the Diſperſions, which is the moſt Important and longeſt Part of this Work.

6. We begin it with a general Account of all the Diſperſions that have happen'd to the Jews, in order to diſcover their Original in all the Places they now inhabit. The Jews make themſelves Ancient every where, according to the Genius of all Nations, who are aſham'd

* V. Nicolaus de Synedr. Ægyptiorum.

of

of a new Original; and call Fables and the Obſcurity of Ages to their Aſſiſtance to conceal their firſt Riſe from the World. They have fanſy'd unknown Kingdoms, where they rule like Sovereigns, that they might be the better able to maintain, that the Prophecy of Jacob is not yet accompliſh'd, and, That the Scepter is ſtill in the hand of Judah, and the Law-giver between his Feet, Gen. 49. 10. Some Chriſtians have favour'd theſe Chimerical Pretenſions. We have therefore thought it neceſſary, in order to avoid Repetitions, to examine firſt what the Jews themſelves ſay of their Diſperſions into ſeveral different Parts of the World; and afterwards to obſerve the true Places where they reſide, either ſince Shalmaneſer carry'd away the ten Tribes into the Eaſt, or ſince Jeruſalem was deſtroy'd firſt by Titus, and afterwards by Adrian, or ſince they have been diſpers'd by other Perſecutions.

After we have given this General Account, we divide the Nation into two different Parts, whereof one compos'd of the ten Tribes carry'd away by Shalmaneſer, and of thoſe diſpers'd in Egypt and the Grecian Empire, are call'd the Jews of the Eaſt; and the other compos'd of the Jews ſettl'd in the Empire, Italy, Spain, and the Gauls, are call'd the Jews of the Weſt.

We follow the Ten Tribes from Age to Age. We ſpeak of their Princes of the Captivity, of the Chiefs of their Academies, of the Names and Works of the Eminent Men, who flouriſh'd in them; and of the Share they have had in the great Events of the Perſian Monarchy, which was reduc'd very low, by the Saracens, in the Reign of Iſdigerdes. Theſe Tribes flouriſh'd again under the Califs, the Succeſſors of Mahomet; although this Impoſtor finding them very ſtrong and powerful in Arabia, had made War againſt them, and forc'd them to pay him Tribute. The Homerites, who had Cities and Kings of their own, and were all Jews, were likewiſe beaten and deſtroy'd. Thoſe of Judæa have undergone terrible Revolutions in the Reigns of Trajan and Adrian; yet they rais'd themſelves up again, and appointed Patriarchs over themſelves, that were not aboliſh'd till the Fifth Century. Conſtantine and his Children publiſh'd ſeveral Laws againſt them. The Protection of Julian made them inſolent; but this Proſperity, like Light'ning, appear'd and vaniſh'd in a Moment. Theodoſius hinder'd their Celebrating the Feaſt of Haman; becauſe they were accus'd of Inſulting the Chriſtians, as of Sacrificing Chriſtian Children in it. Cyril, Patriarch of Alexandria, drove a Hundred Thouſand Jews out of that great City, wherein he bore a Tyrannical Sway.

The Jews had alſo particular Cities in the Reign of Juſtinian, from which they excluded all Chriſtians. They even rebell'd againſt that Emperour, who found Means to ſuppreſs and puniſh them, and to reduce them very low. They were impeach'd of many Crimes; and it is alſo ſaid, that Heaven wrought mighty Miracles for their Converſion. But their Incredulity cou'd not be vanquiſh'd: And if any of them happen'd to embrace Chriſtianity, Force had a greater Share than Grace, in their Change of Religion. The Chriſtian Populace were eaſily ſtirr'd up againſt that Nation, upon the like Accuſations, whether falſe or true; and wou'd run to the Synagogues to pull them down, and murder thoſe who worſhip'd there. Some Holy Men of thoſe Times ſeem'd to encourage ſuch Commotions; but as we follow the Rules of Hiſtory, we very faithfully relate whatever we have been able to find out, that concerns them. The Chriſtians ought not to think it ſtrange, that we very frequently acquit the Jews of ſeveral Crimes whereof they are not guilty, ſince Juſtice requires it; and that it is eſpouſing a Party to accuſe thoſe of Injuſtice and Violence, who have been unjuſt and cruel. If the Jews ſhou'd, by Chance, caſt their Eyes upon this Hiſtory, they will find in it a great many Events which concern them, and wherewith they are but little acquainted. But as our Deſign is neither to offend, nor to flatter them, they ought not to be ſurpriz'd, that we declare againſt them, when the Facts appear well atteſted.

7. We cou'd not begin the 8*th* Century of the Chriſtian Æra with any thing more remarkable and ſurprizing, than the Converſion of the King of Cozar to Judaiſm. Therein you ſee a Prince, who after having weigh'd all Religions, prefers the Law of Moſes, and eſtabliſhes the Jewiſh Religion in all his Dominions. We afterwards proceed to the Eaſt, to continue the Hiſtory of the Ten Tribes, which preſerv'd their Chiefs of the Captivity, till the 12*th* Century. But as this Hiſtory is cloſely link'd with that of the Califs, we have follow'd the Succeſſion of thoſe Princes; becauſe we may have a clearer Notion of what hath happen'd to the Eaſtern Jews, by the Hiſtory of theſe Califs, whoſe Actions are more ſhining, and fitter to attract Attention. Beſides, as moſt of thoſe Events are very little known, it is a Service to the Publick, to join the Hiſtory of the State, to that of the Jewiſh Church. It is certain, that the Califs have had a great Value for their Eminent Men, and particularly for their Aſtronomers. They were but little perſecuted under theſe Princes, till the Eleventh Century, at which time their Academies were ſhut up, and they forc'd to fly into the Weſt. Their Baniſhment was not ſo general, but a great many Merchants, and conſiderable Perſons remain'd in the Eaſt; and we find alſo, a very clear Account of their Synagogues in the Twelfth Century, in the Travels of Benjamin of Tudela; whereof we give an Extract, with Obſervations, for the better clearing of ſome things wherein he is miſtaken. It was then truly, that the Princes of the Captivity ceas'd; and the Hiſtory of the Ten Tribes became more obſcure after that Time. However, ſeveral Monuments have been diſcover'd, whereby it appears, that they always ſubſiſted, and do ſtill ſubſiſt in the Eaſt.

The West is much more fruitful in Events in theſe laſt Centuries; but moſt of them are Tragical and Calamitous. In the Declenſion and Dregs of Ages, People have been inflam'd with a Spirit of Cruelty and Barbarity againſt them. They were accus'd of being the Cauſe of all the Calamities that happen'd; and charg'd with a world of Crimes, which they never thought of. A vaſt Number of Miracles were invented, in order to convict them, or rather upon a Pretence of Religion, to trample upon and oppreſs them. We have made a Collection of the Laws, which the Councils and Princes have publiſh'd againſt them, whereby a Judgment may be made of the Iniquity of the Ones, and of the Oppreſſion of the Others. People did not keep within the Bounds of the Decrees againſt them. For they were frequently expos'd every where to Military Execution, popular Commotions and Maſſacres: Yet by a Miracle of Providence, which ought to aſtoniſh all Chriſtians; this Nation, hated and perſecuted in all Places for ſo many Ages, ſtill ſubſiſts in all Parts of the World. Spain hath produc'd a great many Famous Rabbins. 'Twas chiefly in that Country, that the Sciences flouriſh'd among the Jews, and eſpecially Aſtronomy; becauſe the Moors, who lov'd it, were more favourable to the Jews than the Chriſtians, who at that Time neglected that Part of Learning; and thoſe laſt, who were threatn'd by their formidable Neighbours, durſt not always perſecute them in their own Dominions. Ferdinand drove them out of Spain, at the End of the Fifteenth Century; but his Politicks were condemn'd; and the Pope himſelf receiv'd thoſe Refugees at Rome, and laugh'd at a bigotted Devotion, which depopulated Kingdoms. The Jews had ſome Academies and Learned Men in France; and Time was, when they had the greateſt Credit at Court, and Offices were obtain'd by their Intereſt. They even became Maſters of the Clergy, by taking the Goods of the Church, and Church-Plate in Pawn. But at laſt their exceſſive Uſury did effectually render them odious. An Impoſtor ſtarted up in the Eleventh Century, and put out his Hiſtory under the Name of Joſeph Ben Gorion; an Extract whereof we have made in this Book, to diſcover both his Impoſture and Ignorance. We alſo mention other Learned Men, and give an Account of their Works.

Italy is one of their ſureſt Sanctuaries; becauſe the Popes having an Intereſt in their Preſervation, are very ſeldom angry with them, and generally protect them againſt their Enemies. They have there ſome Synagogues and Academies; and their Converſion is ſo faintly attempted, that their Number is ſcarce ever diminiſh'd. To conclude, they have ſpread themſelves in England and Germany, where they have ſubſiſted with Splendour. But it will be ſufficient to ſay here, that we do not follow them into all thoſe Places; and that we pick out all the Events which nearly concern them; whereby not only the Hiſtory of paſt Ages, but alſo their preſent State in Europe, Africa and Aſia, may be known. For we have carry'd on our Deſcription to the Year, 1708.

In the compoſing this Hiſtory, we have preferr'd the Authors of the Jewiſh Nation to all others, when Reaſon, and Love to Truth, have not oblig'd us to lay them aſide. We have taken their Tenets and Religion from the Writings of Maimonides, Aben Eſra, Abarbanel, Manaſſeh, and the principal Cabaliſts. The Miſnah, and its Commentators, have furniſh'd us with their Rites and Ceremonies. It was harder for us to unravel their Hiſtory, becauſe the Authors of the Little and Great Chronicle, Abraham Ben-Dior, Ghedalia, Ganz and Solomon, Ben Schebeth, do rather take Notice of the Fathers of their Tradition, than of general and particular Events. If Manaſſeh and Barios had perform'd their Promiſe, we might perhaps have had wonderful Helps; but as they cou'd not make good their intended Project, we have been oblig'd to be ſatisfy'd with what we have found. * If I have done well, and what is fitting to the Story, it is that which I deſir'd; but if ſlenderly and meanly, it is that which I cou'd attain unto.

* 2 Maccab. 15. 38.

THE

THE CONTENTS.

BOOK I. The State and Government of Judæa, under the Race of the Herods. Page 1.

Chap. 1. A general Account of the Jewiſh Nation and Church; with a Scheme of the whole Work. Ibid.

Chap. 2. Containing the Government of Judæa, under the Herods, from Jeſus Chriſt to the Deſtruction of the Temple: The Hiſtory and Genealogy of the Herods explain'd. 4

Chap. 3. A Continuation of the ſame Subject; being a Refutation of what is ſaid of Agrippa the I. and II. and of Berenice. Their Birth, Religion, and the Extent of their Kingdom. 16

The Genealogy of the Herods, according to Father Harduin, confuted in the Hiſtory of the Jews. 27

Chap. 4. The ſecond Degree of the Ruin of the Jews; the Corruption and Decay of the Jewiſh Church; the Power of the High Prieſts and Kings. 29

Chap. 5. The Hiſtory of the High Prieſts, and Deſolation of the Jewiſh Church. 36

Chap. 6. The third Step towards the Ruin of Jeruſalem. Diſorders caus'd by the different Factions of the People. 43

Chap. 7. Whether Abgarus, King of Edeſſa, deſign'd to declare War againſt the Jews, and take Jeruſalem, to revenge Jeſus Chriſt. 48

Chap. 8. Of the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and of its Temple. 53

BOOK II. Containing the Hiſtory of the Sects that were in Being in the Time of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. The Samaritans, Sadducees, Phariſees, Eſſenes, Herodians, &c. Their Original, Tenets, Progreſs, and Preſent State. Page 62

Plan of the Second Book. Ibid.

Chap. 1. The Hiſtory of the Old Samaritans, taken from their Chronicle, and ſeveral Monuments compar'd with the Scriptures. 63

Chap. 2. The Hiſtory of the Samaritans from Chriſt to this Time. 72

Chap. 3. Of the Religion of the Samaritans. The Canon of Scripture. The Samaritan Pentateuch; its Original and Uſe. 82

Chap. 4. A Continuation of the Religion of the Samaritans. Of the Divinity of the Holy Ghoſt. Of the Worſhip they paid to God, and of their Creed. 87

Chap. 5. The Sects of the Samaritans. 94

Chap. 6. Of the Sadducees. Their Original and Tenets. 96

Chap. 7. Some conſiderable Events in the Hiſtory of the Sadducees; their Decay, and preſent State. 100

Chap. 8. Of the Caraites. Of their particular Tenets. 104

Chap. 9. Of the Caraites. Their Original and Hiſtory to this Time. 110

Chap. 10. The Hiſtory of the Phariſees, and of their Tenets. 114

Chap. 11. Of the Phariſees. Their Opinion of a Metempſycoſis, and their auſtere way of Living. 121

Chap. 12. Of the Eſſenes and Kaſideans. Their Origin, Tenets, and Hiſtory. 125

Chap. 13. Whether the Eſſenes, from being Jews became Chriſtians, and Founders of a Monaſtick Life. 131

Chap. 14. Of the Herodians. 137

BOOK III. Containing the Hiſtory of the Patriarchs that govern'd in Judæa; Of the Princes of the Captivity in Babylon; and of the principal Orders of the Doctors that have lived ſince the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. The Works and Character of the Talmudiſts, Gemariſts, Pyrrhoniſts, or Doubters, Excellents, or Gaons, Maſorets, Cabbaliſts, with the Particulars of the Cabbala, and of the famous Rabbins. Page 145.

Chap. 1. Of the Patriarchs of the Jews, or Heads of the Captivity in the Weſt. Ibid.

Chap. 2. A Diſcuſſion of the Dignity of the Patriarchs of Judæa, or the Princes of the Weſt: Their Rights, Privileges and Office, after the Ruin of Jeruſalem. 150

Chap. 3. The Hiſtory of the Weſtern Patriarchs, from their Eſtabliſhment, to their Abolition, in 429. 155

Chap. 4. Of the Princes of the Captivity at Babylon: 160

Chap. 5. The Firſt Order of the Jewiſh Doctors. The Tanaites, who have preſerv'd the Tradition from Eſdras to Juda the Saint, or the 200 Year of the Chriſtian Æra. 163

Chap. 6. The Second Order of Jewiſh Doctors. The Gemariſts and Talmudiſts; the Archiperecites. The Antiquity of the Talmud examin'd. 167

Chap. 7. A Judgment concerning the Talmud, and the Doctors that have explain'd it. The Ignorance of the Talmudiſts in Matters of Religion, and in prophane Hiſtory. A Compariſon of their Faults, with thoſe of many Chriſtian Authors. 173

Chap. 8. The different Orders of Doctors. The Sebureans; that is to ſay, Pyrrhoniſts, and Doubters, the Gaons, or Excellents. 180

Chap. 9. Of the Maſoreths: Their Authority and Criticiſm. 181

Chap. 10. The Sixth Order of the Jewiſh Doctors, the Cabbaliſts. A general Idea of the Cabbala, taken from the Zohar, and from the Explication of the Mercava, or Chariot of Ezechiel. 184

Chap. 11. Of the Myſteries contain'd in all the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet. Their Uſe. 189

Chap. 12. Of the Myſteries the Cabbaliſts find in the Words of Holy Scripture. 191

The CONTENTS.

Chap. 13. Of the Myſteries which the Cabbaliſts find in the Names of G O D, and particularly in that of JEHOVAH. 193

Chap. 14. The Explication of the Sephiroths, or Splendors. 195

Chap. 15. Of the different Uſes of the Cabbala: Of Contemplative Divinity and Magick. 201

Chap. 16. A ſhort Hiſtory of the Jewiſh Cabbala. 204

Chap. 17. The Original of the Cabbala among the Ægyptians. The Arguments of thoſe that believe it invented by the Patriarchs. 207

Chap. 18. A different Syſtem oppoſed to the foregoing, concerning the Theology of the Ægyptians. They were the Inventors of their Gods and Cabbala. 211

Chap. 19. A Continuation of the ſame Subject. Abraham, Joſeph, Moſes, taught the Ægyptians nothing: The Antiquity of their Cabbala; its Explication; its Compariſon with that of the Jews. 216

Chap. 20. Of the Cabbala of the Greek Poets and Philoſophers: Their Uſe of Fables, Emblems, and Allegories. 223

Chap. 21. Of the Method Jeſus Chriſt uſed in his Diſcourſes; and of that of St. Paul, in the Explication of Types and Allegories. The Explication of that of Agar. 229

Chap. 22. The Cabbala of the Chriſtians. The firſt Part; which relates to the exceſſive Fondneſs of the Fathers for Allegories. 231

Chap. 23. Of the ſecond Degree of the Cabbala. Each Letter ought to ſignify a Word. This a common Cuſtom with the Heathens in Inſcriptions. An Explication of many Inſcriptions and Medals. 235

Chap. 24. The uſe that the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts and Chriſtian Doctors have made of Letters. St. Jerom's Alphabet. 240

Chap. 25. Of the Alphabet of the Heavens. 243

Chap. 26. Of the Numbers and Value of the Letters. Of the Uſe made of them by the Cabbaliſts, the firſt Fathers of the Church, and the Baſilidian Hereticks. The true Explication of their Abraxas. 245

Chap. 27. The Cabbaliſtick Sephiroths compar'd with the Valentinian Æons. An Explication of theſe Æons, and the Deſign of the Hereticks. 249

Chap. 28. Of the Uſe that may be made of the Cabbala. 255

Chap. 29. Of the Rabbins. The different Titles they give themſelves. The Functions of their Office. 256

Chap. 30. Of the Jewiſh Prieſts. Of the Ten Otioſi of the Synagogue. Diſputes about this Matter. 263

BOOK IV. Containing the Tenets of the Jews; their Confeſſion of Faith; Variations and Hiſtory of their Religion, from the Deſtruction of the Temple to this time. Page 273

Chap. 1. The Confeſſion of Faith of the Jews, with their Fundamental Articles. Ibid.

Chap. 2. The Notion which the Jews have of the Deity. 274

Chap. 3. The Origin of the Tenet of the Trinity taught by the Patriarchs and Philoſophers. Cudworth's Syſtem. 275

Chap. 4. The Trinity was not believed by the antient Jews, nor known to the Heathen. Platoniſm unfolded. A Refutation of Dr. Cudworth. 279

Chap. 5. Examination of this Queſtion, Whether the Jews, in the Days of Jeſus Chriſt, believed the Trinity? 286

Chap. 6. Of the Creation of the World. The different Theology of the Jews about this Matter. 292

Chap. 7. The Third Opinion about the Creation. The true Origin of Spinoſiſm. If this Axiom, Nothing can be made of Nothing, be true. It's Explication. 294

Chap. 8. The Creation of the World by way of Emanation. Different Worlds explain'd. 299

Chap. 9. Of Angels. Of their Creation and Nature. 303

Chap. 10. Whether the Jews invoke Angels. 308

Chap. 11. Of Demons. 310

Chap. 12. Of the Creation of Souls, and of the Firſt Man. 314

Chap. 13. Of Providence: Of the Sin of the firſt Man, and of its Effects. 318

Chap. 14. Remedies for Sin, and Means of being juſtified. 322

Chap. 15. Concerning the Precepts of the Noachides. Satyrical Sayings of the Rabbies againſt Noah and Abraham. 325

Chap. 16. Concerning Moſes, and the Law which he gave. The odd Sentiments of the Doctors about this Legiſlator. 328

Chap. 17. A Proſecution of the ſame Matter. 332

Chap. 18. Concerning Propheſy and the Prophets. 336

Chap. 19. Of the Contempt which ſome have for certain Prophets, particularly for David. 340

Chap. 20. The firſt Notion of the Meſſiah, taken from the Prophets. 343

Chap. 21. Some Remarks upon the Oracle of Jacob, and upon the manner of the Scepter's departing from Judah. 345

Chap. 22. A Calculation of the Seventy Weeks of Daniel, and their Explanation. 351

Chap. 23. Five Characters which the Prophets gave to the Meſſiah. 355

Chap. 24. A Second Opinion concerning the Meſſiah. That of the Jews in the time of Jeſus Chriſt. This Queſtion diſcuſs'd, Whether it was believ'd that the Meſſiah was to be God. 360

Chap. 25. Of the Helps which the Jewiſh Church had in the time of Chriſt to know the Meſſiah. Of the Diſpoſitions of the Jews, and the falſe Characters they did aſcribe to him. 367

Chap. 26. A Third Notion of the Meſſiah. That of the Talmudiſts, Rabbies, &c. concerning the Meſſiah they expect. 371

Chap. 27. A Fourth Notion of the Meſſiah. That which the Jews form of Jeſus Chriſt. 375

Chap. 28. A Confutation of the two Books, entitled, The Toldos, or, The Generations of Jeſus. A fifth Notion. Falſe Meſſiahs. 377

Chap. 29. What Notion the Jews have of their Church. 383

Chap. 30. Of thoſe that die, and the Revolution of Souls after Death. 384

Chap. 31. Of the Origin of Hell among the Jews: Whether they borrow'd it from the Greeks. 386

Chap. 32. Of Hell, of Purgatory, and of Heaven. 388

BOOK V. Containing their Rites and Ceremonies. Page 395

Chap. 1. Of the Sanhedrim: Its Origin and Government. Ibid.

Chap. 2. Of the Authority of the Sanhedrim: Whether it was Infallible; and could judge to Death in Jeſus Chriſt's time. Of its different Tranſlations before and after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. 400

Chap. 3. Of the Houſes of Judgment. 404

Chap.

The CONTENTS.

Chap. 4. Of the Synagogues. 406
Chap. 5. Of their Academies. 410
Chap. 6. Of Proſelytes. Six Periods in which they were differently treated. 415
Chap. 7. Different Orders of Proſelytes. The Manner of receiving them into the Church. Their Baptiſm examin'd. 418
Chap. 8. Rites of the Circumciſion. 420
Chap. 9. Of the Feaſt of the Paſſover, and of Unleavened Bread. 424
Chap. 10. Of the time of celebrating the Feaſt of the Paſſover. A Diſſertation upon the manner of Reckoning the Hours, Days, Months, and Years. 427
Chap. 11. Of the Sabbath. Reaſons of its Inſtitution. Sermons preach'd on it. 438
Chap. 12. The Superſtitions for the Sabbath. 443
Chap. 13. Of the Beginning of the Year on the 1ſt of September, and of the Feaſt of Propitiations. 446
Chap. 14. Of the other Feaſts of the Jews. Pentecoſt, Tabernacles, the New Moon, and Spring. 450
Chap. 15. Of Private and Publick Prayers. Of the Tephilim and the Thaled. 453
Chap. 16. Of the other Devotions of the Jews. Their Faſts, their Alms, and their Hermits. 458
Chap. 17. Of Vows and Oaths. 461
Chap. 18. Of Excommunication. 464
Chap. 19. Of Polygamy, and of the Ceremonies of Marriage. † 469
Chap. 20. Of bitter Waters, and Divorces. † 473
Chap. 21. Of Purity, and the Manner of Waſhing. † 477
Chap. 22. Of dying Perſons; of Funeral Pomps; of the Mourning of Relations; and the different ways of afflicting themſelves. † 478
Chap. 23. A Continuation of the Subject of Funerals. † 484
Chap. 24. Precautions againſt the Impurity of the Dead; of Lepers and Idolaters. † 490

BOOK VI. Containing the Diſperſion of all the Tribes in the Eaſt and Weſt, till the Eighth Century of the Chriſtian Æra. Page 465

Part I. A general Account of the Diſperſion of the Tribes in Aſſyria, among the Medes and Perſians, in the Indies, America, Æthiopia, Egypt, and Arabia, in the Greek and Ottoman Empire, among the Tartars, in Italy, Spain, Germany, France, and England. Ibid.
Chap. 1. The Sources from whence the Miſeries of the Jews proceed. Ibid.
Chap. 2. The Diſperſion of the Ten Tribes in the Eaſt. The Relations that three Jewiſh Authors, Eldad, Benjamin of Gudela, and Peritſul have given of the Ten Tribes, and of the Kingdoms they poſſeſs. 469
Chap. 3. Whether the Ten Tribes paſſed into Tartary, and from thence to America, and the Eaſt-Indies. 474
Chap. 4. The true Situation of the Ten Tribes in the Perſian Irack at Babylon, and on the Banks of Euphrates. The Pretence of the River Sabbation among the Medes, confuted. 482
Chap. 5. The Origin of the Jews in Egypt, Æthiopia, and Arabia, explain'd. 488
Chap. 6. The Diſperſion of the Jews in Italy. 494
Chap. 7. The Antiquity of the Jews in Spain, Germany, France, &c. 502

Part II. Containing the particular Hiſtory of the Diſperſion in the Eaſt, and in the Weſt. 507
Chap. 8. The Hiſtory of the Jews, from the taking of Jeruſalem, till the Rebellion under Adrian. Ibid.
Chap. 9. The Hiſtory of the Jews Rebellion under Adrian, of Barchochebas and Akibas, till the hundred and thirty eighth Year of the Chriſtian Æra. 513
Chap. 10. Of the Diſciples of Akiba, and of the other Learned Men, who lived at that time. 520
Chap. 11. The Hiſtory of the Jews, from the Year 138, to Severus's Reign. 522
Chap. 12. The Hiſtory of the Jews in the Roman Empire, from Severus's Reign, till the End of the Third Century. 529
Chap. 13. The particular State of the Jews at Babylon, from Severus's Reign to the end of the third Century, with a Catalogue of the Princes of the Captivity. 534
Chap. 14. The Hiſtory of the Jews, during the Fourth Century of the Chriſtian Church. 539
Chap. 15. The Hiſtory of the Jews in the Grecian Empire, during the Fifth Century. 550
Chap. 16. The State of the Jews in the Weſtern Empire during the Fifth Century, and of the Cœlicolæ. 557
Chap. 17. The Hiſtory of the Jews diſpers'd among the Perſians, during the fifth Century. 561
Chap. 18. The Continuation of the State of the Ten Tribes in Perſia, Arabia, and Æthiopia, till the Seventh Century. 563
Chap. 19. The Continuation of the Hiſtory of the Seventh Century, and of the State of the Ten Tribes, and other Jews of the Perſian Monarchies. 569
Chap. 20. Of the Immereneans and Jewiſh Homerites. 573
Chap. 21. The State of the Jews in the Roman Empire, at Conſtantinople, in Italy, Spain, and France, during the Sixth and Seventh Centuries of the Chriſtian Æra. 575

BOOK VII. and Laſt. Containing the Hiſtory of their Diſperſions in the Eaſt and Weſt, from the Eighth to the Eighteenth Century. Page 585

Chap. 1. The Hiſtory of the King of Cozar: Whether he and his Kingdom embraced Judaiſm in the Eighth Century. The Letters of another King of Cozar examin'd. Ibid.
Chap. 2. The Hiſtory of the Tribes diſperſed in the Eaſt, during the Eighth and Ninth Centuries of the Chriſtian Church. 588
Chap. 3. The Hiſtory of the Jews in the Empire, Italy, Spain, France, and Germany, during the Eighth and Ninth Centuries. 595
Chap. 4. The State of the Jews in the Eaſt, during the Tenth and Eleventh Centuries; in which their Academies were ſhut up, and the Princes of the Captivity aboliſh'd. 601
Chap. 5. The State of the Jews in the Weſt, during the Tenth and Eleventh Centuries. The Perſecutions in Spain. 605
Chap. 6. Criticiſms upon the Suppoſititious Joſeph. The Wars and Maſſacres of the Jews in England. 609
Chap. 7. A General Account of the Nation in the Eaſt and Weſt, during the Twelfth Century; taken from Benjamin of Tudela's Voyage to all the Synagogues. 617
Chap. 8. Of the great Men that flouriſh'd among the Jews in the Twelfth Century. 625
Chap. 9. Of the falſe Meſſiahs that appear'd in the Eaſt and Weſt, in the Twelfth Century. 631
Chap. 10. Divers Events that befel the Jews in the Twelfth Century, in the Eaſt and Weſt. 638
Chap. 11. The Reaſons of the Chriſtians making ſevere and ignominious Laws againſt the Jews. 638
Chap. 12. A Collection of the Decrees of Councils, and the Edicts of Princes, made in all Ages of the Chriſtian Church againſt the Jews. 645

Chap.

The CONTENTS.

Chap. 13. The Continuation of the ſame Subject. 650
Chap. 14. The Hiſtory of the Jews in the Eaſt, during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries. 655
Chap. 15. The Hiſtory of the Jews in Spain, during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries. 658
Chap. 16. A Continuation of the ſame Subject. Several Misfortunes befalling the Jews in Spain. 663
Chap. 17. The Hiſtory of the Jews in Italy, during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries. 668
Chap. 18. The Hiſtory of the Jews in France, from the Thirteenth Century, till their entire Expulſion from that Kingdom by Charles VI. 671
Chap. 19. The Jews expell'd out of England in the Thirteenth Century: Their Return in the Seventeenth. 677
Chap. 20. The Hiſtory of the Jews in Germany, Hungary, &c. during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries. 682
Chap. 21. The Hiſtory of the Jews in Spain, during the Fifteenth Century, and their Expulſion out of that Kingdom in the Year 1492. and of Portugal, in the Year 1496. 687
Chap. 22. The Hiſtory of the Jews of the Eaſt in Perſia, Armenia, Media, &c. during the Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and Seventeenth Centuries. 696
Chap. 23. A Continuation of the Hiſtory of the Jews in the Eaſt: Of thoſe of Syria. The Adventures of the falſe Meſſiah Zabathai Tzevi, who came from Aleppo. 700
Chap. 24. The Hiſtory of the Jews in Judea, at Sapheta, and in Jeruſalem. 703
Chap. 25. A Continuation of the State of Judea. Of the Samaritans that live there. Two Letters upon that Subject. 705
Chap. 26. Reflections upon the foregoing Letters. 709
Chap. 27. The Hiſtory of the Jews in Æthiopia, in Egypt, and the reſt of Africa, for the two laſt Centuries. 714
Chap. 28. The State of the Jews at Conſtantinople, in Greece, and the other Provinces of the Ottoman Empire, for the two laſt Centuries. 718
Chap. 29. The State of the Jews in Italy, for the Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and Seventeenth Centuries. 721
Chap. 30. The Hiſtory of the Jews in Germany, from the Fifteenth to the end of the Sixteenth Century. 728
Chap. 31. The State of the Jews in Poland, Bohemia, and Germany, during the laſt Century. 735
Chap. 32. The Settlement of the Jews in Holland, and their preſent State. 738
Chap. 33. The preſent State of the Jews in all Parts of the World. 744
Chap. 34. Several Reflections upon the Converſion of the Jews, and the Methods that have been taken to accompliſh it. 740

THE

The ſeven double Letters.	B. Beth.	G. Ghimel.	D. Daleth.	C. Caph.	P. Pe.	R. Reſch.	T. Tau.
Their Numbers.	2.	3.	4.	20.	80.	200.	400.
Seven Planets.	The Sun.	Venus.	Mercury.	The Moon.	Saturn.	Jupiter.	Mars.
Their Angels.	Raphael.	Haniel.	Michael.	Gabriel.	Zaphkiel.	Zadkiel.	Gamalel.
Their Intelligences.	Nagiel.	Hagiel.	Tiriel.	Eliniel.	Agiel.	Jophiel.	Graphiel.
Seven Spirits.	Semeliel.	Nogul.	Cochabiel.	Lemanael.	Sabbathiel.	Sedechiel.	Mademiel.
Their Signification.	Life.	Peace.	Wiſdom.	Riches.	Grace.	Propagation, or Family.	Empire.
Seven Changes that may happen.	Death.	War.	Folly.	Poverty.	Anger.	Solitude.	Slavery.

RELATIONS of the SEPHIROTHS, with the Names of GOD, ANGELS, PLANETS, &c.

Ten Sephiroths.	Ten Names of God.	Ten Members of the Archetypal Man, or ten Orders of Angels.	Planets, or Members of the Celeſtial Man.	Members of the Terreſtrial.	The Ten Commandments of the Law.
The Crown.	I am that I am.	Haiot * Hakkodes, or the Seraphims.	The Emperial Heaven.	The Brain.	Thou ſhalt have no other God but me.
Wiſdom.	Jah. the Eſſence.	Ophanim, or Cherubims.	The Primum mobile.	The Lungs.	Thou ſhalt not make any graven Image.
Underſtanding.	Jehovah.	Aralim or Thrones.	The Firmament.	The Heart.	Thou ſhalt not take the Name of the Lord in vain.
Magnificence.	God the Creator.	Haſchemulim, or Dominions.	Saturn.	The Stomach.	Thou ſhalt ſanctifie the Sabbath Day.
Might.	The Mighty God.	Seraphim, or Vertues.	Jupiter.	The Liver.	Honour thy Father and Mother.
Beauty.	The ſtrong God.	Melachim, or Powers.	Mars.	The Gall.	Thou ſhalt not kill.
Victory.	God of Hoſts.	Elohim, or Principalities.	The Sun.	The Spleen.	Thou ſhalt not commit Adultery.
Glory.	The Lord God of Hoſts.	Ben Elohim, or Arch-Angels.	Venus.	The Reins.	Thou ſhalt not ſteal.
The Foundation.	The Omnipotent.	Cherubim, or Angels.	Mercury.	The Vitals.	Thou ſhalt not bear falſe Witneſs.
The Kingdom.	The Lord Adonai.	Iſchim, or Souls.	The Moon.	The Womb.	Thou ſhalt not covet.

* Note, That the Hebrew Names are thoſe of the Cabbaliſt Jews; and the Engliſh Names are thoſe of ſome Chriſtians, who place the Angels in another Order.

RELATIONS of the SEPHIROTHS, with the Names of GOD, ANGELS, PLANETS, &c.

THE Hiſtory and Religion OF THE JEWS. BEING A CONTINUATION OF JOSEPHUS.

BOOK I.

The State and Government of Judæa, under the Race of the HERODS.

CHAP. I.

A general Account of the Jewiſh Nation and Church; with a Scheme of the whole Work.

THE Jews had nothing remarkable to diſtinguiſh them from other Nations. They wholly apply'd themſelves to till the Ground, and feed their Flocks; but neglected the Study of Arts and Sciences. Whereas the Egyptians, under whoſe Bondage they groan'd, were witty, learned, and ingenious; and pretended, that they were older than the Flood. Granting that theſe had their Learning from Phœnicia, yet it cannot be deny'd, but that they infinitely improv'd it, more than their Maſters. Nevertheleſs, God wholly gave up the Egyptians to groſs Idolatry. He broke the Yoke, which they impos'd upon clowniſh Shepherds; and whilſt their King was ſwallow'd up in the Red-Sea, the Fugitives tun'd Songs of Triumph and Deliverance. God, ſince that time, omitted no Miracle to preſerve the Jews, whom he had adopted. They ſeem'd the only Nation, that God had created; and that he had forgot all the others. Both their Ingratitude and Idolatry made but a ſmall Interruption to his Bleſſings: For they were never ſo entirely ſtopt, but they flow'd afreſh, as ſoon as the Jews ſhew'd the leaſt Shadow of Repentance. We can't but admire the Care, which the Supreme Being took of that Church. He was oblig'd to ſubdue the Incredulity of that ſtubborn Nation, by a great many Prodigies. For he appear'd, and ſpoke, upon Mount Sinai, that his Preſence might give more Weight and Authority to his Laws. He then came down in a Garb ſuitable to his awful Majeſty, that they might not doubt, but it was he himſelf. Even the whole Frame of Nature ſhook, and the Miracles that were perform'd in the Sight of the People were great and noble, leſt they ſhould believe, that Moſes, who was well vers'd in the Learning of the Egyptians, had impos'd upon their Senſes. This Law-giver inſtituted a holy Religion, ſtock'd with a ſufficient Number of Ceremonies, to deter the Jews from inventing any more. Theſe Ceremonies were very different from thoſe of the Heathens, that God's Hatred for Pagan Rites being conſtantly before their Eyes, they might always abhor Idolatry. The Original of the Law was, for many Ages, kept in the Holy of Holies, that by the Peruſal of it, People might be themſelves convinc'd of the Truth of its Precepts. There was nothing in their Commonwealth and Church, but was Divine: For God was Author of their Political Regulations, as well as of their Rites and Ceremonies. The Obſervation of theſe Laws was attended with temporal Rewards, and the hopes of an heavenly Bliſs. A High-Prieſt preſided over that Church. Wiſdom and Truth reſided on his Lips; and on his Breaſt was the Urim and Thummim, whoſe miraculous Property was, to put him always in mind of his God, and prevent his going aſtray. But, as if this miraculous Miniſtry had not been ſufficient, many Prophets aroſe, who awaken'd the Zeal of the People, purify'd the Church from time to time, and reform'd the Abuſes that crept into it. One would think, that this Nation, being confin'd within its Mountains, and ſeparated from Idolaters, ſhould have preſerv'd their Religion without Mixture, and never deſir'd to alter it.

The Eyes and Minds of Votaries had ſenſible Objects enough to employ them in their Temple, and hinder them from coveting the Pomp of Infidels. They had but one City and one Temple, where they could worſhip; and the Center of their Religion was there. The Succeſſion of Prieſts in that Place, their conſtant Sacrifices, and indiſpenſable Obligation to come thither every Year to purify themſelves, and offer their Children, were ſo many fit means to preſerve the Religion of their Anceſtors. God had a particular Intereſt to maintain this Church, ſince it was his only Church and Spouſe; and ſince he had put his Name there, and promis'd that tho' it ſhould ungratefully forſake him, yet he would never forſake it. How comes pure Gold to be thus ſully'd?

It can hardly be conceiv'd, how this Church could be corrupted. For the Cauſes of its Fall, which we'll ſet down hereafter, do not ſeem able to do ſo much Miſchief. Tho' this Church was to ceaſe, and its Laws to be aboliſh'd; yet it might have made an happy Exit. God ſent a Meſſiah, who was ready to receive it into the Chriſtian Church. How is then the Daughter of Sion fallen down from Heaven? This Event cant't be call'd in queſtion: For the preſent Calamity of the Jews is enough to convince us, that God is exaſperated againſt them, and that their Sins deſerve that Blindneſs, which made God reject them. Notwithſtanding the ſhining Miracles, and Preſence of God in the firſt Temple; yet ſome of their Kings were Idolaters, and ſome of their Prieſts baſe Corrupters of God's Worſhip, who impiouſly aſſociated the Creature with the Creator. Idolatry was not introduc'd into the ſecond Temple; but then no Prophets, no zealous Reformers aroſe, who reſtored God's Worſhip, when it was neglected. The Aſmonæans deſign'd more to ſatisfy their Ambition, than to reform the Church. Theſe Heroes, which are ſo much admir'd, and reckon'd as Saints, can never be juſtify'd, for depriving the Houſe of David (whoſe Poſterity grovell'd under a ſhameful Indigence) of the Crown and Empire. They uſurp'd the Prieſthood, which belong'd to Eleazar's Family; as they had done the Kingdom, which belong'd to that of David. For they were not deſcended from a Family of Prieſts; being but private Perſons, who revolted againſt Antiochus, that had an undoubted Right to Judæa; ſince this Prince had that Country of the Kings of Egypt, from whom he conquer'd it; and that before it fell to their ſhare, it had been a long time in the Hands of the Perſians, whom Alexander ſubdu'd. In a word, they had, contrary to the Law, united theſe two Offices in one and the ſame Perſon: For the King was forbid to put his Hand to the Cenſer.

Herod, who was alſo an Uſurper, deſtroy'd their Houſe, aſcended the Throne, made a Tool of the High-Prieſthood, which was beſtow'd on thoſe, who moſt readily comply'd with his Will. The Schiſm of Samaria, the moſt ſtubborn, and the longeſt that ever was ſeen, was ſtill as violent as ever. Four or five different Sects, ſhut up in the ſame Temple, worry'd and deſtroy'd one another: One denying the Immortality of the Soul, and the Reſurrection of the Body, pluck'd up Religion by the Roots: Another prefer'd their Virtues to God's Mercy; and, by their Haughtineſs, render'd themſelves unworthy of his Grace. A third, wedded to Auſterities and Abſtinences, hunted after the Shadow, but neglected the Body of true Devotion. And all theſe Things were fruitful Springs of Corruption and Miſchief.

The Meſſiah appear'd, but was not receiv'd, becauſe he was poor. The Jews, inſtead of a Doctor that would reform the Church, and urge the Neceſſity of Holineſs, expected a Conqueror, who, Sword in Hand, would reſtore the Glory of their Nation. Inſtead of repenting of a Crime of ſo deep a Dye, as the Crucifixion of the Meſſiah, they grew ſeditious and mutinous; and were unaccountably cruel and barbarous in their Seditions. The Romans, who were uſed to command, and reſolv'd to deſtroy a Nation, that was too fond of Liberty, beſieg'd Jeruſalem, which was taken and burnt. The Number of its Inhabitants was great; but the Feaſt of the Paſſover ſeem'd to have gather'd all the Nation together, who had a Share of the Calamities of this Siege. Their Multitude did but augment their Miſery, and their inteſtine Feuds were more fatal to them, than the War. For they cut one anothers Throats, even at the very Altars; and what time the Beſiegers allow'd the Zealots to breath in, theſe imploy'd it to butcher their Brethren. Theſe firſt Misfortunes were attended with ſo diſmal Calamities, that even thoſe, who think it their Duty to hate the Jews, becauſe they are not of the ſame Religion, cannot unconcernedly read the Hiſtory of ſo hard and laſting a Miſery. Had God only ruin'd his Temple, becauſe it had been prophaned; and deſtroy'd Jeruſalem, becauſe he had often try'd to gather together her Children, and ſhe would not: Had he only puniſh'd the Heads of the Nation, the Scribes and Phariſees, who had cry'd out, Crucify, Crucify: In a Word, had his Puniſhments gone no farther than the Guilty, we ſhould have no need to wonder at it. But they have been extended from one Generation to another, for many Ages: For the Jews groan, for theſe ſeventeen hundred Years, under Miſery and Captivity, without any Hopes of Relief: And this is an Event without any Precedent. Here is alſo another Circumſtance, that heightens this Prodigy. This forlorn and perſecuted Nation can ſcarce find one Place in the Univerſe to reſt their Heads, or to ſet their Feet in. They have waded through Floods of their own Blood, and are as yet preſerv'd. That infinite Numbers of Jews, which we ſhall ſee hereafter murder'd, through a cruel and barbarous Zeal, weakned, but did not deſtroy that Nation. For notwithſtanding the Joint-Perſecutions of Chriſtians and Idolaters, who deſign'd their Ruin, they are ſtill in being.

The Hiſtory and Diſcuſſion of the Rites and Tenets of the Jews, hath been for a long time refer'd to Profeſſors and Divines. Their Eſſays on this Subject have not always been favourably receiv'd; becauſe they contain'd a great many Fables, and groundleſs Whims. It was not their Fault, ſince they could dig but little Gold out of the Droſs. The Jewiſh Doctors often hunt after Allegories and vain Subtleties, and fancy Letters and Numbers to be myſterious. It is a hard matter to make a Syſtem of their Religion; becauſe their Traditions, which they prefer to Scripture, go ad infinitum. The Commentators upon the Talmud have often differ'd; and when they explain their Ceremonies, they tire you with a long and fulſom Catalogue. The firſt Volume of the Miſnah, which hath been tranſlated, is fitter for Husbandmen, than Divines. For it nicely examines the Mixture of Seeds in a Field; and how many different ways it may be made. In a Word, the Rabbins, who are but little acquainted with their own Hiſtory, vend their Fables for Matters of Fact. Provided they are believ'd by their own Nation, they do not trouble their Heads to reconcile their Narratives with foreign Hiſtorians, whom they mightily deſpiſe. They boldly make Anachroniſms, write the groſſeſt Abſurdities in Chronology; and, without any Scruple of Conſcience, corrupt the Truth of Hiſtory. Their Writers know very well, that theſe Imputations are too true; and we ſhall, in the Sequel, ſufficiently prove it.

This Subject being then barren and crabbed, had diſcourag'd me; but being reſolv'd to write the Hiſtory of all the Religions, that have ſprung from Chriſtianity, I thought it convenient to begin with the Jewiſh Religion; becauſe it is requiſite to unravel a Religion, whence the firſt Hereticks borrow'd ſome of their Tenets, and barbarous Names. Beſides, we ought to have a clearer Knowledge of a Nation, to whom whom we have ſucceeded, and that ſhall be one day united with the Chriſtian Church. Farther, the World will not be ſorry to trace the Diſperſions of this forlorn Nation in the Eaſt, and in the Weſt, and to ſee where are now the miſerable Remains of a People ſo long belov'd by the Almighty. To conclude, ſo ſingular a Subject as this, which no body hath fully handl'd in a vulgar Tongue, hath engaged me to dive into the Bottom of it.

However, as the Contents of this Hiſtory are very different; ſince we write not only of the Perſecutions they have ſuffer'd, but alſo of their Tenets and Rites; we have diſtinguiſh'd them, that every one may chooſe thoſe, which beſt ſuit with his Fancy and Reach.

The firſt Book contains a general Account of the State, wherein Chriſt found that Church and Nation, when he came into the World. This Article is moſt known; becauſe the Goſpel and Joſephus give us a great Inſight into it. Nevertheleſs, the Hiſtory of the Herods is as yet perplex'd; and it is more important, than People generally think, to ſet in a true Light, not only their Perſons, but alſo their Dominions, and Subjection to the Romans. Antient and modern Authors do not agree on this Matter, which is as yet ſo entangl'd, that it is neceſſary to unravel it. It was alſo requiſite to repreſent the Diſpoſitions and Power of the Jews, whilſt our Saviour was on Earth, that we may have a clearer Notion of their Downfal and Ruin. As I run over what the Goſpel teaches concerning them, I ſolve the Difficulties that occur there.

Since this Church is as yet torn by moſt of its antient Sects, notwithſtanding that the Phariſees are now very numerous, and more potent than others; it was neceſſary to aſcend to their Origine, and to repreſent their Progreſs, as well as Decay. Joſephus ſpoke only by the by of this, and what he ſays wants to be explain'd. The Learned too do not agree about this Matter. For not only the moſt celebrated Criticks of the laſt Century have warmly diſputed about it; but alſo thoſe, that have * ſucceeded them, have lately made ſome new Diſcoveries concerning the Caraites and Sadducees. So that I was obliged to collect what hath been ſaid upon this Subject; and to examine the different Opinions of antient and modern Writers, to find out the Truth: And this I do in the Second Book.

The Third ſpeaks of the Patriarchs of Judæa, ſince the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, down to the Fifth Century; as alſo of the Chiefs of the Babyloniſh Captivity, and of the different Orders of their Doctors, the Tanaites, Thalmudiſts, Gaons, Cabbaliſts, and Rabbins, whereby the Succeſſion of the Synagogue hath been preſerv'd. Theſe were the Maſters of their Religion, whoſe Deciſions they have receiv'd as ſo many Oracles; and the Fathers of their Tradition, who have handed it to this preſent Age. I have follow'd the Thread of the Succeſſion of the Synagogue, and given an Account of their Genius and Works; that People may know, what Uſe they may make of them, and how extravagant ſome have been concerning them.

The Fourth Book contains a Syſtem of the Religion and Tenets now taught by the Jews. This is no eaſy Task; becauſe their Divinity is full of different Opinions, and frequently varies. This Method I have follow'd; viz. I have ſtuck cloſe to the famous Rabbins, and eſpecially to thoſe, who, inſtead of wrapping up themſelves in Figures and Emblems, which can hardly be underſtood, have ſpoken clearly, and were willing that others ſhould underſtand them. For ſome Rabbins have ſuch overſtretching Hyperboles, and ſo harſh Metaphors; that, notwithſtanding all our Care, we may miſtake their Meaning: becauſe figurative Expreſſions may be taken in a very different Senſe, and we cannot eaſily gueſs the Scope and Deſign of the Perſon that ſpeaks them. But we muſt alſo acknowledge, that ſome Jewiſh Writers are more exact and judicious, and have plainly expreſs'd their Meaning; and theſe I have preferr'd. However, as it is requiſite to deſcribe the Genius both of that Nation, and of their Teachers; and as Metaphors and Flights of Fancy do not diſguſt every body; and as we may from them be help'd to underſtand the Sacred Writers, who were all Jews, and had the Stile of the Orientals; I have inſerted a great many of theſe Emblems and Metaphors. I have pitch'd upon a juſt Medium; and, without tiring my Reader with too many of theſe Citations, I have quoted ſome, that he may have a right Idea of them, and ſometimes take Breath. As the Coming of the Meſſiah is the moſt important Article of the Chriſtian Religion, and of the Separation of the Jewiſh Church; I have chiefly inſiſted upon it. I have diſtinguiſh'd four Notions of the Meſſiah, which appear'd very different to me. That of the Prophets; that of the Jewiſh Church in Chriſt's Time; that of the Thalmudiſts after the Deſtruction of the Temple; and the laſt, that of thoſe, who have run after ſome falſe Meſſiahs, whoſe Hiſtory I relate. In a Word, I thought it neceſſary to vindicate the Chriſtian Meſſiah againſt all the Aſperſions of the Author of the Toldos Jeſchu, who hath only taken notice of ſome Circumſtances of Chriſt's Life, which ſeem'd for his Purpoſe, in order to diſfigure the Hiſtory of our Saviour. This Book hath appear'd a very dangerous one. It was long conceal'd from Chriſtians, and even from the Learned; and Reuchlinus, who deſir'd that all other Jewiſh Books might be preſerv'd, beg'd that this might be burnt; becauſe it was full of Blaſphemies and Impieties. Some Books are ſometimes fancy'd ſuch terrible Monſters, that they are not to be attack'd, or expos'd to the Publick, leſt People ſhould be ſtartl'd by them. But that, far from leſſening, doth but increaſe the Dread. The Writings of Infidels, as well as Religious Myſteries, are the more reverenc'd, the more they are hid. I have made no ſcruple to ſpeak of this Book, which was writ in the Tongue of the Learned, and is better known than formerly; and I conclude what I had to ſay of the Meſſiah, by refuting it. This I was oblig'd to do, ſince it miſrepreſents the Hiſtory of Jeſus Chriſt; which I was bound to draw in its native Colours, that it might not be miſtaken.

I will explain, in the Fifth Book, the antient and modern Rites and Ceremonies of the Jews; their Feaſts, Faſts, Sacraments, Marriages, and Burials. Leo of Modena hath writ an Epitome of them; but it is too ſhort. However, according to the way of writing of his Country-men, he deſcends to ſome trifling and tireſom Particulars. A Learned Man hath added a Supplement to it, which is rather deſign'd to ſhow the Conformity of ſome Rites of the Church of Rome, with thoſe of the Synagogue, than to explain this Famous Rabbin's Epitome. The Task was eaſy, and ſince that time a Diſſertation was publiſh'd, wherein that Subject was treated more at large †. As for me, I will only ſpeak by the by of this Conformity of Rites and Opinions, when it is exact and natural, and wants no critical Remarks to make it plain. I follow Leo of Modena as a very ſure Guide, but what neceſſary Additions I have made, I have taken them from the Miſnah and Famous Authors.

I conclude with an Account of the Diſperſions of this People in the Eaſt and Weſt. This is properly their Hiſtory, which is but a continual ſeries of Calamities. We ſhall ſee therein, that they have been ſometimes very unjuſtly oppreſs'd and calumniated by the Chriſtians. I have often bluſh'd for their ſake; but we ſee alſo in it ſuch a courſe of Juſtice and Vengeance from God againſt this Nation, that we can't perceive it without Aſtoniſhment; but our Aſtoniſhment is increas'd, when we find that this People, who ſhou'd have been for ſeveral Ages drown'd in their own Blood, as yet ſubſiſt in ſeveral places; and that is the Subject of the two laſt Books.

* Trigland. de Caraïtis. Harduin. † Budæi Parerga Hiſtoriæ.

It will perhaps be thought ſtrange, that I call this Book, A Supplement to Joſephus. I am ſenſible, that this Title is raſh; but my Deſign is not to pretend to be compar'd with this Hiſtorian, whoſe Genius and Knowledge were very different from mine. I have only, as he hath done, unravell'd the Religion and Cuſtoms of that Nation, and related their Misfortunes. My Work properly begins from the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, where his ended; ſo that it may be look'd upon as a continuation of his: They both agree in Deſign and Matter, tho' not in Parts and Skill. I am deſtitute of ſome helps, which this Hiſtorian had: His Guides were inſpir'd by God; and I cannot conceive how he hath ſometimes preſum'd to deviate from them. The Matter, that he handled, was moving, and full of remarkable Events. A prodigious number of Miracles frequently occur'd to him; and nothing awakens ſo much a Reader, and ſets off a Hiſtory as Prodigies. I might eaſily have related ſome here; but I had not, as he, ſome unqueſtionable Witneſſes: Moſt of thoſe Miracles appear'd to me trifling and fabulous, and therefore I have overlook'd them. I tread in a Road all beſmear'd with Blood, and which offers nothing but Perſecutions to our view, at leaſt if the Rabbins had well digeſted thoſe Events: But as they wholly apply'd themſelves to the Succeſſion of thoſe, who have handed Oral Tradition to one another; they preſerve their Names, and often neglect the reſt. I have been oblig'd to gather ſeveral Pieces ſcatter'd among the Jews and Chriſtians, to make up an intire Body of them. This was ſo much the more difficult, becauſe the Jews, ſince the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, having no particular Government of their own, afforded nothing, but ſcatter'd, and often private Events: ſo that Joſephus's Work and mine ought not to be compar'd together, altho' mine is a Continuation of his.

I have alſo made Joſephus his Apology concerning ſeveral Facts that he hath related, and which are diſputed: Juſtus of Tiberias, who writ a Hiſtory of his Nation, a ſhort time after that of Joſephus appear'd, found fault with many things in it, and alledg'd againſt him the Memoirs of Titus about the Seige of Jeruſalem, and alſo thoſe of Julian, Governour of Judæa, who was preſent at the taking of that City, and gave a Deſcription of it: But as theſe Books are loſt, I have been forc'd, conſidering the great diſtance of time, to follow Joſephus, becauſe we find no better, or more exact Guide. This Hiſtorian hath his defects; but that can't be avoided: But when they do not appear, and that nothing but Conjectures, or uncertain Writings are produc'd againſt him, is it not reaſonable to prefer him to the Thalmudiſts, or thoſe who vend their Whims as downright Matters of Fact?

The Modern Jews have no reaſon to prefer the Works of a French Rabbin, who liv'd in the Seventh Century, and perhaps much later, and diſguis'd himſelf under the Name of Joſephus Ben Gorion, to that Old Greek Hiſtorian, whom we follow. I cannot find any Grounds for ſo unjuſt a Choice, unleſs that the Rabbins, who ſeldom underſtand Greek, have been us'd for a long while to contemn whatever is writ in a foreign Language; and that the Impoſtor hath been skilful enough to write his Book in Hebrew. Neither do the Chriſtians act more fairly, to follow ſo often Hegeſippus; altho' they are perſwaded, or might eaſily convince themſelves, that he is only a Tranſlator, who, inſtead of following exactly the Original, took upon him to curtail, add, and tack ſome notorious Fables to Matters of Fact. Baronius hath very haughtily cenſur'd, and often abus'd Joſephus: But moſt of his Cenſures are ſo ill grounded, that it may eaſily be perceiv'd, that this Annaliſt Cardinal (who frequently profeſs'd himſelf an Enemy to thoſe, who did not favour his Prejudices) was acted by paſſion. It was alſo Joſephus's misfortune not to be favourable to him, and therefore he hath not omitted to lay a great many Chimerical Faults to this Hiſtorian's charge, and to reprehend him warmly. I ſay nothing of ſome other Criticks, who have cenſur'd this Hiſtorian's Faults, and that perhaps upon good Grounds; but have for ſome years, laſt paſt, unmercifully worry'd him. The One hiſſes at his Book againſt Appion, and finds Joſephus very happy, that this Egyptian was dead before he ſaw it, ſince he wou'd have overſet all his Arguments: The other is more ſevere, and maintains, that Joſephus hath known neither Judæa, whereof he ſpeaks, and wherein he was a General, nor the Kings in whoſe Reigns he liv'd, nor the Tongue wherein he writ; ſince he hath not only made ſome groſs Blunders, but alſo ſeveral Galliciſms: So that his Book being ſuppoſititious, as it is pretended, what he ſays of the Herods, is overturn'd; the Sons are confounded with their Fathers; the Life and Reign of ſome are prolong'd, and new Bounds are ſet to their Juriſdiction. And I refute theſe new and bold Conjectures, and eſtabliſh again the true Hiſtory of the Herods: After I have examin'd the Authority of the Kings of Judæa, I deſcribe the Condition of the Church, and the behaviour of the People, which caus'd the intire Ruin of that Nation. In a word, I give a ſhort Relation of the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and of its Temple. Theſe Four Things are diſcuſs'd in the firſt Book.

CHAP. II.

Containing the Government of Judæa, under the Herods, from Jeſus Chriſt to the Deſtruction of the Temple: The Hiſtory and Genealogy of the Herods explain'd.

I. THE Jealouſy of the Aſmonæans was the cauſe of their Misfortunes. II. Antipater gives the Government of Judæa to his Children. III. Herod's Victories over Antigonus. IV. End of the Reign of the Aſmonæans. V. Herod's Reconciliation with Auguſtus. VI. Character of Herod the Great. VII. An Inquiry into his Birth. VIII. He came originally from Aſcalon. IX. He was half a Jew. X. His Mother's Religion, who was an Arabian. XI. The Extent of his Kingdom. XII. Whether he was Farmer of it. Harduin refuted. XIII. Proofs, that Judæa was tributary in the time of Herod. XIV. This Prince a Vaſſal to the Empire. XV. The Partition he made by Will to his Children. XVI. Archelaus was never King. Salmaſius refuted. An Explanation of St. Matthew that confirms it. XVII. Herod Antipas Tetrarch of Galilee. XVIII. Herod's fourth Son, Herodias's Husband. XIX. Character of Philip the Tetrarch. XX. A New Genealogy of the Herods, by Harduin. XXI. Agrippa, First Son to Philip the Tetrarch. XXII. Agrippa II. a Commander of the Roman Troops under Trajan. XXIII. Berenice, Daughter to Agrippa II. a Great Queen.

§. 1. The

§. 1. The Actions of Herod I. Sirnam'd the GREAT.

I. AS Kings make their Subjects either happy, or unhappy, it is neceſſary to give a Character of the laſt Princes that govern'd Judæa, to have a true Idea of its Condition, and to ſee whether they have contributed to the Ruin of a Nation, that was under their command. The Herods were thoſe famous Princes equally odious to the Jews, becauſe they were Foreigners, and to the Chriſtians, becauſe they perſecuted the Church at its birth. They are not perhaps ſufficiently known; for they are often look'd upon as abſolute Monarchs of all Judæa, and their Birth is conteſted, in order to find in their Family the accompliſhment of this Oracle of Jacob, that the Scepter of Judah ſhould be broken when the Meſſiah appear'd. A bold and able Critick hath ſome years ago publiſhed a New Syſtem of the Houſe of Herod. He believes him an Athenian, becauſe he is call'd in ſome Inſcriptions, Benefactor of Athens, and that in Cæſar's time, there was really one Herod in that City: As the Athenians commonly preferr'd Plato's Philoſophy to all others, he affirms, That this Prince was a Platoniſt; and as Kings ſpread their Opinions in their Dominions, he doth not doubt, but Herod becoming King of Judæa, ſettl'd the Platoniſts there. He fancies that theſe Jewiſh Platoniſts form'd the Sect of the Herodians; and that the Sadducees and the Herodians were the ſame, ſince the Scripture names one Sect for the other: and thence he concludes, that the Sadducees, and Plato had the ſame Opinions concerning the Nature of Angels and Spirits. In a word, he overſets all the Genealogy of Herod the Great to eſtabliſh a new One. The Jews too unmercifully beſpatter that Family, whoſe Reign, which is that of Proſelites, is very odious to all their Writers.

As for me, I deſign to be impartial. I will repreſent the Birth of theſe Princes, their Religion, their Authority, and the Limits of their Kingdom; and as I ſpeak of what is moſt remarkable in their Lives, we'll diſcover the firſt Spring of the Misfortunes of the Jews, and one of the Cauſes of their Ruin. We'll alſo ſee the irregular Conduct of the Jewiſh Church, which involv'd it ſelf into thoſe Calamities under which it as yet groans.

Ariſtobulus, one of the Aſmonæans, tir'd with being Head of the People, as his Anceſtors had been, aſſum'd a Diadem, and the Title of King. But he did not long enjoy them. For having put his own Mother and one of his Brothers to death, the Remorſe of ſo wicked a Crime ſoon brought him to his Grave. Alexander, whom he kept in Chains, came out of Priſon to aſcend the Throne. This Prince was oblig'd upon a Politick Account to ſacrifice one of his Brothers. He wag'd War againſt Ptolomy, who wou'd have reduc'd him to the laſt Extremity, had not Cleopatra, who was jealous of her Son's Progreſs, come timely to his Aid. The King of the Arabians drew him into an Ambuſcade, beat his Army, and had it trampl'd under his Camel's Feet. His own Subjects revolting againſt him, call'd a Foreigner to their Aſſiſtance. Their Battles were bloody, and this unhappy Prince in ſix years time was the Cauſe that near fifty thouſand Jews loſt their Lives. His Widow having gain'd the Affections of the People by her religious Zeal, and Complaiſance for the Phariſees, might have peaceably Reign'd, had not her two Sons taken up Arms to diſpute the Crown and Kingdom. Hircanus, who was naturally weak, and ſoft, immediately left the Empire to his Brother; but being exaſperated by the Counſels of Antipater, Herod's Father, who had a great Influence over him, and who cou'd expect no favour from his Competitor, he ſecretly retir'd to Aretas King of Arabia. Scaurus Pompey's Lieutenant General being inform'd of the Diviſion of theſe two Brothers, drew near Judæa, that he might make uſe of ſo fair an Opportunity either to enrich himſelf, or conquer that Country for the Romans; and he was not miſtaken. For Ariſtobulus ſent him three hundred Talents. Each * Talent was worth three thouſand Sicles, and every Sicle thirty French Sols; ſo that the three hundred Talents amounted to near fifteen hundred † thouſand Hores. This was a prodigious Sum for a Man, who had ſcarce ſat on the Throne, been lately baniſh'd by his Brother, and was very happy that he had not been taken Priſoner. The Roman General ſpoke in Pompey's Name, threaten'd the King of Arabia with an Invaſion, and oblig'd him to retire. Pompey himſelf came into Judæa, and being made Umpire of their Quarrel, he was offended at Ariſtobulus's Haughtineſs, who being jealous of his Royal Dignity, wou'd not expoſe his Majeſty. So that Pompey declar'd for Hircanus, carry'd him back to Jeruſalem, and beſieg'd that City, which immediately ſurrender'd, becauſe the wiſe or faint-hearted within prevail'd over Ariſtobulus's Party. Theſe retiring into the Temple, bravely defended themſelves. But Pompey, after three Months Siege, at laſt took the Temple. He regulated every thing as an abſolute Conqueror. For he order'd that thoſe who had either excited, or adviſ'd the War, ſhou'd loſe their Heads, impos'd a Tribute on the City of Jeruſalem, reſtor'd to the Governour of Cœlo-Syria all the Towns taken by the Jews, and to Samaria and a great many Maritime Towns, their former Liberty. I cannot therefore conceive, why ſome ‖ will not have, that Pompey was Maſter of Judæa, ſince he acted as a Sovereign. Wou'd the Jews have ſuffer'd him to diſmember ſo many Cities from their Dominions, if they had been able to oppoſe him? This Conqueror carry'd all before him; and Judæa as well as Syria, from the Frontiers of Egypt as far as the Euphrates, was left with two Legions under the Care of Scaurus, to prevent Inſurrections. He alter'd the Government, and was the firſt Founder of the Sanhedrim, that became afterwards ſo famous.

II. This was the beginning of their Misfortunes. Cæſar looking upon Ariſtobulus as a Man fit to ſecure him Syria, and the neighbouring Provinces, ſet him at Liberty. He immediately ſent him with two Legions to ſeize upon them. But Pompey's Friends kill'd him in his March, and his Son Alexander had his Head cut off at Antioch by Scipio's Order. Antigonus, who only remain'd of all his Children, complain'd to Cæſar againſt Antipater, Herod's Father, and Prime Miniſter to Hircanus, but who Reign'd in his Name. But this Miniſter opening his Gown, and ſhewing his Body full of Wounds, repreſented ſo pathetically his Services to the Romans, that Cæſar augmented his Authority inſtead of depriving him of it.

Thus Fortune pav'd the way to Herod to aſcend the Throne. Antipas begun to raiſe his Family, which had always been mean and obſcure. He went out of Aſcalon, where he had been Servant to a Prieſt, and advanc'd himſelf ſo much at Alexander Jannæus his Court, that he became Governour of Idumæa. He manag'd ſo well his Countrymen, the Aſcalonites, and thoſe of Gaza, who were their Neighbours, and the Arabians, that he ſtill grew more in Favour. He left his Son Antipater rich and powerful, who was

* Harduin de numm. Herod. † About a Million of Pounds Sterling. ‖ Harduin.

afterwards

afterwards Hircanus his Favourite. As his Master was not very fit for Business, and had for his Competitor an able and vigilant Brother, Antipater became absolutely necessary to him. Cæsar having settl'd his Authority by keeping Hircanus in the High Priesthood, he laid some new Projects to raise his Family. He boldly begun by dividing the Command of Judæa between his two Sons, Phasaëlus and Herod, who was then but a Youth. He gave the Government of Jerusalem to his eldest Son; and sent Herod into Galilee, who gain'd the Affection of the People by putting to death Ezechias the Ring-leader of Robbers, who for a long time had ravag'd all the neighbouring Provinces. Alexander, Aristobulus his Son, whom Pompey was carrying to Rome to honour his Triumph, found means to make his escape, and having soon gather'd some Troops, he unexpectedly surpriz'd his Uncle, and declar'd War against him. Gabinius, who had succeeded Scaurus in the Government of Syria, came to assist Hircanus, and beat the Rebels. After Cæsar's Death, Antipater sided with Cassius, and supply'd him with vast Sums of Money, which his Friends and Children rais'd for him. This able Statesman, after he had follow'd Pompey's Party, declar'd for Cæsar. But he favour'd Cæsar's Murderer, whilst he thought that he might become Master of the Republick. We'll see hereafter that Herod trod so exactly in his Father's Steps, that he did the same thing for Augustus.* He always sided with the Conqueror; and it was by these Artifices, that he depriv'd the Asmonæans of the Crown, and maintain'd his Usurpation. Let us go on with his History.

III. Antigonus having gather'd together those that were well-wishers to his Family, and obtain'd some Troops from the Tyrians, endeavour'd to revenge the Death of his Father Aristobulus, who was Brother to Hircanus. He begun to ravage Galilee, and made himself Master of three or four Castles; but Herod drove him out of them, sent the Tyrians home, beat Antigonus, and return'd in triumph to Jerusalem, where Hircanus and the People receiv'd him with great Applause.

He afterwards went to Anthony, after the defeat of Cassius, and prevented his Accusers, who were not heard, because Herod had brib'd his Judge. New Complaints were exhibited against him, when Anthony was going into Bithynia; but instead of admitting of them, he gave the Government to Herod, and to his Brother, whom he made Tetrarchs upon Hircanus's extraordinary Character of their Conduct: So that the two Brothers shar'd Judæa between them; and this Countrey was not divided into four Parts, as some think, grounding their Conjecture on the Name of Tetrarch.

Antigonus, who was back'd by the Parthians, made War against them, and so cross'd their first Rise. The Parthians made themselves Masters of the Temple, and having very treacherously seiz'd upon Hircanus, and Phasaëlus, Brother to Herod, they sent them to their King. Phasaëlus could not bear his misfortune; and as he cou'd not stab himself because he was manacl'd, he knock'd his Head against a Wall, and dy'd of his Wounds. Antigonus poison'd the Remedies that were design'd for him; but he refus'd them all, and wou'd do nothing to preserve his own Life. He was well pleas'd to die, when he heard that his Brother had escap'd the Enemy, and might one day revenge his Death. Hircanus, who was of a milder disposition, patiently waited the time, that God had appointed for his Liberty and Death. Herod fled to Rome by the way of Egypt; he thought himself undone, and sollicited the Kingdom for Aristobulus, Mariamne's Brother, Grand Son to Hircanus, and of the Asmonæan Family: But Augustus and Mark Antony, whose Protection he had bought, gave him the Kingdom, which he beg'd for another. He return'd forthwith to drive out his Rival by force of Arms: He was but little succour'd by the Roman Generals, who were brib'd. But he overcame all these Obstacles by his Vigour, Courage, and Diligence. Mark Anthony, who was still his Patron, sent Sosius at the head of Eleven Legions, and Six thousand Horse, which, back'd with Herod's Army, who fought for a Kingdom, whereof he already had the Title, went to besiege Jerusalem. The Nation by this intestine quarrel, felt all the mischiefs of a Civil War, and was expos'd to the avarice and oppression of the Romans, who inrich'd themselves with their Spoils. They generally sided with Antigonus, and being shut up in the Temple, boasted that God wou'd not forsake them. However they were mistaken; for God declar'd himself against his Temple, and those that fought for the defence of his Altars. Jerusalem was taken, and the Romans reveng'd themselves, because they thought that it held out too long. The Soldiers believed, that by massacring the People, they shou'd lessen their Enemies; so that the Slaughter was great: And Antigonus himself fell into the Victor's Hands, who nevertheless upbraided him with Cowardice, and call'd him a Woman. He sent him Prisoner to Antioch, where Mark Anthony order'd him to be crucify'd. The Jews, says Dion †, a Nation very furious, when exasperated, did the Romans a great deal of mischief, but were still the greatest Sufferers. Mark Anthony gave their Kingdom to a certain Herod I. caus'd Antigonus to be whipp'd, and hung on a Cross, and he is the first King that ever was thus executed. Thus the Reign of the Asmonæans ended: They seiz'd upon the Crown, tho' they had no right to it, since they were of the Tribe of Levi; and Herod depriv'd them of the Kingdom. Hircanus was as yet living, and the Jews are in the wrong to say that Herod fell upon him at his return from Parthia, and was not easy till he was kill'd; for this Prince us'd Hircanus very civilly, and gave him the upper hand in the Council. It was several years after his return, that he accus'd him of holding a correspondence with Malchus the Arabian, and put him to Death upon Suspicion. It is only true, that Hircanus had not then the Supream Power in Jerusalem, and that * Herod reign'd there as a Conquerour.

V. A Man had a nice Game to play to keep his Ground among the frequent Revolutions of the Roman Empire, which often shifted its Competitors and Masters. Herod, as yet tottering upon his Throne, cou'd expect no favour from Augustus, since he had been so faithful to Mark Antony. He had once a mind to kill Cleopatra in his Palace, who was in love with him, and he advis'd Anthony to do the same thing: But these selfish Projects, which were never put in Execution, were not enough to appease Augustus, who carried all before him since the Battle of Actium. Herod waited upon that Prince at Rhodes, and instead of humbling himself before that Emperor, and of beging Pardon, he enlarg'd on his Services to Anthony, who had been his Benefactor. He laid down his Diadem before the Victor, and beseech'd him to judge of his Gratitude and Loyalty, assuring him, that if he receiv'd the Crown from his Hands, he wou'd be as faithful to him. Augustus was mov'd by his greatness of Soul, and gave him back his Kingdom. Herod afterwards receiv'd this Prince magnificently at Ptolomais, and besides what he gave to his Army, and the chief Officers of the Court, he presented him with 800 Talents. Being thus confirm'd by Augustus in his Authority under the Seal of the Senate, he grew very formidable in all Judæa.

† Dio. 3 Hist. l. 49. p. 462. * Ganz. Chronol. an. 724 p. 83.

VI. This

VI. This Prince was vigilant, brave, skilful, magnificent, and a good Politician. He forgot nothing, that cou'd pleaſe his Maſters, and lay'd out vaſt ſums of Money for the ſake of Agrippa and Auguſtus, in whoſe Honour he built ſome Cities, and chang'd the name of Samaria. He celebrated ſome publick Games which made the People, who ſuſpected theſe new Shews, murmur. He new-built the Temple, and made it more noble, and larger than it was before, that he might gain the Affection of the Jews, and make them believe that he was very zealous for their Religion. However, as he made uſe of the ſame Materials, and preſerv'd ſome parts of the Ancient Building, his Structure is confounded with that of Zerubbabel, and the Jews themſelves reckon but two Houſes. That Baba, a Diſciple of Schammai, perſwaded him to erect this Temple, in order to expiate his having Maſſacred all the Counſellors of the Sanhedrim, is only a Figment of the Rabbins; and ſo is what they pretend *, that God work'd a Miracle in his behalf; and that it rain'd all night at Jeruſalem, whilſt the days were clear and dry, that the Workmen might finiſh this Monument of Herod's Piety. Some Chriſtians † on the contrary contend, that he never rais'd that Edifice, and that he was no more concern'd in the adorning of the Temple of Jeruſalem, than of the Capitol; and that this Honour is beſtowed upon him, only to have more reaſon to call him Great. But I do not know upon what grounds this Conjecture is built. Several noble Structures of his are ſufficient Arguments of his Magnificence, and the Temple he built at Samaria, is enough to make us believe, that he had a hand in that of Jeruſalem. The Inhabitants of Judæa hated him mortally, notwithſtanding he rebuilt their Temple, and diſtributed a prodigious quantity of Corn among them, in the time of a very hard Famine, (as their modern Hiſtorians acknowledge.) And if the Nation ſuſpended their Hatred whilſt their Wants and his Charity laſted; it was as inveterate as ever when the Dearth was over. It cannot be deny'd but that he was cruel; ſince the beautiful Mariamne's Grand Father, Brother, and two Sons, felt the dire effects of his Fury; and tho' he loved her to diſtraction, he baſely murder'd her. His Son Antipater, after he had for a long time been his Darling and Favourite, became at laſt the Object of his Cruelty. For he had his Throat cut in Priſon, even when he was a dying; and too credulouſly hearkening to his Siſter's Stories, who conceal'd her barbarous Temper under the ſhrowd of Loyalty, he fill'd all his Houſe with Blood. Far from ſubmitting to the Sanhedrim, he put two high Prieſts to Death, and depos'd four. Jeſus Chriſt being born towards the latter end of his Reign, he endeavour'd to involve him in the general Maſſacre of the Children of Bethlehem. Theſe Infant-Martyrs are reckon'd to be 14000 in Number, upon the Authority of an Ethiopian Manuſcript; and ſome reckon them 144000, becauſe they are ſuppoſed the Souls of thoſe Infants mention'd in the || Revelations of St. John. But it is impoſſible, that ſo ſmall a City as Bethlehem contain'd ſo many Children of two years of Age. Neither muſt we admit what ſeveral Fathers, and among them Origen, Gregorius Niſſenus, St. Baſil, and Cyril, ſay, that Herod kill'd Zachary between the Porch and the Altar, becauſe this Father of John Baptiſt, and a Prophet had foretold the Birth of the Meſſiah, and hid his Son, whom Herod thought the Meſſiah, by reaſon of the Prodigies that happen'd at his Birth. This Prince hath no need to be charg'd with any imaginary Barbarities ſince he hath enough to anſwer of his own. As he was perſwaded, that the People who hated him wou'd ſhout for Joy at his Death, he reſolv'd to force them into Tears, by commanding his Siſter, who was as cruel as he, to cut the Throats of all the Nobility of the Country, which he had conven'd at Jericho, where he lay ſick. But Salome durſt not execute this dreadful Sentence; and made it a high Compliment to them, that ſhe diſobey'd her dying Brother's Orders. God, even in this Life, inflicted ſo ſevere a Puniſhment upon him, that it is reported, he attempted to haſten his Death by ſtabbing himſelf with a Knife.

§. II. The Birth and Religion of Herod.

VII. THe Jews ſhou'd ſtand up for Herod's Memory and Birth, ſince they wou'd thereby enervate the Objection, which the Chriſtians raiſe from this Foreigner's being promoted to the Throne of Judah. For theſe commonly conclude, that ſince Herod was a Stranger, the Scepter of Judah was departed, and that the Meſſiah was to appear in his Reign. But the Rabbins forſake their Intereſt, and ſacrifice it to their hatred of the Memory of that Prince. They maintain, that he was an Idumæan, Slave to the Aſmonæans, who falling in love with a Daughter of that Family, heard a Voice, that told him, Happy the Man, who will revolt this minute, and that he immediately cut his Maſter's Throat. The Princeſs, who remain'd alone, went up upon the Platform of the Palace, call'd the People to her Aid, and threw her ſelf down. But Herod ſtill in love with her, hid her for ſeven years in Honey; ſome affirm that he knew her then, but others deny it. They add, that Herod, who was by Birth an Idumæan, became a Proſelyte, but that by the Law Proſelytes were excluded from the Crown, and all other publick Employs; and that tho' his Father had already imbrac'd the Religion of Moſes, his Mother, who was an Arabian, debar'd him from the Throne, ſince Children follow their Mother's Condition; Partus Ventrem ſequitur.

Jeſus Chriſt's Relations did affirm, that Antipas, Grand Father to Herod, was Keeper of a Temple of Apollo, and that his Son being taken by the Idumæans, the Keeper, who wanted Money to redeem his Son, let him remain a Slave. Africanus related this Teſtimony as an undoubted truth; and Euſebius *, who did what he cou'd to vilify the Birth of Herod, hath copy'd him. Some fruitleſs Attempts have been made to correct the Text of this † Hiſtorian, by Subſtituting the title of Prieſt, and razing out that of Keeper or Servant. For beſides, that ſuch Attempts are bold, theſe plainly thwart Euſebius's Intention, who deſign'd to tarniſh Herod's Glory, to draw from thence ſome Inferences for the Chriſtian Religion; St. Epiphanius adds a degrading Circumſtance to Euſebius's Story. For he aſſerts, that Antipater and his Son did not think to become Jews, till they ſaw that their Religion clog'd their Riſe. Moſt of the Fathers |||| have follow'd this Opinion; and Modern Authors have highten'd it, that Herod might appear a greater Foreigner than he was. Scaliger, who thought it a Prejudice, fell into the other Extream, and hath labour'd hard to extol this Family. He maintain'd that Herod was a Jew ſince his Anceſtors had embrac'd the Jewiſh Religion. Nay, he ſuppoſes, that his Mother, who was an Arabian, became a Proſelyte, becauſe the Aſmo-

* Ganz. Chonol. an. 742. p. 85. † Harduin de Nummis Herodiadum. || Apoc. 14. 1. * Euſeb. l. 1. c. 7. † Erycius Phalitran. Syntagm. Differ. apud Grævium, p. 440. leg. ἱερεύτε, inſtead of ἱερέλε, Prieſt inſtead of Servant to a Prieſt. Harduin de Nummis Herod. |||| Epiph. Hær. 20. p. 45 Juſtin. Mart. Dial. p. 272. Cyril. Alex. Glaphyr. in Geneſ. c. 7. p. 223. Caſaub. Exercit. in Baron. p. 44. Serrarii Herodes, p. 20. Scalig. in Euſeb. Chron. p. 150.

næans

næans had renew'd the Law againſt mix'd Marriages. But let us examine theſe Opinions, and cull the Truth out of them.

VIII. We muſt not wholly deſpiſe the Tradition of Jeſus Chriſt's Kindred, who liv'd in Judæa a little after the fall of the Houſe of Herod, and could be better inform'd than Modern Writers. For it is not impoſſible, that Herod's Grand Father was Keeper of a Temple of Apollo. This can't be apply'd to Antipater, but may be true of Herod's Grand Father, who was the firſt Perſon of Note, and made his Family conſiderable. So that Antipas liv'd originaly in Aſcalon, which was the true Birth-place of the Herods, who had always a tender regard for that City. For Antipas being Governour of Idumæa under Alexander Janneus, was very kind to Aſcalon, which had haughtily withſtood his Maſter. Nay, it ſeems, that he reſerv'd it as a place of Refuge, in caſe he was diſgrac'd. Herod could not perſwade Auguſtus, who had given him ſo many Countries, to beſtow this City upon him. However Herod lov'd it more than any City of Judæa. For he built there ſome noble Baths, and a Royal Palace, which he bequeath'd to his Siſter Salome. This Preference and Affection of Herod for Aſcalon, which was without his Frontiers, confirm the general Tradition, that he was Originally an Aſcalonite. The Talmudiſts will have it, that part of this City and Neighbouring Places depended on the Holy Land.

There was in it a Temple conſecrated to Idols, and therefore it was reckon'd a Heatheniſh City, but the Jews had likewiſe ſome Juriſdiction there. The Rabbins call'd it * their City; they waſh'd themſelves, eat and bought Corn in that Place. There was even a Faſt enjoin'd at Jeruſalem, becauſe it was one day obſerv'd, that there was a Blite upon the Corn of Aſcalon, and that it was fear'd leaſt the whole Harveſt ſhould be loſt. The moſt zealous Sticklers for Herod, and among them Scaliger, might have made uſe of theſe Arguments, to prove, that Antipas might have been a Jew tho' he was born in Aſcalon; but Joſephus and the Scripture aſcribe it to Heathens, who worſhip'd Dagon. The Jews had no power in that City, and Auguſtus refus'd it to Herod, who earneſtly beg'd it.

Antipas coming out of Aſcalon, and being made Governour of Idumæa, was in all likelyhood oblig'd to embrace the Jewiſh Religion, when Hircanus, who conquer'd this Province, forc'd all the Inhabitants to receive the Law of Moſes: Antipater follow'd his Father's Religion, or at leaſt he embrac'd Judaiſm, according to Joſephus, who makes him a Proſelyte. And indeed it is not likely that a Heathen was Prime Miniſter to the high Prieſt, and yet that Paganiſm and Idolatry were never laid to his charge. He brought up Phaſaelus and Herod in the boſom of the ſame Church, which deſtroys the Opinion of St. Epiphanius, who affirms, that both Father and Son only chang'd their Religion for Preferment.

This Prince was then a Demy Jew, as Antigonus call'd him. He was a Jew, and Incorporated into that Nation, ſince his Grand Father and Father had already profeſs'd the Law of Moſes, and been prefer'd to the firſt Employments of the Commonwealth. But he was not a Jew deſcended from the Poſterity of Abraham, nor from the Tribe of Judah, ſince he was originally an Aſcalonite, and his Grand Father had been a Heathen.

IX. This plainly appears from a Law Suit, which the Jews and the Inhabitants of Cæſarea had. The firſt pretended a Preference in that City, becauſe it was built by one of their Nation. And indeed Herod was the Founder of it, and the Syrians did not deny theſe two Facts. So that Herod was at that time a Jew both by Birth and Religion. The Syrians did not examine whether he deſcended from Abraham by the Tribe of Judah, becauſe that ſignify'd nothing to them, but they granted their Adverſaries, that he was a Jew by Birth and Religion, which is an evident Demonſtration againſt the Jews, and moſt part of Chriſtians, that Herod was not a Proſelyte, but a Jew by Birth. In vain ſome endeavour to make Joſephus contradict himſelf here, to conclude from thence that his Book is ſpurious. It is true, that this Hiſtorian hath confuted Nicolaus Damaſcenus, who plac'd Antipater, Herod's Father, among the Jews, altho' he was a Proſelyte; but he doth not here contradict himſelf, nor deny what he had affirm'd. Beſides, ſince he only relates the Law Suit between the Syrians and Jews of Cæſarea, without deciding it; is it not ſtrange, that a Critick who animadverts even on Words, which do not appear Greek to him, hath miſtaken the Plea of the Jews of Cæſarea for a Deciſion, and made uſe of his miſtake as an Argument to prove Joſephus's Book ſuppoſititious, even when this Hiſtorian ſays nothing of his own, and only relates what others have ſaid?

X. The ſame Critick advances a Conjecture, which is both new and bold. For he makes him an Athenian, becauſe there were ſeveral Perſons of that name in Athens, and that this City call'd this Prince its Benefactor. In what ever Provinces the Greeks and Romans extended their Empire, ſome were call'd by the Name of Herod. This name was common in Athens, and elſe where. Cicero ſpeaks of a pitiful Author of that name, who often wou'd tire Atticus with the reading of his Compoſures. On the contrary, Photius quotes one Herod, an excellent Greek Poet. But there was one more Famous under Antoninus, who became Marcus Aurelius's Tutor, and was Conſul, according to Cardinal Noris, in 139, or 140. This Man was very haughty and proud, as it appear'd in his Conteſt with the Athenians before Marcus Aurelius. For inſtead of pleading his Cauſe, he upbraided this Emperour with ſacrificing him to a Woman and two Children, becauſe the Empreſs and her Children had ſolicited againſt him. Yet as proud as he was, he did never boaſt of being related to the Herods of Judæa, who had but lately been Kings. Two Inſcriptions were found ſome Years ago at Rome. Cauſaubon was impos'd upon by them, and believ'd them to be of Herod King of Judæa, becauſe they bore his name: But Arcudius more happily diſcover'd the Perſon we now mention, who was a Prieſt to the Emperours in his Country. He was born at Marathon, and having made uſe of the Treaſure that his Father found, built ſome noble Structures at Athens and Megara, whereof the Ruins are ſtill to be ſeen, † and it was to acknowledge this Favour, that this laſt City had an Inſcription ingrav'd, calling him its Benefactor.

ΕΠΙ. ΕΥΕΡΓΑΣΙΑΣ. ΚΑΙ. ΕΥΝΟΙΑΣ. ΤΗΣ.
ΠΡΟΣ. ΤΗΝ. ΠΟΛΙΝ.

Herod Atticus was a Stanger in Megara, and yet the Citizens of that City call'd him their Benefactor in this Inſcription. Why then will not ſome have it, that the Athenians did give this ſame Title to Herod King of Judæa, ſince according to Joſephus, he had been very bountiful to their City. Muſt one be born in a place, to be call'd Benefactor of it? His dependance upon the Romans did not debar him from being kind to the Greek Cities, ſince Herod Atticus, who was but a private Man, and an Orator, had the liberty to do it? Why might he not have made ſome Treaties with them, as well as with the City of Antioch? If People have a mind || to derive Herod's Pedigree from another Herod, it wou'd be more reaſonable to look for it among the Palmyreni, where one Herod made himself Emperour, with his Father. For it is more probable that he shou'd have come from Palmyrena into Judæa, than from Athens. But we must not look out for some Herods to trace his Genealogy; for it was not the name of his Family. If Herod came Originally from Athens, we ought to find there an Antipas, and an Antipater, who were Father and Grand Father to this Prince, who took another name. Father Harduin never thought of this.

* V. Lightfoot Cent. Chor. Matth. Præf. p. 31. † Wheeler's Voyages. t. 1. p. 484. || A. Gell. noct. Att. l. 21. *c.*2. *p.*2. Joſeph. le belle, l. c. 1. p. 749. Trebell. Pollio de Trig. Tyr. c. 15. p. 593.

for

It is also pretended, that Herod's Mother being an Arabian Woman, that excluded him from the Crown; and therefore Scaliger, to obviate this Objection, transforms Cypros into a Proselyte: But there was no need of this Conjecture. For the prohibition of mixt Marriages was so often overlook'd, that it is not likely that Antipater made a scruple to marry an Idolater. Besides, of how many Kings do we read in the Old Testament, who were born of these sorts of Marriages, and yet were not depriv'd of their Right to the Succession of the Crown? Absalon was Son to an Infidel, and notwithstanding his Birth, the People proclaim'd him King. It may be objected, that this was only a Popular Commotion; but Roboboam, who was Son of Mahama an Ammonite succeeded Solomon, notwithstanding that it was intirely against the Laws to Marry an Ammonite Woman, and that the Ammonites, even to the Tenth Generation, were excluded * from the Church. Jeroboam, being at the head of the Ten Tribes, never alledg'd this flaw in his Birth to ground their Separation and Revolt. The Rabbins say that Solomon made all his Wives Proselytes; but this is contradicted in holy Writ, where we read, that this Prince, far from converting his Wives, embrac'd their Religion, and erected some Temples and Altars to their false Dieties. Why shou'd Herod be deny'd a Privilege, which was before granted to the ancient Kings of Judah? Farther, it is a rash thing to make the Interpretation of Jacob's Oracle depend on a Maxim peculiar to some Civilians and Places, that the Son follows the condition of the Mother. For that is not a Maxim of the natural Law; and the contrray is often practis'd. To conclude, the Rabbins can't say, that Herod was Servant to the Asmonæans, for this Title can at most be giv en, but to his Grand Father Antipas; as for him, he was made in his Youth Governour of Galilee, and his Father was one of the greatest Men of the whole Country. Three Generations are enough to wipe off the Imputation of a mean Extraction, and to make a Family honourable. Let this suffice for his Birth and Pedigree, which have occasion'd several warm disputes among Ancient and Modern Writers. For when the naked Truth is expos'd to view, it plainly appears that he was a Jew born. Let us examine upon what Title he enjoy'd the Kingdom. 1. Whether he was King of all Judæa, which some Criticks dispute. 2. Whether he was Vassal and Tributary to the Romans, which, tho' true, is deny'd by others.

§ 3. The Extent of Herod's Dominions.

XII. SOme † pretend, that Augustus gave the Kingdom of Judæa to Herod, only to pay him the Interest, and Principal of a vast Sum of Money which Mark Anthony and he had borrow'd; that Archelaus continu'd to reign for some Years, because the Debt was not wholly paid; but that when full Payment was made, the Pawn was taken from him; and that this appears the more likely, because Julius Cæsar had already receiv'd some considerable Sums from Herod. So that Herod was rather the Farmer, than King of Judæa. But this is a mistake: For that Herod, who lent about 8571 l. Sterling to build Marathon, was neither Son to Antipater, nor King of Judæa, but a Citizen of Athens of that name. Neither is it true that Cæsar borrow'd that Sum of him; the Athenians made only use of the Interest that this Country Man of theirs had with Cæsar to obtain this Money, that had been drawn out of his Province, and coin'd at Genoa, which was design'd to build Marathon. But suppose it was true, that Julius Cæsar borrow'd about 8571 Pounds of Herod, can it be concluded from thence that Anthony and Augustus ran so much in Debt with him, that to pay it they gave him Judæa, from whence such prodigious Sums cou'd be rais'd? Herod frequently made some considerable Presents to Anthony and Augustus, but it doth not appear that they contracted with him as his Creditors. On the contrary, when Augustus might have taken above 160000 || Pounds, which Herod had bequeath'd to him in his Will, he generously return'd that Money to his Children. A Man who is oblig'd to Mortgage Kingdoms to pay his Debts, will never do this. Lastly, if Augustus pawn'd Judæa and Samaria to Archelaus for nine or ten Years, how came he to give part of this Kingdom to Herod and Philip for a longer time, and even for Life? So that it is plain, that far from designing to discharge a Debt which he had contracted a long while before with Mark Anthony, to carry on their Interest, he only comply'd with Herod's last Will and Testament. And therefore Herod held from Augustus the Kingdom of Judæa, as other Kings, who were Vassals to the Empire.

XIII. Herod the Great was King of all Judæa; and all the Provinces, over which his Sons were Tetrarchs, where under him. But some will not allow this. For ||| a famous Critick asserts, that only Samaria and Judæa fell to this Prince's share; but that Galilee and Trachonitis were never under his Jurisdiction; because he only built some Fortresses in the two first Provinces. " These Forts were the undoubted " marks of his Loyalty, which had been requir'd of " him in other Places as well as in Judæa, had they " been under his Government; and since he built none " there, it must be acknowledg'd that Zenodorus was " Tetrarch of Ituræa, Trachonitis, and Galilee, and that " he liv'd till the Reign of Philip and Herod the Se- " cond who succeeded him, because they had been " cunning enough to be ally'd to him, tho' it is hi- " therto unknown whether it was by Marriage, or " otherwise. So that, according to him, Herod the Great's Children only were Masters of these Provinces, and Josephus ascrib'd them all to their Father, meerly because he had a mind to enlarge the Frontiers of a Kingdom, which seem'd too small for one whom he design'd to dignify with the Title of Great.

Here are a great many Conjectures heap'd upon one another, but upon what grounds? Dio relates, that at the birth of Caius, Augustus gave Herod I. Trachonitis, whereof one Zenodorus was Tetrarch. None can suspect this Foreign Historian, who confirms Josephus's relation. This last gave a Copy of Herod's last Will, and he inserts there Galilee and Trachonitis as bequeath'd to his Sons. St. Luke agrees with Josephus in this, and names Herod's Children, as being in possession of the Territories assign'd them by their Father. Can then a meer Conjecture invalidate so many matters of Fact? For we are only told that Zenodorus out-liv'd Herod the Great; and that this

* Deut. 23. 3. † Harduin de Numm. Herod. || The Latin Translation mentions only 50 Talents. But it is a mistake. For the Original says five Hundred Talents. The Translator read [illegible] instead of [illegible]. Every Talent was worth something above 321 Pounds; so that it amounted to about 160500 Pounds Sterling. ||| Harduin Ibid.

Prince's Children were his Heirs; becauſe they were ally'd to him. But it muſt be gueſs'd, that Zenodorus liv'd ſo long. Farther, how doth it appear that Herod's Children were related to him? This is another Conjecture without Proofs. Tho' it were certain, that they were ally'd to him, yet that doth not prove their Right to his Inheritance, ſince the Tetrarchat depended on Auguſtus his Will, and that Zenodorus was but * the Emperor's Farmer. And indeed after Cleopatra's Death, Zenodorus rented it. But Farmers do not diſpoſe by Will of their Lords Lands, and their Heirs have no Right to Claim them. But ſome of Zenodorus his Medals are produc'd, having a Head with the Title of Tetrarch. Whereas Herod's Medals have no Human Figure upon them, which, as is pretended, proves that the firſt rul'd out of Judæa, where Images were allow'd, and that Herod was confin'd within the Territories of Samaria and Jeruſalem, where it was a crime to have the Heads and Pictures of Men Ingraven upon Coins. But theſe Medals are nothing to the purpoſe. For, without inquiring whether Herod, who ſet up a Golden-Eagle upon the Gate of the Temple of Jeruſalem, was ſo ſcrupulouſly nice, as not to put his Head upon his Medals; there are ſo few Medals of that Prince now extant, that we can draw no conſequences from this, which is preſerv'd for a Thouſand that are loſt. I grant theſe two things; the firſt, That Zenodorus's Territories were without Judæa. The 2*d*. That what he enjoy'd was not given to Herod, but a long time after this laſt had ſway'd the Scepter of Judæa. And indeed Dio reckons ten Years, and Zenodorus might be dead at that time. It is falſe that he out liv'd Herod, and we have no manner of proof that he liv'd, nor any Monument of his, ſince the Year 723 of Rome.

This matter † may eaſily be unravell'd. Ptolemy taking advantage of the Diviſions in Syria, ſeized upon Ituræa, Heliopolis, Marſyas, and Chalcis. He left his Conqueſts and Uſurpations to his Son Lyſanias, and it was he who call'd Abylene by his Name. The Romans having made themſelves Maſters of that Country, Mark Anthony, who favour'd Lyſanias, left him the poſſeſſion of what Territories he enjoy'd, and gave him the Title of King. But ſome time after Cleopatra deſiring to have Arabia and Ituræa, this Prince was impeach'd, and under pretence that he had a deſign to make an Alliance with Pacorus King of Parthia, he was depriv'd both of his Crown and Life. Cleopatra ſucceeded him, but having made a Tragical end, Auguſtus re-united her Dominions to the Empire, and Farm'd them to Zenodorus, who call'd them by his name They then were call'd the Houſe of Zenodorus. But this Farmer being dead, Herod, who found that theſe Lands lay conveniently for him, obtain'd them of Auguſtus, in the Year 734. and three Years before the Birth of our Saviour, ſo that Ituræa and Trachonitis were under Herod's Government, and therefore he left them to his Children by his Will, which he ſubmitted to Auguſtus, and St. Luke confirms this Partition.

Joſephus obſerves, that Philip had but part of the Houſe, or Government of Zenodorus; becauſe Auguſtus had taken Abylene from it, and given that Country to Lyſanias's Grand-Son, whoſe Name was alſo Lyſanias St. Luke names him, when he ſets down the Epocha of St. John Baptiſt's Preaching. For he then ſays, || that he was Tetrarch of Abylene. Ptolemy |||| places Abyla among the chief Cities of Syria, and call's it Abyla of Lyſanias. Some pretend, that this Lyſanias was Son to him, whom Mark Anthony put to Death; but he was dead ſixty Yeary before. So that it is more probable, that he was his Grand-Son. Joſephus * adds, that Philip had alſo ſome Lands near Jamnia, which embroils this matter, becauſe this City, Situate on the Mediterranean Sea near Lydda, was very far from his Kingdom. This palpable fault is corrected in the Joſephus that is now Printing in England; which † ſays, that the Lands that were near Jamnia, and formerly belong'd to his Father, were alſo given to Philip. This Correction is eaſy; but ſince there was a large Town in Galilee call'd Jamnia, which Joſephus || fortify'd at the beginning of the War; becauſe of its Situation, it is better to ſay that Zenodorus had there ſome Lands, which were poſſeſs'd by Herod, and added afterwards to Philip's Tetrarchat.

A great Streſs is alſo laid on Herod's not building any Citadels either in Galilee or Trachonitis, altho' he was bound to do it, as an undoubted Argument of his Loyalty. But this is a groundleſs and falſe Conjecture. For, 1. Herod made War with the Inhabitants of that Country, who were great Robbers, and afterwards built there ſome Forts to keep them in awe. 2. It doth not certainly appear that Herod rebuilt Samaria to be a cautionary Town to the Romans, but that it was for his own ſafety, and only call'd it by Auguſtus's name, out of reſpect to that Emperour. But tho' the Romans had requir'd this mark of his Fidelity in the heart of Judæa, there was no neceſſity, that they ſhou'd exact the ſame thing on the Frontiers, that were nearer to Syria, and the Roman-Garriſons. In a word, Herod II. who enjoy'd Galilee upon the ſame Title, as his Father had Samaria, built there no Cittadels that were call'd by Auguſtus's name. This can't be deny'd. So that to ſay, that Herod the Great was ſubject to the Romans, and that his Son who was only a Tetrarch, was more independent, and had Galilee upon better Terms than he, is, without ſenſe and reaſon, to confound every thing. A great many matters of Fact are contradicted here, but not prov'd to be falſe; and if they were, the Inference that is drawn from thence wou'd not be the more certain; and it muſt be unknowledg'd, that Herod was King of all Judæa, and enjoy'd that Kingdom as a Vaſſal and Subject of the Roman Empire. This is what muſt be prov'd.

§ 4. Herod's Subjection to the Romans prov'd.

XIV. S*Caliger* pretends that |||| Herod was not Tributary to the Romans, becauſe Mark Anthony decided, that it was to no purpoſe to beſtow the Royal Authority on any body, if he cou'd not make uſe of it. Farther, how likely is it that Auguſtus, who call'd this Prince his Friend, and did nothing without his advice, wou'd make him a Vaſſal? St. Jerome † pretends, that Judæa was not Tributary till Archelaus was baniſh'd. Scaliger adds, that when Herod referr'd the Condemnation of his Children to Auguſtus, he then willingly diveſted himſelf of the Right of Father and King, which ſufficiently impower'd him to put them to Death; and that he did the ſame thing when he made Auguſtus Executor of his laſt Will and Teſtament.

In anſwer to this. Firſt, it was the Cuſtom of Generals, and eſpecially of Pompey, to make all the Provinces that they Conquer'd, Tributary. Hiſtory ||

---

* Εμεμίδωτη, Joſeph. † Scaliger in Euſeb. Caſaub Exercit. in Bar. 13. || Luke 3. 1. |||| Ptol. l. 5. c. 15. * Joſeph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 4. † Τὰ σὲι, they read ἡ τὰ σὲι; or τὰ τὶ σὲι, & circa. Id. de vitâ, p. 1013. || Joſephus Ant. l. 16. c. 13. p. 570. |||| Scal. Not. ad Euſeb. p. 163. † Hier. in Math. 17. || Velleius Paterc. l. 2. Appian. in Syriac. Ulpianus in Digeſto, l. 50 Tit. de Cenſibus, l. 2. n. 3.

tells

tells us, that Pompey made Syria tributary, and oblig'd the Syrians to pay the hundredth Penny. Besides this first Tax they paid a Capitation, which begun at Fourteen, and ended at Sixty five Years of Age. Why should Judæa, which border'd upon Syria, have been more exempted than this last Province?

Farther, Appianus * positively says, that Mark Anthony having appointed Herod King of Idumæa and Samaria, made him tributary. It is nothing to the Purpose, whether this Historian is a Plagiary, or not. For it is still certain, that we ought to prefer in this Case, the Testimony of a Man who liv'd under the Empire of Adrian, and had read the ancient Relations of those Times, to the blind and uncertain Conjectures of a Modern Critick.

Some have try'd to correct Appianus's Text, and make him say, that Mark Anthony order'd several Kings, of his own making, to be under Arms in the Posts which he had assign'd them. People must be very bold to make such Corrections as this: For Pompey had already made Judæa tributary; and it was still so when Anthony gave Herod that Kingdom. So that Appianus was in the right to say, that it was given Herod, upon Condition that he should pay the Taxes that were laid upon it. The Kings of Pontus, Pisidia, and Cilicia, that Anthony made at the same time, were tributary. How then can Herod be separated from these Kings, with which he is join'd by Appianus? Nay, after the Alteration of two Words in Appianus's † Text, it doth not answer their Design, since Anthony gives no Orders to take up Arms; so that it is in vain for them to correct this Historian, to make him favour their Opinion: For all that they make him say, is only, That Anthony constituted such Kings as he thought fit for the order'd Motion, which is not Sense. Or at least to make it so, we must supply a great many Things, to understand thereby, that Anthony made Herod, Darius, and Mithridates, Kings, only upon Condition, that they should raise some Troops, and be always in Arms, because he was going to wage a War with the Parthians. Would it not be much more reasonable, to acknowledge fairly, that Appianus look'd upon Herod as a tributary Prince, than to deny it upon so slender Grounds?

It is so plain a Case, that Judæa was tributary to the Romans under Herod, that as soon as he was dead, the Emperour's Agent in Syria set out to take an Account of his Goods, and seal them. All that Archelaus cou'd do to prevent it, was to beg of Varus, to stay till Cæsar had order'd how they should be dispos'd of. The Agent stay'd some time at Cæsarea; but at last he went to Jerusalem, and endeavour'd to seize upon the Money and Forts. He was oppos'd; yet none in the main doubted, ‖ but that the Ward of his Goods belong'd to Augustus. Independent Kings are not treated at this rate. The same thing was done when Archelaus was condemn'd: What Estate he had in Judæa was first confiscated, and then farm'd out. Besides Josephus affirms, that a Capitation had been for many Years settl'd in Judæa, since he remonstrated to the Jews of Jerusalem, That their Fathers had pay'd it to the Ancestors of the Romans, that then exacted it. The Chaldee Paraphrast, who writ either before the coming of Jesus Christ, or according to others in the Reign of Tiberius, explaining one of Habakkuck's Prophecies, says, That the Romans shall be destroy'd, and shall not oblige the Citizens of Jerusalem to pay Taxes. No body foretels, that People shall be deliver'd out of a Calamity, that never happen'd to them: So that Taxes must have been exacted by the Romans for many Years; since to have them abolish'd, was look'd upon as a Favour from Heaven; which was foretold by the Prophets. Lastly, Christ, at the Passage of Capernaum, paid a Didrachm.-- Was it true, as some Criticks pretend, that this Tribute was not impos'd till Archelaus's Death, and only in the Country under his Jurisdiction, which was then re-united to the Demesns of the Empire, there had been no Tax-Gatherers to receive it in Capernaum, a City of Galilee. To pretend, that this City was part of his Dominions, is to confound the Limits of the Tetrarchats, and the Partition made by Herod, and confirm'd by Augustus, who bestow'd Galilee on Herod the Tetrarch. Lastly, The Question, which the Herodians put to Jesus Christ, Whether Tribute was to be paid to Cæsar, is a plain Confirmation of the Emperour's Right to it, and that Judæa was always tributary, since the time that Pompey subdu'd it. St. Jerome |||| contradicts himself, since he confesses in another place, that Augustus oblig'd Judæa to pay Tribute; and that it was for that Reason that the whole Empire was describ'd.

XV. Judæa was not only tributary in the Reign of Herod, but this Prince also depended upon the Romans: For it was to them that the Jews complain'd against him. They accus'd him twice before Mark Anthony; and this Prince was oblig'd to go himself to answer their Accusations, or rather to bribe †† this Judge, who refus'd to hear his Accusers, and order'd some of the most obstinate to be crucify'd. A Man can't be a Sovereign who pleads his Cause before a Roman General, and is oblig'd to answer what Accusations his Subjects lay to his Charge, and to bribe his Judge. Yet Herod did then manage every thing as he pleas'd in Jerusalem, jointly with Hircanus, whose Name he only borrow'd.

Farther, when Herod was a Fugitive, he was forc'd to go to Rome, to receive the Crown from Mark Anthony's and Augustus's Hands, who carry'd him between them to the Capitol, that they might make the Dignity, which they conferr'd upon him, the more honourable. So that there was a Necessity, before he could claim a Right to the Crown, that he should obtain it from those that were Masters in Rome. This is so true, that after the Battle of Actium, and Anthony's Defeat, Herod, who was afraid to lose his Crown by this Revolution, waited upon Augustus at Rhodes, and there laid down his Diadem. He vindicated his Behaviour and Fidelity to Anthony, and his Presents appeas'd the Conquerour as much as his Undauntedness. A King who is oblig'd to act that Part, and to depend upon the Freaks of Fortune, is not a Sovereign Prince. It must be own'd, that he was at that time neither a Friend nor Equal to Augustus; but that he depended upon him, as a Vassal accus'd of Felony depends upon his Lord, and is afraid to be punish'd by him.

Being falsely accus'd by Scyllæus the Arabian, who had debauch'd Salome, and thought to have marry'd her afterwards, he fell under Augustus's Displeasure. For Scyllæus exasperated, that he was refus'd contrary to his Expectation, went to Augustus, and exhibited several Complaints against Herod. So that all Accusations against this Prince were always carry'd to Rome. Scyllæus being convicted of Malice, was sent back into his own Country, first to pay there his Debts, and then to be punish'd. Altho he was condemn'd to die, yet he meditated Revenge, and hired two Ruffians to kill Herod the Great. He ought then to have been Master and Judge of the Crime: Nevertheless the Cause was carry'd before Saturninus, Governour of Syria, who took Cognizance of it to his Prejudice. Can one be call'd a Sovereign Prince, who is liable to be depos'd at Pleasure, and forc'd to plead before a Subaltern-Judge (that was only Governour of a Province) against a Man that hath attempted upon his Life?

* Appian. de Bell Civil. l. 5. p. 151. † Appianus says, speaking of Mark Anthony, ἐπὶ λόγοι ἐξ ἐπιστολῆς ὧν ἐδοκίμασεν, ἐπὶ φορείοις ἅρα τεταμένοις πομπὴ ἐγένετο, &c. They correct and read ἐπὶ φορείοις ἅρα τεταμένους: φορὰ, signifies gestatio impetu, Petit. Var. lect. c. 18. p. 256. ‖ Joseph. de Bello, l. 2. p. 776. |||| Hieron. in Matth. 22. †† Joseph. Ant. 14. c. 23. p. 392, 494.

Herod ought to have been absolute Master in his own Family. Scaliger doth not omit to extol this Paternal and Royal Authority, which gave him a Right over his Childrens Lives. Nevertheless he had not that Authority, I confess, that this Prince,—— Who pleaded with so much Heat against Alexander and Aristobulus, his two Sons by Mariamne, whom he accus'd to have plotted against him, declar'd * to Augustus, that he had not been willing to make use of his Paternal and Regal Right against those unnatural Sons; but chose rather to carry them at the Feet of their common Benefactor. He repeated the same thing before his Judges, and alledg'd the Law of his Country, which enjoins the Inhabitants to stone a Son who is accus'd by his Father, when he hath made the Signal, by putting his Hand upon his Son's Head. This Argument is rather grounded on the Paternal Authority, than on the Power of Kings. Why doth he not rather insist on his Regal Power? Besides, we must here rather consult the Behaviour of this furious and exasperated Father than his Words. 1. If he durst have punish'd his Sons himself, would he not rather have done it, than delay'd their Punishment, by accusing them at Rome before a Judge, who might perhaps absolve them? Parricide is a Crime of so black a Dye, that a King doth not expect a Sentence from Foreigners against it, when he can punish it in his Court; and especially one of Herod's Temper, who was strangely prepossess'd against his Children; and the most outragious Man in the World, when he met with any Opposition. 2. Augustus judg'd with more Moderation and Equity than he. He pity'd this Father, if he was so wretch'd as to have such Children, and declar'd, † that he left it to him, to put them to Death, if he thought fit, in case they were found guilty of Parricide; and to inflict a milder Punishment, if it appear'd that they only design'd to withdraw from his Court. So that this Power of Life and Death over the accused Princes properly belong'd to Augustus, who gave it to Herod; and this last cou'd not exert it before such a Grant, without being obnoxious to the Court of Rome. Augustus wavering in his mind, wou'd neither approve the Crime, nor leave it to Herod's Judgment, but appointed 150 Judges, and at the Head of them Archelaus King of Cappadocia, Father in law to one of the accus'd Princes, to determine that Cause. But as Herod was afraid that this Prince wou'd favour his Sons, he did not let him know the Day appointed to proceed to Sentence. The Emperour order'd that they shou'd not meet at Jerusalem, but at Berytus, where the Romans had a Garrison. Herod pleaded before them as Plaintiff, and shew'd more his violent Passion, than the Justice of his Cause. Saturninus, who was the first Judge and Governour of Syria, voted for a very mild Punishment, and was follow'd by his three Sons; but Volumnius having given his Opinion for Death, carry'd it by the Majority of Votes; so that notwithstanding what Herod boasted of his Paternal and Royal Authority, he was only Plaintiff in this Cause, and forc'd to obtain leave from Augustus to have his Children condemn'd. The Judges appointed for that purpose were Romans, and they decided the Fate of his Family. —— Augustus was in the right to say that it was better to be Herod's Hog, than his Son; but Scaliger, was in the wrong to blame Macrobius, for ascribing this Saying to that Emperour. For it is clear enough that Augustus inclin'd to Clemency; and that Herod by his Heat and Passion, or Bribes, and Cunning, got the Judges to pronounce against his Sons.

The same thing happen'd in Antipater's Plot. One wou'd think, that Herod shou'd have remember'd what he underwent, when he referr'd Alexander and Aristobulus's Trial to Rome; and therefore have taken then care to avoid the like Delays, and the shame of appearing to plead his Cause before the Governour of a Neighbouring Province. Nevertheless he was forc'd to proceed again the same troublesome way. He accus'd, Antipater Pleaded his Cause before Varus, who transmitted the Proceedings to Rome, and this exasperated Father durst not punish an ungrateful and rebellious Son, till his Ambassadors obtain'd leave from Augustus to do it. It can't reasonably be said that this was done voluntarily, and out of meer complaisance to the Emperour. For that doth not suit with the temper of Kings, and particularly with that of Herod, who was intolerably jealous of his Authority, both in his Kingdom and Family.

In a word, Scaliger may insist, as long as he pleases, that Herod cou'd have bequeath'd his whole Kingdom to one of his Children, but no body will believe him, when Archelaus's Steps appear. Aretas King of Arabia having presum'd to anticipate Augustus's Will, and to take the Title of King without his Approbation, this Emperour, to punish him, was going to bestow his Crown on Herod the Great, when he receiv'd Aretas's submissive Letters. This Example made Archelaus refuse the Crown, and go to Rome. Augustus was Judge of the Will, according to Eusebius, whom Scaliger hath no reason to quote in his behalf. When he dispos'd of the Inheritance, he had, as it was Customary, some regard to the Will of the Testator. However he might have alter'd it; and this the Heirs knew, since they all went to plead before him about their Father's Will.

Herod was then King of Judæa, but not an Independant and Sovereign Prince, as its Ancient Kings were. Thus Jacob's Oracle drew towards its Accomplishment, and the Scepter was by degrees remov'd from Judah, till it was wholly taken away.

§. 5. The Reign of the Posterity of Herod.

1. Archelaus Ethnarch of the Jews at Jerusalem, Samaria and Idumæa.
2. Herod II. Tetrarch of Galilee of Peræa.
3. Philip Tetrarch of Ituræa, Trachonitis, all Sons and Successors to Herod the Great.

XVI. HErod the Great dy'd at 70 years of Age, hated by his Subjects. He design'd in order to keep up the Grandeur of his Family, to leave his Kingdom to Antipas, one of his Sons; but he alter'd this Resolution, and divided it between his three best beloved Children.

Archelaus was to have Judæa and Samaria, which made Joseph afraid to return to Jerusalem with Christ, who was as yet a Sucking Child, lest the Son shou'd have Inherited both the Hatred and Cruelty of his Father. And therefore he transported that Infant into Galilee, where none of Herod the Great's Children were. For Herod II. or Antipas, who was afterwards Tetrarch of that Country, was still in Rome, solliciting the Emperour to bestow the whole Kingdom upon him, according to his Father's first Will. Besides Archelaus was dreaded from the beginning. For he put three Thousand Men to Death, who were retir'd into the

* Joseph. Ant. l. 16. c. 7. p. 556. † Joseph. Ant. l. 16. p. 577. Αὐτῷ γὰρ ἀφεῖναι τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταυτήν.

Tem-

Temple. The Jews for that Reaſon prefer'd Antipas to him; becauſe he was of a milder Diſpoſition. So that there was leaſt danger to be fear'd under this Prince, in whoſe Dominions Chriſt was very quiet whilſt he liv'd in Galilee. It is* ſaid, "That Chriſt "always fear'd this ſame Archelaus, who was his "Enemy; but that this Prince dying eight years af- "ter our Saviour's Birth, as it appears by a Medal, "where Judæa is repreſented under the Figure of a "Palm-Tree, and hath the name of Cæſar, inſtead "of that of Archelaus; Chriſt grew bolder, and from "that time began to go up to Jeruſalem. The Evan- "geliſts make him too Old, when they ſay, that he "was Twelve years Old when his Parents carry'd him "into the Temple, and this ought to be underſtood of "the four preceeding years, whilſt he had nothing more to "fear. A Man muſt be very fond of Conjectures to produce this. For without wrangling about the time of Archelaus's Depoſition, which only happen'd the Tenth year of his Reign, it is enough, that the Holy Writers introduce Chriſt into the Temple only at Twelve years of Age, to deter a Man from preſuming to anticipate that time without any man- ner of neceſſity. Chriſt had other Reaſons than the dread of Archelaus, to remain in the Country, and not appear in the Temple till he was in a condition, to Teach. Beſides, was not his tender Age unfit for ſo long a Journey, a ſufficient Reaſon to keep him there till he was Twelve years Old, as the Evange- liſts inſinuate? Why ſhou'd they then be contradicted, or the uſe of Terms alter'd, and twelve years tranſ- form'd into eight?

XVII. Archelaus after his Father's Death took the Adminiſtration of the Government, but proviſionally, and did not preſume to accept of the title of King, be- cauſe it was not confirm'd from Rome, which beſides that his power was more circumſcrib'd than that of his Father, ſhews that he remain'd a Vaſſal to the Empire.

Theſe four Circumſtances of his Life prove the Truth of our Aſſertion. For firſt he durſt not take Poſſeſſion of the Crown, unleſs he had Auguſtus's Ap- probation. Notwithſtanding that the Soldiers pro- claim'd him King, and the City of Jericho offer'd him a Diadem, yet he wou'd accept of nothing, till he knew the Emperour's Pleaſure. This was ſo tickliſh a Point, and every body was ſo convinc'd, that the Crown was wholly at Auguſtus's Diſpoſal, that Herod accus'd his Brother of having condemn'd ſome Muti- neers to die, and taking the Diadem that was offer'd to him, tho' he had not the Confidence to put it upon his Head.

Secondly, All thoſe, who by Herod the Firſt's Will were concern'd in the Government of Judæa, plead- ed before Auguſtus's Tribunal. Herod's Counſellors alledg'd, that his Brother had anticipated the Em- peror's Deciſion; and this frighted Archelaus to that degree, that he fell down at Auguſtus's feet, and in that humble Poſture, which is ſo unbecoming a King, beg'd his Protection. His Submiſſion mov'd the Em- peror, who told him, that he was worthy to Reign, and this ſaying was taken for a Sentence in his behalf. However fifty Deputies from the Jews thought to oblige the Emperour to alter his Reſolution, by de- claring that they wou'd rather be under the Govern- ment of Syria than of Herod's Family. But Auguſtus gave Archelaus, Judæa, Samaria, and Idumæa, with the Title of Ethnarch, or Prince of the Nation; and only promis'd to make him King, if he made himſelf wor- thy of it by his Virtue. Ruffinus † makes Auguſtus ſpeak with leſs Generoſity, and more Selfiſhneſs, for he makes him ſay, that he would make him a King, if his Services deſerv'd it. Let it be how it will, all theſe Circumſtances manifeſtly prove, that Judæa was ſub- ject to Auguſtus. A Son durſt not ſit in his Father's Throne, nor put his Will in execution, till he hath receiv'd Directions from that Emperor. The Co- heirs not agreeing about the Partition of his King- dom, which they were to inherit, go to Rome to have their Diſputes decided. The Subjects declare, that they wou'd rather be under a ſimple Governour, than under Archelaus, and they make this Declaration to Auguſtus himſelf. Had they done it, if their King- dom had not already been ſubject to the Romans? Had they apply'd to Auguſtus, if they had not been at his diſpoſal? In a word, this abſolute Prince ſpeaks, and proceeds to Judgment, and only makes Archelaus an Ethnarch, with a Promiſe to raiſe him one day to the Crown.

So that there was then no King, no Sovereign in Judæa. Salmaſius * believ'd, that Auguſtus's Promiſe made Archelaus a King, and ſo did Baronius; and they were confirm'd in this Opinion by the Evange- liſts, who always call'd him King of Judæa. But this indeterminate and general Title of King was often given to honour ſome who had neither Kingdoms, nor Subjects; the Emperour's Sons in Law, and Prin- cipal Officers of the Empire have often aſſum'd it. Agrippa I. †, undoubtedly knew, that his Uncle Philip's Tetrarchat was not a Kingdom. Nevertheleſs he call'd it by that name when Caligula beſtow'd it upon him. So that we muſt not think it ſtrange, that the holy Pen- men have out of reſpect call'd Archelaus King, altho' Auguſtus had only made him an Ethnarch; and this Joſephus, who ought to have been throughly inform'd of it, poſitively ſays.

What follows, ſhews yet more plainly the Empe- rour's Power in Judæa. Archelaus made an ill uſe of the Authority he was intruſted with. For he was very harſh to the City of Jeruſalem, and did not ſpare even the High-Prieſts. Samaria too ſmarted under him. But the Great Men of the Nation, tir'd with his vexatious Proceedings, complain'd againſt him at Rome, where he was condemn'd to be Ba- niſh'd. St. Jerome ſays, that he was exil'd to Lyons, but he dy'd at Vienna, where he was confin'd. His Eſtate was confiſcated, and that part of Judæa, which Archelaus enjoy'd, reduc'd into a Province un- der the Command of Coponius. Kings, that are ac- cus'd before an Emperour, and baniſh'd, that forfeit all their Goods, and are oblig'd to ſubmit to a Sen- tence pronounc'd againſt them, and to die in Exile, are but Precarious Kings. It is pretended, that the Ac- compliſhment of the Oracle of Jacob ought to be fix'd to Archelaus's Down-fall. When the Jews ſaw He- rod upon the Throne, they believ'd, that the Scepter was departing; becauſe they ſaw a Foreigner wear the Crown of Judæa. But they were miſtaken, ſay ſome; for this did not happen till Archelaus was baniſh'd, and Judæa reduc'd into a Province, with a Governour ſet over it. In the main, Herod was no Foreigner, and Archelaus was never King. Judæa was not long a Pro- vince, ſince Agrippa I. ſat on his Grand Father's Throne. So that it is more reaſonable to admit the Remark we have already made, that the Scepter was departing, and breaking, becauſe Judæa was always tributary under theſe two Kings as well as under the Ethnarchs, and they were themſelves Vaſſals to the Emperour, whoſe Commands they were forc'd to o- bey. Herod the Great was the firſt King of Judæa that was a Subject of the Empire, and his Succeſſors continu'd ſo till the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; and at which time the Oracle was wholly fulfill'd. But as this Accompliſhment went on but by degrees, it may be obſerv'd, that when Archelaus was baniſh'd, * Harduin de Numm. Herodiad, p. 38. † He had read, in Joſephus, πρὸς ἀντὸν, id eſt, Auguſtus; whereas it is πρὸς ἀντὸν, that is, Virtue. * Salmaſ. exerc. Plin. c. 35. t. 1. p. 406. † Agrippa Ep. ad Calig. apud Philon. p. 802.

and

and Judæa made a Province, it was brought very forward. The supream Power was devolv'd upon the Romans during Christ's Life, and at his Death.

XVIII. The holy Penmen speak often of Herod II. surnam'd Antipas. It was he, who run away with Herodias, and put to Death John the Baptist at that infamous Woman's Request. Our Saviour calls him a Fox, and he appear'd before him at Jerusalem. He had no Authority in that City, and came there only as a Stranger to the Festival of the Passover. But Pilate sent him the Son of God out of Complaisance; because he was inform'd that he was of Galilee, which fell to this Herod's Share. The Evangelists give him the Title of King, and the Jews relate, conformably to this, that the Romans having sent a powerful Army to carry Archelaus away, Herod II. reign'd in his stead with as much Power as his Grand Father. But the Jews are palpably mistaken. It is certain that Herod the Great, willing to maintain the State of his Family, once design'd to leave his Kingdom to Herod II. He left it to him by a Will, that was carry'd to Rome. But he afterwards revok'd this Will. The Brothers pleaded their Cause before Augustus. Herod II. insisted on the Validity of the first Will, that made him Heir to the whole. Whereas Archelaus maintain'd against him, that the last Will cancell'd all former Legacies, and was only to be observ'd; and he carry'd his point. Herod II. was never then King, and had only his Share in Galilee and Peræa, with the Title of Tetrarch. This is so evident, that this Prince at last ruin'd himself by coveting a Crown. For Herodias, of whom he was always fond, cou'd not endure, that Agrippa shou'd wear a Diadem, and have the Retinue of a King. And therefore she perswaded her Husband to go to Rome, and beg the same Privilege of the Emperour. But Agrippa, against whom this Petition was preferr'd, having prov'd that his Uncle had an Arsenal full of Arms for Seventy Thousand Men; that he was making a secret League with Artabanus King of Parthia; and that he had plotted with Sejanus against Tiberius, he was banish'd to Lyons, whence he went into Spain, where he dy'd of Grief, notwithstanding that the Jews * affirm that he made himself Master of that Country, and expell'd thence its true King; because he had run away with his Sister-in-Law. So that Herod II. was never a King but only a Tetrarch, whose Dominions were very small; and the Evangelists call him King only out of respect, and perhaps to comply with the Language of the Jews of his Court.

The Jews, who maintain that this Prince reign'd over all Judæa, prove it by the Murder of the High-Priest Jonathan, or Jochatan, whom he put to Death; because he upbraided him with his Marriage with Herodias. But the Rabbins ascribe to their High-Priest an Honour which is only due to John Baptist's Zeal. It is certain that in the time of Herod, there was a High-Priest call'd Jonathan, but this Prince did him no harm; and he cou'd not do him any, since being only Tetrarch of Galilee, he had no Authority in Jerusalem. It was Vitellius, who depos'd this Jonathan. There was some time after another Jonathan, whom Felix put to Death; this High-Priest upbraided perhaps Drusilla with having basely abjur'd the Law, and elop'd from her Husband, as Herodias had done, to marry a Pagan Governour. The Jews, who are not exact Chronologers, have confounded these two Jonathans, and the Elopement of Drusilla, with that of Herodias; because they were like one another; and believ'd that it was Herod, and not Felix that kill'd this High-Priest. We need not wonder at it, since St. Epiphanius hath said, that this Herod II. was Son to Archelaus, and that he succeeded his Father in the ninth Year of his Reign: He was for all that Son to Herod the Great, and Brother to Archelaus; but never his Successor. Herod II. was so far from being Sovereign Prince of Judæa, that he was oblig'd to receive his Tetrarchat from the Hands of Augustus, and when he desir'd the Royal Title and Diadem, he was forc'd to go to Rome to beg that favour, which was the cause of his Banishment and Ruin.

XIX. Philip, third Son to Herod the Great, embroils mightily the History of this Family; because Josephus and the Holy Writers can't easily be reconcil'd. These last make Herodias Wife to Philip; and Josephus, who ought to be well acquainted with this Family, assures that she was Herod's Wife, when she was taken away by Force. Some have thought that there was a fourth Son of Herod, who had no Share in the Distribution of the Tetrarchats, and liv'd as a private Man till Vespasian's time, and was 80 Years Old; and that Josephus sent him his Works to be examin'd. But this new Son of Herod the Great hath often been rejected, as a Man that never had a Being; and those that fancy, that Josephus's Work is spurious, and compos'd by an Author, who understood neither Greek, nor Hebrew, and hath not only † made some Solæcisms in the Greek Tongue, but also let some Gallicisms slip in his Writings, do not fail to make an advantage of this. Nevertheless, upon an exact Scrutiny, we find no contradiction in Josephus. This Herod from whom his Brother the Tetrarch took Herodias, can't be Philip Tetrarch of Trachonitis; since Josephus tells us, that the first was Son to Mariamne the Daughter of one Simon, who was made High-Priest, that the King might not be disgrac'd by being ally'd to him; whereas Philip the Tetrarch was Cleopatra's Son. Farther, he clearly distinguishes these two Brothers. For speaking of the Rape of Herodias, he observes, that Herod the Tetrarch went to his Brother Herod, Mariamne's Son's House. So that it is plain that it was not Philip the Tetrarch's Wife, that was taken away. And it is no wonder that this Herod, Mariamne's Son, is no where nam'd in History, or in his Father's Will. For his Mother unluckily Plotting with Antipater against Herod the Great, her Husband and King, She was shamefully expell'd out of the Palace, and her Son, who was one of his Heirs, was then struck out of the Will. Simon, Mariamne's Father, lost the High-Priesthood, and his Brothers, or Uncles, were involv'd in his misfortune. Neither ought we to think it strange, that Herod was never reconcil'd with this Son. For in the main he fell in love with a Citizens Daughter of Jerusalem and marry'd her; and People are commonly asham'd of such Marriages, and do what they can to obliterate them. Besides his foolish Amour, he had a new Reason to do this. So that Herod left a Son that he had disinherited, and as he lead a private Life, no notice is taken of him in History. How many of Herod's Children have had the same Fate? Is Phasaelus, Pallas's Son, well known? A Critick || assures, that Herod lov'd him better than any of his Children for the sake of his Brother Phasaelus. But who hath said this before him? Is a third Herod, Cleopatra's Son, known? In a Word, it is not a wonder, that this Herod, Mariamne's Son, that was disinherited, shou'd also bear the Name of Philip, to distinguish him from so many others of this Family. Josephus doth not say it; but he doth the same thing for Herod Antipas, whom he only calls Herod the Tetrarch, when he relates his Visit to his Brother, and took away his Wife from him. Nevertheless every body knows, that Herod the Tetrarch was also nam'd Antipas. Josephus was not unacquainted with it; ſince he calls him by that Name in other Places of his Hiſtory. He might then have ſaid nothing of the Name of Philip, as he did here of the Name of Antipas.

* Ganz. Tsemach. David, p. 89. † Harduin de Num. hath put Ἀγριππᾶ instead of Ἀγριππᾶ; and speaking of Agrippa, he says, the Great Agrippa. || Montacut. App.

Let it be how it will, there was a third Son of Herod the Great, Nam'd Philip, Tetrarch of Ituræa and Trachonitis, and an honeſter Man, and more Fortunate than his Brothers. Varus ſent him to Rome to back Archelaus, whom the Deputies of Judæa had a mind to turn out of the Government. But his aim, when he undertook that Voyage, was to obtain it for himſelf, in caſe his Brother loſt it. But he cou'd never obtain of Auguſtus, but the little Tetrarchat which his Father left him, where he liv'd quietly. Some make him a marry'd Man, and ſay that his Wife's Name was Salome, but this is a Fiction, and he dy'd without Iſſue. Joſephus * fixes his Death in the 20*th* Year of Tiberius; but this is a Fault, that is crept into the Text ſince the Latin Tranſlation. For he plac'd it in the 22*d* Year of this Emperour, which agrees with the 37 Years, that Joſephus ſays Philip rul'd in his Tetrarchat, which was given him by Auguſtus but in the 43*d* Year of his Reign. His Tetrarchat did not return to his Brothers, as is uſual where there is a Right of Inheritance.

§. 6. Conjectures concerning Agrippa.

1. Herod Agrippa the Great. 2. Agrippa II. 3. Berenice.

XX. Agrippa mention'd in the New-Teſtament was Grand Son to Herod the Great by Mariamne. His Father Ariſtobulus Marry'd Berenice his Couſin German. I can't imagine why a famous † Commentator on the Acts of the Apoſtles makes her a Daughter of Herod. For She was this Princes Niece by Salome his Siſter, who was ſo remarkable for her Cruelties and Infamies. For She ruin'd her Son in Law, and was the cauſe of his Death, being angry that he envy'd his Brother's good Fortune, and had ſpoken ſlightingly of her. Agrippa was left a Minor under the Tuition of his Mother, who took care of his Education; and kept in with Salome, altho' She contributed to her Husband's Death. She went to Rome to maintain her Son's Right before Auguſtus, and was eſteem'd by him. She contracted a Friendſhip with Antonia, Old Druſus his Wife; and this Intimacy was the cauſe of her Son's Promotion. All theſe matters of Fact appear unqueſtionable, when we read Joſephus. But a Genealogy hath lately been publiſh'd of Herod's Family, and particularly of Agrippa's Branch, which contradicts all the Notions that we had hitherto of it. As this Genealogy, which wholly alters the Hiſtory of thoſe Princes, is invented by an Ingenious and Learned Critick, it is requiſite that we ſhou'd examine it, that we may know the Perſons before we begin their Hiſtory. For it wou'd not be fair to deprive the Reader of what is moſt material in this new Genealogy; and altho' I prefer the common Opinion, yet it is juſt, that I ſhou'd conceal nothing from him, that he may be at Liberty to embrace that Opinion, which he ſhall think beſt grounded.

This Critick maintains, that Herod Tetrarch of Galilee, is the ſame Agrippa, I have juſt now ſaid was Son to Ariſtobulus, and Grandſon to Herod. || "The "Holy Writers, ſays he, never ſpeak of Agrippa. "However, as this Name was better known than "that of Herod, ſince we find it in ſome Medals, "they had not forgot it, or preferr'd another to it, "had it exiſted in their time. So that it was intro-"duc'd in Holy Writ, for two Reaſons. Firſt, that "the Reign of Herod the Tetrarch may not be too "much prolong'd; and this Reign is conſiderably "ſhorten'd by ſubſtituting his Nephew in his room. "Secondly, As it was obſerv'd, that there were "two Agrippa's in Herod's Family, in one of whoſe "Reigns Jeruſalem was taken; that this firſt Agrippa "might be the more conveniently plac'd, a Son of "Ariſtobulus hath been ſuppos'd, to whom ſeveral "things in the Acts of the Apoſtles are aſcrib'd, "altho' he cou'd have no hand in them ſince he never "was in being. It was the ſame Herod the Tetrarch "before whom Chriſt appear'd, who impriſon'd "St. Peter, perſecuted the Church to pleaſe the Jews, "and dy'd a ſhort time after, being ſmitten by an An-"gel; becauſe he was well pleas'd with the Acclama-"tions of the People, that cry'd out the Voice of a God.

He ſays farther, that Herod the Tetrarch, whom without any Grounds he calls Agrippa, did not profeſs the Religion of Moſes: That he went up every Year to Jeruſalem at the Feſtival of the Paſſover, as a great many Heathens did; who went out of Galilee to worſhip one God. For as they were Platoniſts, they eaſily acknowledg'd the Unity of God: That if he perſecuted the Church, it was not upon a Religious Motive, but to pleaſe the Jews. He wou'd have done it out of a Zeal for the Law, had he believ'd it of Divine Inſtitution; but being a cunning Fox, he only acted out of Complaiſance to the Jews. For he was a Heathen: He pretends that Pagan Religion hinder'd him too from Marrying Herodias, whom he had not taken by force from his Brother during his Life, as is commonly thought. For the Greek word ‖‖ of the New-Teſtament ſignifies a Woman, that is become free, by her Husband's Death: That to take away a Prince's Wife is an unprecedented thing; that the Jews being the only People, that had the Privilege to marry their Brother's Widows; John the Baptiſt was in the right to upbraid Herod with this Marriage, ſince he was a Pagan; that he liv'd at Cæſarea, and his Place of Abode ſhews his Religion and Heatheniſm. For his Father built this City only for the uſe of the Romans, who had a Garriſon in it.

Laſtly, This Herod the Tetrarch, continues he, never rul'd in Judæa. For Galilee fell to his Share; and the Perſecution, which he begun againſt the Church at Jeruſalem, ought not to be objected, as if he had been King of that Place, ſince the Hiſtory of the Acts ſays, that this Perſecution was rais'd againſt ſome of the Church, that is, againſt ſome Galileans, whom he had arreſted. Thus what the generality of Hiſtorians aſcribe to Agrippa, this Critick aſcribes it to Herod the Tetrarch. Let us now ſee how he deſcribes his own Agrippa.

XXI. Agrippa, ſays he, was not Son to Ariſtobulus, or to Herod the Great, as is commonly believ'd. But he was deſcended from Herod Tetrarch of Galilee, or rather from his Brother Philip. This Prince dying a Year before Chriſt, left Julius Agrippa too Young to take Poſſeſſion of the Government. Herod the Tetrarch Marry'd Herodias, that he might both become Husband to the Lady that he lov'd, and Guardian to his Nephew, and thereby Maſter of all the Provinces that were ſubject to him. But dying ten Years * after his Brother, he left his Pupil too young to ſucceed his Father and Uncle: But nine Years after, in the Year of our Lord 51, the Emperour Clau-

* Joſeph. Ant. l. 18. c. 6. p. 625. † Cornel. à Lapide. in Acta 25. 13. p. 363. ‖ Harduin de Numm. Herod. paſſim.
‖‖ Γυναῖκα * An. 42.

dius

dius gave him all their Dominions. He re-united Galilee, whereof Herod had been Tetrarch, to Ituræa, and Trachonitis, which belong'd to his Father; and tho' his Kingdom was but ſmall, he yet aſſum'd the Title of Great King. He took even advantage of the troubles in the Reign of Nero, to coin Money without the Figure of the Prince; but Veſpaſian puniſh'd him for it, and ſoon reduc'd and humbl'd him.

It was before this Agrippa I. that St. Paul pleaded his Cauſe; and in his Reign that Jeruſalem was taken by the Romans. He was a Heathen, ſince we ſee in one of his Medals a Creſcent, which is the Symbol of Venus, with a horn of Plenty; but we muſt not think it ſtrange, that he is well acquainted with the Rites of the Jews, and that he preſſes St. Paul to talk to him of the Meſſiah. For the Heathens expected that King of the Univerſe, fortold by the Prophets, and went often to worſhip in the Temple, without loading themſelves with the burden of Ceremonies, which they thought uſeleſs, or worſhipping Chriſt, whoſe Croſs was Folly to them.

XXII. This Prince liv'd after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem till the Year 79; at leaſt it is likely that he dy'd at that time, ſince we find none of his Medals after that. He reign'd 29 Years, and Philo was in the wrong to make him rule 30 Years. He is guilty of a groſſer Fault; For he affirms, that he was the laſt Agrippa deſcended from Herod's Family; whereas he left a Son who bore his Father's Name, and preſerv'd the Title of King, tho' his Kingdom is unknown. For Galilee was taken away from him, ſince it is not found in his Medals; as neither Judæa, nor Samaria in thoſe of his Father's; and as we diſcover in the ſame Medals a Pavillion, or Tent, there is ſome ground to believe, that he was only a Commander of Roman Troops in Judæa. For a Tent denotes his Office of General. It may perhaps be pretended, that this Tent denotes the Feaſt of the Tabernacles; and that the Ears of Corn in the Reverſe repreſent that of the Unleaven'd Bread and Pentecoſt: But that wou'd be abſurd; for the City of Cæſarea ſtamp'd alſo a Medal for Alexander Severus, with three Ears of Corn in it, that cannot be apply'd to theſe Feſtivals.

XIII. Agrippa II. dying in the firſt Year of Trajan, left a Daughter call'd Berenice, to whom this Prince reſtor'd Galilee and Ituræa, which her Father cou'd never obtain. The Athenians therefore, who ſtamp'd a Medal for this Princeſs, call her, Julia Berenice, Great Queen, Daughter to King Agrippa, Deſcended from the Great Kings Benefactors to this City.

And the Royal Family of the Herods ended in her.

CHAP. III.

A Continuation of the ſame Subject.

A Refutation of what is ſaid of Agrippa the I. and II. and of Berenice. Their Birth, Religion, and the Extent of their Kingdom.

I. Agrippa I. is not Herod Antipas. II. Proofs, that confirm it. III. From Strabo. IV. From Euſebius and St. Jerome. V. Three Medals produc'd by Harduin. VI. St. Luke explain'd. VII. Philo and Juſtin Martyr examin'd. VIII. He was not Philip the Tetrarch's Son. IX. Whether he was a Heathen. X. The Herods that were Heathens differ'd from Agrippa. XI. His Perſecution of the Church. XII. Whether he Marry'd Herodias. That Marriage explain'd. XIII. The Extent of his Kingdom. XIV. A Diſpute againſt Herod the Tetrarch. XV. His Dominions augmented by Claudius. XVI. He becomes King of Judæa. XVII. He was Vaſſal to the Romans. XVIII. Judæa, reduc'd into a Province after his Death. XIX. Agrippa the Second's Years exploded. XX. Whether he was a Heathen. XXI. Whether he was only a Roman General. XXII. Proofs that he never was King of Jeruſalem. His Authority over the Temple. XXIII. The Death of St. James examin'd. XXIV. His Love for the Jews. XXV. The Calumnies which the Tyrians invented againſt him. His Strongs-holds beſieg'd. He is at the Siege of Jeruſalem. XXVI. The Duration of his Reign. A Fault of Euſebius. Some things to be clear'd about the time of his Death. XXVII. He liv'd till the 49th Year of our Lord. XXVIII. A difficulty taken from ſome Medals. XXIX. Berenice a Queen. XXX. Proofs, that She was Agrippa's Siſter. XXXI. Her Devotion, and Love for the Jews. XXXII. Herod's Houſe was not deſtroy'd by a Judgment of God. XXXIII. Three Conſiderations on the Royal Power of that Family.

Herod Agrippa Surnam'd the GREAT.

§. 1. His Birth.

1. THe new Conjectures concerning Agrippa, mention'd in the preceeding Chapter, oblige us to examine three things in his Life, viz. his Birth, his Religion, and his Kingdom.

Firſt, we ought not to make him a Son of Herod the Great, or to confound him with Herod Tetrarch of Galilee; becauſe they were two very different Perſons. The Tetrarch's Mother was a Samaritan of mean Extraction, who never thought to go up to Rome to make her Court, and get into the Emperour's Favour. Whereas Agrippa's Mother was Berenice, Niece to Herod the Great, who contributed very much to her Son's Fortune, by the Means of Antonia, Druſus, and the Emperour Claudius his Mother, with whom She was very intimate: Herodias, Famous for her Elopement, had marry'd the Tetrarch, and through her Ambition, and Jealouſy againſt Agrippa, ruin'd her Husband. Whereas Agrippa's Wife was Cypros, a generous Woman, who lov'd him intirely, ſacrifit'd all for the ſake of her Husband, and mortgag'd her Eſtate to ſupply his prodigious Expences. It may be objected, that an Impoſtor relates theſe things. But how had he invented them without any Reaſon or Neceſſity? Why had he ſubſtituted a falſe Agrippa, and diſguis'd the true Herod? For what reaſon doth he name his Mother, and Wife, and diſtinguiſh their Actions? The Impoſtor, who ſaw an Agrippa in the Hiſtory of the Jews, had no need to recur to all theſe Fabulous Events, which might have betray'd him. It was enough that he ſpoke of his Perſon, without ſpeaking ſo confidently of his Alliances.

Had it not been more eaſy for him to have prolong'd Herod the Tetrarch's Life and Reign, than to have ſubſtituted, upon his bare Authority, a Man that never had a Being? Joſephus is rejected as a diſguis'd Im-

Impoſtor. But that is not ſufficient. For we can't admit of this Accuſation, unleſs it be back'd by either ſolid, or probable Arguments, which are wanting here. His Romance muſt at leaſt be very old, and have been begun even in Tiberius's Time, when the Events were freſh and preſent.

2. And indeed Joſephus is not the only Writer that ſpeaks of them. For St. Luke, who writ * the Acts of the Apoſtles, diſtinguiſhes two Herods; one a Tetrarch, and the other King of Jeruſalem. Nay, he ſpeaks of the Tetrarch, after he hath ſpoken of the King. So that we muſt confeſs, that there were two Men of that Name, of different Characters and Dignities. The Tetrarch, with whom Manaen was brought up, deſpis'd Chriſt, when Pilate ſent him to that Prince, who perſecuted the Church at Jeruſalem. This King was our Herod Agrippa. Dio deſcribes him, when he ſays, † That Agrippa was Grand-ſon to Herod; that Tiberius put him in Priſon; and that Caligula gave him his Grand-father's Kingdom. Nothing can better agree with what Joſephus relates.

3. Strabo ‖ agrees alſo with him. For Firſt, he makes Anthony and Auguſtus give Herod the Great the Title of King, and ſpeaks of his Misfortune in his Family; ſince he ſays, that part of his Children periſh'd by his Order, and the Reſt divided his Eſtate. Secondly, He mentions a Berenice, Daughter to Salomé, who was honour'd by the Emperour; and ſhe is that Mother of Agrippa, whereof we have already ſpoken. Thirdly, Inſtead of calling Herod's Children Kings, he only calls them Tetrarchs, and obſerves, as well as Joſephus, that they had much a-do to obtain the Tetrarchat. Fourthly, He ſays, that Archelaus dy'd among the Allobroges, and ſo doth Joſephus. Fifthly, Theſe Hiſtorians only differ concerning the Death of Herod the Tetrarch; who, ſays Strabo, obtain'd, with much a-do, to be recall'd Home, whereas he dy'd in Exile, and had only the Liberty to go into Spain. However this Conformity between the Pagan and Jewiſh Hiſtorian is a full Vindication of the laſt. The great Difference which we obſerve between Herod and Agrippa, conſiſts in the Title of King, which this laſt obtain'd of Claudius, and the other never had. This Difference is clearly expreſs'd by Strabo, ſince he only makes Herod a Tetrarch, who had much a-do to obtain that Dignity; whereas Caligula and Claudius prevented Agrippa's Requeſts, heap'd many Favours upon him, and made him really a King.

4. Euſebius and St. Jerome are two other Witneſſes |‖‖| of what we aſſert. Their Teſtimony will perhaps be recus'd; becauſe they have not always ſpoken accurately on this Subject. But their Ignorance of ſome particular Matters of Fact, doth not hinder their living in the IV. Century, and agreeing with Joſephus in the controverted Articles. The Hiſtory of Joſephus muſt then have falſly been aſcrib'd to this Jew before the IV. Century, and much before too; ſince what he relates came to Euſebius, and St. Jerome's Knowledge, and was even known to Strabo, who liv'd in Tiberius his Time. The greateſt Fault that Euſebius hath committed in this Matter, and which is adopted by St. Jerome, is, That he was deceiv'd by the Term of Tetrarch. For he believed, that this Title being given to Herod's Children, denoted, that his Kingdom was divided into four Parts; and therefore he reckons four Sons Heirs to this Prince, adding Lyſanias to thoſe we have mention'd; becauſe that Lyſanias was alſo Tetrarch, and that his Tetrarchat was given to Agrippa. He is alſo miſtaken in the Chronology of theſe Princes, as if Herod had not taken Poſſeſſion of Galilee, till Archelaus was baniſh'd. We take notice of theſe Faults of Euſebius, that it may not be thought, that we blindly follow him. He is miſtaken, when he ſays, that Agrippa was Herod's Son; for he only was his Grand-ſon. He makes him go up to Rome, and Scaliger ſays the ſame thing upon his Authority; whereas he ſent thither an Ambaſſador. It was not properly to accuſe his Uncle, but to oppoſe his having the Title of King, which the other pretended to obtain: He was not caſt; for he had his Uncle baniſh'd, inſtead of being clap'd in Priſon. In a Word, Euſebius is in the wrong about the Time of this Event. But tho' he is miſtaken in the Circumſtances, yet his Narrative is in the main true. For Herod and Agrippa, both the Uncle and Nephew, according to him, were ſo different Perſons, that they had a Law-ſuit at Rome, before the Emperour, wherein Agrippa accus'd his Uncle of ſeveral Crimes, as of having been in Sejanus's Conſpiracy, and made a good Proviſion of Arms. Two Men, who plead ſo warmly againſt one another, can never be one Perſon. Euſebius obſerves beſides, that Caligula freed Agrippa from his Shackles and Priſon, and ſent him to be King of the Jews. This Expreſſion is not exact, for he was not immediately King, but he became one afterwards. However it is very natural to call a Man by the moſt honourable Title he ever had. Let it be what it will, Euſebius agrees with Joſephus concerning Agrippa's Priſon. In a Word, Euſebius allows but ſeven Years to Agrippa's Reign, and Joſephus reckons no more, and gives him too a Son, call'd Agrippa II. ſo that, tho' they vary in ſome things, they agree in the main.

5. Father Harduin, who draws moſt of his Arguments from Medals and Inſcriptions, produces Three which cannot be explain'd but by Joſephus his Hiſtory. In the Inſcription diſcovered in the Iſland of Cos, Philo declares, that he honours Herod the Tetrarch his Gueſt, his Friend, Son to King Herod. Here is a Diſtinction of Dignities. The Father is King, and the Son only a Tetrarch. 2. Herod himſelf cauſing a Medal to be made for Caligula, takes only the Title of Tetrarch. However there is a ſecond Medal in Honour of Claudius, wherein a King Herod, and Friend to Claudius is ſeen. 3. There is a Third, wherein theſe Words are read, The Great King Agrippa, Claudius his Friend. Theſe Medals are eaſily explain'd by our Opinion. For Herod the Tetrarch is ſeen there, who to flatter Caligula, and obtain from him the Title of King, cauſes a Medal to be made in his Honour; but he never calls himſelf King, becauſe he never was one, and is diſtinguiſh'd by that from his Father. Whereas in the ſame Medals two Kings, Friends to Claudius, are ſeen, one was Herod King of Chalcis, and the other his Brother Agrippa, who, having both receiv'd their Crowns from this Prince, ſhew'd thereby their Gratitude and Affection to him. Father Harduin is in the wrong, to ſay that the Kingdom of Chalcis was not conſiderable enough, to warrant the Prince, that ſway'd its Scepter, calling himſelf Claudius's Friend. For this Civil Term only ſhews, that his Gratitude was grounded upon his Friendſhip; and Philo, who was but a private Man, in the ſame Senſe ſtyl'd himſelf Herod the Tetrarch's Friend. However, without examining the Extent of this Kingdom, which was really confin'd within a Valley. Dion * aſſures, that Claudius had conferr'd on this Herod, the Honour of the Pretorſhip, a Right to come into the Senate, and the Privilege to thank the Senators in Greek. Theſe diſtinguiſhing Marks of Favour, were more than ſufficient to warrant his calling himſelf Claudius his Friend. Three different

* Acts 12. 1. & 13. 1. Hieron. Chron. p. 159.
† Dio Caſſ. l. 59. p. 74.
* Dio Hiſtor. l. 60. p. 770.
‖ Strabo Geogr. l. 16. p. 884.
|‖‖| Euſebius, Chron. p. 190.

Perſons are diſtinguiſh'd in theſe three Monuments, who differ both in their Names and Qualities. 1. Herod the Tetrarch, who never was a King. 2. Herod King of Chalcis, Claudius his Friend; becauſe he had beſtow'd that Kingdom upon him. 3. Agrippa, better known to the Emperour, under that Name, than that of Herod, who was Great King, and Claudius his Friend; becauſe the Emperour had been particularly kind and bountiful to his Family.

But if we admit Father Harduin's Genealogy, we muſt make Herod a new King, altho' he never was but a Tetrarch. We muſt prolong his Life to the third Year of Claudius, notwithſtanding he was baniſhed, and dead in Caligula's Reign. We muſt annihilate Herod King of Chalcis, Agrippa's Brother: In a Word, we muſt place Agrippa's Preferment in the 51ſt Year of Jeſus Chriſt, a long time after his Father's, and Uncle's Death. Thoſe that make this Alteration, muſt needs be mightily puzl'd, and their Plan agrees neither with Dion, whom we have quoted, nor with the Genealogies of the Herods.

6. The ſtrongeſt Argument alledg'd by this Father, to transform Agrippa into Herod, is, That the Holy Pen-men only ſpeak of Herod, and never call him either Antipas, or Agrippa.

He makes it a Point of Religion, to ſpeak exactly as they do, to baniſh Antipas and Agrippa, and to acknowledge in all the Hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles but one Herod, who was a Tetrarch. I am very glad to find a Man, whoſe Religion levels Tradition with the Scripture, afraid to deviate from Holy Writ, and even ſcrupulouſly to ſtick to proper Names. But we have Reaſon to ſuſpect the Reſpect that is ſhew'd the Apoſtles for bare Names; when the Perſons that pretend to ſhew it, either add, or receive ſeveral Tenets, that are added to their Writings. For their Difference doth not proceed from a real Deſign, to follow exactly the Apoſtles, but rather to father their Whims and Conjectures upon them. Father Harduin muſt acknowledge two Things; One, that the Jews had often two Names; Thoſe that wou'd deny it, muſt contradict ſeveral Matters of Fact. For Alexander, old Hircanus's Son, was call'd Jannæus; Hircanus, John; and Onias, Menelaus; St. Matthew was alſo nam'd Levi; and Simon, Cephas. Theſe two Names are often put together; but ſometimes they are put ſingle, and moſt of thoſe that ſpeak of Alexander Jannæus, give him but one of his Names. For People are only exact, when they think it abſolutely neceſſary to diſtinguiſh the Perſons they mention. The two Herods in Queſtion, had each two Names: The Uncle, who was Tetrarch of Galilee, was call'd Herod Antipas; and the Nephew who became a King, and a Great King, was call'd Herod Agrippa. He bore the Name of his Family, and being a long time at Rome, he took another Name, that was very famous in that City. He was better known in Judæa, by the Name of his Family, and in Rome by that of Agrippa. St. Luke, who writ but a ſhort Epitomy, and ſpoke but once of this Herod, did not trouble himſelf to ſet down his two Names. Is not this a very common thing among Hiſtorians? He gives him the Name of his Family, which was ſo odious to the Chriſtians, for the Maſſacre of the Children of Bethlehem, and for his Uncle's inſulting Carriage to Jeſus Chriſt.

Neither can Father Harduin deny, but that the Name of Julia was receiv'd into Agrippa's Family. For he himſelf produces a Greek Inſcription, wherein Berenice is call'd Julia Berenice. Nevertheleſs, St. Luke, who ſpoke of that Princeſs, doth not give her that Name. Shall we conclude from thence, that there never was a Julia Berenice, and that either this Lady never had a Being, or that ſhe ought to be confounded with another; becauſe St. Luke doth not call her by her two Names, and eſpecially by a Name that was ingrav'd in Marble and Stone, (viz.) the Name of Julia? Shall we ſcruple to deviate from the Apoſtles, and ſay that the Inſcription at Athens is falſe; becauſe we ſee in it a Julia Berenice, unknown to St. Luke, who only calls her Berenice, when he introduces St. Paul ſpeaking before her Brother Agrippa II?

7. It is beſides pretended, That Philo Judæus had already confounded Agrippa I. with Herod the Tetrarch; becauſe, when he reckons the Kings of that Race, he places at their Head Herod the Great, Archelaus, Herod, who reign'd 42 Years, in whoſe Reign he was ſent to Rome; and laſtly Agrippa, who was the laſt of all. But every Body is now convinc'd, that Annius of Viterbo, compos'd this Book, Entitul'd, † Of the Times, and adorn'd it with the Name of Philo; ſo that what he ſays goes for nothing. Beſides this Impoſtor is groſly miſtaken in the Succeſſion of theſe Princes; ſince he hath rather preferr'd Euſebius to Joſephus, for the Years of their Reigns, and the Deputation of Philo, who cou'd not go to Rome to be plac'd before Caligula, in the Year 781; becauſe he was not as yet Emperour. Nevertheleſs, to keep up Philo's Character, he ought to have ſaid, that Agrippa was the laſt King; ſince that Jew, who was ſeventy Years old, when he was deputed to Rome, ſaw afterwards no other Chief of his Nation. For Agrippa out-liv'd him, and Agrippa II. never was King of the Jews. ‖ Juſtin Martyr is alſo quoted to little purpoſe. For this Father did not confound our Agrippa with Herod the Tetrarch, and his Fault lies in making this Tetrarch Heir to his Brother Archelaus in the Kingdom of Jeruſalem; becauſe Pilate did him the Honour to ſend him Jeſus Chriſt, when he was in that City, to celebrate the Paſſover. So that we find nothing either among Impoſtors (for this Critick pretends, that Juſtin Martyr's Works are ſuppos'd, as well as thoſe of Joſephus) or in the Sacred Writers, who are the only that his Severity hath hitherto ſpar'd, to warrant his Alteration of the Genealogy of the Herods.

8. To conclude, he cannot make Agrippa a Son of Philip, unleſs he will pretend his Conjecture to be ſelf-evident. For it doth not appear, by any Place of either genuine or ſpurious Hiſtories, that this third Son of Herod left any Children. So that he muſt be acknowledg'd a Son of Ariſtobulus, and deſcended from Mariamne, that illuſtrious Sprig of the Family of the Aſmonæans: And therefore he boldly affirms, * "That Jeruſalem is his native Country; "that his Grand-father, and Great Grand-father "were Kings of it; and that even ſome of them "had been Chief-Prieſts, a Dignity which they valu-"ed more than the other; becauſe the Chief-Prieſt-"hood is as much above the Crown, as God is above "Man. None of Herod's Family was ever High-Prieſt in Jeruſalem. Nay there was but one King there of that Race. Durſt then Agrippa writing to his Maſter lye ſo boldly, and reckon among his Anceſtors ſo many Kings, and ſo many Chief-Prieſts too, altho' not one of them had enjoy'd the Prieſthood? What he ſays is true indeed, if, inſtead of making him a Son to Philip, or confounding him with the Tetrarch of Galilee, we acknowledge, that he was deſcended from the Aſmonæans, by Mariamne his Grand-Mother, whereas his Words were nothing but Lyes, if he was Philip's Son, or Herod the Tetrarch.

† Jedidæus de Temporibus. ‖ Juſtin. Dial. p. 331. * Agrippæ Ep. apud Philon. de leg. p. 796.

§. 2.

§. 2. His Religion.

9. WE ſhall not inſiſt ſo long on the Religion of the Agrippa's, as we have done on their Birth. Father Harduin makes of all theſe Herods ſo many Heathens: * "Plato's Diſciples, who only "went up to Jeruſalem to worſhip one God accord- "ing to their Maſter's Doctrine, without obſerving "the Ceremonies of the Jewiſh Religion, which they "thought uſeleſs. This is prov'd by two Places of "Scripture: one teaches that Herod begun to perſe- "cute certain of the Church, and ſeeing that it pleaſed the "Jews, he apprehended St. Peter. It was not out of a re- "ligious Zeal, that Herod became a Perſecutor; but "becauſe he had a mind to pleaſe the People; as Pilate, "who finding no Crime in Chriſt, yet had him "Crucify'd upon the ſame Motive. Beſides St. John reproach'd this Herod, that it was not lawful for him to marry his Brother's Widow, becauſe being a Heathen he cou'd not enjoy a Privilege which God had only granted to the Jews.

10. We can't deny but ſome Herods were Pagans, ſince an Inſcription was found in the Appian way, which hath the undoubted Marks of Paganiſm.

Herod hath Conſecrated to you this Holy Ground:

Ὑμῖν γὲ Ἡρῳδὴς ἱερὴν ἀνὰ χαῖαν ἔϊκε.

But this name was common among the Parthians, Palmyreni, in Syria, at Rome and Athens. Not only Joſephus, but alſo Cicero, Plutarch, Philoſtratus, Trebellius Pollio, Appianus, Juſtin, A. Gellius have mention'd it †, and a Greek might have left this Monument of his Devotion in Italy. So that there is no neceſſity to aſcribe it either to the Herods, or to Agrippa. Joſephus ‖ maintains, that this Prince was ſo devout, that he never miſs'd a day without Offering ſome Sacrifices in the Temple, in imitation of that Emperour, who thought a day loſt wherein he had not oblig'd ſome body. He was alſo a ſtrict Obſerver of the Cuſtoms of his Anceſtors. Father Harduin, will no doubt reject Joſephus's Authority; but will he too reject ‖‖‖‖ Petronius his Letter to the Inhabitants of Dor, whereof we have a Copy? Theſe, who inhabited a little City in the Tribe of Manaſſeh, ſituate on the Sea-ſide, had plac'd one of the Emperour's Statues in their Synagogue. It was a dangerous thing to oppoſe this; becauſe Princes, who are jealous of this Honour, do not trouble their Heads whether it be an Infringement of a Foreign Religion. This Action ſtir'd up Agrippa's Zeal, who believ'd his Religion loſt by it. He writ about it to the Governour of Syria, who favourably receiv'd his Complaints, and remonſtrated the thing at large, to the Inhabitants of Dor. There can't be a greater and more Authentick Argument of Agrippa's Religion and Piety, who run the risk of diſobliging his Benefactor by following the Dictates of his Conſcience. Will he alſo refuſe a Letter * of the ſame Agrippa to the Emperour Cajus, which Philo hath preſerv'd? He draws his own Picture in that Letter, and he pleads for the Jews, and ſhews a great Zeal for the Cuſtoms of his Anceſtors, and the Church wherein he was brought up. Wou'd not one think this enough to prove, that Agrippa was a Jew; that he never was a Heathen; and that what is offer'd to prove him a Pagan, is only grounded upon too very frivolous Conjectures?

11. It is true, that Herod Perſecuted St. Peter to pleaſe the Jews. His Zeal proceeded from a Human Motive, but doth it follow from thence, that he was a Heathen? Is it ſo rare a thing for a Man to perform the Duties of his Religion upon ſome Criminal motives of Ambition, and vain Glory; and a deſire to get the Applauſe of the Clergy and People? A certain Prince, who is a Perſecutor, is accus'd of having acted upon theſe Principles. Father Harduin and his Aſſociates have had as great a hand in the Barbarities committed in the laſt Century, as the Phariſees and the People had in Agrippa's Cruelty. He had a mind to pleaſe them; and yet can it be ſaid, that he is a Lutheran, or a Calviniſt? Beſides St. Luke's Words are diſtorted to make room for a falſe Inference. This Holy Hiſtorian diſtinguiſhes two degrees in Herod Agrippa's Perſecution; the Beginning, and the Continuation of it. He began of himſelf to perſecute the Church, and put St. James to Death of his own head; ---- But when he ſaw that the People reliſh'd the Torments of the Saints, he caus'd St. Peter to be ſeiz'd, that he might pleaſe them with another Barbarous Execution. St. Luke obſerves diſtinctly theſe two things. So that this Critick muſt ſay, that Agrippa was a Jew when he put St. James to Death; and that he became a Heathen, when he committed St. Peter to Priſon; ſince it was then that he deſign'd to pleaſe, and that it is this deſign of pleaſing which he looks upon as an Argument of Paganiſm.

12. Herodias her Marriage is a more odd proof of Herod's being a Heathen. It is deny'd that this Prince took her away from his Brother the Tetrarch; becauſe this attempt wou'd have made a great Noiſe. But this Objection is of no Force againſt us; ſince we maintain, that Herodias left but a private Man, who had neither Power nor Authority enough to make War. It may be ſaid, that Clovis the Great, the French Hero, was born in ſuch a Wedlock. His Mother Baſina was a King of Thuringia's Wife, at whoſe Court Childeric took Sanctuary. She went into France to follow her Lover, who marry'd her, notwithſtanding her Husband, whom ſhe had forſaken, was then alive. It is true, that Father le Cointe, jealous of Clovis's Glory, acts here the ſame part as Father Harduin. He runs down Aimoin, who relates this Fact, as this runs down Joſephus, who relates the other. He quotes a German Law againſt Adultery, mention'd by Tacitus, as this inſiſts on the Law of Moſes. In another ſenſe, he pretends that Childeric did not marry Baſina, but after the King of Thuringia's Death, as this ſays that Herod marry'd his Brother's Widow. In a word, the Arguments of both run upon Conjectures. But is that enough to be believ'd? It is certain, that the King of Thuringia did not declare War againſt Childeric, as Herodias her Husband did not againſt his Brother; and indeed ſuch Women deſerve to be deſpis'd, and that their Husbands ſhou'd think themſelves happy to be rid of them. Thoſe Menelaus's, that run after Helena's, are incorrigible Fools. So that it is evident, that Herodias was taken away from her Husband. Let us examine whether Herod was a Heathen.

Father Harduin ſuppoſes, that John the Baptiſt gave himſelf the trouble to make ſome Exhortations to a Pagan King; which is repugnant to the Oeconomy of thoſe times, wherein the calling of the Gentiles was not as yet begun. What intereſt cou'd John the Baptiſt have, to condemn a Marriage allow'd by the Law, and not exclaim againſt the Idolatry of this Prince, which was a more enormous Crime. Did he intend to save Herod? But that was not the way to begin his Conversion. He shou'd rather have first induc'd the Tetrarch to have forsaken Idols and the Pagan Religion, than Herodias. Farther, who hath told him, that the Heathens were more forbid, than the Jews, marrying their Brother's Widows; and that what was lawful for some, was for others a Crime, which deserv'd Eternal Damnation, and so severe a Reproof, that it occasion'd the Martyrdom of the Person that made it? John the Baptist was in the right to condemn Herod, who kept an Adultéress; and Herodias, to fear the Dissolution of so impure a Marriage, if it be true as we assert, that she was Wife to Herod's Brother, and had elop'd from her Husband. But if she had done nothing, but what was every day practis'd among the Jews, and authoriz'd by their Law, then John the Baptist's Zeal was Impertinent, Herodias's Fear groundless, and Herod's Fury against the Preacher ridiculous. Besides granting, that what Father Harduin supposes be true, yet that doth not concern Agrippa, whose Sister Herodias was, but never his Wife.

* Harduin, p. 55. † Cicero Ep. Plut. in vita Anton. Philoſt. vit. Sophiſt. l. 1. p. 536. Trebell. de Trig. Tyran. c. 15. Appian in Syria, p. 83. ‖ Joſeph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 7. p. 577. ‖‖‖‖ Petron. Ep. apud Joſ. ibid. c. 6. p. 575. * Agrippa Ep. apud Philon. de Legat. p. 697. &c.

§. 3. The Extent of his Kingdom.

13. FAther Harduin finds a great many Difficulties every where. We have seen Agrippa's Religion, let us now examin the extent of his Kingdom, his dependance during his Life; and the Homages he was forc'd to pay to the Emperours.

Agrippa was Educated in Rome, where he omitted nothing to insinuate himself into the favour of Drusus, Son to Tiberius, and presumptive Heir to the Empire. But his sudden Death blasted all his hopes. He ruin'd himself to please Drusus, and after this Prince's Death, he was forc'd to withdraw from Court, to borrow Vast summs of Money in order to return thither; and the success of this was at first a troublesome Prison. He seem'd to wish Tiberius's Death, and Caligula's Promotion; and that was sufficient to exasperate a Prince, jealous to the highest degree, who kept him Prisoner as long as he liv'd. Caligula remember'd that Agrippa had suffer'd for his sake, and after he had set him at liberty, put a Diadem upon his Head, gave him the Tetrarchat vacant by his Uncle's Death, added to it that of a certain Lysanias, and of these two made a Kingdom. This is the Lysanias whom Eusebius * makes Heir to a fourth part of Herod the Great's Succession, as if he had been his fourth Son. He quotes Josephus for his Voucher; but this second mistake is more visible than the first. For Josephus says nothing like it. Lysanias was Tetrarch of Abylene, when John the Baptist begun his Ministry. His Lands were re-united to the Demesns of the Empire after his Death. But Caligula made a Present of them to Agrippa. Thus the Tetrarchats of Lysanias and Philip, re-united in Agrippa with the title of King, were the first Steps of his Preferment; or if you will, his first Kingdom under Caligula, which he enjoy'd seven Years.

14. Herod the Tetrarch, who had a mind to be a King as well as his Nephew, and was prompted by his Wife's Jealousy, went to Rome to beg a Crown. Being banish'd upon his Nephew's Accusations, the same Caligula gave Galilee, and Herod's Tetrarchat to Agrippa, and this was the second Step of his Elevation. He made a good use of his Prosperity, and forgot neither his Religion, nor Country. For Caligula having order'd, that his Statue shou'd be plac'd in the Temple of Jerusalem, and sent Petronius in Judæa to oblige the People, by the fear of his Arms, to receive it; Aristobulus, Agrippa's Brother, not only appear'd at the Head of the Deputation to the Governour of Syria, who was already upon his March with his Army; but also Agrippa spoke generously to Caligula, and when he might have ask'd him any thing else to aggrandize himself, he only besought the Emperour to repeal the Edict concerning the Statue, which Caligula cou'd not refuse him. Our Critick denies this, because it affords another Argument to prove, that Agrippa was a Jew; and he says that Caligula cou'd not require to be ador'd as a God, since the Senate had not even declar'd him an Emperour. It is in vain to alledge Josephus † against him, since he will not acknowledge his Authority. And therefore I will otherwise prove both his Reasons to be false. 1. Caligula was call'd Augustus, and Father Harduin hath publish'd some Inscriptions, one done by Herod the Tetrarch in Honour of Cajus Cæsar Germanicus Augustus.

So that Caligula stil'd himself Augustus and Cæsar. He declar'd himself Emperour, and supposing that the Senate had not consented to it, it is enough that this Prince appropriated to himself all the Rights and Honours of the Empire, or receiv'd them from the Tributary Princes of the Empire. 2. Tacitus ‖ relates too, that Caligula wou'd have his Statue in the Temple, which oblig'd the Jews to take up Arms. Thus the second Fact, which Harduin questions, is prov'd by a Pagan Author, unless he will also pretend that Tacitus's History is spurious.

15. The Emperour Claudius, who had a great kindness for Agrippa, enlarg'd considerably his Kingdom: For Agrippa advis'd him to despise the Remonstrances of the Senate, that endeavour'd to hinder him from Seizing upon the Empire; and Claudius thought himself oblig'd to acknowledge a seasonable Counsel given him at the time that the Proceedings of the Senate stagger'd all his Friends. Father Harduin laughs at a Foreign Prince, deputed by the Senate of Rome to advise Claudius, when he was as yet unresolv'd what to do; and he reckons this as one of Josephus's ‖‖ Fables. But it is not enough to deny this Fact. For he cannot oppose any thing certain to out-weigh Josephus's Authority.

16. The Senate was mightily puzl'd after Caligula's Death. Some absconded; others caball'd for themselves. They differ'd in their Opinions, as it happens in unexpected Interregnums, especially where there seems as yet some shadows of Liberty, and means left to recover it. The Senate being inform'd, that Agrippa made a considerable Figure in the rising Court of Claudius, summon'd him before them. He appear'd, spoke, and had himself nam'd among the Deputies of the Senate, as being a Friend of Claudius, that had a great influence over him. I see here nothing but what is usual, when People are puzl'd and wavering between hope and despair: For then they make use of every thing, that may determine the Party they design to seduce, or perswade; and Agrippa being remarkable for his Parts and the Favour of the new Prince was not to be over-look'd at that juncture. Claudius rewarded him for his advice, (which confirm'd him in his Resolution to seize upon the Empire,) and gave him Judæa and Samaria. Thus he was restor'd to his Grand-Father's Kingdom. He truely became a Great King, and therefore he takes this Title but in the Medals, which he Stamp'd in Claudius his Reign.

16. He had no Authority in Jerusalem, whilst Ca-

* Euseb. Hist. l. 1. c. 9. p. 27. † Joseph. l. 18. c. 11. p. 643. Hard. ibid. ‖ Tacit. Hist. l. 5. ‖‖ Joseph. Ant. l. 19. c. 3. p. 671.

ligula

ligula liv'd, and when this Emperour wou'd have his Statue ſet up in the Temple. For then inſtead of oppoſing this Novelty in his Kingdom, he acted as a Supplicant for the Jews. But he was Maſter of Jeruſalem under Claudius, not only becauſe Joſephus affirms it; but becauſe Dio, who cannot be ſuſpected, ſays too, that he enjoy'd his Grand Father's Kingdom, whereof Jeruſalem and Samaria were the beſt part. In a word, it appears by the Hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles, that he ſhew'd his Authority in that City by his Perſecution of the Chriſtians there. Perſecution ſeem'd Hereditary in that Family, and this Prince wou'd not degenerate.

Aſcalonita necat pueros; Antipa Johannem;
Agrippas Jacobum, mittitque in carcere Petrum.

Father Harduin ſays, that he only perſecuted ſome Apoſtles, as St. James and St. Peter, who being Galileans, were every where under his Juriſdiction. But, 1. He forgets, that St. Luke doth not only name St. James and St. Peter; but certain of the Church. Were all theſe Holy Men who were perſecuted by Agrippa, Platoniſts as well as he, and Originally Galileans? Why will Father Harduin have none of them Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, or of ſome other Towns of Judæa? He ſuppoſes that his Perſecution was confin'd to two Apoſtles, but St. Luke ſays the contrary. 2. It is not true that the Galileans depended upon Agrippa, in whatever Country they were. Princes cannot exerciſe their Juriſdiction over their Subjects, but in their own Dominions. Pilate ſent Chriſt to Herod the Tetrarch only to honour him; and this Prince was ſo ſurpriz'd with that Civility, that he was reconcil'd with the Roman Governour, and therefore the Evangeliſt ſays that they became Friends. 3. Herod would have put Chriſt to Death, whilſt he preach'd in Galilee; but he was adviſ'd to remove to another Place to avoid Perſecution. But he did not dare to condemn him in Jeruſalem; and inſtead of uſing his Authority againſt Chriſt, he ſent him back to his proper Judge. But Agrippa ſpeaks, and acts as having the ſupream Power. He orders the Head of one Apoſtle to be cut off. He claps another in Priſon; and when St. Peter was miraculouſly reſcu'd from his Fury, he puniſhes with the utmoſt ſeverity the Guards that he had ſet over him. Were all theſe Guards Galileans, and under the Tetrarch's Juriſdiction? Some of them might be Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, or of the Neighbourhood: And yet Herod Agrippa puniſhes them all alike, and plainly demonſtrated that he had a power of Life and Death in Jeruſalem as well as in Galilee.

This Prince and Great King was however Vaſſal to the Roman Emperours. For he enjoy'd his Territories only by the liberality of Caligula and Cladius, who rewarded him for his Affection to them. So that his Kingdom was but their Bounty. He was Heir to none of his Uncles, and he cou'd not take poſſeſſion of any of their Tetrarchats before he had Patents from the Emperours for that purpoſe. Notwithſtanding Agrippa's credit with Claudius, as ſoon as this Emperour was inform'd, that he was rebuilding the Walls of Jeruſalem, he commanded him to leave off his Undertaking, which brought his Loyalty in queſtion; and he was forc'd to obey. In fine, Marſus Governour of Syria, coming to Berytus, where there was a great Congreſs of Kings, to viſit Agrippa, this Prince was oblig'd to go out of the City, a great way to receive him, in order to obſerve the reſpect due to the Romans. Joſephus, * a Hiſtorian very jealous of the Glory of his Nation, relates this. Marſus perform'd another act of Authority. For fearing the Union of theſe Princes, he order'd them to ſeparate, which was a great Mortification to Agrippa. But he was forc'd to bear it patiently; It cannot be doubted, but the Greateſt Kings of Judæa were Vaſſals, ſince they gave way to the Roman Governours.

2. AGRIPPA II.

18. Agrippa dy'd † ſoon after this Congreſs. For God inflicted an exemplary Puniſhment upon him; becauſe he heard with too much complacency the Acclamations of the People, which, charm'd with his Majeſty and Eloquence, cry'd out, The Voice of a God. God, who hath often tolerated much greater Impieties in Pagan Princes, cou'd not bear this in a Jew, who own'd his Being and Unity. He left an only Son of 17 Years of Age, and call'd by his Name. Euſebius ‖ affirms, that Claudius gave him his Father's Kingdom. On the contrary, Tacitus ‖‖ maintains that Judæa was added to the Government of Syria, Judæa Syriæ addita. But they are both miſtaken. For Claudius had a mind to make Agrippa II. ſucceed his Father, but his Miniſters finding him too Young to govern a Kingdom ſo ready to revolt, and full of different Factions, perſwaded him to alter his Reſolution; and Agrippa II. never enjoy'd the whole Kingdom. Beſides Judæa * was not annex'd to Syria; but was made a Province, that depended upon the Emperour, unleſs you will ſay that the Governours of Judæa were under the Governours of Syria. This was a new degree of dependence more heavy, to be wholly ſubject to Idolatrous Governours, whoſe Covetouſneſs and Extorſions oblig'd at laſt this wretched Nation to take up Arms.

19. The Jews relate, that Agrippa II. hearing theſe words of Deuteronomy read, † Thou mayeſt not ſet a Stranger over thee, which is not thy Brother, wept bitterly; becauſe he thought himſelf thereby excluded from the Crown. But the Jews, who ſaw him all in Tears, and lov'd him, cry'd out, Fear not, O Agrippa, thou art our Brother. Some apply this to Agrippa I. but the Rabbins, and moſt Chriſtians, with leſs Senſe and Reaſon, aſcribe this to the Son. And indeed one is puzl'd to gueſs, how this Scruple came into Agrippa's Head, ſince his Great Grand Father was already a Jew. Criticks are very nice in their Inquiries how the Jews cou'd anſwer Agrippa, that he was their Brother; and they obſerve, that according to the conſtant Maxim of the Talmudiſts ‖, the Mothers give their Children a Right to the Covenant of God, and the Honour of being a Jew. Conſonant to this Maxim, they pretend, that Ariſtobulus was a Jew, ſince he was deſcended from Mariamne. But Agrippa the firſt had not the ſame advantage, ſince Berenice his Mother was Salome's Daughter, and Grand Daughter to one Cypros an Arabian Lady. To conclude, Agrippa II. was happier than his Father, for he marry'd a Grand Daughter of Mariamne, who therefore was by Birth a Jew. So that he was a Brother to the Jews. How many Niceties to no purpoſe! The Maxim of the Talmudiſts is falſe. For moſt of the old Kings of Judæa came from Idolatrous Women, and Rehoboam, Solomon's Succeſſor, was one of theſe. To proceed, Salome, Herod the Great's Siſter, was a Proſelyte, or rather a Jew born as well as he. Her Daughter Berenice was ſo much the more ſo too; and Agrippa I. who ſprung from that Wedlock, cou'd not be look'd upon as a Foreigner. Neither is it likely that Agrippa II. ever doubted of his Birth. Whence cou'd he frame that doubt; ſince he ought to know his own Mother? His Tears were only invented by the Jews, Enemies to the Family of the Herods, and who were only well affected to the laſt of that Race; becauſe he was mightily concern'd at their Misfortunes. And this conjecture is ſo much the better grounded, becauſe Agrippa II. cou'd not ſhed Tears, by reaſon that he was incapacitated from governing that Kingdom. For it was not in the Power of the Jews to give it, and they receiv'd for their King whoſoever was ſent to them from Rome. The Roman Emperour never gave Agrippa II. either Jeruſalem, or Judæa, why then had he cry'd for a Kingdom, which he had not?

* Joſeph. Ant. l. 19. c. 7. p. 677. † An. Ch. 44. Claud. 4. Æt 54. after he had Reign'd in Ituræa, &c. 7 Years; in Galilee 4 Years, in Jeruſalem 3 Years. ‖ Euſeb. Chron. p. 160. ‖‖ Tacit. Ann. 12. p. 155. * Joſeph. Ibid. p. 680. † Deut. 17. 15. ‖ V. Seld. de Jure Nat. l. 5. c. 22. p. 690.

his

20. It appears, at leaſt by this Relation, that the Jews always believ'd, that Agrippa was of their Religion; and indeed St. Paul, * who pleaded his Cauſe before him, teſtify'd of him, that he was expert in all the Queſtions and Cuſtoms which were among the Jews. Beſides he ſpeaks of our Twelve Tribes, and of the hope of our Father: So that he ſpoke to this Prince as being of the ſame Religion. In a Word, St. Paul tells him, King Agrippa, believeſt thou in the Prophets, I know that thou believeſt. And he believed in them ſo much, that he became almoſt a Chriſtian. It was, ſays Baronius, the Jealouſy of an Evil Spirit, that prevented his Converſion, by inducing the King to break up abruptly the Company. God wou'd not have it ſo; and the conqueſt of an Inceſtuous Perſon, who had his Siſter Berenice upon the Tribunal with him, had not done the Church ſo much Honour, as Baronius, who is fond of Crowns, believ'd. Nevertheleſs ſome deny, that he was a Jew, and make him too a Pagan, upon the ſcore of a Medal which he ſtamp'd, and bears the Figure of a Woman with a Creſcent, which is the Image of Venus, holding a Horn of Plenty, becauſe She is the Goddeſs of Generations. But this Medal doth not prove what is alledg'd. For without taking notice that the Chriſtians have often borrow'd ſome Symbolical Figures from the Heathens, without embracing their Religion; the Horn of Plenty denotes there Judæa, which the ſame Agrippa repreſented by three Ears of Corn in other Medals, publiſh'd by Father Harduin; and the Woman that holds this Horn, hath a Creſcent upon her Head to repreſent the Moon, which for ſo many Ages was thought to have a great influence over Harveſt, and the Fertility of the Earth. So that this innocent Symbol is not a mark of Paganiſm, able to weigh down St. Paul's Teſtimony.

21. Father Harduin will no more allow him his Kingdom, than his Religion and Siſter; and he makes him a Roman General, with the Title of King without a Kingdom. But we muſt obſerve four things. 1. Agrippa had no Kingdom till his Uncle the King of Chalcis his Death, which happen'd the 48*th* Year of the Chriſtian Æra. Baronius plac'd in the ſame Year the beginning of Agrippa II. his Reign. But a learned Critick hath convinc'd him of a miſtake † by ſhewing, that the Kingdom of Chalcis was not given him till the next Year. Chalcis was a City and a Valley between Mount Libanus and Antilibanus. Strabo ſays ‖ that Marſyas was a ridge of Hills or Mountains, between which Chalcis was. But Polybius |||| makes it a Valley, and ſeems to be more in the right. 2. Four Years after * he was depriv'd of that Kingdom, by the ſame Emperour that had beſtow'd it upon him; but he amply † rewarded him for it, by confering upon him the Tetrarchat of his great Uncle Philip, and adding to it, that of Lyſanias. 3. Nero augmented that Kingdom with part of Galilee. He gave him Tiberias, and ſome Villages on the other ſide of Jordan. Such a Kingdom as this is not hard to be found, ‖ and thoſe that have a mind to ſee it, do not look out for it in vain. 4. We ought not now to think it ſtrange, that Galilee is not found in his Medals, as in thoſe of his Father; becauſe the Son had but part of it; whereas the Father enjoy'd it all.

22. However Agrippa never had a regal Power in Jeruſalem. St. Paul's Proceſs is enough to prove it. It was begun before Felix Governour of Judæa; and it was he who order'd the Informations to be made, and ev'ry thing elſe; and had ſet him at Liberty, if the Chriſtians wou'd have laid down a Sum to redeem him. After Felix was recall'd, Feſtus coming into the Province as Governour of it, St. Paul was ſtill accus'd before him, who declar'd ||||, that he was before Cæſar's Tribunal, and that he appeal'd to the Emperour. Agrippa came with his Siſter Berenice to pay his reſpects to the new Governour, who was ſo complaiſant as to give him an opportunity to hear St. Paul, altho' upon his Appeal the Caſe was tranſmitted to Rome; ſo that Agrippa ſtoop'd to the Governour, to whom he made his Court, and had no right to hear or judge thoſe that were accus'd upon the ſcore of Religion. The Jews who were St. Paul's Adverſaries, durſt never have accus'd their King, if Agrippa had been ſo. Their Duty had oblig'd them to commence their Suit before him; beſides, they might ſooner expect, that he wou'd condemn a Man, who preach'd the Abolition of the Law, than a Pagan unacquainted with that Controverſy, and an Enemy to their Religion. So that they pleaded before Feſtus only becauſe they cou'd not avoid it, and that Agrippa had no Authority over them.

However he did four remarkable things, which ought not to be taken for Acts of Sovereignty. 1. He built in Jeruſalem a Palace, in the ſame Place where that of the Aſmonæans was formerly. It had a very fine Proſpect; for not only the City, but alſo what was done in the Temple, was ſeen from thence: This Edifice ſtirr'd up the Jews, who believ'd that their Myſteries and Sacrifices were profan'd, by being expos'd to View; and to prevent it, they built an high Wall, that hinder'd the ſight from the Palace. Agrippa, back'd with Feſtus the Governour's Authority, order'd the Wall to be pull'd down; but the Citizens having ſent ſome Deputies to Nero, this Emperour decreed, that it ſhou'd remain. It muſt not be concluded; becauſe Agrippa had a Palace in Jeruſalem, that he was King of that City, ſince his Authority was ſo inconſiderable there, that the People depriv'd him of the Proſpect of his Houſe, and he was oblig'd to comply with the Prince's Order in favour of the Bigots. 2. He had the Adminiſtration of the Temple, and a Right to appoint or depoſe the Chief Prieſts, which he did ſeveral times. This ſeems an Act of Sovereignty; but his Uncle Herod King of Chalcis, obtain'd this Privilege of Claudius, and had it continu'd in his Family. Now this King of Chalcis was very far from having the Supream Power in Jeruſalem. So that this Privilege is no Argument that Agrippa II. was King in that City. 3. Agrippa alter'd the Habit of the Singing Men, at leaſt he permitted them to leave off their uſual Garments, and wear Linen Cloaths as the Prieſts, and at the ſame time augmented their Number. For he allow'd part of the Levites, who were employ'd in the Temple, to learn to ſing as well as the others. He thought to have thereby ſignaliz'd his Adminiſtration; but he was miſtaken. For theſe Alterations ſcandaliz'd the People, who are not always well pleas'd with Innovations, in Religion. However the

* Acts. 26. † Pagi Crit. ad an. 48. ‖ Strabo Geogr. l. 16. |||| Polib. Hiſt. l. 5. p. 390. * An. 52. † Joſeph. l. 20. c. 5. p. 693. ‖ Id. p. 693. |||| Acts 24, & 5.

Jews

Jews were forc'd to bear with them, becauſe Agrippa depoſing the Cheif-Prieſts as he thought fit, had thereby a very great influence upon whatever concern'd the Temple and their Religion. Beſides they were very much oblig'd to him; becauſe he had obtain'd of Claudius, that the Prieſts ſhou'd have the Privilege to keep the Pontifical Robe, which was commonly kept in the Citadel, wherein there was a Roman Garriſon. As this Robe, which had the Breaſtplate adorn'd with twelve Pretious Stones, was look'd upon as a Pledge of the Loyalty of the Jews, who cou'd not without it Celebrate their moſt Solemn Acts of Worſhip, the Romans had often ſeiz'd upon and lock'd it up. But it was reſtor'd to them, when there was no fear of any Sedition among them. But Fadus Governour of Judæa, attempted in the Year 45. to take it away from them; They ſent Deputies to Rome, and young Agrippa who was there, back'd ſo well his Country-Mens Petition, that they return'd home pleas'd with their Succeſs. 4. In a word, he took care to make an end of the building of the Temple, and to add ſome new Buildings to it, and employ'd eighteen Thouſand Workmen upon it. He might have repair'd Solomon's Gallery that was ready to fall down, but he durſt not, and put his Work-men upon paving the City. But Agrippa only executed Claudius's Order, who had appointed him to take care of that work. Beſides whatſoever he did at *Jeruſalem concern'd only the Temple and Religion; and can't be a ſufficient Argument that he was inveſted there with a Sovereign Power.

23. However he might ſtill be thought to have had the Supream Authority in Jeruſalem. For when the High-Prieſt Ananus had condemn'd St. James and ſome other Chriſtians to Death, the Jews, who did not approve that Action, ſent ſome Deputies both to this Prince and to Albinus Governour of Judæa, to complain of the Cruelty of this Prieſt, who was a Sadducee; and upon their information Agrippa depos'd him. But we need but obſerve how Joſephus† relates this particular, to be convinc'd, that Agrippa did not exerciſe a Royal Authority. For the Jews did two things. 1. They inform'd Agrippa of the High-Prieſt's Barbarity, and this Prince depriv'd him of the High-Prieſthood; This was in his Power; ſince he had Inherited of his Uncle the right of chuſing and depoſing the High-Preiſts. 2. The Governour of Judæa acted in another manner. For the Deputies repreſented to him, that Ananus had taken advantage of his abſence, and that the High-Prieſt had no Authority to put a Criminal to Death without his Approbation. Albinus, convinc'd of the extent of his own Power, threatn'd to puniſh the High-Prieſt, becauſe he had incroach'd upon it. So that they deſir'd Agrippa to depoſe him; becauſe that was his Province: But they repreſented to Albinus, that ſome Perſons accus'd were put to Death contrary to Law, becauſe it was done without his Knowledge and Licence. So that the Right of Life and Death belong'd to the Governour; becauſe he properly repreſented the Perſon of the Sovereign. Joſephus condemns this cruel Proceeding of the High-Prieſt, and aſſures at the ſame time, that thoſe whom he had put to Death were convicted of Impiety, or rather of having tranſgreſs'd the Laws. He did not look upon St. James as being Orthodox, or give the Chriſtian Religion a very honourable Teſtimony: But yet he was an Enemy to Perſecution, and gave another Inſtance of his Moderation, when two of King Agrippa's Officers were in his own Government, and that the People wou'd force them to be Circumciſed, he ſtrenuouſly oppos'd it, becauſe he did not believe, that any body ought to be compell'd upon the account of Religion.

Hegeſippus relates quite otherwiſe the proceedings of Ananus, and of the Jews. But his Narrative is ſo Romantick, that tho' this Hiſtoriographer was a Chriſtian, I like as well the plain and natural Relation of the Jew. Some endeavour to find out what he meant by the queſtion, that was put to St. James; What was the Gate of Chriſt? Valeſius, who fancies that Repentance was the Gate of John the Baptiſt, and the Trinity, that of Chriſt, is too ſubtle; but it ought rather to be look'd upon as a Jewiſh Expreſſion frequent among the Rabbins, who often ſpeak of the Gate of Heaven, or of Life, and underſtand thereby the Explanation of a Doctrine. The Gate of Chriſt was then the Explication of the Chriſtian Religion. But this Subject is liable to greater Difficulties; and St. James's Fall from the top of the Temple without being kill'd, is one of thoſe Prodigies, which we dare not believe upon the Authority of ſo credulous an Author as Hegeſippus. Joſephus only ſays, that St. James was ſton'd to Death, and that is much more likely; becauſe that Puniſhment was inflicted on thoſe that chang'd their Religion. But to return to Agrippa.

24. That Prince was Beneficent and Liberal. He had a particular kindneſs for the City of Berytus, a Roman Colony where his Father had built a Magnificent Amphitheatre, and laviſh'd away a vaſt ſum of Money. He was a zealous Lover of his Nation; and he did not ſide with the Romans againſt them, till they deſpis'd the Counſels he gave them to prevent their ruin. And indeed Neapolitanus, who was ſent into Judæa, finding this Prince at Jamnia with ſeveral Perſons of Quality, that came to congratulate him for his return from Egypt, went with them all to Jeruſalem, to endeavour to perſwade the People to their Obedience. Agrippa was ſo Pathetical in his Harangue to them, that they immediately built up again the Galleries, which joyn'd the Temple with the Citadel, and the Remainder of the Tribute due to the Romans was rais'd. But oppoſing the Deputation, which they intended to make, becauſe he expected no relief from Nero; and adviſing them, to obey Florus, and wait patiently till that cruel Governour was recall'd, the People fell into their old Ferment; and this Prince having withdrawn from them, the Mutineers knock'd on the Head the Garriſon of Maſſada, a Fortify'd Caſtle near Jeruſalem. They pull'd down both his, and Berenice his Siſter's Palaces, burnt the publick Records, that they might draw into their Party thoſe, whoſe Debts they cancell'd by this Conflagration. The Troops, that Agrippa left, retir'd into the upper part of the Palace, where they were Storm'd, and came out upon Capitulation. But as for the Romans, who reſiſted ſome days longer in three Towers, and had Capitulated to march out without Arms, they were on a Sabbath day Sacrific'd to the Fury of the People, and Metilius, who commanded them, was the only Man that eſcap'd; becauſe he ask'd Quarter, and promis'd to make himſelf a Jew.

Agrippa waiting upon Ceſtius at Antioch, they March'd from thence with a good body of Troops: In their March towards Jeruſalem, ſome of the Inhabitants of Lydda that remain'd in that Town, whilſt the reſt were gone to celebrate in the Temple, the Feaſt of the Tabernacles, were plunder'd, and kill'd. A Party of Rebels ſtop'd them at Gabaon, and fell ſo furiouſly upon them, that they ſtagger'd and almoſt routed the Army. But Agrippa, whoſe conſtant Inclination was for Peace, ſent ſome Propoſitions to the Rebels, which divided them, and gave Ceſtius time to drive and purſue them as far as Jeruſalem. He beſieg'd the City; but he was oblig'd to raiſe the Siege, and retire, being purſu'd by the Jews, who overtaking him beyond Gabaon, kill'd him four Thouſand

* Joſ. Ant. p. 699. † Joſ. Ant. l. 20. p. 698.

Foot,

Foot, and four hundred Horſe. They had intirely defeated his Army, had he not put a Trick upon them. For he put four hundred Men in Bethoron to cover his March, and theſe were all put to the Sword.

25. Veſpaſian being ſent * to repair Feſtius his Loſs, and reduce the Rebels, Agrippa went as far as Antioch to receive him, and with him to Tyr, where the Inhabitants of that City openly complain'd againſt him. They accuſed him of being an Enemy to the Romans, and favouring his Nation. They maintain'd, that Philip his General had betray'd the Citadel of Antonia, and left the Legions to the fury of the Rebels. Veſpaſian took no notice of theſe Complaints, ſilens'd thoſe Citizens, who had not a due Reſpect for a Loyal King, and receiv'd the Troops which this Prince brought him. He enter'd into Galilee with an Army of Sixty Thouſand Men, and there beſieg'd and took all the ſtrong Cities. Joſephus, who commanded in Jotapata, made a Vigorous Reſiſtance; and by his good Conduct defended the Place for a conſiderable time. Tiberius attempted to do the ſame thing; and to heighten their Rebellion, they beat an Officer, that came to offer them Terms of Peace. But they had not been long unpuniſh'd, had not Agrippa, to whom this City belong'd, obtain'd of Veſpaſian to demoliſh part of the Wall inſtead of putting all the Inhabitants to the Sword.

Gamala was another City belonging to Agrippa, ſituate on the other ſide of the Jordan, which a party of Rebels had ſeiz'd upon. This Prince had it beſieg'd by his own Troops, yet cou'd not take it. Veſpaſian went thither in Perſon with him to put an end to a Siege that had laſted Seven Months. Peace was offer'd to them, but to no purpoſe. Agrippa who came near the Walls to be a Mediator, was wounded with a Sling. Veſpaſian was there in great Danger, and his Troops who had forc'd their way into the Town, were driven out with Loſs. But a Tower falling, and the Romans taking advantage of a Tempeſtuous Wind, which added Strength to their Darts, they made themſelves Maſters of it; and kill'd Four Thouſand Perſons, including Children, that were not ſpar'd; beſides Five Thouſand who had precipitated themſelves, that they might not fall into the Enemy's hands.

To conclude, Agrippa was oblig'd † to ſend his Troops to the Siege of Jeruſalem, and to come there himſelf to attend Titus. This Prince was in a wretched State, to be forc'd not only to be Witneſs of, but alſo to contribute to the deſtruction of his Country-men, and of Jeruſalem, that rebell'd againſt the Romans. Veſpaſian was well pleas'd with his Services at that diſmal juncture, and his unſhaken Loyalty to the Empire. He therefore enlarg'd his Territories, and beſtow'd the Honour of the Prætorſhip upon him. This is mighty wide of what the Jews ſay, that Veſpaſian being oblig'd to return to Rome before the end of the War, and ſuſpecting that this Prince kept a Correſpondence with the Beſieg'd, put him and his Son Monebat to Death. This is a double Miſtake; for Monebat is a Name, that is not known; and beſides that Agrippa never had a Son, he ſurviv'd the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and liv'd in Rome with his Siſter, a little before Veſpaſian's Death.

26. Euſebius believ'd that Agrippa the Second's Reign begun at his Father's Death, and ended at the ruin of Jeruſalem. And therefore he makes him reign Twenty Six Years, which cannot be reckon'd but ſince the Death of Agrippa I. and he maintains || that Veſpaſian after that clear'd the Kingdom of thoſe Foreigners. But he is miſtaken. For Agrippa was not a King till the Death of his Uncle Herod King of Chalcis. He never reign'd in Jeruſalem, and thus he loſt by the deſtruction of that City, but the Government of the Temple, and the right of naming the High-Prieſts. In a word, he ſurviv'd a long time the Ruin of his Country. Agrippa ſtamp'd a Medal for Veſpaſian after the taking of that City, which proves what we aſſert. For theſe Words are read upon it; The Emperour Veſpaſian, Cæſar, Judaicus, Elliacus, in the Year 21. of Agrippa. Thus Father Pagi ||| tranſlates this Medal, which he had read in Greek in Uſher. But this ſhews, that this excellent Critick did not underſtand Greek; and that we are not to depend upon the ableſt Men's Tranſlations. Every thing ſeem'd to warn him of his Fault. For he ſaw a Woman crying under a Palm Tree, which plainly repreſented Judæa, after it was conquer'd. He cou'd not gueſs, what the Title of Elliacus, given to Veſpaſian, meant. But he might have eaſily ſeen that there was in the Original, to the Emperour Veſpaſian Cæſar, after the taking of Judæa, in the Year 21. of Agrippa. This time of Agrippa's Reign ſet down in a Medal, ſhews Euſebius his Fault. For if he had reign'd but 21 Years when Jeruſalem was taken, and if this ſame Reign laſted 26 Years, as Euſebius pretends, according to his Calculation, this Prince muſt have ſurviv'd the ruin of Judæa, and preſerv'd the Title of King five Years after it. Euſebius is alſo in the wrong to make him a Stranger, ſince his Father, and Grand-father were Jews.

People are puzl'd to fix the Year of his Death; and herein lies the difficulty. Juſtus of Tiberias writ the Hiſtory of the War of the Jews, whereof he was a Witneſs; and Joſephus accuſes him of having inſerted ſeveral Facts contrary to Titus his Memoirs, and of not daring to publiſh it but Twenty Years after he compos'd it, when Titus and Agrippa, who cou'd have convicted him of Falſhood, were dead. So that Agrippa muſt be dead, when Joſephus writ his Life, and as he dedicated it to Epaphroditus, Nero's Favourite, whom Domitian put to Death the 95*th* Year of the Chriſtian Æra, it is concluded that Agrippa was dead ſome time before. Nevertheleſs the ſame Juſtus of Tiberias made a Chronicle of the Kings of Judæa, which ended at Agrippa's Death. He ends it in the Third Year of Trajan. So that there is ſome ground to conclude, that Agrippa liv'd till that time, and Photius * poſitively ſays it. The Learned Pearſon †, back'd by a very able Diſciple, hath endeavour'd, by correcting the Text of Photius, to take off the difficulty; but it is agreed, that this Correction is falſe, and that the Name of Titus ſhou'd be there inſtead of that of Veſpaſian, which he puts in. But neither of theſe connections can ſubſiſt but by abridging the Hiſtory of Juſtus of Tiberias, as well as the Life of Agrippa, which is very inconvenient.

Medals do much intangle the matter. Scaliger || and the famous Mr. Spanheim have publiſh'd ſome, which not only make Agrippa reign Twenty Nine Years; but alſo repreſent the Face, and have the Name of Domitian, which makes ſome preſume that Agrippa liv'd under that Prince. In anſwer to this it is ſaid, that ſome Cities, to flatter Agrippa, anticipated the Years of his Reign, as Euſebius hath done, and reckon'd it from his Father's Death. According to this Calculation the Twenty Ninth Year of his Reign, wou'd fall in the 72*th* Year of Chriſt. But what reaſon cou'd ſome Cities have had, to make a Private Man a King, eſpecially ſince Agrippa never inherited his Father's Kingdom? As Euſebius did it only through Ignorance, the ſame thing ſhou'd alſo

* An. 67. † An. 70. || Euſeb. Chron. Gr. an. 71. p. 192. ||| Pagi Crit. an. 70. p. 67. Uſſer. an. p. 687. * Phot. Bibl. cod. 33. † Pearſon op. Poſth. & Dodwell: p. 173. || Scalig. Not. in Chron. Euſeb. p. 182. Spanheim de Præſt. Num. Diſſert. 9. p. 864. Dodwell Ibid.

be

be ſaid of the Cities that ſtamp'd theſe Medals, which cannot be done without raſhneſs. Beſides, this only ſolves half of the difficulty; ſince Domitian is ſeen on thoſe Antient Monuments. Domitian is indeed ſaid to be there repreſented very young, and had not the Title of Auguſtus. So that theſe Medals might have been ſtamp'd in his Father's and Brother's Reigns. But this is a miſtake. For without examining whether a Face ingraven on a Medal certainly denotes the Age of the Perſon, Father Harduin hath publiſh'd ſome other Medals of Agrippa, whereon Domitian is ſtil'd Auguſtus, which leaves us no room to doubt, but that he liv'd in his Reign.

27. Might it not be ſaid, that Agrippa II. did not die till the 94*th* Year of Chriſt, and the 14*th* of the Reign of Domitian? And indeed we are oblig'd to prolong to that time this Prince's Life; ſince we ſee a Medal where that Year is ſet down; and Agrippa ſtamp'd it to congratulate Domitian, who had that Year vanquiſh'd the Parthians and Arabians. This Emperour receiv'd a great many Congratulations upon the ſucceſs of his Arms; ſeveral Cities diſtinguiſh'd themſelves on that occaſion; and Agrippa did not forget to make his Court too. Joſephus might have publiſh'd his Life that Year, and dedicated it to Nero's Favourite, who was not ſentenc'd to Death but the Year following. This agrees with his own Chronology. For having compos'd his Antiquities in the Year 93, he cou'd not take leſs than a Year to write his Memoirs; and in that interim Agrippa dy'd. So that he was oblig'd to ſpeak of him as of a Perſon deceas'd. There is no neceſſity to correct Juſtus of Tiberias. For he might have ended his Chronicle at the Death of Agrippa, which happen'd in 94. and yet have compleated his Work the third Year of Trajan, that is, four or five Years after. The Death of Agrippa, at which the Chronicle ends, is confounded with the Compoſition of the Work, which was compleated but ſome Years after. And indeed there is no reaſon to believe, that Juſtus made an end of his Work, juſt when Agrippa ended his Life. But that having ſpoken of theſe two things as of two different Periods of time, they were confounded together; and this commonly happens.

28. We muſt not however diſſemble an intricate Circumſtance that remains in Father Harduin's Medals. It is fit that it ſhou'd be explain'd to induce the Criticks to make their Conjectures upon it. 1. One of theſe Medals, ſtamp'd the firſt Year of Titus, marks the 29*th* Year of the Reign of Agrippa. 2. There is another * ſtamp'd in the 6*th* Year of Domitian, wherein Agrippa reckons 26 Years ex Senatus-conſulto. 3. There are †, four others, wherein the Years of Agrippa's Reign are reckon'd exactly as thoſe of Domitian. In one is a Pavilion with three Ears of Corn upon one Stalk, the common Symbol of the Fertility of Judæa; and in this five Years are found. The three Ears of Corn appear again upon another of the 6*th* Year, and upon another of the 9*th* Year; and in ſhort, Victory is ſeen on a Buckler the 14*th* Year of Agrippa and Domitian. This is the reaſon that ſome lengthen Agrippa the firſt's Life, till the beginning of the Empire of Domitian, that they might ſubſtitute to the firſt, another Agrippa, who was afterwards General of an Army, till the firſt or third Year of Trajan, at which time Scaliger and Mr. Spanheim place the Death of Agrippa Junior.

But ſince we have already ruin'd the Conjectures of theſe Criticks, we may add, that Agrippa had three Epocha's that differ'd from his Reign. The firſt, which cannot be queſtion'd, begun the 49*th* Year of the Chriſtian Æra; becauſe he was then made King of Chalcis. This Epoch agrees with the Medal ſtamp'd under Veſpaſian, which makes him reign 26 Years; and with that ſtamp'd three Years after under Titus, which makes him reign 29 Years in the 79*th* Year of our Lord.

The ſecond Medal, ſtamp'd under Domitian, cannot be ſo eaſily explain'd; becauſe, inſtead of increaſing the Years of Agrippa's Reign, it leſſens and reduces them to the Number of Twenty Six, whereas they ſhou'd be Thirty Six. It might be ſuſpected, that there is a Λ in this Medal, which wou'd make up the number Thirty Six; and this doth not leſſen either the Learning, or Fidelity of the Gentleman that produces it, becauſe a Letter is often half worn out. There is but one part of the Letter ſeen, whereupon this Conjecture is grounded; and, as it cannot be fairly diſcern'd without a Microſcope, one may eaſily be miſtaken. There wou'd be no difficulty, was this Conjecture well grounded. For Agrippa had then reign'd Thirty Six Years. But without inſiſting upon this, the Decree of the Senate, ex Senatus-conſulto, which is ſtamp'd upon this Medal, ſhews, that Agrippa had receiv'd a particular favour from the Senate, and begun thence to reckon the Years of his Reign to pleaſe that Illuſtrious Body. I do not doubt but the Senate then confirm'd all the Donations made to him by Claudius and Nero. For notwithſtanding the Senate loſt a great deal of its Authority under looſe and tyrannical Princes, yet it preſerv'd part of it; and as Auguſtus conducted Herod the Great to the Capitol, that he might receive the Kingdom of Judæa from the Senate, Agrippa might have been confirm'd in it after the ſame manner. Be it what it will, this Term ex Senatus-conſulto denotes a particular Circumſtance of Agrippa's Life. This puzzles even Father Harduin, who is oblig'd to invent I know not what Command, given him at that time in Paleſtine; but ſince this Command is only grounded upon Conjectures, and is altogether unknown; and that on the contrary Agrippa's Crown is unqueſtionable, it is much more reaſonable to ſay, that the Senate ratify'd this Prince's Regal Power in Galilee, than to imagine a new Command, which no Hiſtorian hath mention'd. Thus Caracalla, who was nam'd Cæſar by Severus in the Year 197. waited till the next Year for the Decree of the Senate, before he wou'd take the Marks of the Imperial Dignity. If the Senate kept ſtill this Shadow of Authority in 197, it is not ſtrange, that it enjoy'd it in Agrippa's time, and that this Prince ſtamps upon his Medals the Favour he receiv'd from that auguſt Aſſembly.

It is not hard to explain Agrippa's reckoning the Years of his Reign from thoſe of Domitian's Reign. For it was very uſual for Private Men and Cities, who deſign'd to flatter a Prince, to begin a new Epocha from the Date of his Acceſſion to the Empire. They thereby honour'd him, as if they only begun to be, and rule, when this new Prince aſcended the Throne. Thus Herod the Tetrarch dated the Years of his Adminiſtration from Caligula's Reign; and thus the City of Samaria begun a new Æra, from the Reign of Domitian. The City of Gaza is ſuſpected to have begun a new Epocha at the time that Adrian paſs'd through it. Agrippa did the ſame thing. He begun again to reckon the Years of his Reign by thoſe of Domitian, ſo that it is no wonder, that in all thoſe Medals, which repreſent ſome Ears of Corn, and Victory, Six, and Fourteen Years are only given to this Prince; ſince he confounded the time of his Reign with that of the Emperour, whom he intended to Honour. If theſe Explanations are not convincing, I will gladly ſubmit to any that ſhall appear more plain. However it is certain, that Agrippa II. begun his Reign in the Year 49. and dy'd the 94*th* Year of our Saviour, and that he never was King of all Judæa, which was what we had undertaken to prove.

* Chron. 86. † Harduin p. 18, &c.

3. BERENICE.

Great Queen, in an Inscription of Athens.

29. We shou'd be oblig'd to make here an end of the Catalogue of the Kings of the Jews, and of the Posterity of Herod, had not a new Queen, call'd Berenice, Daughter to Agrippa II. been discover'd, whom the Athenians stile in one of their Inscriptions, Great Queen, and whose Father dy'd but at the beginning of the Reign of Trajan. Were this Conjecture well grounded, it must be own'd, that the Kingdom subsisted in Judæa much longer than is commonly imagin'd.

I cann't guess, why Eusebius's Chronicle is not quoted to strengthen this Opinion. For if on the one hand, he makes the Reign of the Herods end immediately after the taking of Jerusalem; on the other, he insinuates that Agrippa was Berenice's Father. Then, says he *, dy'd Agrippa King, and of Berenice; her Father or Husband must be understood. St. Chrysostome understood the last, and yet Agrippa was neither. Scaliger is accus'd of having impos'd these Words upon Eusebius, which he had taken from the Chronicle of Alexandria; and it wou'd not be a surprizing thing, if the Author of this Chronicle, who is guilty of so many Mistakes, shou'd also be guilty of this. But whether this fault is charg'd to Eusebius, or to a more Modern Historian than he, it is still undoubtedly true, that Berenice was Sister to Agrippa II. with whom she is publickly accus'd to have committed Incest.

30. We will not quote Josephus to prove either of these Facts. For altho' he cou'd not be mistaken concerning Persons whom he knew very well, and was intimately acquainted with; yet he is recus'd as a suspected and ignorant Witness: And therefore we'll produce the Authority of Foreigners. Xiphilinus, who epitomiz'd Dion Cassius, calls † Berenice Agrippa's Sister; and relates, that being come together to Rome, Titus, who was in Love with her, gave her an Appartment in his Palace, and was oblig'd to send her away to stifle the grumblings of the People, who were afraid lest a Jewish Woman shou'd ascend the Throne. So that Berenice was known in Rome for Agrippa's Sister, and this is the Title, which the Roman Historians give her.

Juvenal confirms this, and even warrants the Accusation of Incest, which was laid to her Charge for so many Centuries, and is question'd at this time.

‖ Deinde adamas notissimus, & Berenices
In digito factus pretiosior, hunc dedit olim
Barbarus; Incestæ dedit hunc Agrippa Sorori.
Observant ubi festa mero pede Sabbata Reges,
Et vetus indulget senibus clementia porcis.

Father Harduin ‖‖ preingag'd his Readers upon this passage of Juvenal, when he work'd for the Dauphin. For he maintains, that this Diamond given to Berenice, was the Topaze mention'd by Pliny, which was sent to Ptolemy Lagus his Wife. But is it not evident, that Juvenal speaks of Judæa, where the Sabbaths were celebrated, and People abstain'd from Swine's Flesh? So that Judæa must be transform'd into Egyyt without any manner of reason, nay the Diamond set in a Ring, and worn, must be Metamorphos'd into so large and fine a Topaze, that a Statue of Four Foot high was made out of it, and set up in the Golden Temple. But this is not enough. For we must transform Agrippa the Jew into Philemon the Greek Governour of the Island Topaze. For it was he, who gave this Stone to Berenice, Ptolemy's Wife; and yet Juvenal names Agrippa. Here are a great many Metamorphoses perform'd without any reason, or necessity. So that it is evident, that Juvenal accuses Agrippa of Incest with his Sister Berenice, and of having given her a Diamond Ring.

To avoid the Scandal of this Incest, Agrippa II. was oblig'd to marry her a second time. For she was first marry'd to his Uncle Herod King of Chalcis. But being weary of that Husband, she elop'd from him, and went to live with her own Brother, as she had done before. As for him, he took no other Wife; and those, who give him Mariamne for his Spouse, did not consider, that she was also his Sister, and that he bestow'd her on Archelaus, to whom she was betroth'd in his Father's time.

31. However Berenice pretended to a great deal of Piety. It is said, that Women who are inclin'd to be Kind, are the more prone to turn unto God: Bereniee, whose Passions were all strong, had her Hair cut, and went to pay her Vows at Jerusalem, with all the shows of Devotion, being mov'd with compassion for the Inhabitants of that City, who were barbarously us'd by Florus. She went bare Foot to sollicit a Relaxation of their Misery; but that Governour's Guards insolently repell'd her, and she narrowly escap'd being very ill used, pursuant to their Master's Orders against all those that attempted to speak with him. She afterwards apply'd her self to her Country Men, to endeavour to soften, and perswade them to return to their Obedience. But her Exhortations and Tears proving fruitless, she sided with the Romans; and thereby made her self odious to the Jews, who ravag'd her Territories. And indeed she was very Rich, and enjoy'd several large Towns in Galilee. Josephus drew from them a great quantity of Corn, and other Provisions for his Army. But she was rewarded for that Loss. For Vespasian, mollify'd by her Presents, found her so able a Woman, that he consulted her about State Affairs, and Titus, more charm'd with her Beauty, cou'd not be induc'd to forsake her. She flatter'd her self, that Vespasian's Death wou'd give that Conquerour the Liberty to marry her. But Titus becoming Master of the Empire forgot his Amours, and private Pleasures. So that he sent her back to her Brother, unwilling to be any longer her Slave.

It is pretended, that she became Queen of Judæa, after Agrippa the Second's Death; because the Athenians call her Great Queen, and Agrippa's Daughter. But there is nothing extraordinary in this Attick Inscription, which Mr. Spon hath discover'd. For there is not one Pagan Historian, but gives her the Title of Queen. She was Agrippa the First's Daughter, as is seen in the Inscription. She was also a Queen, because she was Marry'd to Herod King of Chalcis, and afterwards to Polemon King of part of Cilicia, or Pontus. She preserv'd in her Widowhood the Title which she had during her Husband's Life. Besides, she made a Figure in the World considerable enough to be call'd Great Queen by those who intended to flatter her. The Greeks were not Niggards of their Praises, and the Wisest are apt to lavish them in the Publick Monuments they erect to some Persons. So that there was no Necessity, that she shou'd be Queen of Galilee to be call'd Great Queen. Besides, Galilee, being a Desart at that time,

* Eusеb. Chron. p. 192. Ὁ τῆς Βερενικῆς. in Plin. lib. 37. c. 8. t. 5. p. 392.

† Xiph. in Vespas. p. 222.

‖ Juv. Sat. 6. v. 156.

‖‖ Harduin

and

and ravag'd by the Romans, cou'd not be a great Kingdom. To conclude, she did not enjoy it, and the Inscription which is the only Proof alledg'd, is not enough to warrant that she had that Country, since neither the Title of Queen of Galilee, nor that Province are stamp'd upon her Medals, as upon those of Agrippa I. who was King of it.

The GENEALOGY of the Herods, according to Father Harduin, confuted in the History of the Jews.

Herod the Great, Ethnarch, and afterwards King of Judæa and Samaria; Originally of Athens; an Heathen; a Platonist and Saducee: He left Three Sons.

1. Archelaus King of Judæa and Samaria. Mat. 2. 22.

2. Philip, Tetrarch of Ituræa and Trachonitis, Herodias's Husband, an Heathen, who left

Agrippa the Great, King of Galilee, Ituræa, &c. in whose time Jerusalem was taken. He was also an Heathen as the rest, and was marry'd to Berenice; Acts 25. He left

Julius Agrippa, the Emperour's Lieutenant, and General of the Imperial Troops, till towards the end of Domitian's Reign. We see a Tent upon his Medals, and marks of Heathenism. He died the first Year of Trajan, leaving Julia Berenice, the Great Queen. The City of Athens caus'd an Inscription to be Engraven in Memory of her Ancestors, who were Originally of it, and its Benefactors. She was the last Queen of the Jews.

3. Herod who was first Tetrarch of Galilee, and afterwards a Great King, Possessing Philips's Tetrarchship, and designing to Marry Herodias's Widow, an Heathen.

The GENEALOGY of the Herods which is follow'd in the History of the Jews.

ANtipas of Ascalon, where he was Servant to a Priest, being made Governour of Idumæa under Alexander Jannæus, embrac'd the Jewish Religion. He had a Son, call'd Antipater, who govern'd Judæa under the Name of Hircanus, and at last made himself Master of it, being Supported by Cæsar. He had by an Arabian Wife, named Cypros, whom Scaliger makes a Jewish Proselyte, Three Children.

Phasælus, who commanded for some time at Jerusalem; but being treacherously deliver'd up to the King of the Parthians he killed himself.

Herod the Great, King of Judæa and Samaria, a Tributary to the Emperour, and a Jew.

He Married four Wives.

Salome, a passionate and loose Woman, who however kept up her Credit in Herod, exasperated him against his Children, and fill'd his House with Blood and Slaughter. Her Daughter was Berenice, the Mother of Agrippa.

1. Mariamne, the Daughter of Hircanus, the only Person left of the House of the Asmonæans, and he put her to Death. She left

2. Mariamne, the Daughter of Simon, whom he made High-Priest in order to obtain her. She had a Son.

3. Maltace a Samaritan. She left Two Sons.

4. Cleopatra of Jerusalem. Her Son was Aristobulus, who died at the Instance of his Father, being accused with his Brother Alexander, of having conspir'd against him. 'Twas upon his account that Augustus said, he had rather be Herod's Hog than his Son. He had married Berenice his Cousin German, by whom he left Three Children.

Herod Philippus, for he is known by these two Names. He had no share in his Father's Will by reason of his Mother, who was accus'd of conspiring against Herod, and divorc'd. He was Husband to Herodias.

1. Archelaus the Tetrarch of Jerusalem, who was never King. He was baniish'd and died in Exile.

2. Herod Antipas, Tetrarch of Galilee, to whom Christ was sent. He died in Exile.

Philip the Tetrarch of Ituræa.

1. Agrippa the Great, who was King of all Judæa, as his Grandfather. He was a Jew, zealous for his Religion, and a Persecuter of the Christians. He reign'd Seven Years, and died by the hand of an Angel. His generous Wife's Name was Cypros. He left

2. Herod King of Chalcis, the Friend of Claudius, and who obtain'd the Privilege of nominating and deposing the High Priest, and the Superintendency of the Temple of Jerusalem, tho' he was not King of it.

3. Herodias, who had her two Uncles Herod Philip, and afterwards Herod Antipas to her Husbands. She caused John Baptist to be Beheaded, and by her Ambition, occasion'd the Ruin of her Husband, who had stolen her.

1. Agrippa II. He was never King of Jeruſalem. He ſaw that City taken: Survived the Ruin of his Country, which he would have prevented by his Councels: He Died in the 94*th* Year of our Lord, and was the laſt King of the Jews.

2. Berenice, Titus's Miſtreſs; Married to two Kings, and guilty of Inceſt with her Brother: The Athenians call her Great Queen in their Inſcription, becauſe ſhe was Married to two Kings.

We do not inſert in this Genealogy the other Branches of Herod's Family, nor many Names which are not neceſſary to be known, in Order to underſtand their Hiſtory.

32. Thus ended the Royal Family of the Herods in Judæa, after they had reign'd there above 130 Years. It is ſaid, that there was an exemplary Judgment of God upon them, as if this Family appear'd as a fine Flower for ſome time, which the Almighty lop'd off to puniſh their Crimes. But without excepting Conſtantin's Family, there is hardly one that reign'd longer. Beſides the Kings of that Family out-liv'd their Kingdom, and the Nation was deſtroy'd whilſt Agrippa II. was as yet living in Rome. To conclude, Herod's Family was not wholly extinguiſh'd. There were two powerful Branches of it remaining in Armenia. For Herod the Great * had two Sons by Mariamne; Ariſtobulus, from whom Agrippa I. and Herod King of Chalcis deſcended; and Alexander who had two Sons, Tigranes King of Armenia, kill'd by Tiberius, and Alexander, who left Tigranes II. nam'd by Nero to ſucceed his Uncle. But this Branch of the Aſmonæans, deſcended from Herod, had two Misfortunes. One, that it forſook the Religion of its Anceſtors, and that being mix'd with Heathens it embrac'd their Religion; the other that it made a diſmal End. For young Tigranes was beaten by Tiridates, and forc'd to quit a Throne, which he cou'd not maintain. Ariſtobulus, Son to Herod King of Chalcis, was more Fortunate. For Nero plac'd him in the Leſſer Armenia with the Title of King, that he might help his Couſin, and ſome other Princes, to curb the Parthians. He maintain'd himſelf in the Kingdom that was beſtow'd upon him. Nay, he ſeems to have ſucceeded his Father; becauſe Joſephus calls him King of Chalcis. Some diſtinguiſh Chalcis and Chalcide, as being two different Countries; tho' near one another; and Strabo † ſeems to have done the ſame thing. But Claudius having depriv'd Agrippa of Chalcis, when he was in Favour, it is very likely, that he only did it, to give that Country to Herod's Son, Couſin German to Agrippa. This Ariſtobulus even reign'd after the Conqueſts of Titus, and left Three Sons, Herod, Agrippa, and Ariſtobulus, whoſe Names Joſephus ‖ mentions only, becauſe he carried his Hiſtory no farther than the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. So that there is no reaſon to exclaim againſt a Family, that proſper'd for ſo long a time. The Jewiſh Nation had been happy, had they made uſe of Agrippa's Advice.

33. We ſhou'd rather obſerve three things in the Reign of the Herods. 1. They cou'd not help the Fault of their Birth; they were by Religion Jews, and born in the Country. There is no reaſon to diſpute them theſe Advantages, by calling them as the Talmudiſts, and ſome Chriſtians after them do, Proſelytes, Foreigners, Slaves. It is certain that they Originally came from Aſcalon, or Idumæa, and were not deſcended from Jacob, or from the Antient Stock of the Jews. It is ſaid that Herod had a mind to burn the Genealogies, to hide his own. But this is not very likely. For after all the Books had been burnt, wou'd People have forgot that he came but lately into the Family of the Aſmonæans? Beſides, Herod had not ſo great a regard for the Jews, as to deſire to be deſcended from their Anceſtors; and he deriv'd his Right to the Crown, not from his Birth, but from his Valour, and the Donation of Auguſtus. It is then true, that the Oracle of Jacob drew nigh its accompliſhment; and that the Scepter, which ought to have been in the hands of his Poſterity, was wreſted from them to be given to another Family.

We muſt chiefly obſerve, that during our Saviour's Life, there was no King in Judæa. The Evangeliſts ſpeak ſo frequently of Herod's Sons, as of ſo many Kings, that People are us'd to believe, that they were really Crown'd Heads. This is an old Errour, ſince Euſebius, who liv'd at Cæſarea, and copy'd ſome antient Monuments, fell into it. But it is nothing elſe but Inadvertency. For Herod the Great, who was truly a King, dy'd the ſame Year that Chriſt came into the World, after he had barbarouſly murder'd the Children of Bethlehem. His Son Archelaus never was a King, but only an Ethnarch; and after he had enjoy'd that Dignity Nine or Ten Years, he loſt it, left Jeruſalem, and all Judæa, under the Government of the Romans; and it was in that condition at our Saviour's Death. Herod's other Sons were but Tetrarchs of Ituræa and Galilee, and had no Authority in the Territories of Jeruſalem and Samaria. Agrippa the Great reign'd but Three Years in Jeruſalem, God having ſtruck him by an Angel, and taken away his Life, to make an Example of him. Beſides Jeſus Chriſt dy'd under Tiberius, a long time before this Prince obtain'd the Kingdom of Judæa of Claudius. Kings diſappear'd at Jeruſalem, whilſt he who was ſo long expected there made his Entry, and the People ought to have been ſenſible, by the Bondage they groan'd under, that the Scepter was departed from Judah. To conclude, the Reign of the Herods was diſadvantagious to the Jewiſh Nation; becauſe having but a ſhadow of Authority, and always depending upon the Roman Emperours, who alter'd, put in, and depos'd theſe Kings as they pleas'd; they were oblig'd to keep the People in a ſervile Dependance. They were the Leeches, that ſuck'd the Blood of that poor Nation to enrich their Maſter's Favourites: They were oblig'd to build Cities and Cittadels, in Honour of their Benefactors, and to ſoften, by Preſents, and vaſt Sums, thoſe that ſeem'd exaſperated. Farther, they were to contribute to their Pleaſures, and Expences, and to bear the burden of the Crown, without enjoying the Advantages of it; ſince they ſtill groan'd under the Roman Yoak: However that was not the greateſt Misfortune of the Jews.

* Noldius de vit. & geſtis Herod. † Strabo lib. 16. ‖ Joſeph. Ant. l. 18. c. 7. p. 628.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

The Second Degree of the Ruin of the Jews.

The Corruption and Decay of the Jewiſh Church. The Power of the High Prieſts, and Kings.

I. THE Law-giver, and Scepter taken away from Judah. II. The account which the Talmudiſts give of the Antient Government of Judæa. III. The Election of the King by the Sanhedrim. IV. They cou'd not chooſe a Foreigner. V. The Profeſſion, and Qualifications of thoſe that were to be Choſen. VI. The Anointing of Kings. VII. The Limits of their Power. VIII. The Right of Life and Death Examin'd. IX. The Sanhedrim had the Power to make War or Peace. X. They order'd the King to be whipp'd. XI. Several Divines that have adopted this Tradition. XII. A refutation of what hath been ſaid concerning the Election of Kings. XIII. Whether Saul was a King Elect. The true Origine of the Regal Power among the Jews. XIV. Remarks upon their Anointing, different from that of the Rabbins. XV. The Limits ſet to the Royal Authority, over-ſet. XVI. David and Solomon deſerv'd to be whipp'd. XVII. There was no Law, that enjoyn'd to whip Princes. XVIII. The Shame, that always attends that Puniſhment. XIX. The Talmud doth not enjoyn it. Caſaubon's Apology. XX. Why Schickard is refuted. XXI. Whether the King depended upon the High Prieſt. XXII. The Office of High Prieſt. XXIII. The true Authority of Kings. XXIV. They Reform'd the Church. XXV. They appointed Judges, and a Council. XXVI. They depos'd the High Prieſts.

1. THE Oracle of Jacob, which threatn'd Judah with the loſs of his Scepter, and Legiſlator, when the Meſſiah ſhou'd appear, began to be accompliſh'd. Herod the Great, notwithſtanding, that he was a Jew both by Birth and Religion, was not of the old Stock of the Iſraelites, or of the Tribe of Judah, which alone had a Right to aſcend the Throne. There was no King in Jeruſalem when Jeſus Chriſt dy'd. The Romans were Maſters of Judæa, rais'd Taxes, ſent Intendants and Governours, and enjoy'd there all the Rights of the Crown: In fine, Jeruſalem was deſtroy'd, and the Scepter wholly taken away from that Nation.

The ſame Decay is obſerv'd in the Prieſthood: The Law-giver was departing from between the Feet of Judah. But that was done by degrees, and this Sacred Dignity, weaken'd by the depoſition of thoſe that enjoy'd it, was intirely aboliſh'd. The Oracles of the Prophets have their degrees of accompliſhment; So that the Explanation of them ought not to be fix'd to a certain Moment, as Interpreters do. We have ſeen the Sovereignty of the Jews moulder away by little and little. The High Prieſthood became in its turn, at the beck either of the Romans, or the Ruling Princes. The Jewiſh Church, which for a great many Ages, ſaw but one High Prieſt depos'd, had a new Head almoſt every Year: They were depriv'd of their Office; others (who bought it) were put into their room; and even thoſe who kept it longeſt, had ſo little Power, that they cou'd not ſuppreſs the Diſorders of Robbers and Zealots. The Church as well as the State, went by degrees to its Deſtruction. The Temple was at laſt burn'd down to the Ground; the Sacrifices were aboliſh'd, and the High Prieſthood extinct: And this we are going to ſhew; but before we do it, it is requiſite to examine, whether or no the frequent Depoſitions of the High Prieſts were Juſt or Tyrannical; whether the Kings had a Right to turn out thoſe who did not appear to them worthy of that Office; or whether they were not ſo many Incroachments upon the High Prieſthood. This Queſtion deſerves ſo much the more to be diſcuſs'd; becauſe Divines draw ſome Inferences from thence, to reconcile the Prieſthood and Empire in the Chriſtian Church.

2. The Modern Jews give us a Notion of their Antient Government, very different from that which we commonly have. For we conceive, that there was a King at the Head of the People, and a High Prieſt at the Head of the Church, on whoſe Lips Knowledge and Truth dwelt; that is, who was Judge of Controverſies. But upon the Authority of the Talmudiſts, a third Office hath been invented, (viz.) that of the Naſi, or Prince of the People, and Preſident of the Council. He preſided in the Sanhedrim; and whilſt the King took care of the Army, and War; and the High Prieſt of the Divine Worſhip, this Prince was the Depoſitary of Tradition. He reſolv'd Caſes of Conſcience, and taught the Oral Law, which Moſes had intruſted with the LXX. Elders: Eſdras is ſaid to have created this Office, and to have ſettl'd it in David's Family: Hillel, who came from Babylon in the Reign of Herod, Thirty Years before Jeſus Chriſt, exercis'd it with a great deal of Honour: The Deſtruction of Jeruſalem did not involve this Dignity along with it. For it ſubſiſted even when there was neither King, nor High Prieſt in Being. His Title was only alter'd. For then the Chief of the Captivity in Judæa took the Title of Patriarch, and in that Name govern'd all the Synagogues of the Weſt.

There was at Jeruſalem a Council of Seventy one Perſons, whereof the Preſident ſtil'd himſelf Prince. The Eldeſt Senator was call'd Father of the Conſiſtory, or of the Judgment. The Counſellors ſat according to the time of their Promotion, which was at firſt perform'd by the impoſition of Hands, that they might more exactly imitate Moſes. The High Prieſt was not preſent at it, but when he was Elected into it for his Merit: The King had no Vote there, leſt his Preſence ſhou'd confine the freedom of Voting. Far from having any Authority over the High Prieſt, as we imagine, the King almoſt wholly depended upon the Great Council, and its Preſident. The Sanhedrim choſe the Kings, ſet bounds to their Authority, and puniſh'd them when they tranſgreſs'd the Law. Thus the Jewiſh Doctors ſpeak.

3. They affirm too, that God gave three Commandments to his People, which were executed at different times. 1. To deſtroy Amalec. 2. To build him a Temple. And, 3. To make a King: Thoſe that do not underſtand the Scripture, fancy that God was angry, that his People being weary of their antient Government, ask'd for another King. But God's Anger * proceeded wholly from their rejecting of Samuel. To be ſure, he wou'd not have left his choſen People without a King, ſince the Government of all the Eaſtern Nations was Monarchical. He wou'd have his People have a King as well as Idolatrous Nations. But the choice of him belong'd to the Sanhedrim; and that this Election might be acceptable to God, the Grand Council did not as the Persians, refer it to the Neighing of a Horse, but they consulted the Urim and Thummim, whereby God declar'd whether he approv'd their choice.

* Maimon. ex Thalm. in Halach. Melach. Schickard. Jus Reg. Hebræor. c. 1. p. 15, 17.

4. To proceed, The Modern Jews tell us, that they cou'd neither elect a Woman, nor put her at the Helm of the Nation; since she is not fit to go to War, and it had been a shameful thing for the Holy Nation to be under her.

Apta quidem telæ, sed inepta est fœmina telo;
Indignumq; viris subdere colla colo.

Some Nations will rather have Queens than Kings; but it is perhaps, because People preserve their Liberty better under a weak Administration. Besides, some Heroines distinguish themselves from the rest of their Sex, by their Sense and Capacity. The Sanhedrim was to have a great regard to the Birth of the Person elected. The Scripture enjoyns the People to chose one of their Brethren, and this excluded * all Proselytes; tho' for several Generations incorporated in the Jewish Nation. Not only the Kings, but also all Subaltern Judges were to be Jews; none cou'd be a General, or a Captain, or even an Overseer of the Waters, unless he was sprung from the Holy Nation. The Idumæans seem'd to have a better claim than other Nations; because the Scripture calls them Brothers to the Jews, and indeed they were descended from Esau. The Egyptians for that reason are introduc'd bringing Presents to the Messiah, who receiv'd them kindly, because they gave often a Sanctuary to his People: But the Æthiopians, jealous of that Reception, complain to the Deliverer; because he admits Strangers † preferably to those who are the Elder Brothers of the Nation: And yet the Idumæans were excluded from the Crown of Judæa as well as other Nations, and the Talmudists look upon Herod the Great as a Foreigner, notwithstanding he Originally came from Idumæa.

5. The Sanhedrim was besides to take notice of the King's Family, and Employment: The Masters reckon a great many Professions, and Trades, that excluded from the Crown. The King was to be neither a Coal-man, nor an Inn Keeper. Oh! that the best of Physicians go to Hell: For he lives splendidly; he doth not dread Sickness; he doth not break his Heart before God; he kills the Poor by denying him his Assistance. They also excluded Shepherds, who fed their Flocks upon other People's Ground, Camel-Drivers, Muckeers, &c. However Saul, who took care of his Father's Asses was made a King. The Modern Jews are prepossess'd with this Opinion, that a Man must have been of a considerable Extraction to become a King, a Priest, or even a Prophet; and it was perhaps this Opinion that made them say even in our Saviour's time, Is not this a Carpenter's Son? As if the Son of so mean and poor a Handy-Craft, cou'd not be a Doctor. But this Opinion of theirs is erroneus; since David one of their Kings was a Shepherd; and Amos the Prophet a Cow-herd.

6. When the King, continue they, was chosen, he was left to the care of the High Priest, who anointed him; and made use for that purpose of the same Perfume, that was pour'd upon the Head of the Priests; but with this difference, that they made a St. Andrew's Cross X on the High Priest's Head, whereas they drew the Figure of a Crown upon the King's Head. It is observ'd that the Kings of Samaria were anointed with plain Balsam only, which put a vast difference between those Princes; since the Oyl us'd for the Kings of Judah was Holy, and preserv'd in the Temple.

7. Altho' they shew'd a great deal of Respect to the King they had chosen; yet his Power was mightily abridg'd by the Sanhedrim, and the High Priest. For, 1. When a Senator ‖ appear'd before the King, he was bound to rise up, and to put him by his side. He did the same thing for the Wise Men of Israel, and even for their Disciples, after the example of Asa, who seeing one, that was only a Scholar, rose from his Throne, kiss'd him, and said to him, My Master, and my Lord. Schickard |||| who was well vers'd in this Matter, commenting upon these words of Maimonides, observes, that it was not strange, that the King shew'd that Respect to the Counsellours of the Sanhedrim; because they had a great Power in that Republican State, where they wholly dispos'd of all civil Matters; but that he was not oblig'd to shew so much deference to the Disciples and Wise Men; and that he only did Justice to their Merit. 2. The King cou'd summon to his Palace private Men, and even Prophets. For Nathan fell down before David; whereas the High Priest never went to Court but when he pleas'd: * He sat down in the King's Presence, but the King was standing before him. Some Rabbins † observe, that this was done only when the High Priest consulted the Urim and Thummim, and that then the King did not honour the Minister, but God Himself. Nevertheless Maimonides's Words are general, and he grounds them on the Order, which God gave Moses to present Joshuah to Eleazar ‖, And he shall stand before Eleazar. 3. A King cou'd never renounce his Dignity. It was to no purpose for him to alledge his Infirmities, and other cogent Reasons. The Sanhedrim wou'd not hear them; because the Nation wou'd have thereby been disgrac'd; and he who is intrusted with the Government of the State, ought never to forsake it. 4. He was allow'd to have 18 Wives, and no more; because it is suppos'd that David had as many; Whereas private Men might marry as often as they pleas'd. But they made the King amends by allowing him some Concubines. The Rabbins put this difference between a Wife, and a Concubine; the first is marry'd by Contract, and hath her Dowry fix'd; Whereas the other is marry'd without a Contract, altho' all the usual Ceremonies of Matrimony are observ'd. The Prince was also forbid to have any Women, that were either Foreigners, or of another Religion: And to vindicate Solomon, who had so many Idolatrous Women, they pretend, that he converted them, and that they were all Proselytes. 5. Lastly, he was strictly enjoyn'd never to reveal the Secrets of the State to his Wives, lest they should betray him. But this prohibition was useless; because Women have the art to get the Authority, which the Laws deny them; and whilst Men make long and tedious Arguments upon their natural Rights and Privileges, those trample upon the Laws, and keep in their Chains those that brag that they are their Masters. Solomon is a plain Instance of this; and Themistocles's Child was in the right to say, that he govern'd all Greece; because his Mother, who doated upon him, did what she pleas'd with her Husband.

9. The right of Life and Death seems an inseparable Prerogative of the Crown. But if these Doctors gave their King this Right, it was clog'd

* Ibid. p. 50. † Carpzov. Not. in Schickard. p. 51. ‖ Maimon. Halach. Melach. c. 2. |||| Schick. Jus Reg. Hebræor. c. 4. Theor. 12. p. 229. * Maimon. Halach. Melach. c. 2. † Rabbi Bechai in Bitur. al. Hattorah. fol. 22. apud Carpzov. Not. ad Schickard. Th. 13. p. 231. ‖ Numbers 27. 21.

with

with ſome Conditions, which mightily weaken'd it. They ſay, that the King cou'd puniſh with Death a ſingle act of Diſobedience, tho' never ſo ſmall. If the Prince commanded an Officer to go any where, his bare refuſal was a capital Crime. But, 1. They obſerve too, that the King was oblig'd to exerciſe his Clemency as well as his Juſtice; and to conſider that by depriving the Criminal of his Life, he put many to Death. For the Scripture, ſpeaking of the Blood of Abel, ſays, * that the Bloods of Abel cry'd. And indeed it is not only the Blood of one Man †, but alſo that of the Children he ſhou'd have begotten, and of all his Poſterity, that cry'd for Vengeance. 2. The Puniſhment, which the King was to inflict, was preſcrib'd. The Jews had four ſorts of them; but the King cou'd only condemn Criminals to loſe their Heads. 3. After a Man was put to Death, his Eſtate was not always confiſcated; at leaſt this is a moot point. For Maimonides affirms, that the King cannot ſeize upon the Eſtates of his Subjects, without being a Robber, and gives him but the thirteenth part of the Plunder and Conqueſts of the People. But others put this difference between the Sanhedrim and the King; (viz.) the Goods of thoſe ſentenc'd to die by the Sanhedrim were reſtor'd to their Heirs; whereas the Succeſſion of thoſe condemn'd by the King belong'd to him. Theſe two Opinions may be reconciled, by ſaying, that the King cou'd not appropriate to himſelf the Eſtate of one, that was alive; But that the Confiſcation of his Goods was the ſequel of his Execution; and therefore Ahab cou'd not get into Naboth's Vineyard till he had accus'd him of Blaſphemy; and he did not take poſſeſſion of it, till he was ſton'd to Death; becauſe by the Law his Eſtate was then forfeited to the King, who had a right to all the Goods and Chattels of thoſe that were executed. 4. Laſtly, The King was oblig'd to conſult the Sanhedrim, when he was to puniſh a Criminal with Death; which was a great abridgment of his Authority.

9. The Grand Council had alſo the Adminiſtration of Peace and War. They however diſtinguiſh'd two ſorts of Wars. Some were preſcrib'd by the Law, and others were only undertaken to promote the Glory of the Prince, and enlarge the Limits of the State. The Council's Advice was abſolutely neceſſary for the laſt; but as for the firſt, as they were poſitively enjoyn'd by God, the Prince might take up Arms without conferring but with his Privy Council. And indeed God commanded that Amaleck ſhou'd be deſtroy'd, becauſe they waited for the Iſraelites in their Paſſage, and ‖ ſmote the hindmoſt of them, even all that were feeble behind them. Thus our Interpreters have tranſlated, and what they ſay is natural enough. The Amalekites did what Enemies commonly do, who ſend Parties to follow the Rear of Armies, in order to ſurprize the Lazy, Sick, and all thoſe that go out of their Ranks. But the Jews cannot conceive, that this Hoſtility put any difference between the Amalekites, and Idumæans; ſince they were all of the Poſterity of Eſau. They find ſome greater Myſteries in this Text ⁂, and maintain, that the Tribe of Dan, unable to follow faſt enough the reſt of the Tribes, the Amalekites fell upon them and cut their Tails, that is, they threw the Danites Privy parts againſt Heaven, ſaying to God (to upbraid him with the Circumciſion, which he had enjoyn'd that Nation) Take what thou haſt choſen. An Inſolence like that of Julian the Apoſtate, who inſulted Jeſus Chriſt even in his defeat, and cry'd out, Thou haſt conquer'd, Galilean, &c. Others recurr to a Miracle, and affirm, that the miraculous Cloud inclos'd the Camp of the Iſraelites, as a Palliſadoe; but that thoſe who had a mind to eaſe Nature were forc'd to go out, becauſe the Camp of the Lord was Holy; and the Amalekites who were upon the Watch, kill'd all thoſe that went out. Beſides, theſe Unbelievers, who had been in Egypt to ſearch the Archives there, to learn the Names, and Order of the Tribes, call'd out to thoſe of Ruben, Simeon, and Levi; Come, for we are your Brethren, and we deſign to treat with you; and ſeveral of theſe three Tribes being impos'd upon, went out of the Cloud, and ſuffer'd immediately, for their Imprudence. The Cloud caſt out thoſe, that lov'd Women, or were prone to Idolatry, as the Danites, and the Idolaters cut all their Throats. Laſtly, they find four things in one Expreſſion that Moſes utter'd, concerning Amaleck: They did not fear God; that is, they made War againſt Iſrael without a cauſe, ſince they did not go through their Lands. They committed ſome acts of Hoſtility without any previous Declaration; attack'd the People, when they were faint and weary; and, in a word, laid in Ambuſcade to cut off thoſe who ſtaid behind: And theſe four things having exaſperated God, were enough to authorize the King to declare War againſt them, and purſue it till he had wholly deſtroy'd them. So that the King might of his own head lead an Army againſt the Amalekites, and wage War with them, without adviſing with the Sanhedrim. But as for a War deſign'd to make Conqueſts, or neceſſary for the defence of the State, the Prince was bound to leave it to the judgment of the Council. And therefore they apply to this Council, what Jethro ſaid to Moſes— Every great Matter they ſhall bring unto thee.

10. To conclude; If the King trangreſs'd the Law, the Council order'd him to be ſtrip'd and whip'd before them. * Maimonides poſitively ſays it. "Tradition teaches us, that the King ought to have "but Eighteen Wives; if he marries one more let "him be whip'd; if he hath more Horſes than he "needs for his Chariot, let him be whip'd; if he "heaps more Gold and Silver than he wants to pay "his Miniſters, let him be whip'd.

As this Sentence to be whip'd, abaſes the Majeſty of Kings, the Jewiſh Doctors are juſtify'd by the Example of Henry II. King of England, who ſuffer'd ſome Monks to give him Fourſcore Stripes to expiate his Crime, for putting Thomas Becket to Death, who diſturb'd the Peace of his Kingdom. They add, that this Puniſhment was not ignominious among the Jews; becauſe it was inflicted as a Penance; that the Executioner did not lay hands upon the King; but that he choſe himſelf the Perſon that was to whip him; and that he immediately re-aſſum'd his Dignity as ſoon as he had undergone the Puniſhment. None but the Preſident of the Council was degraded after he was whip'd, and oblig'd to ſit at the lower end of the Sanhedrim. This is what the Talmudiſts relate of the old Kings of Judah, and which I have faithfully ſet down. But let us examine whether their Narrative be true.

11. Four ſorts of People have adopted theſe Notions of the Talmudiſts. 1. The declar'd Enemies of the Majeſty of Kings; as for example Milton, who hath taken care to quote the cuſtom of the Jews, to vindicate the proceedings of the Parliament of England, that forc'd Charles I. to loſe his Head upon a Scaffold. 2. Baronius, who may be look'd upon as the moſt zealous Aſſerter of the Papal Power, made uſe of it, to eſtabliſh the Pope's Authority over Crown'd Heads. But he did not take notice, that, according to the ſame Talmudiſt, the High

* Geneſ. 4. 10. † Maimon. Halach. Sanhedr. c. 12. Ibid. p. 257. ‖ Deuter. 25: 18. ⁂ V. Carpzov. Not. ad Schick. Jus Reg. Hebr. p. 295. &c. * Maimon. Halach. Melach. c. 3. Schickard. c. 2. Th. 7. p. 150.

Prieſt

Prieſt was as liable to be whip'd as the King; and that he might even be put to Death, which the King cou'd not. In a word * he is oblig'd to deviate from thoſe he hath a mind to follow. For, according to the Talmudiſts, the High Prieſt was not Preſident of the Sanhedrim, but only Member of it, when he was choſen in it for his Merit. 3. Mr. de Marca makes up a third Party: He agrees † with the Rabbins, that God commanded that a King ſhou'd be choſen, before the People ask'd for one; that the Sanhedrim took cognizance of what related to Peace or War, and order'd the King to be whip'd; but he alſo ſubmits the High Prieſts to the Sanhedrim; and therefore, he argues ſtrongly againſt thoſe who aſſert, that the Chriſtian Religion is ſettl'd upon the Plan of the Jewiſh. 4. Laſtly, a great many Learned Men make a Scruple to depart from the Rabbins. Seldenus wou'd not venture to forſake them. For after he hath prov'd the dependance of Kings by the teſtimony of the Doctors ‖; he yet ſeems in another place to be wavering, and declares, that he will decide nothing. But Schickard hath writ a large Treatiſe upon this Subject, wherein he backs the opinion of the Rabbins; and this Learned Man hath even dazl'd the Judicious Grotius, who maintains ‖‖ the ſame thing. However we need but open the Scripture, which contains the Hiſtory of the Jewiſh Nation, to be convinc'd that the Rabbins do only give us ſome Platonick Ideas; and that thoſe Kings of Judæa who were Independant, had no ſuperiour Tribunal, that cou'd order them to be whip'd.

12. We'll examine in another place the origin of the Sanhedrim, and prove, that it was only eſtabliſh'd by Gabinius the Roman Governour; and that all the Preſidents of it that are reckon'd before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem are ſuppos'd. So that by ſtriking at the Foundation of this pretended Authority, we'll intirely overſet it. But without inſiſting on this general proof, whether we read the holy Scripture, or examine the Hiſtory of the Jews, we find no where, that this Grand Council alone had a right to choſe the Kings. Neither Saul, nor David, who firſt aſcended the Throne, were oblig'd to that Tribunal for their Exaltation. God ſent Samuel to elect them; and David reign'd but in Hebron, till all the People conſented to his Election. The Crown was hereditary in the Family of David until the Captivity of Babylon. Judæa was afterwards ſubject to the Kings of Aſſyria, to the Perſians, Greeks, and Syrians, till the Aſmonæans freed the Jews from a Foreign Yoke. Had there been then a Sanhedrim, that had a power to choſe a King, they ought to have prefer'd one of the Poſterity of David to Ariſtobulus. They had been ſo much the more guilty to have tolerated that Uſurper; becauſe the Prince of the Sanhedrim was, as is ſaid, of the Family of David; and that his Dignity was but one ſtep from the Throne. So that it is not enough to aſcribe a right of Election to this Grand Council, unleſs it be confirm'd by ſome example. But far from it, this Council doth never appear, when there is occaſion to make a King of the Jews.

The Sanhedrim ought at leaſt to have hinder'd Herod, an Idumæan, and Servant to the Aſmonæans, from ſeizing upon the Crown of his Maſters. Nevertheleſs the Council acknowledges a ſecond time an Uſurper and a Tyrant, without making any oppoſition; and Joſephus, who brings Herod before this Tribunal, when he was Governour of Galilee, doth not ſay one word of this new Prince's being elected by the Sanhedrim, nor of the Reſiſtance they were bound to make, if they did not like this Foreigner's Election, which belong'd to them. In a word, four different ways are obſerv'd, whereby the Kings of Judah aſcended the Throne, whilſt that Republick ſubſiſted. But the Sanhedrim had no ſhare in any of them. Some were immediately choſen by God, as Saul and David; Others ſucceeded their Fathers, as Solomon, Rehoboam, and almoſt all the Kings of Judah: Others uſurp'd the Crown by Force and Tyranny; and it is what Athaliah and the Macchabees did. To conclude, the laſt were appointed by Heathens, as Zedekiah by Nebuchadnezzar, and Herod * by the Romans.

13. What the Talmudiſts ſay of the Birth and Quality of the King that was to be choſen, is ſo manifeſtly falſe, that the objections drawn from the examples of Saul and David, cannot be anſwer'd. Abravanel, more judicious than the reſt, freely acknowledges, that God prefer'd the Ariſtocratical Government; and that it was the People, that imprudently ask'd for a King †, But he is not believ'd, altho' that is agreeable to holy Writ, becauſe Tradition is repugnant to it. A fine reaſon indeed! In order to elude the Scripture, it is ſaid that the deſire of the People was precipitated. God was reſolv'd to give them a King; but he had fix'd the time; and the Jews ought to have ſtaid till David was of age to ſway the Scepter. However, God, to comply with an impatient Nation, lent them Saul. For his Name ſignifies that. So that this Prince was lent to the People for ſome time; and therefore no notice was taken of his Birth and Qualifications. Others will have it, that what made the Iſraelites guilty, was, that they themſelves ask'd a King; whereas they ſhou'd have left Samuel to act, who, being a Prophet, knew the time and Will of God. Laſtly, ſome affirm, that God was not diſpleas'd with the form of the Government; but becauſe they rejected Samuel, whom he had appointed over them; and Mr. Marca adopts this Opinion. What needleſs Endeavours to vindicate a Tradition evidently falſe! This is a ſtrange effect of Prejudices! The bare reading of the Scripture alone, without conſulting the Doctors, wou'd eaſily diſcover the truth. But when People are once intoxicated with the Reputation of the Doctors, they wou'd clear them from Errours, and then they puzzle and engage themſelves to deliver downright Falſhoods. And indeed, it is not true, that God appointed David to be the firſt King of Iſrael; that he ever intended to lend to the Iſraelites another Monarch for ſome Years; that he was oblig'd to anticipate his Decrees, to gratify the impatience of a mutinous People; or that his Anger was kindl'd, becauſe they rejected Samuel. For on the contrary, this Prophet's Sons, by their enormous Diſſolutions, occaſion'd theſe clamours of the People, and oblig'd them to ask for a King. But God was exaſperated, becauſe, having been himſelf ſo long their King, they grew weary of Theocracy, and his Government. As the Children of Iſrael ask'd in the Deſart for a golden Calf to ſupply Moſes's abſence, and to have a God that ſhould walk before them; ſo they ask'd a viſible King, to ſupply the place of the inviſible God that govern'd them, and thereby fell into Rebellion. They have caſt me off, ſays the Almighty, ‖ They have ſet up Kings, but not by me. Perhaps that God deſign'd to mortifie them, by ordering that their two firſt Kings ſhou'd be of mean Extraction, one having been a Muleteer, and the other a Shepherd. A Noble Birth, ſays St. Chryſoſtome on this occaſion, ought not to puff us up. Solomon was indeed the Son of

---

* Biron. An. 31. p. 90. † Marca Conc. Sacerd. l. 2. c. 4, 5. p. 68, &c. ‖ Selden. de Synedr. l. 2. c. 9. p. 434. & l. 2. c. 9. p. 106. ‖‖ Grot. de Jure Belli & Pacis, l. 1. c. 3. p. 141. * V. Becan. Analog. Vet. & Nov. Teſtam. c. 16. Q. 5. Opuſc. t. 3. p. 365. † Manaſſeh Ben Iſrael Conciliator. Deut. Q. 7. p. 228. ‖ Hoſea 8. 4.

a powerful King; but his Father was very meanly Born, and his Grand-father by the Mother's ſide had not wherewithal to marry his Daughter to a Foot-man. Saul was alſo of a mean Extraction.

* Portentum inuſitatum conflatum eſt recens,
Nam mulos qui fricabat, Conſul factus eſt.

This is what we learn from Scripture. And if ſome can without bluſhing maintain, in oppoſition to ſo many plain matters of Fact, related by the Holy Writers, a Rabbinical Tradition; one wou'd think that they ſhou'd at leaſt perceive, that it is falſe.

14. The Rabbins ſay, that the Kings were anointed with the ſame Oil deſign'd for the Unction of the High Prieſt, which was kept in the Temple, and had been compos'd by Moſes. Mr. de Marca hath joyfully adopted this Circumſtance, as if the Majeſty and Power of Kings ſhin'd the more glorioufly, becauſe they were anointed with the ſame Oil as the High Prieſt. But this is falſe. For David was not anointed with that Oil, as this may be evinc'd by this plain Argument. Saul had the Tabernacle and Holy Oil in his Poſſeſſion, when God rejected him, and ſent Samuel to choſe David. This Prophet pour'd a Horn full of Oil upon his Head, to aſſure him by that Unction that he was King. This Oil cou'd not be that of the Prieſts which was kept in the Tabernacle. Samuel had expos'd his Life, and diſcover'd a Secret, that was to be conceal'd, had he ask'd the precious Balſam of the High Prieſt, in order to anoint another King in Saul's room, who was ſtill alive, and wou'd never have forgiven that attempt. So that the moſt powerful and holieſt of the Kings did not derive his Dignity from the Prieſt-hood, nor receive the Sacerdotal Unction. This Remark deſtroys the difference that is put between the Kings of Judah and Samaria. For theſe laſt, tho' elected and anointed by Prophets, as Elijah, were, according to ſome Rabbins, inferiour to the others, that receiv'd the miraculous Unction. But this difference, ſo advantageous to the Kings of Judah, is but a Chimæra, as we have obſerv'd. David had but a plain Unction of Oil, pour'd out of the Horn by Samuel. The Kings of Samaria receiv'd the ſame. Jeroboam the Ring-leader of the Schiſm was ſecretly anointed by a Prophet, as David was. It was enough for theſe Kings, that God's Will was reveal'd by ſome Prophets. For thence flow'd their Authority. The Rabbins tell us, but do not prove it, that the King's Sons did not receive this Unction, but when they had ſome Competitors, or in time of War. When † there is Peace in Iſrael, the Unction is uſeleſs. But they contradict themſelves. For ſince they gave ſo great a Virtue to the Holy Oil which ſanctify'd the High Prieſt, why ſhou'd they have deny'd it to the King, who had moſt need of it? To pretend that the Virtue of this Unction was extended to all the King's Poſterity, is without any manner of neceſſity to multiply Miracles. Beſides, this is repugnant to Scripture. For Solomon, Joaſh and Jehoahas were anointed, tho' they were of Royal Extraction; and if the two firſt had any Competitors, the laſt at leaſt had none. For Necho ſettl'd his Brother on the Throne, but a long time after his Unction, when the War was kindl'd between thoſe two Princes, and Necho vanquiſh'd Jehoahas becauſe he had forſaken God. They follow'd in Judah the common Cuſtom of all Nations, that anoint Princes at their Acceſſion to the Crown; and this is a new argument that we ought not to give credit to the Talmudiſts, about the Kings of Judah.

15. We have dwelt long enough on Circumſtances: Let us now examine the main thing, that concerns the ſovereign Authority. 1. It is falſe, that the Kings conſulted the Sanhedrim before they enter'd into a War; and that they cou'd not fight but againſt the Amalekites without the Approbation of that Tribunal. All the ſacred Hiſtory proves the contrary. We read there of ſome unjuſt as well as of lawful Wars, and yet we never find the grand Council aſſembl'd, or that this High Court ever oppos'd the King's Deſigns, even when they fought againſt God's Will. Of what uſe was a dumb Council, that gives us in all Holy Writ no marks of Piety, Vigour, or Exiſtence? We ſee in it, Princes ſometimes conſult Prophets about the Succeſs of War and Battles; but there is not one word of any conſultation with the Sanhedrim. The War of the Macchabees was a Revolt, or an Impulſe of Impatience, occaſion'd by Perſecution, and urgent Neceſſity. Theſe Leaders were neither Kings, nor Chiefs of the People. Did the Council either authorize, or endeavour to ſuppreſs their Attempts? We ſeen either. Why then is the Authority of a Sanhedrim, which appears no where, and doth nothing when the State wants moſt its aſſiſtance, ſo much extoll'd? 2. The Example of Solomon, and of his Succeſſors, prove plainly, that the Kings had more than 18 Wives. "For this Monarch ‖ had 700 Wives that were Prin-
"ceſſes; ſome came from Egypt; others were Wo- "men of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zido-
"nians and Hittites, of the Nations: Concerning which "the Lord ſaid to the Children of Iſrael, Ye ſhall "not go in to them, neither ſhall they come in unto "you; for ſurely they will turn away your Heart "after their Gods. Nevertheleſs he never was laſh'd for it. 3. The Kings cannot, even without contradiction, be depriv'd of the Right of Life and Death, and of the choice of Puniſhments for Criminals. Maimonides, who ſubjects the Kings to the Sanhedrim, owns ‖‖, that one of them caus'd a great many Perſons to be hang'd, and order'd them to remain for ſeveral days on the Gallows, that he might deterr the Wicked. He took this from the Talmud of Jeruſalem, So that it cannot be ſaid, that the Kings cou'd only puniſh with the Sword; and the Learned Schickard *, whoſe Writings we here confute, hath plainly contradicted himſelf, ſince, notwithſtanding he quoted Maimonides's Words, he yet follow'd the erroneous opinion of the Jews.

16. As for the King's being order'd by the Great Council to be whip'd, it is ſo impertinent a fiction, that it is ſtrange that any Chriſtians will adopt it. None of all the Kings deſerv'd the Rod better than David, who, being guilty of Adultery, (a Sin attended with Perfidiouſneſs, and the Murder of the Huſband; and that Murder accompany'd with the Death of many of his Subjects, which he ſacrific'd to conceal his Crime) ſhou'd have been doubly puniſh'd by the Sanhedrim, and receiv'd twice as many ſtripes as were given to the Prince. But they pretend that David repented, and therefore was obedient to this formidable Council; and that they had no reaſon to fear any thing from a devout King, who was convinc'd of his Crime, and threaten'd by Nathan's Prophecies. It is true, that we read in his Hiſtory, that two Prophets reprehended and threaten'd him from God; but we do not find, that the Sanhedrim interven'd in this Affair, either to make David ſenſible of his Crime, or to bring him to his Trial, or to have him whip'd. Solomon was yet more guilty than his Father. For he had more Horſes than he wanted to draw his Chariot, and more Money th... ...as re-quiſite to maintain his Houſhold. For he was Maſter of an immenſe Treaſure. In a Word, if a Prince was to be whip'd for every Wife that he took beyond the number of Eighteen, Solomon, who had Seven Hundred, muſt have loſt a great deal of Blood. His Body muſt have been full of Scars, and fuſtigated almoſt every Month, and his Sores cou'd never have been heal'd. We read in Sacred Hiſtory of ſome rich and powerful Kings, who ſhew'd their Treaſures; and of others plung'd into the groſſeſt Idolatry, and adding to this Idolatry a vaſt number of Wives, and a great many Impurities and Abominations; and notwithſtanding all theſe Crimes, they are not once brought to the Whipping Poſt.

* Apud Agell. Noct. Att. l. 15. c. 4. † Vide Schickard. Jus Reg. Hebr. c. 1. Theor. 4. p. 77. &c. c. 6. Theor. 20. p. 445. ‖ 1 Kings 11. 1, 2, 3. ‖‖ Maimon. Hal. Mel. c. 3. ex Thalm. Jeruſal. * Schickard. Jus Reg. c. 4. Theor. 14. p. 259.

17. We need but ſet down the Proofs alledg'd to aſſert this Tradition, to make it ridiculous. Firſt, it is confeſs'd, that in all the ſacred Hiſtory, or in that of the Macchabees, or of the Herods, there is not one Example of a King whip'd by order of the Sanhedrim. Schickard produces that of Uzziah, but he owns that God puniſh'd him rather than the Sanhedrim, and he is more judicious than a great many others. For he doth not quote Herod, who once appear'd at the Bar of that Tribunal. And indeed that example is quoted to no purpoſe; ſince Herod was not as yet a King, but only Governour of Galilee. The Aſſerters of this Tradition have nothing to ſay, when they are ask'd ſome Inſtances to prove it, and yet the Kings were frequently guilty of Crimes, that deſerv'd whipping. Why then was not God's Command put in Execution, if Moſes gave ſuch a Law, and impower'd a Court to ſee it comply'd with? Schickard, * who acknowledg'd this, diſtinguiſhes between Right and Fact. He quotes the example of the Emperours of Germany, who by the Golden Bull may be cited by private Men before a Court, altho' it ſeldom happens; and that of Athaliah, who uſurp'd the Crown, altho' Women were not allow'd to rule in Judæa. But his reaſoning is falſe. For he alledges a ſtanding Law, which ſubjects the Emperour to the Laws, whereas he only produces the Whims of the Talmudiſts, and of Maimonides, who liv'd almoſt Twelve Hundred Years after Chriſt, and much longer after the Kings of Judah were aboliſh'd. Beſides, there is nothing more natural or common, than to go to Law with Princes; and the French King, tho' inveſted with a deſpotick Power, yet lets his Council judge of his Subject's Pretenſions on his Demeſns. Even the example of Athaliah is againſt Schickard. For we ſee here a Woman, that uſurps the Crown, altho' there was no Law that allow'd Women to ſway the Scepter; and he ſhou'd have concluded from thence, that, notwithſtanding one example was alledg'd of a King that was whip'd, it wou'd not follow from thence that all the Kings cou'd be ſo too, or that there was a Law for it. But here he produces neither Example not Law. How then can he prove his Aſſertion?

Secondly, the Talmudiſts reckon only three Crimes that deſerv'd whipping; 1. To have too many Horſes; 2. Too much Money; And, 3. Too many Wives. This diſcovers the extravagance of Tradition. For there are a great many more heinous Crimes, which deſerve the Rod, more than thoſe they mention. For why ſhou'd they animadvert on ſome Sins, and leave unpuniſh'd thoſe that trefpaſs againſt God, his Worſhip and Religion? They wrong Moſes, to pretend that he enacted ſo unreaſonable Laws, and even God himſelf, who, according to them, by a conſtant Tradition, tranſmitted theſe Laws to Poſterity.

18. They are ſo poſſeſs'd with this Opinion, that they even ſay, that this Puniſhment was not ignominious, altho' the King was oblig'd to ſtrip to the Waſte, ſtand naked, and be laſh'd before his Subjects. Why? Becauſe the King choſe the Perſon, that was to whip him. But was it a leſs ſhame for him to be ſcourg'd, becauſe he pitch'd upon his Executioner? They add, that the King willingly ſubmitted to this Puniſhment, to mortify himſelf. But whence do they know that; ſince there is not one example of it, and they only alledge the Sanhedrim's Right to impoſe that Correction? If the Council had a power to enjoyn it, then the King did not voluntarily ſubmit to its Sentence. This Penance muſt have leſſen'd the Majeſty of Kings, tho' they had willingly undergone it. The World was in the right to laugh at the Penance and Flagellations of Henry III. but if the Parliament had enjoyn'd them, notwithſtanding he had conſented to them, yet it had been a great ſhame.

19. Laſtly, the Tradition, ſo much boaſted of, is not ſure. For the Gemara † of Jeruſalem ſays, that the King judges, and is judg'd of no body; and it proves it by the example of David, who acknowledg'd no Judge but God. For ſaying, Let my ſentence proceed from thy Preſence, he taught, that the King, and the whole body of the People, cou'd not be judg'd but by God. Caſaubon had oppos'd this Teſtimony to Baronius; but Schickard maintains, that Caſaubon, ‖ being a more Learned than Judicious Man, gave way to his Eagerneſs to oppoſe his Adverſary; and that he had not turn'd the Leaf, wherein Raf Joſeph affirms, that the Fathers underſtood this Maxim of the Kings of Iſrael, who did not own the Sanhedrim's Authority; but that thoſe of the Family of David were Judges, and judg'd.

But the preſumption ought to be charg'd on Schickard, who blindly follows the Rabbins (of whoſe Writings he had made a very exact compilation) about the Rights of the Kings, or rather about that of the Great Council over the Kings. And indeed he did not take notice, that the Talmudiſts have laid down for a general Maxim, that the Kings do not judge, and are not judg'd. The ſucceeding Rabbins, adopting other Principles, and unwilling downright to contradict the Talmud, invented another Explanation. Raf Joſeph imagin'd, that it was to be apply'd to the Kings of Samaria; and others have follow'd him, becauſe they had nothing better to offer. However, this Explanation is ridiculous for theſe two reaſons. The firſt, becauſe as the Sanhedrim never had any Authority over the Kings of Iſrael, it is impertinent to mention them in the Talmud. The Rabbins acknowlege, that theſe Kings were abſolute in their Dominions, Haughty, and Rebels; that they did not mind the Law; and that there was no hope of their Converſion. Was there then any neceſſity to ſay in the Talmud, that theſe Kings were neither Judges, nor judg'd? Why ſhou'd they be pointed at in a Book, which only concern'd the Jewiſh Nation, excluſively of Schiſmaticks, over whom this Council had no Juriſdiction? The Talmudiſts deſign'd no more to introduce the Kings of Samaria, than thoſe of Egypt, and Syria, over whom the Sanhedrim cou'd have no Power. The Second, becauſe they explain'd their general Maxim by the example of David, who was the Stock and Root of the Kings of Judah. So that Juſtice muſt be done to the Learned Caſaubon, and if there be any contradiction in different places of the Talmud, that muſt not be laid to his charge. It is the buſineſs of thoſe, that have read, and do quote them, to know that ſome jarring Opinions have been foiſted in it, and to perceive, that Raf Joſeph's Explanation, tho' applauded by ſeveral

* Schickard. Jus Reg. c. 2. Theor. 7. p. 157. † Gemara Hier. ad Miſchnam. Maſſech. Sanhedr. fol. 20. Ibid. Carpzov. in Not. p. 157. ‖ Exercit. 91. in Baron. p. 216.

Maſters,

Maſters, who are quoted, is directly repugnant to the Tradition of the Fathers, who wou'd not have the King to be judg'd.

20. We have collected and confuted whatever the Talmudiſts ſay of the Authority of the Kings, for two reaſons. The Firſt, becauſe, as we write the Hiſtory both of publick Opinions and Events, we ought not to overlook ſo important a Subject, as that of the Royal and Sacerdotal Authority. The Second, becauſe Schickard, having dazl'd a great many Chriſtian Divines by his vaſt Learning, it is requiſite to expoſe the Falſhood of his Principles, and of the Teſtimonies which he produces. He is every where quoted not only with the Applauſe, which his great Reading deſerves, but alſo with almoſt a general approbation; and it was neceſſary, that we ſhou'd give a more exact account of the antient Polity of the Jews.

21. There remains ſtill one thing of moment to be diſcuſs'd. For it is not enough to have reſcu'd the Kings from the Power of the Sanhedrim, and its Preſident. Baronius and his Adherents wou'd loſe nothing by the bargain, if the ſame Prince was wholly at the beck of the High Prieſt. But the Hiſtory of the latter times of the Republick of the Jews, is full of Examples to the contrary. We often ſee in it ſome High Prieſts depos'd by Kings, who had not the ſupream Authority: But the modern Jews exclaim againſt it as a great piece of Injuſtice, and maintain, that it was a time of Oppreſſion and Iniquity, and that the Herods, being Maſters of Jeruſalem and Judæa, made a tyrannical uſe of their Power; and we'll examine this in few Words.

22. Altho' the Eccleſiaſtical, and Civil Juriſdiction of the Prieſts and Kings can't eaſily be diſtinguiſh'd, yet we may judge by ſome Circumſtances, related by the Holy Writers, of the Juriſdiction that was exercis'd under the Old Teſtament.

It was the High Prieſt's Office to regulate the Service of the Temple, and to preſide over the Sacrifices, and to make the Incenſe burn in honour of God: And therefore Uzziah, who attempted to handle the Cenſer, was puniſh'd. The High Prieſt alone cou'd go into the Holy of Holies. The Kings cou'd neither open, nor touch the Ark. It is true that David commanded, that it ſhou'd be tranſported from Abinadab's Houſe to Jeruſalem; but he let the Prieſts carry it. Whatever, in a Word, purely concern'd Religion, belong'd to the High Prieſt, and thoſe under him. But the King was Prieſt without, as Conſtantine ſaid that he was a Biſhop without: Theſe are the chief Functions with reference to Religion, which the Princes perform'd under the Law.

23. Firſt they took care of the Temple, and to build or repair it, when it fell to decay. Solomon exerted his Magnificence to adorn that vaſt Edifice; Joaſh and Joſiah repair'd it, and Herod re-built it. Some pretend, that part of the Money of the Offerings was employ'd for that uſe. Joaſh ſet this Precedent. Nay, he did more; for he took away the Silver, which his Anceſtors had in ſome manner conſecrated to God, and depoſited into the Temple, that he might thereby be rid of the King of Syria. But had the Kings a right to ſeize thus on the Treaſure of the Temple? Joſephus blames very much Herod for doing it, and obſerves that Joaſh did not venture at it, till after the death of Jehoiada the High Prieſt, for whoſe Councils he had a great regard; and as the Life of this Prince is divided between Good and Evil, it may fairly be concluded, that this Action, happening in the laſt period of it, cannot eſtabliſh a Right, or be approv'd by any body. It cannot be deny'd but Joaſh took away the Treaſure of the Temple, at the time that he had forſaken God; ſince Hazael King of Syria wag'd War with him but the Fortieth Year of his Reign; and that he was kill'd that very Year by his Officers. But it may be reply'd, that all the Actions of wicked Kings are not bad; that the Scripture doth not condemn this Action either of Joaſh, or of Ahaz, who did the ſame thing to redeem himſelf from the Aſſyrians; that an attempt may be good, or bad, according to the motive it is grounded upon; that Neceſſity warrants the making uſe of any thing, that may contribute to the preſervation of the People, and deliver them from the hands of an Enemy: Thus Churches have been uncover'd, and conſecrated Veſſels ſold to feed the People in a time of Famine: But Covetouſneſs makes that a Crime, which wou'd otherwiſe be indifferent; and as it was the Spring that ſet Herod to work, he cannot be brought in competition with theſe Princes. It is very certain, that they ſometimes diverted to other uſes the Money that the People offer'd, and employ'd it to repair the Temple without conſulting the Prieſts. In a Word, Joſiah order'd the High Prieſt to make ſome Ingots of Gold, and convert into ſacred Veſſels the Gifts, that had been brought into the Temple; and it was as they took out theſe Offerings from the Treaſury, that the Book of the Law was found. So that the Kings commanded the High Prieſts, and order'd how the Treaſure of the Temple ſhou'd be diſpos'd of. For theſe actions were approv'd by the Holy Ghoſt.

Secondly, the old Kings of Judah appointed the publick Feſtivals, and Faſts, and ſometime pray'd in the Temple. Solomon did it at the Dedication of the Temple, which he built. The Holy Ghoſt hath tranſmitted his Prayer to us; we ſee beſides Jehoſhaphat praying in the Houſe of the Lord, when Judah gathered themſelves together to ask help of the Lord. One wou'd think, that this wholly belong'd to the Prieſts; eſpecially upon a ſolemn day of Worſhip, when all People were aſſembl'd; and yet the Scripture approves what Jehoſhaphat did.

24. The Kings pretended to reform the Church, when it was deprav'd, and puniſh'd even the Levites, and Prieſts when they were negligent. So that theſe Perſons, that are call'd Sacred, were then under the Juriſdiction of the Kings, who gave them what Orders were neceſſary to reſtore Divine Worſhip. Jehoſhaphat perceiving that the negligence of thoſe, who were to inſtruct the People, was the cauſe that they did not know God's Law, ſent every where ſome Prieſts and Levites to teach Judah. Hezechiah ſeeing two very conſiderable abuſes in the Church, 1. The Temple ſhut, and the Prieſts taking no care to have it open, and to perform Divine Service. 2. The People worſhipping the brazen Serpent, and the Clergy, whoſe buſineſs it was to reprove and guide them, ſhewing no diſlike to their Idolatry, apply'd proper Remedies for theſe two Evils. He, of his own head, broke to pieces the braſen Serpent, and having aſſembled together the Levites and Prieſts, he order'd them to ſanctify themſelves: Hear me, ye Levites, ſanctify now your ſelves, and ſanctify the Houſe of the Lord God of your Fathers, and carry forth the filthineſs out of the Holy Place. It was the King, who begun the Reformation, enjoyn'd it to the Prieſts, and made the Covenant with God. It muſt be own'd, that this Power was great; but let us add Joſiah's Reprehenſion to the Prieſts, which ſhews, that he had Authority to reprove them, even for what Faults they committed in their Miniſtry. Why; ſaid he to them with heat, Why repair ye not the Breaches of the Houſe? To conclude, when Joſiah reform'd the Church, he read in the Ears of the Prieſts the Law, and bound them by an Oath to obſerve it. It is always the Sovereign, that adminiſters an Oath, and it is an act of Juriſdiction to require it. Joſiah oblig'd the Prieſts to take one, in a thing that meerly concern'd Religion, and the Law of Moſes.

25. But that we may enlarge no more on this matter; let us only obſerve two things, which prove our Assertion. One, that the Kings, far from being under the Priests in what related to War, Peace, and other important Acts of Sovereignty, did settle the Jurisdiction and Authority of the Priests. Jehoshaphat, willing to carry his Reformation farther than Jerusalem, where he had built some Altars; instituted some Judges to resolve Cases of Conscience, to see the Discipline observ'd, and did Four things. 1. He chose some Levites, Priests, and of the chief of the Fathers of Israel; that is, some Laicks for the Judgment of the Lord, and for Controversies. 2. He prescrib'd them what Rule they shou'd observe in their Judgments, and limited their Jurisdiction. They distinguish'd between Blood and Blood, and shew'd the difference between moral and ceremonial Precepts. 3. He appointed the High Priest, President of this Council, and restrain'd his Authority to what concern'd the Lord. He is over you in all matters of the Lord. 4. And least they shou'd abuse their Authority, and go beyond the bounds he had set them, he appointed a President for Affairs relating to the Civil Administration and the King, as the High Priest was for those relating to God, * Zebadiah the Son of Ishmael: The Ruler of the house of Judah, shall be over you for all the King's matters. Here is a Jurisdiction settl'd by the Prince, and every Officer directed what to do. The High Priest was to take cognizance of religious matters; but what related to the King was under the Ruler of the House of Judah's Jurisdiction. This place so evidently concludes for the Authority of the Kings, that I cannot conceive how some dare dispute it.

26. To conclude, the old Kings had a right to depose the High Priests, and there is not one instance of a High Priest in all the Jewish Monarchy, who ever so much as attempted to depose any King. They will, no doubt, except against the example of Saul; because he was a cruel and bloody Prince; but that of Solomon, who depriv'd Abiathar of the Priesthood, and gave him his Life only as an Act of Grace, is unquestionable. Herod follow'd an example, that is instead of a Law; since a pious, and wise Prince, by putting his Father's Will in execution, gave it. The Posterity of Herod thought, that they might lawfully do what other Kings had done. They might have abus'd their Authority; but that did not hinder it from being lawful; and God made use of the Power he had confer'd on the Kings, to give a mortal blow to the High Priesthood, which was declining. The only difference, which we are going to observe, lies in this; The High Priests were at first very seldom depos'd; but they were frequently depriv'd of their Office, at the time, whose History we write. Lastly, the High Priest might be sentenc'd to death. It is certain that some pretend that this severe Punishment cou'd not be inflicted upon him by the King; but the Talmudists are those who reserve that Authority to the Grand Council, and by reserving it, they insinuate that the King might inflict the other Punishments. Besides, as the Sanhedrim did not last long: If the High Priest was liable to be condemn'd to die, that power must of necessity have been lodg'd in the Kings. This is very different from what the Popes pretend, who will be judg'd by no body; and if it be true, as we are told by some of his Adherents, that the Christian Church is model'd upon the Jewish Church, it follows from thence, that the Bishop of Rome, far from trampling upon Kings, ought to humble himself before them.

CHAP. V.

The History of the High Priests, and Desolation of the Jewish Church.

I. Ananelus came from Babylon. Depos'd by Herod. II. Simon, Father-in-law to this Prince becomes a High Priest. III. Matthias defil'd on a Festival Day. His being depos'd. IV. Annas and Caiaphas. Whether there are several High Priests. V. This Difficulty solv'd. VI. Several High Priests depos'd. VII. The Authority of Herod King of Chalcis over the Priests. VIII. The Office of Captain of the Temple explain'd. IX. Ananias orders St. Paul to be struck. The Explication of his Answer. X. A Conjuration against this Apostle. An Argument of Corruption. XI. The exemplary Punishment of Ananias. Whited Wall. XII. The cruel Covetuousness, and Divisions of the High Priests. XIII. Ishmael depos'd. XIV. An intestine War for the Priesthood. XV. An open War under the Priesthood of Matthias. XVI. Phanus an unworthy Man, chosen by Lot. XVII. The difficulty about Annas's being High Priest, and Governour of Jerusalem, solv'd. XVIII. Some Reflections on the Alterations happen'd in that Office. XIX. Of the Corruption of the High Priests. XX. Of Schisms and Heresies. The last cause of their Ruin.

1. Herod the Great, who knew what an advantage it is to Kings newly settl'd, to have the Clergy at their beck, and their Head at their devotion, did not hesitate to chuse one of his Creatures for High Priest. As he believ'd that he cou'd not find one in Judæa, that wou'd be wholly in his Interest, and that a Stranger transported from Babylon to Jerusalem, having no Relations, or Friends to back him, wou'd be more devoted to his Service, he sent from thence for Ananelus, with whom he was already acquainted. He might have kept that Office himself, as the Asmonæans had done, who were both Kings and Priests; but fearing the clamours of the People, who was us'd to see the Posterity of Aaron invested with the sacerdotal Authority, and cou'd not have suffer'd without Indignation, that an Idumæan had exercis'd it, he intrusted his Friend with that important Employ. He thereby drew against him the complaints of his Mother-in-law, who cou'd not endure that a Stranger shou'd appear at the head of the Clergy, and enjoy an Office, which she thought belong'd to her Son Aristobulus. Herod was oblig'd to give way to her complaints. He depriv'd Ananelus of the High Priesthood to confer it on young Aristobulus, the last of the Family of the Asmonæans. But this created him new Troubles. For the People became extreamly fond of Aristobulus, who charm'd the Jews with his Mildness, and Comeliness. Herod was afraid least this Youth shou'd re-unite in his Person the Titles of Priest and King, which his Family had so long enjoy'd. He thought that he cou'd not better get rid of this young Rival than by playing with him, and obliging him, whilst he was all in a heat to refresh himself in a cold Bath. He had order'd some there, who drown'd him, pretending to play with him, and to make him dive under Water for a Pastime. Thus Ananelus was restor'd to his Office, but did not keep it long.

* 2 Chron. 19.

2. Herod fell in love with the Daughter of a Prieſt call'd Simon. This Man, by birth a Citizen of Alexandria, was pretty conſiderable in Jeruſalem. The King ask'd him his Daughter for a Wife, and he had no reaſon to expect a denial. However the Prieſt had the Inſolence or Courage to deny him. He had very good grounds to fear leſt his Daughter ſhou'd be taken away from him; but Herod wou'd not make uſe of violent methods; and compounding with this Prieſt, he depriv'd of the High Prieſthood Jeſus, who had already ſucceeded Ananelus, and beſtow'd it upon Simon. The Marriage was concluded upon that condition; but the new Spouſe, who was alſo call'd Mariamne, having no kindneſs for her Husband, conſpir'd with Pheroras and Antipater againſt him; which * oblig'd that Prince to ſend her away, and diſinherit her Son, and drive his Father-in-law from the High Prieſthood, in whoſe room he appointed Matthias.

3. This Man was ſo unfortunate as to have a Dream which defil'd him the Eve of a Solemn Feſtival, and render'd him unfit to officiate. Altho' he was from his Wife, his Fancy was too ſtrong and lively. He confeſs'd it; this Acknowledgment occaſion'd ſome Trouble. For they were oblig'd to chuſe † a High Prieſt only for that Feaſt: Which is a plain demonſtration, that there was no perpetual Deputies to perform the Sacerdotal Function of thoſe, who became defil'd. He ſeconded too the Zeal of thoſe, who deſign'd to pull down the Golden Eagle, that Herod had ſet up in the Temple; and he thought that he might ſafely do it, becauſe this Prince was upon his Death-bed. But Herod did not forgive this act of Devotion; and upon his Exit out of the World, had no regard for the High Prieſt, whom he depos'd to place in his ſtead Joaſar, Uncle to Mariamne, and Brother to Simon. This Joaſar || had the misfortune to be expell'd by Archelaus, who ſet up his Brother |||| in his room, and this Brother was forc'd to yield up his Office to another. But Archelaus being baniſh'd, and Judæa reduc'd into a Province, and the People refuſing to pay the Capitation, Joaſar declar'd for the Romans, and by their Authority was reſtor'd to the High Prieſthood. The People cou'd not bear, that he ſhou'd buy that Dignity at their coſt. They rais'd a Sedition, and ask'd that the High Prieſt, that they did not like, ſhou'd be caſheer'd. Coponius, whom Auguſtus had ſent to take the Adminiſtration of that Province, durſt not refuſe a Mutinous Croud, and nam'd in his place, that Annas mention'd in the Goſpel. So that here are already twelve High Prieſts depos'd during the Reigns of Herod, and his Son Archelaus.

4. Annas, or Annanus, was * look'd upon as the happieſt Man in the World; becauſe after he had been a long time High Prieſt, he ſaw five of his Children, and his Son-in-law enjoy the ſame Dignity; which happen'd to none of his Predeceſſors. It was a great honour to be at the Head of the Clergy; but this Family, as all others, underwent ſo many Revolutions, that they cou'd not enjoy it quietly. Annas was turn'd out by Gratus, Governour of Judæa for the Romans, after he had been Eleven Years in that Office. St. Luke ſays, that Caiaphas and he were High Prieſts, when John Baptiſt begun his Miniſtry. Nevertheleſs, it is an undoubted truth, that he was depos'd many Years before; and that Caiaphas his Son-in-law, was then at the Head of the Clergy. Euſebius fanſy'd, that St. Luke deſign'd to teach us, that Jeſus Chriſt preach'd from the beginning of Annas his Prieſthood to that of Caiaphas. But this is a groſs miſtake. For St. Luke doth not ſpeak of the Miniſtry of Jeſus Chriſt, but of that of St. John. He doth not make it laſt from one Prieſthood to another, ſince he muſt then have taught above Ten Years. Beſides, Annas's and Caiaphas's Prieſthood did not immediately follow one another; For there are three others between the Father, and Son-in-law. In a Word, it is plain, that this is not the Holy Writer's meaning †. Caſaubon || thought to have remov'd the difficulty, by aſſerting, that the High Prieſt had always a Vicar to ſupply his place at Solemn Feſtivals, when he found himſelf defil'd. But theſe perpetual Vicars have been exploded; and in reality are fabulous, as the example of Matthias, juſt now quoted, irrefragably proves. But granting this Suppoſition to be true, had the time been denoted by the name of the Vicar? had he been call'd High Prieſt and nothing elſe, as Valeſius |||| hath judiciouſly obſerv'd? Lightfoot wou'd have been tempted to follow Baronius, who made Annas Prince of the Council, and Caiaphas High Prieſt; but he too ſcrupulouſly follow'd the Rabbins to inſert in their Catalogue of the Princes of the Council, a Man that he did not find there. So that, ſuperſtitiouſly ſticking cloſe to his Maſters, he makes of Annas the Sagan of the Jewiſh Church, or Vicar to the High Prieſt: Scaliger * pretended that there were then two High Prieſts. But he ſhou'd have back'd his conjecture with ſome example among the Jews, who are wholly ignorant of two High Prieſts ruling at the ſame time. Beſides Joſephus affirms, that Annas was depos'd from the High Prieſthood; which doth not allow us to believe, that he perform'd the Functions of it at that time. Laſtly, it is pretended the High Prieſts chang'd every Year, and therefore the Evangeliſts exactly obſerve that Caiaphas was High Prieſt that ſame Year; and if it was true that the Prieſts acted vicibus alternis, it had been right to give the Father-in-law the ſame Title, as to the Son-in-law; ſince they exercis'd that Office by turns. But this conſtant Revolution of the Prieſthood is found no where; on the contrary we are told by Joſephus, that Caiaphas was Eight or Nine Years in poſſeſſion of that Dignity.

5. This difficulty deſerves our notice: But can it be ſaid, that Annas who was depos'd by a Heathen Governour, had ſtill the Title, and even the inherent Authority of that Office, becauſe he was very much reſpected by the Jews? The Evangeliſts inſinuate, that Caiaphas left to Annas the greateſt part of the Sacerdotal Power; and that the Jews were us'd to pay him a great deal of Deference even after he was depos'd. For when Jeſus Chriſt was to be condemn'd, the Holy Penman aſſures, that Caiaphas was the High Prieſt of that ſame Year. So that his Father-in-law had no hand in this Condemnation; nevertheleſs the Officers led him away firſt to Annas; It was he, who order'd him to be bound, and ſent him in that condition to his Son-in-law. So that this High Prieſt was own'd to have ſome power, whether it was, becauſe he was a conſiderable Man, or becauſe the Jews unwillingly comply'd with his being depos'd by a Heathen, or becauſe Caiaphas his Son-in-law ſhew'd him ſo much reſpect as to take his advice, and do nothing without conſulting him. Add to this, that we muſt not be ſurpriz'd, that the Evangeliſts talk after that rate, ſince Joſephus hath done the ſame thing. It can't be deny'd, that

* Joſeph. Ant. l. 17. c. 6. p. 589. † Joſeph. Ant. l. 17. c. 8. p. 597. || Eleazar, Brother to Joaſar. |||| Jeſus Son to Siamis by Archelaus. * Joſeph. Ant. l. 20. c. 8. p. 698. The Tranſlator hath render'd, ad Satietatem uſque, there is πλεῖον. † Euſeb. Hiſt. l. 1. c. 10. p. 11. || Caſaub. Exercit. p. 215. |||| Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. p. 18. * Scaliger Not. in Euſeb. Chron.

Jonathas;

Jonathas, Son to Annas, was depos'd by Vitellius, in his Expedition into Arabia. Agrippa offer'd to reſtore him. But he refus'd his offer in the 42*d* Year of our Lord. He was not then High Prieſt in the 52*d* Year, when he was ſent Priſoner to Rome. Ananias, who commanded them that ſtood by St. Paul, to ſmite him in the Mouth, was then in the Chair, and yet Joſephus, ſpeaking of him and Jonathas, ſays that Cumanus ſent the High Prieſts to Rome. He calls High Prieſt, a Man that was diſmiſs'd from that Office by a Heathen Governour of Syria, and who by his own, and his Brother's Intereſt, had ſtill a great power in his Nation, as we'll ſee hereafter. Capel indeed pretends, that Jonathas was reſtor'd, but doth not prove it. Joſephus ſays not one word of this. On the contrary, he ſets down another Succeſſion of High Prieſts, ſo well connected, that it is impoſſible to find a place for Jonathas: Neither is it likely, that a Man, who had refus'd to be re-admitted into the High Prieſthood, ſhou'd accept it again, or that it was offer'd to him a ſecond time. Joſephus * calls him High Prieſt in the War of Samaria, where he was not ſo; and ſpeaking of the High Prieſts, that were depos'd, and ſtill pretended to enjoy the Revenue of their Places, and for that end joyn'd with Iſhmael, the preſent High Prieſt, he calls them all High Prieſts. So that it muſt neceſſarily be own'd, that even after their diſmiſſion, they kept their Title. For theſe High Prieſts were not all reſtor'd; they did not all at the ſame time perform the Functions of High Prieſts; and were not Vicars to one another. In a Word, Matthias was not High Prieſt, when he was kill'd by Simon. He loſt his Office along time before; yet Joſephus † affirms, that he was one of the High Prieſts, moſt belov'd by the People; becauſe perhaps the War begun under his Prieſthood. It is not repugnant to the common Laws of the Jews, to follow the Stile of that time, and this Conjecture. Neither is it a Contradiction of what Joſephus ſays, that Annas was depos'd by Gratus, and that Caiaphas was then High Prieſt: And this agrees with the Goſpel, which ſhews, that Annas was not wholly depriv'd of his Authority. Laſtly, nothing is more common than to give a Man the Title of the Dignity, which he hath long enjoy'd with publick Applauſe. As St. Luke introduces in the ſame place the Name of Lyſanias, which was not requiſite, or even very well known, becauſe this Prince was but Tetrarch of Abylene, on the Frontiers of Judæa and Syria, he might alſo introduce Annas, reverenc'd by the Jews, and ſtill look'd upon as High Prieſt, tho' depos'd ſome Years before by the Roman Governour, and was better known in the Nation than Caiaphas. And we ought not to think it ſtrange, that afterwards inſtead of confounding the Father with the Son-in-law, he obſerves that Caiaphas was High Prieſt that ſame Year; becauſe that Office had gone through ſo many hands in a very ſhort time, and almoſt every Year, and that none cou'd foreſee whether Caiaphas was to keep it long. Gratus, having diſmiſs'd Annas from the High Prieſthood, conferr'd it on Iſhmael; and this being depos'd, Eleazar, Annas's Son, ſucceeded him; and ſhortly after he was forc'd to make way for Simon, Son of Carruth. All this was done within the ſpace of Three Years; ſo that every Year ſaw a New High Prieſt, and even Caiaphas was prefer'd in that interval. Such frequent Alterations oblig'd the Holy Writers to ſpecify particularly the Year of Caiaphas, to avoid miſtakes about that time.

6. Caiaphas was not more fortunate than his Predeceſſors: For Two Years || after our Saviour's Death, Vitellius being made Governour of Syria, went to Jeruſalem, where they gave him a Magnificent Reception. He did three things to win the more the People's Love, and acknowledge the Affection which they had already ſhew'd him. He aboliſh'd the Duty exacted in Jeruſalem upon Fruit; reſtor'd to the High Prieſts the keeping |||| of the Sacerdotal Robe, which was commonly lock'd up in the Cittadel *, and depos'd Caiaphas. The Jews hated him, ſince they beg'd he ſhou'd be diſmiſs'd; and yet Annas's Family kept their Intereſt ſo well, that his Son Jonathas was † choſen. Vitellius took a ſecond Journey into Judæa, when he was making Preparations of War againſt Aretus King of Arabia. He was ſo complaiſant to the Jews, that he order'd his Army to march another way; becauſe they were offended at the Pictures on his Colours. He celebrated the Feſtival of the Paſſover with them: He depriv'd Jonathas of the High Prieſthood which he had beſtow'd upon him; but he left it in that Family. For he promoted his Brother || Theophilus to that Dignity. Agrippa took it away from him, to give it to the ſame Simon, who, upon marrying his Daughter to Herod the Great, became High Prieſt; but whether be behav'd himſelf ill, or that God wou'd not have that Employ remain long in any bodies hands, the ſame Agrippa degraded him, and wou'd have |||| reſtor'd Jonathas Son to Annas; but he being ſatisfi'd with having had once that Honour; and not thinking himſelf very well qualifi'd for it, he nam'd his Brother Matthias, a Man a great deal fitter for that Poſt than he. Jonathas afterward was concern'd in the Quarrel of the Samaritans with his Country Men, and led bound to Rome. He gain'd there his Cauſe, and obtain'd his Liberty. He even ask'd that Felix ſhou'd be appointed Governour of Judæa, and his Petition was granted. But fanſying that this Governour was to be at his Devotion, becauſe he had contributed to his Preferment; he became * troubleſome by his Remonſtrances concerning his Behaviour. Felix's marriage with Druſilla, who had another Husband alive, and his Covetouſneſs gave Jonathas but too much grounds to reprehend the Governour. But Courtiers do not love thoſe, who take that freedom with them. Felix cou'd not bear with Jonathas's Exhortations, and therefore to revenge himſelf, he hir'd a Ruffian, who ſtab'd Jonathas. A wretched Fate! His Brother Matthias, for whom he had procur'd the High Prieſthood, was not perhaps found fit to exerciſe it. For theſe High Prieſts making an ill uſe of their Power, ſoon made themſelves unworthy of the Honour confer'd upon them. At leaſt the conſtant Affection of the People for Agrippa, makes us preſume, that the High Prieſts, whom he ſo often depos'd, were in the wrong. Matthias was one of theſe; but his † Succeſſor held not his place ſo long as he; ſince Agrippa, who dy'd the ſame Year, had already diſmiſs'd him, and put another in his room.

7. Herod King of Chalcis, having obtain'd of Claudius the Privilege to name the High Prieſts, altho his Authority in Jeruſalem was only over the Temple, did not fail to make uſe of it. For he depos'd Simon Canthera, whom he found then High Prieſt. It was the ſecond time, that he was turn'd out. For Agrippa had caſhier'd him, and reſtor'd him few days before his Death. This Family might ſtand in competition with that of Annas; for the Brothers

* V. Joſeph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 11. p. 795. Ant. l. 20. c. 6. p. 696. Capell. Append. ad Hiſt. Apoſt. t. 2. p. 3928.
† Joſeph. de Bello, l. 6. c. 15. p. 938. || Ann. 35. |||| Joſeph. de Bello. p. 795. Capell. Append. ad Hiſt. Apoſt. t. 9. p. 3928. * Antonia. † An. 37. || An. 37. |||| An. 42. * An. 52. † An. 44.

to

to Simon, Herod's Father-in-law, had been High Priests; his Son, the Person we speak of, was one too; and so was afterwards his Grand-son, Joseph Cabi, who was depos'd by Agrippa II. after Festus was remov'd. Their Alliance with Herod the Great help'd them to obtain the High Priesthood; but the prevalent Corruption, that sway'd even in the Sanctuary, and the Divine Vengeance, made that Office unsteady, and drove out the High Priests after one another.

8. Joseph, Son to Camydus, whom Herod put into Simon's room, only took possession of his Dignity, and soon lost it. Ananias, who * succeeded him, kept it a little longer. He had a Son, who was Captain of the Temple. We read of this Office in the Gospel, where frequent mention is made of these Captains. But we must distinguish the Captain, who commanded the Roman Soldiers about that Edifice, to prevent the rising, and disorders of the Mob, from a Captain who was intrusted with the keeping the Keys of the Temple, to secure the Holy Treasure and Vessels. This Officer was commonly taken out of a Sacerdotal Family, and he had the Liberty to come into the Council of the Priests. I cannot tell why some will have it, that there was one to guard the Temple by day, and another by night. For it is much more natural to say, that there was one above the rest, call'd out of respect the Captain of the Temple, who had under him some Officers to relieve him; but who were call'd by the same Title. And it is for that reason that the Gospel reckons many. Ananus, Son to the High Priest, was the Chief † of those Captains, and was sent bound by Cumanus to plead the Cause of the Jews, against the Samaritans. They return'd, having prov'd the Injustice of Cumanus, who was rather their Adversary and Executioner, than Judge.

9. They persecuted the Christian Church at their return; and St. Paul coming to Jerusalem in the Year 58. felt the effect of their barbarous Severity. He was seiz'd, and led before the great Council; and he had scarce begun to plead his Cause, but Ananias commanded, that he shou'd be smitten in the Mouth. He then divested himself of the Character of a Judge, and laid aside the Gravity of a High Priest. And therefore St. Paul, mov'd at that Insult, told him, God shall smite thee, thou whited Wall. St. Augustin apply'd this Prediction to the Jewish Priesthood and Commonwealth, which were then nothing but a Wall, that was whited to stop and conceal the Cranys, and ready to fall down. But this is too quaint a Thought. For this Threatning was rather levell'd at Ananias's Person, who was depos'd and kill'd. Yet St. Paul confesses, that he had not spoken so freely, had he known, that he was the High Priest. An Answer, which hath been taken for an Irony; because it can't be conceiv'd that Ananias, who had enjoy'd that Dignity Ten Years, cou'd be unknown to St. Paul. But St. Paul's circumstances inclin'd him at that time so little to Railery, and the Jest ascrib'd him is so senseless, that it is not likely that he ever design'd it. This Apostle, who had scarce resided in Jerusalem for more than Ten Years, might know that Ananias was High Priest, and yet not personally know him. For it must not be imagin'd, that the Order and Rank of Men was so exactly observ'd in the Sanhedrim, that it's President was always and easily known. There was a Sedition, and Tumult, when St. Paul pleaded his Cause, and that perhaps put an Assembly out of order, which was then in a great deal of Confusion.

10. The Corruption of the High Priests was yet greater. For they authoriz'd Crimes, as appears by this instance. Forty Men exasperated that St. Paul was snatch'd away from them, conspir'd against his Life, and made a Vow to fast till they had kill'd him. The number of the Conspirators was great against a private Man. St. Paul had done them no Injury, and yet they were inrag'd against him. They introduc'd both Religion and Vows to strengthen their Fury; but what is yet more unaccountable, and shews the Genius of the Priests of that time, is, that the forty Conspirators came to them, to acquaint them with their Plot, and to ask their Approbation, and Assistance; and they, instead of censuring, and sharply reproving these blood-thirsty Men, concurr'd with them, as their Predecessors had done with Judas, against Jesus Christ. Providence, that guarded St. Paul, having screen'd him from their Attempts, Ananias, still in a Rage, went as far as Cæsarea at the head of his Clergy, to exhibit his Accusations against the Apostle before ‖ Felix, the present Governour, who, unwilling to condemn, or absolve him, kept him still in Prison. Ananias was as yet High Priest, since it was he who commanded St. Paul to be smitten in the Mouth, and the Orator Tertullus to plead against him at Cæsarea.

11. But God soon reveng'd his Apostle, and fulfil'd his Prediction. He smote that whited Wall, who conceal'd his inveterate Hatred under the specious pretences of a religious Zeal. Agrippa II. took away his Priestly Dignity from him. Yet he had a great Interest; for he brib'd Albinus, who succeeded Felix, and did what he pleas'd at Court. But his Son was at last the cause of his ruin. This Son's name was Eleazar, and he was Captain of the Temple. The Assassins Seiz'd upon and carry'd him away, and refus'd to release him till Ananias had obtain'd of the Governour to enlarge Ten of their Comrades, who were in Jail, and by the Law ought to be put to death. Ananias ‖‖ redeem'd his Son by this means; but it prov'd so fatal to him, that the Assassins finding this easy method of releasing their Accomplices, seiz'd as often as they cou'd upon some of his Family, and then propos'd him an Exchange, which, Albinus, won by Presents, granted. Besides, Eleazar put himself at the head of another party, that forbid to offer any Victim for any that did not profess the Jewish Religion. So that the Emperour himself, for whom it was usual to offer some, was by that excluded. Some endeavour'd to oppose so needless an Innovation, which wou'd derive upon them the hatred both of the Romans, and all Foreigners. The High Priests themselves, that were concern'd in the offering of the Victims, oppos'd Eleazar, who depriv'd them of a considerable Profit; but he had the Power in his hands, and was Master of the Temple. Those that were for Peace beg'd some Assistance from Agrippa, who sent them Three Thousand Horse. They miserably butcher'd one another for Seven Days: But the Assassins joyning Eleazar, he became too strong for his Adversaries; and taking advantage of his Superiority, he barbarously pull'd down his Father's House; and this High Priest, who had hid himself with his Brother, in the upper part of the Palace, being discover'd, both were kill'd by the Factious, who had no regard, that they were so near related to their Ring-leader. God permitted, that this cruel Son shou'd stifle the impulses of Nature for a Man, who some time before had stifl'd those of Justice. Thus the Almighty smote that whited Wall.

* An. 49. † An. 52. ‖ Acts 23. & 24. 1. ‖‖ An. 66.

12. Ishmae

12. Iſhmael * took poſſeſſion of the High Prieſthood, which was wreſted from Ananias's hands; but this Man, far from reforming the Diſorders of the Clergy, rather increas'd them conſiderably. Joſephus, who had till that time conceal'd the Diſſolutions of the Prieſts, which occaſion'd their being ſo often depos'd, cou'd not forbear ſpeaking of them; becauſe the War, and the Diviſions in the Temple, and even among the Clergy then broke out; tho' the Clergy was particularly concern'd at that time to be ſtrictly united; becauſe they had a great many Enemies, and ſaw ſo often the Publick Peace and Tranquility diſturb'd. Covetouſneſs, which for a long time was remarkable in the High Prieſts, (ſince when they laid down their Office, they were always rich, and powerful, tho' they did not enjoy it † long) was the cauſe of a new Diſorder. For the High Prieſts that were depos'd, joyning with Iſhmael, pretended that the Tithes and Offerings, allotted to maintain the Inferiour Prieſts, belong'd to them. As there was a great many of theſe High Prieſt, and all pretended to have the Income of an Office, which, as they alledg'd, was only taken away from them out of Tyranny, or Injuſtice, the Prieſts that were under them muſt of neceſſity have ſtarv'd, had their pretenſions taken place. For there was not enough to maintain them all, and gratify the Covetouſneſs of ſome, and the Luxury of others. The Inferiour Clergy, back'd by the Chief of the People, mutined againſt their Leaders, and from words came to blows. Both ſides were attended with a Guard of Ruffians, for fear of a Surprize, and to ſurprize their Adverſaries. They fought in the || Streets of Jeruſalem, and even at the very Gates of the Temple. The High Prieſts ſent into the Country to take away by force the Tithes out of the Barns, and converted them to their own uſe, and ſo ſtarv'd the poor Clergy. Joſephus |||| doth not expreſly ſay, that it was for that Diſorder, that Felix ſent Forty Prieſts to Rome to give an account of their Behaviour; yet that is very likely; becauſe it happen'd about that time, and Joſephus was ſo well convinc'd of their Innocency, that he went Four Years after to ſee them in Priſon at Rome. And truly they were the Parties oppreſs'd; and it is no wonder that the High Prieſts had more Intereſt than they with the Governour, who perhaps thought to ſuppreſs that Tumult, by removing thoſe that appear'd the hotteſt: At leaſt, that Conjecture is more probable, than that of Baronius, who wou'd have theſe forty Priſoners, the ſame that had bound themſelves by an Oath to kill St. Paul, as if they had all been Prieſts, which the Apoſtolical Hiſtory ſays of none of them.

13. Iſhmael alſo fell out with Agrippa II. and went to Rome to go to Law with him; becauſe he pretended to pull down a Wall, which hinder'd the ſight from his Palace into the Temple. Iſhmael being back'd by Poppeus, who was a Jew, he obtain'd his requeſt: But whether his * Fidelity was ſuſpected, or ſome Complaint had been ſent from Judæa to Rome againſt him, he was detain'd as an Hoſtage, and Agrippa to revenge himſelf, turn'd him out of the High Prieſthood. His Head was afterwards cut off at Cyrene, but the occaſion of it is hitherto unknown. He left Three Children, who, warn'd by their Father's fault, left Jeruſalem when it was beſieg'd by Titus, and came into his Camp, where they were very kindly receiv'd. Joſeph the Son of Simon ſucceeded Iſhmael, but did not keep his Office long. Ananus his Succeſſor was of the Sect of the Saducees, a Man, that was cruel and inhumane, even according to the Verdict of his own Nation. He ſoon ſignaliz'd himſelf by the Murder of St. James. But far from gaining by that barbarous Action the Love and Eſteem of the Jews, it was abhorr'd, and the cauſe that he was degraded. He was High Prieſt but Three Months.

14. Not long after, this Office produc'd an open War, and was diſputed Sword in hand. Agrippa had put in Ananus's room, one Jeſus Son of Damneus; but attempting ſome Months after, to give his Office to Jeſus Gamaliel's Son, theſe two Competitors got their Friends together, and took up Arms. Old Ananias, who hop'd to make an advantage of that Diviſion, not only fomented it, but had alſo his Party, by whoſe power he pretended to be reſtor'd. What a Confuſion was that, to ſee the Church in Arms, to fight for an Employ, which God alone had a Right to give? Is it not plain, that the High Prieſthood as well as the Republick was going to ruin?

15. However, theſe were but the beginnings of their Calamities, altho' Jeruſalem was already fill'd with Blood, and Murders, by the Ambition of the Leaders, who ſet a very pernicious Example to the People. However, the Combatants being depos'd, and Matthias † put in their room, they preſum'd to make an open War againſt the Romans, and that compleated their deſtruction. Joſephus ſays ||, that Matthias was Theophilus's Son, and inſinuates in another place, that he was Son or Grand-ſon to Simon. There is in this ſomething, that cannot eaſily be unravell'd. Let it be what it will, the Rebellion broke during his High-Prieſthood, which he held but one Year. However, he had ſtill a great Intereſt with the People, and when the Zealots by their Barbarity made every body tremble, Matthias had credit enough to get Simon to be invited into the City, that he might with his Troops repreſs their Fury. But by his advice he only increas'd the Confuſion and Slaughter. For Simon prov'd more inhumane than the Zealots. Matthias, involv'd in a Calamity which he cou'd not remedy, was accus'd to ſide with the Romans, which was the wiſeſt Courſe that cou'd be taken, to ſave the People from being intirely deſtroy'd. Nevertheleſs, he was ſeiz'd upon that Suſpicion, and Simon, forgetting that he was admitted into the City by Matthias's Intereſt, kill'd Three of his Sons before his face, refus'd them Burial, which was the only thing which this wretched Father ask'd of him, and then had him murder'd. Thus the High Prieſts, who diſhonour'd their Function, and fomented Rebellion to maintain their Authority, were not long unpuniſh'd.

16. Another Alteration happen'd in the High Prieſthood, which cloſes up the Proofs of the enormous Corruption of that time. The Zealots broke into the Holy Place, drove out all the Families, out of which the High Prieſts were uſually taken out, and invented a new Method of Creating them. For they caſt lots upon one of the Twenty Four Diviſions, which David had made, and took from thence a Stupid and Ignorant Fellow, who was the more fit to comply with them. Since we are oblig'd to explain the Hiſtory of the Jews, and the different Steps whereby the High-Prieſthood was aboliſh'd, we muſt ſolve ſome Difficulties, that ariſe from this New Creation.

Firſt, We muſt not imagine, that Phanus, or Phannias, that ſtupid Man, whom the Zealots got out of the Countrey to make him High-Prieſt, was not of the Sacerdotal Race. Capel was deceiv'd in it, becauſe he follow'd the Latin Tranſlation of

* An. 58. † Joſeph. Ant. l. 20. c. 6. p. 696. || An. 58. |||| Joſeph. Vit. p. 999. * Idem de Bello, l. 7. c. 4. p. 949. † An. 66. || Joſeph. p. 700. & de Bello, l. 6. c. 15. p. 938.

Josephus, which positively affirms it, whereas that Historian only says, that he was unworthy * to exercise that Function. He was of the Division of Jakim; for so it is call'd in the First Book of Chronicles; and if there be some difference of Names in Josephus, it is † very inconsiderable, and may easily be corrected. This Division was compos'd of the Posterity of Aaron; but at the same time, very far from the High-Priesthood; because there was a great Difference between these Divisions; and to take a High-Priest out of this, was one of the Innovations, which the Zealots introduc'd in their Election. Their casting Lots upon him was another. God doubtless permitted this Innovation, and he who guided the Lot, made it fall on a Man wholly unqualify'd for that Employ, to shew plainly that he absolutely rejected the High-Priests, whose Office was soon to be abolish'd.

Secondly, this Phanus was made High-Priest. But this is contested, altho' Josephus gives him the Title, and observes, that before the Lot was cast, the Zealots had remov'd all the Families, out of which the High-Priests were commonly taken. This Observation had been needless, had not they design'd to make a New High Priest, contrary to the usual Form, and had they only chosen him Chief of his Division. Besides, they put the Holy Robe upon him, which the Zealots had secur'd, and this Garment was only given to the High-Priest. He was taught how to perform the Duties of his Office, which probably he did not know. Lastly, Josephus observes, that they acted a Farce. And indeed there was then but the Shadow of Priesthood; because God had withdrawn his Grace and Authority from it. However Josephus, who did go so far in this Mystery, had not reckon'd this Action among the enormous Crimes of the Zealots, had Phanus only acted as chief of a Division. The Difficulty, for we must not conceal it, arises from what Josephus says, that the Zealots constituted some unknown High-Priests, and of mean Extraction, that they might have some Accomplices of their Crimes. Phanus was not then the only One, that they took out of a distant Division, and from the Dunghill, to promote him to the greatest Dignity of the Priesthood. Yet History mentions but him. But this Silence is not so puzling as some imagine. For it is no wonder, that the seditious Zealots, who made a Tool of the High-Priesthood, often shifted it from one Man to another, that they might have the High-Priests more at their Devotion. When the Government was better settled, the Kings, Ethnarchs, and Heathen Governours, often left a Man but Three Months in that Office. But this Disorder increas'd, no doubt, when an insolent, and cruel Faction had all power in their hands, and the Priesthood was drawing to its last Period. So that they depos'd this Phanus, and put another in his room. But Josephus, who did not look upon these High-Priests as lawfully chosen, overlook'd the others appointed by the Zealots.

17. The greatest Difficulty lies in the Opposition, that was made to Phanus's Installation. The People at the Instigation of another High-Priest, nam'd Ananus, rose against the Zealots. This Ananus was chosen to command in Jerusalem, when the War against the Romans was resolv'd upon; and Officers appointed. Josephus represents him as a Wise Man, and the Oldest of all the High-Priests, that were depos'd; and the Man that cou'd have sav'd Jerusalem, if he had escap'd the Fury of the Zealots, and had his Counsel been follow'd. He cou'd bear neither the Prophanation of the Holy-place, nor the Election of Phanus by the Zealots: And therefore he endeavour'd to animate the People, and awaken them by his Exhortations. He offer'd to sacrifice himself to save the Glory of the Temple, gather'd some Forces together, and had beaten the Zealots out, if he had not been afraid to defile the Temple, by breaking open the Holy Gates, and introducing into it the People, that was imbrew'd with the Blood of their Enemies, and still in Arms. However this Man, so famous in his Nation, is scarce known. At least it can hardly be determin'd, which of the two High-Priests of that Name, he was. Shall we say, that Ananus, that pious and wise Governour of Jerusalem, was Annas, that put St. James to Death? But he was a Sadducee, to whom Josephus gives too bad a Character, to transform him so soon into a Man, who was the Darling of the People, and did what he pleas'd by his Eloquence. Add to this, that this Ananus, who was made High-Priest but in Sixty Two, cou'd not be the Eldest of all the High-Priests. So that we must ascend as far as Annas, Father-in-law to Caiaphas, who, tho' he liv'd as a Private Man since his Dismission, yet preserv'd an Affection for his Country. 1. Josephus hath mightily extoll'd this Annas, Father-in-law to Caiaphas, whose Family was always powerful. It is not then strange that he gives him some new Encomiums, when, being more in Years, he gave the People some prudent Counsels, and took with him part of the Command. For Josephus took the Government of the Two Galilees at the same time that Ananus took that of Jerusalem. 2. Even the Gospel represents Old Annas as a Man very much respected by the People, since Jesus Christ was led before him, before he was carry'd before the High-Priest. 3. He was the Eldest of all the High-Priests in the See of Jerusalem. His Age may be an Obstacle; since it can't be well thought, that a Man, who must have been above Seventy Years of Age, had Vigour enough to undertake the Command of the City. But in the Main, Josephus represents him as a Man already stricken in Years, and Older than all the rest. He might have more Vigour at that Age, and even be fitter for the Government; and his Old Age, distinguishing him from the others, oblig'd them to deferr him the Command in a time of Trouble, wherein every body pretended to rule. The Wisdom which Josephus ascribes him, and the Veneration of the People, which he led as he pleas'd, are to some new Arguments, that he must of necessity be an Old Man, different from the Sadducee High-Priest, who was in the Chair but Three or Four Years before: And none can pretend to this Character, the Annas of the Gospel. Thus the same Man, who condemn'd Jesus Christ, the true High-Priest, whose Priesthood did abolish the Levitical, and Death all the Victims; after he had been an Eye-witness of all the Disorders and Crimes, whereby, as by so many Steps, the High-Priesthood tended to its Ruin, saw it at last abolish'd. He was kill'd by the Idumæans, who, having sought a long time for him, at last found, and unmercifully murder'd him.

18. Thus ended the High-Priesthood; because God had no more occasion for those High-Priests, in whose room his Son had succeeded. Without enlarging upon Observations taken from the Christian Religion, two things may be observ'd on the manner, that this Office was abolish'd.

* Ἀνάξιος. Joseph. de Bello, l. 4. p. 872. † Josephus reads Ενλακειμ; read ὁ Ἰωακειμ, making of the ε & ν an ω, Ibid.

[A Catalogue of the 28 High-Priests, that liv'd and were depos'd, restor'd, and kill'd, from the Reign of Herod the Great, to the Destruction of Jerusalem.

High-Priests depos'd by Herod the Great.

1. Ananelus come from Babylon.
2. Aristobulus, Asmonæan, drown'd.
3. Ananelus restor'd, and depos'd a second time, and was succeeded by Jesus, Son of Phaber, also depos'd.
4. Simon, Herod's Father-in-law, depos'd.
5. Matthias, the Son of Theophilus, depos'd few days before Herod's Death.

High-Priests depos'd by Archelaus.

6. Joazar, Simon's Son, Uncle to Mariamne II.
7. Eleazar, Joazar's Brother, and Jesus Son of Sie succeeded him.

By Quirinus and Coponius.

8. Jesus, Son of Sie, turn'd out to make way for Joazar, who was restor'd; but this Joazar was at the same time depos'd, at the People's request.

By Gratus.

9. Ananus, Son of Seth, or Annas.
10. Ishmael, Son of Fabi.
11. Eleazar, Son of Annas.
12. Simon, Son of Camithus.

By Vitellius.

13. Joseph, Sir-nam'd Caiaphas.
14. Jonathas, Son of Annas.

By Agrippa I.

15. Theophilus, Son of Jonathas.
16. Simon Cantharus, Son of Simon I.
17. Matthias, Son of Annas.
18. Elionæus.

By Herod King of Chalcis.

19. Simon Cantharus had succeeded Elionæus; but was a second time depos'd by Herod.
20. Joseph, Son of Camydas.

By Agrippa II.

21. Ananias, Son of Nebedæus.
22. Ishmael, Son of Fabi.
23. Joseph Cabi, Son of Simon I.
24. Annas, or Ananus the Sadducee, the Murderer of St. James.
25. Jesus, Son of Damnæus.
26. Jesus, Son of Gamaliel.

By the Zealots.

27. Matthias, in whose Priesthood the War begun, and was kill'd.
28. Phannus, Phannias, or Phannase, chosen by Lot by the Zealots, in whose room they substituted
29. Others not known.]

First, there never were so frequent Alterations in the Priesthood, since Moses instituted it. The Jews had groan'd under the Yoak of the Greeks and Syrians, and their Condition shou'd have been more easy under that of the Romans, not only because they respected the Temple, to which the Masters of the Empire sent some Victims to be offer'd, and appear'd more indulgent to the Jews, till they had fill'd up the measure of their Sins; but also because under the Romans they had some Ethnarchs of their Religion, and even when Judæa was reduc'd into a Province, Herod, King of Chalcis, and Agrippa II. who both were Jews, obtain'd of Claudius the Administration of the Temple, and the Nomination of the High-Priests. However there never were so many changes in that Office, and perhaps never any so frequent in any other. Whether a Jew, or a Heathen had the Nomination of the High-Priests, one was scarce prefer'd, but he was turn'd out. There was no consistency in the Priesthood, whose Strength God had broken; and the Jews themselves are forc'd to acknowledge, that there was something Secret and Divine in this. The Kings always had a Power to depose the High-Priests; but they hardly made use of it once, or twice in the space of 1500 Years, that they reign'd. But here we find almost Thirty Dismissions from that Dignity, in the space of 100 Years. Since Herod's Reign, we don't see one High-Priest die in his Office, or if any died in it, it was a violent Death. The High-Priests being depos'd, that did not screen them from the hatred of the People, or the prosecution of the Romans: The Authority of this Office seem'd abolish'd, even in those that enjoy'd it. They cou'd neither keep, nor exercise it. They were the pastime of Men's Inconstancy and Caprice. Can we admire too much the odd, and strange Fate of the High-Priests, who preceeded the Destruction of the Temple? And what reason can be assign'd for so extraordinary a Change, without ascending to God and his Judgments?

19. It must be confess'd, that the Depravation of these High-Priests, arriv'd to the highest pitch of Excess. They were so rid by Covetousness, that they rob'd the Inferiour Priests of their usual Food, to inrich themselves. They minded nothing, but heaping Wealth, to bribe the Roman Governours, whose Protection they wanted. When they cou'd not buy it, these Men, whose Dignity wholly consisted to serve God, were seen to raise Factions, to stir up the People to rebel, to put themselves at the head of Armies to wage War; and undertake the Command and Government at Jerusalem; and in a Word, to provide for its Defence. When they had no Foreign War, they made one with one another. They fomented the old Hatred against the Samaritans, prompted People to Murder, took up Arms to wrest the High-Priesthood from one another, as if they fought for a Dignity that was purely Temporal. We must not wonder, that God did punish these Prophanations, that were so heinous. It is a most heavy and fatal Judgment of God, when the Clergy disgrace their Profession, and become profligate. Prophanation and Impenitency, necessarily draw publick and general Calamities after them. Such was the Condition of the Jewish Clergy, that begun by Crimes, and ended by the most dreadful Punishment that can be imagin'd.

20. There was another Spring of the Evils, that happen'd to that Church, which we have not as yet mention'd. It was the Division, and Multiplicity of Sects, that tore her to pieces. The Schism of Samaria was still in Being, and the Hatred of both Parties of that Nation was so great at the time of our Saviour, that they hardly convers'd one with another.

The Pharisees, by their relax'd Morality, and enervating the Severity of the Law, corrupted the People. Their Consciences, thus misled, willingly follow'd Doctors, who reconcil'd Religion with their Passions; and not only left the Motions of the Heart their full scope, but also flatter'd its Haughtiness, by assuring, that Man merited Heaven by his own Strength and good Works.

The

The Sadducees had invented a Religion for Perſons of Quality, who only mind the preſent, and will not have their Pleaſures diſturb'd by the affrighting Notions of Futurity. They taught, that God gave Rewards, and inflicted Puniſhments during this Life; but that the Soul dy'd with the Body, and that there was neither Spirits, nor Reſurrection, nor Judgment to come.

The Eſſenes ſeem'd to have more Devotion; but Pride, the moſt formidable of all Vices, is often hid under a ſeeming Auſterity. I have ſeen few profeſs'd Zealots, but were proud, and wou'd contemn thoſe that were like them. Thoſe Separations from humane Society ought always to be ſuſpected. People withdraw, that they may be obſerv'd; they are afraid not to be taken notice of in the Crowd. They write in Great Letters on their Garments, and at the Gate of their Monaſtries, that at ſuch an hour, they are to mortifie, and ſcourge themſelves, that every body may know it. But this is not the true Character of Piety.

The Herodians ſet up a Falſe, in the room of the True Meſſiah. Theſe Impoſtors, with their Notion of a Temporal Kingdom and Deliverance, cheated the People with a falſe Hope of Liberty. Thus Corruption and Miſery crowded on every ſide upon the Jewiſh Church. We deſign to enlarge on this Cauſe of the Decay of Judaiſm. But as the Hiſtory of all theſe Sects is long enough to make us loſe the Sight of the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, we refer it to the Continuation of the Firſt Book.

CHAP. VI.

The Third Step towards the Ruin of Jeruſalem. Diſorders caus'd by the different Factions of the People.

I. THE Zeal of the People for their Religion. II. This Religion alter'd by the Romans. III. A Maſſacre under Varus. IV. Bucklers conſecrated by Pilate to Tiberius. V. Caligula's Statue rejected. VI. The War of the Samaritans againſt the Jews, under Cumanus. VII. Felix uſes St. Paul ill, and kills the High-Prieſt. VIII. The Cruelties of Albinus, and Geſſius Florus. IX. The Diſorders occaſion'd by Robbers. X. Frequent Impoſters. XI. The Original of the Zealots. XII. Their enormous Crimes. XIII. Diviſions at Jeruſalem among thee Mutineers.

1. THE Jews were very zealous for their Religion and Temple. They were at a great Charge, and run the riſque of their Lives, to reſort thither every Year to worſhip God. The vaſt Number of thoſe, that offer'd Sacrifices there, can hardly be imagin'd. Their Worſhip was pure. For they worſhip'd neither Reſſemblance, nor Images in that place. The perpetual Sacrifice of the Evening and Morning, was never interrupted till the Eve before the City was taken. They continu'd to carry there the firſt Fruits and Offerings, for the Maintenance of the Prieſts; altho' they ſaw, that they were plunder'd by the High Prieſt, who appropriated them to himſelf, and let the others ſtarve. They thought with this Shadow of Religion, that God wou'd always protect their Nation, and that neither the City, nor Temple cou'd be deſtroy'd. A ſtrange Blindneſs! To imagine, that God will accept the appearances of Devotion, whilſt the eſſential part of the Law is neglected; and that he is oblig'd to maintain a Houſe, which is monſtrouſly profan'd. And indeed the Zealots made of the Temple a Receptacle of Robbers, a Slaughter-houſe; and God, who had no need of a Temple, or Sacrifices, wou'd not ſuffer it to ſtand.

We'll not make here an exact Hiſtory of all the Diſorders which the People committed. For we ſhou'd then be oblig'd to copy Joſephus, inſtead of ſupplying what is wanting in his Hiſtory. However, to give a general account of the means, which God employ'd to deſtroy this Nation, that he had ſo long protected, we'll diſtinguiſh five ſorts of Men, who concurr'd to the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; the Roman Troops, the Governours that were in Judæa, the Robbers, the Impoſtors and the Zealots.

2. The Romans being call'd to the Aſſiſtance, or rather to the Government of Judæa, by the Diviſion of the Aſmonæans, and the Exigency Herod was in, Religion ſuffer'd by his Auxiliary Troops, and by theſe imperious and hard Maſters. The Jews, ſince their return from the Captivity, cheriſh'd an inſuperable abhorrence for Images. They were ſcrupulous about them even to a Fault; ſince the march of Forces, carrying Eagles on their Standards, and at the Head of the Legions, put the People in an Uproar. However, Herod, to pleaſe the Romans, plac'd a Golden Eagle on the Gate of the Temple. The Zealots, being perſwaded that neither the Figure, nor reſemblance of any Animal, ought to be ſuffer'd in the Temple, and ſeeing Herod dangerouſly Ill, believ'd that it was time to revenge their injur'd Religion, and therefore with Hatchets hew'd down this Image. This Prince, enrag'd at this Affront offer'd him upon a pretence of Religion, had Malice and Vigour enough to condemn thoſe who had advis'd that Action, to be burn'd; and all the reſt to be beheaded. The People look'd upon them as Martyrs, fill'd the City with Outcrys and Lamentations, and ask'd Juſtice of his Son Archelaus, who, far from diſſembling, or diſapproving what his Father had done, order'd three thouſand Men to be murder'd, who were aſſembl'd in the Temple, where they quietly perform'd their Devotions, after they had repell'd ſome Troops that were ſent againſt them. Archelaus was afraid, that if he forgave the Affront offer'd to the Golden Eagle, Auguſtus wou'd believe, that he ſuffer'd the Majeſty of the Empire to be trampl'd upon, and refuſe him the Crown. Thus every thing was ſacrific'd to the Romans, and even at that time, a thouſand, and a thouſand living Victims were offer'd to * dead and inſenſible Images. Publick Shews were introduc'd; and Games, unknown before, were celebrated in the Emperour's Honour; this put the People in a ferment, which fear'd leaſt their Religion might be invaded by it, and Images conceal'd under the Preparations of a Feaſt. The Soldiers were the Cauſe of another Diſorder. For the Romans, who were afraid, leaſt the Jews, who gather'd together from all parts of Judæa, and the Eaſtern Provinces to celebrate the Paſſover, ſhou'd take then occaſion to riſe, kept at that time a Guard at the Gate of the Temple; and one of Cumanus's Soldiers, who was upon the

* Joſeph. de Bello, l. 1. & 2. c. 1. p. 776.

Guard, ſhew'd his Turpitude * to the Jews, to inſult them at a time when they thought of nothing but the Celebration of their Myſteries. They thought their Religion concern'd in that Affront. They ask'd that the Delinquent ſhou'd be put to Death; but before they obtain'd it, they arm'd themſelves with Stones and Clubs. Cumanus ſent a ſecond Detachment to ſuſtain that, which ſome mutinous young Men had attack'd furiouſly; and then they were forc'd to fly; they left the Temple in Diſorder, and as every one made haſt to get out, and the Soldiers, who kept the Porch, took that opportunity to revenge themſelves, almoſt Ten Thouſand were kill'd, or cruſh'd to death. Thus the Romans, who were us'd to another Religion, and glad to vilify that of the Jews, which was the only one of that kind in the World, being introduc'd among them, fill'd them with a furious Zeal, and incited their Minds to Rebellion.

3. But the Governours did more harm than the Soldiers. Judæa was often reduc'd into a Province; and by a particular Diſpenſation of Providence, almoſt all thoſe that were ſent thither, were ſo many Banditti, who ſtudy'd nothing elſe but how to enrich themſelves with the Spoils of their Government, and to deſtroy the Nation committed to their Charge, and they exaſperated the Jews to that degree, that, driven to Deſpair, they broke out into an open Rebellion, and haſten'd their Ruin.

And indeed, during Archelaus's Interregnum, who was gone to Rome to beg the Execution of his Father's Will, Sabinus the Emperor's Agent in Syria under Varus, went as ſoon as he cou'd to Jeruſalem, to take an Inventory of what Goods Herod had left there, and to ſeize upon all the Strong Holds. He was attended, not with a great Number of Soldiers, but Servants, who, being us'd to Plunder, did a great deal of Miſchief in Jeruſalem. The People aſſembl'd for the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, mutiny'd. But they were much more inrag'd, when they perceiv'd that the Soldiers had carry'd away about Six Thouſand Pounds out of the Treaſury. Sabinus was beſieg'd by the Mutineers. Varus came to his Aſſiſtance, ſuſtain'd by ſome Arabians, that Aretas had ſent him. The Diſorder was increas'd by theſe Robbers, who minded nothing but burning and getting Money. So that Varus was forc'd to diſmiſs them. He made himſelf Maſter of Jeruſalem, and ſcarce found any Reſiſtance there. He had Two Thouſand Perſons Crucify'd, put more in Priſon, and order'd his Forces to ſcour the Country, where they murder'd all thoſe that fell into their hands. Thence he march'd into Idumæa, where Ten Thouſand Men in Arms, were preparing to reſiſt him. But they gave way to his Troops. He pardon'd ſome, and puniſh'd others. However, it was ſo true, that Sabinus was the Cauſe of this Commotion, that he did not preſume to appear before Varus to juſtify himſelf; but withdrew when he heard that he was coming to his Aſſiſtance.

4. Pilate, who was Governour of Judæa Twelve Years, and by whoſe Order Jeſus Chriſt was Crucify'd, is pretty well known by our Goſpels. He was ſcarce arriv'd, but he plac'd in the Temple ſome Bucklers, conſecrated to Tiberius. Joſephus affirms, that the Images that were on the Bucklers offended the Jews, and oblig'd them to ſend Deputies to Tiberius, after they found all their Remonſtrances to Pilate fruitleſs. However, Philo †, making Agrippa I. ſpeak, aſſures, that there was no Figure upon theſe Bucklers; but that the Jews were angry to find upon them, the Name of the Perſon to whom they were conſecrated. ‖ Scaliger hath prefer'd the Opinion of Joſephus, and even blam'd Philo, becauſe it was a common Thing, to ſend a Buckler to Princes as a Token of Gratitude. The Macchabees had done it. There was ſome time a Flower, or a Crown engraven upon it. It was too the Cuſtom of Victorious Kings, to ſend ſome to the Temple of Jeruſalem, and they were there receiv'd, without inquiring into the Religion of the Giver. But Scaliger did not give a due Attention to Philo's Narrative. The Bucklers, which Pilate reſolv'd to hang in the Temple, were conſecrated to Tiberius; and all thoſe, that were receiv'd into the Temple of Jeruſalem, were to be conſecrated to the Living God. Pilate made Tiberius a kind of a God, to whom he preſented his Oblation, and at that time they erected Altars to Princes, and ſet up their Statues in Temples, to flatter them. Pilate did conſecrate ſome Bucklers, in that of Jeruſalem, to honour the Valour of his Prince; and the Jews cou'd not bear this aſſociating of the Creature with God. Tiberius's Order, to carry theſe Bucklers to Cæſarea, into a Temple dedicated to him, proves plainly this Conjecture. Pilate was very inflexible at that Juncture. For he wou'd never lay aſide his Project, tho' he ſaw the People in a Fury, and all the Symptoms of a dreadful Sedition. Beſides, he plunder'd Judæa, mingl'd the Blood of the Galileans with that of their Sacrifices; in a Word, he acted with ſo much Barbarity againſt the Samaritans, who were over-reach'd by a Cheat, and who attempted nothing againſt the Government, that Vitellius, Governour of Syria, to whom Complaints were exhibited againſt him, oblig'd him to go to Rome, to vindicate himſelf. Tradition tells us, that he was baniſh'd to Vienna, where he kill'd himſelf, becauſe he cou'd not bear his overwhelming Grief.

5. Petronius, ſent into Judæa to place Caligula's Statue in the Temple, was more moderate; whether he follow'd his own Temper, or was afraid to be overborn by the Multitude of Jews, that came from the Eaſt, to celebrate the Feaſt of the Paſſover. It was a dangerous Thing to ſuſpend the Execution of an Order of that nature. Nevertheleſs, when he ſaw the Reſolution of the Jews, he conſented to wait for the Succeſs of their Deputation, to the Prince. A wiſe Governour doth often a great deal of Service by his Moderation. It is dangerous to drive People to Deſpair. A Sedition always occaſions the loſs of Blood, and Subjects. When once it breaks out, it is not ſoon quell'd; but infects the Neighbourhood, and is attended with laſting and diſmal Diſorders. But People love to make their Court to haughty Princes, and prefer their Paſſions to the Publick Good. Petronius was not of that Temper; he did not execute his Maſter's Order, becauſe he was afraid to draw a furious Storm upon him; and thereby prevented in the Empire that Slaughter and other Calamities, which are the common Effects of Inſurrections.

A Famine ravag'd Judæa ‖‖ under Fadus, who, after Agrippa's Death, was ſent by Claudius, Governour of that Province. It was the Famine foretold by Agabus in the Hiſtory of the Acts. Jeruſalem had been deſolate, without Inhabitants, had not the Queen of Adiabene, who reſided there, given vaſt Alms to the People; and had not the Jews of Antioch aſſiſted their Brethren in their Diſtreſs. Fadus had ſome unpleaſant Orders for the Cities of Cæſarea and Samaria; but the Emperour, being appeaſed by their Deputies, revok'd them. There was a Sedition notwithſtanding their urgent Calamity. But the Governour ſuppreſs'd the Mutineers and Robbers, who ravag'd the Country: And this cou'd not be done without Blood-ſhed. An Apoſtate was afterwards

* Προσέτριψε τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τὴν ἕδραν, poſteriora ſua vertit. Joſeph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 11. p. 794. † Philo de Legat. p. 799. 800. ‖ Scaliger in Euſeb. p. 172. ‖‖ An. 44.

ſent

ſent their Governour. It was one Alexander * Nephew to Philo Judæus, who had ſacrific'd his Religion to his Intereſt; but contrary to the old Cuſtom, he did not prove a bad Governour. His Government was ſhort, and he made way for Cumanus, under whom horrible Barbarities were committed.

6. It was in this Governour's time, that the Soldiers Inſult, already mention'd, did happen, and which occaſion'd the Death of Ten Thouſand Jews; and ſome reckon that Thirty Thouſand periſh'd † on that fatal Day. It was too in his time, that the Baggage of one of the Emperor's Slaves, being robb'd by ſome High-way-men, within Five Leagues of Jeruſalem, a Party was ſent into the Country, who plunder'd, and unmercifully burnt all that fell into their hands. A Soldier, finding the Books of Moſes, tore them to pieces and burn'd them. The Jews then cou'd contain themſelves no longer. They believ'd, that the Romans did not deſign to keep any Meaſure with them, ſince they ſo inſolently tore the Law. They came in a Body to Cæſarea, and ask'd Juſtice of Cumanus; but after ſuch a manner, as inſinuated that they were reſolv'd, that they wou'd do it themſelves, if he did not grant their Demands. He was oblig'd to comply, and to put the Soldier to Death. But he only waited for an Opportunity to revenge himſelf, and he ſoon found one. The Samaritans, having a Quarrel with the Jews, theſe plunder'd their City. Cumanus || came to their Aſſiſtance, diſpers'd the Victors after he had kill'd a great Number of them, and maliciouſly ſuffer'd this War to laſt, that this Nation, which hurry'd to its Ruin, might be weaken'd by it.

Tacitus relates, that Cumanus was Governour of Galilee, and Felix of Samaria; and that theſe two Governours did not give themſelves the trouble to put a Stop to theſe Diſorders, which had inflam'd all Judæa, had not the Governour of Syria taken Cognizance of it. But he did it with ſo much Partiality, that he made Felix ſit with the Judges, whilſt Cumanus was as a Criminal at the Bar. He cou'd not avoid being condemn'd, ſince his Enemy was his Judge. Some are in ſuſpence between Tacitus and Joſephus. The Learned |||| Pearſon endeavours to reconcile them, by making Felix twice Governour of Judæa, the Firſt time with Cumanus, and the Second after his Condemnation. But beſides, that it is more natural to believe Joſephus, who ought to have been better vers'd in the Hiſtory of his Nation than a Foreigner. Tacitus ſhares the Government of Judæa between two; and yet it was commonly given but to one. Add, that Tacitus was miſtaken about the time of theſe Diſorders. For he places them in one and the ſame Year * as if they had begun then, and ſoon ended afterwards. However, they laſted a long while, and were not quaſh'd but in the Year 53. by the Condemnation of Cumanus; which alone ſufficiently proves, that theſe Governours unmercifully abus'd their Power over the Jewiſh Nation; ſince their Superiours were ſo often oblig'd to reſtrain them.

7. After Cumanus was condemn'd for his Miſgovernment; Felix ſucceeded him. He at firſt employ'd his Time to make love. He debauch'd Druſilla, Daughter to Agrippa I. who was marry'd to the King of Emeſa, and elop'd from her † Husband for his ſake. Tertullus, pleading before him, againſt St. Paul, prais'd him for the Quietneſs, which the Nation enjoy'd under him; and it muſt be own'd that he did ſome Good, ſince he curb'd the Incurſions of the Robbers, who laid waſte this Province. For he ſeiz'd upon their Leader, who for Twenty Years had committed ſeveral barbarous Robberies. However, he was not Proof againſt Bribery; ſince his kind Uſage to St. Paul, and frequent Converſation with him, proceeded only from his hope, that the Apoſtle wou'd redeem his Liberty with a Preſent: And he left him in Bonds, becauſe Money was wanting. Beſides, he ſuborn'd ſome Aſſaſſins, who, by his Order, murder'd the High-Prieſt; becauſe he often upbraided him with his Marriage to Druſilla, and his hard Uſage to the Nation. What Remedies he apply'd to the Troubles, which increas'd every Day, were fitter to aggravate, than cure. He fell with his Forces upon the People, that was aſſembl'd at the Foot of the Mount of Olives. There happen'd a Commotion at Cæſarea, between the Jews and Syrians, about the Privileges, which they were to have in that City, which was built by Herod. Both Parties coming to Blows, he order'd his Soldiers to advance, and kill'd a great many Jews who were obſtinately bent to fight. He afterwards ſent both Parties to plead their Cauſe before Nero; but the Jews loſt it, and their Freedom of the City of Cæſarea; which was a terrible Blow to them. To conclude, when Felix was recall'd, the Chief Men of the Nation ſent ſome Deputies to Rome, to exhibit their Complaints againſt him; and we are told, that he had been puniſh'd for his Crimes, had not his Brother Pallas, who was Nero's Favourite protected him. Thus the Roman Governours continu'd to pillage, and deſtroy this Nation, which, on the other hand, by their haſty and impatient Temper, often drew ſeveral Calamities upon themſelves. When St. Paul pleaded before Felix, he ſays, that he had been of many Years a Judge unto the Nation of the Jews; which muſt be underſtood of Five Years, or thereabouts. For he came into his Government in the Year 53. after Cumanus was ſhamefully turn'd out. Now St. Paul pleaded in 58. and Felix, who was recall'd Two Years after, left Judæa, but the Sixtieth Year of the Chriſtian Æra.

8. The two laſt Governours of Judæa were ſtill more || cruel than their Predeceſſors. Feſtus had ſome deſign to pleaſe the People, and therefore he continu'd St. Paul a Priſoner. But his time was but ſhort; and this Province after his Death, falling into the hands of Albinus, underwent ſome new Calamities. Covetouſneſs was his prevailing Paſſion, and he omitted nothing to gratify it. He doubl'd the Taxes; and the Law Suits, which private Men carry'd before his Tribunal, gave him a pretence to ſeize upon their Eſtates. The Robbers, that committed ſo many Outrages, and Barbarities, were ſure of his Protection, provided they had Money to buy it. Criminals obtain'd their Enlargement, if they were Rich; and none were Guilty, but thoſe that wanted Money. The Impunity of theſe Villians augmented both their Number and Inſolence. Several Companies, with a Leader to head them, were ſeen in the City, ranſacking the Houſes, and murdering thoſe that made any Reſiſtance. No body durſt complain, and the moſt Cunning were thoſe, who courted thoſe Thieves to avoid their Depredations. However, Albinus was miſs'd, and regretted; becauſe his Succeſſor was yet a worſe Man than he. The firſt conceal'd his Avarice, pity'd the Citizens, and complain'd himſelf, that he had not Forces enough to put a Stop to the Diſorders, which he fomented underhand. But Geſſius Florus, who came in his Place, exercis'd |||| his Barbarity, and Extorſions without Art, and Diſſimulation. One only ſtrip'd ſome private Perſons, but the other declar'd War againſt the whole Nation, and, as if he was reſolv'd to ruin it, he did what cou'd be done to exaſperate the Jews. He

* An. 46. † An. 48. || An. 52. |||| Annal. Paul. an. 53. p. 13. * An. 52. † An. 53. || An. 60. |||| An. 64.

plunder'd

plunder'd the Cities and Towns, and that openly too: He made ſome Robbers pillage what his Soldiers cou'd not carry away, upon condition that he ſhou'd come in for a Share. Cleopatra, his Wife, help'd him to make this Havock, and ſtill inflam'd his Greedineſs, which was of it ſelf but too intenſe. He carry'd it ſo far, that thoſe Wiſe-men, who foreſaw the Conſequences of it, took care to withdraw and forſake Judæa. Ceſtius, Governour of Syria, coming to Jeruſalem, Three Hundred Thouſand Perſons petition'd to him againſt Florus, who only laugh'd at them, becauſe he was ſure to elude thoſe Complaints; and he was not miſtaken. For Ceſtius only aſſwag'd the Heat of the People with ſoft Words, and went away. This Governour of Syria, muſt not be confounded with that of Judæa. Euſebius ſeems to do it upon a Manuſcript of Joſephus, which had been corrupted. Yet one was call'd Geſſius Florus, whom Euſebius hath chang'd into Ceſtius; and the other was Ceſtius Gallus. The Troubles were greater after the departure of the Governour of Syria. A Gentleman of Cæſarea, built ſome Shops near a Synagogue; the Jews * offer'd him a large Sum of Money to leave off the Work, and buy the Ground of him; but he refuſing them, they gave Florus near † Fifteen Hundred Pounds, to put a ſtop to the Building. He took the Money, and went to Samaria. A Syrian at the ſame time, ſacrific'd a Bird before that Synagogue. This was enough to make them take up their Arms, but the Jews being much the weaker, were forc'd to quit the City, and carry their Books along with them. Florus, to whom theſe Fugitives complain'd, charg'd them with it as a Crime. Jeruſalem was in an Uproar at this Accident. But Florus having taken away about ‖ Three Thouſand Pounds, out of the Publick Treaſury; the Citizens loſt all manner of Patience. They exclaim'd againſt the Governour, who came at the Head of ſome Forces, and, having refus'd all the Satisfaction that was offer'd him, he kill'd all the Noble Men and Commoners, that he found in the Market place. The Tumult grew greater, at the Approach of the Cohorts, deſign'd to ſtrengthen the Garriſon, and which, being receiv'd with a great deal of Civility, wou'd ſhow none, They fought, and the Romans after a long Reſiſtance had their Throats cut; then begun the War, that occaſion'd the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. Florus did more than any body towards it; ſince, far from quelling thoſe Troubles, he rather increas'd them. He wanted nothing but a Rebellion of the People, and an open War, that he might thereby conceal his Extorſions, and Cruelties. Scaliger reckons, that the War begun in the Year 65. becauſe he did not calculate well the Years of Herod; but it ought to be deferr'd till the Year following.

9. The Robbers were another ſpring of Misfortunes and Deſolation. The Situation of Judæa was very favourable to them; for beſides, that it hath a great many Hills, Mountains, Woods, and deep and hollow Roads, when they were purſu'd, they cou'd eaſily fly into the Deſarts. Arabia in the Neighbourhood, full of Banditti, was ſtill a more ſecure Place of Retreat. However, there never were ſo many High-way-men, as in the time that we now examine. It was not a Gang of private Freebooters, that prey'd upon Travellers; but ſome experienc'd Leaders, at the Head of Two or Three Thouſand Men, who liv'd by moroding, making inroad, as Jephthah had done, before he became Judge of Iſrael. They tickl'd the People, with the hopes of ſhaking off the Roman Yoak, and recovering their Liberty by force of Arms. All the looſe, and idle Fellows, that hated Labour, liſted with them. So that it is not ſtrange, that their Number increas'd, notwithſtanding the Care of the Governours, who had an Intereſt to give them no Quarter, to ſecure thereby the Publick Tranquility. They were ſometimes ſo lucky, that they follow'd that villainous Courſe ſeveral Years, before they were taken. Eleazar, ‖‖‖ one of their formidable Commanders, had driven that Trade for Twenty-Years together, when he was ſent to Rome, and he was rather taken by Treachery than Force. For they broke their Word with him. After Albinus had ſuffer'd himſelf to be brib'd by all thoſe, that had a mind to redeem their Lives, and pardon'd a great many of thoſe Robbers; yet he found Fourteen Hundred Criminals in the Priſons, whom he divided into two Brigades, and oblig'd them to kill one another, to divert the People. Nay their Inſolence was ſo daring, that they kill'd in Jeruſalem * Ananias the High-Prieſt, who had hid himſelf with his Brother to avoid their Fury. John of Giſcala, one of thoſe great Robbers, after he had led that life for a long time, at the Head of Four Hundred pick'd Men, joyn'd with the Mutineers of Galilee; and having inrich'd himſelf, when he had the Inſpection of ſome Works, he arm'd even One Hundred Thouſand Men, againſt Joſephus, whom he accus'd to hold a Correſpondence with the Enemy, that he might drive him out of the Government, and ſucceed him himſelf. Simon, another Leader of Robbers, after he had plunder'd the Richeſt Houſes, finding himſelf purſu'd, fled into Idumæa, where he caus'd new Troubles, by forcing the People to take up Arms againſt him, and other Jews. There was a ſecond Order of Ruffians call'd Aſſaſſins. They walk'd the Streets of Jeruſalem, arm'd with Daggers hid under their Gowns, and kill'd the more ſecurely, becauſe they were the Firſt that complain'd of the Murders, which they had committed. Felix made uſe of ſome of theſe, to aſſaſſinate Jonathan, the High-Prieſt. How many Murders? How many Crimes? Is this the Character of the Holy Nation; and the Choſen People? This ſhews plainly, that they were not then ſo; and that by their Crimes they were paving the way to God's Judgments, and the moſt aſtoniſhing Vengeance, that ever was taken.

10. The Impoſtors made up a third ſort of People, that compleated the Ruin of this Nation. As every body expected the Meſſiah at that time; or elſe as it was eaſy to impoſe upon a Nation exaſperated, in a Ferment, and weary of the ill Treatment they receiv'd; a great many Cheats appear'd, who were follow'd by a credulous Multitude; one gather'd them together, upon pretence of diſcovering the Holy Veſſels, which Moſes hid under Mount Garizim. Theudas, but not he mention'd in the Acts of the Apoſtles, pretended to be a Prophet, and attempted to make the People paſs † the Jordan, by as great a Miracle as that of Joſhuah, when the Waters of that River were divided. Ten Years after an Egyptian, but a Jew by Religion, boaſting too of his Gift of Prophecie, led Thirty Thouſand Men upon the Mount of Olives, to ſee from thence the Walls of Jeruſalem fall down, that this City being open, he might enter into it, drive out the Romans, and govern the Nation. Joſephus makes him a Magician; but I do not know why; unleſs it be becauſe he came from Egypt: For it doth not appear, that he perform'd any Prodigies; and if he pretended to any, he made uſe of the Name of God ‖, ſince he gave himſelf out for one of his Prophets. A Magician * drew after him, in the Wilderneſs † abundance of People, to whom he promis'd a general Deliverance from all Calamities.

* An. 66. † 8 Talents. ‖ 17 Talents. ‖‖‖ Joſeph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 12. p. 796. * Id. c. 18. p. 812.
† An. 45. ‖ An. 55. * Joſeph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 12. p. 779. † An. 60.

Had

Had theſe Impoſtors only play'd upon the People's Credulity, the Miſchief had not been great. The Jews are not the only Men, that have been impos'd upon by falſe Prophets, who, to comfort them under their Sufferings, promis'd them a ſpeedy Deliverance. For all thoſe that are wretched, are fond even of the Shadow of Proſperity: It dazles them, and they run after it. But the Jews were in ſuch Circumſtances, that their Credulity was puniſh'd as a Capital Crime. The Governours look'd upon thoſe Meetings, not only as ſome innocent Sighs after Liberty, but alſo, as ſo many Conſpiracies and Deſigns, to revolt againſt the Romans. And therefore they never fail'd to make ſome conſiderable Detachments, who fell upon theſe Aſſemblies, put the Impoſtors to death, and did not leave off killing, till their Fury was glutted. Therefore St. Paul, who appear'd before Felix, in whoſe time the Egyptian Impoſtor was ſurpriz'd, and put to death, took a particular care to juſtify himſelf, on the ſcore of tumultuous Meetings, and to prove to him, that he had taught peaceably, and that the Broil was occaſion'd by ſome Strangers come from Aſia. It is not ſtrange, that our Saviour was not accus'd, for thoſe Thouſands which he had taught, and fed in the Deſart; and that no Soldiers were ſent after him, to diſperſe that Multitude. For there were Two Reaſons for it; One, that Chriſt was commonly attended by only Twelve Fiſhermen, and ſome Women; and that the Crowd that followed him was unarm'd; The Other, that, as there was not ſo general a tendency to Rebellion in Judæa, in the time of our Saviour, as after his Death, when God forſook that Nation, the Governours were not ſo ſevere, and ready to ſuppreſs popular Aſſemblies, that were only intended for Inſtruction: Whereas the Impoſtors gave occaſion to ſuſpect their Deſigns, and thereby expos'd their Diſciples to be maſſacred.

11. The Zealots were another Body, more terrible than theſe laſt. They deriv'd their Original from Judas, ſpoken of in the Acts of the Apoſtles, where he is call'd Galilean, altho' he was born in Gamala, on the other ſide of Jordan. Upon Quirinus his coming to ſettle the Tribute, that was to be paid to the Romans, and to make for that purpoſe an Eſtimate of the Eſtates and Moveables of the Jews, this Man joyn'd with a Phariſee, whoſe name was Sadoc, to perſwade the People that they were to acknowledge no Maſter but God; and that they wou'd be guilty of a Crime, to pay the Tribute, which the Romans exacted. They ſoon form'd a Party, which Joſephus reckon'd as the Fourth Sect of the Jews, altho' they held no peculiar Tenet, and in every thing elſe agreed with the Phariſees. Judas was ſoon cut off, and his Followers diſpers'd: But he left Three Sons, Heirs to his mad Zeal. James and Simon, attempted to revive that Party in the Reign of Claudius; but Alexander * a Jewiſh Renegado, who was then Governour of Judæa, ſpoil'd their Deſign, by crucifying them. Manahem, his third Son, having ſeiz'd upon Maſſada, took the Arms which Herod had put into the Caſtle; gave them to his Followers, and boldly beſieg'd Jeruſalem. He tumbl'd down a Tower that ſtop'd him; and had taken the City, had not the Beſieg'd built a Wall behind that Tower. He then took upon him the State of a King, and went in a Sumptuous Apparel to worſhip in the Temple. But ſome of his Countrymen, found that he excited them to revolt againſt the Romans, and to become the Tyrant of their Nation, and to be ſubject to none but to God. It was thought that his Death wou'd quaſh the Sedition; and therefore he was attack'd in the Temple; and altho' he at firſt eſcap'd, yet at laſt he fell into the hands of his Enemies, who put him to a cruel death. Eleazar, Grandſon to Judas, the Galilean, following † his Uncle, and Grand-father's Steps, diſtinguiſh'd himſelf among the Aſſaſſins and Zealots. He ſpar'd none that wou'd not ſide with him; or who, wiſely foreſeeing the intire Ruin of their Nation, wou'd prevent it by Capitulating with the Romans. He was the moſt Fortunate, and Ableſt of their Leaders, and maintain'd the War, even after the taking of Jeruſalem. For having ſhut himſelf, with his Accomplices, into the Caſtle of Maſſada, he there held out a Siege till the 72*d* Year of Jeſus Chriſt. Sylva, the Roman General, who was left to ſubdue the Remains of the Rebels, rais'd ſome Mounts of a prodigious height, before he cou'd make a Breach in the Caſtle-Walls. But having beaten them down with his Machines, he found that the Rebels had rais'd behind them a Mount, which cou'd not be ſhook. But the Romans went ſo abruptly to ſet Fire to it, that Eleazar's Courage fail'd him; or rather, he became furious; for he perſwaded Nine Hundred Perſons, that were beſieg'd with him, to kill one another, to avoid falling into the hands of the Romans. They begun by the Women and Children; and when the Execution was over the Romans came in, and found Two Women and Five Children hid in a Cave, who told them this diſmal Tragedy, whereby the War was ended. This is the Original of the Zealots, and the Character of their Leaders.

12. Theſe committed all manner of Crimes, upon a pretence of reſtoring the Jews to their Antient Liberty. Veſpaſian, having reduc'd Galilee ||; all the ſeveral Gangs of Mutineers, Robbers, Aſſaſſins and Zealots joyn'd at Jeruſalem, to defend the Place againſt the Romans. The Zealots ſeiz'd upon ſome of the Royal Blood, whom they accus'd of having a deſign to betray the City to the Enemy, and notwithſtanding their Quality and Innocence, took away their Lives. When they perceiv'd, that the People, ſtirr'd up by the High-Prieſts, was riſing againſt them, they ſeiz'd upon the Temple; and the Holy Place then became the Theatre of Civil War, till it was burn'd down to the Ground. John of Giſcala joyn'd with them, that he might be their Commander, and perſwaded them to call in the Idumæans to their Aſſiſtance. And indeed one Day, that it lighten'd and thunder'd prodigiouſly, the Zealots march'd out of the Temple, and open'd the Gates of the City to the Idumæans, who fill'd it with Blood and Slaughter. They confin'd the Nobility, and the Youths, that were fit to bear Arms; and upon their refuſal to joyn with them, they ſpeedily, and barbarouſly murder'd to the Number of Twelve Thouſand Men. Zachariah the Son of Baruc, was one of thoſe, whom they put to Death with more Solemnity, by reaſon of his Merit and Birth. I can't imagine what induc'd Janſenius to ſay, that this Zachariah is the Man mention'd by Chriſt in the Goſpel, as if the Jews were one day to anſwer for his Blood. For the Zachariah, named by our Lord, muſt have been dead; ſince he only ſpoke of thoſe Holy Men, that preceeded his Oeconomy. So that he hath no reaſon to make our Saviour foretel what was to come, ſince he only related what had happen'd. Beſides, the Zachariah, kill'd juſt before the Siege of Jeruſalem, was one of thoſe Unbelievers, who had rejected the Meſſiah; why then ſhou'd the Jews anſwer more for his Blood, than for that of Antipas, Sophas, or Levias, that were of the Royal Family, and put alſo to Death by the Zealots? There is no ground to conjecture, that this Zachariah was a Chriſtian. For, not to mention that the Chriſtians, who foreſaw the Siege of Jeruſalem, were already retir'd to Pella, Joſephus, who relates relates his Murder, gives no reaſon to ſuſpect, that the Zealots were chaf'd with a Zeal for their Religion, and a Hatred for Chriſtianity. But they had a mind to plunder his Wealth, and were afraid, leaſt he ſhou'd head the People to drive them out. No Chriſtian was at that time in a Condition to attempt that. In a Word, they accus'd him of keeping a Correſpondence with the Romans, and they appointed him Seventy Judges, in imitation of the Grand Sanhedrim, who had Courage enough to abſolve him. But the Zealots kill'd him, and with the flat of their Swords drove away the Judges. Joſephus obſerves, that the Zealots were arriv'd to that pitch of Barbarity, that People were not allow'd either to ſhed Tears, or to bury their Dead.

*Joſeph. p. 690. † Joſeph. de Bello, l. 7. c. 28. p. 985. || An. 67.

13. This Party fell together by the Ears; John of Giſcala, Captain of the Robbers, and afterwards of the Zealots, was in the Temple, at the head of Six Thouſand Galileans, and allow'd them to do what they wou'd, that he might the better have them at his diſpoſal. Eleazar, who had formerly been Commander of theſe Zealots, weary to have a Maſter, or an Equal, ſeiz'd upon the inward part of the Temple, with Two Thouſand and Four Hundred Men, and wag'd War with his Competitor. He had the Advantage of the Place. For he fought his Enemies from on high, and they cou'd not reſiſt him but with Machines of a new Invention, made out of beams of Cedar, brought from Mount Libanus before the War, to repair the Temple. He fed his Soldiers with the Firſt Fruits, and Offerings, which were ſtill brought and conſecrated to God. But John of Giſcala, had another diſadvantage. For on the ſide of the City, he was beſieg'd by Simon, another Captain of Robbers, already mention'd. However, he made a vigorous Defence. When Eleazar, who had but a handful of Men, fell upon him from the top of the Temple; he did not diſturb the City. But when this Enemy was quiet, he came down with his Soldiers upon Simon, and contriv'd matters ſo well, that he carry'd away ſome Proviſions to ſubſiſt. In what a miſerable Condition was the People, and City of Jeruſalem, to be thus torn by all theſe Factions, at the very time that Titus was marching to Beſiege it?

CHAP. VII.

Whether Abgarus, King of Edeſſa, deſign'd to declare War againſt the Jews, and take Jeruſalem, to revenge Jeſus Chriſt.

I. Euſebius's Narrative. II. That there is a Neceſſity to examine it. III. An Account of Edeſſa and its Kings. IV. The Proofs alledg'd for Euſebius's Narrative. V. The Encomium given that Hiſtorian to no purpoſe. VI. Chriſt's Letter ſhou'd be Canonical. VII. Mr. de Tillemont's Remarks on this Letter confuted. VIII. Edeſſa Subject to the Romans. Medals that prove it. IX. How its Princes were call'd Kings. X. A Fault in the Publick Records, concerning the Names of Thomas, and Thaddæus. XI. The Æra of the Edeſſenes, examined. XII. An objection againſt this Æra. XIII. A Correction of the Paſſage of Euſebius, about that Event. XIV. A Difficulty ariſing from the Calling of the Gentiles. XV. The Project of a War with the Jews a meer Rhodomontado. XVI. This Project is falſe.

1. THE Jews, according to Euſebius, by Crucifying our Saviour, had already made a King of the Oſrhoene, their mortal Enemy, who had a mind to fall upon them with all his Army, in order to exterminate them; and this Prince was Abgarus, King of Edeſſa, * who reſolv'd to declare War againſt the Jews, and deſtroy Jeruſalem, and the whole Nation, to puniſh them for having Crucify'd the Son of God; but he did not purſue his Deſign, becauſe he was afraid of the Romans. This Prince writ to the Son of God, to deſire him to retire into his City, and ſhelter himſelf there, from the Perſecution of the Jews. In all likelihood he offer'd him half of his Crown; ſince he aſſur'd him, that his City wou'd be big enough for them both. And indeed he did not think that Chriſt, perſecuted by the Jews, had a Retinue large enough to fill it. So that he promis'd to promote him to a higher Dignity, than he enjoy'd in Judæa, and to ſhare his Throne and Kingdom with him, tho' it was not very ſmall. But our Lord's deſign to perform his Father's Will, and the Redemption of Mankind, hinder'd him from flying to a ſecure Place. He was oblig'd to remain expos'd to the Perſecution of the Jews, that by his Crucifixion, they might fill up the meaſure of their Crimes.

2. Criticks have long ago queſtion'd this Project of the King of Edeſſa, as well as the truth of his Letter to Jeſus Chriſt. But as Euſebius affirms, that he took that Story from the Archives of the Church of Edeſſa, ſeveral Learned Men † maintain that his Narrative is true. If this Fact is true, we ought to add this Supplement to Joſephus, who ſays nothing of it; if it is falſe, we are oblig'd to confute it. This concerns the Jews; ſince this Project of a Heatheniſh King, who ſaw clearer than they, wou'd make them aſham'd. And ‖ ſince it is ſuſpected, that we believe, that this Relation is true, it is reaſonable, that we ſhou'd explain our ſelves in clearer terms, than we have done in another place ‖‖.

3. Edeſſa is a City of Meſopotamia, ſituate on the Banks of a River, as yet ſeen in Medals. Some * have fanſy'd Euphrates to be this River. But Edeſſa is one days Journey from it; and that River is the Scyrtus, which doth a great deal of miſchief, by its frequent Inundations. And indeed part of the Churches were carry'd away, and a great many of its Inhabitants drown'd, in the Reign of Juſtin, who re-built it, and call'd it Juſtinopolis; but that name is ſince alter'd. For it is now call'd Ourfa, but we'll call it by its ancient Name of Edeſſa. That City had a King of its own, ever ſince that the Arabians, taking advantage of the Diſpute of the Seleucidæ, concerning the Inheritance of their Father Antiochus, ſeiz'd upon it, and erected there a New Kingdom, whoſe Princes commonly bore the Name of Abgarus. One of them enter'd into an Alliance with the Romans, in the time of Pompey; but he betray'd them, deliver'd their Legions to the Parthians under Craſſus, which made this King be thought the Chief Inſtrument of that Misfortune.

4. One of his Poſterity writ to Chriſt, and was afterwards fully converted. Nay, Mr. Vaillant hath publiſh'd a Catalogue of the Succeeding Kings of Edeſſa, all bearing the Name of Abgarus, and were Chriſtians even in the Firſt Century. Their Subjects too

* Euſeb. Hiſt. l. 1. p. 32. † Cave Hiſtoria Literaria Abgar. p. 1. Tillemont. Memoires pour Servir a L'hiſtoire de L'Egliſe. ‖ Faydit. Supplement aux Eſſais de Literature. an. 1704. p. 26. ‖‖ Baſnage Hiſt. de L'Egliſe, l. 21. c. 2. * Norris Epocha Syro-Maced. Diſſ 2.

im-

imbrac'd the Goſpel. Abgarus's Letter, and our Saviour's Anſwer were inſerted in the Archives of that City, as a Monument of this Prince's Piety, and an undoubted aſſurance of the Protection of Heaven. Euſebius, who took them from thence, tranſlated the Syriack into Greek. "For altho' they ſpoke Greek at "Cæſarea, and even in all Meſopotamia; yet the "Converſation which they were oblig'd to have with "the Common People, and the Jews, Natives of "that Country, hinder'd a Tongue ſo often heard, "and ſpoken by ſo many, from being unknown. "And therefore the Tranſlation, which Euſebius "caus'd to be made before him, ought to agree "with the Original; and no body can doubt of Eu-"ſebius's Fidelity and Exactneſs, who had col-"lected, with ſo much care, all the ancient Monu-"ments of the Church. There is nothing, but may "be brought into queſtion, if People will give them-"ſelves the Liberty to deny, upon ſome frivolous Con-"jectures, a Relation taken from the Archives, and "publick Records, and put out by a great Biſhop, "who was a Man of Learning and Intereſt at Court. Thus ſome vindicate the Truth of this Story, which we are bound to examime.

5. I do not pretend to leſſen any way Euſebius's Merit. He was a Learned Man, had diſcover'd a great many Monuments, and the Church is oblig'd to him for many pieces of them, which he preſerv'd. But notwithſtanding the Encomiums that he deſerves, yet there are many things in his Hiſtory, which we muſt look upon as Fables; becauſe they are evidently falſe. So that it is to no purpoſe to extoll this Hiſtorian here, in order to make a Fact paſs under the Shroud of the general Praiſes, which are given him. For we are nevertheleſs oblig'd to examine the Truth of what he relates. He is often miſtaken. Beſides, he had never compar'd Abgarus's Letters, with the Publick Records; nor examin'd the Archives of Edeſſa, to ſee whether a Monument ſo honourable to that Church, had not been foiſted in. How many fabulous Stories are ſeen in moſt Cities, Churches, and Monaſteries, concerning their Origine and Foundation? However, they are ſet down in their Records, and preſerv'd in their Archives. Some old Manuſcripts, and moldy Parchments are produc'd to make them Authentick. Perhaps, that the Orientals did the ſame Thing in Euſebius's time. This is but a Conjecture; yet it weakens the Authority of the Publick Records of Edeſſa; becauſe theſe Frauds are common.

6. Had our Lord writ to the King of Edeſſa, and his Letter been preſerv'd, it had been inſerted in the Canon of the Scripture. JESUS CHRIST was the Chief and Maſter of all inſpir'd Authors. So that His Letter ought to have the ſame Rank in the Holy Scripture, as the Law writ with God's Finger, in the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets. Some of the Canonical Books were queſtion'd, but none among the Jews rejected the Law. Chriſt ought to have had the ſame Juſtice done him; and his Letter to have been receiv'd and inſerted in the Canon. Every body had own'd it as a Divine Writing; whereas a Council held at Rome, plac'd it among ſpurious Pieces. This Reaſon which I alledg'd appear'd weak; yet I cannot gueſs, what anſwer can be made to it; and this Argument is much more puzling to thoſe, who believe that this Council was held by Pope Gelaſius, and aſcribe to the Church and its Councils, a Power to judge of the Sacred Writings, and to fix their Number.

7. Mr. de Tillemont * ſays, that our Saviour's Letter was not receiv'd, becauſe it did not come from a ſure Hand, or the common way. It was fear'd leaſt ſome falſe Pieces had been inſerted in the Archives of Edeſſa, and for that reaſon, it was plac'd among the Apocryphal Writings. This is what Mr. de St. Benne taught this Learned Man, to reſolve a Difficulty which is undoubtedly very conſiderable. But this deſtroys the Authority of Euſebius. For if the Letter of Chriſt, and the Fidelity of the Archives of the Church of Edeſſa, were queſtion'd in the Infancy of the Church, how can we be ſure of them now? And if this Letter had not been doubted of, it had been inſerted in the Canon. The Fidelity of the Records of Edeſſa, wherein ſome falſe Pieces might have been inſerted, was queſtion'd; how cou'd then thoſe who had ſuch Scruples, believe on the one hand, the Truth of Abgarus's Converſion; and on the other, that Jeſus Chriſt's Letter was falſe? Both theſe Facts were found, in the Publick Records of Edeſſa. The Letter was link'd with the Event, which was grounded upon it. So that either all the Narrative ought to be look'd upon as falſe, and inſerted in the Records of Edeſſa by an Impoſtor, or our Lord's Letter be receiv'd among Canonical Books. Farther, People do not conſider the Matter, when they ſay, that the Church did not receive this Letter the common way. For there is no Writing more authentick than that. The Letters of the Apoſtles were ſent to perſecuted Churches, whoſe Members hid themſelves. They had neither Archives, nor Publick Records, as plainly appears, by the Confuſion which we find in the Catalogue of the Biſhops of the moſt conſiderable Churches. But Chriſt's Letter was writ to a King; this King had enroll'd it in the Publick Records of his Capital City, and preſerv'd it as a precious Thing in his Archives, whence it was taken. This Letter is ſhort, and might the more eaſily be kept genuine. The Apoſtles did not always go to the Churches, to which they directed their Letters, to ſee whether they preſerv'd the Originals of them. And indeed, theſe Originals were ſoon loſt. But Thaddæus, and St. Thomas, Two Apoſtles, went to Edeſſa. They both ought to have known whether this Monument was ſign'd by their Maſter. Chriſtianity was ſoon ſettl'd in that Kingdom. All the Churches ſhou'd have proclaim'd the Letter of Jeſus Chriſt, and prov'd the Validity of it by the Original, that was to be produc'd, and the Authentick Copy kept in the Archives of Edeſſa. It muſt be confeſs'd, that there can be no ſtronger Proofs, that a Writing is Canonical, than thoſe that they had for Chriſt's Letter; and yet it was rejected. Euſebius himſelf, who inſerted it in his Book, doth not ſay, that it was in his time receiv'd into the Canon. For it was not really there. The Churches did not read it, as they often did ſome Apocryphal Books; and it is ſaid to no purpoſe, that it was not rejected as falſe, but as not being ſufficiently authoriz'd to make part of the Scripture. For there is no medium. Either it ought to have been own'd as genuine, ſince the Original was in being, and an Authentick Copy of it in the Archives of Edeſſa; or elſe it was thought ſpurious, ſince it was not put among the Sacred Writings. To conclude, why doth Pope Gelaſius place it with a great many fabulous Pieces? Theſe Gentlemen at leaſt, who are ſo ſure of its truth, and ſee that it is only impugn'd by frivolous Conjectures, ought to receive it, and petition that it may be inſerted in the Canon. This is the only Objection, I had rais'd againſt this Letter. But ſince we muſt examine more narrowly Abgarus his Project to ruin Judæa; let us add ſome new Arguments to theſe.

8. It was in the Reign of Tiberius, that Abgarus is ſaid to have offer'd his City and Kingdom to Jeſus Chriſt, for an Aſyle; and that he reſolv'd to revenge his Death by declaring War with the Jews: And yet this King of Edessa was not an absolute Prince, but a Vassal to the Romans. For these Conquerors reveng'd upon that little King, the Affront they had receiv'd under Crassus; and only left him the Title of Commander of the Place, or of Toparch. This City had so intire a dependance upon the Empire, that we find this Inscription upon one of its Medals; Tiberius Cæsar Augustus, Augustus God of the Edessenes.

* Tillemont. Mem. pour L'Hiſt. de L'Egliſe, t. 1. p. 993.

ΤΙΒΕΡΙΟΣ ΚΑΙΣΑΡ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΟΣ.
Tiberius Cæsar Augustus.

And on the Reverse,

ΣΕΒΑΣΤΟΣ ΘΕΟΣ ΕΔΕΣΣΕΩΝ.
Augustus Deus Edessenorum.

Wou'd the City of * Edessa have stamp'd a Medal in honour of Tiberius, and put him among the Gods, had it not been subject to his Laws? So that Edessa belong'd to the Romans, when Abgarus design'd to divide his Kingdom with our Saviour, to declare War with the Jews, and to destroy them. There is another Medal wherein this City is call'd the Metropolis of the Roman Colony.

ΜΗ. ΚΟ. ΕΔΕΣΣΗΝΩΝ.
Metropolis Coloniæ Edessenorum.

How was then Edessa a Roman Colony, if it was not subject to the Emperour? And indeed, the Parthians had submitted to Augustus; and we as yet see in some Medals of that Prince, Phraates their King Kneeling, and restoring the Colours taken from Crassus.

Parthe, † refer aquilas, victos quoq; porrigis arcus:
Pignora jam nostri nulla pudoris habent,

Said Ovid, speaking of this Restitution, wherein we must read victos quoque or captos quoque porrigis arcus. For Phraates being vanquish'd, did restore the Arms which he had taken from the Romans. Augustus oblig'd him also to restore Armenia, and to send him Four of his Children for Hostages. The King of Edessa's Fate, which was link'd with that of the Parthians in the Defeat of Crassus, was so too at that time; and he had his share of the Punishment as he had had of the Victory, to which he contributed more than any body. Thus Ten or Twelve Years before the Birth of Christ, this King became a Vassal; and as Augustus depriv'd Phraates of the Title of King of Kings, which he commonly assum'd, he only left to the King of Edessa, that of Commander of the Place.

Procopius ‖ says indeed, that the Kings of that Countrey were commonly call'd Toparchs. But the Mistake is plain. For the Kings of Edessa had a Syrian Name, that denoted their Dignity; and that of Toparch, or Governour of the Countrey, is given to Abgarus, by Eusebius, who follow'd the Stile of the Greeks and Romans, who had diminish'd the Title and Grandeur of this Prince; and thus the Name of Tetrarch is given to Herod's Sons. Nevertheless, Procopius confirms what we lay down. For he informs us, that Augustus carry'd with him to Rome the same Abgarus, who writ to Christ, and that he wou'd not let him return to his Capital City; but that this Prince shew'd him, that Beasts by a natural Instinct lov'd the Earth of their Dens and Caves; and that for this purpose he had some Savage Beasts, (which he had taken a Hunting) put in the Amphitheatre, with some of the Earth of every place, where these Beasts came from. Every one, says Procopius, run to his Native Earth, and Abgarus letting thereby Augustus understand, that every body lov'd his own Countrey, obtain'd leave to return home. Let us not insist on what History tells us, of the love of Beasts for the Earth of their Dens. For this wonderful Fact is false. But it is true, that Abgarus was in Rome, subject to Augustus, and oblig'd to rack his Wit to obtain his leave. When Abgarus went away, he beg'd also of Augustus, that he might have the Liberty to build a Circus at Edessa. So that his Kingdom and City, must of necessity have depended upon the Romans. In a Word, Procopius assures, that he having left an unworthy Successor, notwithstanding some make this Prince a Christian; his Son who had us'd his Subjects ill, was afraid to be punish'd by the Romans, and went over to the Persians: Which confirms that the King of Edessa was so great a Vassal to the Romans, that they punish'd him, when he did not do his Subjects Justice; and this Subjection (begun under Augustus) still continu'd under Tiberius, whom the People of Edessa more certainly plac'd among the Gods, than Christ.

9. Afterwards, the Title of King was still continu'd to the Abgari; and St. Epiphanius ‖‖ praises the Piety of one of these Princes, that reign'd at Edessa, when Bardesanes separated from the Church to sow his Errors. One wou'd think, that it was the same Abgarus, who was subdu'd by Severus: And therefore, that it was in the Reign of Severus, that this Kingdom was conquer'd by the Romans. For this Emperour vanquish'd Abgarus. So that it can't be said, that it was subdu'd in the time of our Saviour.

But Four Things may be observ'd. One, that Princes, tho' Tributary and Vassals to the Romans, often had the Title of Kings, and the Holy Pen-men gave it even to Herod, who was only Tetrarch of Galilee. So that altho' Tacitus, and Capitolinus call the Abgari Kings, they were for all that subject, and tributary to the Romans. Farther, Eusebius gives only that of Toparch, or Commander of the Place to the King we speak of; which shews, that all Writers did not use the same Stile. Some gave a Name common to all those, whose Birth and Dignity raises them above the People; and others, as Eusebius, altho' he had an Interest to set off the Dignity of Abgarus, speaking more accurately, calls him Toparch. 2. This small Kingdom, confin'd within Mesopotamia, might have recover'd the Liberty it had lost under Augustus, Tiberius, and some of their Successors. 3. Neither must we imagine, that all those, that bore the Name of Abgarus were Kings of Edessa. For one is call'd by Capitolinus * King of the East, and he who was subdu'd by Severus † was King of Persia. If the little City of Edessa, situate on that side is thereby understood, I will not oppose it. 4. But without entering into a particular Account of what may have happen'd to the Kings of that Countrey, it is enough for our purpose, that the City of Edessa acknowledg'd Tiberius for its God and Prince. For I always thence inferr, that Abgarus was not then in a Condition to act as a Sovereign Prince, or to declare War with the Jews, who as well as he, were Subjects to the Romans.

10. Again, it is pretended, that Abgarus made that Resolution the Year that Christ dy'd; and that he and all his Subjects then embrac'd Christianity, being converted at the Preaching of Thaddæus, sent ‖ by Judas, sometimes too call'd Thomas. We do not take notice of some faults in this Narrative; but observe, that it says, that Thomas was call'd Judas, which is manifestly false. This is not the only one in it. For Thaddæus is there call'd Apostle, one of the Seventy Disciples. And this Mistake is more considerable than it appears at first. For St. Jerome was deceiv'd

* Norris Epocha Syro-Maced. † Ovid Fast. l. 5. ‖ Procop. de Bello Persico, l. 2. c. 12. t. 1. p. 117. ‖‖ Epiph. Hær. p. 476. * Capitolin. in Anton. Pio, p. 20. † Spartianus in Severo, p. 71. ‖ Euseb. p. 33.

by

by it, and ſaid, as he believ'd, that Thaddæus was one of the Twelve Apoſtles, and yet it is not true. Either it was inſerted in the Publick Records of Edeſſa, in Thaddæus's time, that he was one of the Twelve Apoſtles, or elſe the remembrance of this was preſerv'd by Tradition. If we have it only by Tradition, it is more liable to Exception, than if it was then ingrav'd upon thoſe Records; and if it be aſſerted, that it was then ingrav'd there, it is eaſy to ſhew the abſurdity of it. For Thaddæus ought to have been acquainted with the Title that belong'd to him, and the difference, which was put at that time, between that of Apoſtle, and Diſciple. Why then did he ſuffer himſelf to be call'd an Apoſtle at Edeſſa? St. Jerome obſerv'd a long time after, that the Title of Apoſtle was given to ſome Miniſters, that were ſent into the Provinces, and the Menaion of the Greeks aſcribe it to St. Luke, Titus and Timothy. But all that proves nothing; becauſe the uſe of Terms, alters according to the Times; and at the beginning of Chriſtianity, they reckon'd only Twelve Apoſtles, beſides St. Paul, who was miraculouſly added to them. The Secretaries of Edeſſa, who writ by a Chriſtian Prince's Order, and were perhaps themſelves Chriſtians, ought to have known this. Farther, thoſe that compos'd the Monuments of Edeſſa, ſay, that Thomas ſent the Envoy Thaddæus. This wou'd be a ridiculous Repetition, was not Envoy, or the Name of Apoſtle there, a Title of Diſtinction and Honour. He is even call'd afterwards Apoſtle of Chriſt. So that Thaddæus, either muſt have aſſum'd at Edeſſa the Title of Apoſtle, or ſome ignorant Fellows, who did not know the Excellency of that Office, above that of a Diſciple, confounded them by ſaying, that Thaddæus was at the ſame time a Diſciple, and an Apoſtle, one of the Seventy Diſciples, and one of the Twelve Apoſtles of Jeſus Chriſt. This muſt be obſerv'd; becauſe Monuments made by People of ſo little Senſe and Judgment, are very much to be ſuſpected.

11. But if this Remark is not of weight enough; let us add one upon the Æra of the Edeſſenes. It was that of the Selucidæ, which begun at the time, that Seleucus reign'd in Babylon; the Firſt Year of the 117 Olympiad, and the 4402 of the Julian Period. Euſebius affirms, that Abgarus, had not only reſolv'd to enter Judæa with an Army, to revenge the Death of Chriſt, but alſo that his Converſion was perform'd by Thaddæus, in the Year Three Hundred and Forty. That Year was exactly the 29 or 30 of Chriſt; for reckoning from the 117 Olympiad, to the 202, which was the 29 or 30 of the Chriſtian Æra, you find the Three Hundred and Forty Years mention'd by Euſebius.

But it is anſwer'd in oppoſition to this; "That the "Epoch of the Edeſſenes, as well as that of the Seleu-"cidæ, and Egyptians, begun at the Death of Alex-"ander the Great, which happen'd in the Year of the "World 3872. according to Marianus Scotus; that "Chriſt dy'd in the Year 4227. according to the "ſame Author; and that by adding 430. of the Reign "of the Edeſſenes, to 3872. wherein that Reign begun, "it wou'd follow that King Abgarus writ his Letter to "Chriſt in the Year 4302, that is, Seventy Nine "Years after his Death; which is ridiculous.

12. I confeſs, that I do not well underſtand an anſwer, which inſtead of ſolving an Objection, doth but confirm it: For granting that Abgarus's Letter was writ Seventy Nine Years after the Death of Chriſt, this wou'd but the better expoſe the Suppoſition; for Chronological Faults commonly do it. It is agreed that the Æra of the Seleucidæ, and Edeſſenes, was the ſame. Euſebius ſaid it, and Mr. du Pin took it for granted. This Æra of the Seleucidæ, begun at the Hundred and Seventeenth Olympiad. Cardinal Norris hath made it very plain. So that we muſt reckon from thence the 340 Years mention'd by Euſebius. Abbot Faydit affirms, that Four Hundred and Thirty Years muſt be added to the Æra of the Edeſſenes; and that then this Fact will fall on the Seventy Ninth Year of Chriſt. But was he not miſtaken? Did he not take 430, for 340? And indeed Euſebius reckons but Three Hundred and Forty Years of the Reign of the Edeſſenes. Why then will he reckon 430, to make a ridiculous Calculation? To what purpoſe doth he alter the Text of Euſebius, which was ſo happily corrected by Valeſius? But tho' the Æra of the Edeſſenes was lengthen'd by a dozen of Years, by fixing its beginning at Alexander's Death, it wou'd not turn to account; ſince Chriſt had not as yet perform'd any Miracle, nor begun his Miniſtry; he was then but Seventeen Years of Age, and it cannot be ſuppos'd that Abgarus writ to him at that time, to offer him an Aſyle, ſince he had not perform'd, or ſuffer'd any thing.

13. Turn this Story which way you will, and you'll find it intangl'd. Mr. de Tillemont corrects * the Text of Euſebius, and puts Three Hundred and Forty Seven, inſtead of Forty. But he doth this without a Warrant from any Manuſcript, and only becauſe he will have it ſo; and that, unable to make this Fact agree with the Hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles, he is forc'd to referr it to the 36 Year of Chriſt. Such was his pleaſure. But it is certain, that when we examine whether a Work is ſuppoſititious, we have no right to make any Corrections, without any Proofs to back them, in order to remove ſome inſuperable Difficulties. For we then leave the Objection as full and cogent as can be. But Euſebius ſpoils that Correction: For he ſays, that this Converſion happen'd immediately after the Aſcenſion of Chriſt.

Admitting the date of Euſebius; ſome ſuſpect, that it only denotes that of the Letter of Chriſt. But they cou'd not know at Edeſſa, the Miracles of Chriſt, who juſt then came into his Miniſtry; and the ill Treatment of the Jews to him, had not appear'd enough to oblige this Heatheniſh Prince, to offer him a Place of Refuge in his Kingdom. But this muſt be worſe, if the Year 340 of the Edeſſenes falls on the 29*th* Year of the Chriſtian Æra. For then Chriſt had not even begun to preach at that time.

It is ſaid, that if the Year 340 is the Date of time, that Thaddæus was ſent, as the Publick, Act related by Euſebius, ſeems to oblige us to believe; we muſt of neceſſity acknowledge, that Jeſus Chriſt dy'd the 29th Year of the common Æra. However, Euſebius did not believe it; and yet receiv'd this Date, altho' he knew the Æra of the Edeſſenes. Mr. de Tillemont is in the right. For if we follow the Act ſet down by Euſebius, we are bound to believe that the Letters of Chriſt, and Thaddæus, were ſent the ſame Year. But 'tis an undoubted, and receiv'd Truth, that Chriſt did not die in the 29*th* Year of the common Æra; and therefore this Date is falſe. But granting it was true, that Chriſt's Death happen'd at that time, can we imagine that Thaddæus went to Edeſſa immediately after it? This is at leaſt repugnant to the Hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles. Why then will they not get out of this endleſs Labyrinth? Is there any neceſſity to overſet Chronology, turn the Times upſide down, and ſay that Chriſt's Death happen'd in the Year 29? Or that the Vocation of the Gentiles happen'd at the ſame time, by reaſon of the Letters that were writ to Abgarus? Doth it not appear from all theſe Difficulties, and the Neceſſity of altering the Life and Death of Chriſt, that theſe Letters are not warrantable?

* Notes on St. Thomas. p. 1111.

Father Harduin hath invented an Epoch, which ſeems at firſt favourable to theſe Gentlemen. For he begins the Edeſſene Æra, Two or Three Years later, than that of the Seleucidæ. But they ſhall have no reaſon to boaſt of this Epoch againſt me, when they find the Book, wherein the late Cardinal Norris, who was ſo well verſed, and exact in that part of Learning, diſcover'd this Reckoning to be falſe. I won'd rather ſay in theſe Gentlemen's behalf, that Valeſius's Correction of the Text of Euſebius is not compleat. For as my deſign is only to find out the Truth, I will not diſſemble, that the reading of Ruffinus may be kept with that of the Manuſcripts, which that Learned Man conſulted; and that we muſt read 343 and not 340. For, 1. It is certain, that the Number Forty Three was found in the Old Manuſcripts, ſince Ruffinus read it ſo. 2. Euſebius, who knew the Æra of the Seleucidæ, yet ſays, that Abgarus's Converſion, happen'd after Chriſt's Aſcenſion. He even repeats this Twice; and cou'd not be ſo groſly miſtaken. He muſt then have believ'd, that Thaddæus was ſent in the 343 Year of the Edeſſenes, * which combines with the 33*d* of Chriſt, when that Divine Redeemer was dead, and aſcended into Heaven. My correction is more exact than that of Valeſius; but it doth not ſolve the Difficulty; becauſe the Miſſion of Thaddæus, and Abgarus's Converſion, cannot poſſibly have happen'd the ſame Year that Chriſt dy'd. I only conceive, that the Impoſtor, who ſet down this Event in the Records of Edeſſa, preferr'd this Year to all Others, becauſe it was more known, and memorable in the Church; and that his Ignorance made him confound the Names of Thomas, and the Office of Thaddæus.

14. Another Difficulty ariſes from the Date of this Letter, concerning the Vocation of the Gentiles. The Heathens begun to come into the Church, in the Year 39, of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Reign of Caligula. St. Peter wou'd not undertake that great Work, and go to Cæſarea to preach to Cornelius, who was the Firſt Fruits of the Gentiles, before he was urg'd to it, both by a Miracle, and a particular Revelation. Nevertheleſs, Three Things are obſerv'd; One, that Abgarus call'd Chriſt, God, and Son of God, before his Death. But this will be only call'd the beginning of his Converſion. Let it be ſo. But then it muſt be own'd, that Abgarus, tho' he was a Heathen, was clearer ſighted than all the Apoſtles, including even St. Peter. For the Apoſtles ſaid with the Multitude, that Chriſt was Elias, or St. John; and St. Peter was the only Man, to whom the Holy Ghoſt reveal'd, that he was the Son of God. Abgarus's Faith at that diſtance from Judæa, was more miraculous than that of St. Peter; ſince he writ to our Saviour, that he was God, the Son of God; and the Pagan Prince preceeded him, who is call'd by ſome, the Prince of the Apoſtles in the Kingdom of God. Chriſt giving the Prince an Anſwer, to thank him for his kind Offer, promis'd to ſend him ſome of his Diſciples to inſtruct him. So that according to this, the Apoſtles cou'd not be ignorant, that the Gentiles were to be call'd and converted, ſince their Maſter writ it with his own Hand, to the King of Edeſſa. Whence then proceeded St. Peter's Ignorance, when he was oblig'd to effect the Converſion of Cornelius? Ought he not to have been inform'd of his Maſter's Letter? Thomas, purſuant to his Order, ſent Thaddæus to Edeſſa. But Thaddæus immediately committed a Fault. For inſtead of going directly to Court, and appearing before the Prince, to whom he was ſent, and Chriſt had promis'd him, he ſtaid at his Friend Toby's, the Son of Toby, to perform ſome Miracles; and it was only by chance, that the noiſe of his Miracles coming to Court, Abgarus, who was always intent upon the Myſtery of Salvation, inform'd himſelf, and learn'd that he was the Perſon ſent him by Chriſt. Thaddæus his Behaviour did not ſuit with his Miſſion to the King. But without being too ſevere upon this Miſſionary, who might have had ſome reaſons for acting ſo; he had no ſooner preach'd, but he converted the King and his Subjects. This general Converſion was perform'd the ſame Year that Chriſt died; in the 343*d* Year of the Æra of the Seleucidæ: And this can't be doubted; ſince that Date is ſet down in the Publick Records of Edeſſa. So that here is a Kingdom of Heathens, to which the Goſpel was preach'd, before it was to Cornelius, whom Sacred Hiſtory looks upon, as the Firſt Fruits of the Gentiles, notwithſtanding he was admitted into the Church, near Six Years after the King and People of Edeſſa. There is no need to diſtinguiſh here between a Converſion begun, and one compleated. For this was a full and intire one. The King was baptiz'd, miraculouſly cur'd upon the ſcore of his Faith, and the People, following the Example of their Prince, hearken'd to Thaddæus his Sermons. It is difficult to reconcile this, with the Hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles, which is much more exact thanthat of Euſebius.

15. Abgarus, ſays Euſebius, told Thaddæus, that his Faith in Chriſt was always ſo great, that to puniſh the Jews, that Crucify'd him, he had reſolv'd to declare War with them, and deſtroy their Countrey; but that he was afraid of the Romans. It can't be conceiv'd whence proceeded ſo warm a Zeal without Knowledge. This Prince muſt not only have believ'd in Chriſt, but alſo lov'd him, to raiſe an Army, and hazard Battles againſt a Superiour Enemy, to revenge the Death of an unknown Perſon. It is acknowledg'd that this Deſign of ruining Judæa, was a meer Rhodomontado of this little King of Edeſſa: For the leaſt Kings of that Countrey, think their Power equal to that of God. The Sun is their Brother, and the Moon their Siſter. They are like Trees, whoſe Branches riſe up to Heaven, and overſhadow all the Univerſe, as Daniel ſays of one of theſe little Princes. However, it is hard to look upon ſo devout a Prince, as a Bragadochio, and to confeſs that his Zeal went no farther than Vapouring. The Example of the Kings of the Eaſt, who are very Haughty, doth not juſtify him. Again, nothing can be more ridiculous than this project of War with the Jews, which he boaſted of to the Diſciple of Chriſt. How cou'd he march from Oſrhoene into Judæa, to deſtroy it? He was not only to paſs the Euphrates, but alſo to find Proviſions, Ammunition, and a free Paſſage through all Syria; or to fancy that all the Neighbouring Princes wou'd have ſuffer'd him to march through their Countrey, in his way to deſtroy, and ruin Judæa, that he might revenge the Death of one, that he did not know. I am not ſurpriz'd that this Prince was quiet after this firſt flight of his Zeal.

Quos ego: Sed motos præſtat componere fluctus.

16. Wou'd it not be better to lay aſide this project of declaring War, deſtroying Jeruſalem, and its Inhabitants, than to maintain ſo chimerical a Deſign? Is it not ingominious to Chriſtianity, that upon the firſt Impreſſion it made on Abgarus, he loſt his Senſes, and run upon extravagant Deſigns? God, who reſolv'd to revenge the Death of his Son, had other Inſtruments than the King of Edeſſa. He had foretold that † whereſoever the Carcaſe is, there will the Eagles be gathered together. And indeed the Romans beſieg'd Jeruſalem, and ravag'd all Judæa:

* Valeſius reads Euſebius thus, pag. 35. Ἐτεσάχθη τοῦτο τεσσαρακοστῷ καὶ τριακοσιοστῷ ἔτει, acta hæc ſunt Anno quadrageſimo, & trecenteſimo; and I believe we ſhou'd read ἐπράχθη τοῦτο τεσσαρακοστῷ τριτῷ καὶ τριακοσιοστῷ ἔτει. Acta ſunt hæc Anno quadrageſimo tertio ac trecenteſimo. † Math. 24. 28.

But

But God first permitted, that all the Nation, that was to partake of the Punishment, shou'd be gather'd together in Jerusalem, that it might perish there. This is what we are going to represent in the following Chapter.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Destruction of Jerusalem, and of its Temple.

I. A Re-capitulation of the preceeding Chapters. II. The Year of the War. III. Presages of the Destruction of Jerusalem, according to the Jews. IV. It is false, that this Destruction was foretold by St. Paul, and by an Angel. V. A Massacre of the Jews in Syria. VI. Cestius's March against Jerusalem. VII. The Jews take a Resolution to enter into a War. The Distribution of Offices VIII. Vespasian reduces Galilee. IX. The Siege of Gadara. Observations upon that place. X. Some Projects of a Confederacy with the Eastern Jews. XI. Jerusalem Invested by Titus. XII. The Advantagious Situation of this Place. XIII. Sallies out of Jerusalem, against the Romans. XIV. The first and Second Wall taken. XV. The effect of Famine. The Defeat of Antiochus. XVI. The Taking of the Cittadel. XVII. The Attack of the Temple. It is reduc'd to Ashes. XVIII. The Attack, and Taking of Mount Sion. The Death of the Chief of Assassins. XIX. Jerusalem was not destroy'd according to the Fathers. XX. An Examination of this Fact. An attempt to reconcile the Fathers, and Josephus. XXI. In what Sense the Fathers said, that Jerusalem was not in Being in their time.

1. ALL the Jewish Nation was involv'd in Sin. For, not to mention the Crime they perpetrated by Crucifying the Messiah, whom they had so long desir'd, the Kings, to please the Romans, had introduc'd some Heathenish Customs. Besides, they made an ill use of their Authority, and gave the Romans occasion to reduce Judæa into a Province, which being liable to the hatred of the Legions, and the Avarice of the Governours, suffer'd very much. The Church, which shou'd have set a Pattern of Obedience to the Supream Power, of Piety to God, and Respect for his Temple, prophan'd it by enormous and continu'd Sacrileges. The High-Priest, when he bought his Office, thought of nothing but gratifying his Ambition. But his Ambition was no sooner gratify'd, but he study'd how to repay himself, by robbing his Inferiours. He neglected Divine Service, and only kept the outward Appearances of Religion, that the People might still be under his Jurisdiction. The Spirit of Schism, that had banish'd Charity, reign'd there. The grossest Heresie not only appear'd openly, but also supply'd the Chair and Nation with Chiefs, and High-Priests. The various Sects, that had combin'd against Christ, unmercifully tore one another, and only endeavour'd their mutual Destruction. The People being impatient, breath'd nothing but Sedition and War; and as soon as it was begun, they were involv'd into all the Calamities, that attend Rebellion. A Nation is always unhappy, that will not be guided by Justice, and Duty. The Zealots, or rather, that Company of Mad Men, fill'd every place with Blood and Slaughter. They kill'd one another at the very Altars in the Holy Place. Altho' God had had no other motives of Revenge, it was morally impossible, that a Society so disorder'd, and a Church so divided against it self, cou'd subsist any longer. God, justly exasperated against them, permitted their Sins, and their Sins drew their Destruction after them. Josephus was forc'd to make this dismal Confession against his Country-men *, that he never heard of so wicked a Nation, and that if the Romans had deferr'd the Siege, either the Earth had open'd to swallow them up alive, or Fire had come down from Heaven, as it did on Sodom, to consume them to Ashes. God preferr'd the Romans to his Thunder-bolts, which had crush'd them in a Moment; and sent them some Governours, under whom a whole Generation was barbarously oppress'd. When a Slave becomes a King, he is commonly the most Savage, and Inhumane Creature in the World. This is the Character which Tacitus gives of Felix: † He exercis'd the Royal Authority as a Slave, he gratify'd his Cruelty, and filthy Passions. Nevertheless, the Jews had patience till the coming of Gessius Florus, who was yet more cruel than his Predecessor, and who, driving the People to Despair, forc'd them into a War.

2. It is not material to fix the Year, wherein begun the open War with the Romans, since Criticks vary but of one Year. They all agree, that the Insurrection happen'd in the 12*th* Year of Nero; but they differ about the Years of his Reign. Altho' Capel was an able Man; and had accurately examin'd this History, it is yet safer to begin the War in 66, because Jesus the Son of Ananus, that Jewish Prophet who cry'd out so long, Woe to the City, Woe to the Temple, begun his lugubrious Predictions, seven Years and some Months before the Siege of Jerusalem, which happen'd in the 70*th* Year of our Saviour. So that he begun in 62, Four Years before the War: And therefore it must be fix'd as we have done. Besides, the Prodigies related by Josephus || as so many Presages of the Destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple, happen'd at the Feast of the Unleaven'd Bread of that Year, that is, in 65. the 8*th* of April. It was then that the Priests, who were going to officiate, heard a confus'd Noise of People in a Hurry, and a Voice that cry'd out, Let us depart hence. This continu'd till the Pentecost, which was about the end of May; so, notwithstanding that Presages are always to precede Events, these Presages had happen'd after the Declaration of the War, or rather after the Hostilities that begun the 16*th* Day of May, had the War begun in 65; and therefore the Beginning of the War must of necessity be referr'd to the following Year, as we do it.

3. It will perhaps be said, that these Presages never happen'd; and that it is a Piece of Credulity to alledge them, to prove a Chronological Fact, since they are false. I believe as little in Presages as another; but it signifies nothing, whether these are true or not. For I do not build upon their Authority, but on the Testimony of the Person, that relates them, who ought to have made an exact Calculation of the time of the War, since he was one of the Chief Commanders in it.

Horum pars magna fuit.

Besides, People might easily have been impos'd upon in several things, which he relates. That shining Light seen at Night about the Altar; that Ox, who, as he was drag'd to the Altar, brought forth a

* Joseph. de Bello, l. 6. c. 11, & 16. † Tacit. Hist. 5. c. 13. || Joseph. de Bello, l. 7. c. 12. p. 960.

Lamb,

Lamb, and those Fiery Chariots that passed over the City with a dreadful Noise, may very well be suspected. Some were uncertain. For the Opening of the Temple, which seems better attested than others; because we are told that the Magistrates went to shut it, was an assurance to some, that God had a mind to open the Treasure of his Blessings, whilst others concluded, that he withdrew his Protection from the Temple. But the Action of that Man, who cry'd out, a Voice from the East, a Voice from the West, and foretold every Night the Destruction of the City, can't be deny'd. For he was carry'd before Albinus, who examin'd him. He was whipp'd, and often buffetted by the People, who cou'd not endure without Indignation, the Voice of a Man, who obstinately prepar'd them to such dismal Calamities. His Outcries were heard in the Streets, for the space of Seven Years. At last he was kill'd upon the Walls of the City, at the beginning of the Siege. People can't be mistaken in a Thing of this Nature, or continue long in that Mistake. Josephus, who relates it, was at Jerusalem, when this Preacher, who was look'd upon as a mad Man, foretold them the impending Destruction. He was at the Siege when this Man was kill'd, and he cou'd inform himself about his Death. So that if there be any Circumstance which we are oblig'd to take notice of, this is the only One; wherein we can't forbear acknowledging something very extraordinary.

4. The Christians wou'd not be behind hand with the Jews, with relation to Prophecies. For Lactantius makes St. Paul, and St. Peter preach in Rome; and maintains that in one of their Sermons, they said, that * God wou'd soon send a Prince, who wou'd destroy the Jews, demolish their Cities, besiege them, make them pine to Death, thro' Hunger and Thirst, and force them through Want to devour themselves. Eusebius † doth not name the Prophets; but he places them in Jerusalem, and maintains, "That the Christians were to go out of that "City, to retire to Pella; and that when they had "transported thither all their Effects, the Divine "Vengeance extripated that impious Generation. St. Epiphanius || assures, that an Angel forewarn'd the Disciples of the Calamities that threaten'd Jerusalem, and of the Necessity of seeking for a place of Refuge. In a Word, it is believ'd that it was to facilitate the Retreat of the Faithful, that God order'd the Flight of Cestius, who might have ended the War at its beginning, by the Taking of Jerusalem. For Josephus owns, that he might have taken it, had he continu'd the Siege. But God wou'd not have it so, that his Children might be preserv'd from Destruction. Here are a great many Preachers, and Advices given to the Christians. But is Lactantius an Author that may be believ'd upon his Word, when he quotes no Witness of what he advances; and relates a Fact, that happen'd some Centuries before him, and whereof no Footsteps are to be found, but in the Memory of those that liv'd at that time? Eusebius too grounds himself only upon Tradition. For a Historian, that was upon the Spot, wou'd infallibly have discover'd the Proofs of a Revelation, if there were any others besides a hear-say, and Tradition is, of all things in the World, the most uncertain. Lastly, St. Epiphanius, who liv'd a long while after, is yet more particular. For he speaks of an Angel, who came down from Heaven to oblige the Christians to go out of Jerusalem, as an Angel had taken Lot out of Sodom. But he doth not agree with himself. For he |||| gives Christ in another place a Commission to forewarn his Disciples, who thought themselves secure at Jerusalem. Christ perform'd then a great many needless Miracles. For without any Visions from Heaven, it was easy to perceive that Jerusalem, torn with so many Factions, was not in it self a safe place of Abode, or that cou'd hold out against the Romans. Josephus, who was not a Prophet, often represented this to his Country Men, especially when the perpetual Sacrifice ceas'd; and long before People of Reach and Sense withdrew from so dangerous a Post, to go some where else. This was the true Presage, that work'd upon all the Christians, who were wiser, and less inclin'd to Rebellion than others, to retire into the little Town of Pella.

5. Nevertheless, the Troubles already mention'd increas'd every where. The Syrians, who inhabited Cæsarea, and often * rose against the Jews, run once more to Arms, and kill'd Twenty Thousand of them. Those whom God preserv'd from this Massacre, were sent by Florus to the Gallies. For he judg'd them in the Wrong. The Jews highly incens'd at that Barbarity, and the Injustice that was added to it, made it a point of Duty, to kill and plunder the Syrians, in all the Towns, where their Number enabl'd them to do it. They gave no quarter, kill'd one another Day and Night, and were upon the Watch for fear of a Surprise: The Streets were cover'd with dead Bodies, and the Jews were the greatest Sufferers. This Fury spread as far as Egypt, and above Sixty Thousand Jews had their Throats cut at Alexandria, and other parts of that Countrey. Antioch, being less inclin'd to these inhumane proceedings, spar'd its Inhabitants at First: but an unnatural Jew, having accus'd his own Father, and several of his Brethren of a Design to set the City on Fire in the Night, they thought, that they only acted for self preservation, to kill all those, who contriv'd so black a Project. They only intended at first to punish those, that were accus'd and found Guilty; but that wretched Fellow, who had forsaken his Religion, having publickly offer'd Sacrifice to Idols, and beg'd that the same Thing shou'd be requir'd of the Jews, that they might be known; some sacrific'd, but others lost their Lives. This Renegado, who believ'd that his Country Men only dissembl'd, ask'd afterwards some Soldiers, to oblige them to work on the Sabbath Day. At Scythopolis, a Greek City, situate † on the Banks of the Jordan, a Jew seeing how his Nation was butcher'd, and that he cou'd not escape his Enemies, that were round about him, kill'd before their Eyes, his Father, Mother, Wife and Children, and afterwards run his Sword through his Body.

6. Cestius, Governour of Syria, whose Power reach'd as far as Judæa, might have prevented these Disorders. But on the contrary, he was at the Head of an Army, marching towards Jerusalem, to revenge the Death of some Roman Soldiers, that had been kill'd there. He burnt several Towns in his march, and halted at Gabaon, where the Jews, forgetting the Sabbath Day, fell upon his Army, put it in a Confusion, and had defeated it, if they had not been divided among themselves, upon promise of a Pardon. Cestius march'd thence, and encamp'd within less than a Mile of Jerusalem, and put it into such a Consternation, that the Factious forsook the Lower Town, and retir'd into the Upper. Had the Romans made use of the Dread they were in, they had taken it. Nay some call'd Cestius, and offer'd to open the Gates; but he wou'd not, or else he had some secret reason not to end this Business so speedily. He gave an Assault the 5*th* of November, and because he did not carry the Gate of the Temple, which he attack'd, he retir'd. The Besieg'd perceiving this, fell upon his Rear, and pursu'd him as far as Gabaon, where he had left his Camp. He march'd thence Two Days after; because he was afraid to be ſurrounded on every ſide. The Jews follow'd him, and taking advantage of a very narrow Deſcent, they ſo ſucceſsfully engag'd him, that nothing but the Night ſav'd the reſt of his Army. He loſt his Baggage.

* Lact. l. 4. c. 21. p. 423. 29. p. 123. t. 1. † Euseb. l. 3. c. 5. * An. 66. || Epiph. de Ponder. n. 14. p. 171. t. 2. † The Scripture calls it Bethsan. |||| Id. Hær.

fraid

7. This Advantage fir'd even the calmeſt Tempers, and made them immediately reſolve upon a War. They divided the Command. Joſephus the Hiſtorian was ſent into the Upper and Lower Galilee; Eleazar, the Son of Ananias, into Idumæa; and Annas the High-Prieſt undertook the Government of Jeruſalem, the Temple, and the Neighbouring Cittadels. On the other hand, Ceſtius being aſham'd, and angry, inform'd Nero, with what happen'd. The Emperour ſent Veſpaſian with ſome Forces to ſtop the Current of this dangerous Inſurrection. This General having aſſembl'd his Army in Syria, enter'd into Galilee. Joſephus had there One Hundred Thouſand Men of the Militia; but they did not much appear in the Field. Having intelligence that Veſpaſian, after he had taken Sephoris, and ſome other Towns, deſign'd to beſiege Jotapata, he got into that Place. It was but * a large Village, which he fortify'd to ſtop the Enemy for ſome time. It was ſupply'd with a vaſt quantity of Proviſions, except Salt and Water, which were ſcarce. But Joſephus husbanded the Water: For it was meaſur'd out; and by hanging over the Wall ſome Garments dipp'd in Water, he made the Romans deſpair of reducing the Town by want of Water. He had there ſeveral ſharp Encounters with the Romans, who during the Siege, which laſted Seven Weeks, loſt a world of Men. Veſpaſian himſelf was wounded, and in danger of his Life. But a Deſerter, having at laſt inform'd this General, that the Beſieg'd were reduc'd to a Handful of Men, and ſlept in the Night to refreſh themſelves, the better to undergo the Fatigue of the Day; he order'd his Son Titus, and one of his Lieutenant Generals, to attack the Place early in the Morning, and was Maſter of it ſooner than he expected. The Army † was in the Cittadel before the Jews awak'd; and the Romans begun the Slaughter as ſoon as they came in; and ſpar'd none but Women and Children; Forty Thouſand Jews periſh'd, either in the Siege, or at the Taking of the Town. Joſephus was found in a Cave, and ſpar'd by Veſpaſian, to whom, it is ſaid, he foretold that he ſhou'd be Emperour.

8. Veſpaſian afterwards attack'd Tiberias, and Tarichea. The Mutineers got together in this laſt Place, and at firſt ſally'd againſt Titus, who was marching to beſiege them; but being repell'd, and Titus taking advantage of their Diſorder, enter'd the Town, and put the Inhabitants to the Sword. Gamala, which Joſephus had fortify'd, made alſo ſome reſiſtance. This Town ‖ was ſituate on the other ſide of Jordan, and yet was reckon'd as part of Galilee. And indeed, tho' the Jordan ſeparated this Province from Peræa, yet ſome places beyond that River were call'd by the Name of Galilee. Judas, that ſeditious Man, mention'd in the Acts of the Apoſtles, is call'd a Galilean, notwithſtanding he was born at Gaulon, or at Gamala, which was beyond the Jordan. So that Galilee extended on the other ſide of that River; and I cannot conceive how it can be diſputed; ſince we have in St. Luke the Teſtimony of Gamaliel for this. The Romans, who intended to make themſelves Maſters of all that Province, which had been under the Command of Joſephus, paſs'd the River, and beſieg'd Gamala. The Place made a vigorous Defence, and even after the Romans had enter'd it, they were driven out with conſiderable Loſs. Veſpaſian was there wounded with a Sling; but at laſt Heaven declar'd for him. The Wind blowing very hard, violently carry'd the Roman Darts againſt the Beſieg'd, whilſt ſome Soldiers were beating down a Tower, that open'd them a Paſſage. The Town was taken, and the Victor did not ſpare even the Children. Four Thouſand Jews were kill'd; and Five Thouſand, in the height of an aſtoniſhing Deſpair, threw themſelves down from the Top of the Rocks. There was ſuch a Slaughter of that Nation every where, and that too with ſo particular Circumſtances, that there was reaſon to believe, that God had a Mind to extirpate them, and even not to ſpare their very Children. In a Word, all Galilee was reduc'd this ſecond Campaign; and after ſome Expeditions of leſſer Note, Veſpaſian put his Army into Winter Quarters, at Cæſarea, where there had always been a Roman Garriſon, and was the uſual Reſidence of the Governours of Judæa.

9. They open'd the third Campaign by the Siege of Gadara. There were two Towns of that Name; One ſituate on the Mediterranean, and which one of the Macchabees took with Jamnia; the Other, famous for the Swine, which were thrown headlong into the Sea by thoſe Devils, that Chriſt caſt out of a Demoniack. Gergeza was in the Neighbourhood, and the Territory of this laſt, was larger than that of Gadara, that was but a ſmall Town. So that we muſt not be ſurpriz'd, that ſome of the Evangeliſts ſpeak of the Countrey of the Gergeſenes, and another of that of the Gadarenes. For one of theſe Territories was ſurrounded by the other. It is not ſtrange, that there were ſome Swine in this Town, which belong'd to Heathens, and Pompey had annex'd to thoſe of Syria. It was even taken from the Juriſdiction of the Herods. It is ſaid, that there was near that place a very ſtinking Lake; and that this happen'd, becauſe the Devils, that caſt out a great deal of Stench, threw themſelves into it with the Swine, by Chriſt's Order. But as the Swine, and the Devils threw themſelves into the Sea of Tiberias; it is no hard matter to conclude this a Fable. The Romans ſurpriz'd this Place, which was the Metropolis of Peræa, that is, of the Province beyond Jordan, which fell to the Share of the Tribes of Ruben, and Gad. Doleſus, one of the Citizens, introduc'd |||| the Enemy undiſcover'd. But the Inhabitants out of Revenge kill'd him, and then fled out of the Town. Placidus, who commanded then, forc'd them into a Village, and kill'd Fifteen Thouſand at the Paſſage of the Jordan, not to reckon a great many that were drown'd in the River, which was ſwell'd by the Rain. He carry'd his Conqueſts as far as the Dead Sea, and made himſelf Maſter of the whole Countrey.

10. In the mean time Veſpaſian was upon his March to Jeruſalem, which he had begun to block up. He took Lydda and Jamnia, ravag'd Idumæa, put a Garriſon into Jericho, which was forſaken by the Inhabitants; and made a Legion encamp at Emmaus, which was but three Leagues from Jeruſalem. But the News of Nero's Death interrupted his Deſigns. He thought, that he ought to wait for the New * Emperour's Orders, or rather to ſee the Event of that Revolution, wherein he was concern'd himſelf very much, as it appear'd afterwards. The Jews made uſe of the Delay, which God granted them; and negociated ſome Alliances on the other ſide of the Euphrates. This is perhaps what deceiv'd Dio, and made him ſay, that the Jews of thoſe Eaſtern Provinces, ſent their Brethren a conſiderable Body of Forces. 1. Becauſe the Jews really flatter'd themſelves, that they ſhou'd have a powerful Aſſiſtance from thoſe Parts. 2 Becauſe Jeruſalem being beſieg'd at the time of the Feaſt of the Paſſover, a prodigious Number of Strangers were found in it. But the Jews receiv'd no Succours from the Eaſt, and that great Multitudes of them that was then at Jeruſalem, went up only for the Feaſt. Theſe Negociations with the Enemies of the State, made Veſpaſian angry in earneſt, who, when he was Maſter of the Empire, order'd his Son Titus, to lead his Legions againſt Jeruſalem, to beſiege the Place, and to give the Rebels no Quarter. But they did not ſpare one another, and we have ſpoken of their mutual Cruelties, whilſt they had time to breath.

* Joſeph. de Bello, l. 3. c. 8. &c. p. 842. † An. 67. ‖ Vide Lightfoot, Chorog. pauca ad Luc. p. 681. |||| An. 68. * An. 69.

that

11. Titus at laſt inveſted Jeruſalem, in the Year 70, at the beginning of April, when they were preparing themſelves to celebrate the Paſſover. His Army conſiſted of Four * Legions, whereof the Twelfth eagerly long'd to be reveng'd of the Jews, who had beaten them under Ceſtius. This only made a Body of Twenty Four Thouſand Foot, and Two Thouſand Four Hundred Horſe; but Five Thouſand Men were added to theſe, from Two other Legions. Beſides the Allies, that is, thoſe Nations, who were not free of Rome, furniſh'd Twenty Regiments of Foot, and Eight of Horſe. Two Kings, Agrippa and Sohemus, joyn'd them with their Troops. Antiochus, another King, ſent alſo his. And Laſtly, a Company of Arabians, come to inrich themſelves by plundering, ſwell'd up the Army to a conſiderable Number.

Jeruſalem was provided with all Neceſſaries for a Siege. The Feaſt of the Paſſover, which ſometimes gather'd together Two Millions, and Seven Hundred Thouſand Perſons, was then Celebrating, and prodigiouſly encreas'd the Number of the Soldiers. Thoſe that the Roman Conqueſts drove from other parts of Judæa, were for ſome Months before in Jeruſalem. The People, nay the very Women, who thought it an Honour to be bury'd under the Ruins of their Temple, fought with wonderful Reſolution. Several Wiſe Men wiſh'd for Peace, and had a mind to ſubmit. But whether they were too narrowly watch'd, or fanſy'd that they had betray'd their Religion, if they had betray'd ſome Ruffians, for whoſe ſake they ſuffer'd, they never attempted any thing againſt their Countrey. They had ſome Arms, and even ſome Machines, which they had taken from Ceſtius. In a Word, they had abundance of Ammunitions, and Proviſions, and the Famine that happen'd afterwards, was occaſion'd by that vaſt concourſe of Strangers, who unexpectedly came thither. The Ciſterns and Fountains of the Temple ſupply'd them with Water enough, altho' ſome Old Writers, have inſinuated that it fail'd them.

12. The City was ſtrongly ſituated; and whether they had meditated an Inſurrection, or foreſeen the War, nothing was omitted to make it yet ſtronger. It made a kind of a Circle about the Temple, rais'd upon the Mountain of Moriah. This Temple was a very ſtrong Hold; beſide it was the Cittadel of Antonia, built very high, where the Romans commonly kept their Garriſon, to obſerve what was done in the Temple. But as they had loſt it, it was a ſecond Fort, that hinder'd any Approaches to the Temple. The Palace, built upon Mount Sion, was alſo a ſtrong Fortification. A Triple Wall, with One Hundred and Sixty Four Towers, incloſ'd all the Mountains, whereon the City was built. It was inacceſſible in ſome places, by reaſon of ſome deep Valleys. To conclude, they had there ſome Subterranean Canals, through which they might, and did often paſs with Succeſs. For the Beſieg'd went through them very far into the Countrey, and ſurpriz'd the Forragers, whom they the more eaſily defeated, becauſe they were not expected. Tacitus and Joſephus have given a more exact Plan of the Place, when it was inveſted by Titus. But as theſe Authors, and the Siege are very well known, I only make a general Deſcription of it, that we may not forget any thing that ſeems material to a Hiſtory, which we make aſcend as far as Chriſt.

13. Titus appointed the general Rendezvous of his Army, within a League and an half of Jeruſalem, and made haſt to get thither. He went himſelf without Cask, or Cuiraſs, to take a View of the Place. But the Jews having obſerv'd him, made a briſk Sally, and ſurrounded him, ſo that one wou'd think that he muſt have fallen into their Hands; yet he eſcap'd; and then order'd the Army to advance within leſs than a Mile of the City, and ſent a Legion to take poſt on the Mount of Olives, which was ſever'd from the Town by the Brook of Cedron, ſo often mention'd by the Evangeliſts. The Beſieg'd reſolv'd to diſpute him that Ground, and did overſet the Legion, which was already at work to cover it ſelf; and had not Titus come in Perſon with a conſiderable Detachment to ſupport it, it had been intirely routed. He order'd that the Work ſhou'd be begun afreſh, and that renew'd a ſecond time the Danger. For Titus run again a great risk. They ſally'd after the ſame manner the next Day; but whether the Romans had ſecur'd themſelves behind their Lines; or the Beſieg'd, who were weaken'd by theſe bloody Skirmiſhes, had a mind to ſpare their Forces, they reſolv'd to confine themſelves within the City, where they celebrated the Feaſt of the Paſſover, which was the 14*th* of April.

14. The Jews being ſhut up within their Walls, Joſephus was employ'd to make them ſome Overtures of Peace. They ſeem'd to accept of them, and a great many Soldiers being incourag'd by that to draw nearer, found to their Coſt, that they had been impos'd upon. For they had much ado to make good their Retreat, and they were like to be puniſh'd for marching without Order. The true Attack was deſign'd on the North part of the Town; and Titus having rais'd his Platforms, and play'd thence his Machines, ſoon made a Breach in the Firſt Wall, which the Romans took without much Reſiſtance. The Heathen Authors, Dio and Suetonius, relate two Circumſtances of this firſt Attack; One, that the Jews, being ready to ſet Fire to the Machines, that plaid upon them, Titus opportunely arriv'd to drive them away, and kill'd Fourteen of them, with Fourteen Arrows; the Other, that he was wounded in his left Arm, which was ever after the weaker for it. However, Joſephus doth not ſpeak one Word of this Circumſtance.

The firſt Wall being taken, ſome Batteries were rais'd againſt the ſecond, which coſt more Blood. The Jews being ſtreighten'd, did all they cou'd, to hinder the Approaches of the Enemy: But a Tower being ſhook down by a Ram, the Romans enter'd in at that place. The Beſieg'd, far from being diſhearten'd, ſally'd into the Town, where Titus was lodg'd ſome days before, and made a great Slaughter of his Troops. So that he was oblig'd to abandon the ſecond Wall, which was taken four Days after, during which time, the Jews continually skirmiſh'd with the Romans.

15. The firſt Day of May, the Famine begun to be felt in the City; and did a great deal of Miſchief; yet the Beſieg'd did not loſe Courage. On the contrary, they ſtruggl'd the more, and that with a great deal of Succeſs. For Titus deſigning to take the Cittadel, in order to attack the more eaſily the Temple, had four Earthen Mounts erected (and that with a great deal of Trouble) whence he intended to make a Breach with his Machines. Whilſt they were working upon them, Antiochus, Son to the King of Comagena, and bore the Title of Illuſtrious, or of Epi- phanes,

* Every Legion conſiſted of Six Thouſand Foot, and Six Hundred Horſe. Every Cohors conſiſted of Six Hundred Men, and every Legion had Sixty Centurions.

phanes, as the Old Perſecutor of the Jews had done, came with his Forces, and eſpecially ſome Macedonians: For thus he call'd a kind of Giants, that attended him, and whoſe Valour he had try'd. He was ſurpriz'd that Titus deferr'd to ſtorm the Cittadel, who ſmilingly told him, that he might attempt it. He cou'd not poſſibly go back from his Bravado. The Jews receiv'd him briskly, and ſent back almoſt all theſe Macedonians wounded. John found a way to burn Two of the Mounts, by ſetting them on fire under ground; and Simon making a very ſeaſonable Sally, whilſt the Jews ſet on fire the Machines of the Two other Mounts, both the Machines and Mounts were reduc'd to Aſhes; and the Romans were driven to their very Camp. Theſe Advantages diſhearten'd the Beſiegers, who were already very weary of a Siege, that had laſted almoſt Two Months, and coſt a great deal of Blood. Titus was afraid, that he cou'd not maſter a Place, that was bravely defended by a more numerous Army than his own. So that he reſolv'd to make a Wall round the City, which was Two Leagues in Circumference, with Twelve Forts to cover it, that the Beſieg'd might not be able to go out to get Proviſions, nor be ſuccour'd by the reſt of their Nation.

16. However, they work'd again upon the Mounts, and Machines, that were burnt. As ſoon as the Beſieg'd perceiv'd that they were finiſh'd, they ſally'd to burn them, and thence depended the Raiſing of the Siege. But God wou'd not ſuffer it. For the Romans who were upon their Guard, beat the Jews back; the Machines were plac'd, and they begun to play againſt the Cittadel of Antonia. But as it remain'd unmov'd, the Romans made uſe of the Sappe; and indeed as John had mined on that ſide, when he went the firſt time to burn the Machines, the Wall fell in the Night time. But the Romans were ſurpriz'd to ſee another Wall behind that. Titus order'd it to be attack'd, but he was only obey'd by Twelve Soldiers. They were got over the Wall, when the Jews obſerving their Number, drove them back again. But inſtead of keeping that important Poſt, it was ſurpriz'd Two Days after by Four and Twenty Soldiers, whom Titus came to ſuſtain, as ſoon as he had notice of it; and he became thereby Maſter of the Cittadel. He order'd part of it to be pull'd down, that he might ſtorm the Temple with his whole Army. In the mean time the Beſieg'd were every Day more preſs'd by Famine. A Mother eat her Child. One Hundred and Fifteen Thouſand Eight Hundred and Eighty, that were ſtarv'd to Death, were in a ſhort time bury'd. It is confidently reported, that they threw out of the Gates, Six Hundred Thouſand Poor. Thoſe that had an opportunity to get out, went into the Roman Camp, where they were kill'd by Plenty, as well as others in the Temple by Famine, for they did eat too much. Another Accident increas'd their Miſery. Thoſe that came out, ſwallow'd their Gold, that they might not be altogether bare. This trick was found out, and the Syrians rip'd open their Bellies, that they might come at this Metal. Titus had ſo great an Abhorrence to that Barbarity, that he deſign'd to have puniſh'd it; but the Guilty were too numerous.

17. After Antonia was taken, the Romans attack'd the Temple; and to do it the better, they rais'd Four Earthen Mounts, and they undermin'd the Place. Titus order'd the Jews to be attack'd, when he thought them aſleep; but being miſtaken, the Diſpute was bloody, laſted Eight Hours, and he cou'd not boaſt of a Victory. However, after many Engagements, wherein the Beſieg'd had the worſe, and after many Galleries were ſet on fire, which the Jews did with good Succeſs to burn the Romans, theſe made themſelves Maſters of the Porch of the Gentiles, thence they were forc'd to go to that of the Jews, and were a long time before they cou'd make a Breach in it. The Romans growing impatient, attempted to ſcale it. The Beſieg'd let them come, and ſet their Colours upon the Wall; but falling afterwards upon them with the utmoſt Bravery, they overſet their Ladders as they were as yet full of Soldiers, and carry'd away their Colours. The Romans took another method to attack them. For they ſet the Gates a Fire; the thin Silver Plates, that cover'd them, melted, and the Flame took hold of the Galleries. The Jews, aſtoniſh'd at ſo unlook'd for a Conflagration, did not mind either to put it out, or to defend themſelves, as they had done before. After the Fire had laſted a long while, Titus order'd it to be put out, and reſolv'd in a Council of War, to give a general Aſſault to the Temple, on the Eleventh of Auguſt: But the Beſieg'd did not make him ſtay till then. For on the Tenth they begun a deſperate Fight; they at firſt had the better, but they were forc'd at laſt to retire. The Aſſault was to be given the next Day; but a Soldier, without having any Orders for it, got one of his Comrades to lift him up, and threw in a Fire-brand at one of the Windows. It ſet the Place where it fell on Fire; and in a few Hours the Fire encreas'd. The Army awaken'd both by the Noiſe, and the hopes of Plunder, run to it in a Confuſion. Titus, who perceiv'd that the Out-parts of the Temple were a Fire, reſolv'd to preſerve the Body; and therefore ſent the Captain of his Guards, with Orders to ſtop it. But nothing was able to curb the Fury of the Soldiers, who unmercifully kill'd all that fell into their Hands. Titus had time enough to viſit the Holy-Place, and admire the Wealth that was in it. But a Soldier put ſome Fire behind the Door, through which Titus came out, and thereby hinder'd this Prince, from preſerving it as a Rich Monument of his Victory. The Romans made a terrible Slaughter of the Jews, which may be eaſily conceiv'd, conſidering the Fury of the Troops, who were enrag'd at ſo long a Reſiſtance, and the Number of thoſe, who ſhut up themſelves in the Temple. The Seditious open'd themſelves a Way through the Flames, and the Conquerors; and retir'd into part of the upper Town, that might ſtill hold out.

18. This part of the Town was Mount Sion, where the Palace was built. John and Simon retir'd into this Palace, and cut the Throats of thoſe, who had ſeiz'd upon it before. They thence ſent to deſire a Conference of Titus, who had reaſon to be very weary of the Siege. He offer'd them their Lives; if they wou'd ſurrender themſelves; but having taken an Oath, that they wou'd never do it; and asking to have the Liberty to retire into the Wilderneſs with their Wives and Children, it was reſolv'd to attack them. When they found, that they were oblig'd to defend themſelves, they plunder'd all the Gold, Silver, and Proviſions they cou'd get, becauſe they hop'd to hide themſelves in the Common-ſhores of the City, eſcape the Fury of the Romans, and enjoy their Plunder. In the mean time, many came into Titus's Camp, and among them Two Prieſts, who brought him the Sacerdotal Robe, with the Precious Stones of the Ephod. This Prince ſet ſome at Liberty, and ſold the reſt at a very low Rate. He was from the Twentieth of Auguſt to the Seventh of September, to caſt up ſome new Earthen Mounts againſt the Palace, or Caſtle. He order'd his Machines to batter it, and did not find much Reſiſtance. The Victors ſpar'd no body, and the next day, which was a Sabbath Day, Titus was Maſter of the whole City. But the Rebels, Simon and John, were ſtill in Poſſeſſion of Three Towers, whence they might have defended themſelves; but being frighted, and abandon'd by their Troops, they only ſtudy'd how to ſecure themſelves by Flight, and after they had try'd to no purpoſe to force the Roman Wall towards Siloah, they hid themſelves in Holes. Theſe Two Villains abſconded in the Common-ſhores. John came firſt out, becauſe he wanted Provisions, and obtain'd his Life of the Romans, provided he enjoy'd it in Prison, where he was secur'd as long as he liv'd. Simon was conceal'd till the end of October, and thought to have escap'd the Romans, because he had disguis'd himself with a White Garment and a Scarlet Cloak; but he was stopp'd, and after Titus had led him in Triumph into Rome, he order'd him to be put to Death. His coming out of the Common-shores, awaken'd the Greediness, and Cruelty of the Romans. For believing that there were still some Wealth, and Persons hid in those Subterraneous Vaults, they more narrowly search'd them, and were not mistaken. So that those, who thought to save themselves, being taken by the Soldiers, they had their Throats cut.

19. Thus Jerusalem the Holy City was destroy'd. Its Inhabitants sued for Christ's Death, for fear the Romans shou'd ruin their City; but on the contrary, The Eagles gather'd together, where the dead Carcase was. Titus perceiv'd that he had been the Instrument of the Divine Vengeance, against this wicked Nation, and * shed Tears upon the Ruins of that Great City, when he pass'd again thither, in his return from Syria, where he spent the Winter. Some Monuments were erected to him for this Conquest. We see some Medals having Jerusalem, or a Prisoner lying at the Foot of a Trophy, with these Words, JUD. CAP. Judæa was taken. A Marble was some Years ago dug at Rome † with this Inscription;

S. P. Q. R.
IMP. TITO CÆS. DIVI VESPASIANI FILIO VESPASIANO AUG.
PONT. MAX. TR. POT. X. IMP. XVII. XIII. P. P.
PRINCIPI SUO QUI PRÆCEPTIS PATRIÆ
CONSILIIS Q. E.
AUSPICIIS GENTEM JUDÆORUM DOMUIT
ET URBEM
HIEROSOLYMAM, OMNIBUS ANTE SE
DUCIBUS REGIBUS.
GENTIBUS AUT FRUSTRA PETITAM,
AUT OMNINO INTENTATAM DELEVIT.

This Monument deserves our notice; because it is a plain Demonstration, that Princes were flatter'd even on Marble, and in publick Inscriptions. For this affirms, that Jerusalem was never taken but by Titus, and that all the preceeding Kings and Generals, either durst not attack it, or had done it to no purpose. Was the History of Jerusalem so unknown at Rome, that they wou'd alledge a Thing so false? What, had they forgot Pompey, who had not attempted this City in vain, and who made Judæa Tributary to the Republick? Did not they know the various Revolutions it had undergone under the Kings of Egypt, and Syria, since Alexander the Great's Conquests? This flattering Monument teaches us, that palpable Lyes are often set down in Inscriptions; and therefore that those Arguments which are deduc'd from them to prove some Facts, are not solid and irrefragable. The Jews, far from being asham'd of the Destruction of their Temple, reckon'd their Years from thence; and it is what they call the Æra of their Desolation.

Josephus ‖ affirms that the very Foundations of that great City were ras'd; and that nothing of it was preserv'd, but some Towers, to be as so many Monuments of Titus his Victory. He adds, that some Old Men, and Poor Women remain'd there after the Burning of the Temple, and that the Romans left a Legion in Garrison, that made an end of ransacking every where. The Historians, or rather the Christian Fathers do not agree with Josephus. St. Epiphanius says, that the House where the Apostles met together after the Ascension of the Son of God, and wherein they receiv'd the Holy Ghost, was preserv'd, with Seven Synagogues, that were upon Mount Sion, and near this House, which was probably turn'd into a Church. Some have an interest to maintain this; since they give a Catalogue of Eight and Twenty Bishops of Jerusalem, who succeeded one another, till Adrian having sent a Colony thither, they began to take a Bishop from among the Gentiles, whereas those, who had hitherto govern'd the Church, came out of the Synagogue. Nay, Eusebius goes yet further than St. Epiphanius. For he pretends, that there was there, not only a very Numerous Church, govern'd by Bishops, who resided there; but also that Titus preserv'd half of this City, agreeably to the Oracle of the Prophet Zachariah, who foretold, that part of the City shou'd be kept intire; and that it was in Adrian's Reign, that it was demolish'd from the very Foundation. Lastly, St. Jerome, doth yet more contradict Josephus. For he assures, that Titus preserv'd the Mountain of Moriah, where the Temple stood, and Mount Sion, where the Palace was built; and that this gave the Heathenish Historians occasion to say, that it was Adrian who destroy'd Jerusalem. And indeed Appianus, who liv'd in this Prince's Reign, says that it was ruin'd in his time. Our Modern Criticks have taken up the Fathers; and maintaining the Relation of Josephus, they affirm, that the City of Jerusalem was intirely rais'd by Titus, who had it plough'd, that it might not be any more Inhabited; and that the Total Destruction of this City, must not be referr'd to the time of Adrian. This may be the Cause why Eusebius, who led the Others into their Mistakes, was guilty of this Error. He imagin'd that Ælia was not built, till Adrian's War with the Jews; because he did not observe, that the Emperours were us'd to give new Names to Towns, when they celebrated the Tenth, or Twentieth Year of their Reign. Adrian built Ælia in the Year 132, before the War with the Jews; but he gave his Name to it, but Four Years after, when he celebrated the Twentieth Year

---

* A List of the Dead, and Prisoners, in this War, within the space of Seven Years.

At Jerusalem kill'd by Florus	630	At Taricheæ, now Jefferkin in Galilee	5500
At Cæsarea	10000	At Gamala	2000
At Scythopolis, a Town of Galilee	13000	At Giscala, Dead	2000
At Ascalon, now Scalona	2500	Prisoners	2200
At Ptolemais	5000	In Idumæa	10000
At Alexandria	50000	At Gezara, in the Neighbourhood of the Gadarenes	1000
At Damascus	10000	At Machærus	1700
At Joppa, or Jaffa	8400	At Jardes	3000
Upon a Mountain	2000	At the Castle of Massada	960
In a Battle at Ascalon	10000	At Cyrene	3000
In Ambuscadoes	8000	At Jerusalem Dead	1000000
At Aphec	15000	Prisoners	97000
Upon Garizim	11600
At Jotapata	30000		1339690
At Joppa	4200

Total, Thirteen Hundred Thirty Nine Thousand Six Hundred and Ninety Persons.

† Apud Bartholomæum Merhanum urbis Romæ Topograph. c. 7. Thes. Ant. R. Grævii, t. 3. p. 111. ‖ Joseph. de Bello. l. 1.

of

of his Reign, in order to ſolemnize it the more. Euſebius confounded the Foundation, with the Conſecration of this City, both perform'd by the ſame Prince, but at different times.

20. It is not impoſſible to reconcile theſe Authors, who ſeem ſo oppoſite to one another. The Fathers ſaid too much. For whence cou'd St. Epiphanius know, that the Houſe where the Apoſtles receiv'd the Holy-Ghoſt ſtood after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem? He only went upon this Preſumption, that God was bound to preſerve from the Conflagration, a Place, where he had perform'd ſo great a Miracle; as if it had been more Holy than others. We muſt not imagine, that he was better inform'd than we, ſince on the contrary, he puts the Taking of Jeruſalem in the Second Year of the Reign of Titus, who aſcended the Imperial Throne, but ſeveral Years after the Taking of that City. He confounded the Father with the Son, and Veſpaſian with Titus; and this is a groſs Miſtake. Euſebius improperly applys the Oracle of Zachariah to the taking of Jeruſalem by Titus; for that Prophecy concern'd Ptolemy, who made himſelf Maſter of part of the City upon a Sabbath Day, whereas the Prediction of Chriſt, There ſhall not be left here one Stone upon another, is poſitive. St. Jerome, who ſays, that the Mountains of Sion and Moriah were preſerv'd, is yet more groſly miſtaken. For had this happen'd, the Fineſt, and Strongeſt parts of the City had remain'd untouch'd; which Titus, who fear'd leaſt the Jews ſhou'd gather there again together, and fortify them after his departure, cou'd not ſuffer, without being guilty of a piece of Imprudence, unworthy of ſo wiſe a General as he. The Care, that he took to leave a whole Legion, conſiſting of Six Thouſand Men, to keep this Place, and to ſearch even into the Common-ſhores, ſhews plainly, that he took all the Precautions requiſite to prevent a New Inſurrection.

So that we are oblig'd to follow Joſephus, who affirms that the City was deſtroy'd, and intirely ruin'd by the Fire, and the inſatiable Avarice of the Conquerors who div'd into the Bowels of the Earth, to draw from thence the Treaſures that were hid there. This Hiſtorian ſays two things very remarkable. 1. That Six Thouſand Men were left there in Garriſon. So that there muſt have remain'd ſome Barracks, and Houſes to quarter them in, and even a certain Number of thoſe, who ſell to, and ſupply Soldiers with Neceſſaries. 2. Joſephus adds, that ſome Old Men, and Poor Women were left about the Ruins. If immediately after the taking of the Town, when ſome danger might have been apprehended, uſeleſs Inhabitants were ſuffer'd to ſtay, it is very likely, that others had afterwards leave to ſettle there. Above Sixty Years paſs'd from the taking of it by Titus to that by Adrian; and during this Interval it is more probable, that ſeveral wandring Jews came to inhabit it again. For all Nations are inclin'd to return into their own Countries, and none ſo much as the Jews; becauſe their Religion in ſome meaſure ſtrengthens Nature. There was no Decree till Adrian's time, that forbid them to go to live at Jeruſalem; and only ſome neceſſary Precautions were taken till the Revolt was intirely ſuppreſs'd. Some Women and old Men, were at firſt permitted to remain there, and all thoſe that were able to bear Arms, were remov'd. The Handicrafts begun afterwards by little and little to return, and with the Garriſon to form a kind of a City.

Domitian ſummon'd before him, the Relations of Chriſt, that were deſcended from the Family of David, and was inform'd by them that they were Poor, and ſatisfy'd to plough their Patrimony, which ſcarce afforded them wherewithal to pay their Taxes. So that the Jews were not at that time depriv'd of the Privilege of inhabiting Judæa, or of manuring their Lands, or of living in Jeruſalem, where the Chriſtians of that Nation had ſome Biſhops.

Scaliger * denies this, and laughs at the Credulity of Euſebius, for blindly following ſo doubtful an Author as Hegeſippus; and that for Two Reaſons. One, that this Hiſtorian makes the Relations of Chriſt deſcend from David by Judas, Brother to our Lord; and he looks upon this Judas as a fictitious Perſon, who is never mention'd by the Holy Pen-Men. The Other, becauſe he confines the Family of David to Two Perſons, notwithſtanding that the Poſterity of this Prince was always very numerous. For the Jews took from them their Chiefs of the Captivity, and their Princes, with this difference, that the Princes, that came from Hillel deſcended from David by the Females, and the Chiefs of the Captivity by the Males. But Scaliger was deluded by his Prejudices. It is ſtrange, that a Man, who will believe neither Hegeſippus, nor Euſebius, will yet ſo obſequiouſly follow the Rabbins, whoſe Character he ought to have known. He quotes them for his Vouchers concerning the Family of David, and produces them as unqueſtionable Witneſſes. He will by no means believe ſome, and gives too much credit to others. This is the common Fate of Criticks. They haughtily confute ſome Facts, and Hiſtorians, that they do not like; and weigh their Expreſſions, and the minuteſt Circumſtance. What doth not agree with their Notions, they immediately conclude to be falſe; but they fall into the oppoſite Extream, and obſtinately follow a Man, whoſe Authority ought infinitely to be leſs valu'd, than that which they oppoſe. Waving general Reflections, let us take notice of the Faults of this Great Man upon this Matter, † whereof part hath only been obſerv'd.

Firſt, he is miſtaken when he ſays, that Judas the Brother of Chriſt was not known. He there forgot his Goſpel. For the Jews ask'd whether Jeſus Chriſt ‖ the Son of Mary, had not James, and Joſes, and Simon, and Judas, for his Brethren; and St. Epiphanius ‖‖ aſcribes theſe Four Sons to Joſeph, pretending that he had them by a former Marriage. In a Word, Tradition tells us, that Judas marry'd, and had many Children. Theſe were perhaps thoſe Deſcendants of David by Judas, who excited Domitian's Jealouſy. Secondly, he makes Hegeſippus ſay, what he doth not ſay. For he doth not confine the Poſterity of David to the Two Perſons, that were ſummon'd. There might be ſome others, far from Jeruſalem and leſs known. It is not fair to father an Opinion upon an Author, to have the Pleaſure afterwards to condemn it. But ſuppoſe Hegeſippus had ſaid, that all the Family of David was reduc'd to Two Plough-Men, had he been in the wrong? How cou'd Scaliger have prov'd, that there were more of that Family? It ſhou'd have all been bury'd under the Ruins of Jeruſalem, where it reſided, and it is very likely, that none of them remain'd, but thoſe who embrac'd Chriſtianity, and fled in time to Pella. If the Rabbins nam'd but one, and offer'd at the ſame time ſome Proofs, that he deſcended from that Family, they wou'd be believ'd; but they only alledge a dubious Tradition, and a fabulous Cuſtom, which they are concern'd to maintain, that they may be able to ſay, that they always had a Chief of the Houſe of David. And are we more oblig'd to believe them upon their bare Word, than a Conjecture grounded on the Ruin of Jeruſalem, where moſt Families were intirely deſtroy'd? If after the Siege there had been any Jews of the Family of David, the Jews wou'd have choſen their Patriarch of Judæa out of one of them; whereas they choſe one who deſcended from David only by the Females; and even that Story is uncertain.

* Scaliger in Euſeb. p. 188. † Valeſ. Not. ad Euſeb. ‖ Matth. 13. 55. ‖‖ Epiph. Hær. 78.

And indeed the Diſtinction between the Princes, and Chiefs of the Captivity, is a Fiction. Scaliger, who hath follow'd the Rabbins on this Article, had not well weigh'd their Opinion. The Prince, or Patriarch govern'd all the Synagogues of Egypt, Judæa, and the Weſt, ſince the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; and another was afterwards created in the Eaſt, who aſſum'd the Title of Chief of the Captivity. This laſt call'd himſelf Prince as well as the other; and this Name became afterwards common to the moſt conſiderable Perſon of that Nation, in each Province. For we ſhall ſee hereafter ſome Princes in Italy, Spain, Germany, and in Babylon, which ſpoils the Diſtinction of the Rabbins.

Again, Scaliger was prepoſſeſs'd with this Opinion, that the Race of David was always flouriſhing; becauſe the Orientals have commonly ſeveral Wives. It wou'd be eaſy to give their Genealogy, were their Poſterity numerous. We ſhou'd at leaſt ſee ſome Branches come out of the Stock; but neither Stock, nor Branches of the Family of David are ſeen in the Eaſt, and all that is obſerv'd in the moſt accurate Hiſtorians, is that ſuch a One was of the Race of David; but without producing any Lineal Deſcent, or any proof of what they ſay.

It is too an Error of Scaliger, which is manifeſtly falſe, that this Race is in a Flouriſhing Condition at Bagdad, and that ſince the Year 700 of Chriſt, the Chiefs of the Captivity are choſen out of it. For theſe Chiefs were aboliſh'd in the Eleventh Century, and One Hundred Years after there was but One Chief, who had no Succeſſor; and Travellers know very well not only, that there are none at this time; but alſo that the Jews at Bagdad are few, and miſerable under the Empire of the Perſians.

Nevertheleſs, Scaliger endeavour'd upon theſe Prejudices, to confute what Hegeſippus ſaid of the Relations of our Lord, and of the Chriſtians, who dwelt at Jeruſalem, and had there their Biſhops. Having ruin'd his Ground-work, we may fairly raiſe up again the Edifice, which he pull'd down, and maintain with the Ancients, that ſome Inhabitants were again ſettl'd in Jeruſalem, as the Chriſtians, who return'd from Pella, and founded there ſeveral Churches, who were govern'd by Biſhops.

I cannot conceive, how the Catalogue of Biſhops that was found in the Archives of Jeruſalem, can be impugn'd; or how any can maintain that there were there neither Chriſtians nor Jews. This Catalogue is too Numerous, and hath ſome Clogs, which we have remov'd * elſewhere.

Laſtly, Dio affirms that the City had been intirely ruin'd, but that Adrian having ſent a Colony thither, and built a Temple to Jupiter, in the ſame Place where the Temple of God formerly ſtood, the Jews, who cou'd not bear that Strangers ſhou'd come to Inhabit their City, † "and introduce a Foreign Religion, "begun to mutiny. Adrian's Preſence, who was in "Egypt and Syria, kept them ſometime within Bounds; "but as they were Armourers to the Romans, they "did not temper well their Arms, that the Romans "might not uſe them againſt them. They after-"wards rais'd ſome ſmall Forts with Walls, that "were advantageous to them, and made ſome ſub-"terraneous Paſſages, to have thereby a Communica-"tion with one another, and eſcape the Purſuit of "their Enemies; which the Romans contemn'd at "firſt. Dio's Epitomizer agrees very well with Joſephus and with us. For he firſt acknowledges that the Old Town was deſtroy'd: Secondly, that the Romans however ſuffer'd there ſome Armourers, and Inhabitants, who were pretty numerous, ſince they preſum'd to revolt. Adrian, who did not love them, becauſe he had ſeen the Troubles under Trajan deſign'd to mortifie them by making the Plan of a New City and Temple, where Jupiter was to be worſhip'd. The Hiſtorian poſitively ſays, that the Jews were incens'd, that Strangers came to inhabit their City, which ſhews, that they were there, and look'd upon it as their own, altho' they fill'd but a ſmall part of it. Theſe Subterraneous Channels cou'd not be made in the Countrey. The Jews were neither Numerous, nor Powerful enough for ſo great an Undertaking. They only cleans'd the Common ſhores of Jeruſalem, and the Old Mines, which they intended to make uſe of. In a Word, Appian, who liv'd in the Time of the Emperour Adrian, ſaying, that this Prince deſtroy'd Jeruſalem in his Time, ‖ and as it were under his own Eyes, neceſſarily implies that there were ſome Inhabitants there, and ſome Houſes rebuilt.

By this Conjecture I reconcile the moſt material Difference between the Fathers, and Joſephus. The City was rais'd from the very Foundations, as Joſephus relates; but yet it was alſo intirely deſtroy'd by Adrian, who demoliſh'd the Towers, which Titus left ſtanding, and the Houſes that were rebuilt. He alter'd its Circumference, and Situation, and forbid the Jews ever to enter into it. So that the Colony ſeems to have been ſent thither but after the War. Euſebius ſays ſo. But without recurring to the Vicennalia of Adrian, and Father Pagi's Diſtinction between Foundation, and Conſecration, or the Name that was given to this City; it is more natural to ſay, that Adrian begun to ſend his Colony, and build Jeruſalem, before the War; but that this Colony having exaſperated the Jews, and his Deſign being thereby either interrupted, or even balk'd, he compleated it, when he had quell'd the Inſurrection. Dio confirms what we ſay, and ruins Father Pagi's Conjecture. For he obſerves, that Adrian gave the Name of Ælia to the New City, as ſoon as he undertook to build it.

21. Some Greek and Latin Fathers, as St. Hilary, and St. Athanaſius, ſaid, that there was no Jeruſalem in their Time. Scaliger ‖‖ gave them the Lye, becauſe he thought that this was falſe. Valeſius came to their Relief, and maintain'd that they were in the Right, ſince Adrian, who was an Enemy to the Jews, had no deſign to rebuild their City, and that it was not call'd Ælia till the time of Conſtantin the Great. Pagi makes uſe of the Authority of Beda and Zonaras, who affirm that Adrian built Ælia where Jeruſalem ſtood, to refute in his turn Valeſius. It is a ſtrange Thing, that Criticks will confute before they underſtand one another. For it is a Thing that can't be deny'd, that Adrian alter'd the Situation of Jeruſalem. He left out of its Circumference the Mounts of Sion, and Bezetha; and Sion is at this Day within Fifty or Sixty Paces of the City. Beſides he enlarg'd it another way, ſince he incloſ'd the Calvary where Chriſt ſuffer'd. Laſtly, he gave it the Name of Ælia, which it held till the time of Conſtantine, but then it reaſſum'd its old Name of Jeruſalem. How cou'd then the Fathers, that liv'd at that time ſay to the Jews, that it was not then in being? Cou'd the ſmall Alteration, which Adrian made in its Circumference, give any grounds to upbraid them with that. And tho' it had ſtill been call'd Ælia, which it was not in the Reign of Conſtantin, was the alteration of Name ſufficient to ſay, that it was not in Being? The Chriſtians acknowledg'd its Being; ſince there was a Biſhop there. It is eaſy to remove the Difficulty, which hath divided the ableſt Criticks. For St. Hilary, St. Athanaſius, and other Fathers, who thus upbraided the Jews, did not mind the Name of Ælia, or of Jeruſalem, or even the

* Hiſtorie de L'Egliſe l. 1. † Xiphilin. p. 262. Euſeb. Hiſt. p. 61. & Pagi Crit. An. 132.

‖ Ἐπ' ἐμοῦ. ‖‖ Scalig. in Euſeb. Chron. p. 199. Valeſ. in Buildings,

Buildings, but a Thing of more importance. They ask'd the Jews, where Jeruſalem was? They obſerv'd, that when it was taken by the Babylonians, God took care to re-build it; whereas after its Deſtruction by Titus, it was never re-built; and they were in the Right; becauſe by Jeruſalem, they did not barely underſtand the Name of the City, its Palaces, Houſes, and Circumference; but the Seat of their Religion; the City with its Temple, Prieſts, and Worſhip. By giving this eaſy and natural meaning to the Words of the Fathers, who inſulted the Jews on the ſcore of their Diſperſion, we render all the Remarks of Criticks uſeleſs, who make the Fathers argue with too much Subtilty about what they did not deſign. It was not an Objection worthy of thoſe great Divines to ſay, Jeruſalem is no more, becauſe it was call'd Ælia by Adrian; or Jeruſalem doth not ſubſiſt, becauſe there is ſome alteration in its Houſes and Circuit. Both theſe Arguments are weak; but by uniting the City with its Temple, Worſhip and form of Government, the Objection is ſolid. It is true, that Jeruſalem was ſtill in Being; but not the Center of the Religion and Empire of the Jews. Thus the Scepter was departed from Judah, and the Law-giver from between his Feet. For it was not enough for them to have ſome Walls, where few of them dwelt, ſince they had neither a King, Temple, or Sacrifice of their own. Thus by oppoſing the New Jeruſalem to the Old, the Argument is more concluſive, than by quarrelling about its Name, or Circumference, which Adrian alter'd.

The End of the Firſt BOOK.

28 JY 73

THE

THE

Hiſtory and Religion

OF THE JEWS.

BEING A

CONTINUATION

OF

JOSEPHUS.

BOOK II.

Containing the Hiſtory of the Sects, that were in Being in the time of JESUS CHRIST, and the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. The Samaritans, Sadducees, Phariſees, Eſſenes, Herodians, &c.

Their Original, Tenets, Progreſs, and preſent State.

Plan of the Second BOOK.

THE unhappy Diviſions of Judæa were the Cauſes of its Misfortunes. The Schiſm of Samaria drew part of the Nation after it. The Hatred, which ſhou'd have abated by length of Time, and Calamities, continu'd. The War, whereby God reveng'd his Son, did not make them Unite. They every where weaken'd themſelves, whilſt the Publick Emergencies requir'd that they ſhou'd join their Forces againſt the Common Enemy. They rather choſe to periſh by their Diviſions, than to oppoſe with conſent the Oppreſſor of their Liberty. Even when Jeruſalem fell, and its Inhabitants were involv'd in the ſame Calamity, they continu'd their Hatred, and unmercifully tore one another; and this Schiſm, the moſt Inveterate of all the Reſt, doth as yet ſubſiſt.

Beſides this Schiſm, the Nation was ſub-divided into different Sects, whereof one undermin'd the Foundation of Religion and Piety. Yet they were ſuffer'd in the Temple; and ſome High-Prieſts choſen out of this Sect. Another, living retir'd, contemn'd Mankind, ſhun'd publick Aſſemblies, and was not Partaker of the Sacrifices. Another made Herod aſcend the Throne of the Meſſiah; and to flatter this Prince, whom the reſt abhorr'd, as a Foreigner unworthy to Rule over them, proclaim'd him the Deliverer promiſs'd and characteriz'd by the Prophets.

Moſt of theſe Sects as yet ſubſiſt. The Samaritans have their Temples, Altars, and Sacrifices. The Sadducees and Caraites, maintain themſelves in ſpight of their powerful Enemies, who perſecute them every where; and the Phariſees at this Day fill the Synagogues; and moſt Divines, wedded to Traditions, and their Virtues, are Diſciples of the Old Doctors, that Chriſt oppos'd with ſo much Warmth.

We have already obſerv'd, that Joſephus hath not enlarg'd enough on this Subject; and that what the Goſpel ſays is clearer. However, as the Holy Pen-Men writ the Hiſtory of the Church in its Infancy, rather than that of the wandering Sects, and of the Synagogue, that was a ſinking, they did not apply themſelves to unfold their Tenets; and ſuppoſing they had done it, the Hiſtory of the Ages after Chriſt is wanting.

As the different Writers, and Tenets, which we are to deſcribe, came out of theſe Sects; it is requiſite that we ſhou'd examine them narrowly, and diſcover, if poſſible, what was their Doom from their Beginning to this Time. As this enlarges conſiderably the Hiſtory of theſe Sects, it cou'd not be contain'd in the Firſt Book.

I was forc'd to deviate from the Method, which I propos'd at firſt; and to diſtinguiſh the Objects, that they might not be confounded; and after I have repreſented the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem to allow a particular Book to the Sects, which begun to tear and ruin it.

CHAP.

CHAP. I.

The Hiſtory of the Old Samaritans, taken from their Chronicle, and ſeveral Monuments compar'd with the Scripture.

I. A Deſcription of Samaria. Its Palaces. The Streets of the King of Syria explain'd. II. The different Sieges it ſuſtain'd. III. Errors of the Fathers upon the Name of the Samaritans. IV. A Deſcription of Naples, which is the Sichem of Abraham. V. The Holineſs of Mount Garizim. Its Deſcription. VI. Its different Names. VII. Its true Situation. Some Miſtakes of St. Epiphanius, and St. Jerome corrected. VIII. Chronicle of the Samaritans. Some Extracts concerning their Original. IX. How Joſuah is prais'd in it. X. The Love of an antient Origin is general. XI. Example taken from the Jews, Rivals to the Samaritans. XII. Jeroboam's Schiſm. XIII. The Country of Hoſea, a Schiſmatick and a Prophet. XIV. The Tranſplanting of the Cuthæans into Samaria. XV. This is deny'd by the Chronicle of that Country. XVI. This Chronicle confuted. XVII. The Original of the Cuthæans. XVIII. The Third Period of the Schiſm under Manaſſeh: XIX. At what time the Samaritan Jubilees begun. XX. Whether they made uſe of the Æra of the Seleucides. XXI. A Difficulty upon a place of the Macchabees ſolv'd. XXII. What happen'd under Eupator, diſgeſted in its true Order. XXIII. A Third Æra of the Samaritans. Of the time, wherein Herod re-built their City. XXIV. Tſadock did not go to Samaria, nor live under Alexander. XXV. The Revolutions of the Samaritans under the Ptolemies. The Temple of Onias in Egypt. XXVI. The Revolutions of the ſame Samaritans under the Kings of Syria. XXVII. Their mean Complacency for Antiochus Epiphanes. The Explication of that Name, and of the Subſcription of the Letters of the Samaritans. XXVIII. The Siege of Samaria by Hircanus. Some Hogs occaſion the Taking of the Town. XXIX. Its Affection for Herod.

1. SAMARIA the Capital City of the Schiſmaticks, deriv'd its Name from Shemer, to whom the Mountain belong'd, and who ſold it to Omri King of the Ten Tribes, to build there a Palace. The Preſence of the Kings, who lik'd the Situation of the Place, ſoon made it a flouriſhing City. The Scripture ſays, that Ahab built there a Houſe of Ivory, which ſeems impoſſible; ſince all the Elephants of Africa, and all the Indies, cou'd not have afforded Teeth enough to have erected ſuch a Palace. But this Palace was ſo call'd; becauſe one of the Apartments was perhaps Wainſcotted with Ivory, or rather the Chief Ornaments of it were made out of Elephants Teeth. There were beſides in it, a Place and ſome Streets belonging to the King of Syria, which puzles Interpreters; ſince thoſe Kings, far from being in poſſeſſion of Samaria before Antiochus the Great, were look'd upon as its moſt formidable Enemies. But the Words of Ben-hadad King of Syria to Ahab clear this. For they ſhow, that this City was made tributary to his Father, notwithſtanding that the Scripture doth not mention that fatal Revolution. And indeed Ben-hadad, a Priſoner of War, and threaten'd with a cruel Death, promiſes Ahab to reſtore him the Cities, which his Father took; And thou ſhalt, ſays he, make Streets for thee in Damaſcus as my Father made in Samaria. So that Ben-hadad the King of Syria's Predeceſſor, muſt have made ſome Conqueſts upon the Samaritans; and after he had taken ſeveral Towns, he impos'd this hard term on the Vanquiſh'd, to give him a place in Samaria, in order to build there a Palace, as a laſting Monument of his Victory. And therefore he offer'd Ahab the ſame Thing in Damaſcus.

2. This City, which was ſtrongly ſituated, ſuſtain'd Four Sieges. One by Ben-hadad King of Syria, who ſaid in a Bravado, that the Duſt of Samaria ſhou'd not ſuffice for handfuls, for all the People that follow'd him. He was nevertheleſs beaten in a Sally, and forc'd to fly. It ſuſtain'd a Second Siege longer than the Firſt; and was ſo pinch'd with Famine, that the fourth part of * a Cab of Dove's Dung was ſold for five Pieces of Silver; thus all Interpreters tranſlated this till Mr. Bochart, who tranſlated it Chick Peaſe; becauſe it was impoſſible to get Doves Dung at Samaria, and to feed upon it. God perform'd a Miracle for the Samaritans. For the Syrians in a Panick Fear abandon'd the Siege, their Arms, and Baggage. Shalmaneſer beſieg'd it the Third time and took it. After Alexander the Great's Death it fell into the Hands of the Kings of Egypt; but Antiochus the Great conquer'd theſe Provinces, which border'd upon his Share, and the Kings of Syria continu'd Poſſeſſors of it till Hircanus rais'd it from the very Foundations: So, that there were no Footſteps of it to be ſeen. Herod the Great ras'd it from its Ruins, and ſettled in it a Colony of Six Thouſand Perſons, whereof the greateſt part were Soldiers out of his Auxiliary Troops, which he kept to curb the Jews, and ſtifle their Tumults when they made any againſt him.

3. The Fathers have had many quaint Notions about the Original and Name of this City. Theophanes † will not have it deriv'd from Shemer; but doth the Chaldeans the Honour of deriving it from them. He is miſtaken; and becauſe he had read, that the Colony, that re-peopl'd this great City was ſent from the Province of Chus, he imagin'd that theſe new Inhabitants come from Chaldæa, nam'd this City Samaria, notwithſtanding that it had that Name a long time before. || St. Epiphanius believ'd that the Samaritans ſignify'd Guards; and thence concludes that they were the Guards of the Law. Whereas Gregory the Great |||| look'd upon the Samaritans as ſo many Camels, loaded with heavy Burthens, which were of no uſe to them; becauſe theſe Schiſmaticks oblig'd themſelves to obſerve the Law; without having a Right to it's Promiſes and Rewards: But after he hath degraded them into the condition of Pack-Horſes, he makes of Chriſt an obſtinate Samaritan, who wou'd never reject this odious Title given him by his Enemies; * Thou art a Samaritan, and haſt a Devil, ſaid the Jews to our Redeemer. Gregory obſerves, that he refuted the laſt Affront with Indignation; but that he was pleas'd to be call'd a Samaritan, becauſe he was the Guard by way of Excellency ſpoken of by a Prophet, when he ſays, that it is in vain that the Watch-Man waketh, except the Lord keep the City †. All theſe Fathers gave themſelves a great deal of Trouble to find a Myſtery in a Word which hath none.

Samaria was afterwards call'd Sebaſte by Herod; but it muſt not be confounded with Auguſtopolis. Some fanſy'd, that one was the Latin, and the other the Greek Name of the ſame City. But there was in the Third Paleſtine an Auguſtopolis very different from Sebaſte; and in the Council held under Mennas, Elias ſign'd for all the Monks of Au-

---

* It held according to Dr. Arbuthnott almoſt Three Pints. Hær. 24. p. 9. |||| Gregor. 1. in Evang. hom. 18. p. 260. † Theophanes Cerameus Homil. 38. p. 266. || Epiphan. * St. John. 8. 48. † Pſ. 127. v. 1.

guſtopolis,

gustopolis, which was some days Journey from Samaria.

4. Sichem was another City of the Samaritans. Abraham did reside in it, and it fell afterwards to the Share of the Tribe of Ephraim, which embrac'd the Schism. The Evangelists call it Sichar, and it is said, * that the Samaritans gave it that Name, in remembrance, that Joseph and the Patriarchs were bury'd there; and that the Jews, on the contrary, by it tacitly reproach'd the Inhabitants, that they were Mercenary, and Drunkards, who had deserv'd the Curse of the Prophets. For Isaiah cry'd out, Woe to the Crown of Pride, to the Drunkards of Ephraim. But that is too refin'd. Wou'd it not be better to say plainly, that the Names of Towns are chang'd according to the Dialect and Language of Writers? Sichem hath since been call'd Naples and Naplouse, and this Town is as yet the Place where the Samaritans resort. Baronius had no reason to confound it with Samaria; and an old Geographer † had done it before him. Cerealis kill'd there Eleven Thousand Men at the beginning of the War of Vespasian. But this Prince sent some new Inhabitants to this City, that was almost empty; and out of Gratitude it took the Name of ‖ Flavia Neapolis. The Number of the Samaritans became thereby less considerable, because the new Inhabitants that were sent thither were all either Greeks, or Syrians and Pagans. This appears by a Medal which this Town stamp'd in Faustina's Honour. For on the Reverse, Fortune is with her Horn of Plenty, and her Rudder. This Faustina was not the Wife, but the Daughter of Antoninus Pius, and I wonder how any cou'd be mistaken in this, since the Name of Daughter is plainly express'd ‖‖ Upon the Reverse of another Medal stamp'd in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius, Diana is plainly observ'd with her large Breast, holding a handful of Ears of Corn. The Diana, worship'd by most Heathens was not that Goddess always taken up with Hunting; but she was represented with a large Breast, to intimate, that she fed all Animals, and supply'd Mankind with Milk and Bread. So that it was the Diana of the Ephesians that was worship'd at Naples. Justin Martyr, a Native of this Town, was also a Heathen by Birth; and St. Epiphanius, who said that he left the Samaritans to embrace the Gospel, did not know his true Religion. Because Justin look'd upon Naples as his Countrey, St. Eusebius fansy'd that the Samaritan Religion always prevail'd there, and that this Philosopher had profess'd it. But Justin was not originally of that Place, altho' he was born there. His Parents were transported there with the Colony by Adrian, and he says himself, that he was not Circumcis'd, but a Philosopher; how then can he be transform'd into a Samaritan?

Abulpharages * believes, that this Town was built by Herod; and that the Samaritans were in a flourishing Condition in it; that they set up there a King of their own in the Reign of Zeno, and cut a great many Christians Throats, which oblig'd Justinian to be very severe to them. We shall speak of this; but let us here observe, that Abulpharages is mistaken about the Origin of Naples, which is much older than Herod. The Christians made themselves Masters of it at the time of the Cruzadoes; and the Patriarch of Jerusalem call'd together there a Synod, where King Baldwin was present. Which shews the Errour of the Historian, who writ the Epitome of the Holy Wars; since he affirms, that the Christians finding that Naples was not Rich enough to maintain the Episcopal Dignity, there was no Bishop in that Place. The Samaritans came in there again, and resided in that Town, when Benjamin of Tui went thither in the Twelfth Century. It is even to this Day the Seat of their Religion, for their High and Inferiour Priests and Sacrifices are there, as we'll see hereafter.

5. Mount Garizim, at whose Foot this City it situate, was the Holy Mountain. The Schismaticks, who worship God there, prefer it to all the Places in the World. They pretend, that the Flood, which overflow'd all the Earth, did not cover this Mountain, least a Place, that was to be honour'd with the Temple, and Presence of the Deity, shou'd be fully'd with the Filth, Mud, and Insects, which the Waters left behind them. It was there, that Abraham worship'd. Josuah built a Temple, and that Sanballat rais'd another in opposition to that of Jerusalem. There were Three sorts of Temples on this Mountain. The First was consecrated to God, and altho' the mixture of Nations, who peopl'd New Samaria chang'd the Worship instituted by Moses, they yet preserv'd the Essence of the Jewish Religion, which was there restor'd after the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. Jerusalem being destroy'd, and the Heathens increasing in Judæa by the several Colonies, that were sent into that Province, the Worship of Idols prevail'd, and a Temple was built to Jupiter on that Mountain. For there is a Medal belonging to the Queen of Sweden, whereon a Mountain is observ'd, and on the Top of it a Temple, a Stair-case to go up to it, and at the bottom a Ballister, or else a row of Columns with these Words.

ΑΥΡ ΦΛ ΝΕΑΠΟΛΕΩΣ ΣΑΜ.

It was thought, that the Legend of this Medal meant Paneas, a Town situate at the Foot of Mount Panius; and whereof a Bishop subscrib'd at the Council of Chalcedonia. But this Mountain is the Garizim, and the Temple, which was consecrated to Jupiter after the Destruction of Samaria, and Jerusalem. The Stair-case was necessary to go up to Worship. For a Traveller, who writ in the Reign of Constantine, observ'd, that they went Three Hundred Steps up to the Top of Mount Garizim. But the Legend of this Medal is not well read. For there is an † L. instead of an A. and the Name of Flavius is there, and not that of Paneas. Besides there shou'd have been a Town call'd Phaneas; whereas it is more natural to say, that it was Aurelia Flavia Neapolis, the City of Naples built on the Foot of Mount Garizim, which stamp'd this Monument of its Devotion. The Word Samaritans, which is added, takes off all manner of Doubts. For as there were several Naples, this was to be distinguish'd by its Situation in the Country of Samaria, as the Famous and Learn'd ‖ Mr. Spanheim hath observ'd.

The Emperour Zeno built there a Third Temple: For he drove all the Samaritans from this Mountain, and gave it to the Christians, and consecrated there a Church to the Virgin Mary.

6. Mount Garizim is sometimes call'd Hargarize and Agazeron. We read in Photius ‖‖‖ that Marinus, the Famous Philosopher, who succeeded Proclus at Athens, had formerly embrac'd the Religion of the Samaritans;

* Lightfoot Disquis. Chorog. p. 938. † Stephan. de Urbib. ‖ The Name of Vespasian's Family was Flavius. ‖‖ The Inscription of the Medal is ΦΑΥΣΤΕΙΝΑ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΗ Ευσεβ. Θυγατηρ, Faustina Augusta Pii filia. The Title of Augusta deceiv'd Triftan. Triftan. t. 1. p. 593 Norris Epoch. Syro-Maced. p. 542. However, it is true that Antoninus's Wife was call'd Faustina; but he had a Daughter of the same Name, which Marcus Aurelius marry'd, and it was in Honour of this Princess that Naples made this Medal. * Abulphar. Dyn. p. 70, 93. Willelm. Tyr. Bell. Sacer. l. 12. c. 13. an. 1220. Epitome Bellor. Sacror. apud Canis. t. 7. p. 273. † ΦΛ. they read ΦΑ, whence they derive ΦΑΥΣΤΕΙΝΑ, whereas there is a Λ, and they shou'd read ΦΛΑΥΙΑ. ‖ V. Triftan. p. 393. Itinerar. Hierosolymit. Norris Epocha Syro-Maced. Spanheim de Præst. Numism. Diss. 9. p. 771. ‖‖‖ Phot. Bibl. Cod. 242. p. 1055.

but

but that disliking the Sacrifices, he went over to Paganism and Philosophy; and that this Man was of Naples, situate in Palestine at the Foot of Mount Hargarize. This Term with the Hebrews signifies * Mount Gerizim. The Historian, who writ in Greek, did not understand the Hebrew, and of two Words made but one. It is not easy to guess, whether this Mountain was really call'd Agazeron in the time of Constantine, as the Author † of the Journey to Jerusalem, who liv'd in this Prince's Reign, call'd it. It is more likely, that the Text is defective; that it shou'd be Har Garizim, as is read in Photius, and that both these Authors committed the same Fault, by confounding Two Words which signify Mount Garizim.

8. St. Epiphanius || plac'd this Mountain beyond the Jordan, and made all the Schismaticks go through all Judæa to go to worship there. He maintains the Mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, so often mention'd in Scripture, were in the Plains of Jericho beyond the Jordan. |||| St. Jerome, or he who puts out under his Name a Treatise of the Places of the Holy Land, upbraids the Samaritans for boasting without any reason, that they had a Holy Hill in their Neighbourhood, notwithstanding it was very far from Samaria. But it is more strange, that * Scaliger was deceiv'd by these Two Fathers. For the Scripture †, far from placing Mount Gerizim in the Plains of Jericho, puts it so near Sichem, that Jotham made the People, who had chosen Abimelech for their King, hear his Remonstrances from the top of this Mountain. So that Sichem was near Samaria, and situate between the Mountains of Gerizim and Ebal, or rather at the foot of this Last. Josephus, || who one wou'd think shou'd have known a Countrey, which he had so often travell'd through, also puts Gerizim in the Territory of Samaria; and Travellers |||| who give a Description of the Holy Land, better inform'd and more exact than he, who hath assum'd the Name of St. Jerome, reckon Ten Days Journey from Jerusalem to Mount Gerizim going by Galilee, and turning your back to Jericho. I am mistaken, if this be not the Ground of St. Epiphanius's Errour. He read in Deuteronomy the Command which God gave Moses, to have the Blessing put on Mount Gerizim, and the Curse on Mount Ebal, * that are on the other side Jordan, by the way where the Sun goeth down in the Land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the Champain over against Gilgal; and as Joshuah had the People Circumcis'd in a Place call'd Gilgal, situate beyond the Jordan, St. Epiphanius believ'd that Mount Gerizim was near this last Place, because he knew of no other; and thence concludes that Mount Gerizim was near the Jordan beyond Jericho. This is a surprizing want of Application. For Mount Gerizim, so celebrated among the Samaritans, that they reckon'd it a Holy Hill, shou'd have been better known to him than Gilgal. Besides, there was another Place of that Name in the Neighbourhood of Samaria, and was towards the West, as Moses said. A Modern Critick † was afraid, that the Holy Pen-Man was mistaken; and to prevent his being accus'd of a Mistake, he affirms, that Gilgal signifies Galilee, bordering upon the Territory of Samaria. But why shou'd Words be alter'd, and the Name of a Town chang'd into that of a Province? For there was really a Place call'd Gilgal near Samaria. We thought proper to give a clear Notion of these Three Places, whose History we write; because we are often oblig'd to speak of them.

8. The Samaritans have a Chronicle, which was lost along time ago. Some Learned Men, as Scaliger, look'd upon it as a venerable Monument of Antiquity, which might have been very useful to understand ancient History, and the Holy Scripture. This Chronicle which is not very well known, is at last found out, and instituted the Book of Joshuah. We shall here relate some parts of it, and follow the order of Times and Events set down in it. But I am deceiv'd, if it doth not appear, that there was no need to desire, that this Old Chronicle was recover'd. For it was only writ to support the Prejudices of the Samaritans; and the Author of this Chronicle, far from being as Old as is pretended, liv'd only since Constantine, under some of the Christian Emperors. We are inform'd in it; that " || Joshuah had a bloody War with Saubee, Son " of Heman King of Persia. This young Prince de- " signing to revenge his Father's Death, whom Joshuah " had kill'd, writ him a haughty Letter. This Letter " was not immediately open'd; because the Courrier " arriv'd when Joshuah was busie a judging the People. " Besides, it was the Eve of a Festival, whose Mirth " and Solemnity he was afraid to disturb, by making " the Elders of the People read the affronting Ex- " pressions of Idolaters. And indeed, when they " open'd them, they were so terrify'd at Saubee's " Threatnings, that nothing but their Trust in God " cou'd keep up their Spirits; but Joshuah instead of " being disheartenn'd, defy'd the Kings that were com- " bin'd against him; and in less than an Hours time " assembl'd Three Hundred Thousand Men together, " to whom he read the Answer he design'd; and he " was thank'd for his Courage. He gave himself some " magnificent Titles at the beginning of his Letter, " and spoke but slightingly of Saubee and his Confede- " rates. The Courrier being inform'd with what hap- " pen'd in the Camp of the Israelites, reported it to " the Confederates, and put them into a great Con- " sternation; but Saubee's Mother upbraided them " with their Faint-heartedness, and assur'd them " that they shou'd vanquish. For she rely'd on the " Predictions of a Magician, and her own Skill in " that Art. Magick play'd its part successfully. Jo- " shuah and his Forces thought themselves surrounded " with an Iron Wall, whence it was impossible to go " out to defend themselves. All that they had to do " in this Exigency, was to call to their Assistance Ne- " bichus a powerful King, who was descended in a di- " rect Line from Manasseh his great Grand-Father. " Joshuah writ to him to complain, that he forsook his " Brethren in Distress. This brave and charitable " Prince assembl'd his Troops, march'd directly a- " gainst the Enemy, gave them Battle, and kill'd Sau- " bee with his own hands in the Fight. Eleazar the " Son of Aaron, blowing a Trumpet at the same time, " overset the Iron Wall; and the Enemies being de- " feated betook themselves to a shameful Flight.

9. Thus the Samaritans set off Joshuah's Glory, whom they believe the Founder of their Temple. They boldly affirm, that this Leader of their Nation having order'd some able Geometricians to divide the Land of Canaan, commanded that a Temple and a Citadel shou'd be built on Mount Gerizim; and this Temple, more ancient than that of Solomon, had some Priests of the House of Aaron. Rus, one of the Heads of that Family, was High Priest of it, and all those who officiated there since that time were his Offspring. They therefore to this Day call their Priests Aaronites; and Divine Worship was always preserv'd in this Place with the utmost Purity. And indeed the Samaritans, unwilling to acknowledge Jeroboam the Ring-leader of the Rebels for their Founder, ascend as high as Joshuah, and maintain, that he built the Temple, wherein they have ever since worship'd. And they believe this as an undoubted Truth, since they find it in their Chronicle, which they pretend to be very Old.

* Har, a Mountain. † Norris, ibid. || Epip. Hær. 9. p. 24. |||| Hieron. de locis Hebr. p. 1424. * Scaliger in Euseb. p. 217. † Judg. 9. 7. || Joseph. Ant. l. 11. c. 8. |||| Anselmus de Scriptor. Terræ Sanctæ apud Canis. t. 7. p. 1294. * Deut. 11. v. 29, 30. † Lightfoot. Disquis. Chorogr. p. 937. || Liber Josu apud Hottinger Exercit. Antimorinianæ.

10. We muſt not think it ſtrange, that the Samaritans are guilty of the ſame Vanity, that all other Nations, and almoſt all Churches are guilty of concerning their Original. There are few, but begin theirs at ſome diſtant and fabulous times, and endeavour to illuſtrate it by a heap of Miracles and Prodigies, which never had a Being but in the Fancy of thoſe that writ them. Beſides, notwithſtanding the Twelve Tribes were united under Joſhuah, and the Three Firſt Kings, and that there was no Temple in Judæa till the time of Solomon; yet the Samaritans had ſome ſhadow of reaſon to pretend, that their Temple and Altars were as Old as Joſhuah.

And indeed Joſhuah, purſuant to Moſes his Orders, aſſembl'd all the People upon the Two Neighbouring Mounts, Gerizim, and Ebal. Six Tribes, at whoſe Front thoſe of Simeon, Levi, and Judah were plac'd on Mount Gerizim, put the Bleſſing; Six other Tribes, with thoſe of Ruben, Gad, and Aſher at their Front, put the Curſe upon Mount Ebal; and Joſhuah built afterwards an Altar upon the brow of this laſt Hill. The Samaritans altering the Holy Text, have put a Temple upon Mount Gerizim inſtead of the Altar upon Mount Ebal; and made it a Holy Hill, whereupon Divine Worſhip was always perform'd; and ſo concluded that their Temple was 460 Years older than that of Solomon. They thus corrupted the Pentateuch. For God commands to put ſome Stones upon Mount Ebal, and they put Gerizim for it. The Jews have not omitted to take them up for this Falſification of the Holy Text; but the Samaritans took their turn to upbraid the Jews, as if they had alter'd Joſhuah's Words, and pretended that ſince it cou'd not be deny'd, that this ancient Hero had built an Altar upon one of theſe Hills, it was more natural to think, that he choſe that whereupon the Bleſſing was put; and they were perhaps in the Right. For their Conjecture ſeems pretty juſt.

We ſee a Woman in the Goſpel, who is not ſatisfy'd to find the Origin of her Temple in the Hiſtory of Joſhuah, but went as high as Abraham, and the Patriarchs, who worſhip'd a long time before upon this Mountain.

11. The Jews, who exclaim againſt theſe Lyes of the Samaritans, are as jealous as they of a falſe Antiquity, and depend alſo upon Fables. For they boaſt of an old Tradition of their Maſters, that in the ſame Place, where Solomon built his Temple, Abraham had a long time before Sacrific'd * his Son Iſaac; that after the Deluge Noah made his Offering there; that Abel and Cain offer'd their Victims in the ſame Place; and Laſtly, that it was there that Adam made an Attonement for his Sin: Nay that he was born on that Mountain. For the Atonement was made in the very Place, where Adam firſt drew Breath. They cou'd go no higher; but at the ſame time they cou'd not depend upon any Tradition more uncertain than this, nor more boldly deviate from the Holy Scripture, which places the Terreſtrial Paradiſe very far from the Mountain of Moriah. Thus People expoſe their Enemies Fables, whilſt they maintain ſome of their own, which are not more coherent. The ancient Fathers, who wou'd have Adam bury'd upon the top of the ſame Mountain, and believ'd that the Calvary, or place of a Scull, deriv'd its Name from the Cranium of the Firſt Man, that was found there, notwithſtanding their Fame and great Titles deſerve ſo much the more to be hiſs'd at, becauſe they had no Intereſt to vend ſo confidently theſe Fables, or to deceive the People by ſtamping them with their Authority.

12. The Schiſm of the Ten Tribes truly begun by Jeroboam. The aims of this Leader of Rebels were at firſt barely Political. He deſign'd either to eaſe the People of the extraordinary Taxes, which Solomon had impos'd upon them; or to ſhake off the Yoak of his Son, who by reaſon of his Youth, and want of Experience, was very unwary and proud. But when Jeroboam was ſeated on the Throne, he eaſily foreſaw, that he wou'd ſoon loſe both his Crown and Subjects, if he ſuffer'd the People to go up to Jeruſalem to worſhip. The neceſſity of coming into the Temple, the Majeſty of Religion, the Addreſs of the Prieſts concern'd to bring back the Schiſmaticks, and the King's Threatnings, wou'd have ruin'd his Work. And therefore to prevent theſe Inconveniences, he rais'd up ſome Altars, whereupon God might be worſhip'd conveniently; inſtituted ſome new Prieſts in the room of the Levites, who withdrew, and forbid his Subjects to go up to Jeruſalem to worſhip. Some had more regard to the Impulſes of their own Conſciences, than to their former Spirit of Rebellion, and ſubmitted to Reboboam; but the Body of the Ten Tribes remain'd in the Schiſm. It muſt even be acknowledg'd, that God did not forſake them. For he ſent ſome eminent Prophets to theſe Schiſmaticks, who have hitherto preſerv'd their Rights and Liberties.

People have often wonder'd, how ſo many Prophets, and Tribes fell into Schiſm; ſince the Law ſpoke ſo plainly in favour of the Tribe of Judah, of the Service of the Levites at Jeruſalem, and againſt the Images which Jeroboam erected. But let us here ſet down the Reaſons which this Prince might make uſe of to deceive the People, and perſwade them to this Criminal Separation, that we may ſee an Inſtance how eaſily the Scripture is eluded, and the Will of God oppugn'd, even when it is clearly reveal'd.

One of the Crimes put to Jeroboam's Charge, was his changing the Place of Worſhip. For he tranſported the Worſhip from Jeruſalem to Bethel; but he aſſur'd his Subjects that the Service of the God of the Univerſe, was not fix'd to one Mountain. He prov'd by the Examples of Jacob and the Patriarchs, who worſhip'd at Bethel, in the Plains of Mamre and Beer-ſheba; Have not your Fathers, ſays he to them, ſacrific'd in the Wilderneſs? And ſince you are ſettl'd in the Holy Land, was not the Arch in Siloh, and Kirjath-Jearim? Was it not too at Jeruſalem in the time of David; and did not Solomon himſelf ſacrifice in various places? It is true, that God ſeems to have choſen Jeruſalem for the Seat of his Empire and Religion; but he at the ſame time promis'd to ſettle there a Throne for David, and Solomon for ever. But ſince he hath nevertheleſs ſhaken this Throne, by dividing the Kingdom between his Son and me; it concludes too, that he had the ſame Deſign for his Church. The Covenant was conditional. For God was to be ador'd in Jeruſalem no longer, than there were no Altars conſecrated to falſe Gods. But Solomon rais'd ſome there, and his Son Reboboam doth not demoliſh them. As this Prince continues to ſin againſt the People, by refuſing to grant a Relaxation of the Taxes, which his Father exacted, it is to be preſum'd that he will continue to ſin againſt God, by preſerving the Altars which Solomon built for Aſhtaroth the Queen of Heaven. I am oblig'd to keep the People from Idolatry, and every Prince is bound to take care of the Religion of his Subjects, and avert thoſe Dangers that threaten them. Reboboam wou'd have made War with us, had not God ſtop'd his Fury. He breaths nothing but Revenge; and after he hath involv'd you into ſo enormous a Crime as that of worſhiping falſe Gods, he wou'd be glad to cut your Throats. So that you muſt not be deluded by this falſe Notion, that you are in duty bound to worſhip at Jeruſalem.

* Maimonides Miſne Torah. l. 8.

Thus

Thus Jeroboam might have juſtify'd his altering their Religion, by propoſing the Deity to be worſhipp'd under the Images of Calves. 1. He did not deviate from the Law of their Anceſtors: For he ador'd the ſame God; had Incenſe and Sacrifices offer'd him, and obſerv'd the Moſaical Ceremonies. So that his Doctors impos'd upon the People by affirming, that they in the main had the ſame Religion, as the reſt of the Jews. 2. Altho' he had Images, he might ſay, that God did not poſitively forbid them in his Law. He only condemns Idols, (which are nothing) and thoſe that worſhip them. Such was the Adoration paid the Golden Calf in the Wilderneſs; whereas he only made them worſhip God at the Preſence of an Image, and the Honour of the Reſemblance aſcended to God, to whom all the Worſhip was referr'd. He no doubt grounded his Proceedings upon God's Example, who order'd Two Cherubims to be made in the Temple. If it had been reply'd that God, who made the Law, might tranſgreſs it, and that God's Example was no warrant for him; he might have alledg'd the Example of Solomon, who without any Divine Revelation made Two great Cherubims of Gold. It cou'd not be rejoyn'd, That altho it be lawful to repreſent Angels, yet it is not to repreſent the Figures of Animals. For Solomon put ſome Oxen to the Sea of Braſs, and the Law doth equally forbid to make a Reſemblance of any thing that is in Heaven, as well as of any thing that is on Earth; of Angels, as well as of Animals.

If the People was ſtartl'd, that the Calfs of Bethel and Dan were call'd Gods, Jeroboam might have told them, that he only ſpoke according to the common Idiom of the * Scripture, which often calls by the name of God, thoſe places where he gives ſome marks of his Preſence. The Images are call'd Gods, becauſe they are his Image and Symbol, as the Lamb is call'd the Paſſover. In a Word, God hath not forbid to honour Images, but to make them Gods, which Jeroboam did not do.

If this Prince's Authority was diſputed about the times aſſign'd to the Service of God; he might have alledg'd God's own diſpenſation, who order'd, that thoſe, who cou'd not celebrate the Paſſover the Firſt Month, ſhou'd do it the Second; and the Example of David, who divided the Levites, and Singing-men into different Claſſes. He had even tranſported the Ark from Kirjath Jearim to Jeruſalem.

To conclude, this Prince might have alledg'd in his own behalf, the Crowd, and the Excellency of the Places, where he worſhipp'd, and God had ſhew'd ſo many Miracles. Abraham ſacrific'd his Son, who was the Type of the Meſſiah, upon the Mountain of Moriah. But here our Father Jacob ſaw that miraculous Ladder, that reach'd from Heaven to Earth: Here God promis'd to give him the Earth; and he himſelf aſtoniſh'd at God's Glory, cry'd out, This is the Houſe of God. So that Bethel is the Place, that God hath choſen for his Manſion and Temple. The Slaviſh Levites brib'd, by the hopes of Gain, may ſay as long as they pleaſe, that we have no Miſſion. For we have ſome Prophets, and God order'd me to be anointed by one of them. The Levites are Incendiaries, that only excite you to War and Sedition. Even the Prophet, whom I have conſulted concerning my Son, betrayd his Partiality, by anſwering haſtily and angrily, even before he was conſulted. We have the greateſt Number on our ſide, and of Twelve Tribes only Two make a Schiſm; and what likelyhood is there, that God will forſake the beſt part of his People to ſave a handful of Perſons, and deſtroy a Kingdom, which he hath confirm'd with a prophetical Unction?

This ſhews, that there is nothing clear and evident in Scripture, but what may be eluded by ſome ſpecious Pretences. Experience evinces, that the People was dazl'd, and fell into Idolatry, which made them adore God before an Image, and refer to him the Honour done to a Creature. But the Samaritan Jews have at laſt open'd their Eyes, and perceiv'd that all manner of Worſhip to Images is Criminal.

13. Another important Remark may be made upon this Schiſm. It is, that God did not forſake this part of the Nation, ſince he ſuffer'd many Prophets and Holy Men to be born among them.

There is a Controverſy about Hoſea's Countrey, as if this Prophet was born in the Territory of Jeruſalem; becauſe he ſpeaks of Four of its Kings, in whoſe Reign he propheſy'd; and of the Houſe of God, that is, of the Temple, againſt which the Eagles were to fly, and that denoted its Ruin and Deſtruction by the Romans. But Hoſea was originally a Samaritan. He ſpeaks of Jeroboam II. who reign'd in Samaria; and if he afterwards reckons the Years of his Life, by thoſe of the Kings of Jeruſalem, he had a particular reaſon for it. For after the Death of Jeroboam, there happen'd ſo great a Confuſion in Samaria, that it was then eaſy to foretel its Ruin. Hoſea foretold it in a time of Proſperity, which gave no occaſion of diſmal Apprehenſions in the Reign of Jeroboam II. but when he afterwards prognoſticates other Events, he choſe rather to date his Prophecies from the Kings of Jeruſalem, who enjoy'd a greater Tranquillity. When he ſpeaks of the Houſe of God, he doth not thereby underſtand the Temple, deſtroy'd by the Romans; but the People of Iſrael, who were us'd to look upon themſelves as the Habitation of the Living God. Samaria and the Schiſmaticks boaſted of this as well as others; and Hoſea ſo manifeſtly foretold the Deſtruction of Samaria, againſt which the Aſſyrians were to fly with as much Rapidity as Eagles upon their Prey, that it is impoſſible to underſtand him in any other Senſe. Amos liv'd in Samaria in the Reign of Jeroboam II. Thus God multiply'd there his Prophets, to forewarn this City of its approaching Ruin. Theodoret is miſtaken, to ſay, that Joel did the ſame Thing. For the Threatnings of this Seer of the Lord were pointed againſt Jeruſalem, rather than againſt Samaria, which was perhaps already deſtroy'd when Joel put out his Prophecies.

To conclude, it was there that Elijah, and Eliſha ſhin'd ſo gloriouſly; and that God found a great many Martyrs during the Perſecutions of Ahab and Jezebel, who kill'd the Prophets. It is a bare Conjecture, to pretend, that all theſe Martyrs and Prophets were inclin'd to return to Jeruſalem, and deſir'd to be re-united to the Prieſtly Stock; and the reſidence of the Schiſmaticks in their Countrey contradicts this Conjecture. This Firſt Period of the Schiſm is too well known, to be more enlarg'd upon. It is enough that we have ſet down its true Original, and the Reaſons it was grounded upon.

14. The Ten Schiſmatick Tribes having fill'd up the meaſure of their Sins, God ſent Shalmaneſer, who took Samaria, tranſplanted its Inhabitants into the Plains of Chaldæa, and ſent ſome Cuthæans to people that Countrey. That Colony was infeſted with Lions, becauſe they did not adore God, and had carry'd their Idols into the Holy Land. Eſar-haddon having ſent them a Jewiſh Prieſt to inſtruct them in the Law, there then happen'd a mixture of Religions. The Remains of the Ten Tribes who were left in this Countrey, follow'd the Law of Moſes, which they were doubly oblig'd to obſerve.

This Colony too embrac'd the Jewiſh Religion. They were call'd the Proſelytes of Lions, becauſe it was the fear of thoſe rapacious Animals, which induc'd them to come into the Church. They however kept part of their ancient Worſhip. And as in the Pagan

* Geneſ. 22. 14. & 35. 7.

Religion, every Province had its peculiar Gods; the number of false Deities became so much the greater because Esar haddon, who sent the Jewish Priest, order'd at the same Time a New Colony to go with him into that Countrey, to supply the Place of those who had been devour'd by the Lions.

15. The Samaritans do also change this Second Period of their Schism; and relate the Thing in favour of themselves. For they say, that the Kings of Syria, in a Confederacy with the Kings of Jerusalem, revolted against Bacthnezar King of Persia, who is the Nebuchadnezzar mention'd in Scripture, to whom they had paid Tribute during Eleven Years. But that Bacthnezar march'd against and beat the Rebels, took Jerusalem, went beyond Naples, which is Sichem, and only allow'd the Inhabitants Seven Days to go out of their Countrey, and threaten'd with death, all those that shou'd remain after that time. He sent some Persians to people the Cities, that were deserted. But they cou'd not live there, because the Fruit, which seem'd fair to the Eye, was full of Poison, and destroy'd them. Complaints of this were exhibited to the King, who consulted the ancient Inhabitants upon so extraordinary an Occasion. They declar'd, that this misfortune, which happen'd to punish a Nation that had sinn'd, shou'd not cease till their return into their Countrey. So that they had leave to return thither. But they wou'd not depart, till they obtain'd a Decree, that all those, that were dispers'd shou'd meet together in one Place. The Samaritans, Sons of Joseph and of Aaron, had a Dispute with the Jews. These last wou'd have them return to Jerusalem to re-build the Temple, and the others ask'd that Mount Gerizim shou'd be preferr'd to Mount Sion. Zerubbabel pleading for the Jews, maintain'd, that Jerusalem was mark'd out in the Writings of the Prophets; but Sanballat pretended, that the Book whence these Prophecies were taken, was corrupted. So that they were forc'd to try the Thing by Fire. Zerubbabel's Copy was immediately burnt, but Sanballat's Book was three times thrown into the Flames without receiving any harm: Which induc'd the King to honour Sanballat, to make him Presents, and to send him at the Head of the Ten Tribes, who went to take possession of Mount Gerizim and Samaria.

16. But this History was only invented to wipe off the shame of being the Offspring of Proselytes, and a medley of Foreign Nations. Besides, this Romance is not well contriv'd. For it fixes the Captivity of the Ten Tribes, and the Destruction of Jerusalem, by Nabuchadezzar, at the same Time, notwithstanding, that the taking of Samaria was more than a Century before that of Jerusalem. It makes Nabuchadezzar King of Persia before that Monarchy was erected. It puts poisonous Fruits in the room of the Lions, that devour'd the People. It is true that Josephus says, that a Plague consum'd the Old Inhabitants, and it is too great a Subtilty to pretend that this Historian call'd the Lions by a Metaphor a Plague; because Pliny says some where, that Grass-hoppers are the Plague and Anger of the Gods. It is then certain, that the Jewish Historian agrees in this with the Samaritan Chronicle; but the Scripture must be preferr'd to both. It plainly affirms, that the Inhabitants were devour'd by Lions; and that is enough. I can't tell whether the Proof of the Books by Fire was borrow'd from the Samaritans. If it was so, this Invention is of a very ancient Date. Samaria was peopl'd with Cuthæans, and Infidels. Thus the return of the Ten Tribes is the most important, and false thing in their Narrative. For on the contrary, they always continued in their Banishment, whereof some Remains are as yet seen.

17. This Original of the Samaritans, or of Foreigners, who came into the Covenant and Privileges of the Israelites, hath made them very odious. An ingenious Critick believ'd, that the Jews call'd them Cuthæans by way of Reproach; and that as David design'd an affront by the Word Cush, which he puts at the beginning of his Seventh Psalm, the Jews, who might easily confound these Two Words, call'd the Samaritans Cussæans, or Cuthæans, that they might have the Pleasure to upbraid them: But he shou'd have prov'd, that there is something harsh in the Name of Cus, which is the Name of a Man. Besides, to what purpose is this far fetch'd Thought? This Name hit the Samaritans in the Teeth with their Original; because they came from the Province of Chus, which, according to Bochart *, was inhabited with Arabians, infamous for their Robberies, and barbarous Murders. Usher makes them more probably come out of a Village, situate on the Banks of the River Tigris: There is to this Day a Province, which seems to have preserv'd the Name of its old Inhabitants. For it is call'd Chuzestan, and is not far from the Gulf of Persia. But in the main they were still Strangers, and all that can be said in their Behalf is, that David had foretold the Conversion of the † Children of Cush, who supply'd the Place of the ancient Inhabitants of Samaria, and Neighbouring Provinces. However, Time hath wip'd off the Shame of their Pedigree, and they ought not to be more despis'd than all that Rabble, that went out of Egypt with the Children of Israel, and had a share both of their Conquests, and Privileges. For they were confounded with the rest of that Nation. We also see in the Gospel, that those that possess'd the Countrey of the Ten Exil'd Tribes, were reckon'd Jews, whether these Inhabitants were the Remains of those that were dispers'd, and had multiply'd, or were of the Posterity of the Cuthæans. This is the Second Period of their Schism. We were indispensably oblig'd to set down this New Original of the Samaritans, because we shall draw from thence some Inferences in order to know the true Religion of these Schismaticks.

18. The Hatred of the Jews to them increas'd, when at their return from the Captivity, Nehemiah perceiv'd, that these false Brethren were their bitterest Enemies. Jealous to see the Re-building of the Temple, which upbraided them with their Old Separation, they try'd all the ways imaginable to hinder it. They conceal'd their Spite under the Garb of Religion; and assuring Nehemiah, that they worship'd the same God as he, they offer'd him their Service to compleat a Work, which they design'd to ruin. They calumniated the Undertakers, and endeavour'd to surprise Nehemiah, or to destroy him in the Opinion of the People, who already begun to work but faintly. The Jews add to Holy Writ, that God perform'd a Miracle for their Sakes. For One Hundred and Fourscore Thousand Samaritans marching against Jerusalem, had infallibly beat the Jews, had not God declar'd for them. Ezra and Nehemiah assembl'd Three Hundred Priests, who thunder'd out the greater Excommunication against them. They were follow'd by Three Hundred young Boys, with One Book of the Law in one Hand, and a Trumpet in the Other. These blow'd their Trumpets, whilst the Cuthæans were Excommunicated, and he who wou'd eat Bread with them was Curs'd, as if he had eaten of Swines Flesh. They intreated God, that they might have no share in the Resurrection; and that it shou'd never be allow'd to make any Proselytes of them, which frighted them so much, that they betook themselves to their Heels.

But the Breach became wider in the Reign of Alexander the Great. Manasseh, Brother to the High Priest

* V. Bochart Phaleg. p. 243. † Psal. 68. 32.

in

in Jeruſalem, marry'd a Stranger, contrary to the Law, and afterwards refus'd to divorce her. Ezra, and Nehemiah had caus'd the Ordinance againſt marrying ſtrange Women to be ſtrictly obſerv'd, after their Return from the Captivity. Manaſſeh was requir'd to comply with it as well as others, and upon his refuſal he was expell'd the Temple and Altar. Incens'd at this publick Affront, he retir'd to Samaria, to Sanballat's Houſe, who was his Father-in-Law, and Governour of the Place. He obtain'd leave of Alexander the Great to build a Temple. A great many Prieſts, and Lay-men, who were in the ſame Circumſtances, increas'd the Number of the Schiſmaticks. Add, that all thoſe, who were uneaſy at Jeruſalem, retir'd to Samaria, where there was then a Temple. Thus the Number of Deſerters, who fled from the Rigour of the Law, and the Temple, rais'd in Oppoſition to that of Jeruſalem, augmented conſiderably, and inflam'd the more their Hatred, which was but too inveterate before.

19. Euſebius * ſays, that this Temple was built the ſecond Year of the CXI. Olympiad; but he is miſtaken. For this Event muſt be referr'd Five or Six Years later; becauſe Darius was not as yet defeated, and Sanballat obtain'd a Grant of building a Temple, as a Reward for his Services to Alexander at the Siege of Tyre. Criticks inquire whether the Samaritans begun to reckon their Jubilees from the Building of this Sacred Edifice. One of them maintains, † that the Samaritan Jubilees were much older; ſince the Prieſt, that was ſent into Samaria in the Year Three Thouſand Two Hundred and Thirty, did not forget ſo important a Part of the Law; ſo that they begun their Jubilee the Year following: But that the Samaritans diſowning this Original, which was inglorious to them, reckon'd their Jubilees from the time they took Poſſeſſion of their Share of the Land of Promiſe, that is in the Year 2496. Forty Years after their coming out of the Land of Egypt. They had taken poſſeſſion of the Lands beyond the Jordan One Year and a Half before; but as they were granted to them, but upon condition that they ſhou'd aſſiſt the reſt of the Tribes to conquer the Countrey, they ſpent ſome time to ſuccour their Brethren, and return'd home but Eighteen Months after they had paſs'd the Jordan. The Samaritans, continues he, who wou'd not have their Services on ſo important an occaſion bury'd in oblivion, dated thence their Jubilees. This laſt Remark is too nice. It is not likely, that the Tribes, which inhabited the Countrey of Samaria, differ'd from the reſt in the Celebration of their Jubilees, and that cou'd not happen but after their Schiſm. Jeroboam wou'd not perhaps cancel a Law, which ſo nearly concern'd the civil Adminiſtration, and Polity. But the Obſervation of the Jubilees being interrupted by the Captivity, they begun a new Period, which cannot be better fix'd than in the Year, wherein the Prieſt was ſent to inſtruct thoſe that were expos'd to the Jaws of the Lions.

And indeed the Sabbatical Years were Celebrated in Alexander's time; ſince the Inhabitants of Sichem beg'd of him to be exempted from Taxes that Year, and the Jews, who diſputed before this Prince the Origin of the Samaritans, ſaid nothing againſt this laſt Article. If we reckon the Jubilees from the Year already mention'd, we ſhall find that the Year 1684, ought to be that of the Jubilee; and is really the laſt which the Samaritans have obſerv'd.

20. That we may make an end of what relates to the Samaritan Chronicle, we are oblig'd to ſpeak of their different Æra's. We have juſt ſet down the Firſt. For they doubtleſs reckon'd their Years from the time that the Prieſt came among them, and wherein they begun their Jubilees; or rather they reckon'd by Jubilees as the Jews did.

But when they became Subject to the Seleucides, under Antiochus the Great, they were forc'd to take their Æra, which was common to all the Dominions of theſe Princes, and which they impos'd upon thoſe Nations, that became their Vaſſals.

It cannot be deny'd, but the Jews follow'd the Æra of the Seleucides, and the Author of the ‖ Macchabees makes uſe of their way of reckoning in his Hiſtory. For when he ſays, that Antiochus Epiphanes died in the Year 148; that the Sacrifice was offer'd the ſame Year in the Temple of Jeruſalem; and that Demetrius aſſembl'd his Army in the Year 170. We muſt underſtand the Years ſince the Reign of Seleucus in Babylon, where the Æra of the Seleucides did begin. We muſt only obſerve a Difference, which makes the Authors of the Two Books ſeem to contradict one another; becauſe one following the cuſtom of his Nation, begins the Year in the Spring, and the Month of March; whereas Jaſon following exactly the Calculation of the Seleucides, begins it in September. Hence it is, that the Firſt of theſe Hiſtorians affirms that Antiochus Eupator declar'd War with the Jews, in the Year 150; and the laſt maintains, that it was in 149. According to the Æra, that begins the Year in March, the Campaign was open'd in the Spring of 150; but according to that which begins it in September, the preceeding Campaign muſt be plac'd in 149.

21. There is another place in this Second Hiſtorian, which proves the ſame Thing. But it is ſo obſcure, that Scaliger |||| deſpair'd of unravelling it, and Uſher * ſays, that the Kings of Syria dated their Letters after the manner of the Chaldæans; which is manifeſtly falſe, ſince theſe Princes conſtantly follow'd the Æra of their Anceſtors the Seleucides, and were ſo jealous of it, that they oblig'd all the Nations, that were their Vaſſals, to make uſe of it. This is far from borrowing an Æra from Strangers, and inſerting it in their Letters. This is the Thing, which it is worth while to unfold. Antiochus Eupator, Son and Succeſſor to Antiochus Epiphanes, writ to the Jews to give them part of the Liberty which they loſt under his Father. But he did not do it, till Lyſias, who acted as his Guardian, was routed, and his Affairs requir'd that he ſhou'd reconcile himſelf with them. However, he dates this Letter of Reconciliation in the Year 148, which was that of his Acceſſion to the Crown. How cou'd he date this Letter the Year he was crown'd, ſince ſo many remarkable Accidents, and a cruel War had happen'd, between his Coronation and the Treaty of Peace?

The Difficulty doth not appear to me ſo conſiderable as ſome have thought; for there are ſome plain Symptoms in Antiochus Eupator's Letter, which plainly demonſtrate, that, his Letter was writ the Year that he was crown'd. For this Prince ſays, * that Menelaus declar'd unto him, that the Jews had a mind to return Home, which he grants them; and adds, that he had ſent Menelaus to treat with them. The Name of this Man who is ſo famous for his Intrigues both among the Jews and Syrians; and which immediately preceeds the Date of the Letter, ſolves the Difficulty. Menelaus was not yet kill'd, when Antiochus writ this Letter, ſince he ſpeaks of him. However, he was puniſh'd for his Crimes the Second Year of the Reign of Antiochus Eupator. So that this Letter muſt have been dated the Year that this King was crown'd.

22. We muſt now reconcile the remarkable Events with the Date of the Letter; and this I think is eaſily done. Antiochus coming to the Crown in the Year 148. immediately after his Father's Death, writ kind-

* Euſeb. in Chronic. † Petit Eclogæ Chronol. l. 2. c. 4. p. 114. ‖ 1 Mach. 6. 20. |||| De emend. Temp.
* Uſſ. An. † 2 Mach. 11. 29, 32.

ly

ly to the Jews, and granted them Liberty of Conscience. He had Two Reasons for it. One, that he was not settl'd on his Throne. For some of his Subjects were disgusted; and Philip his Fathers Favourite, whom he had intrusted with the Education of his Son, and order'd to carry his Signet and Robe to him, was disoblig'd and fled into Egypt, and excited the King of that Countrey to make War, and recover a Kingdom, that belong'd to him. Besides these Reasons of Fear, occasion'd by the King's Minority, and the Neighbourhood of a formidable Enemy that Philip might stir up; Menelaus, who had always some kindness for his Brethren, sollicited in their Behalf. So that it is no surprizing thing, that Antiochus writ so mild Letters to the Jews, at a Juncture that was so favourable to them.

But the King alter'd his Opinion the Year following; because Judas taking advantage of the Death of Antiochus Epiphanes, carry'd on briskly the Siege of the Citadel, and some who escap'd from the Siege went to sollicit this Prince to relieve the Besieg'd. Read the * Speech of these Fugitives, and you will easily see, that the King concern'd himself but little about them, and that they upbraided him with it. They represented their former Services, and endeavour'd to awake the Emulation of the Son, by harping on the Persecutions of the Father. And indeed at their Instigation Antiochus Eupator call'd his Council together in the Spring of the Year, 149. and resolv'd to take the Field. All this proves, that Antiochus Eupator did not design to have a War with the Jews. He was unconcern'd about them, and cou'd not be rows'd up but by Remonstrances: And it was before they were made to him, that he writ so favourably to the Jews in the Year 148. Menelaus was then Living. But when it was resolv'd to march into Judæa, Lysias exclaim'd against him as being the Author of the War, and Insurrection. He perswaded the King, that the Jews won'd never be quiet whilst he was alive, and he had him condemn'd to death.

But the Difficulty seems still intire; because the Historian places Antiochus's Letter after the Treaty of Peace, which follow'd the War. 1. But it is evident that he did not put it in its proper place, since the King's Letter shou'd have naturally preceeded that of his Favourite Lysias; and yet it is after the other. 2. This Author, who is not very exact, might not perhaps have taken notice of the Date of the Letter, and believ'd that it was writ during the Peace, because the King seems so favourable to the Jews. 3. But without charging this Historian with Forgetfulness, it may be said, that after he had related Lysias's Letter, which contains a Declaration of Peace, he thought that he might add that which the King writ some time before the War; because it was to the same Purpose, and serv'd to shew his Majesty's good Will. Historians often collect together what relates to the same Subject, without minding so scrupulously the order of Time. 4. Lastly, Since the Date of this Letter is certain; since Eupator too was favourable to the Jews at the beginning of his Reign; and that he had reason to be so, it can no more be doubted but he writ his Letter at that time; tho' the Place, which the Historian of the Macchabees, who writ in Egypt, gives it in his History, might raise some Difficulties. So that notwithstanding this obscure part of the Jewish History, which we believe is now explain'd; it appears that the Syrians follow'd the Æra of the Seleucides; and the Samaritans, who blindly comply'd with Antiochus the Great's Orders, and those of his Son Epiphanes, ought to have made use of it too.

They took a Third Æra, when their City, being re-built by Herod, begun to take the Name of Auguste, or Sebaste. It is observ'd, that several Princes gave this Emperour's Name to the Towns they built; but that Samaria was the only One which kept it. However, there have been Two Sebastes, one in Armenia, whereof Eulogius, who was at the Council of Nicæa, was Bishop. Eustachius was also of that Countrey. There was another in Cilicia, which was even often confounded with another Town call'd Augusta. Alexander Bishop of Sebaste, who acknowledg'd, that of Tarsus for his Metropolitan, had a Share in the Plundering of Ephesus. But that signifies nothing. We ought rather to observe, that the Samaritans begun to reckon their Years from the time, that their Town was re-built. Eusebius believ'd †, that Herod the Great did this Work the Third Year of the 190 Olympiad, that is the 736 Year of Rome, Fourteen Years before the Birth of Christ. But Josephus ||, who was better acquainted with this Origin of Samaria, fixes it in the 13*th* Year of the Reign of Herod. If we begin this Reign in the 717 Year of Rome, because he then made himself Master of Jerusalem after the Death of Antigonus, the Æra of the Samaritans must begin in the Year 729. And indeed the same Josephus affirms, that after Herod had built Samaria, he sent his Troops to Augustus to strengthen his Army, which was marching against the Arabians. Now Augustus made War with the Arabians in the Year 730. The Samaritans begun to reckon their Years from the time they were restor'd, and had taken the Name of Augustus. Thus the Æra, which they have follow'd since, begun in the 729*th* Year of Rome, Twenty One Years before the Birth of Jesus Christ. This is confirm'd |||| by some Samaritan Medals, which are still extant. For in One, which they coin'd in honour of Domitian, they reckon 109 Years, which was the Fourth Year of this Prince's Reign. In the Other, that they stamp'd in honour of Commodus, they reckon'd 215 Years, which agrees admirably well with the Beginning, which we have fix'd. So that the particular Æra of the Samaritans must not be confounded with that of the Jews, and other Neighbouring Nations: This is the Reason that we have explain'd it. But to return to their History.

24. The Temple on Mount Gerizim, whereof Manasseh became High-Priest, was built in the Reign * of Alexander the Great, and by his Leave. A famous † Historian of the Jews was asham'd of the Blunder of the Rabbins, who, in order to make the Samaritans Sadducees, even when they erected Temple against Temple, associate Baithos, and Tsaddoc with Manasseh, and send them together into Samaria. He forsakes this Tradition, which is so evidently false, and it is strange, that a Christian ||, who ought to be a better Chronologist, relates it with Applause, instead of rejecting it intirely. For it is not true, that Tsaddoc liv'd in Alexander's Reign.

This Prince coming in the Neighbourhood of Sichem, the Inhabitants of the Town went to invite him in, and ask'd of him the same Favour, which he had granted to the Jews, to exempt them from Taxes every Seventh Year; since they did neither sow, nor reap that Year. But upon the opposition of the Jews, who alledg'd that the Samaritans were not of their Nation, Alexander referr'd till his Return to decide the Suit, and the Favour which he design'd them upon his Entry into their City.

25. After Alexander's Death, his Generals, who strove to seize upon his Conquests, made a long and bloody War with one another. Ptolemy the Son of Lagus, sir-nam'd Soter |||| seiz'd upon Egypt, and carry'd very far his Usurpations during his Reign of Forty

* 1 Mach. 6. 22. † Euseb. Chron. || Joseph. Ant. l. 15. c. 11. & de Bello, l. 1. c. 16. ||| V. Noris Epocha Syro-Maced. diss. 5. c. 5. p. 534. * Joseph. Ant. l. 11. p. 385. † Ganz. Tsenach David. p. 61. Ed. Vorstii. || Lightfoot, Centur. Chrorogr. |||| Σωτήρ.

Years

Years. After the Death of Alexander * he made himself Master of Judæa, enter'd into Jeruſalem, whence he tranſported Three Hundred Thouſand Inhabitants into Egypt, but firſt pick'd out the ſtrongeſt for Soldiers. Cyllas, General of his Army, falling a Sleep in his Camp, was ſurpriz'd by Demetrius Polycrates, who routed his Army, and took him Priſoner. It was at the ſame time reported, that Antigonus was come into Phrygia with a numerous Army. This frighten'd Ptolemy, who demoliſh'd Joppa, Samaria, and ſeveral other Towns, whoſe Inhabitants he alſo tranſported into Egypt. Thus the Samaritans found themſelves there join'd with the Jews; and the King's Clemency, the Goodneſs of the Country they were in, and the conveniency of Commerce, might have made them happy, had not they carry'd their Hatred, and old Spirit of Diviſion along with them.

Ptolemy IV. ſir-nam'd Philopator, tho he was a Parricide, gave, by his Luxury, and Debaucheries, occaſion to Antiochus to declare War againſt him. He thought to have ſurpriz'd this effeminate Prince, and eaſily ſeiz'd upon his Kingdom: but neceſſity awaken'd Ptolemy; and having immediately gather'd his Officers and Troops together, he fought Antiochus, and beat him. He made a barbarous uſe of his Victory in Judæa; nay he did more. For at his return he order'd all the Jews in Egypt to be inclos'd into Palliſſadoes, and devour'd by Wild Beaſts. The outcrys and groans of ſo great a Multitude, who were deſign'd to be ſacrific'd, mov'd him, and made him ſeveral times alter his Project. The Samaritans, who were very numerous in Egypt, were alſo under the ſame apprehenſions. But it is a happy Thing, when People are only frighted; and when ſo wild Princes as Ptolemy are capable of altering their Reſolution againſt thoſe of their Subjects, they do not like. The Defeat of Antiochus the Great, render'd Ptolemy peaceable Poſſeſſor of Samaria and all Judæa whilſt he liv'd. But Antiochus the Great, who always minded his Intereſt, took advantage of the Minority of Ptolemeus Epiphanes, whom his Father left a Child, and ſeiz'd on all theſe Provinces. He promis'd, that his Daughter Cleopatra ſhou'd bring theſe Provinces in marriage to this ſame Ptolemy, from whom they were taken. The Marriage was concluded on theſe terms, but Antiochus cheated his Son-in-law, and left to his Son Seleucus the Provinces he had Uſurp'd. Antiochus Epiphanes his Brother and Succeſſor refus'd to deliver them up; and flatly deny'd to the Deputies of Alexandria, that there was ſuch a Clauſe in the Contract of Marriage between his Siſter, and Ptolemeus Epiphanes. The Controverſie between theſe Princes grew to a great heighth: However, Samaria and Judæa remain'd in Antiochus's hands, who after he had celebrated the Quinquennalia at Tyre, paſs'd to Joppa and Jeruſalem. But before we ſpeak of this Prince, who made the Samaritans ſtagger in their Faith, we muſt for a while take a turn into Egypt, where they were roughly handl'd.

Joſephus † relates a Law Suit commenc'd in the Reign of Ptolemeus Philometor. The Thing in Queſtion, was to decide which was the Oldeſt, the Temple of Jeruſalem, or that on Mount Gerizim. The Samaritans maintain'd, that their Temple on Mount Gerizim was the Older; ſince it was built by Joſhuah, a long time before Solomon. They quoted Deuteronomy, wherein God commanded a Monument of Stones to be rais'd on Mount Gerizim, which prov'd that he preferr'd this Place to all Others, to be the Place of his Worſhip. The Jews cou'd not alledge any thing like this; ſince the Law ſpoke in general terms of a Place, where God was to be worſhip'd, and never mention'd the City of Jeruſalem, which fell, but along time after, into the hands of the Kings of Judah. But they anſwer'd, that the Samaritans had falſify'd the Text of Deuteronomy, and put Mount Gerizim inſtead of Mount Ebal. Both Parties agreed to make Ptolemy Judge of their Cauſe, and to ſtipulate that whoſoever loſt it, ſhou'd be puniſh'd with Death. The King pronounc'd in favour of the Jews, and condemn'd the Counſellors of the Samaritans to be put to death. Thus Joſephus, Hiſtorian of their Nation, relates this matter. But it is obſerv'd ||, that Onias, who had done ſome conſiderable ſervices to Ptolemy, had already built another Temple in Egypt, which was ſo ill taken at Jeruſalem, that the Levites who ſerv'd at his Temple were reckon'd among the Prieſts that ſacrific'd on the High-Places. This Remark makes People ſuſpect Joſephus's Narrative. For how cou'd they diſpute at Alexandria againſt the Temple of the Samaritans, ſince the Jews of that Countrey worſhip'd and ſacrific'd in that of Onias, that was ſo lately built? But it is more ſuſpected, when we read Philometor, and Queen Cleopatra's Letters. For this Prince granting to Onias the Freedom of his Temple, writes to him, that he doth not know whether a Temple built in a Place full of Bones, and Dead Corps, might be acceptable to God. But ſince Iſaiah foretold it, they give him leave to do it, as far as it is lawful without tranſgreſſing the Law, that they may have no ſhare in the Sin againſt God. It muſt be acknowledg'd, that theſe Pagan Princes are repreſented ſpeaking as if they were Jews. Had Philometor ſo much knowledge of God, and his ceremonial Laws, as to fear infringing them; and ſo much reſpect for Iſaiah, as to have any deference for his Injunctions, and grant a Temple to Strangers, who were open Enemies to the plurality of Gods, and to the Idols which he worſhip'd? One wou'd think, that it is impoſſible to juſtify Joſephus, but by rejecting this Letter, as well as that of Cyrus. For it is very likely that he hid what Hiſtorians commonly do, who lend Kings and Generals ſome Speeches and Letters, without obſerving their Characters, or the Decorum of Places. If we reject Philometor's Letter the firſt Difficulty is eaſily remov'd; ſince the Diſpute of the Samaritans might have preceded the building of the Temple of Onias. For Joſephus, who related in one Chapter, whatſoever happen'd to the Jews in Egypt, in the Reign of Philometor, did not mind to obſerve the true order of Time. Add to this, that Onias had been a long while in Egypt, when he beg'd leave to build a Temple, ſince that leave was the Reward of his long Services. He did not obtain it |||, but Five Years before the Death of this Prince, who had already reign'd almoſt Thirty Years; and it was probably in the ſpace of that Thirty Years Reign, that this Suit of the Samaritans was decided. It is no wonder that they loſt their Cauſe. For beſides, that Alexander the Great gave them leave to build their Temple, and that the Temple of Jeruſalem was more famous; Philometor had a great many Jews in his ſervice, who had a great Intereſt at his Court. Onias, and Doſitheus were Generals of his Army, and Governours of Provinces. This Prince had a value for Ariſtobulus the celebrated Peripatetick Philoſopher, who compos'd for him a Commentary upon the Law of Moſes; and this King might have got from thence ſome inſight into the Jewiſh Laws.

In the main, the Jews wou'd ſooner be ſuſpected to have alter'd the Pentateuch, and the Hiſtory of Joſhuah, than the Samaritans. For Mount Gerizim being the Place, where God order'd the Bleſſings to be pronounced, it is very probable, that it was there, that the Fathers worſhip'd God rather than at Mount Ebal, where the People was curſed.

---

* He died at 90 Years of Age; and Antigonus his Competitor was 81, or 86 Years Old.

† Joſeph. Ant. l. 13. c. 6. p. 432.

|| Van Dale Ep. ad Morinum in Tract de Idolol. p. 742.

||| Uſh. p. 354.

26. Sa-

26. Samaria was juſt brought under the Yoak of the Kings of Syria, and had thereby been expos'd to the Perſecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, had not the Samaritans ſhamefully eluded it. For when they ſaw this Prince arm'd againſt their Religion, and fully bent to ſettle Idolatry in all his Dominions, and were inform'd what he was doing at Jeruſalem, they baſely repreſented to this Prince, that they were Originally Sidonians.

27. They writ him a Letter full of Flattery, with this Superſcription, To King Antiochus the Illuſtrious God *. Some Cities of Syria had ſtil'd Antiochus a God, by reaſon of his Conqueſts; and ſome of his Medals are ſtill ſeen, wherein he is call'd a God. Samaria, which deſign'd to flatter him, imitated this Baſeneſs, and call'd him an Illuſtrious God, or God Epiphanes. They carry'd Flattery as far as it cou'd be carry'd. For they intended to ſhew, that he was a preſent Deity, which manifeſted it ſelf to the Senſes. And indeed the Syrians call'd Antiochus, Epiphanes, as ſoon as he aſcended the Throne after his Brother's Death. They only intended at that time to diſtinguiſh him from the other Kings of the Poſterity of Seleucus, who had bore that name of Antiochus; and it was by this Title, that he was known. But the Samaritans adding the Title of God, 'tis doubtleſs thought, that this denoted his Preſence and Manifeſtation. Thus Ovid deſigning to pleaſe Auguſtus, ſays of him, that he is a Viſible Deity: Whereas it is only believ'd that Jupiter is God; becauſe he is not ſeen.

Cauſa † tua exemplo Superorum tuta Deorum eſt,
Quorum hic aſpicitur, creditur ille Deus.

And thus the Chriſtians have call'd Epiphany, and Theophany, the Birth of Chriſt, his preſence on Earth, and entry into the Temple. The Samaritans cou'd not chringe more baſely, or pleaſe more Antiochus than they did. A Crime ſo much the more enormous in them, who were us'd to adore but One God, whoſe Title they preſum'd to give to a Mortal Man.

I can't tell how they had the Impudence to ſay, that they deſcended from the Sidonians, and how the Court of Antiochus were ſo ignorant of the Original of the Samaritans, to be thus impos'd upon by them. As they were really a Colony of Foreigners, they deceiv'd this Prince, and perſwaded him, that it was taken from the Sidonians. They added, that the Plague having infeſted their Countrey, they were oblig'd to obſerve the Sabbath, and build a Temple to a God without a Name, which made the World believe hitherto, that they had the ſame Original as, and were related to the Jews; but that || they had a mind to reaſſume their old Cuſtoms; and dedicate their Temple to Jupiter, which they might the more eaſily do, becauſe it had not to that day the Title of any Deity. Notwithſtanding the Perfidiouſneſs and Inconſtancy of the Samaritans; it appears that their Religion was ſo like that of the Jews, that they were thought to have the ſame Worſhip, and Pedigree. However Antiochus believ'd them upon their Word to be Sidonians, and granted their Requeſt. Apollonius, who commanded there for this Prince, drew thence a great many Soldiers, with whom he took the Field; but having given Judas Maccabeus Battle, he loſt his Life in the Fight, and the Samaritans their Bagage, which was plunder'd by the Conquerour.

28. They remain'd under the Dominion of the Kings of Syria, till Hircanus beſieg'd them. They maintain'd the Siege for one whole Year. Their Chronicle relates, that they ſent every Day a ſmall Sum of Money in a Basket, which was lower'd down the Walls; and thoſe, who receiv'd it, bought with it ſome Victims, which they offer'd upon Mount Gerizim. A Greek who was in Hircanus's Army diſcover'd the Artifice, and aſſur'd him, that he wou'd never take the Town, whilſt the Inhabitants ſerv'd God ſo religiouſly. The Basket was ſtop'd, and a Hog put in. This Animal frightned, when he found himſelf carry'd up in the Basket, threw himſelf againſt the Wall. ||| The Earth ſhook at it, and a great part of the Wall fell down, and made a large Breach. The Beſieg'd, exaſperated at this, curs'd all thoſe who ſhou'd for the future breed up Hogs, and teach Greek to their Children. However, the Town was taken, and the Temple burnt after it had ſtood 200 Years. The Jews deſign'd to have us'd them worſe than the Idolaters, but their Reign was but ſhort.

29. Pompey, who conquer'd Judæa, reſtor'd Samaria to its former Liberty. Auguſtus added this City to the Provinces which he gave to Herod, and this Prince took a delight to embelliſh this Town. He built there a magnificent Temple, and endeavour'd to oblige the Samaritans to worſhip in it. But notwithſtanding the Dread which Herod ſpread in all his Dominions, they refus'd to obey him, and continu'd their Sacrifices upon Mount Gerizim. Samaria was always faithful to him. Pappus attempted to take it from him. He had already inveſted it, and intended to beſiege it; but he rais'd the Siege, and was kill'd in a Battle, which Herod gave him a little while after near the Village of Iſara.

This Prince put his Domeſticks, and beſt Friends, whom he had taken from the Enemy into Samaria, as in a place of Safety. He there celebrated his Wedding, when he marry'd Mariamne, becauſe Jeruſalem was ſtill in the hands of Antigonus; and he had nothing to fear from the Enemy, notwithſtanding he was near him, and very powerful. As he had already very much embelliſh'd Samaria, he carry'd Agrippa thither to make him admire his Magnificent Buildings, and to divert him during his ſtay in Judæa; but it was there too, that he had his Sons condemn'd, and that this Inhumane Father ſhed their Blood.

CHAP. II.

The Hiſtory of the Samaritans from Chriſt to this Time.

I. THE Samaritans throw the Bones of a Dead Man into the Temple of Jeruſalem. II. A Paſſage of Chriſt near Sichem explain'd. III. He makes there ſome Proſelytes. IV. An Impoſtor, who impoſes on the Samaritans. V. Some Diſorders in the Reign of Claudius. VI. The Samaritans ill us'd in the War of Jeruſalem. VII. Their Loyalty to Nero. A Medal explain'd, which is ignominious to them. VIII. A New Colony ſent to Samaria. IX. The Deſign of Levi. X. Judgment of the Samaritan Chronicle. Of the time wherein it ends. XI. Their Condition under Antoninus Pius. He hates them. XII. A Medal ſtamp'd in Commodus's Reign. A Monument of their Idolatry. XIII. The Loyalty of the Samaritans to Severus prov'd. XIV. A Relation of the Abjuration of Symmachus by St. Epiphanius. XV. His double Circumciſion. XVI. St. Jerome puzl'd upon this matter.

* Βασιλεῖ Ἀντιόχῳ Θεῷ Ἐπιφάνει. Joſeph. l. 12. c. 7. p. 410.

|||| 1 Mach. 3.

† Ovid. Triſt. l. 4. Eleg. 2.

|| Joſeph. Ant. l. 12. c. 8.

XVII. Ex-

XVII. Explication of St. Paul upon the double Circumcision. XVIII. Why Symmachus was twice Circumcis'd. XIX. Theodosius exempts the poor Samaritans from the Care of the Fleets. XX. The Wing of Sebaste under Theodosius Junior. XXI. They suffer under Honorius. XXII. Valentinian the Third's Decree against them. XXIII. Their Law-suit under Theodoric. They go to Law with the Church of Rome about a House. XXIV. A strong Insurrection at Naples under Zeno. XXV. They create a King, nam'd Julian. XXVI. Justinian's Severity against them. XXVII. The Law of Justin, which debars them from publick Offices. XXVIII. Simeon Stilites's Letter against the Samaritans produc'd at the Second Council of Nicæa. XXIX. Contested without any ground by Charles the Great. XXX. Some reflections upon the Barrenness of the History of the Samaritans. XXXI. Baldensel's Relation of them. XXXII. Whether the Samaritans, and the Ten Tribes are lost. XXXIII. There are some Samaritans at Grand Cairo. XXXIV. There are some imaginary Samaritans. XXXV. The present State of the Samaritans at Naples, or Sichem.

1. THE Samaritans had still an inveterate Hatred for the Jews, when Christ came into the World; and it was the 7*th* Year after the Birth of this Messiah, that coming by stealth into Jerusalem the Eve of the Passover, they threw there the Bones of a Dead Man, that they might defile the House of God, and disturb the Devotion of the Festival. Bucher *, who ascribes this Prophanation of the Temple to Angels, did not mind what he says. It can't be conceiv'd, why he doth thus transform the Samaritans into Angels, and charges some spiritual Intelligences with this Crime.

2. About Twenty Five Years after, or thereabout, Christ going through the Territory of the Samaritans, found a Woman drawing Water at Jacob's Well, from whom he ask'd some to drink. She was surpriz'd at it, because Christ was just come from Jerusalem, and that the Jews had no correspondence with the Samaritans. Their mutual Hatred must have come to a great Height, since they scrupl'd asking one another for a Glass of Water. The Thalmudists say, that it was lawful for the Jews to circumcise a Samaritan; but that the Samaritans had not the same Privilege; because they did it in the Name of Mount Gerizim. They add, that the unleaven'd Bread, or Azyma, might be eaten with a Schismatick, provided it had been kneaded by a Jew. In a Word, as it is not believed, that the Jews who were very greedy of gain had no manner of Trade with their Neighbours the Samaritans, it was concluded that the Term in the Gospel is too strong; and that it must be soften'd, and restrain'd to the prohibition of the Thalmudists, to borrow nothing of Infidels and Samaritans. This is too far fetch'd, St. John's Expression imports, that the Jews had no Commerce with the Samaritans even for necessaries. Was this Expression ambiguous, the Circumstance determines the Sense of it. For a Glass of Water was the Thing in question, which is necessary to a Man, who is tir'd of Travelling, and parch'd with the heat of the Sun. The Woman wonders, that a Jew begs that favour of her, and almost refuses it. To add to this, as the Holy Pen-Man doth, that there was no correspondence between those Two Societies of the Nation, doth it not imply that there was none even for the minutest Matters? The Thalmudists writ a long time after Christ's Presence on Earth So that we must not imagine, that he alluded to their Precepts. They are even mistaken, when they pretend that the Samaritans circumcis'd in the Name of Mount Gerizim. For that is ridiculous.

3. The Samaritans had a very great disadvantage concerning the Messiah. For as they only did admit the Books of Moses, and reject the Writings of the rest of the Prophets, they were thereby depriv'd of their Oracles, which did characterize this Deliverer. However, whether they had a general Tradition, or only minded the Prophecy of Jacob with reference to the Scepter of Judah, they as well as the Jews expected that Master, who was to teach them all things, and even Christ made some Proselytes at Sichem by the Ministry of the Woman, who gave him some Water.

4. But this poor People was at the same time deceiv'd by an Impostor, who promis'd them to discover the Holy Vessels, which Moses hid in some corner of Mount Gerizim. Moses never set his Foot in the Holy Land, and only saw it a far off. So that the Cheat was plain; however the Impostor drew the Mob after him, which seiz'd upon a large Village, where they expected the rest of the Nation, who were coming to see this wonderful Discovery.

Pilate inform'd of it, sent a Detachment against this Crowd, which put them to the Rout. The Ring-leaders of the Sedition were put to death. Vitellius, to whom complaint was made of Pilate's Cruelty, thought that a popular Error did not deserve so severe a Punishment; and that they being assembl'd upon a Religious account, they had been punish'd sufficiently by being over-reach'd. He sent the Procurator to Rome to answer for his Actions, but he did not reach that City till Tiberius's Death.

5. Another Misfortune happen'd in the Reign of Claudius. Some Zealots kill'd a Jew, as he was going through the Countrey of Samaria to celebrate the Feast at Jerusalem. Cumanus was then Procurator of the Province. The Jews exhibited their Complaints to him, and seeing that he took no notice of them, or that he was taken up with some more important business, they run to arms, fell upon the Territory of Samaria, burnt the Countrey in their March, and entering afterwards the City, put Men, Women, and Children to the Sword. Cumanus exasperated at their Outrages, sent a Detachment against these Mutineers, which kill'd some, and took others Prisoners, who were afterwards Crucify'd. This Suit was begun before Quadratus, who found that both Parties were in the Wrong. Nevertheless it appears that he was more incens'd against the Jews; since he Crucify'd several of them, and sent Ananias † the High-Priest bound, and Cumanus to Rome, to answer for what they had done. This last, who favour'd the Samaritans, had already made Claudius's Freed-men his Friends, who delay'd the time of hearing the Cause; But Young Agrippa, who was then in Rome, and remember'd the Affront, which the ungrateful Samaritans put upon his Father's Memory as soon as he was dead, did not forgive them. He obtain'd a Hearing of the Emperor, and had the Deputies of Samaria condemn'd to lose their Lives, and Cumanus to be banish'd.

6. Samaria felt the dire Effects of the War, which all the Nation maintain'd against Nero, and Vespasian. For it was burnt at the beginning of the Insurrection. Its Inhabitants retiring afterwards on Mount Gerizim, it was believ'd that they design'd to rise. Cerealis ‖ was sent with an Army to oblige them to lay down their Arms, and submit. This Tribune attempted to force them; but Water growing very scarce, part dy'd with Thirst, and unable to perswade them to lay down their Arms, he block'd them up closer, and advanc'd upon the Mountain, and attack'd them so successfully, that Eleven Thousand and Six Hundred remain'd upon the Spot.

* Bucher. Hist. Belg. l. 2. c. 13. p. 96. p. 849.

† Joseph. Ant. l. 20. c. 5.

‖ Joseph. de Bello, l. 3. c. 12.

7. It was no doubt this Slaughter, which made them yield the ſame Year in the Reign of Nero, and worſhip this Prince as a God, who made War againſt them. This is prov'd by a Medal taken out of the French King's Cloſet, which that famous Antiquary Cardinal Noris * hath publiſh'd. It was ſtamp'd for Nero in the 14*th* Year of his Reign, on the Reverſe the Goddeſs Aſtarte is ſeen with a Tower upon her Head, and holding the Image of Oſiris in one hand with this Motto;

* Ο. ΣΕΒΑΣΤΩΝ. Μ. ΣΑΜΑΡΙΑ. ΕΠΡ. L. ΙΔ.

Deorum Auguſtorum Magnorum Samaria. A. C. LXXXVIII. Neronis XIV.

Samaria hath caus'd this Medal to be ſtamp'd for the Auguſt and Great Gods. If this Explanation of the Medal is exact, it muſt be own'd that the Samaritans were weak, and baſe enough to ſhrink whenever they were perſecuted; ſince they did not only place Nero among the Gods, but even among the greateſt Gods. They ſet up his Statue in their Temple, and ador'd it with the Supream Being, which was an abominable mixture of Worſhip. In a Word, the Goddeſs Aſtarte with her Towers, and the Image of Oſiris, ſhew, that they adopted in that Countrey the Pagan Religion; and that they endeavour'd to ingratiate themſelves with the Emperour, after they had ſuffer'd the preceding Year the Fury of his Arms, and ſeen that Veſpaſian by his Army and Courage had ſubdu'd all Galilee, which border'd upon their Countrey.

8. Some new Inhabitants were ſent thither to people it again, who embrac'd the Religion and Intereſt of the Countrey they poſſeſs'd. Being mix'd with the Jews that remain'd, they us'd themſelves to their Worſhip, and Faction; which expos'd them as well as the reſt of the Nation to Adrian's Hatred. The Samaritan Chronicle † ſays, that after this Prince had demoliſh'd Jeruſalem, he went to Naples, that is, Sichem, and took away all their Books, and did not ſpare even thoſe, which contain'd their Genealogy and Hiſtory. They were forbid to circumciſe their Children. But notwithſtanding this Prohibition, they ſent them as they came into the World into Caves with their Maid Servants, to receive there the Sacrament of the Covenant; and they were not brought out from thence till they were cur'd. But they cou'd not ſo eaſily avoid eating Swine's Fleſh, which the Romans mix'd with their Meals. In a Word, they were ſo hotly perſecuted, that the Figure of a Braſen Bird was ſet up on Mount Gerizim, to hinder them from worſhiping there, and ſome Forces were poſted at the Foot of that Mountain, to ſeize upon and put to death all thoſe that wou'd attempt to go thither notwithſtanding the Prohibition. Some having Zeal enough to endeavour it, and Cunning to eſcape the Centries, were diſcover'd by the Bird, who ſpoke and nam'd the Hebrew. The Soldiers waking fell upon thoſe that aſcended, and cut their Throats. This Misfortune laſted till Babarraba ſent to Conſtantinople one of his Nephews to ſtudy there. This young Lad's Name was Levi, and made ſo vaſt a progreſs in Learning, that he became a Patriarch ||, and obtain'd leave of the Emperour to return to Mount Gerizim.

9. Levi's intention was to rebell againſt the Romans, and reſtore his Countrey to its former Liberty. His Countrey Men aſſiſted him as much as they cou'd, but the Succeſs of his Enterprize is not known. It is nevertheleſs likely, that if they attempted any thing, they ||| miſcarry'd. For they remain'd oppreſs'd by the Romans.

10. Here ends the Samaritan Chronicle, which Scaliger and many other Learned Men thought worthy of their Wiſhes, hoping to find in that ancient Monument a great many things to help us to explain the Scripture; but on the contrary, we have only here inſerted the moſt remarkable part of it, to ſhew how unſerviceable it is. Nay, it may be obſerv'd by this laſt Article, that its Author was a very ignorant Fellow; ſince Conſtantinople was neither heard of, nor built at the time that he makes an end of his Hiſtory.

11. The reaſon why the Emperour Antoninus hated the Samaritans more than the Jews, is not known: Whether they had a greater Hand in the Inſurrection of Judæa, than the others; or made a ſtouter Reſiſtance, this Prince was more ſevere to them. For when he allow'd the Jews the Liberty of circumciſing their Children, which Adrian had taken from them, he wou'd not grant it to the Samaritans. This is undoubtedly true, ſince Juſtin Martyr, who was of that Countrey, and ought to be well acquainted with this, reports it.

12. They were very pliant in Commodus's Reign; and to get the Favour of this Prince, they ſtamp'd a Medal for him. It had this Inſcription, The Emperour Cæſar Marcus Aurelius Commodus Antoninus.

IMP. C. M. AUR. COM. ANT.

On the Reverſe was a Basket with Two Serpents, and theſe Words, * Thoſe of Sebaſte in Syria An. CCXVI. of the Æra of the Seleucides. This Medal is again a publick Monument of the Facility with which the Samaritans embrac'd the worſhip of Idols; or at leaſt an Argument that the old Inhabitants being inferiour in number to thoſe, that were tranſported among them, they were not able to oppoſe Idolatry. For this Basket contain'd the Myſteries of Bacchus, and the Bacchants girded themſelves with Serpents.

Pars ſeſe tortis ſerpentibus incingebant,
Pars obſcura cavis celebrabant orgia ciſtis.

13. When Niger revolted, this City preſerv'd its Loyalty, and ſided with Severus; and therefore this Prince ſent thither a Colony, to People a Countrey, which was become deſolate by frequent Wars. Ulpian affirms it; and this is confirm'd by ſome Medals. However, it is pretended, that this Prince made this Countrey the Seat of War; and that Symmachus foreſeeing the Storm profeſs'd the Jewiſh Religion, that he might not be involv'd in the Calamity which threaten'd his Nation. We are going to examine this Abjuration of Symmachus, which hath made ſo much noiſe. In the mean time let us obſerve, that if Severus made War with the Samaritans, that this War was alſo made with the Jews. So that there is no reaſon to make Symmachus alter his Religion, and Place of Abode, to ſhelter himſelf from the Storm; ſince it had overtaken him at Jeruſalem as well as in his own Countrey.

14. St. Epiphanius † ſays three things of Symmachus. One, that he liv'd before Theodotion, who writ in the Reign of Commodus; and as this Father places Symmachus in the Reign of Severus, he is palpably guilty of an Errour of Chronology. Some have done all they cou'd to wipe off that Stain, by ſubſtituting the Name of Lucius Verus to that of Severus, but this can't be done without altering the Text: Nay, and changing the Time too wherein Symmachus liv'd; and yet all this will not anſwer. For if they put Theodotion after Symmachus, they are miſtaken about their Age. St. Epiphanius had perhaps before him the Examples * of Origen, wherein the Verſion of Symmachus was put the Second, and that of Theodotion the Fourth, which made him conclude that one was poſteriour to the other. But it is certain, that Symmachus, who was a Samaritan born, appear'd but at the end of the Second Century, and in the Reign of Severus, whom ſome reckon the Enemy, others the Protector of the Samaritans and Jews.

* Noris Epocha Syro-Maced. diſſ. 5. p. 525. He explains Ο Θεῶν, the Gods; becauſe this Letter often denotes in Medals the Gods. M. ſignifies Μεγαλῶν, the great Gods. † Liber Joſuë apud Hotting. p. 116. || Summus Epiſcopus. ||| Anno 225. * Σεβαςηνῶν Συρ. c. 15. apud Noris Epocha Syro-Maced. p. 516. † Epiph. de Menſ. & Pond. p. 172. t. 2.

amples

St. Epiphanius doth afterwards diſcover the Cauſe of the Change of this Celebrated Samaritan. He was in great Repute in his Countrey, and look'd upon as one of the Wiſe-men of the Nation; but aiming to be Head and Maſter, and angry that he was refus'd that Dignity, he left Samaria without leaving wholly his Religion. For he became a Jew. Some believ'd, that he was an Ebionite, and Chief of a Sect, which was call'd by his Name; that he undertook a new Tranſlation of the Bible, (which is ſo much the more eſteem'd, becauſe it rather renders the natural Senſe, than the Signification of the Terms) only to favour this Sect againſt the Jews; that he alſo publiſh'd ſome Commentaries to defend the Ebionites, wherein he ſtrenuouſly oppos'd St. Matthew, and endeavour'd to prove, that Chriſt was born of Joſeph and Mary by the common courſe of Generation, and that he cou'd not be look'd upon but as a Man only.

15. In a Word, St. Epiphanius affirms, that when Symmachus embrac'd the Jewiſh Religion, he wou'd be Circumcis'd a ſecond Time; becauſe there was ſuch an inveterate Hatred between theſe two parts of the Nation, that the Samaritans oblig'd the Proſelytes, which came to them from the Jews, to be again Circumcis'd, and that the Jews ſerv'd the Samaritan Deſerters after the ſame Manner. They thought, that Eſau had invented the Secret of making the Fore-Skin grow again after Circumciſion, that he might the more eaſily forſake God, and the Religion of his Father. Which gave God occaſion to ſay, Jacob have I lov'd, but Eſau have I hated. The Modern Jews give this Invention an older Original: For they maintain, that Adam, who was born Circumcis'd, or who had receiv'd the Sacrament of the Covenant from the Angel Gabriel, was the firſt Inventor of this Secret aſcrib'd to Eſau. Be it what it will, Epiphanius ſtrengthens this Opinion with this Teſtimony of St. Paul: † Is any Man call'd being Circumcis'd? Let him not become Uncircumcis'd.

16. St. Jerome, || who cou'd not apprehend the Natural meaning of the Apoſtle, becauſe he thought that the Fore-skin cou'd not be reſtor'd again, turns his Words into an Allegory, and pretends, that this Apoſtle exhorts thoſe, who have made a Vow of Celibacy, never to come into the State of Matrimony. But you may make St. Paul ſay any thing, if you take this to be his meaning. Why had the Apoſtle affected to make uſe of the Metaphorical Terms of Circumciſion, and Fore-skin, to expreſs ſo plain things as Celibacy, and Marriage? Why had he given us a Notion of being Uncircumcis'd, or bringing again the Fore-skin, inſtead of injoyning Celibacy? St. Paul adds, that Circumciſion is nothing, and Uncircumciſion is nothing. So that St. Jerome, who underſtood Marriage by it, muſt have confeſs'd that Celibacy and Marriage were nothing; and he wou'd have hardly own'd this. St. Paul's Words muſt then be taken in a Litteral Senſe; and St. Epiphanius is in the Right to quote them, as a Proof of what was then practis'd among the Samaritans and Jews.

17. We can't well underſtand this Text of St. Paul, and the Adventure of Symmachus, when he forſook the Schiſm to become a Jew, unleſs we underſtand how Circumciſion is perform'd. The Fore-skin is not only cut, but the Skin is alſo torn; and this Skin can grow up again together by means of ſome proper Remedies, or naturally. We are told of an Old Man, to whom this Misfortune happen'd, and fearing, as he was told by the Rabbins, that it wou'd hinder him from entering into the Garden of Eden, after his Death, he was Circumcis'd a ſecond time. Joſephus affirms that Menelaus and Tobi erected a Pagan College at Jeruſalem, to flatter Antiochus, |||| and hid their Circumciſion, to pleaſe the ſame Prince. They were not the only Men, that did this. For there is a Complaint in the Hiſtory of the Macchabees, that thoſe, that forſook the Jewiſh Religion, brought on again their Fore-skins. Maimonides affirms, that he who is guilty of that Crime, will have no ſhare in the World to come, notwithſtanding he had obſerv'd the Law, and that God found him full of good Works. Laſtly, the Maxim of the Thalmudiſts ſhew, that the Thing is poſſible, altho St. Jerome was ignorant of it. Qui circumcidit, & non denudat Circumciſionem, perinde eſt ac ſi non circumciderit, ſay the Rabbins; and Buxtorfius adds, Quod Circumciſor unguibus pollicis pelliculam glandis in duo diſcerpat, ut glans omnimode retegatur. So that the Buſineſs in queſtion is not concerning the Fore-skin, but the return of the Skin, which may eaſily grow up again together, and is torn a Second time.

18. Symmachus underwent this Operation; becauſe it was the Cuſtom of the Jews, who receiv'd no Samaritan, but upon thoſe Terms. They had at that time the ſame Scruple about the Sacrament of Circumciſion, as the Chriſtians have had ſince about that of Baptiſm. They did not believe, that a Sacrament adminiſtred by Hereticks, and Schiſmaticks was lawful: And they alledg'd for their Opinion the ſame Arguments, which St. Cyprian hath urg'd with ſo much Prepoſſeſſion againſt the Baptiſm of Hereticks. For they did not think, that the Samaritans cou'd give what they had not, that is, a Right to the Covenant of God, and the Advantages that flow'd from the Seal of that Covenant. But the Samaritans, more in the Right than the Jews, did not reiterate this Sacrament on thoſe that came to them; as there were likewiſe whole Churches, which condemn'd a Second Baptiſm. St. Epiphanius doth however aſcribe the ſame Practice, both to the Samaritans and Jews, which ſhews that their Averſion was reciprocal. But to go on with their Hiſtory.

19. If the Samaritans ſuffer'd with the reſt of the Jews, as we ſhall ſee hereafter at large, under the Pagan Emperours, they were not better treated under the Chriſtian Princes. Yet they maintain'd their Ground in a great many Provinces. Adrian ſaw them in Egypt, and complain'd, that they were always ready to mutiny, and revolt upon the firſt Opportunity, that offer'd. Nevertheleſs, they kept their Footing there; but they were poor and obſcure, and therefore overlook'd in Hiſtory. At laſt Theodoſius the Great took pity of them, and granted them ſome Relief. The Officers of the Empire had oblig'd the whole Body of the Samaritans and Jews, to ſerve in the Fleets. Theſe Fleets were employ'd to tranſport Corn into Spain, Rome, and Conſtantinople. Seamen were often wanting to man them. The Emperour order'd, that there ſhou'd be ſeveral Claſſes of People, who were either to ſerve themſelves, or put others in their room. The Samaritans were more oppreſs'd than the reſt; becauſe when the Claſſes were appointed, none of their Nation was exempted. They therefore exhibited their Complaints to Theodoſius againſt his Officers; and this Prince diſcharg'd all the Poor, that were forc'd to work for their Living, or thoſe that got their Bread by

* V. Cave Hiſt. Litter. Joſeph. Ant. l. 20. c. 6.

† 1 Cor. 7. 18.

|| Hierom. in Eſ. 52. & in 1 Mach.

|||| Περιτομὴν ἐπεκάλυπτον.

a pedling Trade. This Law * hinder'd them from being reduc'd to the laſt Extremity.

20. We read of the firſt Wing of Sebaſte in Garriſon at Aſuada, in the Reign of Theodoſius Junior. Pancirolus believ'd that Sebaſte was Cæſarea, and did not obſerve, that there was in Judæa Two Cities of that Name, ſo different that they cou'd not eaſily be confounded. But I do not know, whether theſe Squadrons were compos'd of Samaritans, or whether they had that Name, becauſe they liv'd in their Countrey, and were there in Garriſon.

21. They are alſo found in the Weſt in the Reign of Honorius. This Prince was inform'd, that the Samaritans perform'd the Office of Agents, and undertook to carry the Emperour's Orders into the Provinces; and as it was an honour to them, he depriv'd them of it, and even took away from them all manner of Offices † in the Army.

22. Their cruel and barbarous Zeal drew againſt them a Law of the Emperour Valentinian III. For the Fathers ‖ diſinherited their Children, who embrac'd Chriſtianity. But this Emperour order'd that theſe Children ſhou'd enjoy all their former Rights, unleſs it was prov'd that the Son was guilty of ſome Crime againſt his Father, which deſerv'd to be diſinherited; and that this change of Religion was not the Cauſe of his Severity.

23. In the Reign of Theodoric, the Samaritans had a conſiderable Settlement at Rome, and the Roman Church went to law with them about a Houſe. The Church maintain'd, that they were for many Years in poſſeſſion of this Houſe, ‖‖ bought according to Law; but the Samaritans claim'd it as their own, as having formerly been one of their Synagogues, and complain'd that it was uſurp'd by the Church. Altho Theodoric was fully ſatisfy'd, that the impudent Samaritans ly'd, becauſe the Houſe ſeem'd rather built for private, than publick Uſe; yet he order'd Count Arigerblic to examine this Caſe, and do juſtice by puniſhing the Calumniators. It is not known, how this Matter was decided. I only deſign'd by this to confirm, that the Samaritans were come and ſettl'd in the Weſt.

24. They Mutiny'd in the Eaſt in the Reign of Zeno. Abulpharages ſays, * that they choſe a King of their own, and that under his Command they attack'd the Chriſtians. But Procopius † ſays only, that they roſe at Naples on the Day of Pentecoſt; and that having ſurpriz'd the Chriſtians, who did celebrate that Feſtival, they made a great Slaughter of them. Terebinthius, Biſhop of that City, was then officiating at the Altar. They took him, ſtabb'd him with their Swords in ſeveral places; cut his Fingers, and ignominiouſly prophan'd the Myſteries. Terebinthius having eſcap'd from their Hands, complain'd to the Emperour, and repreſented, that Chriſt having foretold, that there ſhou'd be in a ſhort time no Worſhip on Mount Gerizim; and that God, who is a Spirit, ſhou'd be ador'd there in Spirit and Truth, it was high time to accompliſh that Prophecy. This Biſhop gave a falſe Interpretation to our Saviour's Words. For there he ſpoke of the Aboliſhment of the Sacrifices; and of the Liberty allow'd under the Goſpel to worſhip God every where. However, the Emperour believ'd the Prelate on his bare Word: And as it was juſt and requiſite to puniſh the Rebels; he ſent ſome Forces that drove them out from thence, and he gave Mount Gerizim to the Chriſtians, who built there a Church conſecrated to the Virgin Mary; and ſettl'd a Guard of ten Men to keep the Entrance of that Mount, which he order'd to be ſtrongly wall'd in.

The Samaritans did not bear this patiently. For it was an eye-ſore to them, to ſee a Church of the Virgin Mary, in the ſame Place, where the Temple of God ſtood. It was another Grievance, that they cou'd not worſhip on the Holy Hill. However, they conceal'd ‖ their Reſentments till the Death of Zeno, which happen'd ſhortly after. But in the Reign of Anaſtaſius, a Woman ſhew'd a Company of Samaritans a way through the Rocks, whereby they went up to the top of Mount Gerizim. They ſeiz'd upon the Church, kill'd the Soldiers that guarded it, and call'd to their Aſſiſtance the Samaritans, that remain'd at Naples, that they might maintain themſelves in that Place. The Citizens of Naples, who were afraid of the Garriſon, durſt not go out, nor aſſiſt their Brethren. The Procurator of the Province immediately repair'd thither; but he took no care to make ſome new Fortifications about the Place, which occaſion'd ſome new Commotions under Juſtinian.

25. For the ſame Samaritans ‖‖ gathering together about Naples, which was at that time their retiring Place; choſe a King * of their own, whoſe Name was Julian. They made Incurſions into the Countrey, plunder'd and burnt the Churches, murder'd all the Chriſtians they met with, cut Ammonas the Biſhop of Naples's Throat, took his Prieſts, and ſlic'd them into ſmall pieces, to fry with the Relicks of other Martyrs.

No body durſt appear in the High-ways for fear of theſe Villains, till Juſtinian being inform'd of theſe Diſorders, ſent Two of his Generals, who routed Julian, and deſtroy'd a great many Samaritans. The Chriſtians after this Victory, were even with them for what they had made them ſuffer; and Sylvanus being come in again into Scythopolis, without leave from the Emperour, the Chriſtians without any more ado ſtopp'd and burnt him. He had a Son, a Man of Note, who had very good employs at Court. He was even a Favourite, of the Empereſs, and to revenge his Father's Death, he laid all the Fault of theſe Diſorders on the Chriſtians, who inhabited Paleſtine. Juſtinian, exaſperated, by Theodora, was in a violent Rage. But the Chriſtians deputed Sabas to make ſome Remonſtrances to this Prince, and to beg to be exempted from Taxes, that they might repair the Damages, which they had ſuſtain'd from the Samaritans. Sabas alter'd the Emperour's Mind, and the Chriſtians appear'd Innocent, and the Samaritans Guilty. He thereupon order'd, that all their Synagogues ſhou'd be demoliſh'd; that the Samaritans ſhou'd be excluded from all manner of Offices; that their Children ſhou'd be diſinherited; and he condemn'd the greateſt Mutineers to Death. Arſenius was involv'd in this Condemnation; but he threw himſelf at Saba's Feet, and redeem'd his Life by Baptiſm. A double Wall was built about Mount Gerizim to defend its Entrance. After the Rebels were puniſh'd, the Biſhops of Aſcalon, and Pella, were order'd to viſit the Two firſt Paleſtines, and re-build the Churches that were burnt, at the Coſt of the Samaritans, or out of the publick Money. Thoſe who loſt much had ſome Gratifications. In a Word, there was a Magnificent Church built at Jeruſalem, and dedicated to the Holy Virgin.

26. The Samaritans were conſiderably diminiſh'd by theſe ſevere Courſes †. For moſt of them, through Want and Miſery, or for fear of Death, embrac'd Chriſtianity. Juſtinian doth not conceal his hard Uſage towards them. He acknowledges, that he had afflicted them with ſeveral Puniſhments, becauſe they had treated the Chriſtians with too much Pride and Barbarity. But being at laſt inform'd by Sergius Biſhop of Cæſarea, that they were ſorry for their Fault, and promis'd, that they wou'd behave themſelves better

* Cod. Theod. tit. 5. l. 18. p. 74. t. 4. † An. 404. Cod. Theod. tit. 8. l. 16. p. 232. ‖ An. 426. l. 28. p. 244.
‖‖ Caſſiod. l. 3. Ep. 45. p. 54. * Abulph. Dyn. 7. p. 93. † Procop. de Ædificiis, l. 5. c. 7. p. 104. t. 2. ‖ An. 490.
‖‖ An. 530. * Cyrill. in Vita Sabæ apud Cottel. Mon. Eccleſ. Gr. t. 3. p. 339. &c. † Procop. de Ædificiis, l. 5. c. 7. p. 104. t. 2.

for

for the future: He put out a Decree * at the Sollicitation of this Biſhop, who acted in their Behalf, whereby they were allow'd to make Wills; and if they dy'd inteſtate, their Lawful Heirs might claim their Inheritance, whether they were in a Direct, or Collateral Line; provided notwithſtanding, that if there was in the Family any Child, or Relation, that was a Chriſtian, his Religion wou'd give them a better Claim, than any of the Heirs, unleſs the Competitors wou'd alſo embrace Chriſtianity: The Emperour declaring that he did not intend to draw any advantage by it, or that their Eſtates ſhou'd be Confiſcated. This was a Snare, which had caus'd a great many Diſorders among the Samaritans, had they been rich.

27. There is another Law under the Name of Juſtin, which † forbids all Samaritans, even after their Converſion, unleſs they did their Duty, to make any Wills, or Legacies; and confiſcates to the Exchequer all Inheritances whatſoever, that may fall; and the Emperour excepts only Husbandmen from this ſevere Law; becauſe the Lands had otherwiſe remain'd unmanur'd, and that the Emperour's Revenue increas'd in proportion to the abundance of Fruits, and Corn.

This ſame Law excluded alſo the Samaritans from all Civil and Military Employs; ſet at liberty any Slave belonging to a Samaritan; allow'd that Children, that cou'd not as yet read, might be Baptiz'd without much Examination: But requir'd that thoſe of Age, who intended to become Chriſtians, ſhou'd be try'd concerning their Faith; and enjoyn'd that if after their Converſion, they return'd again to the Jewiſh Religion, or did ſomething whereby it might be ſuſpected that they only diſſembl'd, they ſhou'd be baniſh'd; and that all thoſe who had any ways protected them ſhou'd be puniſh'd. So that the Condition of the Samaritans who were diſpers'd in the Empire, became every day harder and more deplorable.

28. They made for all that an Inſurrection in this Prince's Reign. For the Fathers of the Second Concil of Nicæa quoted a Letter of Simeon Stilites Junior, wherein the Samaritans ‖ are look'd upon as the filthieſt and moſt ſeditious Men in the World. They cou'd not be very formidable, becauſe they were only the Inhabitants |||| of a ſmall Town ſituate at the Foot of Mount Carmel: And yet the Patriarch of Antioch complain'd of them. Paul Biſhop of Porphyrion, a neighbouring City, undertook to make ſome Remonſtrances to the Emperour, and Simeon, who relates all theſe Things, ſays that he could not ſhed Tears enough for the Diſorders, which they had committed. He endeavours to excite the Prince's Jealouſy, by informing him, that they came in a Tumultuary manner into the Church, which he had built, and concludes, that they deſerve no Mercy. Their Crime after all, was, that they did beat down ſome Croſſes, and break ſome Images of Chriſt or of the Virgin Mary: And therefore it was argued, that if thoſe, that diſhonour'd the Emperour's Images were ſentenc'd to death, thoſe who defac'd the Images of our Lord deſerv'd to be puniſh'd with the utmoſt Severity.

29. Charles the Great queſtion'd the Truth of this Letter quoted by the Second Council of Nicæa. He did not think it writ in a Stile ſuitable to a Chriſtian Anchoret, who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by his Auſterities. For ſuch a Man ſhou'd not have excited the Emperour to draw his Sword, or ſollicited his Revenge againſt the Samaritans. He cou'd not conceive that one who profeſs'd ſo ſtrict a Morality, cou'd ſtuff his Letter with ſo mean and groveling Flattery to a Debauch'd Prince, and ſay, that God reign'd with him, conregnabat. Laſtly, he maintain'd, that this Saint ſo much extoll'd by the Fathers at Nicæa, was not known to him, which made his Letter and the Crime charg'd upon the Samaritans very doubtful.

I do not however know whether this Prince was in the Right. For 1. Simeon Stilites was not unknown, as he ſuppos'd. Evagrius, much older than Charles the Great, ſince he liv'd in the Reign of Maurice, aſſures that this Anchoret was conſulted from all parts of the Empire; and that even the Barbarians, who had heard of him, came to take his advice. 2. I confeſs, that it was a very bad Apology for Simeon, to quote a Roman Council, who gave the * Title of moſt Holy to Theodoric King of the Goths, who was an Arian. The Baſeneſs of the One, did not juſtifie that of the Others. But it is the Character of Bigots, and ſuperſtitious Men to cringe to Princes, and to crown their Vices, provided they favour them. Baronius doth not conceal Juſtin's Debaucheries; and yet makes him a Hero; and triflingly alluding to his Name, applies to him theſe Words of the Scripture, † the Righteous are as bold as a Lion. He laviſhly praiſes him, becauſe he looks upon him as a Protector of Images, and of the Worſhip that was newly paid to them. 3. Laſtly, Superſtitious Men are generally Cruel. They never forgive thoſe, who oppoſe their way of Worſhip; and they not only trample upon Chriſtian Charity, but alſo forget the Laws of Chriſtianity, and glory in their perſecuting Zeal. So that we muſt not think it ſtrange, that Simeon requir'd that the Samaritans ſhou'd be puniſh'd without Mercy, becauſe they deſtroy'd Images; and the Reaſons which Charles the Great alledg'd to reject the Letter of this Anchoret, are too weak to make us reject it.

Let us only obſerve, Firſt, that it was rather a Religious War, than an Inſurrection againſt the Prince. We ſee in it Monks and Biſhops that complain, rather than Generals, that were marching againſt them. For the Samaritans perſevering in their Zeal, cou'd not endure that Images ſhou'd be worſhipp'd. 2. The Samaritans muſt have had at that time ſeveral Settlements in Judæa; ſince thoſe that dwelt near Porphyrion are repreſented as Mutineers, to diſtinguiſh them from others, who liv'd more peaceably in other Places. The Latin Interpreter inſinuates, that they were Maſters of a whole City ‖; but that is not likely. In a Word, notwithſtanding Simeon's Letter is inſcrib'd to Juſtinian, it is yet certain, that it was directed to Juſtin, who ſucceeded that Emperour, and was only writ at the end of the Sixth Century. So that the Samaritans were ſtill pretty numerous at that time. They were ſpread in Arabia in Mahomet's time ||||; who knew them there as well as the Jews, and promis'd them the Salvation of their Souls. if they wou'd believe in him.

30. It is not eaſie to trace their Hiſtory afterwards; whether becauſe they have been confounded with the Jews, as belonging to the ſame Nation, and as Schiſmaticks proceeding from the ſame Body and Church; or becauſe their Number leſſen'd, and made ſo mean a Figure in the World, that they eſcap'd the Notice of the moſt exact Hiſtorians. Benjamin of Tudela, who in the Twelfth Century * went through all the Synagogues of his Nation, found but about a Hundred Samaritans, that were poor and wretched at Sichem, where they continu'd to offer their Sacrifices. Abulpharages ſpeaks of a Samaritan, who in the beginning of the Thirteenth Century was in a mighty Repute in Syria, being an able Phyſician, who eaſily gueſs'd at the doom of Sick People; but wou'd impart his Secret to no Man, † and was ſo greedy of Gain, * Juſtin. Novel. 129. p. 572. † Juſtin. Novel. 144. p. 610. ‖ An. 574. Concil. Nic. II. Act. 5. p. 450.

|||| Οἰκοῦντες Καστρα. Caſtra urbs minima. * Allat. de Simeonum Scriptis, p. 20. † Prov. 28. 1. ‖ Habentes Caſtra. |||| Alcoran. Azoara 2. p. 10. * An. 1170. † Abulph. Dyn. 9. p. 343.

that

that he wou'd not read any Lectures to Strangers, unless he was well paid. He did not thereby do much honour either to his Nation, or Religion.

31. Baldensel, who travell'd some time after into that Countrey, speaks of another kind of Samaritans, he found there. * "There is, says he, in the Province of Samaria, a Sect that take the Name of Samaritans, which follows neither the Religion of the Jews, Mahometans, Pagans, or Christians. They maintain the Unity of God, and worship him otherwise than other Nations. Their way of Living deserves to be admir'd, and they distinguish themselves from others by their Habit. However, as it is the Custom of that Countrey to cover their Heads with a Veil, they do it too. But whereas the Christians carry a Yellow, the Mahometans a White, and the Jews a Green one, these wear a Red Veil: They pretend to be the Darlings of God, and the only Men, that he will save. There is no doubt, but they were the true Samaritans, who distinguish'd themselves from the Jews by the Sacrifices, which they offer'd to God on Mount Gerizim, and were still in Being in the Fourteenth Century. † Baldensel, who makes them a particular Sect, almost unknown, was not sufficiently vers'd in the History of the Bible, before he travell'd into that Countrey.

32. The Ten Tribes ‖ subsisted a long time in the East after the Destruction of the Temple. But when the Jews are ask'd what is become of these Ten Tribes, they answer by these Words of Isaiah, |||| They shall come, which were ready to perish in the Land of Assyria, and shall worship the Lord in the Holy Mount at Jerusalem. The First Part of the Prophecy, say they, is fulfill'd. For these Ten Tribes, that were to perish in the Land of Assyria, are really so; but they shall one day appear again; and taking one of the Posterity of David for their Leader, they shall return to worship at Jerusalem. Holstenius * transports them as far as Colchis, and affirms, that the Inhabitants of that Countrey are the Offspring of the Old Samaritans dispers'd in the East; because they circumcise their Children. But Holstenius's Conjecture is weak. For the Inhabitants of Colchis are rather come from Egypt, where Circumcision was very Old as well as in Ethiopia. Add to this, that altho' the Ten Tribes were at first Schismaticks, and persever'd a long time in their Schism during their Exile; yet most of them sent some Presents to Jerusalem; and they came there into the Temple, when the Apostles preach'd in that City, after they receiv'd the Gift of Tongues. So that they must not be confounded with those who remain'd in Samaria, and Sichem, after the Desolation of Judæa; or who dispersing themselves into several Places, retain'd certain Tenets, which were peculiar to them, and at least who kept up a Spirit of Schism and Separation.

33. We shall write in another place the History of the Ten Tribes; but let us here acknowledge, that very few of these last Samaritans remain'd; and that there are still some at Grand Cairo, who are the Remains of those ancient Samaritans whom Ptolemæus Lagus transported into that Countrey: And indeed it is well known, that the Jewish Nation always lov'd Egypt, and settl'd at that time in this Countrey, and continu'd there for several Centuries. Some, tho' but few, are still seen at Damascus and Gaza.

34. An Arabian Geographer, quoted by Scaliger † affirms, that there is an Island, call'd by the Name of the Samaritans, and Inhabited by the Remains of that Nation. They are known by their Crys. For when they see any Stranger among them, they cry aloud, Touch me not. This was the Character of the Samaritans, according to St. Epiphanius ‖. For he reproaches them, that they are Fools, to imagine, that they cou'd be defil'd by being touch'd by Man; and therefore every time that they came home, they wash'd themselves with Urine, and threw their Garments in Water, when they had touch'd any Stranger. But in the Main, the Island of the Arabian Geographer, and the Folly, which St. Epiphanius ascribes them of washing themselves with Urine, are as much known one as the other. Damascenus hath follow'd ||‖ St. Epiphanius. For he assures that other Nations were an Abomination to the Samaritans, and that they wou'd not touch any body; but adds, that they did not believe the Resurrection, which is false.

35. To conclude, there are as yet some Samaritans at Napolousse, which is old Naples, or Sichem, situate between Mount Ebal, and Mount Gerizim. They observe the Law of Moses more exactly than the rest of the Jews. They have there the Tomb of Joseph, and the Bones of that Patriarch, which were brought from Egypt. They have some Priests of the Posterity of Aaron. They offer Sacrifices upon Mount Gerizim, according to the ancient Rites. Nay, they have a High-Priest, who resides there, and appoints the Day of the Passover, and all other Festivals to the Samaritans, that are dispers'd. Pietro della Valla believ'd, that they were extinct; because he did not observe them in that place. What may be gather'd from his Observation, is, that many things escape Travellers; and that their Relations must not be blindly depended upon; or that the Samaritans of that Countrey are poor. For it can't be deny'd, but they writ to Scaliger, and ask'd him some fine Linen for their Priests. Nay, it is but Twenty Years since they writ to their Brethren in England * to give them notice of the Death of their High-Priest, and ask some Alms for their Poor, who are doubtless the greatest Part of that small Body. However, it is a strange Thing, that they have maintain'd themselves for so many Ages in their Native Countrey, notwithstanding the many Persecutions they have undergone since Jeroboam. In a Word, Mr. Ludolf, a Man so profoundly skill'd in the Oriental Languages, at the End of the last Century kept a Correspondence with these Sichemites; and it is not long † since he printed a Letter, which he receiv'd from them.

Having finish'd the History of the Samaritans, I met with Two Things that may embellish it: One is the Chronicle Dr. Bernard has communicated to those Illustrious Journalists of Leipsic, whose Learning, Accuracy, and Zeal for the Republick of Learning, can't be sufficiently commended. I have inserted my Reflections upon this Chronicle, because it has many Places that wanted them. The other Piece is an Extract from Dr. Huntington's Letters, who having travell'd into Egypt and Judæa, and made a considerable Stay in the East, to converse with the Samaritans, was perfectly acquainted with their present State.

A New Chronicle of the Samaritans, publish'd by Dr. Bernard.

The Creation of the Universe ‖.
Noah's |||| Flood.

Note, The Samaritans don't agree about the Time of the Deluge *, either with the Jews, who retard it 349 Years, or with the Septuagint, who put it in the

* Guilielmi Baldensel Odoporicon ad Terr. Sanct. c. 9. apud Canis. Lect. Ant. t. 5. p. 134. † An. 1336. ‖ Responsio Judaica ad 23. Quæst. l. 22. p. 25. |||| Isaiah c. 27. v. 13. * Holst. ad Nihusium in Allat. 1 Simeonis. † Scalig. de Emend. Temp. l. 7. p. 663. ‖ Epiph. Hær. Sam. p. 26. ‖‖ Damasc. de Hær. 559. Cottel. Mon. Eccl. Gr. t. 2. p. 282. * An. 1686. † An. 1688. ‖ In the 1st Year of the World, 4425 before Jesus Christ. ‖‖ An. 1307, 3118. * Acta eruditor. April. An. 1691. p. 167.

Year

Year 2242. They depart from the Hebrews, becauſe they make Jared an Hundred Years Old, before the Birth of Enoch; Methuſalem 120, before that of Lamech; and Lamech 129, before he begat Noah; all which amounts to Three Hundred Forty Nine Years. Scaliger * and Voſſius have cenſur'd George Syncellus, as if he was miſtaken in this Point. However, he had very good reaſon to obſerve this Difference.

Abraham † was born Two Hundred Forty Two Years after the Deluge.

Note, Here is ſtill a great Difference of Years; for the Jews reckon but Two Hundred Ninety Two; and the Septuagint a Thouſand Seventy Two. Indeed, the Years of the Poſt-diluvian Patriarchs, that preceded the Birth of Abraham, are reckon'd very differently. In the mean Time, it muſt be obſerv'd, that the Samaritans don't count Cainan, the Son of Arphaxad, among the Patriarchs. Their Copy, in this reſpect, perfectly agrees with the Hebrew: And || Uſher has obſerv'd, that he was not in the ancient Copy of the LXX, which was kept in the Alexandrian Library: He crept into the leſs correct Copies, and from thence paſs'd into the Text of St. Luke.

Abraham |||| went from Charran; when he was 75 Years Old, in the 1017*th* Year after the Deluge.

Note, 'Tis univerſally agreed, that Abraham was ſo Old when he left his Countrey; but there remains a great Difficulty, becauſe the Hebrew Copy of the Jews makes Thara 70 Years Old, when his Son Abraham was born. He adds, that Thara died at 205 Years of Age. Abraham left not his Countrey, till after the Death of his Father. He muſt therefore be much more than 75 Years Old; but the Samaritan Copy diſpels all the Difficulty; which makes Thara live but a Hundred Forty Five Years; and ſo Abraham, born in the 70*th* Year of Thara, was 75 Years Old at his Father's Death; when he went from Charran. We muſt therefore prefer the Samaritan Copy here before the Hebrew.

The Iſraelites * came out of Egypt Five Hundred Ninety Five Years after Abraham, and 1447 after the Deluge.

Note, The Copy of the Samaritan Pentateuch is clearer about the return from Egypt, than that of the Jews. For in the Latter, we read, that the Time of the Children of Iſrael, and their Fathers ſojourning in Canaan and Egypt, was 430 Years. Strictly ſpeaking, it is not true, that the Iſraelites liv'd Four Hundred and Thirty Years in Egypt: But the Addition of the Samaritans clears the Fact, and removes the Difficulty.

Forty Years after their Departure from Egypt, † died Aaron the High-Prieſt, and Moſes his Brother the Legiſlator, at 120 Years of Age. Here ends the Pentateuch.

Joſhua entred upon the Government. From thence they date the Years of Grace, and of Divine Protection, or Reduvan. The Miracle of the Cloud that reſted upon the Tabernacle, ceaſed when they entred into Canaan in the Month of Niſan. They carried Twelve Stones out of Jordan to the top of Mount Gerizim, with the Ark, and the Tabernacle.

Joſhua divided || the Land of Canaan in the 46*th* Year of their Departure, and the 7*th* of his Government. They began to reckon the Sabbatick Years from the Month Tiſri.

Note, The Author obſerves, that this was the Eccleſiaſtical Year, but not the Civil, which began in September.

In the |||| Fifty Ninth Year from their Departure, Thirteen Years after their Entrance into Canaan, I Abiſhua, the Son of Phineas, the Son of Eleazar, the Son of Aaron, wrote this Copy of the Law at the Door of the Tabernacle upon Mount Gerizim, and the ſame Year Phineas divided the Day into 24 Hours, (31.12.).

Note, The Samaritans boaſt of poſſeſſing ſtill this Copy written by the Hand of Abiſhua: But Huntington has convicted them of the Impoſture.

In the 65*th* Year of their Departure * Joſhua died an Hundred and Twenty Years Old, having judged the People of Iſrael 25 Years and ſome Months. He was Buried at Temna, at preſent call'd Gaureta.

Three Hundred Years after their Return † from Egypt, and after the Death of Somſon, or Samſon, the Poſterity of Aaron contended for the Prieſthood; the 260 Years of Grace; the happy Days were at an end. The People ran after ſtrange Gods. The Tabernacle which ſtill remain'd upon Mount Gerizim was cover'd with thick Darkneſs, and diſappear'd, to the great Aſtoniſhment of the High-Prieſt. Ozi, then Eli, of the Branch of Ithamar, Son of Jophnah, uſurp'd the Prieſthood at Shilo.

Note, The Ancient Chronicle, of which we have given ſome Extracts, ſays, that Eli was a Magician, who heap'd up vaſt Treaſures by his Art. They accuſe him of making a Schiſm, by tranſlating the Divine Worſhip from Gerizim to Shilo. Samuel was alſo a great Sorcerer. The Original of the Miſchief was, that the Heathens having learn'd from the Books of Balaam, that the Iſraelites cou'd not be deſtroy'd, unleſs they drove away their Gods by an open Apoſtacy, ſent them ſome profligate Wretches, who convers'd with them, ſtole their Secret, and taught them Magick.

The King of Aſſyria || carried away the Ten Tribes to Edeſſa, Charran, and Nineveh, with Abdias their High-Prieſt, who took the Copy of the Law with him to Nineveh, having buried the Sacred Veſſels under Mount Gerizim.

Note, The Author breaks the Order of the Chronology in the following Article; for having ſpoken of the Captivity of the Ten Tribes, he goes back to David.

David |||| King of the Jews, died 65 Years Old, after a Reign of 47, the Firſt Day of the Feaſt of Tabernacles.

Salomon * began in the Fourth Year of his Reign to build a Temple to God at Jeruſalem: Which is call'd Ælia, Cuds, and Beit Mectas: Gair was then High-Prieſt at Gerizim.

In the beginning of the Reign of † Roboam, who was a Fool, the Jews were divided into Four different Factions. The Line of Phineas and Joſeph worſhip'd upon the Holy Mountain of Gerizim. Another Part perform'd their Service at the Houſe of Mectas that Salomon had built. The Third Part follow'd Jeroboam to Sebaſta and Dan. The Laſt worſhip'd the Gods of the Gentiles. Elijah the Prophet appear'd, and in tract of time Elis, Eſcanida, Abdelus, Sedecias, Eliſemas, Apollonius.

Note, This Houſe of Mectas, where the People went to worſhip with Roboam, was the Temple of Jeruſalem. And therefore, it deſerv'd to be levell'd with the Ground. We can't conjecture why he calls Bethel Sebaſta, for 'twas at Bethel that Jeroboam ſet up his Calves. Sebaſta was Samaria, which became the Capital of the Schiſmatical Kings, and the Seat of their Religion. Beſides, he divides Two Parties that were intimately united; for thoſe that worſhip'd upon Gerizim were Jeroboam's Faction. Laſtly, we don't know the Prophets he ſpeaks of, ſince their Names are diſguiſed. Moſt of them cou'd not have been till after the pretended return from the Captivity, ſince they are

---

*, Scaliger in Euſeb. Voſſius Chron. p. 39. Georg. Syncell. Chronog. p. 83. † 2249. 2176. || Uſſer. Chronog. |||| 2324. 2101. * 2754. 1671. † 2794. 1631. || 2800. 1625. |||| 2813. 1612. * 2819. 1606. † 3054. 1371. || 3717. 708. |||| 3235. 1190. * 3239. 1186. † 3276. 1149.

are ſpoken of after Abdelus, who was then High-Prieſt of Samaria; but the order of Time is ſo ill obſerv'd that Elijah is plac'd near Jeroboam.

In * the Thirty Fifth Year of Abdenus's Pontificate, the Samaritans return'd from the Captivity into the Holy Land, by the Permiſſion of King Sauredius; to the Number of Three Hundred Thouſand Iſraelites with their Families, conducted by Adus Son of Simeon. Eſdras then made an Hebrew Alphabet of Twenty Seven Letters, whereof there were Seven Finals.

Note, We have already obſerv'd that the Return of the Ten Tribes to Judæa is a Fiction. They were not Iſraelites, but Idolaters, that Eſſaraddon ſent into this Countrey. Beſides, the Samaritans had then no High-Prieſt. King Sauredius is probably Darius. They make Eſdras the Author of a New Alphabet, which is falſe; for he only introduc'd the Chaldee Characters in the Room of the Samaritan, which are more ancient.

Alexander the Great †, coming to Napaluſſa, or Ancient Sichem, in his way to Egypt, threw himſelf at the Feet of Hezechias in the 15*th* Year of his Pontificate, to receive his Bleſſing. He confeſs'd he had ſeen the Figure of this High-Prieſt cloath'd in his Sacerdotal Habits, who promis'd him a happy Succeſs in his Perſian Expedition. Alexander made him ſome great Preſents, and told him, I now know that your God is above all Others. This ſame Hezechias compos'd ſome Sacred Hymns and the Hoſannah.

Note, There's no need of advertiſing that the Samaritans have ſtolen this Story from the Jews, and turn'd the Name of Jaddus into that of Hezechias.

The Year following || Alexander built Alexandria in Egypt, and when in his Return he paſs'd through Samaria, Hezechias declar'd to him, that inſtead of erecting Statues to him, which was forbidden by the Law, he would conſecrate a Living Monument to his Honour, and cauſe all the Boys that ſhou'd be born to be call'd by his Name. This Prince went immediately to worſhip God at Gerizim.

A Thouſand |||| Forty Six Years after the Years of Grace were accompliſh'd, and God withdrew his Protection, the High-Prieſt Hezechias died. Alexander the Great lamented him; his Son Dalia ſucceeded him, but he was not in favour with Ptolemy the Son of Lagus.

Alexander died, 31 Years Old, whereof he had reign'd 18.

Note, According to this Reckoning, he muſt have begun his Reign at 13. I believe there is a miſtake in it, and that we ought to read 8 Years.

In the Third * Year of Arideus and Ptolemeus Lagus, this Prince ſent Orodes, who plunder'd the Temple of Gerizim, and extorted an heavy Tribute from the Napaluſſians.

Ptolemeus † Philadelphus the Patron of Learning, in the 10*th* Year of his Reign ſent for Aaron, and ſome extraordinary Perſons of Samaria, with the Jewiſh Doctors, under the Conduct of Eleazar, who tranſlated the Law of Moſes out of Hebrew into Greek: But theſe Interpreters diſagreeing upon the Explication of theſe Words of Deuteronomy, To me belongs Vengeance, or Retribution, and ſeveral other Paſſages, as well as concerning the Place, which God had made choice of to ſeat his Temple on, Philadelphus preferr'd the Verſion of the Samaritans before that of the Jews, made them rich Preſents, and forbad the Jews to come near Gerizim. 'Tis ſaid alſo, that the Earth was cover'd with Darkneſs for Three Days, whilſt the Jews were tranſlating the Books of Moſes into Greek. There aroſe at the ſame Time Three Sects among the Jews. The Phariſees who carry Schiſm and Separation in their Name, and pretend to be the Fathers of Traditions; the Saducees, who attribute as much to Reaſon as to the Law, and the Orthodox Kaſideans, Honeſt Men, like the Samaritan Philoſophers, and Inhabiting near Gerizim.

Note, 'Tis falſe that the Samaritans had a Hand in the Septuagint Verſion. Beſides, the Sect of the Kaſideans is imaginary, unleſs they confound them with the Eſſenes.

Auguſtus || entring into Alexandria, Cleopatra killed herſelf, after having reign'd 22 Years, and always protected the Samaritans. Herod put to death a great Number of Jews and Samaritans.

Note, 'Tis true, that Herod was cruel, but inſtead of Samaria's feeling the Effects of his Cruelty, he preferr'd it to the other Cities. He built ſome Palaces in it, and caus'd Agrippa to admire their Magnificence. Nor can we conceive how Cleopatra was the Protectreſs of the Samaritans: For Judæa, being ſubject to the Romans, did not depend upon the Queen of Egypt.

Thirteen Hundred |||| Years after the end of the Years of Grace, and the beginning of the Wrath of God, 'tis ſaid, that Jeſus Chriſt the Son of Mary came into the World, under the Pontificate of Jobiam at Samaria.

Note, We have obſerv'd, that theſe Years of Grace, are thoſe that are reckon'd from the beginning of Joſhua, till the Diviſion aroſe between the Children of Aaron 260 Years after Joſhua.

Jeſus Chriſt * was Circumcis'd in the 16*th* Year of Jobiam's Pontificate.

He was † Crucifi'd under Tiberius, in the Twenty Firſt Year of John's Pontificate in Samaria.

In the 16*th* of Acbon's Pontificate || the Emperour Adrian returning from Egypt, where he had put many Chriſtians to death, began to perſecute the Jews; he beſieg'd Jeruſalem, and ſpar'd not the Samaritans, though he had a Wife of that Nation, of the Family of Joſeph.

Note, 'Tis added in the other Chronicle, that Adrian coming to Napaluſſa, carry'd away a great Number of excellent Books, particularly the Genealogies, and that the Jews were very ill us'd. But they diſſemble the true Cauſe of this War.

This Prince |||| at the Sollicitation of Two Renegado Samaritans, Ephrem and Manaſſeh, took Jeruſalem, ſet Fire to it, and prohibited upon pain of Death to approach near it, and alſo Samaria, then Twelve Paraſanges or Twenty Four Leagues: But afterwards this Emperour protected the Samaritans, granted them Privileges, reſtor'd the Statues of the Baniſh'd, built a Temple on Gerizim, near that of the Samaritans, and took the Brazen Gates at Jeruſalem to ſhut it.

Antoninus ſucceeded Adrian * in the 22*d* Year of Acbon; who not only favour'd the Samaritans, but ſtudied the Law, and conform'd his Life by its Precepts: The Samaritan Affairs flouriſh'd under him as much as under Joſhua. Antoninus reign'd 32 Year, and with him fell the Glory of Samaria.

Note, This is evidently falſe: For Antoninus hated them: Beſides, they make his Reign Ten Years longer that it was.

There aroſe † a Diſpute concerning the Newneſs of the World, betwixt the High-Prieſt Levi, and the Philoſopher Alexander, who furniſh'd the Emperour Commodus with an occaſion of deſtroying the Samaritans with Fire, and Sword, and the Croſs. This Prince, at the Inſtance of his Phyſician Galen, (an Enemy to the Jews and Chriſtians, whoſe Faith, deſtitute of Demonſtration, was an offence to him) caus'd Hogs Fleſh to be mingled with their

* 3905. 520. † 4024. 331. || 4095. 330. |||| 4100. 325. * 4104. 321. † 4101. 324.
|| 4395. 30. |||| 4425. 1. * 4426 Years after Jeſus Chriſt. 1. † 4455. 30. || 4557. 132. |||| 4560. 135.
* 4563. 138. † 4608. 183.

their Diet, and forced them to eat Meats consecrated to Idols.

The Emperour * Alexander persecuted them, and valued their Lives as nothing.

Ardasir † Balecides restor'd the Empire of the Persians, in the 545*th* Year of the Seleucides, the 20*th* of Acbon the Samaritan High-Priest, and the 12*th* of Alexander Severus: But he could never oblige Nathanael, or his Cosen Acbon, to change their Religion.

In the 1993*d* Year after the end of the Time of Grace, in the || 12*th* of Eleazar the Son of Nathanael, the Samaritans Pontificate, begun the Mahometan Hegira, and the Arabian Chronology.

Saladin took |||| Samaria in the 583*d* Year of the Hegira.

The Chronicle * of Albuphætoe Danesæus ends in the 5949*th* Year of the Creation of the World, and 898*th* of the Hegyra, which make Twenty Eight Years more than the Julians, because they are Lunar.

We find in the same Piece, a Catalogue of all the High-Priests that have govern'd this Church from Aaron, down to the 628*th* Year of Jesus Christ, and the 7*th* of the Hegyra; but this Catalogue is manifestly false, since the Priesthood at Gerizim begun not till Alexander the Great's time; and tho we should ascend as high as Jeroboam, who was the First Author of the Schism, yet we cou'd not find a true Succession from Aaron. Besides, there is so much Uncertainty concerning their High-Priests, that they can give no sure footing to Chronology. There we find a Baba Raba, who was King and High-Priest of his Nation during the Life of his Son Levi.

Note, This confirms the Testimony of Abulpharagius, who says, that the Samaritans revolted under the Empire of Zeno, and made themselves a King; for Baba Raba, whose Exploits are celebrated in the Ancient Chronicle, lived under this Prince. The High-Priest who lived in the Time of the Hegira, and concludes this Catalogue, was call'd Eleazar.

The present State of the Samaritans in Judæa and Egypt.

The present State of the Samaritans in Egypt and Judæa can't be better known than from Dr. Huntington's † Letters. This Learned Englishman had seen them at Cairo and Napolussa, had corresponded with them, and examin'd them upon several Things, which common Travellers generally omit. 'Tis therefore worth while to give an Extract of these Letters, which are lately publish'd.

There are no Samaritans at Damascus; and tho those of Sichem boast of their Numerous Brethren at Cairo, I saw there but One Samaritan and his Wife, who were very poor. The Synagogue is a little, nasty, and obscure Chamber; here are kept Two Copies of the Law, which have an Antiquity of Five Hundred Years. They have a Form of Prayer. The Book of Joshua, which contains a very short Chronicle from the Creation of the World to Mahomet. This false Prophet is cursed at the End of the Book, but that Word is written in Samaritan, that the Arabians may not understand it: Lastly, they || keep in this little Library some Commentaries upon the Law, written in Arabick. This is the Language in common use, except when they quote any passage of the Law, or write the Names of their High-Priests; for then they use Samaritan Characters.

Those of Sichem or Napolussa, are for the most part Farmers of the Customs, and Collectors of the Tribute at Sichem, Gaza, Joppa, or else are Secretaries to the Bassa, which gives them some countenance. They walk the Streets |||| well enough dress'd, and are not so miserable as in other Places. Their Principal, Merchib Ben Yacobs writ to me at Jerusalem. The Letters were sign'd by Eighteen Persons, which were almost all of Consideration at Sichem. This Commissary of the Customs was afterwards oblig'd to retire to Legborne, because of the Vexations that were given him in the Holy Land. These Samaritans boast of having a Copy of the Law, written by the Hand of Abisha. We have, say they, in their Letters, a Sacred Writing, 'tis the Copy of the Law, in which are found these Words; " I Abisha the Son of Phineas, the Son of Ele- " azar, the Son of Aaron the High-Priest, have tran-
" scrib'd this Copy at the Door of the Taberna" cle of the Congregation, in the Thirteenth Year " of the Children of Israel's entrance into the Holy " Land, or upon the Frontiers. The Samaritans having boasted of this Copy, I was willing, in a Second Journey I made to Sichem, to examine the Truth of the Fact with my own Eyes. But I turn'd over the Manuscript long enough without finding the Words; and the Samaritans who were present, confess'd, that these Words were not now in their Copy; that they were there formerly, but some body had maliciously expugn'd them. Thus instead of honestly acknowledging their Imposture, they face it with a New Falsehood, and sacrifice their Conscience to a Chimerical Antiquity. Indeed 'tis question'd, whether this Copy be ancient. A Critick * excellently skill'd in the Oriental Antiquities, has observ'd, upon examining many Samaritan Copies, that there is perhaps not one Five Hundred Years old.

All the Samaritans hate mortally the Jews; for this Traveller relates, that they having one day ask'd him whether there were Hebrews in his Countrey, they were overjoy'd to hear there were; but when he went to undeceive them, because they took the Jews of England for Samaritans, they would not believe him: No, no, cry'd they, they are Israelites, Hebrews, our most Brotherly-Brethren, Fratres Fraterrimi. As they don't give the Jews the Title of Hebrews, or Israelites, they think all Nations do the like. And indeed they fansie, that they are the only Stock of ancient Israel. One of them † had a Design to come and see those whom he call'd his Brethren in England; but understanding that he must be upon the Sea on the Sabbath, he thought it was breaking the Rest of it, and wou'd hear no more of the Voyage; because they observe the Sabbath with the utmost Strictness.

They don't pronounce the Name Jehovah, but make use of the Word Semau שמא. Mr. Ludolf || with a great deal of Reason, believed it to be the Word Shem שם, which signifies the Name by way of eminence. What is more surprizing, is, that the Christians |||| of Egypt do the same Thing, never pronouncing the Word Phta, which is the Name the Egyptians gave God, to signify that he did every thing without Fraud, with Art, and Truth. But they call God Ebrudi.

Their Notions of the Messiah are very confus'd and very different, but they always speak honourably of him, and don't much declaim against those that worship him: Their Hatred for the other Jews makes them more moderate perhaps to the Christians.

They follow'd the Æra of the Seleucides as long as the Grecian Empire lasted; and even all the time that the Greek Tongue has been of any use in this Countrey; but now that they are subject to the Mahometans, they count the Years of the Hegyra; which being compos'd of Lunar Months, they incercalate One every Thirty Three Years. They reckon 6130 Years from the Creation of the World to the Year 1690, when they wrote to Dr. Huntington.

* 4647. 222. † 4658. 233. || 5047. 622. |||| 5630. 1187. * 5945. 1492. † Huntington. Epist. Lond. 1704. Ep. 23. Ann. 1690. p. 48. || Huntington has brought over into England a Samaritan Chronicle written in Arabick, from which 'tis hop'd to draw great Assistances to the Sacred and Ecclesiastical History. Th. Smith Vita Huntingt. p. 15. |||| Hunting. Ep. Ibid. p. 49. * Smith Vita Hunting. † Ep. 34. p. 54. || Ep. 33. Ann. 1690. p. 51. |||| Gambl. de Myst. Ægypt.

It wou'd be of no uſe to make many Reflections upon what we are told about the Condition of the Samaritans; let us only obſerve, that we have too advantageous an Idea of theſe People, but not their Perſons and Books; becauſe they are very rare and hard to come at. They have endeavour'd for many Ages to impoſe upon the Publick by their Copy of the Pentateuch, as if it was as old as Aaron. They are not yet cured of this Impoſture, tho 'tis but opening ones Eyes to be convinced; and how many Falſhoods have they ſtuffed in their Chronicles. The Learned of the foregoing Age imagin'd that the Book of Joſhua, cry'd up by the Samaritans, wou'd ſupply us with a Thouſand fine Diſcoveries, for the underſtanding Scripture, and Sacred Story. This Book has been ſeen and found full of Fables. We regret the Loſs of Thouſands of Books, which we ſhou'd read with much Pain and little Profit, if they were retrieved. The Second Chronicle we have juſt produced, coſt Dr. Bernard a great deal of Trouble, the greateſt Maſter of the Oriental Tongues, in his Time. And yet we have been oblig'd to add a Note to moſt of the Articles, to illuſtrate or correct them. It would be natural to make the ſame Judgment of this Third Arabick Chronicle, which Dr. Huntington has brought over with him, if the Encomiums beſtow'd upon it by the Learned Dr. Smith, did not give a ſtop to our Prejudices. The Samaritans at preſent hardly underſtand their Language; and are oblig'd to recur to a Paraphraſt, as the Jews did, when at the Return from the Captivity, they boaſt the exact Knowledge of the Hebrew. They have alſo a Verſion of the Arabick Pentateuch written in Samaritan Characters, which claims an Antiquity of Six or Seven Hundred Years. Their Ignorance muſt neceſſarily be very groſs, ſince they groan under ſuch deſperate preſſures; and the only Thing that deſerves our Aſtoniſhment, is, that God ſtill preſerves in the Holy Land this Poſterity of Schiſmaticks, and little Relicks of a Nation, which muſt otherwiſe have been extinct by the frequent Revolutions, and the vaſt Succeſſion of calamitous Years, and Ages it hath undergone.

Let us now take a Survey of their Religion, and ſee how often it vary'd.

CHAP. III.

Of the Religion of the Samaritans. The Canon of Scripture. The Samaritan Pentateuch: Its Original, and Uſe.

I. Whether the Samaritans were Hereticks. II. The Number of the Books which they receiv'd. III. Why they did not admit of the Books of the Schiſmatick Prophets. IV. Different Opinions concerning the Samaritan Pentateuch. V. It was impoſſible, that the Book of the Law cou'd be loſt. VI. The College of Prophets at Jeruſalem, in the Reigns of Manaſſeh and Joſiah. VII. The neceſſity of Studying the Law for the common Concerns of Life. VIII. The Prieſt of Eſar-haddon oblig'd to carry it to the Samaritans. IX. That the Samaritan Pentateuch muſt be judg'd by reading of it. Its Conformity with the Hebrew. X. Proofs, that the Samaritans obſerv'd the Law before Ezra, and Manaſſeh. XI. The Conformity of their Religion with that of the Jews at their return from Captivity. XII. Whether the Samaritans had any Copies of the Law in the Reign of Jeroboam. XIII. Their Idolatry examin'd. XIV. The Uſe of the Pentateuch. An Exceſs on that Subject. XV. Whether the Samaritans chang'd the Letter Thau out of hatred to the Croſs. XVI. An Explanation of a Paſſage of Ezekiel. XVII. Some different Figures of the Letter Thau. St. Jerom's Subtlety.

1. SAint Epiphanius reckons the Samaritans among the Hereticks of the Jewiſh Church. St. Auguſtin, and ſeveral Fathers have trod his Steps. If St. Clement, a Diſciple of the Apoſtles, was the Author of the Recognitions under his Name, this Opinion is of an ancienter Date. But every Body is ſatisfy'd that this Piece is ſpurious. Beſides, the Samaritans and Jews were rather diſtinguiſh'd by a Schiſm than Hereſy. Jeroboam, who was the Firſt Author of this Separation, did not teach any new Tenets; and the particular Opinions of the Samaritans, ſince their Reformation by Manaſſeh, did not deſerve the ignominious Title of Hereſy, which St. Epiphanius gave them, only becauſe he charges them with Opinions, which they had not.

2. The great Crime of the Samaritans concerning Religion, was, that they did receive in the Canon of Scripture but the Five Books of Moſes, and rejected all the Oracles of the Prophets. Nevertheleſs, we muſt make a Diſtinction between the Sacred Books. 1. It is true, that they only acknowledg'd the Books of Moſes as the Rule of their Faith. They thought, that this Law-giver left them all the Tenets which they were bound to believe, and all the Ceremonies, which they were to practiſe. They ſtick ſtill to this Belief, which diſtinguiſhes them from the reſt of the Jews, who add the Prophets to Moſes, and Oral Tradition to the Prophets. 2. They alſo receiv'd the Hiſtorical Books of the Bible; but did not allow them the ſame Authority, as to the Law, whether becauſe the Jews themſelves, whoſe Canon was not ſetl'd, had not the ſame Veneration for them, or whether they were not ſo neceſſary to regulate their Faith as thoſe of Moſes. This Conjecture can't be call'd in queſtion, ſince the Samaritans intitul'd their Chronicle, the Book of Joſhuah, to make it more venerable. Beſides, they made uſe of the true Book of Joſhuah, to prove the Antiquity of their Temple on Mount Gerizim. They did not therefore reject it as Apocryphal. Laſtly, it appears by the Letter which they writ from Sichem to Mr. Ludolf, that they admitted this Book. Neither had they any Intereſt to reject the Book of Judges; ſince many of the Heroes mention'd in it came from their Tribes. The Books of Kings, and Chronicles were not writ, when Jeroboam made the Separation. The Book of Job contain'd only a Foreign, and Particular Hiſtory, wherein the Samaritans thought themſelves but little concern'd. 3. But Jeroboam had a great Intereſt to reject the Pſalms of David. The Number of thoſe Canticles was not ſo great as it is now; and altho thoſe who ſay that David did not compoſe them all, have been reckon'd Hereticks, yet what they affirm is true. Thoſe who pretend the contrary, deſerve to be upbraided with Raſhneſs and Ignorance. David ſpeaks often in theſe Pſalms of the Ark of the Tabernacle of Jeruſalem, of Sion. He affirms, that God hath ingraven his Name on this Mountain, and that it ſhall never be blotted out. Theſe Songs were lately compos'd by Solomon's Father, whoſe Reign was very odious to the Schiſmaticks, and eſpecially to Jeroboam, who had been perſecuted by him. 4. The ſame Reaſon oblig'd them to reject the Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, and the Song of Solomon. And indeed Solomon reign'd with a great deal of Splendour and Authority; but in the main the exorbitant Taxes, which he rais'd upon the

the People caus'd the Inſurrection againſt his Son Reboboam. He ſtain'd his Life by his looſe way of living, and Idolatry: And notwithſtanding he had aton'd for his Crimes by the Repentance, which is aſcrib'd to him; yet it is the common Character of People, that are revolted, to mind more the Faults, than Acts of Piety that follow the Repentance of their Princes; and Jeroboam, who exclaim'd ſo loud againſt Solomon, wou'd not to be ſure acknowledge that he was inſpir'd with the Holy Ghoſt, or that he was a Prophet and a Holy Pen-man.

3. But why did not the Schiſmaticks receive the Writings of the Prophets, that were born, and had liv'd and preach'd in their Schiſm? It is ſomething ſtrange, that their Works are inſerted in the Canon of the Jews; and that they are not admitted into the Samaritan Canon. But the Reaſon of it is palpable. The Samaritans, who liv'd ſince Jeroboam till their City was demoliſh'd by Shalmaneſar, hearken'd to their Prophets as much as the Corruption of the People, and the Idolatry of the Kings cou'd admit it. But the Cuthæans being tranſplanted into that Countrey, and had only the Law from the Prieſt that was ſent them, neglected the Prophets, who had neither liv'd nor writ for them, and were but very little known by them. And this is an Argument, that the Samaritans receiv'd the Law from the Prieſt, that Eſar-haddon ſent. For if the Canon had been already ſettl'd, the Samaritans had cut off from this Canon, what was not favourable to them: But they had kept the Books of Hoſea, and other Prophets, that belong'd to them, ſince they had adopted the Opinions and Religion of the Old Samaritans. This ought to be explain'd, ſince there have been very different Opinions concerning the Origin, and Uſe of the Samaritan Pentateuch.

4. Theſe Opinions are chiefly Five. 1. Father Simon, a very able Critick *, believes, that the Prieſt that Eſar-haddon ſent, did not bring the Book of the Law, which had been uſeleſs to People that did not underſtand Hebrew, ſince he might practiſe all the Ceremonies of the Law without having a Book in his Hand. So that it was a long time after, when Manaſſeh built a Temple on Mount Gerizim, that a Copy of the Law, done, or reform'd by Ezra, which the Jews read every Saturday at Jeruſalem, was brought. Another † Critick, who is us'd to diſpell very happily many Popular Errors, maintains, that the Law ought to be diſtinguiſh'd from the Pentateuch. The Book of the Law contain'd nothing but the Ordinances, which were of neceſſity to be obſerv'd, to ſcreen the People from God's Anger; whereas the Pentateuch contains the Hiſtory of the Creation, of the Captivity of the Jews, of their Travels in the Wilderneſs, &c. It is true, according to him, that the Prieſt carry'd the Law to the Samaritans, which he wanted for the due Obſervation of all the Rites; but the Pentateuch, that was bury'd and loſt under the Ruins of Jeruſalem, and writ over again by Ezra, cou'd not be brought to Samaria but a long time after. 3. The Prieſt that was ſent to the Cuthæans is ſome time || look'd upon as the Author of the Pentateuch of Moſes. So that the Holy Writings muſt be aſcrib'd to him. This Man, coming from Chaldea to inſtruct an Idolatrous People, reſolv'd, ſay they, to write for them a Hiſtory of the Creation of the World, of the proceedings of the Jews till the Law was given them, to let the Cuthæans know, that there was but One God. As he writ exactly in the 18*th* Year of Joſiah, when the Book of the Law was found, he inſerted this Eſſential part in his Book. He writ the whole in Hebrew; becauſe he had not had time to learn the Chaldee Language. Beſides, his Book had not been of a Piece, if the Law had been writ in Hebrew, and the reſt of the Hiſtory in another Tongue; and the Jews made no ſcruple to receive this Book, becauſe they did not ſuſpect this Prieſt. In fine, this Syſtem removes all the Difficulties, which ariſe from Moſes's writing the Pentateuch, and from the Conformity of the Samaritan Copy, with that of the Jews. 4. Moſt of the Reform'd, and ſome Roman Catholick Divines, believe that the Conformity of the Two Copies, proceeds from the Prieſt, (who was ſent to the Cuthæans,) his bringing to them a Copy of the Five Books of Moſes writ in Hebrew, as were thoſe of the Old Jews before the Captivity. But theſe ſame Divines do not agree among themſelves. For ſome extol the Samaritan Pentateuch above the Jewiſh Copies; whereas others think, that it cannot be preferr'd to Others without undermining Religion. ||| The Earth is diſquieted, ſays Solomon, for a Servant when he reigneth, and an Hand Maid that is Heir to her Miſtreſs. Who wou'd not therefore be concern'd, when he ſees, that Criticks * will extol the Books of the Schiſmatick Samaritans above thoſe of the Jews, who are the Depoſitories of the Oracles of God, and the true Librarians of the Chriſtians. The LXX Interpreters had no Knowledge of this Samaritan Copy; or rather they cou'd not be Ignorant that there was ſuch a One. But they deſpis'd it. Cyril of Jeruſalem ſeems to quote it; but he rather points at the Greek Tranſlation, of the Samaritan Pentateuch, which was done in Alexander the Great's time. St. Jerome ſeems to have ſeen it; but in the Main, it was ſo forgot for above a Thouſand Years, that it was not known. The Samaritans either out of Malice, or Hatred to the Jews, have diſguis'd their Tongue, and Characters. For they cou'd not but know thoſe of their Neighbours the Jews. It a was out of groſs Ignorance, that they have ſo barbarouſly alter'd the Names of Cities and other Places, that you can't tell what to make of them. They have diſguis'd the Name of Joſeph, whom the Egyptians call'd Pſomtemphanck, and this Term, according to Kircher, who ſaw in the Vatican a Copy of the Bible in the Egyptian Language, ſignifies a Diviner, a Title which ſuited very well with the Interpreter of Pharaoh's Dreams; whereas you can't gueſs the meaning of it in the Samaritan Copy. To conclude, ſome other of their Alterations are more Criminal. Since whereas the Scripture ſays, that it was God, who made the Ephod, the Urim, and Thummim of the High-Prieſt, the Samaritans aſcribe this in their Books to Moſes.

5. Now that we have related theſe different Opinions of Criticks, we may be allow'd leave to make ſome Remarks upon them. Firſt, Some New Syſtems have been invented about this thing, only becauſe it was thought, that the Book of the Law was not extant when the Cuthæans were tranſported into Samaria, and devour'd by Lions. But if it be prov'd that this Book was not loſt, there will be no more need to recur either to Eſar-haddon's Prieſt, or Ezra, or Manaſſeh, to transfer it to the Samaritans.

Theſe laſt muſt not be believ'd, when they ſay that Moſes made Thirteen Copies of the Law; One for each Tribe, and the Thirteenth for the Levites; or what they writ † ſome Years ago to the Learned Mr. Ludolf, that they read at this time in their Aſſembly upon Mount Gerizim, the Original of the Pentateuch, writ by Abiſcua, Son of Phinehas, Thirteen Years after their coming out of Egypt. For theſe are only prejudices, which they maintain without Proofs and Grounds.

It is impoſſible, that all the Copies of the Law ſhou'd have been loſt both among the Samaritans and

* Simon Critique du V. T. l. 1. c. 10. † Van Dale Epiſt. ad Morinum in Tract. de Idolol. || Opinions of the Divines of Holland concerning the Critick of Father Simon. ||| Prov. 30. 21, &c. * Fuller Pigaſhit, l. 2. c. 9. p. 195. Morin. Exercit. in Pentateuch. Hottinger Exercit. Antimorinianæ, p. 28, 37. & paſſim. Lightfoot Horæ Hebr. in Matth. p 327, & 935. † An. 1688.

Jews. For the Jewiſh or Samaritan Religion did not depend upon Tradition. It was loaded with too many Ceremonies to be preſerv'd that way. They were oblig'd to have the Book before them to regulate the Worſhip of the true God. This Book might ſometime become more ſcarce by the Corruption of the Prieſts, and the Idolatry of the Kings; but it was impoſſible that none of the Prieſts, and Laicks, among whom many were full of Piety and Devotion, had this Book for their farther Inſtruction. We muſt not charge the Jews with ſo criminal a Negligence, upon pretence that their Hiſtory is ſhort, and that we do not know what was done in times ſo diſtant from us. On the Contrary, we ought to ſupply what is wanting in Holy Writ, with what right Reaſon ſuggeſts concerning all Nations.

The Mahometans have not been ſo careleſs as to loſe their Alcoran. The Roman Catholicks, who had ſo great an Intereſt to conceal the Scripture, did indeed forbid the Reading of it, but did not ſuppreſs it. The Proteſtants, tho' confin'd within Dungeons, Fugitives in Caverns, and Slaves in the Gallies, where they are ſtrictly examin'd, and doubly puniſh'd for reading it; yet have and read this Book. The Modern Jews, who are freed from ſo vaſt a Number of Sacrifices and Rites by the Deſtruction of the Temple, and who were bound to perform them whilſt it ſtood, had nevertheleſs this Book as well before as after Printing was invented. The Lay-Men carry and read it as well where they are diſpers'd, as where they are quiet and happy: Can we then imagine, that the ſame Jews, divided into Two different Parties, agreed to let the Book of the Law be loſt, which they look'd upon as the Rule of their Faith, Worſhip, and Morality? Notwithſtanding, that great care was taken to tranſport the Inhabitants of Samaria, yet ſome remain'd; and thoſe, who ſtaid behind might have gather'd the Copies, which all the Multitude of Iſraelites, which were tranſported, left behind them. There was then no War made againſt their Books, as Diocleſian did againſt the Books of Chriſtians. So that private Perſons were not forbid having their Rolls of the Law. The greedy Soldier did not envy this part of the Priſoners Equipage, and ſaw it in their Hands without jealouſy, or a deſire to get them for themſelves. So that thoſe, who were carry'd away might take their Books along with them; and ſuppoſing they had been negligent enough to leave them behind; yet thoſe, who remain'd in Samaria, and the Neighbouring Provinces, might have collected them. However, let us ſuppoſe, that no body thought of it; and that thoſe, who were carry'd away, and they that ſtaid in their Countrey, were equally negligent of the Books of their Religion. But yet they might have thought of them when the Danger was over, and they ſaw, that God wou'd be worſhipp'd according to his Law. There were as yet ſome of theſe Books in being at Jeruſalem. Why then cou'd not they have ſent thither for ſome of them, at a time when Calamity had abated the Heat of the Schiſm? Did the Jews, when they were carry'd away to Babylon, forget too to take the Books of their Law with them? If it was ſo, how cou'd Cyrus read his Name in the Oracles of Iſaiah? How cou'd Daniel know, that the LXX Years of the Captivity were accompliſh'd? Since he ſaw it in the Writings of the Prophets, the Law of Moſes muſt not only have been preſerv'd, but alſo the Works of the ſucceeding Prophets. How can it be conceiv'd, that ſo numerous a Nation, compos'd of different parts, tranſported at ſeveral times, have agreed in this one Thing, (viz.) To ſuffer the Law which God gave them as the Rule of their Worſhip and Morality, to be loſt? I know that this Argument which I draw from the Behaviour of Nations, will not convince the Criticks, and at moſt appear but probable. But I confeſs, that I cannot aſcribe to the People of God a Behaviour different from that of Men, who have a Written Religion, and until I am convinc'd of the contrary by ſolid Reaſons, I cannot deprive them of all manner of regard for Devotion and the Law. Laſtly, if this be but a Conjecture, it is more probable and better grounded, than all the reſt.

6. The People was enjoin'd to write the Law, and the King himſelf, notwithſtanding the hurry of Buſineſs, was likewiſe bound to do it. I grant, that the Corruption ſo frequent in Courts, might often hinder the Kings from performing this part of their Duty; and tempt many Prieſt, and Lay-Men to follow their Negligence: But it was impoſſible, that all the Families, that read the Law, and were oblig'd to have a Book of it, ſhou'd be guilty of the ſame Fault. The Example taken from the Hiſtory of Joſiah, who never heard any thing of the Curſes of the Law, proves that the Corruption was very great in the Reign of Manaſſeh; and that the Church was reform'd by degrees. In the Main, there was as yet a College of Prophets at Jeruſalem; and Hulda, who was conſulted, was of that College. The Children of the Prophets went to School but to learn the Law: It was an Univerſity where they ſtudy'd Divine Service. It was impoſſible, that there ſhou'd be no Book of the Law in that College to ſtudy it; ſince God did as yet keep there ſome Women, who being inſpir'd by him, foretold what was to come. So that there muſt have been in that Place ſome knowledge of Piety, and a Worſhip agreeable to his Law. The Book, that was found in the Temple was the Original of Moſes, which ſhou'd have been put near the Ark, and was neglected in Manaſſeh's Reign. Altho' the Original was thus neglected, that did not hinder but ſome Copies might be found in the College of the Prophets, and elſewhere. Notwithſtanding, Jezebel's general Perſecution, there were Seven Thouſand whoſe Knees had not bow'd unto Baal. Did not theſe Zealous Perſons live according to the Law? Had not ſome of them kept their Books of it, eſpecially ſince Jezebel did not order them to be burnt? One wou'd think that theſe Books had been found in the Houſes of the Faithful, if they had not taken them away when they fled.

7. Add, that the Jewiſh Religion, which differ'd from all others, had a Character, which made the Book of the Law abſolutely neceſſary to thoſe Lay-Men, who intended to ſerve God. In vain ſome pretend, that it was only in the Hands of the Prieſts: For beſides, that they only ſay this to leſſen the Number of the Copies of it, and ſo to make it the more eaſily loſt, Lay-Men wanted it at every turn. They were bound to obſerve the Sabbaths, and New Moons. But it may be reply'd, that the Prieſts inſtructed them in theſe Things; ſince it was their Buſineſs to mark out the Feſtivals of every Year. But a great many Ceremonies were beſides to be obſerv'd by the Lay-Men themſelves. They were nicely to examine the Names of all Animals, that they might lawfully eat, or not eat. They were bound to know how to cut their Throats, that they might not eat the Blood, nor Milk in ſome caſes; and to ſtudy how to ſow, and the nature of Stuffs, that they were to wear. All this cou'd not be learn'd but by the Law; and Lay-Men were to learn it from thence. So that they muſt have had always the Book to conſult it. How then cou'd the Jews and Samaritans agree to let a Book be loſt, which was always neceſſary to Lay-Men themſelves? If this Book was always preſerv'd, there is no neceſſity to, to make Ezra new-model it, or Manaſſeh to carry it to Samaria.

It hath been a Thouſand times obſerv'd, that Ezra wou'd be an Impoſtor, had he publiſh'd under the Name of Moſes, and of ſo many Prophets, what he compos'd himſelf. Such a Cheat cou'd not be forgiven; and I queſtion whether he was ſo much reſpected at Jeruſalem, as to oblige the Clergy, and all the People ple to own an Impoſture, that was ſo notorious at that time. But beſides, why had Ezra given himſelf the trouble to reſtore the Writings of the Schiſmatick Prophets? The Heat between the Samaritans and Jews was then at its height. By bringing again upon the Stage thoſe Prophets, who preach'd to the Ten Tribes, he had ſupply'd the Firſt with Weapons which they had loſt. To what purpoſe had Ezra done this? Since it had been a ſhame to the Jews, that the Schiſmaticks had had ſome Prophets, and that theſe Prophets had upbraided Jeruſalem with its Idolatry. This appears to me a new, but cogent Objection.

8. The Prieſt, that Eſar-haddon ſent to the Cuthæans, was oblig'd to bring them the Book of the Law. For the Religion, which he was to teach them, was clog'd with ſo many Ceremonies, and Rites, that they cou'd not be learn'd, or exactly retain'd, unleſs the Book of the Law was always at hand. Beſides, altho the Cuthæans did not then underſtand Hebrew; yet the Prieſt did deſign to make them learn it, ſince they really learn'd and ſpoke it; and therefore he wanted a Written Book for that purpoſe. He wanted the Book of the Law for Three ſorts of Perſons. 1. For himſelf; becauſe I cannot ſee any thing ſo prepoſterouſly contriv'd, as to ſend a Prieſt to teach a Nation a Religion full of Ceremonies, and at the ſame time to allow him no Rituals, or Rules to walk by. Wou'd they ſend a Miſſionary to the Tartars without Breviary or Maſs-Book, if there was occaſion to convert them? The Jewiſh Prieſt had ſo much the more Reaſon to be afraid, and cautious; becauſe he was inform'd, that ſome Lions devour'd the Cuthæans, who did not worſhip God, as he had directed; and that God had inflicted ſome exemplary Puniſhments on thoſe that did not exactly obſerve the Law. 2. He had need of this Book for the Samaritans, that remain'd in the Country, and were not carry'd away with the reſt. For theſe, who were deſcended from the Old Jews, wanted that the Law of Moſes, which they took for the Rule of their Worſhip, ſhou'd be produc'd to them. Laſtly, it was neceſſary to the Cuthæans themſelves; ſince this Prieſt deſign'd to convert them, to make them ſpeak the Holy Language, and to teach them the Religion which was inſtituted by Moſes. But how can any one think, that this Schiſmatick Prieſt new-modell'd the Law, and that this Man, who hath no marks of Divine Authority, is the true Author of the Holy Scripture?

9. Inſtead of looking out for Syſtems, that are intangl'd, we muſt judge of the Hebrew-Samaritan-Copy by what appears to our Eyes. This is the Maxim, which * Father Simon lays down. The Jewiſh Copy is writ in Chaldee Characters, and that of the Samaritan in Hebrew Letters: And if we judge by what appears, we muſt ſay, that the Samaritan Pentateuch was compos'd before the Captivity. This Argument concludes more ſtrongly, than one wou'd think. For the Samaritans came originally from Chaldea. So that they wou'd have preferr'd theirs to the Hebrew Characters; and when they receiv'd from the Jews the Book of the Law, they wou'd have more eaſily admitted of Letters, that were better known to them, and came from their Nation. So that they rejected theſe Characters; becauſe they were already us'd to the others, and conſequently they had receiv'd the Book of Moſes a long time before.

Farther, we find in the Samaritan Pentateuch the ſame Additions, as in the Jewiſh. Whence doth this Conformity proceed? The Jews did not receive their Copy from the Samaritans, whom they look'd upon as their bittereſt Enemies, and charg'd with having deprav'd Deuteronomy. The Hatred of the laſt was never more inveterate, than when Ezra, and Nehemiah re-built the Temple. They kept before ſome ſort of Correſpondence, as we ſhall ſee in the Reign of Joſiah. But then their Jealouſy inducing them to oppoſe the Reſtoration of the Temple, the Breach cou'd never be heal'd, and was as wide as ever in the time of Chriſt. Every body knows, what the hatred of Parties is. They rather take a Delight to exaſperate, than to be reconcil'd with one another. So that it can hardly be imagin'd, that the Samaritans receiv'd the Law from either Ezra, or Manaſſeh, after it was new-modell'd.

10. A long time before Manaſſeh left Jeruſalem, the Samaritans obſerv'd the Law of God. Even before the People was led Captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, Joſiah celebrated a ſolemn Paſſover, and invited all Iſrael to appear in the Temple, with the Men of Judah, and Benjamin. So that he made a tranſient Union of theſe Two parts of the Nation, who together celebrated the Feaſt of the Paſſover. This Iſrael, mention'd in Holy Writ, was compos'd either of the Cuthæans already converted by the Prieſt, that was ſent them; or of the Ancient Schiſmaticks. So that take it which way you will, you muſt acknowledge, that Iſrael obſerv'd the Rites of the Law; ſince they were invited, and admitted to celebrate the Feaſt of the Paſſover, at a time when the Church was to be reform'd, and all Idolatrous Worſhip aboliſh'd. God, and the Rites of the Law were known at Samaria in the Reign of Joſiah: And whence came this Knowledge which was without any mixture of Idolatry? For Joſiah wou'd not have tolerated it? So that, either the Old Samaritans had preſerv'd their Books of the Law; or the Prieſt brought them a New One, which was multiply'd afterwards; or rather theſe Two Things happen'd. This alſo might be ſaid, that Joſiah gave out Copies of the Law, conformable to the Book, which he found in the Temple. But then this ruins all that is alledg'd concerning Ezra's new-modelling the Law, and the Preſent of the Law, which Manaſſeh made to the Samaritans who did not know it before. And indeed, ſuppoſing that all the Copies of the Books of the Law were loſt till then, wou'd it not be a great Obſtinacy to maintain ſtill, that Ezra ſupply'd the Samaritans with the Pentateuch (or the Law) rather than King Joſiah, ſince it cannot be deny'd but that this Prince had the Original of Moſes, and that the Samaritans had a Communion with him at Jeruſalem at the Feaſt of the Paſſover; whereas they always had an inveterate hatred for Ezra, and Nehemiah.

11. When the Jews return'd from Captivity, theſe Samaritans offer'd their Service to Nehemiah to rebuild the Temple, and boaſted every where, that they worſhipp'd the ſame God. Nehemiah doth not diſpute this; but diſcovering, as a good Politician, that they had a Deſign to ruin him, and hinder the Re-building of the Temple, he refus'd their Offers. Religion was then the ſame at Samaria and Jeruſalem: However, as Ezra had not as yet ſet about to new-model the Books of Moſes; and it muſt neceſſarily be confeſs'd, that the Samaritans learn'd this Religion from the Prieſt, and theſe Books. They took the Cuſtom of celebrating the Jubilees out of the ſame Books, which begun the next Year after the Prieſt's coming to Samaria. They alſo took from thence their Sabbatical Years, during which they deſir'd Alexander the Great to exempt them from Taxes, before Sanballat follow'd him into Egypt, and Manaſſeh cou'd bring the Law to them, as ſome pretend. In a Word, the Moſaical Law being receiv'd at Samaria before Manaſſeh, Ezra, and the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, it muſt be concluded, that this Religion was preſerv'd by the Old Samaritans, that remain'd in Judæa, (whilſt the Others were tranſported into Media) and had

* Simon Critique du V. T.

pre-

preſerv'd their Books of the Law, or collected thoſe, which the Levites and Faithful left behind them. The Prieſt return'd with a Copy of the Law, and inſtructed them; reform'd the Worſhip of the Cuthæans, and oblig'd them to obſerve the Law of Moſes.

12. It is carrying Things too far, to pretend, that the Samaritans that were tranſported, had no Copies of the Pentateuch *; and that they perhaps never had any, becauſe the Levites, who were intruſted with them, left the Kingdom of Jeroboam, to retire into the Boſom of the Church at Jeruſalem. I acknowlege, that the Levites went away, but can it be maintain'd that not one of them remain'd, and ſuppoſing never a one had ſtay'd, can it be ſaid that there were no Copies of the Book of the Law in a Kingdom where God kept ſo many Prophets, who had there ſome Colleges? Hoſea Preach'd and Propheſy'd not long before the Deſtruction of Samaria. What, ſhall we think, that theſe Holy-Men, who kept up the Piety of the People, and Elijah who demoliſh'd the Altars of Baal, and reſtor'd the Worſhip of God, had no Books of the Law; and that the Prophets, Kings, Prieſts, and People liv'd without Knowledge?

13. It is true, that the Prieſt that was ſent to teach the Cuthæans, taught them the Fear of the Lord; but this Term ſignifies in the Scripture all the Service of God. It is alſo certain, that this People fell often into Idolatry. It is from thence concluded, that as the Jews at their return from Captivity abhorr'd Idolatry, becauſe the Law was read to them every Saturday; the Samaritans who were often Idolaters, muſt not have had the Law, ſince they became guilty of Idolatry. But without obſerving, that it is impoſſible in ſo great a medley of Nations, that there ſhou'd not be a medley of Worſhip; ſhall People ſay, that God did not appear upon Mount Sinai in a terrible Manner, becauſe immediately after, People oblig'd Aaron to caſt them a Golden Calf? Let Mr. Van Dale caſt his Eyes upon that vaſt number of Chriſtians, who have the Law and Goſpel in their Hands, and yet worſhip Images; and he will be convinc'd that People, who have the Will of God revealed to them, nevertheleſs worſhip Creatures. The Abhorrence of the Jews for Images, is one of thoſe extraordinary Things obſerv'd in that Nation, which can't be accounted for, ſince notwithſtanding the prodigious Things, which God did for them, and at the time that his Law cou'd not be unknown; yet they wou'd formerly run after Idols.

14. After we have prov'd the Antiquity of the Samaritan Pentateuch, we might ſhew its Excellency, and Uſe; but we will only obſerve, that Criticks contend about Trifles. Hottinger muſt be excus'd for being ſo incens'd againſt Father Morin, who defends this Pentateuch; becauſe he was then Young. He was unwilling to loſe the Pains he had been at in reading this Pentateuch, when he firſt learn'd the Oriental Languages; and perhaps he had a mind to try his Parts with a Man who was in ſo great Repute. But in the Main, what he and others have taken up, often concerns ſome faults of Copyiſts. The Names of obſcure Towns have been confounded, and a Letter put for another in the Name of Joſeph. Doth this deſerve ſo much noiſe? Can theſe Two Copies be compar'd together without deſpiſing One, and preferring at any rate the Other? An excellent uſe ſhou'd rather be drawn from hence. For it appears from the Conformity of the Copies of theſe Two bitter Enemies, that neither attempted to falſify the Text, or to corrupt the Scripture. This is a great Advantage, which the Chriſtians reap independently of the various Opinions of Criticks.

15. The Samaritans have been a long time accus'd of cutting off Three Letters from their Alphabet. But their Innocence hath appear'd, and they are now only charg'd with concealing a great Myſtery, that was found in Ezekiel. God enjoin'd the Man, cloath'd in Linen, to go through the midſt of the City, and ſet a Mark upon the Foreheads of the Saints with the Letter Thau. The Fathers ſince Origin found in it the Figure of the Croſs, whereby Men are ſav'd. But it is ſuſpected, that there was a Cheat in this; becauſe it is certain that the T of the Samaritans hath not now the Figure of a Croſs, as that of the Greeks and Latins. St. Jerome, † who had ſeen the Old Books of the Samaritan Pentateuch, and quotes them ſometimes, maintains, that in his time, the T had the Figure of the Croſs, and draws from thence three Myſteries. He finds there the Sign of the Croſs, which the Chriſtians made upon their Foreheads. He alſo believes, that this repreſents the Saints, who ought to know their whole Alphabet of Sanctification, and carry it to the laſt Letter. In a Word, God wou'd declare, that there is a Remainder of Saints among Sinners. Theſe are the important Leſſons which the Samaritans deprive us of. Tho' they alter the Letter, we do not loſe all. For let the Samaritans write as they will, we have ſtill Two Myſteries. We only loſe the Sign of the Croſs upon the Forehead. Beſides, a great many Things are ſuppos'd to diſcover this Myſtery. For God muſt have order'd a long while before, that the T of the Samaritans ſhou'd have the Figure of the Croſs, to draw from thence ſome Advantages, when he ſaw it convenient. He muſt too have commanded that ſome People, who knew nothing of the Death of Chriſt, and that did not dream of it, ſhou'd be mark'd upon the Forehead with the Sign of the Croſs. Is the Sign of the Croſs upon the Forehead of Chriſtians ſo uſeful and neceſſary, that God was oblig'd to prepare it ſo many Ages beforehand, and give the Holy-Men under the Old Teſtament a Type, which they cou'd not underſtand? The Wiſe ſay, that it is an indifferent Rite; if the Superſtitious go farther, and aſcribe to this Sign the Power of driving away Devils, and to preſerve from the malignant Influences of the Air, they are in an Errour. Had God on the one Hand made ſo many Preparations for an uſeleſs Thing; and on the other, wou'd the Samaritans have had ſo great an Intereſt to deprive the Chriſtians of that Advantage, as to preſume to falſify their Sacred Writings? On the contrary, the Samaritans, who laugh at the Superſtition of ſome Chriſtians, wou'd leave them the quiet Poſſeſſion of it, and continue to ſcoff at a Rite, which ſhou'd only be grounded upon the Figure of one of the Letters of the Alphabet. It will doubtleſs be ſaid, that it is not the Sign of the Croſs, but the Croſs it ſelf, which the Samaritans endeavour'd to take away from the Chriſtians; who brag'd that they found that Type among them. Thus the Learn'd Huet Biſhop of Auranches argues. But the only Thing in queſtion, in Ezekiel, is only the Sign of the Croſs mark'd upon the Forehead of Saints. Beſides, it is pretended, that the Samaritans alter'd this Letter, ſince the eſtabliſhment of Chriſtianity; which is a Thing impoſſible. Can't it be thought, that the Chriſtians had been depriv'd of this Advantage, and not complain'd of the Injury, eſpecially if it be true, that they ſtill enjoy'd it in St. Jerome's time? Tho the Samaritans cou'd alter their Bibles, they cou'd not at leaſt change their Sicles; and theſe ancient Coins, which Vaſerus, and Villalpand have publiſh'd with Samaritan Characters, wou'd be a palpable Argument againſt them. Nevertheleſs the Thau ingraven on the Samaritan Sicles doth no more repreſent a Croſs, than in the Old Manuſcripts, that are kept in the Vatican. So thatthey muſt not be charg'd with Perfidiouſneſs

* Van Dale Ep. ad Mor. † Hieron. Quæſt. in Geneſ. c. 4. Id. Comm. in Ezek. c. 9. p. 724.

and

and Impoſture; ſince there is no likelyhood, that they are guilty of theſe Crimes.

16. God's true Intention by inſtituting this Sign, was to teach us, that as Kings ſeal with their Coat of Arms, what belongs to them, and they deſign to keep for their own Uſe; ſo the Saints were precious in his Sight, and therefore he Marks them. St. Paul makes alluſion to this Cuſtom, when he ſays, that we are ſeal'd by the Holy Spirit unto the Day of Redemption. God preferr'd the Letter Thau to all Others; becauſe the Word Law begins by it. He diſtinguiſh'd by this Character * thoſe that had obſerv'd his Law, from prophane Wretches that had tranſgreſs'd it, and ought to be puniſh'd. St. Jerome obſerves, that the Jews in his time gave this Interpretation to theſe Words of Ezekiel; and it is ſo natural, that there is no need to ſtrain for any other. Thoſe Interpreters, who to remove the Difficulty, make God ſay, Mark them with a Mark, becauſe the Thau ſignifies alſo a Mark, makes him repeat the ſame Thing twice to no purpoſe, and deſtroy the Character whereby God deſign'd to diſtinguiſh thoſe that had continu'd Faithful to him, by the Obſervation of the Law.

17. The Samaritans had various ways of writing their Thau, as that is uſual to ſeveral Nations. We may to this Day obſerve Three of theſe ſame Letters, that differ; One in Scaliger; One † in Cellarius's Grammar; and the Third in a Letter of Alexander to Father Morin, which is confirm'd by ſome Old Sicles. No doubt but the way of Writing mention'd by St Jerome, is the Oldeſt of the Three; and then this Letter had the Figure of a Greek X. The ancient Jews borrow'd from thence the way, whereby the High-Prieſt was anointed. For as they had forgot, during the Captivity, the Form of this Anointing, which was expreſs'd in few Words in Leviticus, they believ'd, that they cou'd not do better than to ſet the ſame Mark to this High-Prieſt's Forehead, that God had ſet to thoſe of the Saints. They had as yet the Books, that Ezekiel writ in Chaldea; and were brought into Judæa. The Letter Thau was writ in them in Old Hebrew Characters, and repreſented an X. They the more readily follow'd this Method of the Prophet; becauſe they had not forgot the Hebrew Tongue ſo much, but they remembred, that this Letter had denoted the Law, whereof the High-Prieſt was to be an exact Obſerver.

But which way ſoever the Samaritans writ, St. Jerom's Arguments are too much ſtrain'd; ſince St. Andrew's Croſs, repreſented by the Thau, is very different from that of Jeſus Chriſt, and is not that Croſs, which the Chriſtians always ſign'd their Foreheads with. So that this is taking occaſion from a general and indefinite Term, to impoſe upon the Simplicity of the Vulgar. Other Fathers, who never ſaw the Samaritan Characters, and argu'd upon the Greek Letters, were plainly miſtaken; but the Crime is greater, when the Samaritans are accus'd of having alter'd their Letters, out of hatred to the Chriſtians and the Croſs; ſince this Imputation is groundleſs.

CHAP. IV.

A Continuation of the Religion of the Samaritans. Of the Divinity of the Holy-Ghoſt. Of the Worſhip they paid to God, and of their Creed.

I. Whether they believ'd in a Corporeal God. Chriſt's Rebuke to them. II. Whether they rejected the Holy-Ghoſt. Baronius's Animadverſion againſt St. Epiphanius. III. Several of St. Epiphanius's Miſtakes concerning the Samaritans. IV. Whether they deny'd the Reſurrection of the Body. V. Several Fathers affirm it. VI. Abravanel refuted about the God Azimah. VII. The Goddeſs Succoth-benoth. Abravanel's Remarks are falſe. VIII. Grotius's Conjectures concerning the Gods of the Cuthæans. IX. The Reformation of their Worſhip by the Prieſt that was ſent to them. X. The Cunning us'd to elude Alexander the Great's Order concerning Images. XI. Some Idols hid under Mount Gerizim. Theſe Idols diſcover'd by Iſhmael. XII. This Story is refuted. XIII. St. Epiphanius, who adopted this Tale, confuted. XIV. Whether the Image of a Dove was worſhip'd in Samaria. XV. Chriſt cenſures their Worſhip XVI. St. Epiphanius's Miſtake concerning the touching of a Dead Corps. Jeremiah Explain'd. XVII. Whether Chriſt excluded the Samaritans from Salvation. Explanation of the Words, Salvation is of the Jews. XVIII. Their Worſhip alter'd ſince Herod. Their Inclination to the Romans. XIX. The Martyrdom of the Samaritan Woman, and her Name. XX. The Samaritans revolted from Jeſus Chriſt to follow Simon Magus. XXI. This Thing explain'd. XXII. Lightfoot contradicts himſelf concerning the Samaritans. XXIII. The Samaritan Creed. XXIV. Their High-Prieſts. XXV. Their Converſion ſeveral times attempted in vain.

I. THE Samaritans are accus'd of having taught, that God was Corporeal. It is a common Thing to ſee ſome People, who becauſe they have not a clear Notion of a Spiritual Subſtance, aſcribe to the Soul, to Angels, and to God, a kind of a Body, which they ſay is much more ſubtile and fine than ours. But the Samaritans were not guilty of this Criminal Errour; and the Two Arguments, that are alledg'd againſt them, are very weak. Maimonides obſerves, that many Jewiſh Doctors were of that Opinion. He might have proceeded as far as Samaria; but without inquiring into the time, that theſe Doctors liv'd in, it is certain that they liv'd after Chriſt; and that the Samaritans who liv'd in the time of the Meſſiah, cou'd not have borrow'd this Opinion from them. Add, that the Thalmudiſts, who attribute a Body to God, ſpeak often as the Scripture, and that their Expreſſions ought to be taken in a figurative Senſe. In a Word, theſe Two parts of the Jewiſh Nation hated one another too much, to make us believe, that One borrow'd this Errour from the Other, ſuppoſing that it is true that the Jews taught it.

This Accuſation is grounded upon theſe Words of our Lord; || Ye worſhip ye know not what. But the Samaritans might be infected with ſome other Errors concerning the Deity; and yet not think God Material. What Chriſt ſays, doth not inſinuate that they had that Opinion. Neither can I tell, why it is ſaid, that when they came from Aſſyria, they believ'd, that God's Power was only extended to a certain Place; but that they lay'd down this Opinion ſince the Law was introduc'd among them. For I am perſwaded, on the contrary, that altho they believ'd that the Deity was preſent every where, yet they thought, that it only accepted the Adorations, and Sacrifices of Men, on Mount Gerizim. They did what People wedded to their own Opinion do. After their return to Sichem, they confin'd the Preſence and Almighty

* Torah † The Thau of the Vatican Manuſcript, or of R. Azaria, hath theſe different Figures, S. X. Z. There is another Samaritan Thau N. in computo Samaritarum apud Scalig. de Emend. Temp. l. 7. p. 657. Id. N in Cellarii Grammat. Samarit. p. 60. Id. X. apud Alexandrum, &c. || Apud Wolzog. Bibl. Frat. Pol. t. 6. p. 766.

Power

Power of God to a certain Place, and imagin'd that whilſt God did forſake Jeruſalem and its Inhabitants, he had only Mount Gerizim, and the City of Samaria in view. But this Errour was common to the Jews, who ſaid the ſame Thing of their Temple.

2. We ought to clear the Samaritans of another Accuſation, which the Ancients lay'd to their Charge. St. Epiphanius ſaid *, that they did not receive the Holy Ghoſt, whom they did not know. This ſaying hath alarm'd Baronius †, who pretended that it was falſe; becauſe we read in the Acts of the Apoſtles, that the Samaritans receiv'd the Holy Ghoſt; and that it is not likely, that God wou'd grant his Holy Spirit to Hereticks, who deny'd his Divinity, whilſt he refus'd him to the Gentiles, who only ſinn'd through Ignorance. But ſome afterwards have ſided with St Epiphanius; and others with Baronius. For ſome believ'd that this Cardinal was in the wrong; becauſe he did not underſtand this Father, who only accuſes the Samaritans of not knowing the Holy Ghoſt. Others maintain'd that St. Epiphanius was miſtaken; but theſe great Men ought to be condemn'd.

Firſt, Baronius ſhou'd not have ſet any bounds to God's Mercy, or preſcrib'd him Rules about the Diſtribution of the Holy Ghoſt. Let St. Epiphanius be in the Right, or in the Wrong, it is certain that the Samaritans were more guilty than the Heathens; becauſe they had better Opportunities to inform themſelves. Notwithſtanding this, they foſter'd ſome groſs Errours, and yet receiv'd the Holy Ghoſt. But God hath ſome ſecret Aims, and thoſe who judge of the Election of Men, and the diſtribution of Gifts upon external Appearances, are guilty of Raſhneſs.

3. St. Epiphanius, who was often miſtaken with reference to the Samaritans, cannot be vindicated. As for inſtance, he affirms that the Eſſenes, ſo well known among the Jews, were a Sect at Samaria. He pretends that they celebrated the Feaſts of the Paſſover, and Pentecoſt in Autumn, which their Calendar ſhews plainly to be falſe. He ventur'd to call by the Name of Ezra, the Prieſt, whom Shalmanezer ſent to Samaria, which is no more to be depended upon, than what ſome Jews ſay, that Two Prieſts were ſent, One call'd Eliezer, and the Other Doſitheus. But he is chiefly miſtaken, when he charges theſe Schiſmaticks with rejecting the Holy Ghoſt. For how cou'd they oppoſe his Deity, if they did not know him? And why is this particular Errour laid more to their Charge, than their not admitting all the Tenets of Chriſtianity? Here wou'd be ſuch a defect of Judgment, that it cou'd hardly be conceiv'd. St. Epiphanius was not guilty of it. For this Father confounding the Samaritans with the Saducees, who deny'd the Exiſtence of all Spirits, he inferr'd, that they deny'd the Holy-Ghoſt. However, he ſhou'd not have made this a peculiar Tenet of the Samaritans. But this is not ſo great a Miſtake as that of Philaſtrius, who accuſes them of having deny'd the Divinity of Jeſus Chriſt, or that of Leo Bizantinus, who doth not only ſay, that they rejected the Holy Ghoſt, whom they did not know, and expected a Meſſiah, who was not a God, but makes them to ſpeak in the Stile of his Time, when he affirms that they acknowledg'd but One Nature, and Hypoſtaſis, as if the Samaritans knew this Term which the Greeks made uſe of ſince the fourth Century.

It is true, that theſe Schiſmaticks complain'd that the Holy Ghoſt was taken from them ſince the Captivity. But they did not thereby underſtand One of the Three Hypoſtaſes or Perſons of the Trinity; but the Spirit of Prophecy, that ceas'd among them, ſince they were tranſported into the Plains of Aſſyria.

4. St. Epiphanius ſtill confounding the Samaritans with the Saducees, accuſes them of denying the Reſurrection of the Body, as well as the Exiſtence of Spirits: And it is to prove to them this important Truth, that he alledges the Example of Sarah, who conceiv'd in her old Age; and that of Aaron's Rod, which budded. But there is ſo vaſt a Difference between a Rod that buds, and an old Woman that brings forth Children, and the Re-union of our ſcatter'd Aſhes, and the Reſtoration of Humane Bodies putrefy'd for many Ages, that I cannot conceive how he cou'd make theſe Notions hang together, and draw thence a Concluſion. He alledg'd beſides, that the Blood of Abel cry'd after his Death: Nevertheleſs, the Blood is not a Soul; and therefore the Body ought to be rais'd again. As if this was not a metaphorical Expreſſion, whence no Concluſion can be inferred for the Reſurrection of the Body. But be it what it will, the Imputation is falſe. For the Samaritans believ'd the Reſurrection.

5. I can't tell whether it was upon the Authority of St. Epiphanius, or of Origen, who had already confounded the Samaritans with the Saducees, that Gregory the Great || and John of Damaſcus accuſe them too of denying this Truth. But it is certain that they have done it ſeveral times. Philaſtrius ||||, who derives them from a fabulous King call'd Samar, charges them at the ſame time with ſaying, That the Reſurrection of the Body is perform'd every Day by the Generation of Children. This Explanation of that Myſtery, deſtroys it. Laſtly, Leontius Byzantinus * upbraids them with denying the Reſurrection of the Body, the Exiſtence of Angels, the Immortality of the Soul; and that Chriſt is to judge the World. Thus this Author makes them downright Saducees.

It is a ſtrange Thing, that ſo many Fathers have drawn one another into this Miſtake; and that far from correcting it, they rather added ſome new one of their own when ever they ſwerv'd from one another's Opinion. For it is an eaſy matter to vindicate the Samaritans from theſe Aſperſions. And indeed, Scaliger † hath prov'd from their own Writings, that they held the Reſurrection as a fundamental Tenet. They were confounded with the Saducees, meerly becauſe they did not admit of Traditions, and the Books of the Prophets, but only receiv'd the Law of Moſes.

6. It is a more difficult Task to give a clear Notion of their Worſhip. The Scripture ſays, that thoſe various Nations, which Shalmaneſer ſent, made Gods of their own, and had their peculiar Worſhip. It ſpecifies theſe Gods, whoſe Names are ſo barbarous, that no body can gueſs the Meaning of them. The Rabbins have taken hold of this to make their Comments upon theſe hard Names, in order to expoſe their Adverſaries. Abravanel relates, that they preſum'd to foiſt their Idols even in Holy Writ. He fanſy'd * that Mordecai was Author of the Samaritan Pentateuch, already mention'd; and he grounds his Opinion upon this Deliverer's ſending ſome circular Letters to all the Jews, that were ſpread in King Ahaſuerus's Dominions; and finding ſome relation between the Words, Letters, and Copies; he concludes, that Mordecai, Author of the Letters, is alſo the Author of the Samaritan Pentateuch. He adds another Whim to this, (viz) that the Perſians having inſerted this Book amongſt their Records, ſtruck out the Name of God Elohim, that was at the beginning of Geneſis, and ſubſtituted that of Aſhima, an Idol which they ador'd, and was alſo worſhip'd at Samaria. But this is a palpable Falſhood: For the Samaritan and Jewiſh Copies exactly agree in this as well as in abundance of other Places. The only

* Epiph. Hæreſ. 9. p. 24. † Baron. An. 35. n. 9. p. 251. || Greg. 1. Mor. in Job. l. 1. c. 6. p. 22. & l. 2. c. 19. p. 48. |||| Philaſt. de Hær. p. 4. * Leont. Byzant. de Sectis Act. 11. p. 502. † V. Scalig. de Emend. Temp. l. 7. p. 663.

Thing

Thing that is true, is that the Inhabitants of Hamath, who were tranſported into Samaria, ador'd Aſhima, that was their God.

7. The ſame Abravanel * imputes to the Babylonians, who went to inhabit the Land of Iſrael, that they carry'd thither their Goddeſs Succoth-benoth, which ſignifies, ſays he, Hens with their Chickens; and proves thereby that they were guilty of the groſs Idolatry of thoſe who worſhipp'd Animals, becauſe they fanſy'd, that the Deity had endow'd them with ſome peculiar Virtue. It is upon this Ground, or rather upon I know not what relations of Terms, that it is ſaid, that the Cuthæans worſhip'd a Cock; thoſe of Hamath, a wild Goat; thoſe of Ava, a Dog, and an Aſs; and thoſe of Sepharvaim, a Mule, and a Horſe. It wou'd be no wonder, that the Colony ſent into Samaria had worſhip'd their Gods under the Figure of Animals, becauſe it was commonly practis'd by the Heathens.

Notwithſtanding, that the Egyptians were ſo great Maſters of all Arts, and had ſo induſtriouſly improv'd Learning, yet they worſhip'd Dogs and Cats.

Illic æluros, hic piſcem fluminis, illic
Oppida tota canem venerantur: Nulla Dianam.

There is no difficulty about the Dogs, but Interpreters inſtead of joyning Cats to them, have corrected Juvenal, and read Cæruleos for Æluros, which among the Greeks ſignifies a Cat, and was one of the Egyptian Deities. If the Heathens did not down-right worſhip Goats, yet they aſcrib'd a He-Goat's Legs to their God Pan, and a She-Goats Face: And how were Satyrs painted?

† Bacchum in remotis carmina rupibus
Vidi docentem, credite poſteri,
Nymphaſque diſcentes, & aures
Capri pedum Satyrorum acutas.

But after we have diſcover'd all this among the Heathens, that doth not ſhew, who the Gods of the Cuthæans were. For every Countrey had its own Gods, and peculiar Symbols of the Deity. A Dog was worſhip'd in Egypt, only becauſe Anubis, one of Oſiris his Generals, put on a Dog's Skin; and this did not concern the Cuthæans. Nay, the Inhabitants of one Province, often laugh'd at the Gods of another. The Aſſyrians were more guilty of this than others; and Sennacherib ſhew'd publickly his Contempt for the Egyptian Gods. So that we muſt not conclude, that becauſe a Dog was worſhip'd in one Countrey, that it was ſo too in another. People ſhou'd at leaſt produce a better Authority for it than that of the Rabbins, the inveterate Enemies of the Cuthæans, and Samaritans. Farther, Abravanel reports, that one of them being in Africa, learn'd that Succi || ſignify'd a Cock, whence he concludes that the ſame Word in the plural Number ſignifies a Hen, and joyning the Word Daughters to the Firſt, he found the Hen with her Chickens, and the Succoth-benoth, Goddeſs of the Babylonians.

8. The Learned Grotius found in that place Three kind of Deities. Firſt, Venus, ſo famous among the Chaldeans for the filthy Actions, that were perpetrated in her Temples, wherein Women were oblig'd to proſtitute themſelves to pay their Court to that Goddeſs. Succoth-benoth ſignifies the Tents of the Young Women who were brought up for that purpoſe. Single and Marry'd Women had Tents about theſe Temples, and there expected to be ask'd to ſacrifice their Honour. Thoſe, that had no Tents, were ſeperated only with Ropes; and to this Jeremiah alludes, when he repreſents the Jollity of Idolatrous Women; when their Cords were broken ||||, becauſe they were glad to find a Man, that made them go out of their Pen, that they might proſtitue themſelves in honour to the Goddeſs. This is the true Senſe of that paſſage, which ſeem'd ſo hard to be underſtood. Secondly, Grotius finds in the Aſhima, the Satyrs ſo famous among the Pagans. Laſtly, Adrammelech, was the Saturn, to whom People offer'd their Children. The Firſt, and Laſt of his Conjectures are good; but the other Deities ſeem impenetrable. We ought to be better vers'd in the Rites, not only of the Perſians, and Chaldæans, but alſo of the Nations that inhabited different Provinces, who had their peculiar Gods, beſides the Sun, which was commonly worſhip'd, to be able to explain them clearly at this Time.

9. However, this Colony did not long keep their Idolatry ſo intire, as they brought it from their Countrey. For the Jewiſh Prieſt, that came from Chaldæa, reform'd their Errors; and his Reformation being back'd by the fear of the Lions, that devour'd the Idolaters, made no doubt a conſiderable Progreſs. The Remainders of the Old Inhabitants, glad to find once more a Prieſt, their Law, and ancient Sacrifices, help'd very much to reſtore the old Worſhip. The Samaritans therefore boldly told Ezra *, We ſeek your God as you do, and we do ſacrifice unto him, ſince the Days of Eſar-haddon King of Aſſyria, which brought us up hither. They not only ador'd the God of the Jews, but ſought him as they did, and had offer'd him Sacrifices ſince the time of Eſar-haddon. Yet as the Governours of Samaria were ſent by the King of Babylon; and as Idolatry is not eaſily rooted out of Men's Minds, it is likely that ſome mixture of ſtrange Worſhip remain'd, notwithſtanding the Jewiſh Prieſt's Reformation; at leaſt this Opinion cannot be refuted, and is confirm'd by Scripture †.

10. When Manaſſeh left Jeruſalem to ſacrifice on Mount Gerizim, he put the Worſhip into a better Form, than it was before. But it is not known whether he carry'd his Reformation to the height of Piety. We ſhou'd eaſily believe it, was what is ſaid true, that Alexander the Great having order'd them to erect ſome Images and Statues, they gather'd together on Mount Gerizim, to beg of God, that a Decree ſo repugnant to his Law might be revok'd; and that they there reſolv'd to give the Name of Alexander to all their Children, and afterwards preſented them to him as ſo many living Images and Statues. But tho this Story is taken from the Samaritan Chronicle, yet it is not much to be depended upon.

11. The Jews likewiſe ſay, that the Samaritans were thought free from Idolatry, till R. Iſhmael going through Samaria, in his way to worſhip at Jeruſalem, they attempted to ſtop him, upon a pretence that the Worſhip was as pure upon Mount Gerizim, as upon the Hill of Sion. But he refus'd them, comparing them to Dogs that run after Carrion; becauſe they were ſo zealous for the Idols, which Jacob hid under that Mountain, and they themſelves ador'd. The Samaritans ſeeing that their ſecret Worſhip was diſcover'd, were afraid leaſt Iſhmael ſhou'd take away their Images from them; and to prevent it, they reſolv'd to kill him: But he fled in the Night.

12. This, as moſt of the Stories of the Jews, is invented. 1. Iſhmael the Son of Joſe, is perhaps a fictitious Man. It is true that ſome Sentences of his ||, that are admir'd, tho they are of no great weight, are quoted in the Thalmud; but it is ſaid at the ſame time, that his Privy Parts were bigger than the Body of another Man. To pretend, that this was inſerted, to draw ſome Moral Inferences from thence, or to prevent Peoples laughing at thoſe, whom Nature hath ſo amply ſupply'd, is to vindicate one Impertinence by another. 2. Beſides, this Romance is not well contriv'd. For it is not the cuſtom of Idolaters to bury their Idols. On the contrary, they have Idols only to worſhip ſome viſible Gods that go before them. 3. The Jews are better Witneſſes of the Purity of the Worſhip of the Samaritans than they imagine; ſince they acknowledge, that before Iſhmael made that Diſcovery, it was not known that they worſhip'd any falſe Deities. Idolatry, whoſe Worſhip is publick and ſenſible, cannot be long hid. Was it likely that the Jews, who were jealous of the Samaritans, and their Neighbours and Enemies, ſhou'd be ignorant of their Religion till the time of Iſhmael? This Ignorance alone is not enough to juſtify them. 4. It is true, that there is a queſtion in the Thalmud *, (viz.) Whether the Samaritans or Cuthæans ought to be rank'd among Heathens? A Moor pronounces againſt them, but another call'd Simon diſtinguiſh'd them from Idolaters; and ſuppoſing that the Samaritans had the plurality of Votes againſt them, yet the Rabbins ought not to be believ'd in their own Cauſe.

* Abravanel in 2. Reg. Rabbi Levi in 2. Reg. c. 17, 32. † Horace. || שכוי. |||| Jerem. 10. v. 20.
* Ezra 4. 2. † 2 Kings 17. 33, 34. || Hieroſol. Avodah Zarah, fol. 444. Apud Lightfoot Hor. Hebr. in Matth. p. 328. and in Joh. 991. V. B. B. Rabbin, t. 111. p. 297. Utri novem caborum æquabatur; magnitudine cabus unus continebat 24 ova.

13. It ſeems that Epiphanius read this imputation of Idolatry laid by the Thalmudiſts againſt the Samaritans. For he alſo upbraids them with adoring the Teraphims, which Rachel carry'd away from Laban, and which Jacob bury'd. He maintains too, that when they pray'd, they look'd towards Mount Gerizim, as Daniel at Babylon look'd towards the Temple of Jeruſalem. But whether St. Epiphanius borrow'd this Story from the Thalmudiſts, or hath invented it, it is ſo much the more falſe in his Book, becauſe he imagin'd that Mount Gerizim was far from Samaria, and that they were oblig'd to turn towards that Mountain, becauſe it was too far diſtant for them to go to worſhip there.

14. It is ſaid likewiſe, that the Samaritans ador'd the Image of a Pidgeon as the Symbol of the Gods; and that they had borrow'd this Worſhip of the Aſſyrians, who had a Dove in their Colours, in remembrance that Semiramis was fed by that Bird, and chang'd into a Dove, and to whom they paid a Divine Worſhip. Philo affirms, that he ſaw at Aſcalon a vaſt quantity of Pidgeons; becauſe the People there wou'd not kill them for fear of eating their Gods.

Quid referam ut volitet crebras intacta per urbes Alba Palæſtino ſancta columba Syro.

The Cuthæans, who were of that Countrey, might have retain'd the Worſhip of their Countrey, and kept the Memory of it for ſome time. For the love of ſenſible Objects in Religion is not eaſily rooted out, and the Vulgar are hardly wean'd from them.

But the Jews carry this Matter too far, as they do every thing elſe, that concerns the Samaritans. For they aſſert, that the Samaritans had erected a Statue with the Figure of a Dove, which they worſhip'd. But they only alledge their Opinion for a Proof of this: I am fully perſwaded of it, ſays a Rabbin: But is this perſwaſion enough to convince without any other reaſon? They add, that the Samaritans circumcis'd their Children in the Name of this Dove. In ſhort, Ganz † relates, that in Meir's time, who liv'd in the Reign of Adrian, the Image of a Dove was found upon Mount Gerizim, which oblig'd this Doctor to vote, that they ought to be rank'd among all Infidels. But as he ſuſpects this Story, which doth not agree with what ſome other Rabbins ſay, (viz.) That the Temple of Gerizim is a great deal older than Alexander; and that this Prince, at the ſollicitation of Simeon the Juſt, had all the Cuthæans put to death; in order to reconcile things that cannot be reconcil'd, he relies on the Authority of Doctor Jom Tof, who ſays, that the Cuthæans had adopted the Worſhip and Laws of Moſes; but that in Meir's time, that is, in the Reign of Adrian, they ſettl'd again at Sichem, and brought thither their ancient Religion, which was the Reaſon, that they were condemn'd as a prophane People. This variety of Opinions ſhews, what little certainty the Jews have about this Matter. We muſt ſwallow ſome monſters in Hiſtory and Chronology, to bring the Cuthæans back to Sichem in the Reign of Adrian. It muſt be own'd, that this Emperour ſent thither a Colony, but it was not compos'd of Cuthæans. All this turns upon a Paſſage of the Thalmud, where it is ſaid, that the Figure of a Pidgeon was found on Mount Gerizim. It was afterwards made the Object of the Adoration of the Samaritans, altho this Image might have been brought thither from Aſcalon; or ſome other Places of Syria; where we have already obſerv'd, that they worſhip'd a Pidgeon in remembrance of Semiramis, or, if you will, of Venus.

15. This is certain; The Temple of Gerizim was in the Reign of Antiochus Epiphanes conſecrated to Jupiter; and altho Perſecution was not always ſo hot, it is very likely, that they kept ſome mixture of Idolatry with the Worſhip of God; and that ſo much the more, becauſe the Kings of Syria had always a great Sway there. No doubt but Hyrcanus, who took this City, earneſtly labour'd to reform the Worſhip. He had not ſo inveterate a Hatred to theſe Schiſmaticks, that became his Subjects, as to let them be damn'd by an open and publick Idolatry. Yet there was of neceſſity ſome defect in their Adoration of the Supream God, when Chriſt came into the World; ſince he upbraided them, ſaying, Ye worſhip ye know not what: Ignorance was their great Crime, but that ignorance related to their Worſhip; and it is eaſy to apprehend, by joyning theſe Two Things together, that they were guilty of Error and Crime in their Adoration; and altho the Nature and Degree of their Fault can't be determin'd, we'll ſpeak of it hereafter.

16. The Samaritans obſerv'd the Rites and Ceremonies of the Law. For they were contain'd in the Books of Moſes, yet St. Epiphanius imputes it to them as a Crime, that they were afraid to touch a Carcaſe. As this Father cou'd not be ignorant that their Fear was grounded on the Law of Moſes, that ſays, that whoſoever toucheth a Carcaſe, ſhall be unclean until Even; he doth Three things to elude this Paſſage. 1. He maintains that there is an Article in the Original which denotes the Carcaſe, by way of excellency, and that this Carcaſe was Jeſus Chriſt, whom the Jews cou'd not crucify, without remaining unclean until Even. 2. He goes before an Objection, that might be drawn from another place of Scripture, which enjoins to ſhut the Windows when a dead Body paſſes by, becauſe it wou'd otherwiſe be defiled. He recurrs to a Figurative Senſe; and affirms that it is Sin, and the Windows, that are to be ſhut, are the Eyes, to prevent being tempted by Sin, which ſeduces, and is convey'd into the Heart through the Senſes. 3. Laſtly, He endeavours to prove his Aſſertion by the Words of Jeremiah, Death is come up into our Windows||. For if the Prophet ſpoke of Death, the inexorable Enemy to Mankind, there was no need but to keep the Windows ſhut, to hinder Death from coming in, and execute its rage. This Interpretation wou'd be ridiculous and falſe. So that we muſt again recur to the Eyes, through which Sin, whoſe Wages is Death, is convey'd into the Soul.

* V. Shcalim Hieroſol. fol. 46. 2. Lightfoot Hor. Hebr. in Evang. Matth. p. 328. † Ganz. Tſemach David, p. 106. & 61.
|| Jerem. 9. v. 21.

St.

St. Epiphanius needed only to read the Oracles of Jeremiah. For he had eaſily perceiv'd that the Prophet, ſpeaking of an examplary Puniſhment from God, repreſents to the People, that Death came in among them on every ſide. I grant, that this Expreſſion of the Prophet is figurative; but the Figure, that St. Epiphanius aſcribes is too ſtrain'd. Death doth not here ſignify Sin, and the Windows the Eyes; but the Executor of God's Orders, which flying every where, pulls a great many into the Grave; and the Prophet expreſſes its Fury by ſaying, that it came in as well at the Windows as at the Doors. Beſides, this Father needed only to conſult the Jews. They had taught him, that they all believ'd, that they were defil'd when they touch'd a Dead Body; and that their Belief was grounded on God's Injunction. And to look there for Chriſt, is to diſtort the Scripture. The Samaritans obſerv'd this Law of the Jews, and all the other Rites which Moſes left them.

17. But the main Thing, that ought to be diſcuſs'd is concerning the Salvation of the Samaritans. In vain the Woman to whom Chriſt preach'd juſtify'd her Adherence to Mount Gerizim, by Abraham's and Jacob's Example, who had worſhipp'd in this Mountain: For Chriſt ſtill maintain'd that Salvation was of the Jews. Some have inferr'd from thence, that the Son of God excluded all the Samaritans from Salvation, by reaſon that by their Schiſm they had renounc'd the Holy People, and the Sacerdotal Race. I cannot forbear making three Remarks to clear this Place of the Goſpel, which ſeems obſcure.

Firſt, you cannot exclude the Samaritans from Salvation, without running counter to Divine Revelation, and cancelling the Scripture. For moſt of the Canonical Books of the Prophets, were pen'd by Men born either at Samaria, or in the Schiſm. Hoſea was of the Tribe of Iſſachar; Joel, of that of Reuben; and Jonas of that of Zabulon; and all theſe Tribes were Schiſmaticks. Abdias was a Native of Bethacad, a Village near Samaria. Elijah, and Eliſha, who perform'd ſo many Miracles, liv'd always in the Schiſm. How can all the Samaritans be damn'd, ſince God reſerv'd at the ſame time even Seven Thouſand Perſons, whom he ſav'd? To pretend, that theſe Holy Men and Prophets long'd for a return to Jeruſalem, is to transform them into profligate Fellows, who knew the neceſſity of being united with the Sacerdotal Race, and yet did not endeavour either to be united, or to make others unite with it. For they never return'd to Jeruſalem, which was not far from Samaria, where they were perſecuted. After ſo many Ages, how can their Intention be alledg'd to excuſe them? They were ſo fond of their own Countrey, that they choſe rather to hide themſelves, and be perſecuted there, by Jezebel, than to go to Jeruſalem, that was in the Neighbourhood, and where the Temple and Prieſts were.

Secondly, when Chriſt taught the Samaritan Woman, that Salvation was of the Jews, he ſpoke of that great Salvation that begun to appear. It was the ſame, which Simeon held in his Arms in the Temple, when he ſaid, Mine Eyes have ſeen thy Salvation. It was indeed the Meſſiah that ſpoke to her, and who was born of the Tribe of Judah, and in Bethlehem.

18. Laſtly, Thoſe Inhabitants, whom Herod ſent to Samaria, caus'd ſome alteration in it. For he made a Draught of 6000 Men out of his Auxiliary Forces, and ſent them to that City. So that ſo many Idolaters might eaſily alter the Religion and Cuſtoms of the Countrey. Hence it is too, that they kept a ſtricter Correſpondence with the Romans, than with the reſt of the Jews. Joſephus reports, that Diſputes about Religion were ſo much the more frequent, becauſe moſt of the Soldiers in the Roman Pay were Natives of Cæſarea and Samaria; and that for this Reaſon they the more eaſily admitted the Worſhip, which the Emperours of that time impos'd upon them, to be paid either to themſelves, or to their Statues. Caligula order'd that his Statue ſhou'd be plac'd in their Temple, as well as in that of Jeruſalem; and we do not ſee, that they oppos'd his Decree. Nero had Claudius's Statue carry'd thither, after he had deify'd him; and we have mention'd * a Medal ſtamp'd under the ſame Prince, whereon Aſtarte the Goddeſs of Syria, is ſeen holding the Head of Oſiris in her Hand, with theſe Words; Samaria had this Medal ſtamp'd in honour of the Auguſt and Great Gods. So that the Auguſts were rank'd with the Great Gods; and they were worſhipp'd in the ſame Temple at Samaria with the True God: Which is an evident Argument of the Mixture of Religion and Worſhip, that happen'd in this City, ſince the Herods became Vaſſals to the Emperours, and the introducing of ſo many different Nations in that Place. This gave Chriſt a juſt Reaſon to cenſure them, and made him ſay, that they worſhipp'd they knew not what.

19. It is ſaid, that the Samaritan Woman, whoſe Name was Photina, was fully converted at the preaching of Chriſt, or of St. Peter; and that ſhe drew after her all her Family, compos'd of two Sons, who were call'd Joſeph and Victor; of Duke Sebaſtian, Anatolius, Photius; and of Photis, Paraſceve, and Cyriaca, who were her Siſters. All theſe Proſelytes ſuffer'd Martyrdom together the 20*th* of March. The Greeks † and Latins || who have inſerted their Names in their Martyrologies, celebrate their Feſtival on that Day. The Fathers make an oppoſition between the Inhabitants of Sichem and the Apoſtles, very honourable to the Firſt. For a Woman preach'd to them all. Mary Magdalene related our Saviour's Reſurrection to his Diſciples, who did not believe her; whereas the Samaritans, upon the Word of a looſe Woman, went out of the City to hear the Prophet of whom ſhe had ſpoken to them, and believ'd in him. This is ſo much the more wonderful; becauſe the Meſſiah was not ſo clearly foretold in the Writings of Moſes, as in thoſe of the Prophets, which the Samaritans did not admit.

The Martyrdom of Photina, and her Acts, teach us a great many Things. For |||| it was not known how Africa was converted. But we find in theſe Acts, that the Samaritan Woman went to Carthage in the Reign of Nero, and introduc'd Chriſtianity in that great City. Tertullian was in the right not to aſcribe that Honour to the Apoſtles; ſince a Woman was the Firſt Miniſter of that Church. Let the Reform'd be now laugh'd at for having had ſome Handicrafts for Preachers, ſince under St. Peter's Noſe a Woman perſwaded Carthage to embrace the Goſpel. The Samaritan Woman's Son was one of Nero's Generals. The Greeks ſay, that he commanded this Emperour's Army againſt the Avari; but the Spaniards will have it, that it was againſt the Rebels of Braga; and that he was really Governour of Italica. This City was in Andalouſia. For there is a Medal of the Emperour Adrian, on the Reverſe of which is an Altar with theſe Words.

Municip. Italicen. Bæt.

It was from thence that Cornelius the Centurion's Company, was call'd the Italian Band, as St. Luke calls it; and this Captain and his Soldiers were Spaniards. Victor, Governour of this Place, and Son to the Samaritan Woman, was order'd by Nero to put to Death all the Chriſtians, that were in his Government. The General of the Army being inform'd, that Victor and his Mother were converted by St. Peter, preſs'd him very much to renounce Chriſtianity; but Victor remain'd ſteady in the Faith. The General was ſtruck dumb, and contin'd ſo for three Days, and when he recover'd his Speech, he cry'd out; There is but One God, and it is that of the Chriſtians. He was immediately catechiz'd and baptiz'd by Victor. We learn here two Things; One, that the Samaritan Woman was not converted by Chriſt, but by St. Peter; the Other, that Generals, altho they were Lay-Men, preach'd and baptiz'd, notwithſtanding that there were ſome Prieſts in the Place. For Italica was full of Chriſtians.

* Norris Epoch. Syro-Maced. Diſſ. 5. Rom. cum not. Baron. Mart. 20. p. 117. † Menolog. Græcor. Mart. 20. apud Caniſ. Lect. Ant. t. 2. p. 743. || Martyr. |||| Acta Photin. Samar. & Soc. ex M. S. Cod. Græco Jeremiæ Conſt. Patr. apud Salaſar M. Hiſp. p. 330.

Nero being inform'd of the vaſt Progreſs of Photina's Sermons in Africa, and of her Son Victor's Steadineſs in Spain, order'd that all that Family ſhou'd be tranſported to Rome. Chriſt appear'd to them, and fortify'd them in their way thither. Photina ſhew'd her Siſters to the Emperour, whereof one was call'd Photo, and the other Photis, which ſhews that Sirlet's Calendar is vitiated. For we muſt read Photo, and not Rhotius, and transform the Man into a Maid, or Marry'd Woman, Siſter to Photina. After Nero had tormented theſe Women, he ſent the Princeſs (Anthuſa) his Daughter, gorgeouſly adorn'd with Pearls and Pretious Stones, to tempt them. Photina ſeeing her coming, cry'd to her, Thou Spouſe of the Lord, welcome. The Princeſs, who was a Virgin, anſwer'd; My Lady, my Miſtriſs, the brightneſs of Chriſt, the Lord be with you. This Princeſs and One Hundred Young Ladies, that attended her, were ſoon converted, and all baptiz'd by the Samaritan Woman. Nero rav'd at it, and reſolv'd to poiſon all theſe Holy Women. But the Magician Lampadius, who had prepar'd the Poiſon, was alſo converted, when he perceiv'd that it did not operate. They were put to all manner of Tortures; but as all that was to no purpoſe, they were flea'd alive.

It is no wonder, that we find ſo many Fables in the Chronicle of the Samaritans; ſince Chriſtians relate ſo many falſe Stories of a Woman of that Countrey, and of whom it is not even known whether ſhe ever was a Chriſtian. And yet we are gravely told, that the Truth of theſe Acts ought not to be queſtion'd. Mr. de Tillemont, who had ſome doubts about this Matter, thought to juſtify the Latins, by ſaying, that they only inſerted theſe Names in their Martyrology, without ſaying, that they ſuffer'd for Jeſus Chriſt. But this Apology is weak and falſe. For they in it call Photina the Samaritan Woman, and there is no Samaritan Woman a Martyr, but that mention'd by the Greeks. The Feſtival is obſerv'd the ſame Day; and they aſcribe to her the ſame Children and Siſters. So that ſhe muſt be the ſame Woman. This is ſo true, that it is ſaid in the Martyrologies of Spain, and of Mount Caſſin, that it is the Woman of Samaria mention'd in the Goſpel; and the Monks boaſt, that they have her Head at Rome.

20. It is ſaid, that the Samaritans did Apoſtatize; and that after they had believ'd in Chriſt when he preach'd to them, they all gave heed, from the Leaſt to the Greateſt, to Simon Magus their Countreyman, ſaying, This Man is the great Power of God *. Lightfoot, † who every where declares againſt the Samaritans, pretends, that they invented the Diſtinction of two Meſſiahs, One Son of Ephraim, that ſhall be wretched. They will not in truth have their Meſſiah die; but the Jews have added this Circumſtance to the Invention of the Samaritans, in order to elude the Oracles of the Prophets, who ſpeak plainly of the Death of the Meſſiah.

21. It cannot be deny'd, that the Samaritans were bewitch'd by Simon Magus, and it was this no doubt that led Juſtin Martyr into a Miſtake. For being ſtunn'd among the Samaritans with their Stories of Simon Magus's Miracles, he without any great ſcrutiny eaſily believ'd that the Romans had plac'd him among the Demy-Gods; and that the Statue in Rome with this Inſcription, Semoni Sanco, was conſecrated to him. He confirm'd the Samaritans in their Errour, by informing them, that the Man whom they had reverenc'd ſo much, was look'd upon in Rome as a Saint. He impos'd upon a great many others; ſince for the ſpace of Fifteen or Sixteen Hundred Years, every body hath believ'd it. However, there is no neceſſity to make all the Samaritans Apoſtates. Chriſt gain'd his Proſelytes at Sichem, and Simon Magus might have taught in another Town of Samaria, which in this place of the Acts of the Apoſtles, as in a great many others, that might be produc'd out of Joſephus, ſignifies rather the Province, than the City of Sebaſte. Farther, notwithſtanding that Simon's Diſciples might be very numerous; yet thoſe Proſelytes, that Jeſus Chriſt made, might have preſerv'd their Faith. We muſt not lay ſo great a Streſs upon theſe Words of the Holy-Pen-Man, from the Leaſt to the Greateſt, as if no body was free from being impos'd upon by him. For we muſt only underſtand by them a great Multitude, from which we may eaſily ſever thoſe that were converted to Chriſtianity. For we ſee that St. Paul viſited the Churches of Phœnicia and Samaria, which ſtill profeſs'd the Goſpel.

It is ſuppos'd without any manner of reaſon, that the Samaritans look'd upon Simon Magus as the Meſſiah. St. Epiphanius ‖ affirms, that this Impoſtor preach'd to the Samaritans, that he was the Father; and to the Jews that he was the Son. Thus he makes him a fooliſh Fellow, who cou'd never have deceiv'd any body by a Contradiction, which, conſidering the ſmall diſtance of Places, cou'd not be conceal'd. And indeed Simon being ador'd as a God by the Samaritans, cou'd not be a Teacher of the Jews. Farther, to preach to the Jews, that he was the Son, was to exaſperate them againſt him, as they were againſt Chriſt, when he took the Title of the Son of God. Nay, I do not believe, that he thought himſelf to be the Meſſiah. 1. Becauſe the Holy Writer only accuſes him of Sorcery, and it was by this that he deluded the Samaritans. 2. Becauſe the Samaritans only call'd him the great Power of God. Simon abus'd afterwards of this Title, and gave it another meaning, than that which was at firſt intended. But he did not himſelf take that Title, it was the Samaritans, who aſtoniſh'd at his Prodigies, call'd him the Power of God. That ſuited with the ſeeming Miracles, which he palm'd upon them; but it can't be inferr'd from thence, that he look'd upon himſelf as the Meſſiah. Thus John the Baptiſt, according to the Stile of the Jews, was to be great in the ſight of the Lord. Laſtly, it wou'd be the greateſt Prodigy that ever was, if Simon had pretended to be the Meſſiah, and was afterwards converted. He cou'd not have Aſſurance enough to ſtand the Shame of ſo groſs and plain an Impoſture. St. Luke lays nothing like this to his Charge. What he did was natural enough. For being convinc'd of the Falſhood of his Art, which the ableſt Magicians always ſuſpect, and of the Reality of the Miracles of Philip, he acquieſs'd to this Truth, and made himſelf a Chriſtian, hoping to become more formidable, and more admir'd by ſome Prodigies, more real and ſhining, than thoſe he had already perform'd. This was ſo plainly his aim in his Converſion, that he immediately offer'd Money to buy the Gift of Miracles.

22. In a Word, Lightfoot is very unjuſt to the Samaritans. For he pretends, that Jeſus Chriſt ranks

* Act. 8. 9. John 4. 31. † Lightfoot in Act. p. 82. ‖ Epiph. Hær. p. 54.

them

them with Pagans, and he owns that our bleſſed Maſter converted a great many of them, only to transform theſe new Converts into ſo many Apoſtates. Is not this a Contradiction? Since Chriſt preach'd the Goſpel at Sichem, did he not clearly put a difference between its Inhabitants and the Gentiles, to whom he never preach'd? Beſides, was not this Converſion, (which was almoſt general, and is mention'd in the Acts) perform'd in Samaria before the Vocation of the Gentiles was reveal'd, and St. Peter, who had the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, had open'd the Church to them?

Neither is it fair to aſcribe to this Nation the Diſtinction of a Victorious, and a Suffering Meſſiah. Since they do not admit of it, why is it imputed to them? And why is this Invention ſhar'd among the two Nations. Becauſe they make him deſcend from the Tribe of Ephraim, doth it follow that he is the Meſſiah of the Samaritans, or that they have invented this Fable? Don't we ſee, that a Poor and Dying Meſſiah is odious to the Jews; and that they wholly leave him to the Samaritans, and the Tribe of Ephraim, whilſt they reſerve to themſelves the Son of David deſcending from the Tribe of Judah. Be it what it will, the Samaritans did not adhere long to Simon Magus. For ſome embrac'd Chriſtianity, and others have conſtantly perſever'd in the Jewiſh Religion, without any other conſiderable Difference, than admitting no other rule of Faith, but the Five Books of Moſes, rejecting the Prophets, and reſerving to themſelves the liberty of offering Sacrifices on Mount Gerizim, when they can buy it. For as they are not ty'd up to the Temple of Jeruſalem, and as an Altar is enough for them, they ſacrifice, when they can; as Benjamin of Tudela, who ſaw there the remains of theſe Schiſmaticks, relates it.

23. To omit nothing, that concerns the Religion of the Samaritans, we'll here add the Confeſſion of Faith, which the High-Prieſt Eleazar ſent to Scaliger, in the Name of the Synagogue of Sichem, which that great Man conſulted.

* " 1. The Samaritans obſerve the Sabbath with " all the exactneſs requir'd in Exodus. For none of " them goes out of the Place, where he is on the Sab- " bath-Day, but only to go to the Synagogue, where " they read the Law, and ſing God's Praiſes. They " do not lie that Night with their Wives, and nei- " ther kindle, nor order Fire to be kindl'd: Where- " as the Jews tranſgreſs the Sabbath in all theſe Points. " For they go out of Town, have Fire made, lie " with their Wives, and even do not waſh them- " ſelves after it.

" 2. They hold the Paſſover to be their Firſt Feſti- " val. They begin at Sun-ſet by the Sacrifice in- " joyn'd for that purpoſe in Exodus. But they ſacri- " fice no where but on Mount Gerizim, where they " read the Law, and offer Prayers unto God, after " which the Prieſt diſmiſſes the whole Congregation " with a Bleſſing.

" 3. They celebrate for Seven Days together the " Feaſt of the Harveſt, but they do not agree with the " Jews concerning the Day, that it ought to begin. " For theſe reckon the next Day after the Solemnity " of the Paſſover; whereas the Samaritans reckon " Fifty Days, beginning the next Day after the Sab- " bath, which happens in the Week of the Unleaven'd " Bread, and the next day after the Seventh Sabbath " following, the Feaſt of the Harveſt begins.

" 4. They obſerve the Feaſt of Expiation the Tenth " of the Seventh Month. They employ the Four and " Twenty Hours of the Day in Prayers to God, and " ſinging his Praiſes, and Faſting. For all except " Sucking Children faſt; whereas the Jews except " Children under Seven Years of Age.

" 5. The 15*th* of the ſame Month, they celebrate " the Feaſt of the Tabernacles upon the ſame Mount " Gerizim.

" 6. They never defer Circumciſion farther " than the Eighth Day, as it is commanded in " Geneſis: Whereas the Jews defer it ſometimes " longer.

" 7. They are oblig'd to waſh themſelves in the " Morning when they have lain with their Wives, " or have been ſully'd in the Night with ſome Un- " cleanneſs; and all Veſſels, that may become unclean, " become ſo when they touch them before they have " waſh'd.

" 8. They take away the Fat from Sacrifices, " and give the Prieſts the Shoulder, the Jaws, and " Belly.

" 9. They never marry their Nices as the Jews do, " and have but one One Wife; whereas the Jews " may have many.

" 10. They believe in God, in Moſes, and in Mount " Gerizim. Whereas, ſay they, the Jews put their " Truſt in others, we do nothing but what is ex- " preſsly commanded in the Law by the Lord, who " made uſe of the Miniſtry of Moſes. But the Jews " ſwerve from what the Lord hath commanded in " the Law, to obſerve what their Fathers and Doctors " have invented.

24. Eleazar added, that they reckon'd 122 High-Prieſts from Aaron to their time †. They have a Catalogue, and Succeſſion of them. They believe themſelves to be of the Poſterity of Joſeph by Ephraim; and that all their High-Prieſts deſcend from Phinehas; whereas the Jews have not one of that Family. They boaſt, that they have preſerv'd the Hebrew Characters, which God made uſe of to promulgate his Law: Whereas the Jews, have a way of Writing from Ezra, which is curſed for ever. And indeed inſtead of looking upon Ezra as the Reſtorer of the Law, they curſe him as an Impoſtor, who hath laid aſide their Old Characters to uſe New ones in their room, and authoriz'd ſeveral Books, that were writ to maintain the Poſterity of David.

25. Several Attempts have been made to convert theſe Samaritans. But they have been oppreſs'd inſtead of being made Chriſtians; and they are reduc'd to this ſmall Number rather by Miſery, than by the Multitude of thoſe that have been converted. Nay, they ſeem more ſtubbornly wedded to their Sect, than the Jews; altho theſe adhere very ſtiffly to the Law of Moſes. At leaſt Nicon ‖, who liv'd after the Twelfth Century, ſetting down the Formalities us'd for the reception of Hereticks, obſerves, that if a Jew had a mind to be converted, to avoid the Puniſhment, or Payment of what he ow'd, he was to purify himſelf, and ſatisfy his Creditors before he was admitted. But as for the Samaritans, they were not receiv'd before they had been inſtructed two Years; and they were requir'd to faſt ten, or fifteen days before they profeſs'd the Chriſtian Religion, and to be Morning and Evening at Prayers, and to learn ſome Pſalms. Others were not us'd with ſo much rigour. The Term of two Years, that was enjoyn'd to the Samaritan-Proſelytes, is an Argument that they were ſuſpected; and the reaſon why they were ſo, was, that they had often deceiv'd the Chriſtians by their pretended Converſion.

* Leo. of Modena. p. 156. † In the Year 1590. ‖ Timotheus ex Conone apud Coteler. Monum. t. 3. p. 422.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

The Sects of the Samaritans.

I. Essenes misplac'd among the Samaritans. II. The Sebuæans a fabulous Sect. III. Some Mistakes concerning the Gortheni. IV. They appear'd after Christianity. V. Whether Dositheus is the Founder of the Sadducees. VI. He liv'd in the time of Christ. VII. The Causes of his Separation. VIII. His Fasts, and Celibacy. IX. Some Dositheans in Egypt in the 6th Century. X. Their Dispute with the Samaritans. XI. Decided by Eulogius. XII. Whether the Samaritan Pentateuch is deprav'd.

1. THE Schismaticks were divided among themselves; and notwithstanding, that it was their Interest to unite against their common Enemies, yet they fell into different Factions. St. Epiphanius reckon'd Four; and as his Authority was great *, others without examining whether he was in the right, have been of his Opinion. Johannes Damascenus † and Nicetas are of these, and Baronius hath vindicated them. But it is easily observ'd that the Essenes are plac'd among these Sects, notwithstanding that they had a Schism of their own. They had their peculiar Temples and assemblies: They did not communicate with the Jews, but they were more averse to the Samaritans, with whom they ought not to be confounded. The other Samaritan Sects were the Sebuæans, Gortheni, and Dositheans, which we are going to examine.

2. It is pretended that the Sebuæans were the Second Sect. Drusius imagin'd, that they took that Name from Sebaia, the Priest that came from Assyria to teach them the Worship of God. The Name of this Priest ought to be known, to confirm this Etymology; Besides, the Sect of the Sebuæans wou'd be very old, since it had begun at that time. That Priest must also have taught them to celebrate the Passover in Autumn. But to what purpose is the inquiry of the Name of a Sect, that was invented? St. Epiphanius will have it, that their Hatred to Ezra and the Jews, that went to worship at Jerusalem, was the Cause of their Separation. But this Aversion, which was common to all the Samaritans, ought not to have distinguish'd the Sebuæans from the rest. He adds, that the Sebuæans celebrated the Feast of unleaven'd Bread in Autumn after the Month of Tisri, whereby they begun their Year, and delay'd the Feast of Pentecost till the end of Autumn. Scaliger believ'd, that they observ'd this last Festival Four times a Year; so that it was celebrated in Autumn. But this variety of Opinions, St. Epiphanius's obscure way of expressing himself, and no peculiar Character being ascrib'd to this Sect, which is only distinguish'd from the Samaritans by the beginning of their Year, makes us believe that it never had a Being. St. Epiphanius's Authority, which hath sway'd so many, ought not to impose upon any body. For his Commentator, who was one of the most Learn'd Men of the last Century, is mightily puzl'd to explain him; and we have already observ'd so many Mistakes of this ancient Father concerning the Samaritans, that we ought not to scruple laying another Mistake to his Charge, when he trump'd up a Sect which never was in a Church, he was little acquainted with.

3. The Gortheni, another pretended Sect of the Samaritans are not better known. It is said, that they celebrated the Feast of Unleaven'd Bread and the Passover at the same time, that the Samaritans observ'd both; and this was the Thing that characteriz'd them. It is added, that they were divided among themselves. So that according to this, there must have been a great many Branches of the Gortheni, and yet not one of them is known. It is no Explanation of St. Epiphanius to make him say, that they were not divided among themselves but from other Sects. For this is fathering upon him a Meaning directly contrary to his Words. Farther, if the Gortheni celebrated the Passover with the Samaritans, why are they look'd upon as a peculiar Sect? Nicetas calls them Serotheni, and contradicts himself, when he makes them solemnize the Passover with the Sebuæans, and Jews. For these differ'd very much about the Celebration of the Passover.

4. There is a greater Difficulty than this. For Hegesippus ‖ ranks the Gortheni among Hereticks, that appear'd since Christianity, and derives them from one Gortheus a Disciple of Simon Magus, as the Cleobians came from one Cleobius, and the Dositheans from Dositheus, who were bred up in the same School. Theodoret ‖‖ follows Hegesippus, and this Opinion appears to me the most probable; because St. Epiphanius being the First, who discover'd these different Sects of Samaritans, whereof neither Josephus nor Philo spoke, and having besides been so little acquainted with them, that he stumbles every step he makes, there is some reason to believe, that he took these Associates of Simon Magus, who mix'd the Jewish Religion with some appearances of Christianity, for Samaritans. There were so many Sects that appear'd at the beginning of Christianity, that they cou'd not easily be unravell'd. But it was not difficult to confound them. Hegesippus, who is older than St. Epiphanius, might have known them better than he. We therefore see that those, who divide the Samaritans into different Sects, accuse them of denying the Holy Ghost, and the Godhead of the Son. An Imputation which by no means belongs to Jews; but may fall on the Sectaries, that came out of this Nation, and liv'd after the Promulgation of the Gospel.

5. St. Epiphanius * makes of the Dositheans a fourth Branch of the Hereticks of Samaria. On the contrary the Jews † pretend, that Dosthus, or Dositheus, Son of Jannæus, liv'd in the Reign of Sennacherib, and that he was One of the Two Priests, that this Prince sent to instruct the Colony, which he had sent thither, and was devour'd by Lions. St. Jerome ‖ makes him the Father of the Saducees, and Chief of the Samaritans too; because he taught his Countrey Men to reject the Writings of the Prophets. But he is plainly mistaken; since the Samaritans had long before rejected these Sacred Books. However, Serrarius ‖‖ follow'd St. Jerome, and maintain'd, that Dositheus was Master to Tsadoc the Head of the Saducees; but he at the same time commits a greater Mistake when he places this Heresiarch in the time of Christ. Photius * believes, that after the Discourse which the Messiah had with the Woman of Samaria, near the Well of Sichem, two considerable Parties appear'd in the Countrey; One maintaining, that Jesus was the Prophet promis'd by Moses, when he says, God will raise up unto thee a Prophet like me; and the Other, that Dositheus, a Native of Samaria, a Towns Man and Contemporary of Simon Magus, was the true Messiah. How wide are these Opinions? Some have endeavour'd at least to reconcile the Fathers of the Church, who knew Dositheus no better than the Jews; and therefore have imagin'd

* Epiph. Hær. l. p. 28. † Damasc. de Hær. p. 575. Nicetas l. 1. c. 35. p. 63. B. Max. P. t. xxv. p. 63. Baron. Annal. Appar. ‖ Hegesi. apud Euseb. H. l. 4. c. 22. p. 142. ‖‖ Theodoret. Hær. Fab. l. 1. c. 1. p. 193. * Epiph. Ibid. † Jauchum 172. ‖ Hieron. Dial. adv. Lucifer. ‖‖ Drusius Resp. ad Serrarii Minerval, c. 10. Coteler Apost. Pat. t. 1. p. 335. * Phot. Cod. 130.

that

that there were Two of that Name, One Father of the Saducees, who liv'd before Chriſt; and the Other a Contemporary and Aſſociate of Simon Magus. But to reconcile them all, a Third Doſitheus ſhou'd alſo be imagin'd, who was a Prieſt at Samaria to inſtruct the Cuthæans that were tranſplanted thither. But People will not perhaps be at the Pains to invent this in favour of the Jews, who, notwithſtanding that the Scripture ſays nothing of it, call that ancient Prieſt by that Name. And they'll be ſo much the more in the right, becauſe it is a Greek Name; now it is not likely that a Greek Prieſt had been found at that time in Chaldæa among the Jews, and preferr'd to all others to read the Law to People, who had not underſtood him; and alſo becauſe other Jews ſay that this Prieſt's Name was * Lun.

Well, let Chriſtians vindicate the Fathers of the Church, provided they do it to purpoſe. But how do they prove, that there were Two Men of that Name? Is it enough to fanſie it; becauſe it ſuits with their Deſign, to affirm that it is true? The Saducees never believ'd that Doſitheus was Founder of their Sect. They go no farther than Antigonus and Tſadoc. Why then ſhou'd he be impos'd upon them? But it is eaſy to diſcover the Grounds of this Miſtake. Doſitheus was a celebrated Samaritan. The Samaritans reject the Old Teſtament, and therefore they are often confounded with the Saducees. Thence it hath been inferr'd, that Doſitheus the Head of his Countreymen the Samaritans ought at the ſame time to be the Head of the Saducees; ſince both made but one and the ſame Sect. But all this is grounded upon an Errour; ſince the Samaritans differ'd very much from the Saducees, altho they all agreed to reject Traditions. Beſides Doſitheus liv'd after Tſadoç.

6. And indeed Hegeſippus who liv'd in the Second Century, places Doſitheus and his Adherents at the beginning of Chriſtianity with thoſe of Simon Magus †. In the Catalogue of the Works of Hyppolitus we find ſome ‖ Songs upon all the Scriptures. A Critick, who cou'd not conceive, that this Martyr had put all the Scripture into Verſe, hath corrected the Text; and diſtinguiſhing theſe Two Works, he pretends that the laſt was againſt all Hereſies. It doth not ſignifie much whether this Correction be good; ſince all thoſe that have ſpoken of Hyppolitus, reckon among his Works a Tract |||| againſt Hereſy, which begun by the Doſitheans; and yet he only confuted thoſe Errours which obtain'd ſince Chriſtianity. Origen * oppoſes Chriſt, whoſe Goſpel was preach'd all over the World, to Simon and Doſitheus, whoſe Sects were already dwindl'd to nothing, altho they boaſted of Miracles; and he poſitively ſays, that Doſitheus wou'd have perſwaded the People that he was the Meſſiah, when Chriſt appear'd. We alſo read in the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions † that Cleobius, and Simon Magus were Doſitheus's Diſciples; that they expell'd him, and degraded him from the firſt Place which he had in their Sect; and the Author of the Recognitions ‖ who alſo goes under the Name of Clement, fixes the Epocha of this Sect at the time that John Baptiſt loſt his Head. Theodoret |||| had the ſame Notion. So that he cannot be condemn'd for placing Doſitheus in the time of the Goſpel, ſince the oldeſt Authors, who were better acquainted with this Matter than St. Epiphanius, ſpoke after this rate.

7. Doſitheus was by Birth a Jew; but he went over to the Samaritans becauſe he cou'd not be * the First in the Deuterotes. This Term of Nicetas is obſcure, and ought to be corrected, and that of Deuterotes † put again in the Text. Euſebius ſpeaks often of theſe Deuterotes of the Jews, who made uſe of Ænigms to explain the Law. The Wits of the Nation of that time apply'd themſelves to this Study, which pav'd them the way to Dignity and Power. Few attempted it, becauſe it was very hard. However, it only requir'd Fancy. For as ſoon as it is lively and warm, it can eaſily find ſome Myſteries every where. Doſitheus ſtrove to diſtinguiſh himſelf by explaining the Law in an allegorical Senſe, and even wou'd be the firſt of theſe Interpreters. St. Paul being at Rome, call'd the firſt of the Jews together, that is the heads of the Nation; thoſe that had ſome Authority, and whom the Sanhedrim ought to have inform'd of his Caſe. The firſt of the Deuterotes were Maſters to the Others; and it was one of theſe Places, and perhaps the firſt among theſe myſtical Doctors, that Doſitheus wou'd have expected among the Jews, and which he cou'd not obtain.

8. It is ‖ pretended, that Doſitheus founded a Sect among the Samaritans; and that this Sect obſerv'd, 1. The Circumciſion and Sabbath, as the Jews. 2. They believ'd the Reſurrection of the Body. But this Article is controverted. For thoſe, who make Doſitheus the Founder of the Saducees, accuſe him of having oppugn'd this comfortable Truth. 3. He faſted very much; and in order to make his Faſting more mortifying, he did not allow the uſe of any thing that had Life: In a Word, ſhutting himſelf up in a Cave, he ſtarv'd himſelf to death, and his Diſciples ſome time after found his Body gnaw'd by the Worms, and full of Flies. 4. The Doſitheans had a great value for Virginity, which moſt of them preſerv'd; and others, ſays St. Epiphanius, abſtain'd from their Wives after death. People can't tell what to make of this; unleſs that they forbid ſecond Marriages, which many Chriſtians have thought unlawful and ignominious. But an ingenious Critick |||| hath found by altering one Letter, a clearer Senſe, and more eaſy to the Law of the Doſitheans, who abſtain'd from their Wives, when they were big with Child, or were brought to Bed. Nicetas ſtrengthens this Conjecture. For he ſays, that the Doſitheans parted with their Wives, when they had had one Child; and his Authority is the rather to be depended upon, becauſe he doth for the moſt part but copy St. Epiphanius. However, I like the firſt better; becauſe the Doſitheans laid aſide Women as uſeleſs, when they had anſwer'd the firſt intention of Matrimony, which is the generation of Children. 5. This Sect ſo fond of their Auſterities, look'd on all the reſt of Mankind with contempt. They wou'd neither come near, nor touch any Body. It is ſaid, that among other things, which they oblig'd themſelves to obſerve, they wou'd remain Four and Twenty Hours in the ſame Poſture they were in when the Sabbath did begin.

9. This Sect ſubſiſted in Egypt till the Sixth Century; and then aroſe a violent Diſpute between theſe Sectaries and the Samaritans. Theſe laſt fanſy'd that Joſhua was the Prophet like him, that Moſes had promiſed to the Nation. On the contrary, the Doſitheans maintain'd, that Moſes meant by this Encomium their Maſter Doſitheus, who was Simon the Magus's Contemporary; and that agrees with what Origen ſaid a long time before, that Doſitheus thought himſelf the Meſſiah; and it was rather to perſwade the World, that he was gone up into Heaven, than for the love of Philo- ſophy.

* Patricides Hiſt. Eccleſ. † Hegeſ. apud Euſeb. l. 4. c. 22. p. 142. ‖ Ὧδαι εἰς πάσας γραφάς, r. ἀδαὶ εἰς πάσας αἱρέσεις. Hyppol. Laterculus. Le Moine Var. Sacr. p. 946. & 1087. |||| Euſeb. l. 6. c. 22. p. 223. Phot. Cod. 121. * Origen. contra Celſum, l. 1. & l. 6. p. 44. † Clem. Conſtit. Apoſt. l. 6. c. 8. p. 335. ‖ Clem. Recognit. l. 2. p. 506. |||| Theodor. Hæret. Fab. l. 1. c. 1. * Euſeb. Præp. l. 11. c. 3. & l. 12. c. 1. Δευτερώσεις, r. Δευτερωταὶ ς. † Apud Nicetam l. 1. c. 35. p. 62. ‖ Epiph. p. 30. |||| Epiph. μετὰ τὸ βιῶσαι, read, μετὰ τὸ κυῆσαι, or μετὰ τὸ ὑιῶσαι. Le Moine Var. Sacr. t. 2. p. 1102.

ſophy, that he diſappear'd, and hid himſelf in a Cave, to die out of ſight.

10. The Samaritans and Doſitheans agreed about the Number of the Sacred Books. For they only receiv'd the Five Books of Moſes; but the firſt accus'd Doſitheus of having corrupted them. Photius's Copyiſt muſt be corrected, who ſays, that he had alter'd the Eight Books of Moſes; notwithſtanding that there are but Five. Doſitheus had perhaps foiſted in ſome Expreſſions, or rather Oracles, which he apply'd to himſelf. A Samaritan, who hath ſince writ the Hiſtory of his Nation, imputes this very Crime to him; and affirms, that he was ſharply reprehended for it before his Death, by the High-Prieſt of Mount Gerizim.

He is alſo accuſed of applying to himſelf all the Oracles, and the other Deity. This Term is obſcure. Did Doſitheus make himſelf a God, becauſe he ſaw that Chriſt took that Title? I don't believe this was Eulogius's meaning; ſince he only ſpeaks of another Deity but in oppoſition to Prophecy; But doubtleſs Doſitheus aſcrib'd to himſelf a Preſence of God, like that which Moſes had to guide and enable him to work ſo many Miracles, that made the People admire him.

Laſtly, he was upbraided with having ſully'd the memory of Judah, one of the Twelve Patriarchs, to whom the Scripture allows ſo great Privileges. But he did no more than the reſt of the Samaritans, whoſe Intereſt it was to leſſen that Tribe and their Head.

11. Let the Matter be how it will, the Samaritans, and Doſitheans writ againſt one another. Every one warmly aſſerted his Application of the Oracle of Moſes; and as they cou'd not agree, they choſe Eulogius for their Judge, who was then Patriarch of Alexandria. This Choice was very honourable, if it be true that they made it; becauſe they rely'd on his Moderation and Equity. Nevertheleſs it is plain, that he ſatisfy'd neither Party. For he overſet their Syſtem, and prov'd that this Oracle belongs to none but to Chriſt. He pronounc'd a Sentence which he intitul'd, a Decree againſt the Samaritans. Altho he publiſh'd it, yet it dy'd with him.

12. Some have taken occaſion from this Diſpute to cry down the Samaritan Pentateuch, and prefer the Hebrew one to it. And indeed, if it was true, that Doſitheus alter'd it, it cou'd not have that preference which is often given to it. The Learn'd Uſher believ'd, that the Samaritan Pentateuch, that is now read, is the ſame, that Doſitheus alter'd; which wou'd be enough to cry it down: And Abraham Ecchellenſis ſpeaks of ſome Doſitheans, who ſtill made uſe of their Maſter's Copy.

But this Diſpute ariſing between the Samaritans but towards the end of the Sixth Century, we cannot be ſure, that the Accuſation againſt Doſitheus, which was unknown till that time, is true. His Diſciples might have alter'd ſome places of the Pentateuch to maintain their Maſter's Glory. But there were a great many Samaritan Copies free from Corruption. Even thoſe, who diſputed at Alexandria againſt the Doſitheans, had ſome exact Copies. Why then will ſome have the Copy, that we have now, to be rather that of theſe Sectaries, who were but few, than that of the old Samaritans, who are as yet in Being, and own it to be genuine.

But it is an eaſy matter to decide this Controverſy. For by examining the Prophecies, that concern the Meſſiah, and comparing them with the Copies of the Jews, we may obſerve whether they differ, or whether ſomething, that might be apply'd to Doſitheus hath been foiſted into them. If theſe Oracles are pure without any Mixture, it is undoubtedly the Samaritan Pentateuch; and ſince the Criticks own, that theſe Oracles are pure, they reſolve the queſtion.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Saducees. Their Original and Tenets.

I. TWO Opinions of Lightfoot concerning the Origin of the Saducees examin'd. II. Antigonus's myſtical Divinity. III. How he ſucceeded Simon the Juſt. IV. The time when the Saducees appear'd. V. Whether the Saducees rejected the Prophets. VI. Some Arguments againſt this Opinion. VII. A Third Opinion may be maintain'd. VIII. Whether they deny'd Providence. Grotius confuted. IX. Theophilactus and Arnobius accuſe the Saducees falſly. X. Mr. Simon's Opinion concerning the new Name of Angels. XI. Whether they be Powers inſeparable from God. XII. Theſe Notions refuted. The true Opinion of the Saducees concerning Angels. XIII. Whether they took their Opinion from Herod and Plato. XIV. The Reſurrection of the Dead oppugn'd. XV. Why they expected the Meſſiah. XVI. The Purity of their Worſhip. XVII. A Difficulty concerning the way of burning Incenſe. XVIII. The Saducees were ſevere about Marriage. XIX. Their ſavage Morals. XX. Whether they were Epicureans. Their Opinion of Rewards and Puniſhments. XXI. The Saducees juſtify'd of many Crimes.

1. SOme make the Saducees older than they are, when they affirm, that their Opinion begun to ſpread in Ezra's time. For they aſſert, * that as ſome Holy Men ſeparated themſelves from Idolatrous Nations at that time, and laid the Foundation of Phariſaiſm, ſome wicked Men begun to deny the Reſurrection of the Dead, and the Immortality of the Soul. It is farther ſaid, that Malachi introduces them, ſaying, It is in vain to ſerve God; and Ezra, who deſign'd to give the Church a Preſervative againſt this Errour, order'd that all Prayers ſhou'd end with theſe Words, from age to age. They only ſaid before, according to the Thalmudiſts, Glory be to God in the Age; but the Hereticks affirming that there was no other Life, the Ritual was alter'd, and they ſaid from age to age, that it might be known that there was an Age, and another Life after this. But notwithſtanding Ezra's care, Errour gather'd ſtrength, and the Church decay'd after Simon the Juſt's Death. The Miracles of the Feaſt of Expiation ceas'd. Altho the Scape-God Hazael was thrown headlong from the Hill, yet he liv'd, and was eaten up by Infidels; and Tſadoc taking advantage of this Corruption, openly own'd his Opinions, and gave his Name to his Sect. Thus Lightfoot † derives this Sect; but he afterwards fell into another Extream. He reſolv'd to make the Saducees appear, but after the Verſion of the LXX was perform'd by Ptolomeus Philadelphus's Command; and in order to that, inſtead of aſcending as far as Ezra, he lets two or three Generations paſs ſince Tſadock. He forſook the Rabbins and his own Opinion; becauſe the Saducees rejecting the Prophets, and admitting only of the Pentateuch, they cou'd not appear but after the LXX Interpreters, who only tranſlated in Greek

* Lightfoot in Matth. 3. 7. p. 234. † Lightfoot in Acta, p. 124.

the

the Five Books of Moſes, and forbid that any thing ſhou'd be added to their Tranſlation. But without examining whether the LXX Interpreters did not tranſlate all the Bible, ſince Ptolomy had a mind to have in his Library all the good Books of the Jews, this Verſion was not us'd by the Jews, among whom the Sect of the Saducees ſprung. The Bible was read in Hebrew, and what ruins this Conjecture, the Saducees admitted of the Prophets as well as of other Books.

2. Myſtical Divinity did rather produce this Sect. And indeed, the Notions of a pure Obedience abſtracted from the hope of Happineſs, are not only found in the Works of Clemens Alexandrinus, and other very old Fathers, but Antigonus had alſo ſcatter'd them under the diſpenſation of the Law. This Man liv'd 240 Years before Chriſt, and ſaid to his Diſciples; Be not as Slaves, who obey their Maſters for Reward; obey without hoping any fruits of your labours. Let the fear of the Lord be upon you. We are ſurpriz'd at the Maxim of a Divine, who liv'd under the old Diſpenſation. For the Law did not only promiſe ſome Rewards; but it alſo ſpoke often of a Temporal Happineſs, which was to be the ſhadow and conſtant attendant of Virtue. So that it was not eaſy to have any abſtracted Thoughts in ſo carnal a Religion. However, Antigonus had them firſt. People cou'd hardly ſoar ſo high and follow him. Tſadock, one of his Diſciples, who cou'd neither forſake his Maſter, nor reliſh his Myſtical Divinity, gave his Maxim another Meaning; and thence concluded, that there were no future Rewards and Puniſhments. He became the Father of the Saducees, who took from him the Name of their Sect, and this Tenet.

3. The Jews ſay, that Antigonus ſucceeded Simeon the Juſt. But we muſt diſtinguiſh in their Writings three ſorts of Succeſſions; that of the High-Prieſts; that of the Princes of the Sanhedrim; and the Third, that of thoſe, who preſerv'd Tradition, and handed the Law to their Poſterity. As the ſucceſſion of Biſhops in the ſame See, who handed the Faith to one another, is boaſted of in the Church of Rome; the Rabbins have imagin'd ſuch a ſeries of Succeſſion, whereby the Traditions of the Fathers paſs'd ſince Moſes, or Ezra, who renew'd them, to this time. The Firſt of theſe Succeſſions doth not belong to Antigonus. For Onias inherited the High-Prieſthood of his Father. The Second is a meer Chimera. For the High-Prieſts were by their Office the Chiefs and Preſidents of the great Council whilſt it laſted. But ſuppoſing this Succeſſion was real, Onias did not yield his Precedency to Antigonus. So that we muſt underſtand, that Antigonus receiv'd the Traditions of Simeon the Juſt, and convey'd them to Joſe the Son of Joezer. So that he kept the Line in the Succeſſion of Perſons, or Traditioniſt-Doctors. And therefore Maimonides * having included in one Article the 120 Succeſſors of Ezra; and thoſe, who compos'd after him the great Synagogue, namely Simeon the Juſt, as the laſt, and makes Antigonus Sochæus his Succeſſor. The Author of the Juchaſin doth the ſame Thing.

In a Word, that of Pirke Abbot †, or of the Sentences of the Fathers, ſpeaks clearly. For he obſerves, that Antigonus receiv'd Simeon the Juſt. He doth not ſay, that he ſucceeded him in the High-Prieſthood, but that he receiv'd of him the Oral Law.

4. So that the Saducees begun to appear, whilſt Onias was High-Prieſt at Jeruſalem, Ptolomeus Euergetes reign'd in Egypt, and Seleucus Callinicus in Syria, 240 Years before Chriſt. Thoſe who ‖ place this Event under Alexander the Great, and who affirm with St. Epiphanius, that this Sect ſprung in the Temple of Mount Gerizim, where Tſadoc, and Baythos were retir'd, commit a double Fault. For Antigonus was not High-Prieſt under Alexander, and Tſadoc's Flight to Samaria was only invented to make his Diſciples the more odious. Not only Joſephus, who hated the Saducees, never upbraids their Head with this Crime, but they are alſo ſeen in the Goſpel worſhipping and attending Divine Service in the Temple of Jeruſalem. Nevertheleſs, the Jews and Samaritans had no dealings together at that time.

5. The Saducees ſticking only to the Holy Scripture, rejected the Oral Law, and all Traditions, which begun under the Macchabees to be reckon'd an eſſential part of Religion. St. Jerome |||| and moſt of the Fathers believ'd, that they cut off from the Canon the Prophets and all Sacred Writings except thoſe of Moſes. The modern Criticks * follow'd the Fathers, and obſerv'd that Jeſus Chriſt deſigning to prove the Reſurrection to the Saducees, who deny'd it, only quoted Moſes; becauſe a Text from the Prophets, whoſe Authority they did not own, had not been convincing.

6. It is a hard Task to decide this queſtion. It wou'd perhaps be imprudent to oppugn the general Opinion of the Fathers upon this Matter. However, we muſt not omit the Reaſons that ingage us to believe, that theſe Hereticks follow'd the common Canon of the Jews, and only oppos'd Tradition. 1. They only begun to appear, but when the Canon of Scripture was fix'd, and the Gifts of Prophecy over, and that there were no new Books to be admitted. It can hardly be imagin'd, that they oppos'd the common Canon; ſince it was receiv'd in Jeruſalem. 2. The Saducees taught and pray'd in the Temple. And yet the Prophets were read there, as that appears by the example of Chriſt, who explain'd a Paſſage of Iſaiah. It might too be added, that the Saducees receiv'd the ſame Bleſſing taken from the Prophets, which concluded Divine Service. But I do not know whether this laſt Cuſtom is as ancient as it is pretended. 3. But Joſephus, † who ought to have been well acquainted with this Sect, relates that they receiv'd what was written. Scaliger ‖ carry'd away by his prejudice againſt the Jeſuit Serarius, put in his Tranſlation all that is written; but this all is not found in the Original. However, the Teſtimony of Joſephus is very full. For he oppoſes what is written to the Oral Law of the Phariſees; and he inſinuates, that the Controverſy only turn'd upon Traditions; which makes us conclude, that the Saducees receiv'd all the Scripture, and all the Prophets as well as Moſes. 4. The Diſputes of the Phariſees, or the common Doctors of the Jews, againſt the Saducees, ſhew this more plainly. R. Gamaliel proves to them the Reſurrection of the Dead from ſome places taken from Moſes, the Prophets, and Agiographers; and the Saducees inſtead of rejecting the Authority of the Books quoted againſt them, only endeavour'd by quirks to elude the force of theſe Paſſages. 5. Laſtly, the Saducees reproach'd to the Phariſees, that they believ'd, that the Sacred Writing defiled, but that thoſe of Hereticks did not. What were theſe Sacred Books, which in the Opinion of the Phariſees defil'd? They were the Eccleſiaſtes, the Song of Solomon, and the Proverbs. So that the Saducees look'd upon all theſe Books as Sacred Writings; and even had a greater Veneration for them than the Phariſees.

7. A third Opinion might be maintain'd, (viz.) that the Saducees did not abſolutely reject the Sacred Writings. They look'd upon them as Books writ by

* Maimon. & Juchaſin apud Vorſt. Not. in Tſemach David, p. 114. † Pirke Abbot, c. 3. fol. 1. ‖ Micræl. Hiſt. Eccl. l. 1. Sect. 2. p. 265. Bartolocci Bib. Rab. t. 1. p. 380. |||| Hieron in Matth. Origen. cont. Celſ. l. 1. Serar. Trihær. l. 2. c. 21. p. 89. * Simon Hiſt. Crit. of the New Teſt. l. 1. c. 16. p. 93. Bartol. Bib. Rab. t. 1. p. 380. † Joſeph. Ant. p. 454. ‖ Scalig. Elench. Trihær. c. 16. p. 416.

Holy Men, whose Memory they reverenc'd. However, they did not believe that they had the same Authority as the Law of Moses. This Law was the only Rule of their Faith, and whatsoever was not taken from the Pentateuch, they did not receive as a foundamental Article of Religion.

The Pharisees themselves are oblig'd to own this Principle: * It is not enough to believe the Resurrection of the Dead; but there is a necessity to be perswaded that it is taught in the Law, otherwise the Foundation is overturn'd. Whether the Saducees had more Reverence for Moses than for the other Prophets; whether they observ'd, that the other Books afforded stronger Arguments for the Resurrection; whether People had a great deal of Liberty allow'd them concerning the Canon of Scripture, and the choice of Holy Books, as they had for a long time in the Christian Church; the Saducees read all the Prophets; suffer'd that they shou'd be quoted, that the Blessing for the People, some Oracles, and moral Precepts shou'd be taken out of them; and that they shou'd be inserted in the Canon. But they believ'd, that the Law, the only Foundation of their Religion, and the only Rule of Faith; and that all that Moses had not taught, ought not of necessity to be believ'd, to be sav'd.

8. The Saducees seem too to have deny'd a Providence; and therefore they are put among the Epicureans. Josephus † says, "That they deny'd Fate, de-"priv'd God of inspecting Evil, and all influence on "Good; because he set Good and Evil before Man, "when he left him at liberty to do either. Grotius, who cou'd not apprehend, that the Saducees were of this Opinion, thought we shou'd correct Josephus, and read, that God hath no share in the Actions of Men, whether they did Evil or not. Lastly, he hath said, that the Saducees being wedded to a false Notion of Liberty, thought it intirely in their Power to eschew Evil, and do Good. In the main he is in the right. But there is no necessity to alter the Text of Josephus, to ascribe this Opinion to the Saducees. For the Term that he uses, only denies a Providence, that influences Men's Actions. The Saducees depriv'd God of an active Direction of the Will, and only allow'd him the privilege of Rewarding or Punishing those, who voluntarily did Good, or Evil. And indeed, the Three chief Sects of the Jews differ'd in this, (viz.) The Saducees strain'd Man's Free-Will too far, and were the Predecessors of Celestius and Pelagius, who made Man absolute Master of his Actions and Doom. The Essenes ascrib'd all to Fate, and inclin'd to the Opinion of the Stoicks, whose austere Morals they borrow'd. But the Pharisees kept a medium between these two Sects, as we shall see hereafter. The Saducees were Pelagians, the Essenes Predestinarians, and the Pharisees Semi-Pelagians. At least they acknowledg'd a Divine Influence over good Actions, which they call'd Grace.

9. The greatest Errour of the Saducees, was concerning the Existence of Angels, and the Spirituality of the Soul. And the Evangelists upbraided them with asserting, that there was no Resurrection, neither Angel, nor Spirit. This Text of Scripture is clear; and yet Interpreters find it very difficult. Theophilactus says, that they deny'd the Godhead of the Holy-Ghost. Nay, he doubts whether they knew God; because they were of gross and heavy Understandings, and wedded to matter; and Arnobius || believing, that the Existence of Angels cou'd not be deny'd without making God corporeal, ascribes this Opinion to them. The Learn'd Petavius |||| fell into that Mistake, that he might conceal a Fault of St. Epiphanius.

But we must refer Arnobius to Eumenius the Philosopher. For this Heathen, more exact than a Doctor of the Church, hath not only vindicated the Jews on the score of this Doctrine, but also explain'd several places of Scripture, which gave occasion to say, that a material God was believ'd under the Old Testament. Granting that it is true, that there are several Things in the Rabbins, which shew that these Doctors ascribe a Body to God; that wou'd not justify Arnobius. For this Father never read the Rabbins, nor took this Opinion from their Writings, because they were not so old as he: And supposing, he had read and copy'd them; yet it is for all that true, that the Saducees, who deny'd the Existence of Spirits, because they had no clear Notions but of sensible and material Objects, look'd upon God as above their Understanding, and an incomprehensible Essence, because it was intirely abstracted from matter. In a Word, the Saducees oppos'd the Existence of Spirits, without denying the Person of the Holy-Ghost, that was no more known to them, than to the Disciples of John Baptist. For they had not so much as heard whether there was any Holy Ghost:

10. Father Simon * affirms, that the Thalmudists confess, that the Name of Angels was not us'd among them till their return from Captivity; and the Saducees concluded from thence, that the Invention of Angels was new, that whatever was said of them was added by the great Synagogue, and that all that they said of them, ought to be understood in an allegorical Sense. But this justifies the Saducees, who are condemn'd in the Gospel for that Errour. For was the Existence of Angels only grounded on a Tradition, that was but new, since it only begun at the Jews return from Captivity, when the Prophets ceas'd; it was not a very great Crime to deny it, or to turn into Allegories, what the Thalmudists said of Angels. Besides, the great Synagogue is a Fiction, which neither Josephus nor the Saducees ever knew.

11. Others fansie, that the Saducees look'd upon Angels as inseparable Powers of God, which however appear'd on Earth cloth'd with other Names, according to their various Functions; like the Rays of the Sun, which without being sever'd from that Planet, shine, and have their Influence here below. Nay, Grotius believ'd, that some Jews in Justin Martyr's time still maintain'd that Opinion; and that this Father upbraided them with it. But Grotius was mistaken. For those whom Justin Martyr accuses of this Errour, were Christians †, or Hereticks, that separated from the Church, and made use of this Hypothesis, to prove that Jesus Christ was not a Divine Person distinct from the Father.

12. The Saducees, who admitted the Books of Moses, cou'd have none of these Notions. They read in them, that there had been some Apparitions of Angels; and therefore cou'd not fansie them a new Invention of the Doctors, that return'd from the Captivity. They saw in them, that these Angels came down on Earth, and therefore cou'd not fansie them inseparable Beings from the Deity. No doubt but they had quite another Notion of them, maintaining that these Angels were but Phantasms, which appear'd only for a time. As the Bodies, which the Angels put on lasted but a Moment, and had perhaps but the appearance of humane Bodies, the Saducees said the same thing of the Spirits, which animated those Bodies, because every thing, except God, was material.

13. Lastly, it is pretended, that Herod, originally an Athenian, drew from thence the Doctrine of Plato, concerning the nature of the Soul, and carry'd it along with him into Judæa, where the Saducees, who appear in the Gospel to be the same as the Herodians, did warmly assert it. This Philosopher taught, that the Souls were form'd of a very subtil Air; and that they were only call'd Spirits, in oppoſition to the Body, that was compos'd of a groſſer Matter; that theſe Spirits, or ſubtil Bodies after Death return'd into the Air, whence they were taken; and that this is exactly what ought to be imputed to the Saducees.

* Gloss. in Sanhed. fol. 90. † Καὶ τὸν Θεὸν ἔφασαν τὰ δρᾶν τὶ κακὸν ἢ ἐφορᾶν τίθεται. Grot. reads δρᾶν τι κακὸν ἢ μὴ δρᾶν; Joseph. Ibid. || Arnob. l. 3. p. 100. |||| Petav. Dogm. Theol. t. 2. V. Not. in Epiph. Hær. Sad. * Simon Hist. Crit. of the Old Test. † Origen. contra Cels. l. 1.

they

Thus People take a great deal of pains to darken what is clear. The Goſpel ſays, that the Saducees maintain'd that there were neither Angels, nor Spirits. Why ſhou'd we not ſtop here? What, is it ſo hard to conceive, that there have been ſome, who having no notion of a ſpiritual Subſtance, believ'd that every thing, except God, was Corporeal? This Notion is ſo natural, that moſt Men inſenſibly fall into that Errour. Some Fathers, notwithſtanding the Light of the Goſpel, thought the Soul material. It is eaſy to extend this Notion to Angels. Why is Herod's Countrey, and Plato's Opinion trump'd up here? Why ſhou'd the Herodians and Saducees, who differ'd ſo much, be confounded together? Why ſhou'd People go as far as the great Synagogue, or impute to the Jews ſome Errours which only appear'd in the time of Chriſtianity; inſtead of ſaying only with the Evangeliſts, that the Errour of the Saducees lay in this, that they deny'd the Exiſtence of Spirits and Angels, as well as that of Souls. As we do not examine how they deny'd the Reſurrection of the Body, we ought not to inquire too nicely into the firſt Article, How they deny'd Angels. However, if there is need of a Commentary, why ſhou'd we not take that of Joſephus, who informs us, that the Saducees deſtroy'd the Soul with the Body?

14. The third Errour of the Saducees was, That they deny'd the Reſurrection of the Body, which they thought impoſſible. They affirm'd, That Man was wholly deſtroy'd by Death, whence flow'd a neceſſary, and dangerous Conſequence, That there were neither Rewards, nor Puniſhments after this Life. The Opinion of theſe Sectaries is ſometimes ſtretch'd too far, when they are accus'd of taking away all manner of Ideas of Puniſhment and Reward. Since they at leaſt receiv'd the Books of Moſes, they cou'd not be ignorant of the Hiſtory of the Deluge, and of the Conflagration of Sodom, or of thoſe exemplary Puniſhments, which God often inflicted in the Wilderneſs on the Iſraelites, whoſe Poſterity they were. They only deny'd the Eternity of Puniſhments, and reſtrain'd God's avenging Juſtice to this Life.

15. Since the Saducees deny'd the Spirituality of the Soul, and the Reſurrection of the Body, one wou'd think, that they were not concern'd in the coming of the Meſſiah, who they however impatiently expected as well as the reſt of the Jews. On the contrary, they argu'd in this reſpect more coherently than the Phariſees. For the Meſſiah was look'd upon as a temporal Deliverer and King; and the Saducees, who confin'd all their Hopes to this preſent Life, had a great Intereſt that he ſhou'd appear in their time, that they might enjoy the Fruits of his Conqueſt, and the Happineſs, which the Prophets promis'd during his Reign: But according to the Notion of Chriſtians, it is an undoubted Truth, that the Saducees, who believ'd neither a Heaven, nor a Hell, were in the moſt oppoſite Diſpoſition imaginable to Chriſt.

16. Their Worſhip was pure. For they ador'd the God of Heaven and Earth, and ſacrific'd with the reſt of the Jews in the Temple. Nevertheleſs, they have been accus'd of worſhiping God under the Figure of a Goat, and to have chang'd the firſt Words of Geneſis. In order to authorize this Worſhip, they put Azimah inſtead of Elohim, and by this Alteration, they made Moſes ſay, That a Goat created the Heaven and the Earth. We have already refuted the ſame Accuſation, which was exhibited againſt the Samaritans, and is alſo falſe with reference to the Saducees.

17. Maimonides * doth alſo impute to the Saducees to have believ'd, that the Incenſe was on the day of Expiation to be plac'd near the Veil of the Temple, to be immediately carry'd into the Holieſt of Holies, when the Smoak begun to come out of the Cenſer, becauſe God had ſaid, that he wou'd appear in the Cloud upon the Mercy-Seat. Whereas others maintain'd, that the Incenſe was not to be burn'd, but when the High-Prieſt was in the Holieſt of Holies; becauſe God had commanded that † he ſhou'd put the Incenſe upon the Fire before the Lord. This Difference, which is not very great, gave occaſion to the Oath, which the High-Prieſt was oblig'd to take the Eve before this Ceremony, to clear himſelf of being ſuſpected of Hereſy, or Saduciſm. For the Senate ſent him ſome Deputies to ſwear in the Name of him to whom the Temple was conſecrated, that he wou'd make no Innovation in the ancient Rites. The High-Prieſt went away weeping; becauſe he was ſuſpected of ſo pernicious a Deſign, and afterwards took the Oath. Suppoſing that this Ceremony was practis'd during the Second Temple; this proves, that the Jews were more jealous of their Rites, than of their Tenets; ſince inſtead of examining the High-Prieſts concerning the capital Errours of the Saducees, they were only uneaſy about ſome Formalities. But there is ſome reaſon to queſtion the Truth of this Cuſtom; ſince Maimonides quotes no body for his Warrant.

18. Laſtly, the Rabbins impute to them the auſterity of their Morality as a Crime and Hereſy. The Saducees pretend that theſe Words of Leviticus condemn plurality of Wives: (viz.) ‖ Thou ſhalt not take a Wife to her Siſter to vex her, to uncover her Nakedneſs, beſides the other in her Life time. The Thalmudiſts ‖‖‖ who are zealous Aſſertors of Polygamy, teach, that it is lawful for a Man to have a Hundred Wives at the ſame time, and that the firſt hath not Right to oppoſe it, provided the Husband keeps and cloathes them, and gives them ſome mark of conjugal Love, as belongs to every one of them. They think, that the Examples of David and Solomon warrant them in that; and infer, that the Saducees, who oppoſe theſe venerable Authorities, are Hereticks with relation to Matrimony.

19. It is ſaid, that they were very ſevere with reference to the puniſhment of Crimes; and that they thence borrow'd their Names of Juſt *; but beſides that they were made Judges againſt their Wills, Joſephus † ſays, that the Saducees were oblig'd to be very complaiſant to the Phariſees. Theſe laſt had the greateſt ſway; and when the Saducees were made Magiſtrates againſt their Will, they were forc'd to ſtoop, and follow the advice of the Phariſees. This is not properly doing Juſtice. St. Jerome made another Conjecture. For ‖ he imagines that they were call'd Saducees, or Juſt, becauſe they had attain'd a perfect Righteouſneſs by their fulfilling of the Law. But beſides, that this ſuits better to the Phariſees, who boaſted that they had fulfill'd the Law; it is well known, that Tſadoc gave this Sect this Name, and therefore we ought not to look for another Etymology.

20. Farther, there are very different Opinions concerning their Morals. Joſephus doth not draw a very favourable Picture of them. For ‖‖‖‖ he repreſents them, as People, whoſe Morals were ſavage, and with whom Strangers cou'd have no correſpondence. They were often divided among themſelves. To explain this hideous Character, by the liberty they took to diſpute on matters of Religion, is to palliate it too much. For Joſephus, who relates theſe two Things, blames one, and praiſes the other. At leaſt he doth never ſay, that the Diverſity of Opinions, or the heat of Diſputation, occaſion'd the Diviſions that were ſo common in their Sect.

* Maim. de Solemni die Expiationum. Faſcis vi. p. 656. Tract. Jebamot c. 6. * Tſedec ſignifies Juſtice, and thence the Saducees. in Matth. 22. ‖‖‖ Joſeph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 7. p. 788. † Levit. c. 16. v. 13. ‖ Levit. c. 18. v. 18. † Joſeph. Ant. l. 18. c. 2. p. 617. ‖‖‖‖ Thalm. ‖ Hieron.

21. Some Chriſtians * make them Hogs of Epicurus, given up to Senſuality. They imagine, that as they deny'd Puniſhments and Rewards in the other World, and the Immortality of the Soul, their Doctrine led them to Licentiouſneſs. But Conſequences of this nature ought not to be inferr'd, becauſe they are often falſe. Two Things are Curbs to humane Corruption; the puniſhments of this preſent Life, and the pains of Hell. The Saducees broke down the Laſt, altho they did not meddle with the Firſt. For they believ'd neither future Rewards, nor Puniſhments; but admitted of a Providence that puniſhes Vice, and rewards Virtue during this Life. Their deſire of being happy in this World, kept them within the bounds of their Duty. A great many wou'd not concern themſelves about an eternal Felicity, cou'd they be happy in this Life. For they toil and labour for nothing elſe. So that we muſt not think, that the Saducees were looſe in their Morals, becauſe they deny'd the Immortality of the Soul, and the Eternity of Rewards, and Puniſhments. For their fear of Temporal Puniſhments, and their hopes of the Bleſſings which God beſtows in this World on thoſe that ſerve him, reſtrain'd the Corruption of their Hearts.

22. They are eſpecially unjuſtly charg'd with many Crimes. For it is ſaid † for inſtance, that Alexander Jannæus, at their Inſtigation, put Eight Hundred Phariſees to death; that before he had their Throats cut, he order'd their Wives and Children to be murder'd before them; and that during this barbarous Execution, he was at Table feaſting with his Concubines, and the Saducees. It is alſo affirm'd, that this Sect abuſing their Credit with Herod, committed a great many Crimes, and made him ſtrangle his Children, and ſtone to death Three Hundred Captains. Yet Joſephus, who was no Friend of the Saducees, lays none of theſe Things to their Charge. It is true, that Herod did not love the Phariſees, who even refus'd to take a new Oath of Allegiance to him. He had a little more kindneſs for the Saducees; but is that a ſufficient Reaſon to accuſe them of all the Crimes, which this Prince committed even in his own Family? To call Joſephus to witneſs, is to expoſe ones ſelf to be cenſur'd by all Criticks; ſince he doth not ſay one Word of all this. And to rely on the Authority of ſome Modern Rabbins, is to acknowledge, that there is no ancient Authority to make it out; and to make an Oſtentation of Learning, and do a kind of Injuſtice to the Saducees; ſince every body knows, that the Rabbins are their mortal Enemies, and have an Intereſt to find a Foreign motive of Herod's Hatred to the Phariſees.

CHAP. VII.

Some conſiderable Events in the Hiſtory of the Saducees; their Decay, and preſent State.

I. A General Notion of this Chapter. II. Whether the Saducees have been condemn'd as Hereticks. III. This prov'd to be falſe. IV. Bathuſées, fictitious Hereticks. V. Hircanus's Declaration in favour of the Saducees. VI. His Apology by the Proteſtants, and Roman Catholicks. VII. The Refutation of this Apology. VIII. Ariſtobulus and Alexander Friends to the Saducees. IX. A Diſpute concerning Traditions. X. The Condition of the Saducees under Alexander Jannæus. XI. They are Maſters of the Sanhedrim. A Diſpute concerning the manner, that Criminals were burn'd. XII. Caiaphas, and Ananus High-Prieſts, were Saducees. XIII. Whether they were all cut off at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. XIV. They appear'd again in Egypt in the third Century. XV. Ammonius writes againſt them. The time wherein he liv'd. XVI. A Novel of Juſtinian againſt them. XVII. Whether Ananus reſtor'd that Sect in the ſixth Century. XVIII. Alphrag's Diſpute in the twelfth Century. His Arguments againſt the Rabaniſts. XIX. Whether there be a Sect of Saducees among the Mahometans. XX. Whether they can be confounded with the Manichees of Bagdet. XXI. The Saducees are but little known at this time.

1. THE Saducees made up a conſiderable part of the Jewiſh Nation whilſt Chriſt was upon Earth. They had already ſome High-Prieſts at their Head, and they alſo had ſome others ſince that time. Perſons of Quality willingly crowded into a Society, which rid them of the gnawing Fears of Futurity, and confin'd their Thought to this preſent World. The Goſpel teaches us, that their Arguments were ſubtle, and the Objections they offer'd to Chriſt againſt the Reſurrection, plauſible, and dazling. It is ſaid, that they periſh'd immediately after the death of the Saviour of the World. But this is a Miſtake: For they were powerful until the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. They were involv'd in the ruin of their Country; yet they have from time to time made a Figure, notwithſtanding the conſtant Perſecutions of the Phariſees. And this is what we are going to relate in few Words.

2. It is aſſerted, that the Saducees are the only Hereticks among the Jews; becauſe that Church, jealous of the Purity of her Tenets, ſolemnly condemn'd them as ſoon as they appear'd. Tſadoc and Baithos, who made another Branch of Saduceiſm, are always odious to that Nation. It is added, that the Doctors do not agree about the Title of Epicurean. They give it ſometimes to them, who read prophane Authors; ſometimes to Writers of Magick; ſometimes to thoſe who deſpiſe the Sages, and their Deciſions: And altho others apply it to thoſe, who pronounce the Name of Jehovah; yet it is certain, that it is more eminently given to the Saducees, as well as that of Minim or Hereticks. A Rabbin, who derives this Word from the Hereſiarch Manes, is groſsly miſtaken. For the Saducees were condemn'd, and had the ignominious Title of Hereticks a long time before. The Jewiſh Church ſpar'd the other Sects, that aroſe in her; becauſe they were purer and leſs dangerous. But ſhe cou'd not endure thoſe, who deny'd the Exiſtence of Spirits, the Reſurrection of the Body, and future Rewards and Puniſhments.

3. People argue upon what ſhou'd be. But they are often miſtaken, when they prefer concerning Hiſtorical Facts, the Rules of good Senſe and Reaſon to the Teſtimony of Hiſtorians. Neither the Church, nor Mankind, are always what they ought to be. The Errours of the Saducees were ſo groſs, that it is very ſtrange, that they were not condemn'd as ſoon as they were broach'd; and that the Jewiſh Church which had not as yet broken her Covenant with God, had ſo little Zeal for Truth, and ſo much Indifferency for Religion, to cheriſh in her Boſom a ſet of Men who openly undermin'd it. However, read the Goſpel, * Helvicus Villemer Diſſ. Philol. de Saduc. Wittemb. Anno 1680. † Helvicus Villemer Diſſ. Philol. de Saduc. Wittemb. 1680.

and

and you'll ſee the Saducees praying in the Temple with other Sects, miniſtring at the Altar, and ſacrificing with the reſt of their Nation. It is true, that temporal Rewards and Puniſhments kept the Saducees within bounds. But as they deny'd Hell and Heaven, they deſtroy'd the fear of Futurity, and broke down the greateſt Fence that God hath put againſt Vice and Impenitency. They did not as the Epicureans, juſtle Providence out of the World; yet they dug up the very Foundations of Piety, by looking upon the Eternity of Happineſs and Miſery as a Fiction. So that theſe Errours were dangerous enough to deſerve a thundering Sentence againſt them from the Sanhedrim. But whether that Aſſembly was not inſtituted, when Saduceiſm appear'd, or that they were us'd to ſee it in the Church, when Gabinius eſtabliſh'd that Council ſome Years before the coming of Chriſt, the Sanhedrim did not think fit to condemn it. Thoſe that ſay it, can neither produce the Decree, whereby they were condemn'd, nor offer any ſolid Arguments againſt the Goſpel, which ſhews us the reaſon of the Saducees riſing againſt Jeſus Chriſt with the Phariſees, and the reſt of the People, that worſhip'd at Jeruſalem. They had ſome High-Prieſts of their own, till that great City was deſtroy'd. The Rabbins, that call them Hereticks, are in the right; but they came afterwards, and they did not think it neceſſary, that the Church ſhou'd condemn an Opinion, to make it Heretical. Hereſy depends on the importance and nature of the Errour independently of Anathema's, and the thundering Sentences of Eccleſiaſtical Aſſemblies: But then the Phariſees and Eſſenes ſhou'd alſo be rank'd among Hereticks.

4. Criticks have made a ſecond Sect of Saducees. Baithos was their Head, and Contemporary and Aſſociate of Tſadoc. But theſe two Chiefs differ'd; becauſe Baithos believ'd the Reſurrection of the Dead, which the other publickly deny'd. Others affirm, that it is the ſame Sect, which prefer'd the Name of Tſadoc to that of Baithos; becauſe the laſt was a Baſtard; and that the illegitimate Birth of the Head had ſully'd the whole Sect. Maimonides makes only one Sect of them, which were indifferently call'd Saducees, and Bathuſées: The Sages call'd them ſo, but they were call'd in Egypt Caraites. Maimonides's Miſtake is palpable. For the Saducees differ'd very much from the Caraites; and ſo learned a Man cou'd not without Injuſtice confound ſo different Sects. We ſhall ſpeak elſewhere of Fuller's Opinion, who confounds them with the Eſſenes. Let us only here obſerve, 1. That Baithos is a Man wholly unknown to Joſephus, and the Holy Writers; and that his Name is to be ſeen no where, but in the Books of the Rabbins, who ſay that he was a Baſtard. But is their Authority ſufficient to convince that he was baſely Born; and to affirm that his Diſciples, who were aſham'd of it, durſt not take his Name? The Rabbins, that are quoted to prove this, are too modern to be believ'd upon their bare Word. 2. Theſe Doctors knew ſo little of his Sect, that they often diſtinguiſh it from the Saducees, and oftner confound it too with them: So that their Teſtimony cannot fix our Opinion. Nay, we have juſt now ſeen Maimonides confounding them with the Caraites. St. Epiphanius, who lov'd to multiply the Sects of the Jews without any neceſſity, doth not ſpeak of this. Which is an evident Argument, that the Rabbins had not as yet invented it in his time; and makes me conclude that both Baithos, and his Sect, is but a Fiction.

5. So that the Saducees were neither condemn'd by the Jewiſh Church, as ſoon as they appear'd in it, nor divided into ſeveral Branches. For this Sect was always united, and powerful. Hircanus the High-Prieſt declar'd for them againſt the Phariſees. Theſe ſuſpected the Mother of this Prince of Incontinency with ſome Heathens, when they took her at Modin, which was a ſtain to his Birth. Beſides, they wou'd oblige him to chuſe either the Scepter or Tiara, the Kingdom or Prieſthood. God who inflicted ſo ſevere a Puniſhment upon a King for pretending to burn Incenſe upon the Altar, tolerated Hircanus, who did publickly exerciſe theſe two Offices; and thus deſigning to keep the Government of the Church and State in his own Hands, he was deaf to the Reproaches of the Phariſees. He was exaſperated againſt them; and put ſome to death. But the reſt fled into the Wilderneſs; and this hath made ſome fanſie that the Eſſenes came from theſe. Hircanus at the ſame time ſided with the Saducees; and order'd, upon pain of death, that the Cuſtoms of Tſadoc ſhou'd be obſerv'd. The Jews ſay, that he caus'd a Decree to be publiſh'd in all his Dominions, that all thoſe, that wou'd not receive * the Rites of Tſadoc, and Baithos, and would receive the Cuſtoms of the Sages, ſhou'd loſe their Heads. Theſe Sages whoſe Cuſtoms were not to be obſerv'd, were the Phariſees, who had afterwards that Title; becauſe their Party is uppermoſt. Let the Thing be what it will; here is the Hereſy of the Saducees eſtabliſh'd by the Authority of a High-Prieſt, who upon pain of death condemn'd Traditions.

6. There hath been a great deal of Pains taken to juſtify Hircanus, whom Joſephus repreſents as a Saint, to whom God beſtow'd the Gift of Prophecy, and reveal'd what was to come.

Firſt, a famous Proteſtant † believ'd, that this Prince was malitiouſly deſcrib'd as a Saducee, only to make him odious to the Nation; whereas he was but a Caraite, very zealous for the Holy Scripture, an Enemy to the Traditions that were added to it, and who, unable to endure the Phariſees, becauſe they wou'd tyranize over the Conſcience of Kings, and were Maſters of the Traditions, which he did not admit, was oblig'd to baniſh them: And yet it is not likely, that ſo great a Prince, and a High-Prieſt wou'd have deny'd the Exiſtence of Souls, and the Eternity of Torments.

Secondly, ‖ Some cannot endure, that one, who was head of the Church, and ſat in Moſes's Chair, ſhou'd have err'd. Albert the Great, far from looking upon him as the Patron and Head of the ancient Hereticks, believ'd him a Saint, and invok'd him with the reſt of the Maccabees. His Fall can't |||| be deny'd; but it is compar'd with that of Solomon, who recover'd himſelf by a ſincere Repentance. It is ſaid, that he condemn'd the Phariſees, yet did never approve the Hereſy; that on the contrary he gave a free liberty of Conſcience to thoſe who had a mind to join with the Eſſenes, who had their private Aſſemblies. He did not decide, that the Errours of the Saducees were neceſſary to Salvation. He did not pronounce his Judgment as High-Prieſt, but as a private Doctor; and God, who ſaw that his Conduct might be of ill conſequence to the Church, took him out of the World, and ſhortn'd both his Reign and High-Prieſthood.

7. A ſecret Intereſt to maintain the Infallibility, which ſome wou'd aſcribe to the Synagogue, and its Chiefs, makes them apply moſt of theſe Diſtinctions to Hircanus, which have been lately invented. But notwithſtanding their ſubtle Arguments, this Prince's Fall can't be diſſembl'd; and therefore to place him among the Saints whom they invoke, without knowing either the Judgment or Will of God, is to love to multiply the Objects of their Devotion, and the bleſſed Spirits in Heaven, and to ſin with a great deal of Temerity. Joſephus was zealous for the Maccabees, cabees, and had always a mighty Veneration for their Memory. He look'd upon Hircanus as one of the Heroes, and Deliverers of his Nation, and ſpeaks of him as of a Saint who had ſome Revelations, and the Gift of Prophecy. So that this Hiſtorian cannot be accus'd either of having deſign'd to render him odious to Poſterity, or of Ignorance; ſince he did not live long after this Prince. Nevertheleſs, he leaves him ſully'd with the Stain, that we aſcribe him; and affirms, that he declar'd for the Saducees, whilſt he perſecuted their Enemies, the Phariſees. Joſephus, who had ſtudy'd all theſe Sects, knew them too well to be miſtaken. He was almoſt Hircanus's Contemporary, and makes him a Saducee. How then can his Teſtimony, and ſo ſure an Authority be diſputed upon ſome vain diſtinctions? It is true, that this Hiſtorian makes Hircanus a Prophet; but it was becauſe he did not think the Gift of Prophecy inconſiſtent with Errour; ſince he aſcribes the ſame Gift to the Eſſenes, who had adopted ſeveral heatheniſh Rites. This ſhews, that the Errours of the Saducees were neither thought very dangerous Hereſies, nor condemn'd by the Church; ſince they were attributed to Hircanus the High-Prieſt.

* R. Abrah. Ben Dior Cabbala apud Trigl. de S. Caræor. c. 6. p. 49. † Trigl. ibid. p. 50. ‖ Bartolocci Bib. Rabb. t. 1. p. 379. |||| Serarius Trihær. l. 2. c. 28. p. 102. nov. Edit. 1703.

8. His Son Ariſtobulus took the advice of the Phariſees, and did not put his hand to the Cenſer; yet he wag'd a cruel War with them. Alexander, who ſucceeded his Brother, continu'd to maintain the Saducees till about the time of his Death. For then perceiving that the Phariſees were beſt belov'd by the People, he adviſ'd the Princeſs his Wife to ſhift ſides. She did it, and in her Reign the Phariſees being rais'd to the higheſt pitch of Power, oppreſs'd their Enemies. Theſe even became ſo odious for ſome time, that their Followers, who were promoted to the High-Prieſthood and Magiſtracy, durſt do nothing but what the Phariſees pleas'd, leaſt they ſhou'd expoſe themſelves to publick Hatred.

9. The Saducees had a famous * Conference with their Enemies before the Deſtruction of the Second Temple. This Diſpute, if we believe the Jews, was about the neceſſity of Traditions. The Phariſees, who aſſerted them, made uſe of theſe Two Arguments; One, that the Law was deficient in ſeveral Articles, which were neceſſary to be known. As for Inſtance, the Law did not preſcribe what was to be done to a Man, that had loſt all his Teeth, and had broken one of his Adverſaries; and to a Blind Man, who had put out the Eye of another. They alledg'd for their Second Argument theſe Words of God to Moſes, † I will give thee a Law and Commandments that thou mayſt teach them. The Law, ſay they, is written, and we muſt underſtand by the Commandments the Tradition that was verbally intruſted to Moſes. It is ſtrange, that ſuch Proofs ſhou'd be made uſe of to ground Traditions upon; and that the Law ſhou'd be accus'd of Imperfection upon Principles of this nature. It is yet more ſurprizing, that ſuch Arguments ſhou'd be tranſmitted to Poſterity, as if they were irrefragable. Nevertheleſs, the Rabbaniſts affirm, that to perpetuate the Memory of their Victory, they order'd that the 15*th* Day of the Month Thammus, which anſwers to July, ſhou'd be celebrated as a Feſtival, during which it wou'd be unlawful either to ſhed Tears, or grieve. Some Criticks find in this Relation, the Caraites, inſtead of the Saducees; and make uſe of this Story to prove their Antiquity. It muſt be confeſs'd, that the Diſpute being only about Traditions, which were the only cauſe of the Separation of the Caraites, there are ſome grounds to believe, that theſe maintain'd the Conference in queſtion. But as we there find the Name of Bathuſees, we durſt not alter it. Beſides, this Story is ſo uncertain, that it affords no convincing Proof, ſuppoſing that it was transferr'd from the Saducees to the Caraites.

10. Maimonides ‖ relates too, that in the Reign of Alexander Jannæus, the Saducees ſeiz'd upon all the Offices of the Sanhedrim; and that Simeon the Son of Scerab was the only Perſon in it, that was for Traditions. As it was the Cuſtom to propoſe ſome Queſtions to the Sanhedrim, and that every one gave his Opinion to decide them; Simeon propos'd to the Saducees, that none ſhou'd be admitted into the Council, who cou'd not ſolve by the Law the Queſtions propos'd. He by this means drove out of the Sanhedrim all the Saducees one after another; becauſe they cou'd not quote ſome places of the Law to prove their Aſſertions. The Traditioniſts, whom he always calls Iſraelites, were again reſtor'd to the Council; and the Day that the Saducees were expell'd, which happen'd the 28*th* of the Month Thebet, which anſwers to February, was celebrated as a Feſtival.

11. However, the Saducees not long after recover'd the Authority they had loſt, at leaſt if we believe their Adverſaries. For the Thing in queſtion being how Criminals were to be burn'd, R. Eleazar alledg'd a Fact, whereof he had been an Eye-witneſs in his Infancy, Forty Years before the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. The Daughter of a Prieſt arraign'd for Whoredom, was condemn'd to be Burn'd. Some Branches were gather'd for a Funeral Pile, wherein ſhe was conſum'd. This Fact puzzl'd the Doctors, who believ'd, that this kind of Puniſhment was not lawful. For the Criminal was commonly put into Dung; he had a Napkin ty'd ſtrait about his Neck, that his Mouth being open, the melted Lead which was pour'd into it, might go in and burn his Vitals, They pretended, that they borrow'd this kind of Puniſhment from God himſelf; becauſe the Scripture ſays, that a Fire from the Lord |||| conſum'd Nadab and Abihu; yet they did not appear burn'd, ſince they were carry'd in their Shirts out of the Camp; and Tradition teaches, that they were burn'd inwardly. But God did not deſign to give thereby either a Law, or an Example. It was a wonder, that cou'd not be copy'd. There was in this no Lead melted; and it was the Fire of the Altar deſign'd to burn the Incenſe, which unexpectedly choak'd thoſe, who had offer'd ſtrange Fire. However, the Example quoted by Eleazar puzzl'd the Doctors, becauſe he propos'd a Tradition different from theirs. Three Things were anſwer'd to his Objection. One, that Eleazar was but young, when he ſaw the Executiou of the Daughter of the Prieſt, that was burn'd with ſome Vine Branches; and that the Teſtimony of a Child ought not to be allow'd: The Other, that the Samaritans preſided at that Judgment; which is ridiculous, ſince the Thing happen'd at Jeruſalem, the firſt Year that Chriſt enter'd into his Miniſtery, at which time the Samaritans had no Privilege in Jeruſalem. Laſtly, it was anſwer'd, that the Saducees pronounc'd the Sentence, and that as they allow'd but what was contain'd in Scripture, and had no regard to Tradition, it was no ſtrange thing that they ſwerv'd from it. If this Fact be true, the Saducees had then more Votes in the Sanhedrim than the Phariſees, and, as we have ſaid, triumph'd over their Adverſaries.

12. Caiaphas, who condemn'd Chriſt to death, was a Saducee, as it appears by the acts of the Apoſtles *. The Saducees had afterwards another High-Prieſt of their Sect nam'd Ananus, who was a cruel and bloody Man. He took advantage of the Death of Feſtus, and the Abſence of Albinus, who was coming from Alexandria to take poſſeſſion of his Government, * Megillat. Taanit. c. iv. † Exod. 24. 12. ‖ Maimon. Hilc. Sanh. c. 11. 553. Vitringa de Syn. l. 1. c. 7. p. 160.

|||| Levit. 10. 2. * Acts 5. 17.

to

to call the Council together, and to put St. James to death. His hasty Proceedings offended Albinus; who in a huff depriv'd him of the High-Priesthood a little after his Arrival. At least Saduceism triumph'd whilst he was High-Priest.

13. The Destruction of Jerusalem weaken'd this Sect extreamly. Some Criticks affirm, that it was intirely involv'd in it; and that this is the reason that no Copy of the Bible remains, that was peculiar to any Saducee; because they were all consum'd in the Conflagration of that great City, and their Sect having never recover'd that fall, we cou'd not have any of their Books. But the Saducees had the same Fate as other Sectaries, who cou'd scarce recover themselves after the general Desolation of Judæa; and the Number of the Saducees being always inferiour to that of the Pharisees, they found more Difficulty to appear again, and be considerable in their Nation, that is so overwhelm'd with Calamity. Nevertheless notwithstanding the obscurity and distance of Time, which have depriv'd us of several ancient Monuments, we from time to time discover them.

14. A modern * Author affirms, that they appear'd so formidable at the beginning of the third Century, that Ammonius, who saw them teaching in Egypt, where they were retir'd, writ against them. He unfolds the Method, which Ammonius follow'd in that Book. The Saducees deny'd the fundamental Points of Religion, Yet they maintain'd themselves against the Pharisees; because they were included in the old Covenant. Whereas Ammonius successfully made use of the Light, which the Gospel had spread over these Truths, which did seem doubtful or ambiguous to the Jews, and especially to the Saducees, who had taken thence occasion to make a Schism and a Sect of their own.

15. I will take no notice of the Fault already observ'd about the time wherein Ammonius liv'd. It is plac'd at the beginning of the third Century, in the Year 320, or 330. But this is a fault of Impression, and it is not fair to lay a Mistake, occasion'd by a Cypher's being misplac'd, to the charge of a Man, who expresses himself clearly. We must rather observe, that Ammonius liv'd a little later, than is commonly set down; since Dionysius Alexandrinus directed a Letter to him against Sabellius, which gave occasion to suspect this great Bishop of Heresy, and oblig'd him to make his Apology. This Circumstance shews, that Ammonius taught at Alexandria, at the time that Dionysius was Bishop of it.

As Ammonius's Book is lost; it can't be guess'd what method he took against the Saducees. But that which is ascrib'd to him was not good. To make use against Hereticks, of an Authority which they do not acknowledge, is to confess that one doth not design to convince or convert them. The Arguments of St. Paul, or of Christ, about the Resurrection of the Dead, were of no force against the Saducees; since they did not acknowledge those two Doctors; and the Light which the Gospel cast upon that Tenet cou'd not enlighten them, since they shut both this Book and their Eyes, that they might not see it. In order to convince the Saducees, Arguments ought to have been taken, either from Reason, or the Old Testament, which prove the Immortality of the Soul, and future Rewards and Punishments. However, one of these Methods must not be attributed to Ammonius preferably to the other, since we are wholly ignorant of what he writ.

16. It is more certain, that the Emperour Justinian † spoke of them in his Novels, wherein he banishes them out of all his Dominions, and commands that they who taught some certain Tenets of Impiety and Atheism, shou'd be put to death. For they deny'd the Resurrection, and the Last Day of Judgment. So that this Sect was in Being at that time; but it was still wretched.

17. Justinian's Decree, was a new Calamity to this Sect, that was already very weak. For the Christians using themselves to look upon the Saducees as a Set of impious Men, who deserv'd the worst of Punishments; they were oblig'd to fly, and to forsake the Roman Empire, which was of a vast Extent. They found some new Adversaries in other Places, where the Pharisees were settl'd. So that it was wandering and fugitive, when Ananus gave it some Reputation about the middle of the Eighth Century ‖. At least ‖‖ the Jewish Historians say, that this Man whom they call Annen, a Disciple of the great Light, Juda Nachmanides revolted from his Master, who was head of the Academy of Sora, and declar'd for the Saducees. They had been mightily reduc'd, since the destruction of Jerusalem; but they yet subsisted, and Annen restor'd them again, and confirm'd them in their Opinion. For he protected them as long as he liv'd. But the Caraites deny this, and complain that their chief Patrons were taken away from them out of Jealousy, that they may afterwards be confounded with the Saducees. Some Christians join with the Caraites, and look upon Ananus as the Father of these Last, and the Founder of their Sect. But as we are to examine their Origin in the following Chapter, we'll only observe here, that Ananus was neither the Restorer of the Saducees, not Father of the Caraites, who were much older than he; but that he restor'd this Sect, that was oppress'd by their Enemies.

18. There is another potent Patron ascrib'd to the Saducees, who flourish'd in the Twelfth Century, and stoutly maintain'd their Interest in Spain. Alphrag, which was the Name of this famous Doctor, asserted against the Pharisees, his Adversaries, that the Jewish Church was only to be found in his Sect; and prov'd, by some publick Writings, the Insignificancy of Traditions, which were multiply'd ad infinitum. He exclaim'd against a great many Ceremonies which were needlesly impos'd on the Jews. A Rabbin, who is call'd Haravad, because these Four Words, Abraham, Ben, David, Halevy, are abbreviated, answer'd this Head of the Saducees by a Treatise, wherein he shew'd, that his Doctrine was by a continued Succession handed down to the Year 1167. Besides, the Argument, that he drew from the Succession of Doctors, and his Doctrine; he added, that Universality was a demonstration against the Saducees, and that there was such an Universality, since all the Synagogues in the World taught his Doctrine. Which shews plainly, that these very Arguments, and Prejudices, are made use of in all Communions. They are only alter'd, put in a Dress suitable to the taste of the present Age, and are happily apply'd according to the circumstances of the Times. But Truth and Falshood put on the same Garments. Alphrag wou'd not yield to these Prejudices, which he found so empty. The Pharisees were oblig'd to encounter him again, but cou'd not foil him. He dy'd, and left some Disciples, who afterwards asserted his Doctrine. There are as yet at this time some Saducees in Africa, who deny the Immortality of the Soul, and the Resurrection of the Body; but they are but few. Some even pretend, that Alphrag's Conferences concern'd the Caraites, more than the Saducees.

19. It is said, that there is among the Mahometans a Sect of Saducees, who are even to this Day call'd Zindikites, and believe neither Providence, nor Resurrection of the Dead. But this is a Mistake occasi-

* Essays of Literature, an. 1704. p. 190. ‖‖ Ganz. Tsemach David, p. 125. † Justinian Authent. Collat. 9. t. 27. Nov. 146. p. 614. ‖ An. 755.

on'd

on'd by Giggoius, who explain'd the term Zindig, by that of Saducee. It is true, that ſome Interpreters * have been of this Opinion; but this Term rather denotes the Magi, Diſciples of Zoroaſtres, and Worſhipers of Fire. For this Name is borrow'd out of two Books of Zoroaſtres, which contain all the Religion of the Magi, which are call'd † Zend, and Pazend. Beſides, the Sect of the Zindikites believes the Tranſmigration of Souls. It was this Sect, which for that reaſon gathering together in the City of Haſcemia, that was the Capital City of Almanſor, wou'd have ſome Proceſſions about the Califf, like thoſe, which are made about the Temple of Meccha, becauſe they affirm'd that the Soul of Ali, was tranſlated into the Califf; who, offended at this Impiety, order'd a Hundred of the forwardeſt to be ſeiz'd. The reſt took a Coffin, and appear'd before the Priſon Gates, as if they deſign'd to bury ſome body. The Gates were open'd to them, and they all ruſh'd in, and carry'd away the Priſoners, and went together to Almanſor's Palace to kill him; but he and his People made ſo vigorous a Defence, that they were repuls'd. However, as he did not think himſelf ſecure in his Capital City, he built Bagded, that he might retire thither. The Sect of the Zindikites was compos'd of People, that believ'd the Tranſmigration of Souls, and it was wrong to make them a company of Saducees.

20. Neither do I believe, that they ought to be confounded with the Manichees, that Hadi Almanſor's Grand-Son order'd to be hang'd at Bagded. I acknowledge, that they were call'd Zendik, which is the Name of the Saducees. But if I am not miſtaken, this Name among the Orientals is common to all Hereticks. At leaſt the Tenets, which are aſcrib'd to the Saducees of Bagded, did not belong to the Sect of that Name. On the contrary, they taught, that Men ſhou'd labour for the World to come, and contemn the Goods of this: Whereas the Saducees minding nothing but the Goods and Evils of this Life, had no thoughts of Futurity. Add, that theſe Doctors, who wou'd have their Diſciples keep themſelves from the Vulgar, and never eat any Meat, acknowledg'd two Principles, one Good, the other Bad; Light, and Darkneſs. So that they were rather Manichees. Hadi the Fourth Califf of the Family of the Abbaſides, found them near Bagded, and purſuant to his Father's Orders directed to him, he had a Thouſand Gibbets ſet up near that City, whereon all theſe Saducees, or rather Manichees, that cou'd be found, were hang'd.

21. So that it muſt be confeſs'd, that except ſome places of Africa, there are no Saducees now found any where, that meet in a body together. They might formerly live in the ſame Church and Temple with the Jews; but their ſmall Number hath made them ſo odious and contemptible, that they are not now tolerated. So that none, but ſome looſe Fellows, and pretended Wits, cheriſh theſe Errours in private, and thereby keep up the Succeſſion of Saduceiſm. But theſe cannot be follow'd through thoſe dark Paths; therefore let us come to the Caraites, who have often been confounded with theſe Hereticks.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Caraites. Of their particular Tenets.

I. Whether the Caraites deſcended from the Ten Tribes. The Language of the Lithuanian Caraites agree with that of the Tartars. II. Whether they be as ancient as Ezra. III. A Catalogue found at Grand Cairo of their Doctors ſince Ezra. IV. The Rabbins place them in the Reign of Alexander the Great. A groſs Miſtake. V. Abravanel confounds them with the Saducees. VI. He is confuted. VII. Whether they rejected Saduceiſm out of Policy. VIII. They deſpiſe Tranſlations. IX. Their Averſion for Traditions prov'd. X. Mr. Simon's Arguments to the contrary refuted. XI. Of Intercalations. The Method, that the Jews obſerv'd to find out the New Moon. XII. The Caraites reject the Aſtronomical Tables. XIII. Some Diſputes and Stories of the Jews concerning Intercalations. XIV. The Caraites oppoſe them. XV. Their Reaſons. XVI. The Anſwer of the Rabbaniſts. XVII. The Antiquity of Intercalation ill prov'd. XVIII. Some Diſputes about Inceſt. XIX. Their Notion of God, his Operations, and Grace. XX. Of the Meſſiah. XXI. Their way of Worſhip. XXII. Their Feſtivals and Rites. XXIII. The Purity of their Morality concerning Temperance.

1. THE Caraites were doubtleſs a conſiderable Party, and if we believe ſeveral Caraite Authors, this wou'd be the Oldeſt of all the Jewiſh Sects. For they affirm, that they came from Ezra. They prove the Succeſſion of their Church ſince that time by an exact Catalogue of all thoſe who have either taught, or oppos'd Caraiſm.

Were they believ'd, we ſhou'd go yet higher. For thoſe that are at this time in Poland, and Lithuania, maintain, that they are deſcended from the Ten Tribes, which were carry'd away by Shalmaneſer; and went into Tartary. They therefore ſpeak the ſame Language as the Tartars, and Turks; || and their Tranſlations of the Scripture, which they read in their Synagogues, are in that Tongue.

But we can't very well rely on theſe Obſervations. We ſhall ſee hereafter, what is become of the Ten Tribes, which never went into Tartary; and altho it were true, that the Verſions of the Lithuanian Caraites have a great affinity with the Turkiſh Language, we ought not to wonder at it; becauſe they have had great Correſpondence with the Mahometans. There are ſome Jews at Conſtantinople, ſince the time of Conſtantin, who might borrow ſome Words of their laſt Maſters; but the Learned |||| ſay, that there is but little affinity between the Turkiſh Language, and that of the Lithuanian Caraites; and that to find it, all the Words muſt be plainly alter'd.

2. It is alſo wrong to derive them from Ezra, and we need but know the Foundation of this Sect, to be convinc'd of the contrary. For theſe pretended Hereticks, oppos'd other Doctors meerly becauſe theſe made Traditions equal to Scripture, and boaſted of an Oral Law given by Moſes. But Traditions did not begin to be in vogue among the Jews, but a long while after Ezra, who only gave them the Law to regulate their Behaviour. An Errour is not oppugn'd, till it hath appear'd, and a Tenet contradicted, till it be publickly taught. So that the Caraites cou'd not make a particular Sect, till they ſaw the Practice and Number of Traditions ſwell to that degree, that there was reaſon to fear leaſt Religion might be endanger'd by it.

3. It is true, that a Caraite * very well vers'd in the Oriental Languages, who had travell'd all over the Eaſt, to collect the Monuments of his Sect, maintains that

* Pietro de la Valle, Voyages. † The Year of the Hegira 140. Jeſus Chriſt, 762. Herbelot Bibl. Orient. p. 552. & 929. || Peringerus ad Lud. apud Schupart. |||| Scupart. Cht. Hakkarim ſeu Secta Charræorum Diſſertationibus aliquot Philologicis adumbrata, Jenæ 1701. * Moſes Beſchitſi.

that the Catalogue, which they produce of their Doctors ſince Ezra, is true and genuine. Nay, it is ſaid, * that it was found at Grand Cairo, written upon the Skin of a Fiſh; and was there carefully preſerv'd for ſeveral Ages. But is not this Romantick?

However, we muſt do the ſame Juſtice to the Rabbaniſts. Both Parties ſhew the Catalogue of the Doctors, who continuing the Succeſſion of their Church, have either maintain'd, or oppos'd Traditions. Theſe two Catalogues muſt be equally either receiv'd or rejected. For they are grounded on the ſame Proofs, and claim the ſame Antiquity.

4. The Rabbins derive their Enemies from another Original; but betray at the ſame time their groſs Ignorance. For they make them appear in the time of Alexander the Great; and ſay, that when this Prince came into Jeruſalem, Jaddus the High-Prieſt was then the Head of the Rabbaniſts, or Traditioniſts; and Ananus and Caſcanatus were conſiderable Patrons of the Caraites; and that God declar'd for the Firſt. For Jaddus perform'd a Miracle before Alexander; whereas Ananus and Caſcanatus ſhew'd their Inſufficiency; And indeed they were Hereticks, whoſe Memory ought to rot. But this is a palpable Errour. For Ananus the Patron of the Caraites, whom the Rabbins give out to have been Contemporary of Alexander the Great, liv'd only in the Eighth Century of the Chriſtian Church.

5. Laſtly, They are look'd upon as a Branch of the Saducees. Moſt of the Ancients, and Moderns, confound them with theſe Hereticks. Abravanel † who writ againſt them about the neceſſity of an Intercalation, aſſerts, that the Jewiſh Church had made a very good uſe of Aſtronomical Calculations, for the ſpace of Eleven Hundred Years from Moſes to Antigonus, the Head of the Captivity, Prince of the Sanhedrim, and had Baithos and Tſadoc for his Diſciples; and that the Enemies to Traditions ſprung from them. They are alſo ſaid to agree in their Tenets. For in the famous Book ‖ Intitul'd, The Victory over Chriſtians; becauſe Lipmannus, who writ it, pretends to have defeated them with ſome Paſſages from all the Books of the Holy Scripture; the neceſſity of Traditions is often prov'd againſt the Saducees. "Some things, ſays "he to them, may be done, that are not commanded "in the Law, ſince Elijah offer'd Sacrifices in another "place than in the Temple. What is wanting in the "Law muſt alſo be ſupply'd. For Joſhua ſays, that he "took Achan and his Children, and that they were "burn'd; which, ſays he, is falſe, if we ſtick exactly to the Letter, as the Saducees do. For the Children of Achan cou'd not be puniſh'd; ſince they "were not guilty of their Father's Sin; but the Beaſts "were burnd, and Joſhua took the Children to inſtruct "them. His Proof is weak, and Explication falſe. But it is no matter. Let us only obſerve two Things. One, that the Caraites are confounded with the Saducees, becauſe they had the ſame Opinion of Traditions: The Other, that Abravanel derives them from the ſame Original. And yet theſe two Things are evidently falſe.

6. For Abravanel, who places Antigonus at the Head of the Sanhedrim, left him out in the Catalogue of the Sucеſſors of Ezra, who were to have preſerv'd Tradition. So that he forgot himſelf. Add, that he makes him a Prince of the Sanhedrim, that was not then inſtituted. For had there been a Great Council at that time, Simeon II. had been Preſident of it before him. He ſays, that Antigonus liv'd Eleven Hundred Years after Moſes altho he liv'd near three Hundred Year after the time that he ſets down. He makes him a Chief of the Captivity, when that of Babylon was long before over, and the People, who were return'd to Jeruſalem, enjoy'd a full Liberty under the High-Prieſts. Laſtly, Tſadoc was the Father ‖‖‖ of the Saducees, but he had no Affinity with the Caraites, whoſe Origin is of an older Date, as we ſhall prove hereafter, by following the Steps of a Judicious Critick, who ſtudy'd that matter better than had been hitherto done.

7. The Caraites are charg'd * with having follow'd all the Doctrine of Tſadoc and of his Diſciples. But it is added, that they vary'd from them afterwards; becauſe they perceiv'd that this Syſtem render'd them odious; and therefore they rejected part of it, and only oppos'd Tradition, and the Oral Law, that was added to the Scripture. Yet the Caraites never deny'd the Immortality of the Soul; and none of their Writings can be produc'd, wherein this Errour is aſſerted. On the contrary, the Caraite quoted by Father Simon †, believ'd that the Soul comes from Heaven, as the Body is of the Nature of Sublunary Beings; and that the Soul ſubſiſts as the Angels, and that the World to come was made for the Soul ‖.

The Caraites have not only confuted this Accuſation, which they look'd upon as the greateſt Affront that cou'd be put upon them; but they alſo maintain, by way of Recrimination, that their Enemies were rather to be ſuſpected of Saduciſm than they; ſince they believe that the Souls ſhall be annihilated, after they have ſuffer'd for ſome Years the Pains and Tortures of Hell. Laſtly, They reckon neither Baithos not Tſadoc as their Anceſtors, or Founders of their Sect. Thoſe who vindicated Cain, Judas, and Simon Magus, were not aſham'd to aſſume the Title of their own Chiefs. The Saducees adopted that of Tſadoc; But the Caraites reject and curſe it; becauſe they condemn his pernicious Opinions.

It is true, that the Rabbaniſts, who are their Enemies, have often accus'd them of having adopted the fundamental Articles of the Saducees; but Abraham Halevy hath juſtify'd them. He ought to have known the Saducees, ſince he writ againſt them. Nevertheleſs, far from confounding the Caraites with theſe Sectaries, he ſays that they differ'd very much from them, and the moderate Rabbins have follow'd this Doctor, who liv'd about the middle of the Twelfth Century.

8. And indeed the Religion of the Caraites is much purer, than that of all the reſt of the Jews; becauſe they more ſcrupulouſly ſtick to the Text of Holy Writ.

They commonly read it in Hebrew in their Synagogues; and if they have ſome Arabick and Greek Verſions, it is only out of neceſſity, that the Vulgar, which cannot always read the Original, may have the Benefit of reading them. They aſſert, that God's Meaning cannot be ſo clearly underſtood in Tranſlations, as in the Language of the Prophets.

Purius ex ipſo fonte bibuntur aquæ.

As there are in the Scripture ſome metaphorical Expreſſions, which ſeem harſh in other Tongues, and cannot be well tranſlated, they exhort Children to learn the Hebrew Tongue, that they may make uſe of it to underſtand the Holy Text.

9. They reject the Book, which we call the Apocrypha, and condemn the Traditions, that have been added to the Law. I own that this laſt Article is queſtion'd. For ſome maintain, that they cull out ſome Traditions, which ſeem to them well grounded, from thoſe, which a too preſumptuous Fancy hath tack'd to the Holy Scripture. But the Opinions of the Caraites cannot be better known, than of themselves. They acknowledge, but two Guides in Religion; One is the Lamp of Scripture; and the Other, that of the Understanding. "Truth * according to them, "is known by Reason, which draws it from the Pro- "phecies. An Argument is known to be solid, when "it agrees with the Words of a Prophet; only some "Articles are too profound for the Understanding. "However, they are receiv'd with respect; because "they were dictated by a Prophet. Cou'd Man ap- "prehend every thing, neither the Prophets, nor "Prophecies had been necessary. So that they do not explain the Scripture by Tradition, but only by the light of Reason, which serves them to understand the Words of Scripture, and to draw from the Law, some natural and necessary Conclusions.

* V. Trigland. de Caräit. c. 2. p. 182. † Abravanel. in Append. ad lib. Coſri Buxtorf. p. 451. ‖ Lipman. Nizzachon. ex Joſue, p. 154. ex editione Snellii, An. 1654. ibid. ex Libro Reg. n. 191. ‖‖‖ Trigland. Diatribe de S. Caræor. * V. Pfeifferus de Theolog. Judaïca arq; Mahomedica, Sect. 2. aſſert. 2. p. 909. t. 2. † Morin Sacr. Bibl. Sim. Crit. ‖ Leo of Modena's Supplement concerning the Caräites, p. 157. An. 1089. ‖‖‖ V. Trigland. Diat. de S. Caræor. c. 5. p. 44.

They † say this, and confirm their Opinion by some Quotations from other Doctors, who were before them. But they affirm, that every thing is written in the Law; that there is no Oral Law given to Moses on Mount Sinai; that this Oral Law, invented by the Thalmudists, is the Cause of their Separation; because they were fill'd with Horrour, when they saw, that a New Law was added to God's Law; and that Others might be added upon the same Grounds. They ask the reason, why God had been oblig'd to write part of his Laws, and conceal the Other, or trust it to Men's Memories.

They look upon the Thalmud as an Abomination, and Turpitude, which they are asham'd to divulge. However, they cry out in a fit of Zeal, O Rabbanists, I will reveal your Abominations.

Abraham Halevy, that famous Traditionist of the Twelfth Century, confesses, that they reject the Oral Law, and only draw some Inferences from the Holy Text. In a Word, F. Morin, after he maintain'd for a long time, that the Caraites made use of the Thalmud and Misnah, is forc'd to own in one of his Letters, || that they acknowledge no Tradition, and Pietro della Valle, a famous Traveller, to whom he writ, adds, that they only minded the litteral Sense of the Law, without admitting any other Interpretations, or Traditions of the Fathers.

10. To prove to the Caraites, that they make use of Tradition, because they admit of the point of Masorethes, is to abuse that Word. A Regius Professor ||| of the Hebrew Tongue at Paris, deny'd, that they us'd these Points. He says positively, "That the Ca- "raites do not put any Points in their Bibles; be- "cause they are perswaded that they come from Tra- "dition. So that they look upon the Copies of the "Scripture that have some Points as Prophane. But that is not true. For it is certain, that the Caraites admit of Points; but it doth not follow from thence, that they own Tradition, or that they are of a newer Date than the Masorethes, who are believ'd the Inventors of Points. This was objected to them in the famous Conference of King Cozar. They did not then deny, that they receiv'd the Points; and it was concluded against them, that if Tradition was necessary for the reading of Scripture, and meer Vowels, it ought with much more reason to be so too for the Tenets and Rites; since without them, what Moses said, this Month shall be unto you the first Month, can't be guess'd at. For Tradition alone teaches, whether he spoke of the Egyptian, Solar, or Lunar Months, &c. But these are Trifles, like those which the Roman Catholicks object against the Protestants, when they handle the same Controversy. The Caraites are introduc'd, saying, that after they had receiv'd the Tradition in one Article, they were not oblig'd to receive it in all others. But this Answer is suspicious; since it is only found in their Enemies Writings, who design'd to triumph over them. The Protestants, who are as zealous a the Caraites against Traditions, do yet admit of certain Customs, which were practis'd from the first Centuries to this. They follow some Interpretations of Scripture taken from the Fathers of the first Centuries of the Church. Lastly, they make use of Vowels and Points to read Hebrew, altho most of them contend, that they are of human and new Invention. As the Reform'd Churches are Enemies to Traditions, because they reject the Tenets that have been tack'd to those of Christ, and will not pay a blind Obedience to their Authority; the same Thing must be own'd of the Ancient and Modern Caraites, who have the same Aversion to Traditions. As it cannot be said, that the Protestants admit of Tradition, because they explain a Passage as St. Jerom explain'd it, or kneel when they repeat the Lord's Prayer, altho Christ did not enjoin it; Mr. Simon ought not to maintain that the Caraites approve of Tradition, because they admit of the Points invented by the Masorethes. For that hath no Influence on the Tenets of Religion. The Caraites do two Things. 1. They reject the important Tenets, that have been added to the Law, which is sufficient for Salvation. 2. They will not have indifferent Traditions to be upon the same Level with the Law.

11. The Caraites have been nice in some Things, even to Superstition, against Traditions; since one of their great Controversies with the Rabbanists is about the Intercalation of Months and Days. The Jewish Months were Lunar; but in order to make their Year as long as ours, and to make it agree with the Course of the Sun, they from time to time inserted a Month. Thus there were sometimes Twelve, sometimes Thirteen Months in one Year. Besides, as the First Day of every Month was solemnly kept, and that this Beginning depended upon the appearances of the Moon; care was taken to send some People on the top of Hills, to observe the first Moment that the Moon appear'd above the Horizon, and to inform the Council of it, who upon their Report, back'd with due Circumstances, * declar'd that such a Day was the New Moon, a Feast to the Lord, and the beginning of the Month. As every Thing is usually refer'd to Moses; the Rabbins say, that God shew'd him in a Vision the Figure of a New Moon, and order'd him to look upon, and fix from it the First Day of the Month, which he always practis'd. So that this was the First and most Antient way of fixing the Calends, or beginning of the Month. But the Doctors observing, that this Method was liable to several Inconveniencies, because the Moon doth not always appear above the Horison, or is not seen by reason of Clouds and Mists, especially in its First Quarter, wherein it hath but a dim and wavering Light; they endeavour'd to remedy this. But that deserves, that we shou'd insist upon it.

12. The Jews, that were transported into Babylon, and learn'd Astronomy of the Chaldeans, made more use of this Art at their Return: And that they might know the Course of the Moon, according to Astronomical Calculations; some Tables were made (which they study'd) and with which the Report of those that came from the top of the Hills, to inform the Council that they had seen the Moon appear at such an Hour, was compar'd.

13. There was besides another Difficulty concerning the beginning of the Year. The Thalmudists say, that the Great Sanhedrim met, and examin'd whether the Intercalation of the Thirteenth Month was to be made. The King, according to them, cou'd not decide this Queſtion; becauſe as he gave a certain Pay to his Forces, he wou'd have made all the Years Solar to lengthen them. The High-Prieſt, ſay they, was alſo ſuſpected; becauſe, being oblig'd to waſh himſelf ſeveral times at the Feaſt of Expiation, he had an Intereſt not to retard the Months and this Feſtival, that he might not be incommoded by cold Weather. This was therefore referr'd to the Prince of the Sanhedrim, who was neither High-Prieſt, nor King, and whoſe Province it was to decide this Queſtion. Scaliger * believ'd, that he order'd the Intercalation of the Month for the following Year. But he was miſtaken. For the Intercalation was made towards the end of the ſame Year; and after it was reſolv'd upon, it was communicated to the Jews diſpers'd into Foreign Parts. Maimonides ſets down the Formulary, which is in the Gemara. To our Brethren diſpers'd in Babylon, &c. Greeting, " Know ye, that " ſince the Lambs are as yet tender, and Pidgeons too " Lean to be employ'd in God's Service, and time of " Harveſt not ſo near; it ſeem'd good to me and my " Colleagues to add Thirty Days to this Year. This Decree was receiv'd by all the Nation with a great deal of reſpect; and tho they had perceiv'd, that the Sanhedrim had been miſtaken in its Reckoning, it was not lawful for them to ask, that its Deciſion ſhou'd be Reform'd; becauſe this Council was abſolute Judge of that Matter; and indeed, if every one had made their private Calculations, a diſmal Confuſion had happen'd in the Celebration of the Feſtivals. The Chriſtians had a Cuſtom much like this; ſince every Patriarch appointed Eaſter-Day. The Biſhop of Alexandria appointed it to his Dioceſs, and that of Rome too to his. To proceed, the Thalmudiſts affirm, that this Cuſtom laſted no longer than the Sanhedrim; and that ſince the time that this Council was diſſolv'd, it wou'd be a Crime to make theſe Intercalations, which were only allow'd in the Holy-Land; and they made uſe of a Cycle of Nineteen Years, invented by Hillel, who liv'd about the Middle of the Fourth Century of the Chriſtian Church.

* Moses Eliahu Adderet. Trigl. de S. Car. 153. † Caleb in Præf. M. S. Asarah Maamarot It. M. S. ex verbis R. Tobiæ, Trigland. Ibid. p. 117. & 125. || Ant. Eccl. Orient. Ep. 13. p. 159. & 165. ||| Apud Simonville Leo of Modena P. Supplem. of the Caraites, p. 160. * V. Cosri, P. 3. & Not. Buxt. 207, ad 213.

cide

14. The Caraites oppoſe this Opinion; and ſay, that the High-Prieſt, or ſome Prophet, was impower'd to appoint the Feſtivals and Years, during all the time that the Republick ſubſiſted: And indeed, this Prince of the Sanhedrim is a Fiction. Selden † is angry with the Roman Catholicks, who put the High-Prieſt at the Head of the Council, that they may draw from thence a Conſequence in favour of their High-Prieſt, and eſtabliſh the Eccleſiaſtical Authority over Kings, becauſe that is repugnant to the Rabbinical Tradition. But he did not take notice, that he only took his Tradition from Maimonides, who liv'd Eleven Hundred Years after the Deſtruction of the Temple; and ſo diſtant a Tradition is not ſure. The Patriarchs of Judæa, or the Princes, were not inſtituted till the High-Prieſthood was extinguiſh'd. Beſides, the Reaſons alledg'd againſt the King, and High-Prieſt, to deprive them of the Right of making Intercalations, are ſo trival, that it is not likely that they ever were made uſe of againſt them, or that the Kings, who ſway'd the Sanhedrim, and the High-Prieſts, who had ſo great a Power, had comply'd with ſo ill grounded a Law. So that the Caraites are in the right. We are only to obſerve, that they divide this Buſineſs between the High-Prieſt and a Prophet. They do not underſtand thereby a Man who was inſpir'd from Heaven, as Moſes, or Iſaiah; but a skilfull and experienc'd Man. Theſe aſſert too, that ſince the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem the New Moons muſt always be obſerv'd, becauſe that Feaſt was celebrated a long time before the People was in the Holy-Land; but they refer this Queſtion to be decided to Three able Perſons, who are choſen for that purpoſe. Laſtly, They have rejected the uſe of Aſtronomical Tables, becauſe they ſay, that the Beginning of the Month ought not to be fix'd, but when the Moon appears, and is ſeen; and that this being God's Injunction, it cou'd not be alter'd but by Humane Tradition. Whereas the Rabbaniſts object to them the neceſſity of the Intercalations of Cycles and Calculations, which are ſurer than the ſight of the Planet. Abravanel, who handl'd this Subject, aſſerted this warmly againſt the Caraites, till the End of the Fifteenth Century.

15. The Caraites ground their Opinion, 1. Upon God's Authority, who tells the || Iſraelites, before they came out of Bondage, This Month ſhall be unto you the beginning of Months, it ſhall be the Firſt Month of the Year to you. So that unleſs |||| the Law of Moſes, and the Command of God be contradicted, the Year muſt begin in the Month of March, or Niſan, when the New Moon begins to appear. For the Term which ſignifies the * Month, ſignifies too the Change of the Moon. God expreſſes himſelf clearly in another Place; ſince he plainly ſpeaks of the New Moons, that were to be conſecrated to him, and fixes the Feſtivals to the Day wherein that Planet ſhall begin to appear. 2. They upbraid their Enemies with Preſumption for altering this Cuſtom, and ſaying, that the Viſion of the Moon ceas'd with the Sanhedrim; notwithſtanding that they obſerv'd it all the time, that their Commonwealth ſubſiſted. They pretend that this Alteration happen'd but after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and when Gamaliel was Patriarch of Judæa. 3. They confute the Objection of the Rabbaniſts, who believe, that the Moon was of neceſſity to be ſeen to regulate the Beginning of the Month, only whilſt they were in the Holy Land; but then their Baniſhment and Diſperſion have cancell'd this Obligation. For according to them, Akiba did not follow the Method of the Rabbaniſts, and preferr'd that of the Caraites, even when he was out of the Holy Land. 4. Laſtly, They reject the prejudice of their Adverſaries, who affirm, that Moſes receiv'd from God the uſe of the Intercalations of the Months, and Aſtronomical Calculations, which he handed down to his Succeſſors with the reſt of the Traditions, wherewith he intruſted them. For, according to them, the Firſt Fathers of the Jewiſh Church were ſo fully perſwaded, that nothing cou'd be added to the Law; and that the Prophets themſelves had not the Privilege to make any Alteration in it, that they ſcrupl'd mightily to obſerve the Order, which Mordecai and Eſther gave to read every Year the Roll, that contain'd the Hiſtory of the Deliverance, which they had procur'd to their Nation. Had not theſe Doctors, who were ſo nice upon the bare Reading of a Hiſtory ſo glorious to their Nation, ſpoken of that of Intercalations, and Aſtronomical Supputations, which are preferr'd to the ſight of the Moon, had they been us'd in their time. And the Caraites conclude from thence, that the Rabbaniſts aſcribe a falſe Antiquity to this Cuſtom.

16. Their Enemies anſwer, that the Year begun originally in the Month of September, wherein the World was created; and altho the Authors of the Gemara have fix'd the Creation in the Month of March, yet they own, that the Beginning of the Year ought to be referr'd to September; becauſe the Conception, and Birth of Creatures ought to be diſtinguiſh'd. All Creatures have their Conception in September, wherein they caſt their Seed, and begin to bring forth in March. So that right Reaſon requires, that time ſhou'd be reckon'd from the Conception; and God,

* Scalig. Canon. Iſag. l. 3. p. 278. calcem Coſri Buxtorf. p. 444. to 1154.

† Selden de Anno Civili, c. 11. p. 63.

|| Exod. 12. 12.

|||| Abrav. ad

* רֹאשׁ ſignifies the Month, and the New Moon.

according to the Gemariſts, chang'd this Order when he created the World in the Month of March, only becauſe he choſe rather to make it appear in its Perfection. Moſes ſays indeed, that the Month of March, ſhou'd be the Firſt of the Year. But two ſorts of Beginnings muſt be again diſtinguiſh'd; one mark'd out by Nature; and the other, which proceeds of Humane Inſtitution. According to Nature, the Year ought to begin in September; but Moſes and God deſign'd, that the Memory of the going out of Egypt ſhou'd be celebrated; and therefore they inſtituted a New Beginning of the Year, which doth not cancel the Cuſtom of the Rabbaniſts. Since it was only introduc'd for a peculiar Reaſon, and God hath in it no regard to the New Moon, but to the Deliverance of his People.

As for Intercalations, the Caraites did in this reſpect ſwerve from the Rule and Uſages of the Maſters, only to ſhew a greater Averſion to all manner of Cabbala, that is of Tradition; without conſidering that they themſelves want it to regulate the courſe of Years and Months. Ptolomy, who try'd the Skill of the Jews in this Matter, had a very great value for them; and maintain'd, that the Cycle of Nineteen Years, invented by their Doctors, was a plain Demonſtration, that they had had ſome Prophets among them. The Ancients intruſted the Great Sanhedrim with the Care of this; becauſe it requir'd a great deal of Wiſdom and Exactneſs. Moſes himſelf had charg'd them with it. Tho he had not done it, it ought not to be preſum'd, that the Sanhedrim cou'd err in any thing that concern'd the Law. Abravanel too did not ground the Infallibility of the Sanhedrim, but upon a Preſumption, and a Judgment, of Charity, which doth not allow, that a venerable Aſſembly ſhou'd be ſuſpected of Errour. But ſome have ſpoken more confidently, ſince the Chriſtians have diſputed among themſelves about the Infallibility of this pretended Sanhedrim.

17. The Rabbaniſts prove, that Aſtronomical Calculations were in uſe in the time of Moſes; ſince he prais'd the People which he led for being * Wiſe and Underſtanding. The Author of the Chronicles is yet more full and expreſs, when he ſays, that the Children of Iſſachar † were Men that had Underſtanding of Times, to know what Iſrael ought to do. They quote David, who ſaid to Jonathan, ‖ To Morrow is the New Moon, and I ſhou'd not fail to ſit with the King at Meat. How cou'd he have foreſeen this, if he had not calculated the Courſe of this Planet, which had not as yet appear'd above the Horizon? They make uſe too of a natural Reaſon, deduc'd from the continual Changes of the Air, which do not often permit us to ſee the New Moon, when it is to appear; which makes the Beginning of thoſe Feaſts very uncertain. Laſtly, They maintain, that this depended of the Sanhedrim; ſince Ezechias and his Principal Officers, ſeeing that there were not Prieſts enough that were purify'd to celebrate the Feaſt of the Paſſover in the Month of Niſan, defer'd it till the next; and the Caraites blacken the Reputation of this Prince, becauſe they pretend that he trangreſs'd the Law, and that it was a Remainder of the Impiety of Ahas, which was transferr'd from the Father to the Son. The Caraites go too far. But it is certain, that Ezechias did a very bold Thing, which cou'd only be authoriz'd by meer Neceſſity; and that it was not the Sanhedrim, but the Prince, with all the Chief Officers of his Houſhold, and the People, or ‖‖ the Congregation, that order'd this Alteration. Both Parties were in the wrong. For on the one hand the Rabbaniſts make the Intercalations, that were little known in the time of David and Moſes, of too ancient a Date. On the Other, they cou'd not wholly depend upon the Appearance of the Moon. It is very likely, that the Cuſtom chang'd often. When the Jews came out of Egypt, they reckon'd by New Moons, and thereby appointed their Feſtivals; but they were not ſo ſcrupulous, as they are repreſented upon the firſt Moment that the Moon appear'd. And altho they had been miſtaken of 24 Hours, they had not been much concern'd at it. When they were in quiet Poſſeſſion of Judæa, and ſtudy'd Aſtronomy, they made uſe of it to calculate the Courſe of the Moon, and to preſume that it was to appear at ſuch an Hour. There was no difficulty, when the Aſtronomical Calculation agreed with the Appearance of the Moon. But if the Sight of it was hinder'd by a Miſt, the queſtion is, whether the Sanhedrim was to determine this Matter, or whether they ſtaid till it appear'd. I do not doubt, but the Deciſion was in favour of the Appearance of the Moon preferably to the Aſtronomical Calculation; becauſe the Determination of the Sanhedrim cou'd not in a little time be carry'd every where, to have the Celebration of the Feaſt, and the Beginning of the Year kept the ſame Day; whereas the Moon appear'd in all Places to thoſe who were upon the Hills to ſee it. The difference cou'd not be great; and it ſometimes happen'd, that the Appearance of the Moon being retarded by ſome foreign Cauſe, as the thickneſs of the Clouds, there was ſome diſorder in the Beginning of the Year, and thence in all the Feaſts: But when this Diſorder was obſerv'd, and was plain by the Appearance of the following Moon; the Errour might be reform'd, and they might ground this Reformation upon the Aſtronomical Calculations, till this Science being improv'd, ſome Intercalations and Cycles were invented. However, This Diſpute ſhews, that the Caraites very much abhorr'd the Traditions, which concern'd the Worſhip of God, and the Ceremonies of the Law; and that appear'd much more important to them, than to us.

18. The Caraites, have a Third Diſpute about Inceſt. The Rabbaniſts contend, that the Degrees forbid by the Leviticus ought not to be ſtretch'd farther, than the Terms of the Law, which muſt be exactly obſerv'd. Juda, Son of Eliezer, who handl'd * this Matter, obſerves, that there were among them three ways to diſcover the true Meaning of Scripture: The Text, Reaſon, and the Authority of the Ancients. As for the Authority of the Ancients, it is with them as with the Proteſtants, of mighty uſe to determine ſome doubtful Points; but they do not blindly follow what the Fathers have ſaid, and the Moderns have a Right to reform what the Ancients have aſſerted. This Principle is common to all Religions and Sects. The Teſtimonies of ſome Authors † are quoted to ſtrengthen an Aſſertion; but what the Caraites condemn, is the neceſſity that their Adverſaries impoſe to follow and believe them. Rome calls that the Tradition of the Fathers, and of the Church; but the Caraites have not that Notion. They argue upon ſome Text of Scripture, and draw ſome Inferences à pari, & à majori ad minus; and that eſpecially in the caſe of Inceſts, wherein they conclude, that if the Law hath forbid ſuch a degree of Conſanguinity, that which ſeems equal or nearer, ought ſo much the more to be forbid. But the Caraites do not agree among themſelves about the ſecond way of explaining the Scripture. For the Ancients believ'd, that a Conſequence might be drawn from another Conſequence; but the Moderns more judiciouſly pretend, that People ought to ſtick to the Text of the Law, and to the Conſequence which immediately flows from it, and no farther. So that examine the Caraites on every ſide, and they agree with the Proteſtants con-

* Deut. 4. 6. † Chron. 12. 32. ‖ 1 Sam. 20. 5. ‖‖ 2 Chron. 30. 2. * He intitles his Work, The Gate of Juda.
† V. Selden. Uxor. Hebr. l. 1. c. 3.

cerning

cerning the Interpretation of Scripture. We have perhaps enlarg'd too much upon this Matter; but as this Sect is but little known, we thought it our Duty to relate whatever we cou'd collect concerning it.

19. The Caraites have a very plain and pure Notion of * the Deity. For they aſcribe ſome eſſential and inſeparable Attributes to it; and theſe Attributes are nothing elſe but God himſelf: God is his Attributes; ſo that there is nothing in God, but what is God, as the Chriſtians ſpeak. They afterwards conſider him as an operative Cauſe, which produces different Effects; as the Sun, that ſoftens and hardens with its Rays. They explain the Creation as Moſes hath done in his Hiſtory of it. "Adam had not dy'd, had not he eaten of the "Fruit of the Tree of Knowledge. The abſolute Power, that God gave him over Animals, is ſufficient to prove, that he might cut their Throats and feed upon them. Why then had this Aliment, which agrees with the nature of his Body, been forbid him till the time of the Deluge? God's Providence extends as far as his Knowledge, which is Infinite, and diſcovers generally every thing. All things are in God's Hands, ſay they, except the fear of God. Altho God influences the Actions of Men, and lends them his Aſſiſtance; however it is in their Power to determine themſelves to Good, or Evil, to fear God, or to tranſgreſs his Commands. There is, according to theſe Doctors, who follow in this the Opinion of the Rabbaniſts, a common Grace, which is extended to all Men, and which every one receives according as he is diſpos'd; and this Diſpoſition proceeds from the nature of their Temper, or from the Stars. They diſtinguiſh Four different Diſpoſitions in the Soul. One of Death, One of Life, the Other of Health, and the laſt, Sickneſs. It is dead, when it grovels in Sin; but is alive when it applies to Good: It is Sick, when it doth not apprehend Heavenly Truths; but is Sound and in Health, when it knows the Concatenation of Events, and the Nature of Objects, that fall under its Cognizance. It might be thought, that this Diſtinction of the Caraites was known in the time of Chriſt, and that it is ſaid in alluſion to this; † She that liveth in Pleaſure is dead. || Let the Dead bury their Dead. |||| They that be Whole need not a Phyſician, but they that are Sick. This is a Metaphorical and Figurative Stile. Laſtly, They believe, that when the Souls go out of the Body, they are rewarded or puniſh'd. Righteous Souls ſhall go into the World to come, and the Garden of Eden. Thus they call * Paradiſe, where the Soul is nouriſh'd by the Sight and Knowledge of Spiritual Objects. One of their Doctors acknowledges, that ſome imagin'd, that the Souls of the Wicked were by way of Metempſycoſis infus'd into the Body of Beaſts; but he refutes and ridicules this Opinion, being perſwaded, that thoſe who are expell'd from the Manſion of God, go into a Place, which he calls Gehenna, where they ſuffer for their Sins, and live full of Pain and Shame, where there is a Worm that never dies, and a Fire that ſhall burn to all Eternity.

20. The Caraites expect the Meſſiah, whom as the reſt of the Jews they look upon as a Temporal King, and who will make himſelf known by the extent of Conqueſts, without having need of Miracles. As they are uneaſy about the time of his Coming, they forbid the Calculation of Years. They do not diſſemble, that his Coming is delay'd, ſince they aſſign two Reaſons † for it. One taken from the Sin and Corruption of the People; The Other from the ſlowneſs of Saturn, which is the Planet of the Sabbath, and of the Jewiſh Nation. Yet they believe, that this Coming of the Meſſiah is neceſſary to ſtrengthen the Faith of the Church.

21. They exact from the People an implicit Faith for the Holy Scripture. For they will not have them examine, whether an Article of the Law is true, or falſe. They ſeverely condemn || all doubts about the Exiſtence of God, or the Divinity of the Law. They forbid putting Confidence in any other than God; and maintain, that whoever relies on Creatures, is an Idolater as well as he that worſhips them; that it is an open breach of the Law to worſhip Angels, or Heaven, or ſome Planet; and they commonly quote the Second Commandment, to prove that ſort of Worſhip, a Crime. They have ſo great an abhorrence for Images, that they will not endure them even in their Houſes, where they have neither Statues, nor any Figures in Relievo, and theſe are ſtill more ſharply condemn'd when they repreſent any Thing which other Nations adore. They do not allow that any of their Sect ſhou'd trade in Images deſign'd for the Worſhip of Pagans or Chriſtians. It wou'd not even be lawful for them to make uſe of one conſecrated to the Service of Idols. They bitterly exclaim againſt the Traditioniſt-Jews; becauſe they are relax'd about this laſt Article. They appear before God in their Prayers with fear and trembling. This Expreſſion of St. Paul is found among the Caraites. They kneel down, lift up their Hands to Heaven, turn their Eyes towards Jeruſalem, and only make uſe of the Hebrew Tongue in their Prayers; becauſe they think it more Pure and Holy, and the only one wherein the Name of Jehovah can well be pronounc'd. For they do not make a ſcruple, as other Jews, to name God, altho according to the Obſervation of a Learn'd Critick, |||| they write it otherwiſe than the reſt of the Jews, by two Jods, and one Vau. If it be objected to them, that Daniel pray'd in the Chaldee Tongue, they ſay, that he only did it to be underſtood, and to ſhew plainly, that inſtead of worſhiping Idols, he only addreſs'd his Prayers to the God of the Jews.

22. They have no Phylacteries, nor Parchments with the Sentences of the Law writ on them, ſtuck to the Doors of their Houſes. They call the Jews bridl'd Aſſes, when they ſee them in their Synagogues with their Frontlets; and believe that the place of Deuteronomy, that enjoyns the uſe of Frontlets, ought to be figuratively explain'd; and that God only deſigns thereby that he ſhou'd be remember'd at Peoples coming in and going out. However, They make uſe of the Thaled; They beg of God to forgive them their Sins, through a Grace and Mercy which they have not deſerv'd. They obſerve the ſame Feaſts as the Jews; but not after the ſame Manner. For the Caraites obſerve the New Moon when it riſes, and begins to appear; and they ſay, that the Rabbaniſts by their Aſtronomical Calculations, incroach upon the preceeding Moon, and celebrate the New Moon whilſt the Old ſtill appears. They have another Diſpute about the time of offering the Paſchal Lamb. The Law ſays it ſhall be between the two Evenings; which the Rabbaniſts explain from the time that the Sun declines, that is, from half an Hour paſt Six at Night; Whereas the Caraites believe, that the Sun muſt be quite down before this Lamb be ſacrific'd. Notwithſtanding that theſe Differences are of no great Importance, yet they occaſion warm Diſputes between them.

23. Their Morality is pure. They chiefly pretend to a great deal of Temperance. They are afraid to eat too much, or be too nice about what is ſet before them. They have a very profound Reſpect for their Maſters. The Diſciples dare not ſit down before

* Moſes Adderet. Eliah. Seder. Gnaſcer. Aaron. M. S. Trigland. de S. Caræor. c. 10. p. 154, & 155, 156. † 1 Tim. 5. 6.
|| Math. 8. 22. |||| Id. 9. 12. * Moſes Tract. M. S. Adderet. Eliahu. † Moſes Tract. M. S. Eliahu, Ibid. p. 60.
|| Moſes Tract. M. S. Adderet. Eliahu, Ibid. p. 174. 175. ||| Simonville Leo of Modena, of the Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 1. Supplement of the Car. p. 169.

them

them, unless they are bid; nor go away without leave, and then they go backwards with their Faces towards the Doctor, whom they always call their Lord and Master. On the other hand, the Doctors are charitable, and teach gratis. They pretend to distinguish themselves thereby, from those who make themselves Gods of Silver, by gathering vast Sums from their Lectures.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Caraites. Their Original, and History to this Time.

I. THE Design of this Chapter. II. The true Origin of the Caraites under Ptolomeus Philometer in Egypt. III. A famous Division by Hillel, and Schammay. IV. The Caraites distinguish'd by Jesus Christ. V. Pointed at in the Gospel according to St. Luke. VI. And in that according to St. Mark. VII. An Explanation of this Passage. VIII. Josephus vindicated about his Silence concerning the Caraites. IX. Some Caraites in Origen's time. X. The Authority of St. Epiphanius not to be rely'd upon. XI. A place of St. Jerom more express and full. XII. The Confession of the Rabbanists, concerning the Antiquity of the Caraites. XIII. F. Morin fixes their Origin in the Eighth Century. XIV. Some Reflections about Ananus. XV. He only restor'd the Sect of the Caraites. XVI. The King of Cozar, favourable to the Caraites. The Method of the Rabbanists in their Dispute. XVII. The Succession of the Caraites in the Thirteenth, and following Centuries. XVIII. The Caraites famous at Constantinople. XIX. They retire into Judæa, and Nineveh. XX. Some Caraites in the West. XXI. The Caraites, and Traditionists have a reciprocal Hatred for one another.

1. AFter we have related the Opinions, which separate the Caraites not only from the rest of the Jews, but also from the Saducees, with whom they have been often confounded; we will inquire into their Origin; and without insisting on the Antiquity, which they assume to themselves, deriving their Pedigree from Ezra, or the Captivity of Babylon, what we shall discover must be more solid and certain.

2. Eusebius supplies us * with a new Conjecture upon this Subject. For making an Extract out of Aristobulus, that celebrated Philosopher, who was a Jew and a Peripatetick, famous at Ptolomeus Philometer's Court; he observes, that there was at that time two different Parties among the Jews, whereof one understood the Laws of Moses in a Literal Sense; and the other, in an Allegorical one. We there find the true Origin of the Caraites, who begun to appear under that Prince; because Allegorical Interpretations, and afterwards Traditions, were receiv'd with more greediness and respect.

The Jewish Religion begun to alter, by reason of the Jews Correspondence with Foreigners. This Commerce was much more frequent after Alexander's Conquests than before; and they chiefly convers'd with the Egyptians, especially whilst the Kings of Egypt were Masters of Judæa, took their Progress, and made some Expeditions thither, and transported the Inhabitants from thence. They did not borrow from the Egyptians their Idols, but they took from them their Method of handling Divinity and Religion. The Jewish Doctors, that were transported, or born in that Countrey, took up with Allegorical Interpretations. They made no scruple to wander from the Law, and to tack their Fancies to the Holy Scripture. Aristobulus writ a Commentary on the Laws of Moses, for his Prince Ptolomeus Philometer. It is perhaps the first Commentary that ever was writ upon the Law, and as this Philosopher introduc'd his Notions with those of the Law-giver, the two Parties mention'd by Eusebius begun to be form'd, and to divide the Nation. Those who had corrupted the Law pass'd for Ancients in the time of Christ. For so he calls them; and to make them first appear under Philometer, and continue in the succeeding Reigns, is not to assign them too venerable an Antiquity. These two Parties at first made a Schism. The Caraites, who stuck close to the Literal Sense of the Law, remain'd in the Bosom of the Church, where they continu'd to oppose the Traditionists; and as in the time of Christ the Saducees and Pharisees were seen at the same Altars, this Redeemer found too the Lawyers there, that is, the Caraites, who defended the Law against Innovations. They were a considerable Party in the Reign of Judas Maccabeus. For we read in his History, that the Synagogue of the Scribes sent some Deputies to Alcimus to require Justice †, whilst others wou'd have every body rely on the good Faith and Promises of that Traytor. What was this Assembly of Scribes, that oppos'd the Invasion of Alcimus, and exhorted him to do Justice? It was the Party of those that stuck close to the Law, and wou'd oblige Alcimus to observe it punctually; whilst an opposite Party, that had a mind to negociate with him, run after mystical Interpretations, and apply'd to themselves some Words, which David had utter'd, but never meant them.

3. However, This Difference, which was hatch'd under Philometer, grew very warm, something more than one Hundred Years before Christ. For then Hillel and Schammay being at the Head of both the Parties we have just now mention'd, came to a more open Rupture. The Rabbanists put Schammay in the wrong, who was, say they, a hot and hasty Man. He won'd fall into a Passion when he disputed, whilst Hillel kept his Temper. Some justify him, saying, that he was warm against the Wicked, but very meek to good Men. They extoll his Humility; because in his Old Age, he went to meet his Disciple Jonathan, leaning upon his Stick; whereas it was the Disciple's Duty to wait upon him at his House. It is pretended, that these two Masters of Israel did not separate. Those who own this Separation, affirm, that it was only occasion'd by three Rites of little moment. But the Opinion of private Doctors cannot destroy what is read in the Thalmud, and elsewhere; that their Dispute grew so hot, that it cou'd never be cool'd. Elijah himself had not been able to have ended it. Every one set up his own School: These Schools were one day call'd together; but if they agreed on some Articles, they were divided in a great many more. Hillel ‖ stifly maintain'd the Traditions; and it is also said, that he begun to put them in Writing, and his Adversary Schammay wou'd not own them. It is at least very likely, that as Hillel was the Father of the Traditionists, and asserted that there was an Oral Law, handed from Moses or Ezra to him; Schammay contended on the contrary, that they were by no means to deviate from the written Law. The Prepossession of the Jews, who put Schammay in the wrong, confirms this Conjecture. Add, that it is not probable that the Caraites wou'd own an odious Original, were not they perswaded that it is very true. And yet Moses Betschitsi, a famous Caraite, says positively, tively * that they came out of the School of Schammay; as the Rabbanists have taken their Doctrine from that of Hillel. It is yet less likely, that none of the Nation had vindicated the Authority of the Law against the Traditions and the Comments of Hillel.

* Euseb. Præp. Ev. l. 8. c. 10. † 1 Mc c. 7. 12. ‖ Misnah 5.

4. Christ, who liv'd afterwards, distinguish'd three sorts of Jews; the Saducees, the Pharisees, and the Doctors of the Law. He denotes these Last by a Term that signifies properly Lawyers. † What cou'd these Doctors of the Law be, who differ'd from the Pharisees, boasted that they were Interpreters of it, and enjoy'd with the Saducees all the Offices of the Church, unless they were those, who kept close to the Text of Scripture, explain'd it literally, and despis'd Traditions?

5. The Text of St. Luke deserves to be insisted upon. For we find in it a considerable Party in the Jewish Church, which is not much taken notice of. Christ ‖ pronouncing several Curses against the Pharisees, which they justly deserv'd, a Lawyer heard him patiently, and was not uneasy at them; because they did not concern him. But Christ having cry'd out, Wo unto you Scribes and Pharisees; for ye are as Graves, which appear not, and the Men that walk over them are not aware of them, this Lawyer then finding himself included in the same Curse with the Pharisees, exclaim'd, and complain'd to Christ of the ill things that he told him, and which he believ'd he had not deserv'd. So that this Lawyer, or Doctor of the Law, who differ'd from the Pharisees, and wou'd not be involv'd with them in the same Condemnation, was of a third Party among the Jews.

The Pharisees taught the Law as well as the Lawyers. But their Method of teaching it was different from that of these Doctors, and the two other Sects. This Difference lay in that the Lawyers stuck close to the Text of Moses, whilst the Pharisees went from it, adding some Traditions and Comments to the Law. This is the reason, that Christ gives some the Title of ‖‖ Doctors of the Law, or of Lawyers, and not to the others.

6. The same Thing appears from St. Mark's Recital. The four Bodies of the Jewish Church took turns to tempt the Son of God. The Pharisees, and Herodians appear'd first. They were scarce overset, but the Saducees attack'd him with a pretty subtle Quark concerning the Resurrection. The Defeat of these Last made a great Noise, and oblig'd the Pharisees to meet together to take some new Measures against him. Whilst they held their Council, the fourth Party, the Lawyers, or Doctors of the Law, who differ'd from all the rest, renew'd the Onset. Every one had arm'd himself with Sophisms drawn from his own System. The Herodians from the Tribute, that was to be paid to Cæsar: The Pharisees from the Quality of the Messiah, who was to free the Nation from so heavy a Yoak; and the Saducees, from the Resurrection of the Dead, which they deny'd. But what did the Lawyer do? He questions Jesus Christ, in his turn, about the Law, according to his own Principles. He ask'd him, which was the first Commandment; and upon the Answer, which the Saviour of the World made him, who quoted the Text of Moses, and shew'd that the fulfilling of the Law was to adore one God, and to love him with all our Heart; the Lawyer charm'd with it, acknowledg'd the Truth; which made Christ say, that this Man was not far from the Kingdom of God.

7. We see there the Character and Description of the Caraites, who make their Salvation consist in the observation of the Law; and instead of loading themselves with Traditions and useless Commands, reduce it to its Summary, and own Christ for a Doctor as soon as he quotes the Text, and follows it. The only Difficulty that occurs upon this, arises from a parallel Place, where St. Matthew relating the same Thing, seems to confound the Lawyer, or Doctor of the Law, with the Pharisees. This is the Text * : "When the Multitude heard this, they were asto-"nish'd at his Doctrine; and the Pharisees hearing, "that he had put the Saducees to silence, they gather'd "together; then one of them which was a Lawyer; "ask'd him a Question, tempting him, and saying, Ma-"ster, which is the great Commandment in the Law? One wou'd think by that, that the Doctor of the Law was one of the Pharisees, since he was one of them; but two Things, which are essential, have not been observ'd. One, that the Pharisees cou'd not be there present; since they retir'd after they were baffl'd, to gather new Forces against Christ who had routed them. The other, that the Evangelist speaks of the retreat of the Pharisees, but by way of Parenthesis, after he had spoken of the Multitude † that admir'd him. It was not then among the Pharisees, who were absent, that the Doctor of the Law was; but among the Multitude, whereof St. Matthew speaks immediately before; It is no wonder, that this Doctor of the Law was among the Multitude, and to this must be referr'd what the Evangelist says, one of them ask'd him a Question; because he takes notice afterwards of the return of the Pharisees, whom Christ puzl'd with some new Questions, after he had dismiss'd the Doctor with a great Encomium.

8. The Silence of Josephus, who only reckons three different Sects of the Jews, ought not either to startle us, or be brought as an Argument against our Assertion. For this Historian doth not speak of the Herodians, whose Sect appears too plain in the Gospel to be disputed. Add, that the Caraites having no peculiar Tenets, and only teaching the Law, according to its Literal Sense, and being still look'd upon as Doctors of the Law, Josephus cou'd not discriminate them by the Name of a particular Sect.

9. Origen ‖, who ought to have known the Scribes and Pharisees, puts this difference between them; the Scribes do not deviate from the Letter of the Law, but the Pharisees, who separated from others, because they thought themselves much Holier, pretended to interpret it. He represents the Scribes of his time to be the Caraites, that we look for, and if they appear'd in the time of Origen with the same Tenet, that distinguishes them, there is some ground to conclude, that far from owing their Original to the eighth Century of the Christian Æra, as is commonly suppos'd, they subsisted in the time of Jesus Christ.

10. I do not know, whether St. Epiphanius ‖‖ ought to be quoted as one of the Authors who discover the Origin of the Caraites. It is true, that he makes of the Scribes a particular Sect, for which he hath been blam'd by the Criticks, who knew no other Scribes, but those who had a publick Employ in the Synagogue, and who ought to be distinguish'd from the Scripturists, or Caraites. However, he might have borrow'd this Opinion from the Author of the Recognitions * which are publish'd under the Name of St. Clement, who also characterizes the Scribes, as a particular Sect of the Jews. He makes them first appear a little after the Saducees. Lastly, He observes, that they explain the Law; and that as for other things, they had the same Customs as the rest of the Jews, which agrees with the Caraites. But he says at the same time some things so repugnant to the Principles of this Sect; that after we had follow'd and vindicated St. Epiphanius, we shou'd be oblig'd to forsake him, and leave him bound hand and foot to the Mercy of the Criticks. We shou'd be forc'd to acknowledge, that he knew, and did not know the Caraites. So that to produce what he says, wou'd be to alledge a Proof too weak and uncertain.

* Moses, l. M. S. apud Trigland. Ibid. c. 6. p. 72, & p. 94. † Νομικοί. ‖ Luke. 11. 44, 45. ‖‖ Mark. 12. * Matth. 22. † Ὄχλων. ‖ Orig. Tr. 24. in Matth. & in Matth. 13. 52. ed. H. t. 1. p. 818. ‖‖ Epiph. Hær. l. 1. H. 15. * Recognit. l. 1. c. 54.

leave

11. St. Jerome * seems much more full and expres. For speaking of Schammay, and Hillel, as of two Heads of Sects; he assures, that from thence sprung the Scribes and Pharisees. If he spoke there of Secretaries of State, or the Copyists of the Law, he had been in a gross Errour; because these Scribes were known a long time before Schammay, whom he represents as their Founder. Besides, What reason cou'd he have to oppose the Scribes to the Pharisees? But this Father is not mistaken, and agrees exactly with what the Caraites say, that they came from Schammay, and that in his time they vigorously oppos'd the Traditionists.

12. But perhaps, the Caraites ought not to be heard in their own Cause, especially when they sometimes ascend as far as the Captivity of Babylon, during which they pretend to have help'd the Prophets, and groan'd with them for the Sins of the People. The Arguments which they alledge of their Antiquity, drawn from that of their Doctrine, are enough to shew that their Cause is better than that of the Rabbanists; but they do not demonstrate the Antiquity of their Origin. Their Enemies may better supply the place of Witnesses, who cannot be suspected in this matter; And they own †, that they subsisted before Herod. Some will have it, that they had the Power in their Hands at Jerusalem ‖ in the Reign of the Asmonæans. Others make them appear first in the time of Alexander Jannæus, in whose Reign they triumph'd, whilst the Rabbanists were banish'd. Far from upbraiding them with being Upstarts, they make them as old as the Saducees, with whom they endeavour to confound them. Lastly, Others ‖‖ will have them appear at the same time, that Tsadoc and Baithos did. Nothing but truth cou'd have extorted this Testimony from the Pens of their bitterest Enemies. To place all this on the Score of the Ignorance of the Jews in Chronology, as F. Morin doth, is to cut the Knot, but not to solve the Difficulty. For it is not likely, that the Learned Jews had given the Caraites this Advantage, which others will not allow them; had not they seen in the Ancient Monuments of their Nation some Proof, that convinc'd them of a Truth, which it was their Interest to oppose, and which they acknowledge against their Will.

13. However, F. Morin * being perswaded that the Thalmud was not compleated till the end of the seventh Century; and that it was this Collection of Traditions, that occasion'd the Schism of the Caraites, affirms, that they only begun to appear but in the 740, or 750*th* Years after Christ; that it was Ananus, who seeing, that a Divine Authority was ascrib'd to Fables, and being something angry, that his Brother was preferr'd before him to be Chief of the Captivity, separated from the rest of the Jews, and became the Founder of a new Schism in his Nation. He grounds this Hypothesis on the Testimony of a great many Rabbins, who all agree to fix there the Origin of the Caraites, and on the silence of Christian Doctors, who ought to have known the Thalmud, had it been compos'd in their time; and yet they never quote it. For Origen, St. Epiphanius, who was born a Jew, and St. Jerome, who so often consulted the Doctors and Books of the Jews, do not speak of it.

14. We have no need to speak here of the Origin of the Thalmud, because it is not now to our purpose. For whether the Thalmud was compos'd sooner or later, yet it is still true, that Ananus liv'd but in the eighth Century. Whether he was an ambitious Man, and jealous of his Brother's Preferment, is a Question that doth not deserve to be discuss'd. Nothing is more common, than to accuse of Pride and Discontent, those that leave us. But we ought only to mind matter of Fact, and see whether Ananus and his Son are the First, that founded the Sect of the Caraites.

15. We have already set down the Testimonies of Eusebius, Origen, St. Jerome, and of some Jews, who reckon this Sect to be of a much ancienter Date; and these Testimonies ought to be prefer'd to those, that contradict them; because it is natural to commit a Mistake, that suits with our Interest, and to cry down our Enemies. The Jews do not spare the most sacred Things to blacken the Caraites; but they ought to be believ'd, when they are forc'd to depose for their Enemies.

The Rabbanists † acknowledge that the Hereticks, that is, the Caraites, were very much weaken'd since the Destruction of Jerusalem, till Ananus arose, who restor'd them. The Caraites grant this to the Jews. For they do not deny, but their Doctrine remain'd in darkness, till Ananus restor'd it to its pristine Lustre and Splendor. They add, that he oppos'd the Followers of Hillel, who were Traditionists, gain'd a great many Disciples, and became Chief of the Captivity in Babylon. It is certain, that Japhet, one of the Caraites, doth anticipate this Event of one Hundred Years, since he places it in the beginning of the seventh Century: But his Errour doth not invalidate his Testimony. So that the Caraites, who begun to appear at the same time that the Pharisees, the Chief of the Traditionists Party did, were considerable till the Destruction of Jerusalem. They were seen too in the time of Origen; but it is likely that their Number lessen'd the more, by reason of some of their Opinions about Marriage, which weaken'd their Party very much. Farther, Men have a secret Tendency to prefer their vain Imaginations to so dry a Religion; as that contain'd in the Law of God. Lastly, the King of Cozar upbraided the Jews with the Sect of the Caraites, which was in Being a long time before the Conference, that he had with them. Juda Halevy says, that this Conference was held Four Hundred Years before he was born. This Rabbin liv'd in the Year 1089, or in 1140, according to some. He might have been born in the Year first mention'd, and yet write in the Second. But it is no matter whether the Conference of Cozar was Four Hundred Years before it. He cou'd not say, that the Sect of the Caraites was a long time before, since by adding Four Hundred to Seven Hundred and Fifty, it must be acknowledg'd that the Schism was not form'd, but that it begun at the soonest to be form'd, at the same time that the Conference was held.

16. The King of Cozar found ‖ this Sect, preferable to that of the Rabbanists, because the Patrons of it stuck closer to, and were more zealous for the Law; and the Jew, who instructed him, was oblig'd to have recourse to the Method of Variations, and the Authority of the Church and Fathers, to make him alter his Opinion. You cannot, said he to the King, find two Caraites of the same Opinion. They ‖‖ are divided among themselves; they continually vary, and the Unity of Faith is only found among us. If the Hereticks agree sometimes, it cannot be but in those Things, which they have taken from our Doctors, and from Tradition. Ought not our Masters, who are more numerous, and have liv'd in the Holy Land, and whose

* Hieron. in Isai. 8. 14. † V. Trigl. de Car. c. 3. p. 10. ‖ V. Cosri, p. 241. ‖‖ R. Schabtai apud Carpzov. Introd. ad Raimundi. Pugionem Fidei, c. 4. p. 1. * Morin. Exercit. Bibl. l. 2. Exerc. 6. c. 2. & Exerc. 2. c. 1. p. 307. † R. Abraham Halevy Ben Dior apud Morin. Exerc. & Trigl. de S. Cazor. l. 26. R. Japhet Karæus. Ibid. p. 108. ‖ An. 750. ‖‖ Cosri, p. 3. a. 58. p. 206.

whose Traditions ascend as high as the Prophets to be prefer'd? "Altho it was granted, that our ancient "Doctors had only decided by Prepossession and Con- "jecture, they ought more to be follow'd than the Ca- "raites, who often vary. Wou'd not one think, that the Doctors of the Church of Rome have copy'd this old Controversist, and that they borrow his Method, Arms, and Arguments to run down the Protestants, or to make some Conversions?

This Rabbanist pretended, that the King ought to be satisfy'd with these general Maxims, taken from the Number and Authority of Doctors, and the Unity of Faith, and by no means to examine the Controversies of the Caraites. He had another general Principle; that the Consequences, which his Doctors infer'd from Scripture, were to be receiv'd, even when they seem'd contrary to Reason and the Law; because it was impossible that so many Learn'd Men, who had examin'd that Matter throughly, shou'd be mistaken; and that so much the more, because they had the Assistance of the Holy Spirit, the Daughter of the Voice, and another Operation, which was a Medium between that of the Prophets, and the Daughter of the Voice. He also alledg'd some Examples taken from Philosophy. It is thought, says he to the King, that there is no Vacuum; that Matter is divisible ad infinitum; and that the Sun is much bigger than the Earth; altho appearance contradicts these Things, because it is presum'd that Astronomers and Philosophers, who have examin'd these Questions, are not mistaken in their Consequences, from some undoubted Principles. The same Deference must be paid to the Consequences of the Traditionists.

The King objecting, what God says, that nothing ought to be added, or taken from his Law; the Rabbanist reply'd, that this only concern'd the Vulgar, who was not allow'd to make a Religion according to their Fancy; and that by the Law, what Moses, and the Doctors, who have follow'd him to this time, have determin'd, must be understood. The King objected besides the Laws against Uncleanness, which the Caraites observ'd more religiously than the Rabbanists. But his Tutor answer'd, that most of those Laws were only to be observ'd in the Holy Land, and were of no force now the Jews were dispers'd. He laugh'd at the Scruples of the Caraites, who wou'd not allow a Nazarite to be drunk with Hydromel, or to eat a Bunch of Grapes.

Let us yet add another Stroke, that makes the Rabbanists, and Romish Doctors look yet more like one another. The Rabbanists object to their Adversaries, that they are but two or three Fugitives dispers'd in several Places, whilst they can muster a numerous Army: In a Word, they pretend to triumph by their Multitude, as if that was a Mark of the true Church. The Caraites answer this Objection, by alledging that Job was more Orthodox and Holier than his Wife, and his three Friends; and that Joshua was a better Man than the Spies, that discourag'd the People; whence they conclude, that the greatest Number is not always in the right, more especially in matter of Religion, than in any thing else. However, The Caraites made a considerable Figure in the time of the King of Cozar, since, notwithstanding the distance of his Countrey, they were known to him.

It is very likely, that Juda Halevy, who related this Conference of the King of Cozar, design'd to promote the Glory of his Nation, as we will prove hereafter. However, we may draw from thence these two Conclusions; one, that this celebrated Rabbin believ'd that these Hereticks were very famous in the eighth Century; since he introduces them in his Dispute; the other, that they were in great Repute in his time. And indeed, this Doctor was oblig'd to maintain a long Controversy with Alphrag the Head of the Caraites; who contended, that there was an Universality, and Personal Succession in his Church, as in that of the Rabbanists, who being non-pluss'd by this Ingenious Caraite, got King Alphonsus, with whom they had more Interest, to interpose his Authority. Nay, it is said, that Halevy, who cou'd claim a considerable Sum from this Prince, and expected to be rewarded for his Services, sacrific'd all to the satisfaction of seeing his Adversaries silenc'd; which he beg'd of the King as a favour, that he prefer'd to all others.

17. The Blow, which a powerful King gave the Caraites, in the twelfth Century, did not over-whelm them. Alphrag's Writings remain'd, and his Disciples did not only take care to hand them, but also his Doctrine to Posterity. Benjamin of Tudela found them spread in the East, at Damascus, and in the other Towns of Syria, as well as in Egypt. Another Caraite, as famous as Alphrag, appear'd about the end * of the following Century. This Doctor, whose Name was Aaron, writ probably in Germany, since he oppos'd in his Writings the Rites of the German Jews. He compos'd a Collection of the Impertinencies of the Thalmudists, refutatio nugarum Thalmudicarum. Mr. Leger, who was a long time in Constantinople, brought from thence a New Testament in the Modern Greek, which he put out at his return; and as he had kept a great Correspondence with the Eastern Jews, whose Tongue he was Master of, he also took notice of this Book, that was not then known. F. Morin had a Commentary of this Author, which he valu'd very much. But it made him expose himself. For this Father having a mind to make an advantage of the Treasure that was in his Hands, boasted, that he wou'd write the History of the Caraites, and unravel a Religion, that was hardly known. He besides assur'd the World, that he wou'd say nothing, but what was taken from their Works. These Books were very rare, because the Caraites write but little, print less, and their Enemies take care to suppress their Performances. Every body was charm'd with his Promise. The great Buxtorf, whose Sleep was interrupted by such Notions, had not patience enough to stay till the Book was printed. He desir'd to know the Title of the Books, whence F. Morin did promise to take his History; but this Father was oblig'd to confess his Indigence, and own that he only had the Commentary upon the Law Writ by Doctor Aaron, who liv'd in Germany, towards the End of the thirteenth Century.

18. They have always enjoy'd a great deal of Liberty in the Dominions of the Grand Signior. They had their Synagogues at Constantinople; and it was there, that in the fifteenth Century Elijah the Son of Moses made a Figure, and calculated his Astronomical Tables for the Meridian of Constantinople: And according to the Opinion † of Albatenius, an Arabian Astronomer ‖, very much esteem'd by the Jews, Juda Pocki, that great Caraite, who publish'd the Gate of Juda, was seen there One Hundred Years afterwards. He deplores the Misfortune of his Sect, which hath lost in Egypt above Three Hundred Volums compos'd by the Ancient Doctors, that were plunder'd and torn in pieces. He quotes a great many Authors of his Party, who writ in Arabick, and were translated into Hebrew. In a Word, they subsist there to this Day, as well as in Grand Cairo, and in some other Towns of Egypt.

19. They prefer the Holy Land to all the Countries in the World. They go thither, when they can find means to live in it; and it is properly in that Countrey, that they meet together. Some are also found in Syria, and in the East as far as Ninevah; and few Years ago * one of these Sectaries came from that Countrey to Francfort, where he try'd the Cruelty of the Rabbanists. For they refus'd to admit him into their Synagogues. Boys gather'd together to affront, and cast Dirt upon him. Some Stones were thrown at him; and he had starv'd, if Mr. Ludolf, a Man both generous and learned, had not taken him into his House, whence he did not go till Mr. Ludolf had got from him, what he wanted to compleat his Work. His Design was to go to meet his Brethren in Poland, and Volhinia. He carry'd his Library along with him, that consisted of a few Caraite Books † which he valu'd very much.

* More Aharon an. 1299. † Sleden de An. Jud. c. 2. p. 8. ‖ Uxor. Hebr. l. 1. c. 3. Can. 1583.

20. I can't tell why it is positively said, that this Sect is extinct in the West. For there are some Caraites in Moscovy, Poland, and Lithuania, who pretend to be descended from the Tartars, or come from Constantinople, where they still have Synagogues. But their wretched Condition, Ignorance, and small Number, are the Cause that they are hardly taken notice of.

21. Their Hatred against the Traditionists, and the Traditionists Hatred against them, is implacable. There is no Correspondence, or Marriages between the Families of the Caraites, and those of the Rabbanists, tho they sometimes marry Pagan and Idolatrous Women. They very seldom live in the same Place, because they bitterly exclaim against, and persecute one another; and every one makes use of his Interest with the Magistrates to drive away his Adversary. Benjamin of Tudela observes || in his Travels, that the Four Hundred Samaritans, and Two Hundred Caraites, that he had seen at Damascus, liv'd quietly together, but yet that they did not marry into one another's Families; or into those of the Rabbanist Jews, whereof Three Thousand were in that City.

On the one hand, the Caraites collect together all the Curses, which the Prophets have denounc'd against evil Pastors, and thunder them out against the Rabbanists. On the other, the Rabbanists say, that at the Feast of the Tabernacles, they meet upon the Mount of Olives, and after they have bless'd one another, they take the Book of the Law, and pronounce against the Caraites all the Curses, which they find in it. They are often near them in a neighbouring Place, and hear themselves curs'd by the greater Number, without daring to open their Mouths, like dumb Dogs, that dare not bark when they are beaten. The Rabbanists seldom put in the Number of their Proselytes, those that willingly come over to them; because they suspect, that they did it out of Interest, or Treachery. They are kinder to those Caraites who are born down by ill Usage, or Authority. It is a Proverb among them, that a Caraite ought to become a Mahometan, or Christian, before he be admitted among the Rabbanist Jews.

Lastly, They are so jealous of one another, that they will often dispute about the Title of Rabbins. I do not question, but Custom hath ascrib'd it to the Traditionists preferably to the Caraites; because they have always been more Numerous, Powerful, and fond of honourable Titles. And therefore Benjamin having a mind to distinguish the two Sects, which he had seen in his Travels, says, that some were call'd Rabbins, and the other Caraites. But he is suspected of speaking out of prejudice, and for the interest of his Sect, which hath too great a contempt for its Adversaries to honour them with the Title of Masters. The Caraites do not appear so haughty. For if they they stile themselves Rabbins too, they also give this Title to their Adversaries, and even sometimes add these Words, of blessed Memory, which the others never do. However, there is but one Instance of this sort of Civility, and I do not know whether we can draw any inference from it for all the Writers of this Sect.

CHAP. X.

The History of the Pharisees, and of their Tenets.

1. A General Notion of this Sect. II. Its Antiquity. III. Love for Traditions. IV. Fate taught by the Pharisees. V. The Influence of the Stars. VI. The Opinion of the Modern Jews. VII. Baronius refuted about the Worship of Stars. VIII. What Fate is. IX. The Opinion of the Pharisees explain'd. X. An Explanation of the 13th Verse of the 1st Chap. of St. James. XI. The Prayer of the Pharisee of the Gospel. XII. The Necessity of the following Articles. XIII. The Principles about the punishment of Sin, common to all Nations. XIV. The Pharisees think, that they expiate their Sins by Sacrifices. Their Washings. XV. The Opinion of Philosophers, who laugh'd at the Vulgar, and yet offer'd Sacrifices. XVI. Contrition, Prayers, and Virtues were join'd to the Sacrifices. XVII. The Pharisees agreed with the Pagans about Justification. XVIII. They contradicted one another concerning Virtues, and good Works. XIX. In what they differ'd about Justification. XX. St. Paul shews, that Sacrifices, and Ceremonies are not to be rely'd upon. XXI. The main Argument of St. Paul was taken from the Moral Law. XXII. A New Way to be justify'd by Mercy. XXIII. The Righteousness of Christ imputed to Sinners. XXIV. An Objection, which St. Paul makes to himself, concerning the neglect of good Works. XXV. St. Clement's Comment on St. Paul's Opinion. XXVI. Ways to elude that Apostle. XXVII. The Works of the Law taken for the Oeconomy of Works. XXVIII. The Law was the Oeconomy of Faith, and the Gospel that of Works. XXIX. Whether the Pharisees confided in useless Devotions.

1. NEither the Origin of the Pharisees, nor the time wherein they begun to appear, is known. Common Tradition makes Hillel their Founder; but some ||| say that he liv'd under Herod the Great. Nevertheless the Pharisees had a great deal of Credit with the Crowd, in the Reign of Alexander Jannæus, a long time before Herod. It is better to own, that we do not know their Original, than to make a vain Inquiry after it. People might have been for several Ages fond of Traditions. Men commonly hate Restraint; and love what God hath not commanded. However, it may be said, that Hillel and Schammay begun to make an open breach about that matter. Hillel's Disciples begun to add an austere way of living to their Traditions, and to run down with more success their Enemies, who oppos'd the Settlement of the Oral Law. There was a palpable Contradiction in their System. For they extoll'd their Austerities, whilst they flatter'd the Corruption of the Heart, and cancell'd the most severe part of the Law. But the People, who are easily impos'd upon by a mortify'd Exteriour, and the deluding Appearances of Devotion, look'd upon them as Saints. They were not all of the Tribe of Levi, nor concern'd in the Priesthood; and Pharisaism was not an Office in the Church, as some have imagin'd. Some Priests, and High-Priests were of this Sect; but the Lay-Men made up the greatest Number. They made themselves formidable to the Kings, who flatter'd them out of Policy, least they

* Jac. Schwidt Compend. Hist. Jud. c. 13. p. 528. † Ludolf dixit. || Benjam. Itiner. p. 56. ||| Ganz. Chronol. p. 83.

shou'd

ſhou'd become their Enemies. For they were the more to be fear'd, becauſe they fought under the ſhroud of Religion. They diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by the bigneſs of their Phylacteries. They went with their Heads downwards, leaſt they ſhou'd caſt ſome impure Looks, or be tempted by ſome beautiful Objects. Thorns were fix'd to the hem of their Robes, that the Blood might trickle from their Feet as they walk'd along. They added New Devotions to the Law, notwithſtanding it was already ſo heavy, that no body cou'd bear it. They extoll'd the Worth of theſe Devotions, and their Virtue, giving out that they had fulfill'd every thing, and that they ſhou'd certainly go to Heaven. They ſever'd themſelves from the reſt of Mankind, as being more Holy than they, and fearing to be defil'd by touching them. They not only flouriſh'd in the time of Chriſt, who curs'd them; but this Sect is yet in being, and almoſt all the Jews are now Phariſees; and therefore we are a-going to deſcribe their Tenets, and Rites.

2. The Phariſees derive them from Moſes. For they boaſt that they receiv'd from his Mouth their Traditions and the Oral Law, whoſe Depoſitaries and Interpreters they pretend to be. St. Epiphanius reckons Akiba among their greateſt Maſters, and makes him live before the the Captivity of Babylon. But he is groſly miſtaken. For this Doctor was Maſter of Aquila, that famous Interpreter who tranſlated the Holy Scripture in the Reign of Adrian. Hillel's and Schammay's Controverſy ſeem'd to have produc'd Phariſaiſm. St. Jerome * believ'd, that this Production of the Phariſees made theſe two Doctors ſo odious, that they were call'd, one Hillel, that is, Prophane; and the other Schammay, that is, Waſter. But none can more evidently miſtake than this Father of the Church. For the Jews are perſwaded, that this Diviſion was beneficial to the Synagogue. They blame Schammay, and extol Hillel to the Skies, to whom they gave the Title of Praiſe-worthy. They ſay, that he was ſo poor, that he was forc'd to work for his Living. He beſtow'd half of his Gain on the Porter of the School, and liv'd upon the other Half. Wanting Work, and having no Money to bribe the Porter, he hearken'd at the Window, and being there all Night, he was found in the Morning all cover'd with Snow. Schammay, who ſaw him in that Condition, admir'd his eagerneſs for Learning, and thought, that he deſerv'd that the Sabbath ſhou'd be broken to warm him. His Brother, who was a rich Man in Babylon, wou'd never aſſiſt him. He became famous; had a great many Scholars, whereof ſome are compar'd with Moſes; and the reſt, who were 40, were able to ſtop the Sun, as Joſhua did. No Encomiums are ſpar'd on this Man, who is made Prince of the Sanhedrim, Founder of Phariſaiſm, and Defender of Traditions.

Joſephus, who muſt have known this Sect better than theſe, (for he was a Member, and zealous Aſſertor of it) ſeems to fix its Original under Jonathan, one of the Maccabees, about one Hundred Years before Chriſt. Hillel liv'd perhaps at that time. For we muſt not rely in Chronology on the Rabbins, who are often miſtaken, and only make ſome Conjectures about the time of this famous Aſſertor of Traditions.

It was hitherto believ'd, that they took the Name of Separated, or Phariſees; becauſe they ſever'd themſelves from the reſt of Mankind, and upon the ſcore of their Auſterities thought themſelves above them: And the Prayer of the Phariſee of the Goſpel, who ſtood far from the Publican, and what this Sect reproach'd Chriſt, that he did eat with ſcandalous and profligate Fellows, confirm this Notion. Notwithſtanding that there is a new Conjecture † about that Name. The Phariſees were oppoſite to the Saducees, who deny'd the Rewards of a future State. For the Phariſees maintain'd, that there was a Paras, or Remuneration after Death. And therefore St. Paul, who had been a Phariſee, and knew that moſt of the Jews were of that Sect, tells them in his Epiſtle to the Hebrews, ‖ that Moſes forſaking Egypt, had reſpect unto the recompence of the Reward, and aſſures the Romans that Eternal Life ſhou'd be their Reward. This Reward being the ground of their Controverſy with the Saducees, and call'd Paras, the Phariſees might rather have deriv'd their Name from thence, than from Separation, which alſo belong'd to the Eſſenes.

3. The firſt Crime of the Phariſees, was their Zeal for Traditions. They contended, that beſides the Law promulgated upon Mount Sinai, and writ by Moſes; God had verbally intruſted this Law-giver with a great many Rites and Tenets, which he tranſmitted to Poſterity without writing of them. They nam'd the Perſons, who had preſerv'd theſe Oral Traditions, and gave them the ſame Authority as to the Written Law. And they were in the right; ſince they ſuppos'd, that they alſo came from God. Chriſt condemn'd theſe Traditions, which weaken'd the Scripture, inſtead of explaining it, and were fitter to flatter, than curb the Paſſions. But his Cenſure, far from reclaiming the Phariſees, did but exaſperate them. They took it very heinouſly, that a Man, whom they thought had no Miſſion, ſhou'd take upon him to reprove them. This is natural enough. For the Miniſters of the Church are generally more wedded to ſome ancient Cuſtoms, and humane Fancies, than to the Laws of God. They abandon the Eſſence of Religion, whilſt they obſtinately maintain the Superficial Part of it. They make that their chief Buſineſs; and imagine, that there is a Deſign againſt their Perſons; and that their Miniſtery, and Authority, which are heighten'd by theſe Ceremonies, are attack'd. Their incens'd Pride kindles them into a Rage, and makes them often imitate the barbarous Phariſees who crucify'd Chriſt. The modern Phariſees are as much wedded to Traditions, as the ancient Phariſees were. They ſay, that whoever rejects the Oral Law, becomes an Apoſtate, and, ipſo facto, deſerves death. They have an implacable Hatred for the Caraites, who adhere religiouſly to the Text of Moſes, and the Word of God.

4. Joſephus affirms ‖‖, that the Phariſees ſubjected all things to Fate, and God; that it was always in Man's Power to do Good, or Evil, and that Fate aſſiſted him. Whence it hath been concluded, that they made Events depend upon a certain Fatality, which depriv'd Man of his Liberty. St. Epiphanius *, who is the Author of this Opinion, adds, that this Fatality proceeded from the Stars, to which they gave ſeveral Names. Baronius † going farther than this ancient Doctor, ſaid, that they believ'd that the Stars were animated; and that they worſhip'd them as ſo many Angels. And therefore the Chriſtian Proſelytes, that came out of that Sect, endeavour'd to introduce into the Church the Worſhip of Angels. But St. Paul, who knew this Worſhip, and their Wile, oppos'd it, when he exhorted the Coloſſians, not to be beguil'd of their Reward in a voluntary Humility, and worſhipping of Angels. Laſtly, A learn'd Man, who had no Intereſt to find out the adoration of Angels, but had ſome other prejudices, obſerves, 1. That according to Joſephus, the Phariſees aſcrib'd nothing to God in the Adminiſtration of Sublunary Events; becauſe they believ'd, that having given to the Creatures a certain moving Faculty in the beginning of the World, they continu'd to act and move. 2. That they underſtood by Fate the influence of Stars, and the Concatenation of ſecondary Cauſes, which depend of them. 3. That they imagin'd, that

* Hieron. in Iſaiah, c. 8. † Vitringa Obſ. Sac. l. 1. ‖ Heb. 11. ‖‖ Joſeph. Ant. l. 11. c. 7. p. 788. * Epiph. Hær. 16. p. 34. † Baron. an. 65. p. 660.

Fate made almost all Events absolutely necessary, and excepted but very few, to which they allow'd a kind of a Liberty; and that even Fate help'd these free Actions. It is in this Sense, that we must understand this Axiom of the ancient Rabbins, that every thing is in the hand of Heaven, except the fear of God; that is, that every thing necessarily, and inevitably happens; and that the Will of Man alone is free in matters of Religion. 4. One wou'd conclude, that the Pharisees left to Man a free Will to Good or Evil. But Bullus || will not have it so, and affirms, that they subject all things to Fate; because their System wou'd not otherwise be coherent. And indeed Heaven ought to have the same Influence upon all humane Actions; and as soon as the Will is bound in some things, by the Concatenation of secundary Causes, it must be bound in all its Acts. What wou'd become of a Man, that was born under an ill Constellation? Cou'd he become a good, and be no ill Man? If he cou'd, he acted against Fate, and became Master of his Doom. Fate wou'd not then have a Power over the beginning, and sequel of his Life. So that the Pharisees spoke of Free Will for fashion sake, but own'd in the main an inevitable Fatality, which destroy'd it. 5. St. James * hath refuted this Tenet of the Pharisees. For when he says, Let no Man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: For God cannot be tempted with Evil, neither tempteth he any Man. He speaks against these Doctors, who by owning Fate, made God Author of Sin. He adds, that every good Gift, and every perfect Gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. He speaks of a perfect Gift, that comes from above, to denote a more exalted Place than the Heaven of Stars, whence the Pharisees deriv'd some Influences upon all Transactions here below. He calls God the Father of Lights, that is, of the Stars, which are call'd the Children of God, to shew that it was not the Stars, but God who created them, that governs the Actions of Men. Lastly, He asserts, that there is no shadow of turning in God, and the Term † which he uses is borrow'd from Astronomy. The Sun hath its Tropicks, which it leaves, and returns to them again, but God never alters. It may easily be perceiv'd that this Interpretation is new, and therefore deserves that we shou'd take notice of it.

5. This may be added to it, (viz.) that the Modern Jews have a great Veneration for the Stars, and their Influences. There is, say they ||, no dispute between the Sages about the Stars; because they all agree, that they have a great Influence upon the Generation and Corruption of Sublunary Bodies; and this Errour is also common among the Christians. Some Jews have rather given the direction of Events, and also of some Plants, to Angels, than to the Stars; God leaving every thing to their Management hath only reserv'd to himself the Keys of Life, the Resurrection, and Rain; and Elijah, who brought down Rain, and rais'd one from the Dead, had a very particular Privilege. But others contend, that the Stars pour down their Influences upon Earth. Every Herb hath its peculiar Star, which gives it its Virtue. They also extend this Power to humane Bodies, and the principal Actions of Life. They wish a happy Planet to their Friends upon their Wedding Day. They alledge this Reason for it, that the Sun and Moon being created to rule the Day, and the Night, they exercise their Dominion by the Influences, which the Stars send down upon Sublunary Bodies, to which they communicate several Qualities. They refer themselves to Experience, since Health very often depends upon the Air; and the Faculties of the Soul, upon the Disposition of the Body; and they quote several Predictions of Astrologers, which have come to pass.

6. Notwithstanding that this Structure seems strongly built, it is easy to pull it down, if we closely follow Josephus, and do not make him say, what he did not say. We must not be impos'd upon by the Authority of some unknown Names of Rabbins; but always ascend to the Fountain-head to discuss a matter of Fact.

Those, who submit the Body, and some Events to the Stars, confess that Man may defy Fate, and raise himself above it by his Virtue. As for Instance, We read |||| in the Thalmud, that there is no Planet for Israel; and in another Place, that there is a Planet for Israel, as for other Nations. This is a kind of Contradiction; but it is solv'd by saying, That the People do not depend upon the Stars, when they are Faithful, and observe the Commandments of God; but that they depend upon them, when they rebel against the Almighty. Besides, Maimonides disown'd these Influences of the Stars, when he observ'd, that if so great a Power was ascrib'd to them, Man's Free Will must of necessity be given up. So that a general Inference can't be deduc'd from the Doctrine of the Rabbins, that have been quoted; the rather, because tho Maimonides hath had some Opponents, the Crowd hath follow'd his Opinion.

7. Baronius, who imputes to the Pharisees to believe, that the Stars are living Bodies; and who transforms these Stars into Angels, and makes the Pharisees adore Angels, and St. Paul oppose this Worship; hath been led into all these Mistakes by his Prejudices. He was afraid that his Church shou'd be involv'd in the same Sentence, that St. Paul pronounc'd against the Worship of Angels; and he thought to screen it from this Sentence by putting the Pharisees in the room of the Roman Catholicks, and hath spar'd nothing to effect it. Instead of inquiring of Philo, Judæus, Josephus, and the Gospel, whether the Jews admitted of any Idolatry, and whether Angels were worship'd among them, he goes no farther than St. Epiphanius; because he hop'd to make him patronize his Cause. This Father says, that the Jews call'd the Planets Zodia, whence Zodiack is deriv'd. The Latin Interpreter having translated, that they call'd the Planets Animals, this Fault of this Translator was enough to make Baronius believe, that the Pharisees thought that the Planets were living Bodies.

But there is still a great difference between living Stars, and Angels; and between Angels and their being worship'd, and an Adoration which was only paid out of humility of Spirit at Colloss, a small Town of Phrygia, where Proselytes coming out of Pharisaism, were very rare, and perhaps never known. But Baronius goes boldly over these Precipices, and ascribes to the Pharisees a Superstition, that begun to be introduc'd into the Christian Church, and which St. Paul condemn'd.

8. Josephus, who ought chiefly to be believ'd, makes a Concourse of God, of Fate, and of the Will of Man assisted by Fate. The difficulty lies only in this, to know what he means by Fate. Dr. Bull * will have it a Power distinct from God, and makes Josephus say, that the Saducees take away the second Order, that is, Fate. But he hath not well translated this. For that Historian † says, that the Saducees made a second Order, or the second Order of Sectaries among the Jews. Neither must we understand the Stars by the Name of Fate; since the Jews did not pay them any manner of Worship; or even to Angels, altho they ascrib'd to them a Super-Intendency over several Events. Fate, among the Heathens, was the Concatenation of Secun-

|| Bullus Harmonia Apostolica Diss. posterior. c. 15. p. 96. &c. * James, 1. 13, 17. † Τροπῆς. || V. Maimon. Ep. & More Nevochim, p. 2. c. 10. p. 206. Thalmud in Mæd. Katom fol. 28. R. Aben Ezra, Abarbanel, Bahye, Isaac Cohen, Levi Ben Gerson, Meser de Leon, Joel Ben Sueb. Joseph Albo, favour this Opinion. |||| R. Manasseh in Termino Vitæ, p. 9. * Bullus Harm. Apost. Diss. 2. c. 15. p. 197. † Σαδδυκαῖοι δὲ τὸ δεύτερον τάγμα τὴν μὲν εἱμαρμένην πάντα τῶν ἀφαιροῦνται. Joseph. Ant. l. 13. c. 9. p. 442.

dary

dary Causes, that were link'd together by the eternal Truth. Thus Cicero expresses himself. But Fate among the Pharisees signify'd Providence, and its Decrees about humane Transactions, which seem to render them infallible.

And indeed the Chaldee Paraphrast, who must have known the Opinions of his Nation, and Time, explaining these Words of Solomon, One Event happeneth to the Just and the Wicked, says, as the Pharisees of his time, that this is perform'd by Fate; but explaining at the same time his thought, he adds, that indeed it was decreed in Heaven, and that God hath resolv'd it. This is the Fate of the ancient Jews, which subsisted in the Decrees of God, whose infinite Knowledge makes Events infallible.

The Saducees, in opposition to the Pharisees, rejected all manner of Fate. Fate hath no different Parts, that can be distinguish'd, and reasonably oppos'd to a Whole, if it be meant thereby a Concatenation of Secondary * Causes, which impose an inevitable necessity. For it is the same for all Actions, and Events. But Providence hath its different Operations, and Influences. More, or less, may be ascrib'd to it. A Whole may be attributed, or taken from it; or else it may be said, God and Man divide the Empire between them. This was the Opinion of the Pharisees, whilst the Saducees deny'd any Operation of Providence, that had any Influence over Men's Actions. It was then to this Influencing Providence, which these ancient Hereticks wou'd not admit, that Josephus gave the Name of Fate; because he had no other to bestow upon it, and that the different Sects of that time disputed about the necessity of Events, and the Liberty, that God granted to Man in their Production; which had a great affinity with the Controversies of Philosophers concerning Fate.

Josephus † speaking of the Pharisees, explains their Opinion so plainly, that I can't conceive how it cou'd be made intricate. They believe, says he, that every thing is perform'd by Fate; However they do not take away from the Will, the freedom of determining it self; because, according to them, God uses this Medium, (viz.) That altho all things happen by his Decrees, or Council; Man yet preserves a Power to chuse either Vice, or Virtue.

Nothing can be clearer than the Testimony of this Historian, who was of the Sect of the Pharisees, and must have known their Opinions. 1. We see by it, that Fate so much talk'd of, which makes Events necessary; but at the same time we perceive, that this Fate, is the Decree, or Council of God, whereby every thing comes to pass. 2. This Decree goes no farther than common Events, and Man hath, notwithstanding it, always a power to chuse Virtue, or Vice. God doth not deprive the Will of the freedom of Choice. How can it then be fansy'd, that the Pharisees believ'd themselves under the Influences of Planets, and the Concatenation of Secondary Causes? So that a place of Josephus, which seems difficult, must not be insisted upon, when he explains himself elsewhere with so much clearness and perspicuity.

The Jewish Fathers, Masters of Traditions, Depositaries of the Oral Law, Witnesses of the Opinions of their Church, and the Offspring of the Pharisees; whose Sentences have been collected as so many Oracles, have said ‖, God sees all things. However, he hath left a Free-Will to Man: The World shall be judg'd in good, and Sentence shall be pass'd according to the number of good Works. These first Fathers, the Offspring of the Pharisees, speak, and express their Opinion in few Words. 1. They admit of a Providence, that watches over, and regulates all Events. 2. They allow Man a full liberty to Good, or Evil. 3. Lastly, They ‖‖ add, that Men shall be judg'd by the number of their Good Works. Interpreters translate this otherwise, and understand that God shall judge in good, that is, by his Mercy, rather than by his Justice, and will prefer the number of Alms to their Magnificence. But then they must alter the use of Terms; For * Good signifies rather good Works, than God's Mercy. Thus we find there the third Principle of Pharisaism, which lay'd down, that the Sentence, which God shall pronounce at the Last Day, shall be grounded on the number of every Man's good Works.

To conclude, the Modern Rabbins are Pharisees; They have imbib'd their Opinions from their Masters, and still follow them. It is very well known, that they do not differ much from those, who are call'd Remonstrants in Holland. They approve of the Concourse, which these last ascribe to God in humane Actions, and of the Liberty, which they attribute to Man, to chuse Good or Evil. They do not incline to that side out of Policy, they follow the Tradition of their Fathers. In a Word, they say with the ancient Doctors, that all things are in the hand of Heaven, except the fear of God; and the Heaven, which they mention, is not that of Stars; but they understand thereby the Deity that resides there. Sure, none will believe, that Christ did introduce the Prodigal Son after he repented, as wedded to the Stars, and begging Pardon of the Stars, which he had not offended. Yet he makes him cry out, I have sinn'd against Heaven, and before thee. Heaven there signifies God himself. Thus the Name of Fate is given to Providence, because it produces, by its Decrees, a necessity like that of the Concatenation of Secondary Causes.

9. It is easy to discover by this natural Signification, the true Opinion of the Pharisees, who maintain'd these three Things. 1. They believ'd, that natural and common Accidents necessarily happen'd, because Providence had foreseen and determin'd them. This they call'd Fate, which impos'd a necessity to Actions and Events.

Secondly, They left Man his Freedom to Good, or Evil. Josephus says it positively, when he affirm'd, that it was in Man's Power to do Good, or Evil. So that Providence govern'd all humane Transactions, but impos'd no necessity to Vice, or Virtue. And the better to assert the Empire, which they pretended to have over the Notions of their Hearts, and the Actions that were the results of them, they alledg'd the Words of Deuteronomy, wherein God declares, that he hath set before his People Life and Death, and exhorts them to chuse Life.

This suits very well with the Pride of the Pharisees, who boasted, that they fulfill'd the Law, and expected the Reward due to their good Works, as if they had merited it. We are not to examine, whether this System of the Pharisees is coherent, or to suppose by some Arguments, that they depriv'd Man of his Free-Will. For when we inquire into the Opinions of a Sect, we must necessarily depend on the Testimony of Authors, who were well acquainted with, and were leading Men in it, as Josephus was. Besides, how many Divines leave to God his Prescience, and Decrees of natural Events; and yet suppose in Man an intire Freedom in Acts of Religion and Piety? Can it be said, that they deny Free-Will, even when they so warmly assert it? The Pharisees did the same Thing.

Lastly, Altho they believ'd a freedom to Good and Evil, they admitted of some assistance from God; For they were assisted by Fate. This last Principle takes off all the difficulty. For if Fate was with them a blind Cause, and a Concatenation of Secondary Causes, or the Influence of Stars, it wou'd be ridiculous to say, that Fate assisted them. Fate cannot manage its Operations and Efficacy, or help Mankind at this rate,

* Joseph. Ant. l. 13. c. 9. p. 442. † Joseph. Ant. l. 18. c. 2. p. 617. ‖ Pirke Abbot, c. 3. n. 15. p. 36. ‖‖ Leusden, Not. in Pirke, p. 40. * ובמוב Ubetob in bono.

because

becauſe it makes their Actions neceſſary. But Providence acted with an abſolute Sway in natural Events, and temper'd its Power in Acts of Piety, that theſe Acts might be free, and worthy either of Rewards, or of Puniſhments. So that the Phariſees muſt not be plac'd among the Stoicks, who ſubmitted all things to Fate, as ſeveral Ancients *, and Moderns have believ'd.

10. Bullus's † Explication of the Words of St. James, vaniſhes as ſoon as we have diſcover'd the Opinion of the Phariſees. He ſuppoſes, without grounds, that this Apoſtle oppos'd them when he ſaid, that every perfect Gift is from Above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights. He afterwards transforms this Apoſtle into an Aſtronomer, who alludes to the Tropicks, and Revolutions of Planets, to teach us God's Immutability. The Father of Lights ſignifies, ſays he, the Father of Stars; and the Term from Above, a more exalted Place, than that of Planets. How vain are theſe Subtilties; which are grounded upon this Suppoſition; that the Phariſees made God the Author of Sin, and that their Salvation depended on the Influences of Planets, or on the Concatination of Secondary Cauſes.

But this Foundation is overſet; ſince the Phariſees, far from believing God the Author of Sin, and that the Planets made Actions neceſſary by their Influences; they maintain'd that they had an abſolute Freedom to chuſe Good, or Evil. Was it not to St. James's purpoſe to call God the Father of Lights, when he ſpoke of the Knowledge, which he infuſes into our Hearts? Was there any neceſſity, that he ſhou'd put the Phariſees in mind of the Tropicks, and teach them, that God's Throne is above the Stars, to make them by this nice turn, think upon his Power and Immutability, which were too well known in their Sect, to be ever queſtion'd?

Bullus doth here aſcribe to the Phariſees ſome Opinions which they never had, that he may ſay that St. James hath refuted them. He afterwards ſuppoſes, that this Apoſtle pointed at them, that he might vend his new Conjectures, and make the Holy Ghoſt affect ſome trivial Alluſions. Laſtly, It happen'd to him, what happens commonly, when People read the Holy Scripture with too much nicety; inſtead of explaining what is clear, they make it intricate.

For St. James's Words are plain, provided they are not clouded. He ſays, that the Grace, that converts, and ſaves, doth not flow from Man's Heart, and Inconſtancy, but from Heaven, and God the Author of our Knowledge; and that very indirectly points at the Phariſees.

11. Some will perhaps think, that they can overſet our Opinion by the Prayer of the Phariſee of the Goſpel, who is introduc'd ſaying, || God, I thank thee, that I am not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjuſt, Adulterers, or even as this Publican. For ſince he acknowledg'd God the Author of the Virtues, which he practis'd, and aſcribes the Glory of them to him; he muſt either have contradicted himſelf, or have acknowledg'd an efficacious Grace, which byaſs'd his Will to Good. But this Difficulty confirms, that the Phariſees, far from ſtooping to Planets, or a blind Fate, recurr'd to God himſelf, ſince they glorify'd him for their Actions. Beſides, we know that the Semi-Pelagians uſe the ſame Prayers, as the Aſſertors of a conquering Grace. They own with the Phariſees, that God helps them, and they give to that Fate, which is God, part of the Glory of their Virtues. It is perhaps a ſecret Teſtimony, which Truth extorts from them. Theſe haughty Men, intoxicated with their Free-Will, are yet forc'd to humble themſelves before God, and to acknowledge the neceſſity and influence of that very Grace, which they oppoſe. But it is perhaps an artifice of Pride, which ſhrouds it ſelf under the Deity, and ſpeaks more boldly under his Name. The General of an Army, orders the Te Deum to be ſung for a Victory, for which he applauds himſelf, as if it had been at his diſpoſal. The Bigots ſpeak often after the ſame rate. They brag of their Virtues, as being the effects of God's Aſſiſtance, and yet they inwardly think themſelves the true Authors of their good Works. Laſtly, Some think themſelves oblig'd to God for that Portion of Aſſiſtance which he gives them, and thank him, that they are not wicked Men, notwithſtanding that they believe, that it was their Will that choſe Good from Evil. This Contradiction, which is now between the Hearts and Mouths of all the Semi-Pelagians, might be in the Mouth of this Phariſee. Beſides, ſome Rabbins of this Sect have cry'd out, notwithſtanding that they were very zealous Semi Pelagians |||; "You know, O God, that our Will is "to fulfil Yours: But we find a difficulty in it. For "the Leaven is in the Maſs, and Concupiſcence in the "Heart. Humble it before and after us; that we "may with an upright Heart accompliſh what you "have commanded. But we have inſiſted long enough upon this Subject, which we were oblig'd to explain, by reaſon of the Authority of St. Epiphanius, and of the Learned, who have added their Conjectures to his.

12. This is only part of the Syſtem of the Phariſees: It is worth while to unravel the means, whereby they pretended to be juſtify'd before God, not only to give a clear notion of their Opinions, but alſo to explain the true meaning of St. Paul about Juſtification, which hath been ſo long controverted. For this Apoſtle compos'd his Epiſtles to the Romans and Galatians, to diſpute againſt the Phariſees, and to pull down their Pride by expoſing their Opinions.

13. All Nations have agreed, that Men were oblig'd to pay ſome certain Duties to the Gods; that there were ſome general Laws that were to be obſerv'd to pleaſe them; and that the Violation of theſe Laws expos'd the Tranſgreſſors to their Indignation. But as Sins cou'd not be avoided, every one hath endeavour'd to find out ſome means to avoid the Puniſhments that they deſerve, and ſcreen themſelves from the Wrath of God. I preſume to ſay, that all Nations have agreed upon this Article, except the Chriſtians, who ſtick to the Goſpel and St. Paul.

14. The Heathens thought to appeaſe the Deity with Sacrifices; and that the Number and Quality of the Victims help'd to expiate Crimes. They therefore offer'd Children. Maimonides believes, that the Canaanites made their Children only paſs through Fire, becauſe they aſcrib'd the Power of Purifying to that Element; a Superſtition which ſome Chriſtians have adopted; ſince the * Council of Conſtantinople cenſures thoſe that made Bonfires before their Houſes, to go over them every New Moon. However it is true, that the antient Idolaters look'd upon their Children as Victims, which they put in their ſtead to aſſwage the Deity; and to this the Scripture alludes, when it introduces a Woman crying out in a fright, † Shall I give my firſt-born for my Tranſgreſſion? She believ'd that the Sacrifice of a Child, and the Eldeſt of her Family, would be a more acceptable Sacrifice to the Deity, which ſhe ador'd. All the Heathens did not exactly agree in the matter of Sacrifices: For ſome only offer'd Oxen, and Lambs, and alſo purify'd themſelves by Fire, or by waſhing in Fountains.

Ah! nimium faciles, qui triſtia crimina cædis,
Fluminea tolli poſſe putatis aqua.

15. Philoſophers rather laugh'd at the Vulgar's Veneration for theſe Ceremonies, than at the Ceremo-

* Juſtin Martyr. Ephipha. Lanſſelius ad Juſtin Martyr. Calumniarum Caſauboni Diſpunctio, c. 4. p. 525. † Bullus Harmon. Apoſt. c. 15. || Luke 18. 11. ||| N. Alexander. * Concil. in Trullo. Can. 65. † Micah 6. 7.

nies

nies themſelves; As Miniſters often reprehend Chriſtians, for being fond of certain Devotions, and for their overſtrain'd Opinion of the Efficacy of the Sacraments independently from Piety. Iamblichus ſaid, that the Union with the Deity was not acquir'd by Contemplation alone, but by the Practice of the ineffable Ceremonies, and Operations worthy of the Deity. The Sages offer'd Sacrifices with the Vulgar; and Socrates, when he had nothing to hope, or fear from the Mob, had a Sacrifice offer'd, whilſt he drank Hemlock.

16. It is only true, that Philoſophers, who had more Senſe than the Crowd, often told them, that the ſmoak of ſtinking Fat, and ſome Bones, which Dogs won'd hardly gnaw, were not ſufficient Attonements to the Gods for Crimes. They endeavour'd to make them prefer the Acts of Virtue, to the Number of Sacrifices. But the People lik'd Sacrifices better; becauſe it was eaſier to cut a Sheep's Throat, than to ſacrifice their Paſſions; but Philoſophers thought that the Acts of Repentance, and Piety, muſt be more acceptable to the Gods. But they agreed in the main in theſe two Principles; one, that it was requiſite to worſhip the Gods in their Temples, and offer them ſome Sacrifices; the other, that Sin was more truly expiated by Repentance, and the Sorrow of having committed it; ſince the Gods

Sæpe levant pœnas, ereptaque lumina reddunt
Cum bene peccati pœnituiſſe vident:

They diſtinguiſh'd between Attrition and Contrition; for they requir'd that Repentance ſhou'd be produc'd rather by ſorrow and ſhame, than by the fear of Puniſhments.

Cumque ſit exilium, magis eſt mihi culpa dolori.

They cry'd out as well as the Publican in the Goſpel, Be merciful unto me; and aſcrib'd a great Efficacy to their Prayers. Our Mind is awaken'd by them, ſaid Iamblichus, and our Souls deſire the Fruition of the Supream Being: We frame our ſelves to the Reſemblance of God, by our Converſation with him; and inſtead of our Imperfections, we acquire his Perfections. They did not think either Contrition, or Prayers, enough, unleſs back'd with Virtue and good Works. "We muſt, ſays "Plato, love Juſtice, and practiſe Piety; have a "tender regard for our Relations, Friends, and "Countrey; ſeek for Wiſdom during this Life, and "we ſhall paſs the reſt of our time without Ignorance, "Fear, and without the reach of Misfortunes. To "conclude, * we ſhall be with God. So that the Heathens thought that Sacrifices, and Acts of Piety, did attone for Sins.

17. The Phariſees were of the ſame Opinion, but with this difference, that being bred in the School of Moſes, they had a more accurate Knowledge of the nature of good Works.

Firſt, it cannot be deny'd, but they had a mighty Veneration for the Sacrifices, and Ceremonies of the Law, whoſe Excellency they extoll'd. And therefore St. Paul found it a hard matter to undeceive them, and convince them, that the Blood of Goats, and Bulls, and † thoſe Sacrifices which they offer'd Year by Year, did not make the comers thereunto perfect.

Secondly, they believ'd that they cou'd fulfill the Law; and that they became acceptable to God by an exact obſervation of his Commands. For they taught, that God weigh'd their Sins with their Virtues, and that they were juſtify'd, and ſav'd, if their Virtues out-weigh'd their Crimes.

18. They were guilty of a plain Contradiction. For not ſatisfy'd with the Precepts of the Law; they added to it ſome works of Supererogation, Faſts, Abſtinences, and very mortifying Devotions, which they believ'd very Meritorious; but they at the ſame time curtail'd the Law, flatter'd the Paſſions and Corruption of the Heart by their falſe Interpretations. They even thought, that Sins that were hatch'd in the Heart were no Sins, when they were not put in Execution. And therefore Joſephus, who had been of that Sect, laugh'd at Polybius, who believ'd that the Gods puniſh'd Antiochus for deſigning to plunder their Temple. The Phariſees were alſo like the Heathens in this, that ſome Bigots among them wou'd voluntary undergo ſome Abſtinences, which they thought of great Efficacy.

19. The Phariſees differ'd from the Pagans in two things. One, that they ſaid, that they had the aſſiſtance of Fate, either for Good or Evil. This Fate was not that Grace of God that bringeth Salvation, which is acknowledg'd by Chriſtians. For Nicodemus, a Doctor of the Law, and a Phariſee too, had no notion of it: But they underſtood thereby a general Providence, that had ſome influence over Men's Actions. It did not confine their Free-Will, but left them at their Choice to act, or not act; yet when they had made a good Choice, it aſſiſted them. Beſides, the Phariſees were much more haughty than the Heathens, becauſe it was certain that God had given them his Law, which was the rule of their Actions. He had many times extoll'd the excellency of the Sacrifices, which he had inſtituted with ſo much Pomp. In a Word, The Covenant, which he made at the Foot of Mount Sinai, was endow'd with a great many Privileges, which ſwell'd the Heart and Hope of the Phariſees ſo much, that they contemn'd the reſt of Mankind, as being inferiour to them. But in the main, they had the general Idea of Juſtification, which moſt Nations receive, (viz.) That Crimes are atton'd for by ſome Satisfaction given to the Deity, and by a New Change of Life and Converſation. This appears by St. Paul's Diſpute againſt them, wherein he doth theſe three Things.

Firſt, He annuls their Notion of the Sacrifices of the Law, which, they believ'd, had expiated the Sins of the People.

Secondly, He explodes their great Value for their good Works, and Virtues, which they thought juſtify'd them.

Laſtly, He diſcovers a new way to be juſtify'd by Faith, which relies on the Merit of Chriſt, and the Satisfaction which he gave for us upon the Croſs. But we muſt explain this more clearly.

20. Every body owns, that St. Paul oppos'd the excellency, and worth of Sacrifices. But ſome Divines imagine, that the Apoſtle proceeded no farther; as if the Phariſees wholly rely'd on the Luſtrations and Ceremonies of the Law, and aſcrib'd no Merit to good Works. But they did not know the Temper of this Sect, which being exceſſively proud, made the Juſtification of its Members depend rather of their own Strength, Virtues, and good Works, than of Victims. Beſides, They make them more ignorant than the Heathens themſelves, who requir'd from Sinners, Prayers, Contrition, and ſome Acts of Virtue as well as Sacrifices. Do they imagine, that the Phariſee, who boaſted of his Faſting, and Alms, and ſaid, that he had fulfill'd all things from his Childhood, thought Victims only meritorious, and aſcrib'd nothing to his good Works? People muſt be very little acquainted with Man's Heart to argue at this rate. We naturally love what cometh from us, and our Virtues puff us up, and make us fancy that God cannot refuſe us any thing, when we are virtuous.

21. So that it was St. Paul's chief Deſign in this Diſpute, to prove to the Phariſees, that none cou'd be juſtify'd by the Works of the Law, and therefore he repeats Ten or Twelve times this Truth, (viz.) That the Law includes all under the ſame Condemnation; that it only expos'd the Deformity of Sin, but did not enable to perform good Works; and and therefore no Fleſh was juſtify'd by the Works of the Law. He doth not except from this general Rule either the Saints, or the Prophets, or Moſes himſelf, the Chief of the Prophets, and the Perſon who had given the Law. He introduces the greateſt Men of the Law; as David, a Man after God's own Heart, who yet confeſs'd, that, Bleſſed is the Man unto whom the Lord imputeth not Iniquity. He thought it not enough to offer Sacrifices, but he alſo perform'd good Works. For he knew too well the Inſignificancy of Sacrifices, not to rely rather upon his own Virtues, than upon the blood of Victims. Thou deſireſt, ſaid he to God, no Sacrifice, elſe I wou'd give it thee; and inſtead of doing it, he hath recourſe to God's Mercy; whence this neceſſarily follows, that the greateſt Saints cou'd be juſtify'd by the Works of the Moral no more than by the Sacrifices of the Ceremonial Law. Laſtly, He aſcends as high as the beginning of the Church, and proves the ſame Thing of Abraham the Father of Believers, againſt whom the Phariſees cou'd make no Objection.

* Plato in Phæd. p. 386. init. † Heb. c. 10. v. 1.

repeats

22. After he hath lanc'd the Phariſaical Tumor; he lays down a new way to be juſtify'd, which Chriſt hath procur'd us. But to clear this Point, he teaches, that as the Law includes all under the ſame Condemnation, it is by a meer effect of God's Mercy, that we are ſav'd: And to take away from the Fleſh all manner of Pretences of boaſting, he goes as far as the Decrees of Predeſtination, which were made a long time before us. He gives an Inſtance of it in Jacob, and Eſau. Theſe Children being not yet born, neither having done any Good, or Evil, God ſaid of them, Jacob have I lov'd, but Eſau have I hated. As this Decree of Predeſtination, which preceeds Man's Birth, ſeems to have ſomething harſh in it, St. Paul compleats the Humiliation of Man's Pride, by comparing him to a lump of Clay, over which the Potter hath power to make one Veſſel unto Honour, and another unto Diſhonour. I grant that the Compariſon is very degrading, and ſeems beſides to be much more harſh, than the Decree of Predeſtination. But one proves the other, and ſhews, that Man abſolutely depends of God; and St. Paul is the Inventor of this Compariſon.

23. After he hath humbl'd Man by taking away all reliance on Himſelf, and good Works, he ſhews him the true way to be juſtify'd before God; It is the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, that Satisfaction of an infinite Price, which is counted to us for Righteouſneſs. St. Paul uſes this Expreſſion to make us apprehend, that our Sins are written in thoſe ſeal'd Books, which ſhall be open'd at the Day of Judgment, as ſo many Debts, that we have contracted with his Juſtice. God finds nothing on the other ſide to make the Balance even. There are no Sacrifices under the Goſpel to be plac'd to account, neither are any Virtues, or good Works, ſet down on the Regiſter of God, to ballance our Sins; but inſtead of Victims, and our good Works, he accounts unto Men the Righteouſneſs of his Son; and this Righteouſneſs, being perfect, makes an intire Propitiation for our Sins; and as this Righteouſneſs, which God's Mercy offers us, is accepted by Faith, St. Paul ends his Diſpute, by concluding, that Man is not juſtify'd by the Works of the Law, but by Faith. * Therefore we conclude that a Man is juſtify'd by Faith without the Deeds of the Law.

24. There remain'd a Difficulty, which naturally flow'd from the Syſtem of St. Paul, ſuch as we ſuppoſe it. For if we are juſtify'd meerly by God's Mercy, and through the Merit of Chriſt, and all that we do towards it, is to accept it by Faith, being in that caſe like Beggars, who ſtretch and open their Hands to receive the Alms which keep them from ſtarving; it may be concluded, that good Works are not neceſſary, and that the number and enormity of our Crimes will but heighten the glory of Grace. † Shall we continue in Sin, that Grace may abound? God forbid. St. Paul who had foreſeen this Objection, ſolves it. It cannot ariſe from the other Syſtems that are father'd upon this Apoſtle. For whether he rejected the Sacrifices of the Law, or extoll'd the Oeconomy of the Goſpel, or of Faith, above the Oeconomy of Works, as ſome ſpeak, no body cou'd thence fancy, that good Works might be laid aſide. And indeed, becauſe St. Paul excludes the Sacrifices and Ceremonies of the Law from Juſtification, it doth not follow from thence, that Piety ought to be neglected; but if he excludes the Moral Law, he gives occaſion to the wicked to ſay, that he ſtifles the love of good Works, ſince he juſtifies Sinners without them. It is an Argument, that we have explain'd St. Paul's Opinion, ſince the Objections which he ſtarts againſt himſelf, flow from the Syſtem, which we aſcribe to him, as it is a Mark, that a Phyſitian hath hit the Diſtemper, when all the Symptoms, whereof the Patient complains, ariſe from the Principles, which he hath laid down.

25. In order to remove all Scruples about this Matter, let us add to it the Commentary of St. Clement Biſhop of Rome, and St. Paul's Diſciple. His Letter to the Corinthians is not ſpurious, and who can be a better Commentator of St. Paul than his own Scholar? Yet after he hath prais'd the Holy Men of the Old Teſtament, as Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, he affirms, that theſe Holy Men did not acquire eternal Happineſs either by themſelves, or their Works, or good Actions, but by the Will of God. Whence he concludes, that we alſo, who are call'd by the Will of Chriſt, are not Righteous through our own Wiſdom, or Knowledge, or Piety, or the Works we have perform'd with Uprightneſs of Heart; but through Faith, whereby the Almighty juſtifies all thoſe that have ever been Righteous. The Sacrifices and Ceremonies of the Law are not concern'd here. For Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, have never pretended to be juſtify'd by them; but by Acts of Piety and Works perform'd with uprightneſs of Heart. Theſe St. Clement ‖ excludes from Juſtification, to make it depend upon the Will of God, and Faith. This is Paul's Syſtem, whence the ſame Fear aroſe in the Scholar's Mind, as had ſprung in that of the Maſter, (viz.) Leaſt ſome might conclude from thence, that good Works ought to be neglected. And he therefore prevents this Objection of impious Men. What ſhall we do, Brethren? ſays he, Shall we leave off doing Good, and neglect Charity? God forbid, that this ſhou'd happen: On the contrary, let us make haſt to produce theſe good Actions with zeal and eagerneſs; and of what uſe can theſe good Works and Zeal be, if they have no ſhare in our Juſtification? They ſhall not be loſt. For St. Clement ſays, That God will take delight in them.

26. However ſeveral attempts are made to ruin the Syſtems, which we have aſcrib'd to the Phariſees, and to St. Paul, who diſputes againſt them. Three things have been alledg'd to elude what St. Paul ſays in his Epiſtle to the Romans concerning Juſtification. Some contend, that this Controverſy is not ſuch a one as is now between the Church of Rome and ſome Proteſtants. This is, ſay they, one of thoſe Prejudices which Divines employ to dazle the Mob, notwithſtanding that it is only grounded upon ſome Expreſſions of St. Paul, which they abuſe, for want of knowing what they mean. One ſays, that by the Works of the Law, which the Apoſtle debars from the Glory of being able to juſtify, we muſt underſtand the Ceremonies of the Law, thoſe Abolutions, and Sacrifices, that cou'd not purify thoſe who come unto them. But he thereby makes not only the Phariſees, but alſo Abra- ham and David, and all the Fathers of the ancient Teſtament more ignorant than Idolaters, who, as we have already obſerv'd, thought that Juſtification depended rather upon the practice of Virtue, than upon Victims, and Offerings.

* Rom. 3. 28. † Rom. 4. 1, 2. ‖ Clemens Ep. ad Cor. 1. c. 32. 33. p. 164.

ham

27. Others pretend, that St. Paul doth not make an oppoſition between Works and Faith; but between the Law, which was the Oeconomy of Works, and the Goſpel, which is the Oeconomy of Faith. So that the Works of the Law ſignify the Legal Diſpenſation, and Faith ſignifies the Goſpel, under whoſe Diſpenſation Men are juſtify'd. But without entering into a Diſpute, it may eaſily be obſerv'd, that they alter the natural meaning of theſe Words: And to what purpoſe? Is it becauſe theſe Expreſſions of the Apoſtle are not common and underſtood? Are People ignorant of what good Works and Faith ſignify? Doth St. Paul teach here a Doctrine ſo contrary to right Reaſon, that we ſhou'd be oblig'd to recurr to ſome ſtrange and unknown Significations? I confeſs that the Truth that he teaches is humbling, but yet it is plain, and full of Comfort.

28. Beſides, why hath St. Paul, when he handl'd a Controverſy wherein proper terms ought to be us'd in order to be underſtood, always ſpoken of the Works of the Law to denote the Legal Covenant? Why hath he always call'd the Goſpel Faith? Is it becauſe the Words Covenant and Goſpel, which were infinitely more proper to expreſs his Thought, did not naturally occurr in his Mind, or that he did not know them? This no body will preſume to ſay. Faith was known under the Oeconomy of the Law as well as under the Goſpel. For the Fathers of that Oeconomy were juſtify'd by Faith. They believ'd in a Meſſiah that was to come, and the Modern Jews have adopted from their Anceſtors, that lively Faith, which relies on the Promiſes of God. Virtue and good Works muſt be practis'd as well under the Goſpel as under the Law. So that Men might be juſtify'd under the Legal Diſpenſation, tho not by its means; as we are oblig'd to be Holy under the Goſpel, altho that is not the means of Juſtification. So that this was not properly the Queſtion which St. Paul diſcuſs'd, whether Men cou'd be juſtify'd under the Law, or under the Goſpel; but he ſhew'd that they cou'd not be juſtify'd by good Works, but by Faith alone.

29. But the moſt ſubtle Argument againſt our Aſſertion is this. St. Paul oppugn'd the Phariſees, who corrupted the Law by their falſe Interpretations, and rely'd upon a very imperfect Righteouſneſs, which was produc'd by the practice of External Devotions, wherein the Heart had no ſhare, and upon Ablutions and Ceremonies unable to juſtify Sinners. It is true, that he ſpoke of the Moral, as well as of the Ceremonial Law. But then he ſpoke of it in the Senſe of the Phariſees, as of a Law, that was not well interpreted, but was weaken'd, and mangl'd by falſe Explanations; and it is this Righteouſneſs of Phariſaical Works, which he rejects as no way conducive to Juſtification.

We might diſpute about the Nature of the good Works of the Phariſees. For they did not only avoid Sin, and faſt, but they gave very conſiderable Alms, and practis'd Charity. Beſides, they believ'd that they fulfill'd the Law. But without deſcending to theſe Particulars, I own that the Righteouſneſs of the Phariſees was imperfect, ſuperficial, and deceitful: St. Paul doth not only confute them, but alſo aſcends as high as the Law, and the Holy Men, who ſtrove to obſerve it, and yet cou'd not be thereby juſtify'd. Abraham was no Phariſee, and his Obedience was pure and ſincere. Nevertheleſs, he was not juſtify'd by good Works, but by Faith. David liv'd under the Law, when the Phariſees were not ſo much as thought of; and yet he makes his Happineſs conſiſt in the Pardon, which God freely grants to Mankind; and it is thence that St. Paul concludes, that we are not juſtify'd by good Works, but by Faith without the Works of the Law. He doth not then ſpeak of the Law, as it is not well interpreted; but of the Law, ſuch as God gave it, and his Intention is to prove, that the moſt perfect Obedience is not ſufficient to ſcreen Man from Condemnation, and lead him to the Salvation of his Soul. This is enough to clear this Difficulty, which ſeveral Divines have handl'd more at large, and have rather embroil'd than clear'd.

CHAP. XI.

Of the Phariſees. Their Opinion of a Metempſycoſis, and their Auſtere way of Living.

I. THE Phariſees accus'd of believing a Metempſycoſis. II. Whether Chriſt was Elias. III. Some Remarks upon the Man that was born Blind. IV. Whether Tranſmigration deſtroys the Reſurrection. V. The Silence of the Saducees. VI. Joſephus's Authority. VII. The falſe Zeal of the Phariſees. VIII. They impoſe upon Mankind. IX. Seven Orders of Phariſees. Whether they were like the Monks. X. Their Mortifications. XI. Their Ablutions. XII. Some Miſtakes of St. Epiphanius concerning the Phariſees. XIII. Their Zeal. XIV. Their Titles. XV. Their Power over the Kings. XVI. The preſent State of that Sect. XVII. Whether the Phariſees were Hereticks.

1. THE Phariſees are accus'd of teaching the Tranſmigration of Souls, which they had borrow'd of the Orientals, with whom that Opinion was common. But the truth of this Accuſation is queſtion'd; becauſe Chriſt never upbraided them with that Errour; Clemens Alexandrinus, and St. Epiphanius ſaid nothing of it; and it ſeems to deſtroy the Reſurrection of the Dead; ſince, if a Soul hath belong'd to ſeveral Bodies upon Earth, it will be a hard matter to chuſe the Body, that ſhe ought to prefer to the reſt to wear it in Heaven. Whoſe Wife ſhall ſhe be?

2. I do not know, whether that is enough to juſtify this Sect; becauſe the Tranſmigration of Souls, is a very ancient and common Opinion among the Jews, who are all Phariſees. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt did not deſign to refute all the Errours of the Phariſees; and if St. Paul had not ſpoken of this Sect, we ſhou'd not at this time know their Opinions concerning Juſtification. We muſt not then conclude from the Silence of the Goſpel, that they did not believe either the Preexiſtence of Souls, or their Tranſmigration. We might preſume the contrary from ſome places of Scripture. For the Multitude believ'd, that Chriſt was * Elias, or Jeremias, or one of the Prophets. But they might have imagin'd, that Elias was come down from Heaven, or that Jeremias was rais'd from the Dead. But as this is only a Conjecture, it may as well be ſaid, that they believ'd that the Soul of the Prophets came to enliven another Body to reſtore the Church; and this laſt Conjecture is as probable as the other.

3. The Apoſtles ſeeing a Man, that was born Blind, and unable to find out the true Cauſe of ſo exemplary a Puniſhment, aſk'd of our Saviour, whether it was his Father, or his Mother, or he himſelf that had ſinn'd. It is manifeſt that this Blind Man cou'd not have ſinn'd; or his Soul been puniſh'd for the Crime he had committed, unleſs his Soul had pre-exiſted, or been in another Body before. For there wou'd be no Senſe to ask, whether a Man, who had no Being before his Birth, had ſinn'd? So that the Apoſtles muſt have pointed either at the Tranſmigration, or the Pre-exiſtence of Souls, ſuch as Origen believ'd afterwards. Thus the Goſpel doth rather inſinuate, that it was a common Opinion among the Jews, who had borrow'd it of the Orientals.

* Matth. 16. 14.

4. Neither ought we to juſtify the Phariſees; becauſe they had deſtroy'd the Reſurrection by a Metempſycoſis. For the Modern Jews admit both of the Revolution of Souls, and the Reſurrection of the Body; and the Phariſees might have done the ſame thing. They even remove the Difficulty, ariſing from the Soul's being puzl'd about the Choice of the Body, which ſhe ſhall be oblig'd to make, out of all thoſe, that ſhe hath animated. For they maintain, that only one of them ſhall be rais'd from the Duſt, and that the reſt ſhall be overlook'd as dry and uſeleſs Lumps. Yet this doth not determine, which of them ſhall be preferr'd, and their Opinions are divided about it. For ſome are for the Firſt Body, wherein the Soul was lodg'd; but others prefer the Laſt; becauſe it is the Body wherein ſhe hath perfected her ſelf. Let the matter be how it will, one Body only ſhall riſe. * One of theſe Bodies ſhall be, ſays Jeremiah, like the Heath in the Deſart, and ſhall not ſee when good cometh, but ſhall inhabit the parch'd Places in the Wilderneſs, in a ſalt Land, and not inhabited. But the other ſhall be as the Picture, which the Pſalmiſt hath drawn of it; † A Tree planted by the Rivers of Water, his Leaf ſhall not wither, and ſhall bring forth his Fruit in his Seaſon.

5. Laſtly, The Silence of the Saducees doth not prove any thing to juſtify the Phariſees; becauſe the Writings of theſe ancient Hereticks are loſt. Whence is it known, that they held their Peace, and did not hit their Adverſaries in the Teeth with this? Hath any body read their Diſputes? Add, that they tolerated one another ſo much, that they all ſacrific'd in the ſame Temple; and they rather ſtudy'd to inſinuate themſelves into the favour of thoſe that were rich, and in power, than to propagate their Tenets, or to diſpute againſt their Enemies: And the Goſpel ſpeaks ſo little of either, that we cannot judge thereby how far the Errours of theſe two Sects extended.

6. Joſephus's Authority, who ſpeaks clearly about that Matter, ought to prevail over the Silence of the Saducees, and even of the Goſpel. He affirms ‖ that the Phariſees believ'd, that the Souls of the Wicked were ſhut up in Priſons, and there ſuffer'd Eternal Torments, whilſt, that of good Men found an eaſy return to Life, and went into another Body. This return of the Souls ‖‖ to Life can't be explain'd by the Reſurrection. For the Immortal Soul ſhall never die, nor riſe again. Neither can it be ſaid, that ſhe ſhall go into another Body at the Laſt Day. For, beſides that ſhe ſhall put on again, by the Reſurrection, the ſame Body that ſhe hath animated in this Life, and that its Qualities only ſhall be chang'd; the Phariſees did thereby repreſent the different State of good and wicked Men immediately after Death; and therefore to make Joſephus point at the Reſurrection, is to father too quaint a thought upon him. A Hiſtorian, who relates the Opinions of a Sect ſpeaks more naturally, and expreſſes himſelf with more perſpicuity.

7. It is true, that we ſhou'd ſpeak of the auſtere way of Living of the Phariſees. For they thereby ſeduc'd the People; and acquir'd an Authority, which made them formidable to the Kings. It is a ſtrange thing to ſee Men, who boaſted to God of the Perfection of their Holineſs, ſtudy how to find out ſome Lenitives, which made the Law of no effect, and that ſome Bigots, who loaded themſelves with new Precepts, as if the Law was not ſevere enough, did weaken it by their falſe Interpretations. But we ought not to think it ſtrange when we conſider, that this happens in moſt Religions. And there is a very plain reaſon for it. For had a Man always an exact Notion of the extent and perfection of Piety, he wou'd fall into deſpair, if he did rely on his Virtues, and good Works. We are conſcious of our Imperfections, Defects, and Impotency, when we examine our Obedience, and regulate our Examination by the Law. Pride then ſinks, which a Man that relies on his Righteouſneſs cannot endure: And we are oblig'd to have recourſe to God's Mercy; and proud Man doth not care to have ſo intire a Dependence upon him. He makes up the Difference between God and him. For he keeps the Notion of his own Righteouſneſs, and Virtues; and that he may ſtill keep it, he complies with the eaſieſt Commands. He adapts Morality to his Strength, and Weakneſs; and afterwards ſpeaks as confidently, as if God was oblig'd to ſubmit to what he determines.

8. He doth not think it enough to attempt to deceive God, but he will alſo endeavour to impoſe upon others, whoſe Applauſe he wants to keep up a falſe Zeal. The Vulgar doth not dive into the Heart to unravel its Motions. A dejected Countenance, and the Report which he gives out of his Faſts, Hair-cloth and Mortifications, whether true or falſe, draw Peoples Eyes, and Confidence, and afterwards their Acclamations upon him. He is prais'd, without curbing his Paſſions: On the contrary, his Pride feeds upon Encomiums. He values himſelf in his Retirement; and a motion of Self-love, which he thinks lawful, makes amends for a great deal of Trouble. But this Trouble is not ſo great, as we commonly imagine. The Body doth not find ſo much reluctancy as we fanſie, to uſe it ſelf to Temperance, and Stripes; whereas the Paſſions are not reſtrain'd and broken, but after long and vigorous ſtruglings. They reſiſt thoſe, that ſtrive to conquer them; grow boiſterous, when they are attack'd; rally and charge again after they have been routed; and when you think that you have bury'd them, they riſe again from the Grave. A Man cannot expect any Glory from the ſucceſs of his Attempts againſt the Paſſions. For he contends alone with them in the innermoſt part of his Heart; and he is conſtantly rack'd with the fear of his being vanquiſh'd. The Mob leaves him as one whoſe Morality is too harſh, whilſt they crowd about thoſe, who deceive and adore them. This is the Charm, which ſeduces ſo many Ghoſtly Fathers; and this Charm is very old. The Phariſees were abſolute Maſters of this Art; but they were not the firſt Inventors of it. They affected Mortification, and flatter'd the Paſſions. They boaſted of their Merit, and works of Supererogation, but made the Law eaſy by their Interpretations. Jeſus Chriſt in his excellent Sermon upon the Mount, diſcover'd the Venom of their Doctrine, and Conduct; nevertheleſs we will explain their Auſterities.

9. The Thalmud ſpeaks of Seven Orders of Phariſees; one was obedient for Glory and Profit; the other did not lift up their Feet as they walk'd. A third knock'd their Heads againſt Walls to make them bleed; a fourth hid their Heads in Cowls, and look'd out of that hollow place as from the bottom of a Mortar. A fifth haughtily ask'd, what muſt we do, and we will do it? What is there to be done, that we have not done? The ſixth obey'd out of love of Virtue, and Reward; and the laſt put God's Commands in Practice out of fear of Puniſhments.

We muſt not look upon theſe ſeven Degrees of Phariſees, as on ſeveral Orders of Monks, into which the whole Sect was divided. I own, that ſome Monaſtical

* Jerem. 17. 6. † Pſal. 1. 3. ‖ Joſeph. Ant. l. 18. c. 22. p. 617. De Bello, l. 2. c. 7. p. 788. ‖‖ Μεταβαίνειν εἰς ἕτερον σῶμα.

Orders

Orders are diſtinguiſh'd by ſome differences, that are not ſo plain and material. But I ſhou'd be in the wrong, had I the ſame Notion of this Sect. For theſe Orders were only compos'd of private Men, who liv'd at home without Rule, or Vows, whereof ſome endeavour'd to carry their Perfection farther than others. They were all of the ſame Society; but as they neither had a Head, nor made any Vow of Obedience, and as every body begun and ended his Auſterities when ever he thought fit; we cannot confound them with the Monks, who appear'd afterwards; or aſſert that Religious Vows were practis'd among the Jews. This Remark is of conſequence; becauſe Baronius was miſtaken in it, and drew ſeveral Learned Men into his Errour. A Modern * Greek, imputes to them, that after they had obſerv'd Chaſtity for ſeveral Years, they laugh'd at it; but he runs into another Extream. They made no Vow, as Baronius hath ſaid, neither had they a ſet time, wherein they made a jeſt of having preſerv'd their Virginity. Laſtly, They might go from this Sect to a more auſtere one, without being a Deſerter. Joſephus relates of himſelf, that being inform'd that one Banus, was retir'd into the Deſart, where he liv'd upon Roots, and Fruits, and often waſh'd himſelf with cold Water, he had a mind to join with him, notwithſtanding that he was a Phariſee. He liv'd three Years in that retiring Place, and return'd to Jeruſalem when he had perform'd what he had deſign'd to do.

10. In ſhort, the Phariſees employ'd a great deal of their time in watching; and even deny'd themſelves Sleep. Some lay upon a very narrow Plank, that they might not ſecure themſelves from a dangerous Fall, if they ſlept ſoundly: Others more rigid, ſtrew'd theſe Planks with Flints and Thorns, that they might prevent their Reſt, part of the Night. They made long Prayers to God, which they repeated without moving their Eyes, Arms, or Hands, and they compleated their Mortifications of the Fleſh with Faſting, which they obſerv'd twice a Week; and they added ſome Flagellations to it. This was perhaps one of the reaſons why they were call'd Blood-Drawers; becauſe they unmercifully mangl'd their Skins, and ſcourg'd themſelves till they bled plentifully. But this Title was given to ſome others; becauſe as they walk'd in the Streets with their Eyes either upon the ground, or ſhut, they often knock'd their Heads againſt the Walls. They frequently walk'd with their Heads bow'd down to the Ground, leſt they ſhou'd touch God's Feet, which they thought were not above five Foot from the Earth; or rather to denote a more humble Countenance; and they did not lift up their Feet as they walk'd, to ſhew that they did not mind what might hurt them, and to appear to the Mob wholly taken up with Heavenly Thoughts. They loaded their Garments with Phylacteries, which contain'd ſome particular Sentences of the Law. They not only carry'd them on their Foreheads, but alſo on their Sleeves, and the Hems of their Garments were overſpread with them.

11. They did waſh oftner than others, to ſhew how careful they were to purify themſelves. Chriſt reproach'd them with waſhing up to their Elbows; becauſe, whereas the People only waſh'd their Hands, the Phariſees join'd the end of their five Fingers cloſe together, and held them up, and receiv'd the Water upon them, which often did run down to their Elbows. They repair'd the Tombs of the Prophets, which they ſet off with ſeveral Ornaments, and were as ſo many Monuments of their Piety, and made the World believe, that they were Followers of the Zeal of Holy-Men; ſince it was not likely, that they wou'd have ſo great a Veneration for their Relicks, had not they been acted by the ſame Spirit. Chriſt upbraids them with this Affectation, as if they had only deſign'd to put the Jews in mind of the Cruelty of their Anceſtors, who had often made the Prophets ſuffer Martyrdom: Whereas the Son of God intended to check the Pride of the Phariſees, who had no other aim in building up again the Tombs of the ancient Prophets, but to raiſe themſelves above their Anceſtors, ſhewing thereby that they had more Religion, and more reſpect for the Prophets, than they.

12. St. Epiphanius ſays, that the Phariſees paid out of Zeal the tenth part of the Tithes, that they receiv'd: This is a plain Miſtake. For Tithes were only paid to the Levites, and it wou'd be wrong to imagine, that all the Phariſees were Levites, or that all the Levites were Phariſees. This is not the only Miſtake St. Epiphanius † is guilty of in this matter. For he affirms, that the Phariſees wore little Cloaks, as Women, and Slippers with Latchets. What doth this mean? What makes it leſs intelligible is, that they ſeverely condemn'd Luxury, and ty'd ſome Thorns to the bottom of their Gown to tear their Legs and Feet.

13. They appear'd very zealous to make Proſelytes. Jeſus Chriſt, who reprov'd them for it, did not pretend, that it was a Crime to have a mind to increaſe the Church with new Converts; but he cenſur'd them, becauſe they did it more out of vain Glory than Zeal, made uſe of unlawful means to effect a thing that was good in it ſelf, and led their Proſelytes to Hell, by loading them with uſeleſs Ceremonies and Rites, inſtead of inſpiring in them a Spirit of true Devotion.

14. However by this ſeeming Zeal they got the Veneration of the People. The Title of Sage was given them by way of Eminency; and their Diſciples wou'd ſay to one another, the Sage expounds this Day. Chriſt cou'd not endure, that the Name of Rabbi, or Maſter, ſhou'd be apply'd to Doctors, who taught ſo pernicious a Morality. However, they affected to have it; and the People, who look'd upon them as Maſters full of Wiſdom, call'd them generally by that Name. As Merit is wanting, Titles ſwell; and the Mob muſt be impos'd upon by great Names, when their reſpect cannot be acquir'd by extraordinary Virtues. The Jews own this Truth, ſince they confeſs, that the Doctors of the great Synagogue had no Titles; and that the Phariſees begun to aſſume that of Rabbi. Young People || had ſo great a Veneration for them, that they durſt not ſpeak, or anſwer, even when they were reprehended. And indeed, they kept their Scholars in a kind of Slavery, and govern'd with an abſolute ſway whatever concern'd Religion.

15. But they were not ſatisfy'd with that. For they had ſo great |||| an Influence over the Minds of Women, and of the People, that they did what they pleas'd with them. They cou'd raiſe the Waves of that tempeſtuous Sea whenever they wou'd; and notwithſtanding were guilty of ſeveral great Faults; yet the Mob, who was intirely devoted to their Opinions, wou'd always believe them. They report, that an Officer of Alexander Jannæus having committed Murder, they demanded of the Prince, that he ſhou'd put this Officer into their Hands; but not ſatisfy'd to have the Criminal in their Cuſtody, they compell'd the King to appear, becauſe the Scripture ſays, that * the Owner of the Ox that hath done ſome miſchief ought to be try'd with him. Whence they inferr'd, that Kings were anſwerable for the Officers of their Houſhold. Alexander appear'd, but attempting to ſit down, Moſes's Words were quoted to him, which enjoyns, that a Man at the Bar † ſhall ſtand before the Lord. The King complaining that this Text was miſapply'd, ask'd the Sanhedrim's advice, that durſt not determine againſt this Prince. But Simeon, who was at the head of that Aſſembly, blam'd them for their faint-heartedneſs, and threatned them with an exemplary Puniſhment, which the Angel Gabriel inflicted, by killing the whole Sanhedrim, and ſince that time, that Grand Council hath never taken cognizance of the Affairs of the Kings. This is a Story, that doth no credit either to the Phariſees, or Sanhedrim, that never were the Kings Judges. However, it is certain that Alexander Jannæus was afraid of this Sect. This appear'd by the Counſel, which he gave to his Queen at his Death. For he adviſ'd her to let the Phariſees have their own ways, and to flatter them; becauſe having the People at their Devotion, they wou'd by their Praiſes of her, make them have an Affection for her too. That Prince was not in the wrong. Church-Men are won by the Careſſes of the Court; and as they cannot return the Honour, which is ſhew'd them any otherwiſe, than by Encomiums, they do not ſpare them. Their Commendations are often fulſom, and always copious. Notwithſtanding they have been often impos'd upon, yet they take the Demonſtrations of kindneſs that are ſhew'd them, as ſo many acts of Devotion, and Love, towards God. A ſtrange Illuſion! Thoſe, that are not deceiv'd by them, pretend that they are deceiv'd; becauſe their Minds are not ſtrong enough to deſpiſe worldly Honours. The Phariſees fell into the Snare, and the Queen, who executed her Husband's Laſt Will, retriev'd by their Means the Affection of the exaſperated People. Some make Joſephus ſay, that the Phariſees were Enemies to the Kings. But this is a Fault of the Interpreter. It is very likely, that the Eccleſiaſticks being proud, and jealous of their Authority, did not like to have a Sovereign above them. But Joſephus only ſays, that they cou'd oppoſe the Kings, when they had a mind to it. They reſiſted Herod, even when that Prince was moſt formidable to the Nation by his Cruelties and long Reign. This miſtruſtful Prince, who found ſome Enemies in his own Family, and among his Children, requir'd towards his latter End a new Oath of Allegiance of all the People. Six Thouſand Phariſees refus'd to take that Oath. Herod, who was us'd to make every body obey, laid a Tax upon their Diſobedience; but they were ſo Potent † and ſo much reſpected, that a Woman of the Court, the King's Siſter in Law, paid the Aſſeſſment. They rewarded her with ſome Prophecies, and being incens'd againſt Herod, they begun to foretel, that the Scepter ſhou'd be taken away from his Family, and transferr'd into that of his Brother Pheroras, whoſe Wife had protected them. Thoſe that made theſe Prophecies were put to Death. For Herod, who was inform'd of it by Salome, that was his Spye, (notwithſtanding their Character, and the Opinion which they had infus'd into the People, that they convers'd with God, who reveal'd to them what was to come) condemn'd them to be executed. So that tho they were formidable to the Kings; yet the Kings wou'd puniſh them, when they had courage enough to undertake it.

* Expoſit. accuratiſſ. &c. apud Coteler. Recogn. Clem. Mon. Apoſt. t. 1. p. 499. † Epiph. t. 1. p. 34. || Joſeph. Ant. l. 18. c. 2. p. 617. |||| Joſeph. l. 13. c. 23. p. 463. * Exod. 21. 29. † Deut. 19. 17.

16. The Phariſees are alſo accus'd of having been ſome of thoſe Zealots, and Sicarii, that committed ſuch havock in Jeruſalem, and in Egypt where they retir'd. But this Accuſation is only grounded upon a conſiderable Number of theſe Sectaries, that ſided with Judas, who own'd no Maſter but God. That Sect was weaken'd by the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; yet it hath always ſubſiſted but with leſs ſplendor; and moſt of the Jewiſh Doctors are Phariſees. This is the Title, which the celebrated Acoſta gives to thoſe of his Nation, whom he ought to have known by the ſharp and long Controverſy, which he had with them. However, if they are not now ſo rigid, and have rejected part of the Devotions that were peculiar to this Sect; they have ſet up others in their room, and preſerv'd their Affection for Traditions, their Opinion about Free-Will, and the Revolutions of Souls. But this we ſhall ſee hereafter more at large.

17. The Fathers ‖ have look'd upon the Phariſees as Hereticks. But ſome Modern Authors vindicate them; becauſe they had no dangerous Errour among their Tenets; and that the Church hath not condemn'd them, ſince Chriſt ſays, that they ſat in Moſes Seat, and order'd that |||| whatſoever they bid, ſhou'd be done. And indeed a great many Things were tolerated in that time of Ignorance, which are now condemn'd. Add, that all the Phariſees did not believe Fate; and this is what hath deceiv'd the Fathers, who aſcribe the Errour of ſome Members to the whole Sect, and reckon it among Hereticks.

This is the Apology, which ſome make for the Phariſees, contrary to the Authority of the Fathers. But the Prejudice theſe Men had for Traditions, and for the Authority of the Church, whoſe Depoſitaries they make theſe Sectaries, engag'd them to contrive this Defence. As for me, if I condemn the Phariſees, it is not becauſe they aſcrib'd every thing to Fate. They did not want to have any Errours laid to their Charge that did not belong to them. For they had too many of their own. Don't we ſee that they undermin'd the very Foundation of Religion, by their Comments and Traditions? Chriſt who is the Infallible Judge of Errours, hath not only upbraided them with Hypocriſy, and thunder'd out Ten or Twelve Anathema's againſt them, but alſo bids his Diſciples, * to take heed and beware of their Leaven, that is, of their Doctrine: A plain Demonſtration, that he look'd upon it as erroneous and deſtructive. If our Saviour will have them be heard, becauſe they were in Moſes Seat; it is an eaſy thing to ſolve him from a Contradiction, by diſtinguiſhing the Law which they read in the Church, from the Traditions which they added to it as a fatal Leaven. But they pretend, that this was not Chriſt's meaning, becauſe he ſays, that whatſoever they ſaid, ſhou'd be done. He makes no Exceptions. Beſides, he cou'd not give private Men a power to diſtinguiſh between the Law, and the Explications of Doctors; becauſe that Examination was above their Capacities. But theſe Arguments are grounded upon Prejudices. For we muſt abſolutely apply whatſoever to the Precepts of Moſes; otherwiſe it wou'd follow, that the Diſciples were bound to reject Chriſt, becauſe the Phariſees taught it ſo in their Synagogues, and in Moſes Seat, and ſtrengthen'd their Aſſertion with all their Authority. Add, that by ſparing the People the trouble of an Examination about Traditions, they oblig'd them to make another, which is harder, (viz.) about what the Phariſees taught by Virtue of the Authority which Moſes had left them; and what they ſaid out of Paſſion and Prejudice. For how cou'd theſe Things be known? Whereas there was a Diſtinction, which the People knew, between the Law of Moſes, and the Oral Law. So that the Authority that our Lord allow'd them, was only with reference to what they taught out of the Law; and if he commands, that they ſhou'd be obey'd in that caſe, he alſo enjoins, that their other Tenets ſhou'd be rejected. If the Jewiſh Church did not condemn them, we muſt not conclude from thence that they were no Hereticks; ſince it tolerated the Saducees, whoſe Errours ſubverted all Religion.

* Id. p. 462. † Joſeph. Ant. l. 17. c. 3. p. 585. ‖ Serrarius Trihær. l. 2. c. 9. p. 72. Voiſin. Pug. Fid. Obſ. Finus Flagellum Judæor. l. 9. c. 11. |||| Math. 23. 2. * Math. 16. 6.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Eſſenes, and Kaſideans. Their Origin, Tenets, and Hiſtory.

I. THE Goſpel and Thalmud ſays nothing of the Eſſenes. II. The Miſtakes of thoſe that have ſpoken of them. III. St. Epiphanius confuted. IV. Different Derivations of the Name of Eſſenes. V. The Kaſideans found in the Maccabees. VI. In St. Paul. VII. Scaliger confuted. VIII. The true Origin of the Eſſenes. IX. They remov'd from the Sea. X. Their Dependance upon Fate. XI. An Explanation of that Opinion. XII. This Syſtem implies Contradiction. XIII. Whether they offer'd Sacrifices. Joſephus corrected. XIV. Freſh Proofs of this matter of Fact. XV. They preſerv'd the Names of Angels. XVI. The Names of Seven Angels known at Palermo and Rome. XVII. Whether they worſhip'd the Sun. XVIII. Their Veneration for Moſes and their Doctors. XIX. Some ridiculous Opinions concerning the Soul. XX. Their Stewards. XXI. Their Temperance. XXII. Their Celibacy. XXIII. Their Charity. XXIV. Their Probation-time, and Profeſſion. XXV. Herod favours them. The Romans perſecute them. XXVI. An Alteration in this Sect. How long it laſted? XXVII. A Second Branch of the Eſſenes. XXVIII. A Third Branch of Contemplatives. XXIX. Some make them Chriſtian Monks.

1. THE Eſſenes, who ſhou'd be ſo well known for their Auſterities, and the Exemplary Holineſs, which they profeſs'd, are yet hardly known. We find no Footſteps of them in the Hiſtory of the Maccabees, in whoſe Reign they ought to have firſt appear'd. The Goſpel never ſpeaks of them; becauſe they did not come out of their Retirement to diſpute with Jeſus Chriſt. Add, that they wou'd not join with the Phariſees, or the reſt of the Jews, becauſe they believ'd themſelves more Holy than they. Laſtly, there were but few of them in Judæa. For they chiefly reſided in Egypt were Philo ſaw them.

The Thalmudiſts * ſpeak no more of them than the Holy Pen-Men; and the only Jew, that mentions them, was ſo little acquainted with them, that he makes them all Nazarites; and gives them at the ſame time Judas the Galilean for their Head and Founder; which betrays a groſs Ignorance. We find often in the Thalmud the Name of Baithos, and the Bathuſees his Diſciples, whom ſome Criticks confound with the Eſſenes. But that doth not help us forward. For this Baithos appears only to be a fictitious Man. The great Chronicle of the Jews which mentions him, is not ſo ancient, as it is pretended; and Maimonides, who writ an Abridgment of his Life, hath not a ſufficient Authority to have this Hereſiarch, who is known by no body, inſerted in Hiſtory. Opinions vary about him. For he is ſometimes made the Founder of the Saducees with Tſadoc; and yet ſome will have him the Father of the Eſſenes, as if theſe two Sects, that were ſo different, cou'd be confounded together.

The Heathens, who ſpoke of the Eſſenes, were alſo miſtaken in them. For Pliny †, and Solinus, who copy'd him, admire that a Society, wherein the Generation of Children was condemn'd, cou'd have ſubſiſted for ſeveral Thouſand of Years. Here is a double Fault. For part of the Eſſenes marry'd; and their Sect was not ſeveral Thouſand Years ſtanding. On the contrary it was a New Sect.

2. The Chriſtians dazl'd by their Mortifications, have endeavour'd to take them from the Jews, and to make them Hermits or Monks of the Goſpel. Euſebius will have them profeſs Chriſtianity, which they did not. His Miſtake, which did no honour to the Chriſtian Religion, was adopted. But this is not the only one about them. For Suidas || ſays, that they were the Fathers of the Rechabites. Some have endeavour'd to correct this Miſtake by altering the Text, and reading, that they were their Offspring. But read this Author either way, he is miſtaken. The Rechabites, who ſoon decay'd, did not produce a New Sect, call'd the Eſſenes. However, it muſt be acknowledg'd, that the ſecond Miſtake is not ſo great as the firſt; and that it is the moſt common. For Nilus |||| affirms, that they deſcended from Jonadab; and that they all liv'd in Tents, and never drunk Wine. Some Modern Criticks are ſtill of that Opinion. St. Epiphanius places them among Samaritan Hereticks, whom he calls Jeſſeans. He fanſies, that they borrow'd that Name of Jeſſe the Father of David, or of Jeſus, whoſe Doctrine he aſcribes to them. He explains the Name of Jeſus, and finds that it ſignifies in the Hebrew Tongue a Phyſician, which ſuits very well with the Jeſſeans, who boaſted that they were the Phyſicians of the Soul. He makes them a different Sect from the Oſſenians, to whom he aſſigns a particular place among Hereticks. Laſtly, He ſays that Philo writ a Book concerning the Jeſſeans. How many things doth he affirm, and not one well grounded?

3. We have already obſerv'd, that the Eſſenes are wrongfully plac'd among the Samaritans, with whom they had no manner of Correſpondence, and they are without any reaſon diſtinguiſh'd from the Oſſenians, who made but one and the ſame Society with them. St. Epiphanius doth indeed ſay, that in the Reign of Trajan, one Elxai appear'd, who introduc'd ſome Tenets in the Sect of the Eſſenes, and gave them a New Book full of Prophecies; and that he had a Brother, whoſe Name was Jaxæus, another Impoſtor, who perſwaded them to worſhip the Stars. But granting all this to be true, it cannot be infer'd from thence, that there was a Schiſm in this Sect; and that the Oſſenians, unknown every where elſe, compos'd a Society different from that of the Eſſenes. For we ſhall ſee hereafter that the Eſſenes had from the Beginning borrow'd ſeveral Superſtitions of the Egyptians, among whom they were retir'd. We cannot above all things conceive how St. Epiphanius calls them Jeſſeans, nor why he derives their Pedigree from Jeſſe the Father of David, with whom they had no manner of Relation. Nilus gives them too the Name of Jeſſeans. But this is ſo far from juſtifying St. Epiphanius, that he gives that Name quite another Etymology. For he contends, that it ſignifies Learned, as if the Eſſenes, who were intent upon their Mortifications, ever pretended to Learning. Petitus * hath follow'd St. Epiphanius, and made them ſo related to David, that they were oblig'd to take the Name of his Father, Jeſus, or Jeſſe. But this is a meer Whim, which contradicts the Holy Pen-men, who tell us, that the Name of Jeſus doth not ſignify Phyſician, but Saviour. Beſides it is wretchedly apply'd to the Eſſenes. Laſtly, No body can tell whence St. Epiphanius hath it, that Philo writ a Tract of the Jeſſeans. For that is not true. He only compos'd Two Books, that ſpoke of this Sect. One is intitl'd, The Contemplative Life, wherein he makes mention of the Eſſenes; and the other intitl'd, Every good Man is free. For it muſt be thus tranſlated, and not as Mr. Thiers hath done, who follow'd the Latin too cloſe, and turn'd it, that every Book is good.

* R. Abraham Zachut in Libr. Juchazin apud Scultet. Exercit. Evangel. l. 1. c. 28. Critic. t. 6. p. 1898. † Plin. Hier. l. 5. c. 17. Solin. c. 35. p. 47. Edit. Salm. || Suidas προγονοι, lege απογονοι. |||| Nilus Aſcet. c. 3. * Petiti Variæ Lectiones, c. 28. p. 2600.

He

He explains in this last Book the Rites of the Therapeutes. Philo knew him better than any body; since they liv'd in Egypt; and therefore we'll prefer his Account of them to that of any other.

4. The Moderns have imagin'd twelve Derivations of the Word Essenes. Serrarius * was sufficiently teaz'd for saying, that this Term signify'd, the Separated, because they lov'd to live retir'd, and separated themselves from the rest of their Nation. Scaliger and Drusius oblig'd him often to buckle to them, and he only secur'd himself by making some Incursions upon them. The great Salmasius † keeping too close to the Rules of Grammar, affirm'd, that there was in Judæa a Town call'd Essa, whence the Essenes took their Name, because they liv'd there; notwithstanding that no Geographer, no Historian ever mention'd that place. Fuller ‖ believ'd, that the Essenes, and Bathusees were the same, because this Name signifies, Houses of heal'd Persons, and suits with People, who distinguish themselves by the Title of Therapeutes, that is of Physicians, or of Persons that were heal'd. But he vary'd afterwards, and thought that they deriv'd their Name from a Word, which signifies to hide. Scaliger |||| contends, that they borrow'd it from their Holiness; and that they were descended from the Kasideans, who are so famous in the History of the Maccabees: And therefore it is requisite, that we shou'd insist a little upon this last Opinion.

Scaliger * makes the Kasideans, a Fraternity of Religious Men, or an Order of the Knights of the Temple of Jerusalem; because they had join'd together chiefly to maintain that Structure, and adorn its Porches. And in order to this, they did not only pay the common Tax design'd for the Reparation of that vast Building, but they also voluntarily set other Taxes upon themselves. They swore by the Temple, and by the Gift that is upon the Altar. And it was this Oath, which made Jesus Christ severely rebuke the Pharisees, who had borrow'd it of them †. They offer'd a Lamb every day, except on the 11*th* Day of the Month Tisri; and this Sacrifice was call'd the Sin-Offering of the Kasideans. The Pharisees sprung from these Kasideans, and the Essenes from the Pharisees. If you ask, where this Sect of the Kasideans is to be met with; Scaliger will tell you, that you may find them in the Maccabees, in the Gospel, and in Josephus. We read in the History of the Maccabees; that Matthias ‖ gathered together a company of Holy Men, who were mighty Men of Israel, even all such as were voluntarily devoted unto the Law. These Holy Men were the Kasideans, who are nam'd there, as well as their Power and Zeal, since they were voluntarily devoted unto the Law. Criticks have thought, that this place wanted to be corrected, and that the Name of Jews shou'd be put instead of that of Kasideans. And indeed the sense requires it. For Matthias gather'd together the Jews, that were powerful, and the Manuscripts confirm this Conjecture. But if this passage will not do, another is trump'd up, where the Historian represents the Scribes, who demand Justice of Alcimus, and the Kasideans |||| the mightiest Men of Israel, who seek for Peace. The two contending Parties are here mention'd. The first of the Scribes, who sticking close to the Letter of the Law, require an exact Justice; and the second of them, who are more charitable, and having a more favourable Opinion of their Enemies, are satisfy'd, provided they obtain Peace. These last are call'd Kasideans, and always describ'd as the most mighty Men of Israel. So that there must have been at that time a very numerous and potent Sect among the Jews. It wou'd be to no purpose to object, that the Jews themselves say, that there was no Sect in their Nation before Simeon the Just. But these sorts of Calculations are not to be rely'd upon. For some Christians say, that their Church was for two Hundred Years a Virgin, notwithstanding, that it was defil'd by Heresies a long time before. Add, that Scaliger doth not make the Kasideans a Sect, but only a Fraternity, which signaliz'd it self by its Zeal for the Temple.

6. St. Paul * says, that scarcely for a Righteous Man will one die; that it wou'd sooner happen, that some wou'd dare to die for their Benefactor; but that Christ dy'd for the Ungodly. Some † find in these Three Words of St. Paul, Three Orders known among the Jews, to which they believe, that the Apostle alludes. The Ungodly, was he, who violently seizing upon his Neighbour's Goods, wou'd cry out, what is thine, is mine; The Righteous pretended to an exact Observation of the Law, and wou'd say, what is mine, is mine, and what is thine, is thy own. Lastly, The Kasidim, or Saint, who had a great deal of Charity, appropriated nothing to himself, and wou'd say, what is mine, is thine; and what is thine, belongs to thee. Altho all these distinctions of Persons, were as ancient in the Synagogue as it is pretended; yet it wou'd not follow, that they were so many Sects, and different Societies: There is above all things a great Fault in the application of the Words of St. Paul. For to make it good, the Title of Kasidim must be put in the Text; which is not there, instead of that of Benefactor.

7. Lastly, Josephus relates, that Alcimus, who had usurp'd the High-Priesthood, being an Enemy to Judas, fled to Demetrius, and caus'd Sixty Persons of this Sect to be put to death. The Multitude was inrag'd at it, and fansied that David had foretold this Massacre, when he complain'd to God, that ‖ the Blood of his Servants was shed like Water round about Jerusalem: As the Word Kasidim is found in the Original to express that of Servants, they have concluded, that he spoke of the Kasideans, who had their Throats cut by Demetrius his Order.

Josephus says farther, that Alcimus had an exemplary Punishment inflicted upon him; because he had a mind to pull down the Wall of the Holy Place, which was built by the Holy Prophets. Scaliger believes, that some body hath inserted the Word Prophets; whereas Josephus only spoke of Holy Men; and that he meant by these Holy Men the Kasideans, who being zealous for the Reparation of the Temple, had built the Wall which Alcimus had a mind to demolish. In a Word, he confirms his Conjecture by Eusebius's Authority, who only said, that Alcimus design'd to pull down the Wall of the Court of the Saints.

Scaliger's Services to the Republick of Learning got him so great a Reputation, that his bare Name seems enough to make his Conjectures pass for current. Yet we must own, that these are very bold. For, 1. Josephus doth not say, that Alcimus caus'd Sixty Persons of the Sect of Kasidim, to be put to death. Nay, He says nothing of them in that place. Those, who had their Throats cut, were some of the People, who surrender'd to Bacchides; Lieutenant to Demetrius, after he had sworn to spare their Lives. They had no Affinity with the Kasideans, who are not mention'd by the Jewish Historian. When he says, that those of the same Sect, or Party, wou'd not afterwards trust Bacchides, he means those Jews, who did not side with Judas Maccabeus, but doth not thereby denote any Religious Sect. Those that were kill'd, were look'd upon as Martyrs, and David's Words were apply'd to them; but it was never design'd to make them a particular Sect. 2. There is no reason to correct Jo- sephus,

* Serrar. Trihær. l. 3. c. 2. p. 116. † Salmas. in Solin. c. 35. p. 432. ‖ Fuller. Misc. Sacr. l. 2. c. 3. l. 4. c. 4. p. 2276, & 2393. |||| Scal. de Emend. Temp. Philo quòd omnis probus, p. 678. Ὁσιοί. Chrysost. in Acta Hom. 46. p. 404. * Scal. Elenoh. Trihær. c. 22. p. 441. † Math. 23. ‖ 1 Macc. 2. 42. 1 Macc. 14. 7. |||| 1 Macc. 7. 13. * Rom. 5. 6, 7. † Godwin Moses and Aaron. l. 1. c. 9. ‖ Ps. 79. 3.

ſephus, or to cut off the word Prophets, to whom the building of the Wall of the Holy Place is aſcrib'd. For it plainly alludes to Ezra's Words, who ſays, that Zerubbabel, and Joſhua * began to build the Houſe of God, with the Prophets of God helping them. Here are the Holy Prophets, who built the Wall, which Alcimus had a mind to demoliſh. Euſebius † doth not warrant Scaliger's Correction. For he only ſays, that there was a deſign to pull down the Wall of the Holy Place. Laſtly, He ought to have prov'd, that the Kaſideans built that Wall. And whence can this be prov'd? Joſephus ſays nothing of it, nor of this Sect, which Scaliger wou'd find in his Writings. He alſo brings the Hiſtory of the Maccabees by Head and Shoulders to make good his Aſſertion.

8. There is no neceſſity to run the Origine of the Eſſenes ſo far back, or to make them the Spawn of a Sect of Kaſideans, that never had a Being; or laſtly, to derive them from the Phariſees. Druſius ſays, that thoſe, whom Hircanus perſecuted, fled into the Deſerts, and being forc'd by neceſſity to inure themſelves to a very hard way of living, they afterwards willingly continu'd it: And this is the moſt likely Conjecture. that hath been as yet offer'd. They appear in Joſephus's Hiſtory in the Reign of Antigonus. For then an Eſſene Prophet call'd Judas, foretold, that Antigonus ſhou'd be kill'd upon a certain Day in the Tower of Strato. The Day came, but that Prince was ſo far from that Tower, that the Prophet was afraid of being ſhamefully convinc'd of a Lye. I muſt, ſaid he, full of Deſpair, I muſt die, ſince my Prediction is falſe. He had the good Luck to eſcape both Death, and Shame. Antigonus was kill'd the ſame Day, in a place call'd the Tower of Strato, but not the ſame which Judas meant; becauſe he did not know the other. The Eſſenes, who were already in repute for their Predictions, were of an antienter Date; and perhaps begun to appear as ſoon as the Phariſees, and after the Saducees, and diſtinguiſh'd themſelves from both by their very auſtere Lives, and alſo by their different Opinions.

9. The Eſſenes were divided into ſeveral different Branches. The firſt was compos'd of four or five Thouſand Perſons, who were ſcatter'd in Towns and the Countrey, and had no ſettl'd Habitations. They prefer'd the Countrey to Towns; becauſe it allow'd them fitter Opportunities to meditate, and they ſhun'd as much as they cou'd, the company of looſe Men. For they believ'd, that the lewdneſs of Morals is as catching, as the Infection of the Air. Pliny || ſays, that the Eſſenes remov'd from the Sea ſide. Interpreters ||||, who did not well underſtand this, have corrected the Text, and made him ſpeak juſt contrary to his meaning. For they, inſtead of his Words, put in theſe, they dwelt along the Shore. But this ancient Author's Expreſſion is very true. For the Eſſenes, who were afraid of the Frauds, which can hardly be avoided in Commerce, remov'd from Maritime Towns, whoſe Inhabitants chiefly follow Trade, and where Sins are oftner committed. They inhabited one part of Jeruſalem. For Joſephus ſpeaks of the Gate of the Eſſenes, but they wou'd not come into the Temple; neither did they offer any Sacrifices there, but only ſent their Oblations, becauſe it is better to mortify ones Heart, than to offer Sacrifice: As they thought their Religion more pure, than that of other Men, they wou'd keep no manner of Correſpondence with them. Thus Pride is the conſtant Attendant of particular ways of Worſhip. They inſpire a ſecret Vanity, which puffs us up, and raiſe us above our Neighbours. It makes us ſeparate from them; and tho we thereby tranſgreſs two of the moſt important Duties of Piety, and trample upon Humility and Charity, yet we fanſie our ſelves more Holy, than other Men. This is not the only Contradiction the Eſſenes were guilty of. For they were alſo guilty of as groſs a one as that; as we are going to ſee.

10. They had a profound reſpect for God, to whom they attributed an abſolute Power over all Events; and ſaid, that nothing happens, but by his Decrees. Joſephus affirms, that they aſcrib'd every thing to Fate. But ſome have ſince endeavour'd to clear them from this Imputation, by contending * that they underſtood thereby Providence, which governs all Creatures according to their Natures, and impoſes no neceſſity upon Man, and doth not even prejudice Free-Will. The Author of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions doth alſo acquit them of that Errour; ſince he equally diſtinguiſhes them from the Phariſees, who depended upon Fate; and from the Masbotheans, who deny'd Providence. He ſays beſides, that the Eſſenes obſerv'd the Rites of their Anceſtors, who knew nothing of that Fate, which impoſes a neceſſity on humane Actions.

11. It can't be eaſily determin'd what the Eſſenes meant by Fate, and whether People who had ſo great a Veneration for the Sun, did not depend upon the Influences of the Planets. I wou'd rather believe, that they underſtood Providence by it, as a great many Philoſophers did. But it muſt be own'd at the ſame time, that they aſcrib'd ſome Decrees to Providence, which made all Events neceſſary, and allow'd no liberty to Man. Joſephus, oppoſing them to the Phariſees, who made one part of Tranſactions depend upon Fate, and the other upon Man's Will, ſhews, that they extended the Influence of Fate, and the neceſſity which it impoſes, to all Actions. The Scientia Media was not as yet invented. So that the Eſſenes cou'd not build upon that Principle. The Author † of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions is not a fit Witneſs to be ſet againſt Joſephus in this matter. For he did not know the Jewiſh Hereticks, as that appears by a great many Faults, which ſlipt from him in a very ſhort Chapter. Add, that he doth not ſay, what they make him ſay. For he repreſents the Eſſenes as People, who are ſeparated from all other Sects, and very much addicted to the Rites of their Fathers. 1. The buſineſs in hand was not Fate, but the Schiſm of the Eſſenes from all the reſt of Mankind, becauſe they thought themſelves more Holy than they. 2. Their Affection for the Rites of their Fathers, concerns the Auſterities and Ceremonies, which they ſcrupulouſly obſerv'd. So that it is to no purpoſe to look out in this Place for their Tenets, and Opinion about Providence, ſince it ſays nothing of it.

12. It is a ſtrange Thing, that People, who ſet up for overſtrain'd Devotions, and for obtaining Heaven by their voluntary Auſterities, ſhou'd yet wholly ſtrip Man of Free-Will, and make every thing ſolely depend upon Fate, or upon Providence. It is a very common Prepoſſeſſion, that if Man is not Free, there can be no Religion; Actions are neither good nor evil; there are no Rewards, nor Puniſhments; and God's Judgments may reaſonably be charg'd with Injuſtice. And yet we ſee here the Eſſenes, who load themſelves with Devotions, which are not requir'd of them, think to merit Heaven by theſe voluntary Devotions; and at the ſame time depend upon Fate, and admit it as the Stoicks did, whoſe ſevere Morality they adopted.

But this is the Cuſtom of many Divines. They are often conſcious of the Contradictions, that are in their Syſtems, but dare not get rid of them. Being wedded to an Opinion, which they take to be true, they deny the Conſequences, that flow from it, and others infer, but their Faith is not ſtagger'd by it. This Character

* Ezra 5. 2. † Euſeb. τότῳ καθαιρεῖντι τὸ τεῖχος τῦ ἁγίυ. Edit. vet. Scalig. p. 383. || Plin. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 17. p. 102. |||| Daleçamp. not. Marg. * Serrar. Trihær. l. 3. c. 4. p. 123. † Conſt. Apoſtol. l. 6. c. 6. p. 377.

doth

doth not only belong to the Eſſenes. For ſome Chriſtians among the ancient Fathers, and Hereticks, have acknowledg'd Fate. Add, that it is the temper of your ſpeculative Bigots to reſign themſelves wholly to God and his Decrees. They ſubmit to whatever he is pleas'd to do, and expect every thing from him. We ſee ſome at this time, who ſay, that they wou'd conſent to be damn'd, if God wou'd order it ſo. But notwithſtanding this ſeeming Humility, Pride lies lurking in their Heart. When they argue and ſpeak with others, they attribute every thing to God; but when they examine and weigh their Actions, they aſcribe all to their own Hearts and Strength. For they cou'd not otherwiſe applaud and admire themſelves, or look upon the reſt of Mankind with contempt. Let us leave the Eſſenes to their own Illuſions; ſince we know ſome like theirs; and let us only obſerve that they are not new.

13. Notwithſtanding they honour'd God, they offer'd him no Sacrifices; at leaſt they did not do it in the Temple, where they were afraid to defile themſelves by the frequentation of thoſe that went into it, and had not the ſame Devotion as they. This laſt thing is certain; but the firſt is grounded upon the Remark of a Critick * which we muſt ſet down in order to canvaſs it. He believes, that Herod caus'd a Greek Tranſlation of the Pſalms and Prophets to be made, which was wanting till that time; and that he imploy'd in it the Eſſenes, for whom he had a particular Eſteem, becauſe one of them foretold him, that he ſhou'd be King. Theſe Interpreters did not omit inſerting their Opinions in ſeveral places. When David tells God, † Sacrifice, and Burnt-Offering thou didſt not deſire, mine Ears haſt thou open'd: They made uſe of this Paſſage to authorize three of their Tenets, or Rites. They made the Prophet ſpeak abſolutely, as if God had intirely rejected Sacrifices; becauſe they wou'd offer him none. Philo teſtifies of them, that they never ſacrific'd any Beaſts; but that they did prepare themſelves, and offer their Souls to God. Joſephus ſays juſt the contrary. For he affirms, that they did not offer any Victims in the Temple, leaſt they ſhou'd prophane themſelves there; but that they offer'd ſome in their own Houſes. But the Text of this Hiſtorian is corrected, wherein ‖ Sacrifices were foiſted, inſtead of Purifications. The ſame Eſſenes have put in their Verſion, but a Body thou haſt prepar'd me, becauſe having neither Servant-Men, nor Slaves among them, they wou'd not have Slavery authoriz'd by theſe Words of David, mine Ears haſt thou open'd. They found another Advantage in this Tranſlation. For by the Body, which God had appointed in the room of Sacrifices, they underſtood the Colleges of devout Eſſenes, who met together in a Body, and made but one, which by its Auſterities was more eminent than all other Societies.

14. I muſt confeſs, that this is too finely ſpun. If Petitus deſigns to ſay, that the Eſſenes ſacrific'd no where; which indeed is very likely, becauſe they did not ſacrifice in the Temple, and had not been ſuffer'd to have ſacrific'd any were in Judæa but in Jeruſalem. He hath no need to ſuppoſe that Herod order'd theſe Eſſenes to make a new Verſion of the Pſalms; or to make them change Slaves into a Body, or to find a College of Religious Men inſtead of a Humane Body, which David plainly meant in that place. A more probable Conjecture might be made, by ſaying, that they offer'd to God their Bodies in the room of Victims, as ‖‖ St. Paul exhorts the Romans to do with certain Diſpoſitions. The Text of Joſephus muſt not, above all things, be corrected; ſince Rufinus an ancient Writer read this Hiſtorian, as we read it at this time. Zonaras follow'd the ſame reading, and it is a bold thing to ſuppoſe that a Fault is of ſo long ſtanding, without being induc'd to it by any other Proof, or Neceſſity, than that of making a Syſtem coherent: But theſe two following Things may be done.

Firſt, It may be ſaid, that Joſephus was not ſo well acquainted with the Eſſenes as Philo, who had ſeen them in Egypt, where they had moſt of their Colleges, and places of Retirement. Secondly, We muſt rather depend upon the Teſtimony of Philo, which is full and expreſs, and cou'd not be ignorant of what Men did, whoſe Deſcription he gave ſo accurately, and for whom he had ſo great a Value. If we compare the large and particular Relation of Philo, with the dry account, which Joſephus gave of this third Sect of the Jews, we ſhall ſoon prefer the Firſt to the Laſt. Had the Eſſenes offer'd ſome Sacrifices any where, they had ſooner done it in Egypt than in Judæa; becauſe their great diſtance from Jeruſalem ſeem'd to warrant this Practice, or at leaſt to palliate the Crime. However, they did not ſacrifice.

15. They are alſo accus'd of having tranſlated into Greek, not only the Pſalms and Prophets, but alſo the Book of Job, and alter'd theſe Words of Eliphas, To which of the Saints wilt thou turn? And put Angels inſtead of Saints, in order to authorize their Cuſtom of making their Neophytes ſwear, that they wou'd keep the Names of Angels. It is true, that this Oath was taken when any one was admitted into the Sect of the Eſſenes. But was there any neceſſity to change the Text to warrant this Cuſtom? Every body knows, * that the Jews, who appointed at that time ſome guardian Angels to every Man, invented Names for Angels, and that in proceſs of time, they increas'd them mightily. The Eſſenes found this Rite countenanc'd by the Apocryphal Books of Tobit, whence the Chriſtians have borrow'd their Angel Raphael; and by the 2*d* of Eſdras †, whence alſo St. Ambroſe took his Uriel. The Eſſenes gave perhaps ſome particular Names to Angels. As it is the Character of your ſpeculative Men, to pretend that they ſee from Earth what is done in Heaven, they wou'd not have theſe Names alter'd, becauſe they fanſy'd, that they had hit them better than others.

16. The Eſſenes and Jews are in this Age laugh'd at for thinking, that they had gueſs'd ſo right the Names of Angels: But are not others often guilty of the ſame Fault? Had not St. Ambroſe as much reaſon to take Uriel from the ſpurious Eſdras, as the Roman Catholicks to invoke Raphael; becauſe Tobit, who is more romantick than the other, ſpeaks of him? Muſt the grand Machine of the Authority of the Fathers be ſet at work to juſtify this Father? Can't he eſcape, but by the negligence of the Councils, which did not pronounce till the Council of Trent, that Eſdras was Apocryphal? Were not the Angels Raguel, Tubuel, and Adimis, whom Aldebert did invoke, as good as others, to whom the ſame Honour is paid? The Names of Seven Angels with their Epithets, are ſeen ‖ in a Church of Palermo; Michael, the Conquerour; Gabriel, the Meſſenger; Raphael, the Phyſician; Uriel, the brave Camarade; Jehudiel, the Rewarder; Barachiel, the Helper; Scealtiel, the Orator. The ſame Angels are found in the Church of St. Mary of Angels, which was conſecrated by Pope Pius IV. They are ſeen upon the great Altar about the Virgin, and every one of them hath his Encomium, without being nam'd. Michael ſays, I am ready to receive the Souls. Raphael the Phyſician ſays, I am with Travellers, and heal the Sick. Jehudiel the Rewarder cries out, I reward thoſe that ſerve God. Gabriel ſalutes the Virgin, The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee. Uriel full of Zeal, exhorts Men to inflame their Charity, Flameſcat igne Charitas. Barachiel, whoſe province it is to aſſiſt the Diſtreſs'd, is told, do not forſake us, thou who aideſt o- thers;

* Petiti Variæ Lect. c. 28. † Pſal. 40. 6. ‖ Read τὰς δ' ὁσίας ἐπιτέλεσιν, expiationes faciunt; inſtead of τὰς θυσίας Sacrificia. ‖‖ Rom. 12. 1. * V. Bartol. B. R. t. 1. p. 230. † 2 Eſdras 4. 1. ‖ V. Bartol. B. R. t. 1. p. 232.

thers. Laſtly, Shealtiel at the Virgin's Feet, tells her, that he humbly offers his Prayers to her. Say what you will, the Figures of Angels ought not to be plac'd in Churches with Encomiums, which denote the Power and Adminiſtration of theſe Spirits; unleſs it be intended, that the Vulgar ſhou'd make uſe of Mediators, that are offer'd to them; and the Roman Catholicks ought not, above all Men, to ridicule the Eſſenes and Jews, who gave Angels Names; ſince the ſame thing is done in their Churches, upon the Altars, under the Pope's Noſe, and with his Approbation. For the moſt that the Eſſenes did, was to call Angels by ſome Names, but they did not worſhip them.

17. But a groſſer Idolatry is laid to their Charge. For it is pretended, that they ador'd the Sun, or at leaſt, that they had a great Veneration for that Planet. They impatiently expected its Riſing: They haſten'd it, by the Vows and Prayers which they offer'd to it. They durſt not ſpeak of Buſineſs till it was up. They were afraid to tarniſh its Splendor and Light, by the Filth, that came out of the Body; and they therefore took care to hide it in the Ground, and to cover it nicely, leſt ſome Exhalation might ariſe from it, and tarniſh the Light of God. Theſe Words of Joſephus have made People believe, that the Eſſenes ador'd the Sun. Porphyry hath confirm'd that Opinion. For he ſays, that theſe Sectaries were afraid to tarniſh the Light of the Gods; and as Faults inſenſibly ſwell, Porphyry's Interpreter makes him ſay, that the Eſſenes were afraid to offend the Gods by their Shirts; which is Nonſenſe. The thing there in queſtion, is only the Rays of the Deity, which they were afraid to defile by their Excrements. Thoſe, that cannot endure, that a Society, whence ſo many Chriſtians were taken, ſhou'd have ſuch a Slur put upon them, as to compare their Worſhip with that of Heathens, inſiſt very much upon what * Joſephus ſays, that they ador'd God; and they are in the right. For it muſt be own'd, that the Eſſenes, as well as the reſt of the Jews, did acknowledge but one God. Porphyry † prefer'd the Prejudices of his Religion to Truth, when he put thoſe Gods, inſtead of the only God, mention'd by Joſephus. An ingenious Critick, jealous of the Honour of theſe Sectaries, clears them to all intents and purpoſes of Idolatry, by ſaying, that their || Prayers were directed to God, and not to the Sun. Joſephus ſays, that they addreſs'd their Prayers to the Sun, but by only cutting off one Letter from a Word, it may be referr'd to God, from whom they beg'd, that at the ſame time, that he made his Sun to ſhine upon Earth, he wou'd be pleas'd to ſpread his Light into their Souls. Add, that they were not afraid to defile the Rays of the Sun, as it hath been hitherto read in Joſephus, but the Halls of God ‖‖. For the Earth is the Manſion and Palace of God, which they wou'd not ſully with their Dung. But all theſe Conjectures are too ſubtle. The Firſt wou'd be tolerable, but the Second is too ſtrain'd: And Joſephus wou'd be the firſt, who ever call'd the Earth the Halls of the Deity; whereas the Eſſenes ſaw the Pythagoreans afraid, as well as they, to diſhonour the Rays of the Deity. Laſtly, They are vindicated by the Examples of David and Daniel, who have cry'd out, Sun and Moon praiſe the Lord. But theſe Apoſtrophes only prove, that the Moon and Sun are God's Creatures, and his Miniſters, that ought to praiſe him. I think, that a juſt medium might be taken, by ſaying, 1. That the Eſſenes were not Idolaters. For the Jews, as Philo, and Joſephus cou'd not have prais'd them, had they worſhip'd the Sun; but they only turn'd toward it at its Riſing, to pray. This is Joſephus's Senſe, which was not well tranſlated. He doth not pretend, that the Eſſenes addreſs'd their Prayers to the Sun; but they worſhip'd towards the riſing Sun; and ſpoke to it, as if they had deſir'd this Planet to riſe. Joſephus ſoftens by this ſecond Expreſſion, what was harſh and ambiguous in the firſt. For he lets us underſtand that they did not pray to the Sun, but only acted as if they had pray'd to that Planet. 2. It may thence be inferr'd, that the Worſhip of the Eſſenes was not free from Superſtition. For they did not only worſhip God, by turning themſelves towards the Eaſt, as the Chriſtians have done ſince, but they alſo ſpoke to the Sun, and did as if they offer'd their Prayers to it. They beg'd it to grant them its Light; and look'd upon it as a ſhining and viſible Image of the Deity. And they therefore were afraid to defile it with their Excrements; and this ſecond Superſtition, which is clearly expreſs'd by Joſephus, was borrow'd of the Heathens. For Heſiod affirms, that they forbid turning towards the Sun, when they made Water.

18. The Eſſenes honour'd Moſes as their firſt Lawgiver, look'd upon thoſe who ſpoke ill of him, as Blaſphemers, and condemn'd them to death without mercy.

Their Veneration for this Law-giver was extended to their old Men, whom young Men reſpected by bearing with Infirmities, and carefully ſupplying their Wants. Nay, they had a particular regard for one another. No body ſpoke, before he had leave of thoſe that were preſent; nor ſpit in the Congregation, nor on his Right Hand. A Hundred Perſons commonly determin'd Controverted, or Litigious Queſtions; and what was once carry'd by the plurality of Votes was irrevocable. The Diſciples lay down at their Maſter's Feet, who explain'd to them the difficult Parts of the Law. They gave a myſtical Senſe to ſeveral Places of the Prophets, and even drew ſome Predictions for the time to come, from the ancient Oracles; and Joſephus, whom Porphyry hath copy'd *, aſſures, that their Predictions were often juſtify'd by the Event; which was the reaſon, that they were the more valu'd and eſteem'd.

They were very much wedded to the Books of their ancient Doctors. Theſe Doctors, were the Prophets. For the Eſſenes rejected Traditions. They writ from time to time ſome Books of Devotion and Morality, which were greedily read by their Followers.

19. They maintain'd the Immortality of the Soul againſt the Saducees. If the Body, ſay they, is compos'd of Parts, and corruptible Matter, the Souls, which are Spiritual, eternally ſubſiſt. But they adulterated this Truth by their extravagant Fancies. For they pretended, that the Souls came down from a very ſubtle Air into their Bodies, only becauſe they were drawn in by I know not what natural Charm: They only remain'd there as in a Priſon †, and when that Priſon was broken down, they gladly came out of it, as out of a very hard Slavery. They fled away with Exultation and Joy, and ſoaring up in the Air, they went on the other ſide of the Sea, in a warm place, where neither Snow, nor Rain diſturb'd them. A gentle Gale conſtantly fann'd this Abode of the Souls of good Men, whilſt the Souls of the Wicked were tranſported into very cold Places, where they were forc'd to ſtruggle with hard Froſts, and continual Storms, which being always renew'd made their Puniſhment eternal. They borrow'd this Notion of the Greeks, who gave the ſame Deſcription of their Elyſian Fields, and plac'd the Souls of good Men on the other ſide of the Sea. Herod had this engrav'd upon the noble Monument, which he erected for his Wife.

Ζεὺς μὲν ἐς ὠκεανὸν θαλερὴν ἔϛειλε γυναῖκα,

* Serar. Trihær. & Minerval. † Porphyry reads Θεοῦς inſtead of τῦ θεῦ. The Interpreter read in Porphyry τὰις ἀυτᾶις inſtead of τᾶις ἀυγᾶις, and refer'd that to the Shirts, interulæ, we have mention'd. Joſeph. de Bell. Jud. l. 2. p. 785. || Ἀυτὸν, read ἀυτό, namely Θεῶον. Petiti Variæ Lect. c. 21. ‖‖ Ἀυγᾶς read ἀυλαὶς Θεῦ. * Porphyr. apud Cyrill. contra Julian, l. 5. t. 7. p. 181. † Joſeph. de Bello Jud. l. 2. c. 7. p. 788.

Nothing is more common among Poets. But it is ſtrange, that ſuch groſs Errours ſhou'd be taught in the Jewiſh Nation in the time of our Saviour, and yet that he ſaid nothing of it.

20. I do not know, whether God hath forgiven them theſe Extravagancies for the ſake of their Auſterities; but it is certain that Men being dazl'd with the Mortifications of theſe Sectaries, have admir'd them. And therefore it is requiſite that we ſhou'd give an account of them. None was admitted into that Society, till he had given all his Eſtate to his Relations, or to the Poor, or at leaſt to the Community, where * the Pooreſt enjoy'd it as much as the Richeſt. They had ſome Stewards, who iſſu'd out Food and Raiment as every one wanted them. Theſe Stewards were commonly choſen out of the Prieſts, as Perſons of ſingular Piety in the Sect. There was one of theſe Treaſurers in every Town, who took care of Strangers, and of whatever concern'd the Congregation. They did not trouble themſelves to carry Neceſſaries upon the Road, becauſe they were confident, that they ſhou'd be conveniently ſupply'd in Houſes appointed for that purpoſe.

21. They liv'd very ſoberly, and moſt part of the time upon Herbs. It hath been ſaid, that they ſtretch'd their Temperance ſo far, that they cou'd be a whole Week without going to Stool; but it was not taken notice, that what is tranſlated † a Week, ſignifies the Sabbath-Day, which they kept ſo ſtrictly, that they durſt not then ſatisfy Nature, leſt they ſhou'd be oblig'd to tranſgreſs the Holineſs of the Day. They got up before the Sun; and every one went to work till Eleven a Clock; and then the whole Community met together, and every one waſh'd himſelf in cold Water. They thought it a Crime to make uſe of Unctions; and that he who had anointed himſelf wanted to be purify'd. They wore white Garments to denote the Purity of their Souls, which had been waſh'd. After their Purification every one retir'd into his Cell, and no Strangers were admitted in to them. They went from thence into the Hall, where every one had his Loaf, and Meſs of thick Milk. The Prieſt ſaid Grace before and after Meals. They eat as much as was neceſſary to preſerve Life; and afterwards retir'd gravely without ſaying one Word.

22. Celibacy was religiouſly obſerv'd by the Eſſenes. They thought the Society of Women troubleſome, and fitter to cool, than warm Devotion. Beſides, they believ'd few Women true to their Husbands, and they had an inſuperable Averſion for Cuckoldom. Pliny fanſy'd, that whoever had not kept his Maidenhead, cou'd not be admitted into that Sect: But it was only requir'd at his coming in to renounce Women, and make a Vow of Chaſtity whilſt he continu'd among them. They wou'd not have any Servant-men, no more than Women; becauſe they believ'd that this Diſtinction among Men was contrary to the Laws of Nature.

23. A great air of Charity was obſerv'd among them. They ſeem'd united, and to love one another cordially; they mutually ſupply'd their wants, and ſuffer'd none of their Brethren to be needy. They wou'd not furbiſh Swords, nor make Cuiraſſes, or other Warlike Inſtruments; becauſe they wou'd not contribute to the effuſion of Blood. Yet they carry'd ſome Arms to defend themſelves againſt Robbers. Nay it appears, that their Magazines were well ſtor'd; but their chief Imployment was to manure the Ground, and to ſtudy the Virtue of Simples to apply them to Phyſick. They addicted themſelves to uſeful Manufactures.

24. Their Noviciate laſted a Year, during which time the Probationer gave ſome Marks of an exemplary Continency and Temperance. Before he was admitted, he took a ſolemn Oath to be a ſtrict Obſerver of God's Commands, to hate all the Wicked, to aſſiſt good Men, and never to hurt them. He alſo promis'd that if ever he became Superior, he wou'd not abuſe his Authority; and that far from exerciſing it as a Tyrant, he wou'd be very Moderate. He beſides engag'd, not to make any Innovation in the Doctrine, which he had receiv'd; but to teach it faithfully, and without any reſerve to thoſe of his Congregation; never to divulge it to Strangers; to keep choicely the Books which contain'd that Doctrine; to remember exactly the Names of Angels; to avoid Stealing; and as much as in him lay to practiſe Charity.

If any one broke his Vows, and neglected theſe Duties, he was ſhamefully expell'd out of the Society, and he commonly made a miſerable End; becauſe he was not allow'd to take the Food, that was offer'd him. Theſe excommunicated Perſons were ſeen to graze as the Beaſts of the Fields, and to pine away with hunger. All that they cou'd hope for, was that their Brethren wou'd ſome time pity them, and take them in again, when they were juſt ready to give up the Ghoſt, becauſe their being at the point of Death was a ſufficient Puniſhment. Solinus affirms, that thoſe, who were guilty of a ſmall Fault, were expell'd out of the Society, and cou'd never return into it again. For notwithſtanding all their endeavours to be re-admitted, their return was hindred in a Divine manner. I can't gueſs what theſe Divine Obſtacles were, whereof Solinus who was a Heathen makes mention; or how God did authorize, by a perpetual Miracle, the Anathemas of theſe Sectaries. However, that teaches us theſe two Things: 1. That the auſtere way of Living of the Eſſenes, was taken notice of by the Heatheniſh Authors, who prais'd them. 2. That this Sect might have borrow'd ſome of the Pagan Superſtitions, ſince the Heathens aſcrib'd them ſome Miracles, and divine Operations to expel Delinquents out of their Society; a thing, which they never ſaid either of the Jews, or Chriſtians.

25. And indeed, this Sect had a great Intercourſe with the Pagans; and it was particularly in Egypt, that the Eſſenes made ſome conſiderable Settlements. However, there were ſome in Judæa.

Herod the Great diſtinguiſh'd them there above the other Sects, and was kind to them as long as he liv'd; and Joſephus ‖ who believ'd, that God did often inſpire theſe Sectaries, gives this reaſon for it. An Eſſene nam'd Manahem, ſeeing Herod, who was then but Young, come into the School, ſaluted him, calling him King of the Jews. The young Scholar thought, that Manahem laugh'd at him, or elſe did not know him. He anſwer'd, that he was but a private Perſon, who had no manner of Pretenſions to a Crown; but the Eſſene ſtroking him gently on the Shoulder, reply'd, that his Reign wou'd be happy. Remember, ſays he to Herod, the Strokes which I give. Do juſtice to your Subjects, and govern them quietly. I know, that you will not do it. You will trample upon Divine, and Humane Laws; and yet your Reign will be Fortunate, and your Name Immortal. Nevertheleſs, you ſhall not deceive God, who towards the latter end of your Life will puniſh you ſeverely. When Herod came to the Crown, he remember'd Manahem, and ſent to know of him, if his Reign ſhou'd be long. He gave to underſtand, that it might laſt thirty Years. Herod being well pleas'd with an Anſwer, which allow'd him a pretty long time, was kind to the Eſſenes, whom he look'd upon as People that were inſpir'd.

The Romans on the contrary hated them very much; and employ'd the greateſt Torments to force them to renounce their Sect; but they cou'd not make them ſtagger. For they bravely ſuffer'd thoſe Tortures. Far from crying, and ſighing as they went to the place of Execution, they insulted over their Tormenters, and gave some Demonstrations of Joy, believing that so honourable a Death was more to be coveted than Immortality it self.

* Joſeph. Ibid. and Philo. † Ἐβδομάς. ‖ Joſeph. Ant. l. 15. c. 13. p. 542.

the

26. This Sect was considerably alter'd in the Reign of Trajan; because one Elxai putting himself at their Head, corrupted their ancient Constitution. St. Epiphanius * sets down Three New Tenets, which this old Jewish Heretick broach'd. 1. He taught his Followers to swear by the Creatures; by Salt, by Water, and by the Earth, as if they were so many Deities. 2. He condemn'd Celibacy, and requir'd Marriage. 3. Lastly, He allow'd dissembling; and believ'd that Idols might be worshipp'd, provided the Intention was directed to God; or the external Kneeling was inwardly condemn'd. Nicetas † adds, That he deny'd the Incarnation of Christ. But we must not think it strange; since St. Epiphanius assures, that he remain'd a Jew, notwithstanding that he did not exactly observe the Law. This Errour belong'd to all his Nation, as well as to him; and therefore it is wrong, to ascribe it to him, as a peculiar Tenet of his.

This Man had a Brother, whose Name was Jessæus; and some || say, that he appear'd with his two Sisters in the Reign of Constantine the Great. But this is an egregious Mistake. For how can a Man, who was his Brother's Contemporary in the Reign of Trajan, have lived till that of Constantine with his two Sisters, who were ador'd as two Deities? Nicetas, who committed this blunder as he copy'd St. Epiphanius, hath alter'd his Expressions, and Meaning. He doth not say, that Jessæus appear'd in the Reign of Constantine; but that this Sect subsisted as yet under Constantius. He doth not pretend, that Martha and Marthana, were either Elxai's, or Jessæus's Sisters; but only that they were descended from his Posterity, which was enough to make some worship them. One of these Women dy'd a little before St. Epiphanius writ his Treatise of Heresies: But Marthana was still alive; and the Sectaries had so great a Veneration for her, that they wou'd take her Urine, and other Excrements of her Body to rub the Sick therewith, believing them excellent Remedies. However it can't be doubted, but the Essenes preserv'd a sort of a Succession in their Sect till the end of the fourth Century: But it had then lost part of its Splendor. Its Doctrine was also chang'd, and degenerated to such a degree of Superstition, that two living Women were worshipp'd in it, as if they had been two Goddesses.

Heu quantum mutatus ab illo!

You cou'd not have known these ancient Enemies of Women, who wou'd not admit any into their Congregation.

This Sect subsisted till the Reign of Justinian, wherein it was known under the Name of the Inhabitants of Heaven, or of Angels, that they might perswade the People by this stately Title, that their Lives were as Holy, as that of those Celestial Spirits. But few were deceiv'd by them; and we now find no Footsteps of these ancient Anchorets.

27. The second Branch of the Essenes, differ'd from the first in this one Thing, (viz.) They not only approv'd of Marriage in their Sect; but they also contended, that to forbid the Use of Women was to destroy Mankind, and hurry on the end of the World. An Ancient, to whom that Objection was made, upon the score of the Christian Monks, did answer; that if the Earth became desolate without Inhabitants, Heaven wou'd be the sooner full. But he did not consider, that stretching the Advantages of Celibacy and Virginity too far, as is generally done, he made Grace, and Nature jar. And yet Grace instead of opposing, or destroying Nature, ought rather to improve it. It must also be confess'd, that by extolling the Perfection of that State so, that it seems necessary to those who desire to be sav'd, is a plain Opposition of the Decrees of God, who doth not design to empty the Earth, or fill Heaven, but after a certain number of Ages and Men, who are to be partakers of Life.

28. The third Branch of the Essenes was compos'd of speculative Votaries. These were mystical Divines, who made a great noise in the World. They minded nothing else but the Contemplation of God, which they made their only delight. It was for that reason, that they kept themselves mew'd |||| up every one alone in his Cell without speaking, going out, or even looking out of their Windows. They beg'd of God, that their Soul might always be fill'd with a Heavenly Light; and that being rais'd above all material Beings, they might the better search after, and know Truth in their Retirement; and soaring above the Sun, Nature, and all Creatures, they directly fix'd their Thoughts on God, the Sun of Righteousness. The Notions of the Deity, and of the Beauties and Treasures of Heaven, on which they had fed in the Daytime, follow'd them in their Sleep and Dreams. They deliver'd some excellent Precepts. They left their Goods to their Relations. For after they had inrich'd themselves with Celestial Philosophy, they had a great contempt for Wealth. They felt a strong Motion, and a Divine Zeal, which forcibly engag'd them to the Study of that Divine Philosophy, which afforded them the most refin'd Delight; and therefore they never left off their Study, till they had arriv'd to that degree of Perfection, which made them happy. I am mistaken if we do not see here the Contemplation of the Mysticks, their Transports, their Union with the Deity, which makes them here on Earth happy to the highest Degree. Thus in all Religions Unitive ways have been imagin'd, and some means to raise the Mind above all material Beings, that she may only see God, be United with him, and become perfectly happy in the Vale of Sin and Misery.

29. This Sect, (which Philo hath describ'd in a Book, which he writ on purpose to set off thereby his Religion against the Greeks, who boasted of the Morality, and Uprightness of their Philosophers,) seem'd so holy, that the Christians have envy'd the Jews the Glory of their Austerities. As the most Moderate cou'd not wholly deprive the Synagogue of the Honour of having produc'd and foster'd them in its Bosom; they have contended, that they had embrac'd Christianity as soon as St. Mark preach'd the Gospel in Egypt; and that altering their Religion, without altering their way of Living, they became the Fathers, and first Instituters of a Monastick Life. It is what we ought now to examine. We have made elsewhere * some Remarks upon this Question; but without transcribing what we said there, we will add some new Observations, and give a better Light to this controverted Point.

CHAP. XIII.

Whether the Essenes from being Jews became Christians, and Founders of a Monastick Life.

I. THE Opinion of Eusebius. II. St. Jerome corrected. III. The Testimony of several Fathers. IV. The Remarks of Baronius. V. The Jealousy of the Christians. VI. A Conjecture taken from Josephus and

* Epiph. Hær. 19. p. 40. † Nicetas Thesaur. l. 1. c. 33. B. P. Maxim. t. 25. p. 64. || Ibid. ||| Philo de Vita cont. p. 689, 691, 695. * Basn. Hist. de L'Eglise. l. 2.

Philo VII. Of the time Philo writ in. VIII. His Teſtimony diſcuſs'd. IX. Their Devotions upon Feſtival Days. X. Some Reflections upon all theſe Characters. XI. Euſebius's Contradictions. XII. Philo's Voyage to Rome, a Fiction. XIII. His being a Chriſtian, a Fable. XIV. The Converſion of the Eſſenes, falſe. XV. Whether the Name of Therapeute is Chriſtian. XVI. The Books of the Eſſenes. XVII. Their Spiritual Songs. XVIII. Their Biſhops, and Anchorets. XIX. Their Converſion to Chriſtianity confuted. XX. The Silence of Pagan and Chriſtian Authors concerning the Eſſenes examin'd. XXI. The true Origin of the Eſſenes deriv'd from Pythagoras. XXII. Whether this Philoſopher was an Eſſene, or of the Order of the Carmelites. XXIII. Whether Balilides was a Prophet and a Monk.

1. BOth Ancient and Modern Writers were poſſeſs'd, that the Eſſenes were, or became Chriſtians. Euſebius * thought, that this cou'd not be queſtion'd. He aſſerts, that Philo Judæus, from whom he takes all his Proofs, deſign'd to deſcribe the Primitive Church. He finds among them the different Orders of the Miniſters of that Church, the Biſhops not excepted; and obſerves that they perform'd ſome miraculous Cures in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt. He might have added to theſe things, the Predictions, which Joſephus relates, and whoſe accompliſhment made this Hiſtorian believe, that moſt of thoſe Anchorets were inſpir'd. Euſebius grounds his Opinion upon the following Reaſons. 1. Becauſe the Eſſenes upon their entrance into their Society, gave their Poſſeſſions to the Poor, or ſurrender'd them to the Community, as the Apoſtles and firſt Diſciples did. 2. Becauſe they lov'd Allegories, and carefully div'd into the Myſtical Senſe of the Law, whoſe Literal Senſe they compar'd to the Body, and the Myſtical Senſe to the Soul. 3. Becauſe he was charm'd with the Faſtings of the Eſſenes, and their Affection for Celibacy.

2. St. Epiphanius † maintains, that Philo gave the Plan of the ancient Monaſteries, which the Chriſtians erected in the Province of Mareotis. So that here they are not only Chriſtians, but Monks too. St. Jerome obſerves, that Joſephus writing againſt Appian, prais'd mightily the Eſſenes, becauſe they abſtain'd from Women, Fleſh, and Wine, and faſted every day: But he had not carefully read this Treatiſe againſt Appian, which doth no where mention the Eſſenes; nor the other Books of Joſephus, who doth not any where aſcribe to the Eſſenes, either a daily Faſt, or Abſtinence from Fleſh and Wine. But he hath added a Proof which the others had not ſeen. For he quotes a new Treatiſe of Philo, concerning the Foundation of the Church of Alexandria by St. Mark.

3. Sozomenus ‖ did not conceal, that theſe Monks retain'd ſome Rites of the Jewiſh Church, which they had forſaken. However, upon the Teſtimony of Philo, which ſeems unexceptionable to him, he adorns the Chriſtian Church with them. Caſſianus ‖‖ names neither the Eſſenes, nor Philo; but after he hath obſerv'd the Inſtitution of Monks in Egypt, by St. Mark the firſt Biſhop of Alexandria, he praiſes the Zeal of theſe firſt Monks, and makes their Panegyrick, whether he had taken it from the Writings of this Jew, or rather from the Hiſtory of Joſephus, which he ſeems to quote. Laſtly, This Opinion was ſo univerſally receiv'd, that the falſe Dionyſius * the Areopagite, writing to a Monk nam'd Cajus, and deſigning to imitate the Stile of the firſt Centuries, call'd him Therapeute; becauſe the Eſſenes went under that Name. Euſebius aſſerts, that the Name of Therapeutes was common to all the Diſciples of Chriſt, and of the Apoſtles, before that of Chriſtians was invented, and that it was us'd in all the Churches. An old Latin Interpreter, who tranſlated the Canon of the Council † in Trullo, which contains ſome Precepts about Monaſtick Life, was no doubt led by this Prepoſſeſſion to inſert in it, the Therapeutick Life, alluding to the ancient Therapeutes, whence he thought the Monks of the ſeventh Century were deriv'd. To conclude, a new Critick ‖‖, who very peremptorily maintains againſt the general Opinion, that the Works, that go under the Name of Dionyſius |||| the Areopagite, are not falſly aſcrib'd to him, ſeeing that this Impoſtor ſpeaks of the Monks, that were not known in the time of Dionyſius, hath recourſe to the Teſtimony of Philo, who hath extoll'd ſo much the Monaſtick Auſterities, and given a Deſcription of them, when he ſpeaks of the Therapeutes. But I can't tell whether this be not proving one Falſhood by another.

4. I will not quote all the * Moderns, who have follow'd the Ancients. The Proteſtants are not here jealous of the Antiquity, which is aſcrib'd to Monaſteries. They only adopt theſe ancient Anchorets among Chriſtians, and endeavour, as the reſt, to wreſt the Senſe of the Words of Philo, that they may find in this Hiſtorian, the Biſhops, and the Oath that was taken upon the Euchariſt. The Roman Catholicks have too great an Intereſt in this Hypotheſis not to defend it.

Baronius † their Leader, obſerves, that none of the Pagan Hiſtorians, who have ſpoken of the Jews, mention'd the Eſſenes before the coming of Chriſt. According to him, no body can believe, that they are older than the Chriſtian Church; nay, the Goſpel it ſelf, which gives ſo lively a Deſcription of the other Sects, makes no mention of them. Chriſt and his Apoſtles cou'd not paſs them over in ſilence, but for one of theſe two Reaſons; either becauſe being very well diſpos'd to embrace Chriſtianity, they did not perſecute him, or becauſe they had not as yet appear'd. Altho we ſhou'd allow the Jews the Advantage of having produc'd the Eſſenes, yet it muſt ſtill be acknowledg'd, that moſt of them receiv'd the Goſpel. The Fathers not only ſay it; but you may alſo obſerve a plain difference between the Eſſenes mention'd by Joſephus, and thoſe deſcrib'd by Philo. The firſt were much more remiſs, and the ſecond more rigid. The firſt, who were but few ſettl'd in Judæa; whereas the others, who were very numerous, liv'd in the Neighbourhood of Alexandria, and in all parts of the World. If Philo hath aſcrib'd ſome Jewiſh Rites to the Eſſenes, it was only becauſe he was jealous of the Glory of the Name of Chriſtians, and of the Integrity of thoſe that bore that name; and therefore he wou'd give his Nation the Honour of having theſe Anchorets. Beſides there were a great many Chriſtians, who did judaize in the time of the Apoſtles. Laſtly, If this Hiſtorian gives them the Title of Eſſenes, it was becauſe the Chriſtians of Alexandria were call'd by that Name, either becauſe moſt of them came out of that Sect, or becauſe they imitated their Lives and Auſterities; which was enough to make Philo give thoſe Chriſtians their Name. But in the main, they were the firſt Converts, who compos'd under St. Mark that famous Church, which conſiſted more of Jews, than Egyptians, who were too much wedded to their Superſtitions to give ſo early an admittance to the Light of the Goſpel.

5. As for me, I am amaz'd at the Jealouſy of Chriſtians, who being ſurrounded with a great cloud of Witneſſes, and ſo well ſtor'd with vaſt numbers of Martyrs and true Saints, rob other Religions of ſome Chimæra's which have dazl'd them, and endeavour to deck themſelves with them. But doth the Chriſtian Church want our paltry Artifices to prop it up? And can't

* Euſeb. H. l. 2. c. 17. p. 54. † Epiph. Hær. 29. p. 120. ‖ Sozomenus, l. 1. c. 2. p. 419. ‖‖ Caſſianus de Inſtit. Cœnob. l. 2. c. 5. p. 909. * Dion. Areopag. Epiſtola Χαίῳ Θεραπευτῇ, t. 1. p. 761. † Concil. in Trullo, c. 43. ἀσκητικὸν. |||| Bruno Diſſ. de Therap. ‖‖ Differt. Sur Denys L'Areopagite à Paris, 1702. * Bevereg. Codex Illuſtr. p. 152. † Baron. An. 64. n. 6. t. 1. p. 629.

can't we see some rays of Light in a Reprobate Church, without seizing upon, and crowning our selves with them? Did we reflect upon it, we shou'd be asham'd to transplant into the Christian Church some Jewish Sectaries, who were its Persecutors, and mortal Enemies.

St. Chrysostom * observes, that these very Men, who were look'd upon as Saints, and assum'd that Title, were call'd Sicarii, because they wore short Daggers, and were among the Zealots, who upon a pretence of Religion, and love for the Law, committed so many Barbarities. I know, that this passage of St. Chrysostom hath appear'd very obscure to some, and falsify'd to others, who have † corrected the Text, that they might change the infamous Name of Sicarii, for that of Caraites, or who have wrongfully put there the Pharisees. But it is still the same Prejudice in favour of the Essenes, which makes things that are plain, appear obscure. For the Words of St. Chrysostom are clear; and this Father in this respect confounds the Essenes with the Followers of Theudas, who were a Gang of seditious and profligate Fellows. We must not think it strange, that Men who seem'd devout, and addicted to Speculation, shou'd have prov'd wicked. For the mischief they did was under a colour of Zeal for Religion; which is a thing too common.

6. After all we know nothing of the Essenes, but what we have from Josephus and Philo. No other Writer is produc'd, that speaks of them, or of their having embrac'd Christianity. So that we must stand to what these two Authors say. And can it be imagin'd, that two Enemies of the Christian Religion, who always profess'd Judaism, notwithstanding the Gospel was preach'd, wou'd have taken the pains to give so edifying a Description of the Enemies of their Religion, and Ceremonies? If the Essenes were still Jews, when Philo, and Josephus writ, how is it known, that they were converted to Christianity? Are some Austerities enough to warrant this Conjecture; because they are like those of the Monks? St. Mark had not as yet converted them, when Josephus writ his Antiquities after the Destruction of Jerusalem; (for he reckons them the third Sect of his Religion) how were they converted since that time? But they will not perhaps insist on the Essenes mention'd by Josephus; but the same Presumption remains still against those describ'd by Philo. Besides, Why shou'd some of them be Christians, and the other have persever'd in the Jewish Religion, since both practis'd some monastical Austerities?

7. One Remark alone is enough to destroy all these favourable Opinions of the Essenes. Philo, from whom these Proofs are taken, was born in the 723*d* Year of Rome. He says, that he was very young, when he writ his Book, and that his Studies were afterwards interrupted, by being employ'd in Affairs of consequence. So that according to this Reckoning, Philo must have necessarily writ before the Birth of Christ, and therefore, much before Christianity had spread as far as Alexandria. If you make Philo Thirty Five, or Forty Years of Age, when he compos'd his Works, he was not then Young. And yet Christ was then but Eight or Ten Years old, and had not taught. The Gospel was not as yet known. So that the Essenes cou'd not be Christians; whence it may easily be inferr'd, that Philo gave us the Description of a Sect of Reform'd Jews.

It may doubtless be said, that this Author liv'd a long while, since he went to Rome in the Reign of Caligula. That is true. But this Remark doth not invalidate the Objection which is rais'd from his asserting, that he had compos'd his Books in his Youth. Add, that St. Mark had not as yet founded the Church of Alexandria, nor that vast number of Monasteries of the Essenes, when Caligula dy'd in the 793*d* Year of Rome, and the 41*th* of Christ. So that the Essenes mention'd by Philo, were neither Christians, nor Monks, but Jews.

8. Philo || hath distinguish'd two Orders of Essenes. Some apply'd themselves to Practice, and others to Contemplation. These last were also of the Sect of the Essenes. For Philo gives them that Title. He distinguishes them from the first Branch, but upon the score of some degrees of Perfection. How cou'd those whom Philo calls Contemplative Essenes be made Christians; and the others be still look'd upon as Jews, since they all were of the same Sect? He observes ||| that they were Disciples of Moses; and that is such a Character of Judaism, that it cannot be controverted, especially by Christians. Their Business * was to peruse the Sacred Volumes, to study the Philosophy, which they had receiv'd from their Ancestors, to find out some Allegories, believing that the Secrets of Nature were conceal'd in the cleerest Terms; and to help them in this Inquiry, they had the Commentaries of the Ancients. For the first Founders of this Sect had lost several Books of the Allegories; and their Disciples follow'd their Method. Doth this discover them to have been Christians? Who are these Ancestors, who had left so many Books behind them, at a time when there was hardly one Gospel publish'd. Can it be said that the Holy Writers have left us some Volumes full of Allegories? What sort of Religion wou'd ours be, if nothing else was found in Holy Writ? Can it be imagin'd, that the business of the first Saints of Christianity was to inquire into the Secrets of Nature, conceal'd in the cleerest terms of the Word of God? That became Mystical Divines, and Speculative Votaries, who profess'd Physick; and becomes now the Jews, whose Doctors were furiously infatuated with Allegories. But neither these Ancestors, nor Philosophy, nor Volumes full of Allegories, nor the Study of Scholars, which ran upon the same thing, do suit with the Founders of the Christian Religion, or with Christians.

9. They shut themselves up all the Week long without going out of their Cells, or even daring to look out of their Windows; and came out from thence, but on the Sabbath Day, holding their Hands under their Cloaks; one between the Breast and the Beard †, and the other upon one side. Doth this Posture denote them Christians? Doth not the Day of their publick Meeting, which was Saturday, || shew that they were Jews, rigid Observers of the Day of Rest, which Moses had enjoyn'd them? Us'd, as the Grass-hopper, to feed upon the Dew, they fasted all the Week; but they eat and rested on the Sabbath Day. They had a Table in their Feasts, whereon they put some Bread to imitate the Table of the Shew Bread, which Moses had plac'd in the Temple. They sung some new Hymns in this Feast, which were compos'd by the oldest Man of the Company. But when he did not compose any, they then took those of some ancient Poet. It cannot be said, that there was at that time any ancient Poets among the Christians, and this Term doth not much become the Prophet David. They also danc'd in this Feast. Both Men and Women |||| did it in remembrance of the Red-Sea; because they fansy'd, that Moses had set that Example to the Men, and that his Sister put her self at the head of the Women to make them dance and sing. This Feast lasted till Sun rising; and as soon as the Dawn appear'd, every one turn'd towards the East, and wish'd one another a good Morning, and retir'd into his Cell to meditate, and contemplate God. We ſee here the ſame Superſtition for the Sun, which we have already obſerv'd in the Eſſenes of the firſt Order.

* Chrys. in Act. Hom. 44. p. 404. † Σικάριοι legit ὁι Κάριοι. Fuller Misc. l. 2. c. 3. f. 2275. Suidas in voce Σικάριοι legit φαρισαῖοι: non Ἐσσηνοὶ. || Philo de Vita. contr. p. 688. ||| Ibid. p. 695. * Ibid. p. 691. † Philo de Vita. contr. p. 691. || Ibid. p. 692. |||| Philo de Vita. contr. p. 697, 698.

dítate,

10. If you examine Philo's Age, you may eaſily obſerve, that having writ before the Goſpel was preach'd, he cou'd not deſcribe the Chriſtians but by a Spirit of Divination; ſince they were not as yet in Being; and if you weigh, what he ſays of the Eſſenes, you ſee eaſily, that they were Jews. For you find the Jewiſh Religion among them, and not one Footſtep of Chriſtianity. Some Auſterities, which were common to them, and to Infidels, and Idolaters, ought not to prevail over their ridiculous Speculations, and ſo plain Characters of Judaiſm.

11. Euſebius is the firſt, who hath introduc'd the Eſſenes into the Chriſtian Church, and led the way for the reſt. If we take away this Leader, we invalidate the greateſt Authority on which his Followers ground their Opinion. And yet Euſebius committed ſo many Miſtakes in this Matter, that it is ſtrange, that he is ſo blindly followed.

He * proves by the Teſtimony of Philo, that the Eſſenes had embrac'd Chriſtianity; and yet he makes uſe of theſe Eſſenes, and of this Philo, to ſhew, that there hath been always among the Jews ſome who led a retir'd Life, and were of an exemplary Piety. He quotes elſewhere a Paſſage of Porphyry, which ſays the ſame thing. So that he makes at the ſame time theſe Sectaries both Chriſtians and Jews; which is a plain Contradiction.

12. Euſebius ſays, † that Philo went to Rome in the Reign of Claudius, where he was particularly acquainted with St. Peter; which is manifeſtly falſe. For St. Peter did not go to Rome till the Reign of Nero; and he cou'd not be there in Claudius's time, ſince he did not go out of Judæa but after the Death of Herod, who had put him in Priſon; and then inſtead of going directly from Judæa to Rome, he went || to Antioch, where he ſtaid a long time. Beſides Philo was ſent ſome Years before to Rome in the Reign of Caligula, of whom he writ a horrible Character, which nevertheleſs was ſo well lik'd by the Senate of Rome, that they order'd that his Work ſhou'd be put into the publick Library. So that Euſebius overthrows the Eſſenes, and contradicts the Hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles. To imagine that Philo made a ſecond Voyage to Rome, in order to make him find St. Peter there in the Reign of Nero, is to run after Whims and Chimæra's.

13. He affirms too, that Philo became a Chriſtian, being converted by his being acquainted with St. Peter, which oblig'd him to deſcribe the Manners of the Chriſtians. Photius |||| hath follow'd Euſebius. But he adds, upon I know not what Tradition, that Philo being incens'd againſt the Chriſtians, abjur'd their Religion and became an Apoſtate. This Profeſſion of Chriſtianity, which Philo is ſuppos'd to have made, is a new Invention of Euſebius; which makes his Narration to be ſuſpected. Joſephus ſpoke of him after his Death as of an eminent Man in his Nation, and very zealous for the Synagogue. We find no Footſteps of Chriſtianity in any of his Writings, who are only compos'd either to raiſe the Jewiſh Religion above that of the Greeks, and Egyptians; or to find out the Allegorical Senſe of the Law. Moſes is his Hero, and he never ſpeaks of Jeſus Chriſt, or of the Morality of the Goſpel, which the Eſſenes wou'd have follow'd had they been Chriſtians. How can it be imagin'd, that a Man who was converted by St. Peter, and made it his Buſineſs to praiſe the Chriſtians, and to write a long Panegyrick of their Piety, never ſpoke of their Chriſtianity? For it is ſuppos'd that Philo writ after the riſe of Chriſtianity, ſince he draws the Picture of the Chriſtians in that of the Eſſenes. It is too ſuppos'd, that he was already a Chriſtian, and return'd from Rome, where he had convers'd with St. Peter, when he writ his Treatiſe of the Eſſenes. How comes it then to paſs, that we find in it no ſigns of Chriſtianity? Why doth he never ſpeak there of Jeſus Chriſt, or of St. Peter who had converted him, or even of the Goſpel?

14. Euſebius * ſays, that the Eſſenes of Philo were converted by St. Mark, who carry'd his Goſpel to Alexandria whilſt St. Peter was alive. And yet he ſays elſewhere, that St. Mark did not write till St. Peter was dead; which is an evident Contradiction. He ſhou'd have ſtuck to one of theſe Relations. It ſeems, that he was ſenſible of his Fault, and therefore he dates the Work of Philo about the Eſſenes, a long time after the Reign of Claudius, wherein he had convers'd with St. Peter. But that is not enough to remove the Contradiction. For that Work muſt be dated after the Death of St. Peter, and Philo had been too old to have writ at that time in the behalf of the Chriſtians; ſince he had been then above Ninety Five Years of Age; whereas he did not live ſo long.

15. Euſebius adds, that Philo calls the Eſſenes Therapeutes, becauſe the Name of Chriſtians was not as yet us'd in Alexandria. But a Man muſt be very bold to make ſuch Conjectures. For the Chriſtians having receiv'd that Name at Antioch before the Goſpel was preach'd in other Places, and St. Mark had carry'd it into Alexandria; it ought to have been known in Egypt as ſoon as St. Mark made any Proſelites there; and Philo cou'd not be ignorant of it, was it true, that he had known St Peter at Rome, and became there a Chriſtian.

16. Euſebius foreſaw the Objection, which ſprung from the Books, which the Eſſenes had in their Poſſeſſion, and which they receiv'd from their Anceſtors. The Chriſtians cou'd not ſpeak of their Anceſtors; becauſe the Chriſtian Religion was then of too freſh a Date to have paſs'd from Father to Son, and Grand-Son; and therefore he ſays, that the Books which the Eſſenes read were the Goſpels, and the Epiſtles of St. Paul, eſpecially that to the Hebrews, which is full of Allegories, and Interpretations of the ancient Prophets. So that the Goſpels, and the Epiſtle of St. Paul to the Hebrews, muſt have been publiſh'd a great deal ſooner than it is thought; if the Eſſenes ſtudy'd it, when Philo writ in their behalf. And indeed if we date the Epiſtle to the Hebrews in the Year 54. we muſt allow ſome time before it was transfer'd to Alexandria, and the Eſſenes read it, and Philo knew it; and then he did not write till he was 85, or 90 Years of Age. But he was dead at that time. Beſides, can any body find the Goſpels, and the Epiſtles of St. Paul in theſe Words of Philo. As they read the Sacred Volumes, they argue after the manner of their Fathers; they explain allegorically the Precepts, which they have receiv'd from their Anceſtors. They have the Commentaries of the Leading Men of their Sect, who have explain'd allegorically their Doctrine; They follow this Cuſtom and Model. Suppoſing, that Philo was a Chriſtian, and had read the Goſpels of St. Mark and St. Luke, he had not ſpoke ſo obſcurely of them; nor ſaid, that they were the Books of a Sect; ſince he had profeſs'd the ſame Religion; nor deſcrib'd theſe Books as meer allegorical Interpretations of the Law and the Prophets. We plainly know here the Jews, who made Allegories and myſtical Meanings their Study. Philo is a Witneſs of it, ſince he hath expounded allegorically moſt parts of Scripture. Ariſtobulus, who liv'd before him, and is prais'd in the ſecond Book of the Maccabees, turn'd the Text of Moſes into Allegories. Euſebius † was not ignorant of it; ſince he himſelf quotes a frag-

* Euſeb. Præp. Ev. l. 8. c. 11. p. 379. † Ibid. l. 2. c. 17. || Acts 13. |||| Photius Cod. 105. p. 178. * Hiſt. l. 2. c. 16. & l. 5. c. 8. † Euſeb. Præp. Ev. l. 8. c. 10. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 17.

ment

ment of his Book. And therefore the Sham Ariſtæus, who had a mind to deſcribe the Genius of his Nation, and ſuit himſelf with it, hath repreſented the High-Prieſt Eleazar, who follows this Method. It was the Study of the Wits, and of thoſe, who deſign'd to diſtinguiſh themſelves among the Divines of that time. But this cannot be laid to the charge of the Chriſtians. Altho St. Paul gave ſome myſtical Explications to the Hiſtory of Hagar and Sarah, yet it cannot be ſaid, that this is the diſtinguiſhing Character of his Epiſtles; much leſs of the Goſpels. Barnaby's Epiſtle, which is full of ſuch Allegories, is not genuine; but granting it was, Philo, who had not ſeen it, cou'd not make uſe of it to give this Notion of the Chriſtians. If any hath a mind to find the Writings of the New Teſtament in Philo, he muſt confound them with the Allegorical Books of the Jews, which are mightily deſpis'd.

17. Euſebius indeed tells us, that the Eſſenes had ſome Hymns, and Spiritual Songs among them; but he doth not inform us, what were thoſe Spiritual Songs, which the Primitive Church uſed. Some are aſcrib'd to Hyppolitus the Martyr. Others go under the Name of Athenogenes, that was contemporary with Clemens Alexandrinus, who alſo ſeal'd the Truth with his own Blood; and the Chriſtians of the ſecond Century undoubtedly apply'd themſelves to compoſe theſe Hymns. But Philo, who was dead a long time before, cou'd not ſee them. Some * pretend, that the Chriſtians borrow'd their love for Muſick from the Egyptians, who ſung in Verſe the Praiſes of their Gods, and had a Man, who had the chief Management of Tunes; or ſome Therapeutes, who compos'd a great many Hymns. But why will they derive the Origin of our Spiritual Songs from the Heathens, or ſome Jewiſh Sectaries? Cou'd not the Chriſtians have invented that Cuſtom, without borrowing it from Strangers? And if they will not allow theſe the Glory of inventing it, why will they not rather run back to David, whoſe Imitators they were? But from whatſoever Spring the Chriſtian Pſalms flow'd, they had as yet none among them when Philo writ. That is the reaſon, that Euſebius, who ought to have produc'd them, quotes not one of them; but only ſuppoſes, without alledging any Proof for it, that the Chriſtians had already ſome Hymns, and that Philo ſpeaks of them in his Book.

18. Euſebius doth alſo find in Philo's Narrative, the Deacons and Biſhops: And yet this Author ſays nothing of them. The Eſſenes had their Chiefs, as all Societies have ſome, that govern them. But to find the Biſhops in his Relation, is to ſee what is not there. Some † alſo diſcover in Philo a Monaſtery, or a great Church built in Egypt in the middle of a Field. But how can they, unleſs they blind themſelves, imagine, that there were any publick Churches, and Monaſteries in Philo's time, who writ before Chriſt's Death; or if they will, immediately after it; ſince the Chriſtians had then but ſome Burying-Places, or Houſes to meet privately in? To conclude, Euſebius finds in the Eſſenes, the Chriſtian Hermits and Monks. But how cou'd he be ignorant, that it was the Perſecution of Dioclesian which drove ſome Men into Deſert Places, where they inſenſibly accuſtom'd themſelves to live upon Roots, and retir'd; or that the Monaſtick way of Living was not ſo ancient, ſince the firſt Anchorets, who produc'd the Monks, ſtill ſubſiſted in his time? And yet one wou'd think, that it is not lawful to doubt of what he ſays. Neither ſhou'd we do it; had not we Philo's Treatiſe in our Hands. For we wou'd not otherwiſe preſume to contradict an ancient Author of ſo much credit as Euſebius. But ſince we can make uſe of our Eyes to inquire into the truth of theſe Facts, we may be allow'd to reject the Conjectures of a Hiſtorian, who hath ſo often ſtumbl'd in one Article.

19. Baronius ſhall not detain us very long; becauſe we'll only inſiſt on what he ſays that is particular. He committed the ſame Fault as Euſebius. For he imagin'd, that the Egyptian Anchorets took the Name of Eſſenes, notwithſtanding they had embrac'd Chriſtianity. Whereas all thoſe, that follow'd Jeſus Chriſt, diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by the Name of Chriſtians, which they deriv'd from their Maſter, and glory'd in.

The Heathens were ſometimes miſtaken in it. For they call'd them Good inſtead of Chriſtians. But their Errour was ſo much the more to be forgiven, that it was occaſion'd by the alteration of ſome Letters. But we do not ſee, that the Chriſtians themſelves were miſtaken in this; or that they affected any other Name; and thoſe of Alexandria did not prefer to this glorious Title, that of a Sect among the Jews, whereof part was always zealous for their Religion, and inveterate againſt ours. Every Sect ought to enjoy quietly its own Names; The Faithful, that of Chriſtians; and the Jewiſh Sectaries, that of Eſſenes, and Therapeutes, which was peculiar to them. The Cardinal argu'd more coherently than Euſebius, when he owns, that Philo remain'd a Jew. But he ſhou'd at the ſame time have anſwer'd an Objection, which ariſes from the Religion of that Author. For Philo muſt have known the Eſſenes; ſince they liv'd in the Neighbourhood of Alexandria. If he knew, that they were Chriſtians, how came he to make their Panegyrick, and a long Treatiſe to deſcribe their way of Living? If he believ'd them to be Jews, how can it be ſaid at this time, that theſe Men, who are known but by his Recital alone, became Chriſtians?

It was only, ſay they, out of Jealouſy, that he aſcribes to them ſome Jewiſh Rites, that he might heighten the Glory of his Nation. But this Conjecture is grounded upon no Proofs. For ſince Philo is the only Author, who hath ſpoken of theſe Sectaries, and makes them intirely Jews; we muſt believe him upon his Word. Did he aſcribe them any Tenets peculiar to Chriſtianity, there wou'd be ſome reaſon to hope that they were Chriſtians; but we find among theſe Sectaries no Footſteps either of Chriſtianity, or of the Evangelical Religion. What charms and pleaſes Baronius, is their auſtere Manners, mix'd with Speculations, and Chimera's. But why will he not allow ſome Auſterities among the Jews; ſince there are ſome among the Chriſtians? Is it becauſe the Law of Moſes, who requir'd a perfect Holineſs, cou'd not inſpire that kind of Devotion? Joſephus ſpeaks of ſome Eſſenes, who were undoubtedly Jews. However, they liv'd in common. They gave what they had to the Poor. Their Morality was rigid, and their Life auſtere. Since then according to the Teſtimony of Joſephus, there were ſome kind of Monks among the Jews, why will not Baronius allow of a ſecond Order, that went one Degree farther, and became addicted to Speculations and Chimera's?

Baronius confeſſes, that Anchorets were originally Jews; but he contends, that they came over to the Chriſtian Church. This Confeſſion is enough. For if the Jewiſh Religion inſpir'd them with the Thoughts of Solitude, and Retirement, they may have kept theſe Thoughts, and continu'd in that Condition; and if the Jews have had ſome Anchorets, they were thoſe repreſented by Philo, and not Chriſtians. Why will Baronius accuſe Philo of having dealt like a Knave, by aſcribing to the Eſſenes ſome Jewiſh Rites, which they had not, and to have deſcrib'd them as if they had been Jews, notwithſtanding that they were Chriſtians? But how can he infer from the Teſtimony of Philo, that the Eſſenes were Chriſtians, eſpecially ſince he only gave, and ought only to have given the Deſcription of a Jewiſh Sect?

* Le Moine Var. Sac. p. 1097. † Schelſtrate de Concil. de Antioch. l. 2. c. 4. p. 182.

20. The

20. The Silence of prophane Authors doth not prove, that it only appear'd after Chriſt. For the Heathens were but little acquainted with the Jews, and leſs with the particular Sects of their Church. Beſides Writers do not always ſay what ever they know; as it appears by the Example of Joſephus, who did not ſpeak of the Eſſenes, when he writ againſt Apion; notwithſtanding that the Devotion of theſe Anchorets was a dazling Argument againſt that Heathen.

The Evangeliſts have alſo paſs'd them over in Silence, becauſe that Sect was not numerous, liv'd retir'd, and did not come to diſturb Jeſus Chriſt or his Diſciples with their Diſputes. This is the true reaſon of their Silence. For the Sacred Hiſtorians only ſpeak of what concerns the Chriſtian Religion, and are ſilent about thoſe things which Men's Curioſity might expect from them. In a Word, it is not ſtrange, that Philo, and Joſephus have ſpoken variouſly of the Eſſenes; ſince the firſt hath diſtinguiſh'd two Branches of that Sect, whereof one reſided in Judæa, and the other was diſpers'd in the Deſarts, and ſpread as far as Egypt, and eſpecially in the Province of Mareotis. Philo himſelf hath ſpoken differently of the ſame Eſſenes in his Apology quoted by Euſebius. But this diverſity of Relations is not enough to prove them Chriſtians.

21. I will only make one Remark more againſt the Chriſtianity of the Eſſenes. (viz.) They are only adopted for their Auſterities, and Affinity with a Monaſtick Life. But don't we ſee ſome Examples like theſe of Temperance, and Chaſtity among the Heathens, and eſpecially in the Sect of Pythagoras, to which Joſephus * compar'd this in his time? Their having things in common dazl'd Euſebius, and induc'd him to compare the Eſſenes to the Faithful, mention'd in the Acts of the Apoſtles, who had all things in common. And yet Pythagoras's Diſciples did the ſame thing. For it was one of their Maxims, to claim no Property to any thing. Every one brought into the Community, what he had; and the Poor were ſupply'd with it, even when they were abſent or a far off. Hence it is that they call'd themſelves Cœnobites, as well as the Chriſtian Monks, and they ſtretch'd their Charity ſo far, that one of them being condemn'd to death by Dionyſius the Tyrant, found a Bail, who took his place in Gaol. It is the higheſt pith of Friendſhip to die for one another. Pythagoras's Diſciples were as rigid in abſtaining from Fleſh as the Eſſenes were. For they only eat ſome raw, or boil'd Herbs. They were ſtinted † to a certain quantity of Bread, which cou'd neither load, nor fill their Stomachs. It was ſometimes rub'd with a little Honey. They were forbid Wine, and allow'd no other Drink than Water. It is alſo reported ‖ that Pythagoras order'd his Diſciples to ſit at a plentiful Table, and after he had excited their Appetite by the ſight, and number of nice Diſhes, he made them go away without eating, that they might learn a more perfect Abſtinence. This Philoſopher was of Opinion, that the Pleaſures and Enjoyments of this Life ought to be ſlighted, as unworthy to ſtop Man upon Earth. He agreed with the Eſſenes in forbidding his Diſciples to anoint themſelves with Oyl. They wore white Garments, and thought Linen Cloaths too magnificent for them; and therefore they wou'd have none but of Wooll. They were not allow'd to jeſt, or laugh, or to ſwear by the Name of God; becauſe every one was oblig'd to demonſtrate his Honeſty, and that he had no need to ratify his Promiſe with an Oath. They had a great Veneration for old Men, before whom they were a long time ſilent. They wou'd not make Water at the Preſence of the Sun, a Superſtition, which the Eſſenes had too taken from them. To conclude, the Pythagoreans were very fond both of Speculation, and the Quiet which attends it; and therefore they made it one of their moſt important Precepts.

O Juvenes! tacita colite hæc pia Sacra quiete.

Said ‖‖ Pythagoras to his Diſciples at the Frontiſpiece of one of his Books. So that when we compare the Sect of the Eſſenes, with that of the Pythagoreans, we find them ſo alike, in thoſe very things, that have dazl'd the Chriſtians, that one ſeems to have ſprung from the other. Since then we ſee ſome Heathens ſo abſtemious, and auſtere, we ought not to think it ſtrange, that ſome Jews, who had the advantage of being inlighten'd with the Law of Moſes ſhou'd be ſo too; and therefore they are not to be depriv'd of that Glory, to aſcribe it to Chriſtianity.

22. This Compariſon leads us to clear a new Difficulty. For ſome pretend that Pythagoras went into Judæa, and embrac'd the Sect of the Eſſenes; whoſe Principles he adopted, and eſpecially the three Eſſential Vows, tria vota Subſtantialia, which were thoſe of Poverty, Chaſtity, and Obedience. He went with this Treaſure to Samos, where he inſtituted an Order of Monks, who made theſe three Vows. Read Abbot * Faydit's Letter concerning the ſuppos'd Monachiſm, and Carmelitiſm of Pythagoras, and you'll find in it, that this Philoſopher hath been transform'd into a Carmelite. Several Writers of that Order do warmly aſſert it. So that Pythagoras is a Chriſtian of the Religious Order of the Carmelites; and ſo the Conformity of the Eſſenes with this Philoſopher, is ſo far from proving that they were not Chriſtians, that it is a Demonſtration, that they had embrac'd the Goſpel.

This is not ſaid in jeſt, or to paſs away the time. For they are ſo fond of this ſuppos'd Antiquity, and of theſe Spoils of Paganiſm; that Mr. Faydit having repreſented, that the Carmelites wrong'd themſelves to rob the Heathens of one Baſilides, who foretold Veſpaſian that he ſhou'd be Emperour, and to whom they have given the Garb of a Prophet, and of a Prieſt of Mount Carmel; whereas he was rather a Magician †. The Authors of the Journal of Trevoux have reprimanded him with an Air, which People aſſume, when they maintain an evident Truth. "He affirms, ſay they, "that Baſilides was a Magician, who doubts of that? "Suetonius calls him Haruſpex; and Mr. Faydit puffed "up with this Demonſtration, crows over the Wri- "ters of the Order of the Reverend Fathers the Car- "melites, who have ſaid that Baſilides was a Prophet. "However it might be ſaid, that Suetonius expreſs'd "things according to his Pagan Notions.

It is to no purpoſe to ſay any thing to People who are infatuated with their Antiquity. Nevertheleſs they muſt confeſs their Indigence, when they beg ſome Rags of Strangers to cover their Nakedneſs. I wou'd rather be of an Order by five or ſix Hundred Years younger, than have either Pythagoras, or Baſilides for my Anceſtors. Beſides, we muſt wholly overſet Chronology to make the firſt an Eſſene, and afterwards a Carmelite; becauſe this Philoſopher liv'd a long time before the Eſſenes appear'd. He did not rifle them; but ſome Jewiſh Fryars have borrow'd of him ſome of his Heatheniſh Rites. As for Baſilides, Mr. Faydit ‖ hath ſo handſomly reply'd to thoſe that attack'd him, that I ought not to meddle with that Controverſy: He is in the right to wiſh, that Jupiter's Example was imitated, who kick'd out of Heaven, I can't tell how many Paltry Gods, who had intruded themſelves there. Every Religious Order hath more need to be muſter'd, than a Company of Soldiers, that all the Fagots who put on the Religious Habit, and have

* Joſeph. Ant. l. 15. p. 541. Diog. Laert. l. 8. p. 495, & 506. Gellius, l. 1. c. 9. Zenob. Cent. 4. 79. Diodor. Sicul. Excerpta. Valeſ. p. 243. Diog. ibid. 503, 504. † Athen. l. 2. ‖ Diodor. Sicul. Excerpta. Valeſ. p. 244. Diog. ibid. ‖‖ Diogen. ibid. p. 492. * Faydit lettre, Nouvelles de la Republique des lettres Octobre, 1703. p. 472. † Memories pour L'Hiſtoire des Sciences Mail, 1704. p. 84. ‖ Faydit Supplement des Eſſais de Litterature, 1704. p. 110.

Divine

Divine Honours paid them, without having done one thing to deſerve it, might be caſheer'd. At ſuch a Muſter Baſilides wou'd be one of the firſt diſcarded.

23. And in truth, ſince this new Prophet is only known through Suetonius's means, we muſt undoubtedly acquieſce to what he ſays of him. He places him among thoſe who Pectora pullorum rimantur & exta catelli.

So that we muſt take him for an Augur. It is ridiculous to pretend that Suetonius might have ſpoken according to his Heatheniſh Ideas. For that is not known; beſides had he had that Notion, he had call'd him Vates. He wou'd not have made him an Augur, ſince none of the old Prophets ever conſulted the Inwards of Victims. He doth not give the Title of Haruſpex to Joſephus, who had alſo foretold Veſpaſian * that he ſhou'd aſcend the Imperial Throne. For this Hiſtorian diſtinguiſhes the nature of the Preſages and Predictions, that were made to this Prince. Laſtly, The Matter is not here, what Suetonius thought, but what he ſaid; and ſince Baſilides was but an Haruſpex, an Augur, he cannot without a Sacrilegious Raſhneſs be reckon'd among the Prophets, or Pythagoras at the Head of the Carmelites, and Eſſenes.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Herodians.

I. THeir firſt Aſſociation. II. The Leaven of the Herodians. III. Herod's Feſtival mention'd by Perſius explain'd. IV. Herod the Great, the Founder of the Sect of his Name. V. The Grounds of that Conjecture refuted. VI. Some Reaſons againſt that Conjecture. VII. The Feſtival upon Herod's Death explain'd. VIII. Herod the Tetrarch Head of a Sect. IX. The Errour of thoſe, who make Herod Aprippa the Meſſiah. X. A Miſtake of Juſtin Martyr concerning this Sect. XI. Father Harduin's Conjectures about the Herodians. XII. Whether Herod the Great ought to have been a Platoniſt. XIII. The Herodians diſtinguiſh'd from the Saducees in the Goſpel, and by Philaſtrius. XIV. They look'd upon Herod as upon a Stranger and the Meſſiah. XV. Baronius, and the Fathers who have ſaid it, confuted. XVI. How Herod the Tetrarch might have been look'd upon as the Meſſiah. XVII. The ſhort Duration of that Sect. XVIII. Whether the Jewiſh Patriarchs were Herodians. A Fault of Theodoret upon this Matter.

1. THE Herodians are known but by two Paſſages of the Evangelical Hiſtory. They appear'd in one combin'd with the Phariſees to tempt Jeſus Chriſt, about a nice Point, which was the Payment of the Tribute: † Is it lawful, ſaid they, to pay Tribute unto Cæſar or not? And in the other, Chriſt forewarns his Diſciples againſt the Leaven of the Herodians, and that of the Phariſees. Some have thought, that the firſt Combination was only done to lay a more intricate Snare for our Saviour. For the Phariſees, who believ'd, that they ought to be exempted from Taxes, eſpecially in the Reign of the Meſſiah, hugg'd themſelves before-hand with this fancy, that they ſhou'd have an irrefragable reaſon to reject our Lord, if he confeſs'd that the Tribute was due; and if he deny'd it, then he fell into the hands of the Herodians, who wou'd have caus'd him to be impriſon'd to make their court to the Emperor. For to pretend, as Beza hath done, that the Herodians did refuſe to pay Tribute to the Emperor, is to ſhew ones ſelf not well acquainted with the Dependance, wherein the Commonwealth and the Herods were under the Cæſars.

2. Jeſus Chriſt forewarns alſo his Diſciples againſt the Leaven of Herod, and againſt that of the Phariſees. This Leaven ſignifies a pernicious Doctrine, which the Son of God || attributes to Herod, or to the Herodians, as ſome Manuſcripts have it. It wou'd be in vain to look into Joſephus for an Explanation of theſe two places of the Goſpel. For the Jewiſh Hiſtorian reckons but three Sects of his Nation, and never ſpeaks of the Herodians.

3. We only learn from a Heathen Poet, that the Jews did celebrate at Rome a ſolemn Feaſt in honour of Herod; wherein they made ſome Illuminations at their Windows, and drank heartily.

|||| —— At cum
Herodis venere dies, unctaque feneſtra,
Diſpoſitæ pinguem nebulam vomuere lucernæ
Portantes violas, rubrumque amplexa catinum,
Cauda natat Thynni, tumet alba fidelia vino.

Some * Criticks believe, that Perſius ſpoke Poetically; and that he put there Herod Agrippa, who was known very well at Rome, where he had liv'd a long time, and was King of the Jews, for the whole Nation. So that according to this Conjecture, Herod and the Jews wou'd be the ſame thing, and the Poet wou'd only ſpeak but of the Celebration of the Sabbath, during which the Jews were very careful to illuminate their Houſes. But this Conjecture is too ſubtle. However, Perſius doth not ſpeak there of the Sect of the Herodians, which was not numerous enough to be known in Rome. Beſides, it is not very likely, that they had preſum'd to have publickly and with Pomp ſolemniz'd in Rome, and under Nero's Noſe, the Feſtival of a Man, which the Jews look'd upon as the Deliverer of their Nation, and the Perſon who was to break the Roman Yoak, and to conquer the Univerſe. The Feſtival mention'd by this Poet might have been that of the Birth of Herod Agrippa I, or of his promotion to the Throne by the Favour and Bounty of the Emperor Claudius, and confirm'd by Nero. Interpreters have added Religion to this, by joining, without any reaſon to the other Verſes, that which ſpeaks of the Obſervation of the Sabbath.

Labra moves tacitus, recutitaque Sabbata palles.

And indeed they confound two different things; a Feaſt, which was celebrated with Alacrity and Joy; and the Sabbath wherein the Jews appear'd pale, penſive, and ſilent; and this Feſtival, which the Jews did celebrate at Rome, concern'd Herod Agrippa, who had no Relation with the Sect of the Herodians, ſince it was older.

4. Three Herods have been look'd upon as the Fathers of the Herodians. The firſt is Herod the Great, who dy'd a little after Chriſt's Birth. St. Epiphanius hath follow'd this Hypotheſis, and fanſies, that the Jews were the more inclin'd to look upon him as the Meſſiah, becauſe they knew him to be a Foreigner, and believ'd that they ſaw in him the accompliſhment of the Oracle of Jacob, which promis'd the coming of the Meſſiah, when the Scepter ſhou'd depart from Judah. Nicetas † Choniates hath only copy'd St. Epiphanius; and Baronius || hath follow'd their Steps. Voſſius |||| adds, that this Herod endeavour'd to perſwade the People, that he was the true Meſſiah; and that it was for that reaſon, that he had all the Children of Bethlehem to be unmercifully murder'd, that he might more ſecurely involve in that general Maſſacre him who was already call'd King of the Jews. It is pretended, that he order'd all the Genealogies to be burn'd, that the Pedigree of the Meſſiah, who was to be of the Poſterity of David, might not be known.

* Suet. l. 8. p. 172. † Matth. 22. 16. || Mark 8. 15. |||| Perſ. Sat. 5. * Petiti Variæ lect. c. 18. Crit. t. 9. p. 2567. Vitringa de Synag. l. 1. c. 9. p. 195. † Nicetas Chon. Theſ. Orth. l. 1. c. 34. p. 64. || Baron. Apparat. n. 5. |||| Iſ. Voſſ. de Orac. Sibyll. c. 3.

5. And indeed it is probable enough, that Herod the Great, occaſion'd the Sect that went under his Name. For this Man had an inſatiable Ambition; and his Court-Flatterers might have ſpread a Report, which was like to pleaſe him. Beſides, he was a great Prince, whoſe Magnificence appear'd on all occaſions. To ſum up all, he was King of all Judæa, and tho a Vaſſal, and tributary to the Romans, yet he acted with more Authority than any of his Poſterity ever had. However, every thing well conſider'd, one can't tell which ſide to take. Joſephus, who extols this Prince, and deſcribes him as a great King, doth never repreſent him as the Meſſiah, or inſinuates that any body thought him ſo; and he, who flatters Veſpaſian with that Honour, by applying to him an Oracle of the old Prophets, had not fail'd to have extoll'd a Potent King, for whom he had ſo much Veneration, or to ſet down what Encomiums the People gave him. Had this Sect appear'd only during Herod's Life, and dy'd with him; I ſhou'd not be ſurpriz'd, that a Man, who made others fear and admire him, had been miſtaken for the Meſſiah. But this Sect appears only thirty Years after his Death; ſince it is only known by the Goſpel; and how many reaſons had then the moſt Credulous to open their Eyes, and the moſt cringing Courtiers to find their Errour?

6. For Herod dy'd a very violent Death. His Sufferings were ſharp and long. He ſignaliz'd his old Age, and Sickneſs by the death of his Children, and by Maſſacres. His Death was look'd upon as an exemplary Judgment of God upon him. He was no ſooner dead, but the Peoples Hatred furiouſly broke out againſt him. They diſſembl'd no longer, as they had done out of fear, whilſt he liv'd. They cou'd not forgive him the Golden Eagle, which he plac'd in the Temple, nor the Pagan Games which he had inſtituted in Judæa; and they call'd him a Tyrant. Fifty Deputies * of Judæa, back'd with eight Thouſand Jews, who were at Rome, carry'd their Complaints to Auguſtus to ſtain his Memory; and fearing leſt his Children had inherited the temper of their Father, they preferr'd being under the Dominion of Pagans, Governours of Syria, to the diſſatisfaction of ſeeing a Son of Herod aſcending the Throne. It is not very likely, that a Man, who was ſo much hated during his Life, and after his Death, ſhou'd be look'd upon as the Meſſiah, and that his Sect continu'd whilſt the whole Nation exclaim'd againſt his Memory.

7. His Memory was ſo odious, that a Feaſt was inſtituted, which was obſerv'd the 25*th* of September, in remembrance that this Prince dy'd that Day. The 7th of Chiſten is a Feſtival for the Death of Herod; For he hated the Sages; and there is joy before the Lord, when the Wicked go out of the World. For it is written, The hand of the Lord is againſt them to drive them out of the Camp.

Father Papebroch † maintains, that the Text of Eliezar hath not been well underſtood; and that inſtead of a Feaſt, a Faſt was obſerv'd that Day in memory of the Death of the Sages, whom Herod had put to Death. But the good Man did not mind what he ſaid. For the Death of Saints is not here deplor'd, but they rejoyce at that of the Wicked; and Herod the Great was that wicked Man. He is perhaps better grounded to ſay, that this Book of Faſts aſcrib'd to Eliezar, who liv'd whilſt the ſecond Temple was ſtanding, and a little while after the Death of Herod, is not ſo old. At leaſt we have no Proofs of it. I do not even believe, if you except the Chaldee Paraphraſes, that we have any Hebrew Book ſo old as that. Schelſtratus ‖ who affirms it, hath only done it to confirm his Conjecture about the Day of the Death of Herod; but not to carry things too far, it is enough to ſay, that it is an ancient Tradition that Herod dy'd the 25*th* of November, and that his Memory was ſo heinous, that the Jews celebrated a Feſtival at that time to rejoyce for his Death, inſtead of deploring his Loſs, as if he had been the Meſſiah.

8. The ſecond Herod, that might have been the occaſion of the Riſe and Name of this Sect, was the Tetrarch of Galilee. His Dominions were very ſmall to make him a Meſſiah; beſides that his taking away Herodias was a great Obſtacle to it. However he was an ambitious Man; ſince he was the Victim of his towring Deſires. He fram'd ſome vaſt Projects, when he combin'd with Sejanus, and made an Arſenal with Arms for Sixty Thouſand Men. He was very cunning; and therefore Jeſus Chriſt calls him a Fox. Upon the whole, the Head of the Herodians ſeems to have been alive during the Miniſtry of the Son of God; ſince he commanded his Diſciples to beware of the Leaven of Herod. For altho it be in ſome Manuſcripts, of the Herodians, yet the Reading that we follow is the moſt conſtant and ſure. This Man affected to appear very zealous for the Service of the Emperours; and even to be call'd Claudius's Friend, or rather his Admirer, in one of his Medals; but he had for all that ſome ſecret Deſigns to incroach upon the Empire to aggrandize himſelf. So that he might have the Tributes exactly gather'd, as the Evangeliſts intimate; and at the ſame time get ſome, who maintain'd that he was the Meſſiah that was then expected.

9. Philaſtrius ‖‖ a Biſhop of the fourth Century ſays, that the Jews believ'd that Herod Agrippa, who was ſmitten by an Angel, becauſe he took kindly the Acclamations of the People, who cry'd before his Throne, the Voice of a God, was the Meſſiah. Prateolus * alſo fanſies, that it is enough to quote the Paſſage of the Acts of the Apoſtles, wherein St. Luke relates the Death of Herod ſmitten by an Angel, to know the Origin of the Herodians. But this is a groſs Miſtake. For God inflicted this Puniſhment upon Herod Agrippa, who put St. Peter in Priſon, and St. James to Death. This Agrippa, who was but the Grand-Son of Herod the Great, and Nephew to the Tetrarch, cou'd not occaſion the Cenſure, which Chriſt pronounc'd againſt the Herodians. For he was not ſettl'd in his Kingdom till after Jeſus Chriſt's Death, and even after that of Tiberius. So that to make him the Meſſiah, it muſt be aſſerted, that Herod Antipas, in whoſe Reign Chriſt dy'd, and Herod Agrippa, are one and the ſame Perſon, as it hath been already done †. But we have confuted this Opinion.

10. Juſtin Martyr ‖ believ'd, that the Errour of the old Jews, conſiſted in looking upon Herod as High-Prieſt. But I can't imagine whence Juſtin had this. For the Jews of his Age cou'd not be ſo ignorant of the Law of Moſes, as to aſcribe the High-Prieſthood to a Proſelyte, that they hated; and the Goſpel teaches us, that there was another High-Prieſt, when Chriſt came into the World, and was Crucify'd. So that this was not the Opinion either of the Jews, or of the Herodians, who never gave their Maſter this Title.

11. It is thought at this time, that the Herodians muſt be confounded with the Saducees, becauſe Chriſt enjoyns his Diſciples in one place, to beware of the Leaven of the Phariſees and Saducees, and in another he will have them to beware of the Leaven of the Phariſees and Herodians. We muſt not mind, what Men ſay, after God hath ſpoken, cries Father Harduin ‖‖‖‖. We ought rather to follow our Maſter, and our God, than ſome uncertain Conjectures. Since therefore Jeſus Chriſt hath put the Herodians in the room of the Saducees, they muſt have been of the ſame Opinion. They are known by one another, whence it muſt be concluded, that the Herodians deny'd the Reſurrection of the Dead; and that as Herod, who was originally an Athenian, ſince he is plac'd among the Benefactors of Athens, follow'd Plato's Philoſophy concerning the Exiſtence of the Soul, it muſt be inferr'd that theſe He-

* Joſeph. Ant. l. 11. c. 12. p. 610. † Papebroch. Epiſt. Conſultatoria ad Schelſt. ‖ Schelſtrat. Antiq. illuſtrata Diſſert. 1. c. 2. a. 1. pag. 21, &c. ‖‖ Philaſt. de Hær. p. 724. * Prateol. Elenchus Hæret. H. n. 14. p. 210. † Harduin. de Num. Herodiad. ‖ Juſtin. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 272. ‖‖‖ Harduin. de Num. Herodiad. p. 97, &c.

rodians

rodians admitted only ſome ſubtile, and minute Bodies, which are call'd Spirits, in oppoſition to other more ſenſible and groſs Objects. Let us examine theſe Conjectures, which have at leaſt the Charms of Novelty to recommend them.

12. We ſhall not ſpeak any more of the Birth of Herod, or of his Countrey; becauſe we have ſufficiently enlarg'd upon theſe Heads in the firſt Book. But we are oblig'd to obſerve, that altho Herod's Family had originally come from Athens, yet Herod himſelf can't be ſaid to have come out of Greece, but in the Perſon of his Grand-Father. He made the third Generation. His Grand-Father Antipas was not perhaps a very great Philoſopher; for all the Athenians were not Philoſophers, and all Philoſophers were not Platoniſts. But ſuppoſe it was known, that Antipas was a Learned Man, yet it cou'd not be gueſs'd which of theſe, either the Pythagorean, or Platonick, or Ariſtotelean Philoſophy, he had preferr'd. Neither doth it appear more clearly that his Son Antipater, who minded more the Art of War than Study, follow'd his Father's Philoſophy. And it is yet leſs ſafe to ſay, that of Herod the Great, who having early imbib'd the Jewiſh Religion, ought to have been better acquainted with its Principles, than with thoſe of Plato. And yet we are led by theſe Steps to this Hypotheſis, (viz.) That the Herodians believ'd, that the Souls compos'd of a ſubtile Matter, were corporeal, and cou'd not ſubſiſt without the Body.

13. Father Harduin ſuppoſes too, that the Holy Pen-Men deſign'd to ſubſtitute the Herodians to the Saducees, and that one ſhou'd be known by the other. Did we certainly know the Intention of Jeſus Chriſt, we ſhou'd be in the right not to hearken to Men after God hath ſpoken. But we muſt not make God ſpeak, when he doth not ſpeak; or ground with ſo much Aſſurance a Conjecture upon ſome unknown Intentions. Chriſt may have oblig'd his Diſciples to beware of the Leaven of the Phariſees and Saducees, who had juſt worry'd him, and at the ſame time of that of Herod, who endeavour'd to make the World believe that he was the Meſſiah. The Herodians can't be confounded with the Saducees, ſince they are plainly diſtinguiſh'd in the Goſpel. Our Saviour diſtinguiſhes them clearly, when in one Chapter St. Matthew introduces the Phariſees and Herodians, who came together to tempt him; and afterwards ſpeaks of the Saducees, who the ſame Day tempted him upon another account. One wou'd think that he diſtinguiſhes them from their different Tenets. For the Evangeliſt obſerves, that the Saducees did not believe the Reſurrection; but he doth not ſay any thing like it of the Phariſees, or Herodians; which is a plain Argument that they differ'd very much. This Fact can't be deny'd with relation to the Phariſees; and alſo with reference to the Herodians, eſpecially ſince Herod believ'd, that John Baptiſt was riſen from the Dead. Laſtly, Philaſtrius affirms that the Herodians believ'd the Reſurrection of the Dead, and own'd the Prophets. So that he oppos'd them to the Saducees. But no great Streſs will perhaps be laid on the Teſtimony of this Biſhop of the fourth Century.

14. The Herodians paid the Tribute, and caus'd this Tribute to be paid, whilſt the Jews look'd upon the Payment of it as a Mark of their Slavery; and their way of Tempting Jeſus Chriſt proves this. But that was not their only peculiar Tenet. For they thought Herod the Meſſiah, who was ſo impatitently expected. St. Jerome denies it, and poſitively ſays, that he never read, nor heard any body that ſaid it; but he believ'd and ſaid it himſelf; and there cannot be a plainer Contradiction than that of this * Father, who writ againſt the Luciferians, that before Jeſus Chriſt the Herodians own'd Herod their King for the Meſſiah, and who forgetting himſelf, maintains afterwards, that this was never writ.

This Father looks upon the Herodians as ſo many Soldiers, who were not very Zealous for the Law, and exacted the Tribute; and thereby drew upon themſelves the Railleries and Hatred of the Phariſees. But moſt of the Fathers were of another Opinion. St. Epiphanius and Philaſtrius, the Author who hath tack'd ſome Chapters to Tertullian's Preſcriptions, and Nicetas have affirm'd, that the Herodians believ'd, that Herod was the Meſſiah, and apply'd to him the Oracle of Jacob, the Scepter ſhall not depart from Judah, till the Shiloh come; and that this was aſcrib'd to him, becauſe he was look'd upon as a Stranger.

Theſe Fathers in the main were in the right. But they were plainly miſtaken in their Explication of this Oracle. For it is not true, that the Jews believ'd, that a Stranger was to be their Deliverer and King. They remember'd the Law of Moſes; One from among thy Brethren ſhalt thou ſet King over thee; and this Tradition obtain'd ſo much among them, that they introduc'd Agrippa weeping at the reading of theſe Words, becauſe being a Stranger, he cou'd not aſcend the Throne of Judah; and the Sages at the ſame time comforting him, ſaying, Thou art our Brother. The Application, which Joſephus made to Veſpaſian of an ancient Oracle, was rather the Flattery of a private Man, than the Opinion of the whole Nation. In a Word, If the Fathers believ'd themſelves, that the Meſſiah ſpecify'd by Jacob, ought to have been a Stranger, their Errour was ſtill more groſs and inexcuſable.

15. Baronius, who follow'd the Steps of the Fathers, ought not to have been impos'd upon; becauſe the Jews ſeem in the Goſpel to know very well at what Place the Meſſiah was to be born; and far from yielding this Glory to a Foreigner, one of their Prejudices againſt Jeſus Chriſt, was that he came frome Nazareth, and Galilee; and in that famous Council, which Herod ſummon'd together upon the ſcore of the Wiſe Men, that came to worſhip the King of the Jews, it is unanimouſly acknowledg'd that Bethlehem was pointed as the Place of the Birth of the Deliverer, that was expected. The Synagogue wou'd have very ſoon alter'd their Divinity, had they believ'd, that the Meſſiah, inſtead of being born in Judæa, was to be a Stranger. This Alteration is the more incredible, becauſe the Jews were always very jealous of the Glory of their Nation, and it is not likely, that they wou'd owe their Deliverance and Proſperity to an Idumæan.

16. This in all probability happen'd, (viz.) in the time of Herod, the Jews look'd every where for the Meſſiah, becauſe they were perſwaded that the time of his coming was at hand, when our Lord appear'd. Flatterers, who ſaw Herod in favour, choſe rather to acknowledge him, who was a Tetrarch, and a Prince, who had a great deal of Intereſt with Tiberius, for the Meſſiah, than a Man as Jeſus Chriſt, who had not where to lay his Head. Herod was not ſorry, that the People had an Opinion of him, which was ſo much to his Advantage. His Courtiers and Flatterers, who are always very numerous, encourag'd that Report; and did two Things to ſtrengthen it. 1. They took no notice of Herod's Birth. We have already ſeen it in the Jews of Cæſarea, who maintain'd that his Father was a Jew; and they the rather believ'd it of the Son, who was of a more remote Generation, born at Jeruſalem, or in ſome other part of Judæa. 2. They apply'd to him ſeveral Oracles of the Old Teſtament concerning the Meſſiah, as Joſephus afterwards apply'd to Veſpaſian theſe Words of Micah ||, Out of thee ſhall he come forth unto me, that is to be Ruler in Iſrael. Joſephus did not perhaps believe, that Veſpaſian was the Meſſiah, ſince he did deſtroy the Nation, inſtead of delivering it: However, he apply'd a Prophecy to him, which was only pronounc'd for the Deliverer of the People; and he aſſociated him with that Deliverer, and put him upon the Level |||| with the Perſon mention'd in the Oracle of Micha. Herod's Courtiers did not ſpare theſe and ſtronger Applications to flatter their Maſter. 3. He,

* Hier. in Matth. 22. t. 4. p. 692. † Nicet. l. 1. c. 34. p. 64. || Mich. 5. |||| Ἀμά.

who

who had an exceſſive Ambition, ſince his Pride ruin'd him, did not oppoſe this Opinion, which he did not perhaps believe himſelf. Haughty Princes give often way to ſome Reports which are favourable to them, and agree with their ſecret Deſigns. They detach ſome forlorn Hopes, which raiſe them above others; and they look upon thoſe high flown Encomiums as ſo many tokens of love, which may make ſo good an Impreſſion upon the People, as to produce ſome conſiderable Advantages; and the worſe come to the worſe they can't but diſown them; and if they miſcarry, put the Fault on their Courtiers. Herod, whom Jeſus Chriſt call'd a Fox, was cunning enough to let the high Opinion, that ſome had of him, ſpread; and if the Roman Court had taken umbrage at it, he had alledg'd againſt theſe Elogies of the People, his exactneſs to make them pay Tribute to the Emperour. 4. Notwithſtanding that this Prince was confin'd within Galilee, he had ſome vaſt Projects in view. For he had Arms in ſtore for Sixty Thouſand Men; and a Prince doth not make ſuch a Proviſion of Arms, when he deſigns to live quiet in a ſmall Countrey. He made a League with Sejanus againſt Tiberius, and had a mind to be at any rate King of the Jews. He was oblig'd to take that Title to perſwade that Nation, that he was the Deliverer, whom they expected. For we muſt not think that Herod, and the Herodians, had the ſame Notions that we have of our Meſſiah. They only look'd upon him as a Victorious King, who was to ſhake off the Yoke of the Romans, and reſtore his Nation to their Liberty. 5. This Sect was not numerous; and it is no wonder, that ſome among the Jews had ſo fond a Veneration for Herod, whoſe Father appear'd with ſo much luſtre. 6. I own, that the Guards of this Prince might be call'd Herodians, as thoſe of Pompey were call'd Pompeians; but that doth not remove the chief Difficulty, which ariſes from Jeſus Chriſt's forewarning to beware of the Leaven of Herod; and the Leaven in the Scripture denotes a Doctrine that ferments and ſpreads. So that thoſe of Herod's Party had a peculiar Tenet of their own, and were not meer Guards employ'd to raiſe Taxes, or to protect that Prince's Perſon.

17. This Sect was ſtifl'd almoſt at its Birth, and ſubſiſted no longer than Herod's Proſperity, which did not laſt long. For a little after Chriſt's Death, that Prince loſt his Credit at the Court of Rome, and was baniſh'd out of Judæa. His Sect cou'd not maintain it ſelf after his Diſgrace, and Misfortune. This is the reaſon, that Joſephus paſs'd this Sect over in ſilence. For an Errour, which was only held by ſome Courtiers during the Reign of this Prince, did not deſerve a place in Hiſtory; and the Holy Writers only ſpoke of it, becauſe the Herodians came to puzzle their Maſter with ſome Sophiſms, or becauſe they impugn'd the moſt fundamental Points of the Chriſtian Religion, by denying that Jeſus Chriſt was the Meſſiah, and by putting Herod in his room. So that the Herodians, who aroſe with the good Fortune of that Prince, dwindl'd away with it, whilſt the Chriſtians going upon much better grounds, have demonſtrated to all the World, that there is no other Meſſiah, but he, whom they adore.

18. Theodoret * pretended, that all the Patriarchs of the Jews, who govern'd this Nation ſince the taking of Jeruſalem, deſcended from Herod. Theodoret's Errour proceeded from his Preſumption, that the Scepter cou'd not depart from Judah, if the Jewiſh Patriarchs came from the Family of David, as it was reported. This Preſumption was not peculiar to him. Cyrill of Jeruſalem † had plainly ſaid it before him. "Since the Character of the Meſſiah, "ſaid he, is the Mark of the Manifeſtation of the Meſſiah, "it follows that he is not yet come, if it be true, that the "Patriarchs of the Jews are of the Poſterity of David; "but on the contrary, their Extraction is ſo mean, that I "will not ſet it down.

I know not what intereſt of Religion hath blinded theſe two Fathers, as if it was lawful to maintain Truth with Arguments evidently falſe. Three things might have been anſwer'd to the Jews, who pretended that the Royal Authority ſtill ſubſiſted among them, whilſt the Patriarchs, who were of the Stock of David, reign'd in Judæa.

One, That they did not prove, that the Patriarchs of Judæa ſprung from the Houſe of David, which ought to have been almoſt extinguiſh'd by the Converſion of ſome to Chriſtianity, and by the Death of others, who were bury'd under the Ruins of Jeruſalem. And therefore the ſucceeding Rabbins bid us look out for the Remains of that Family in Babylon; and acknowledge that the Patriarchs of Judæa were only deſcended from it by the Females.

The Second, We have prov'd that the Scepter was departed from the Republick, becauſe Auguſtus made it Tributary, and thoſe who had in Judæa the Title of King, were only Vaſſals to the Empire. St. Jerome affirm'd, that this happen'd but in the Reign of Tiberius; but this Father plainly contradicts himſelf, ſince he ſends Joſeph and Mary to Bethlehem, to pay there the Tribute. Judæa was made a Province, and God took away even the Shaddow of the Temporal and Spiritual Authority by the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem and of its Temple.

The laſt, That theſe Patriarchs were neither Kings, nor Sovereign Princes. They were only Pedants and Doctors of the Nation, who aſſum'd ſome Authority over the People in Religious Matters, to preſerve ſome ſort of Union between its ſcatter'd Members in the Weſt. But it cannot be ſaid that they wielded the Scepter of Judah in the Roman Empire. They are only famous in the Writings of the Rabbins, and the firſt of theſe Patriarchs, who is certainly known, liv'd but in the Reign of Adrian, as we ſhall ſee in the following Book. If Titus, Domitian, and their Succeſſors had left any Rays of Power to the Chiefs of the Jews, this Power had belong'd to Agrippa, who was ſtill alive, and had been their King. But they only tolerated the Authority, which ſome Doctors aſſum'd over the poor Remains of that Nation; becauſe it was neither conſiderable, nor known; and eſpecially becauſe it did not incroach upon the civil Government of the Romans, who kept this Nation in Slavery. The Rabbins out of a vain Conceit have given the Title of Princes of the Captivity not only to the Chiefs of the Nation in Babylon, but alſo to ſome Doctors, who had appropriated to themſelves ſome Authority over the Synagogues of Germany, or of ſome ſmall part of Italy. Can it be pretended, that theſe Doctors, who were only ſtil'd Princes, by reaſon of the Vanity of a proud Nation, were ſo many Kings, that held the Scepter of Judah? If not, how can this be pretended of the firſt Patriarchs, who groan'd under the Roman Yoak, and ſprung from the Tribe of Levi?

It is eaſy to ſolve the Objection of the Jews, without transforming their Chiefs into ſo many Deſcendants of Herod; ſince the Jews have been ſo far from chuſing ſome Maſters out of that Family, or of that Sect, that they have always had a great Abhorrence from it. But granting it was true, that the Patriarchs ſucceeded the Herodians, they wou'd not be the Sectaries which we now look for.

So that the Herodians made a particular Sect in the Jewiſh Church, ſince Jeſus Chriſt, who is the only one that ſpeaks of them, order'd his Diſciples to beware of the Leaven of Herod, and of the Herodians. They look'd upon one of the Herods as on the Meſſiah, or as on the King who ſhou'd reſtore the Kingdom to Iſrael. But it can't be determin'd, 1. Whether it was Herod the Great, or his Son the Tetrarch, that gave Birth to this Sect. The vaſt Power of the one makes People preſume, that he was the Prince, whom Courtiers look'd upon as the Deliverer of the Jewiſh Nation. But their Hatred, which appear'd after his Death, which was occaſion'd by Divine Vengeance, overthrows this Preſumption. So that it is more likely, that it was Herod the Tetrarch, that ſubtle Fox, who ſet thoſe favourable Reports ſpread of him. 2. They ſoon diſappear'd after the Death of Chriſt, becauſe this Prince was diſgrac'd and baniſh'd.

This is a general Account of the Jewiſh Nation whilſt our Saviour was upon Earth, and of the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, where Joſephus ends his Hiſtory. We thought it requiſite to explain ſeveral matters of Fact, which the Silence of this Hiſtorian made obſcure, and the Remarks of Criticks more unintelligible. If we have not excited the Curioſity of the Readers by ſome ſurprizing Novelties, we have at leaſt exactly collected what others have ſaid upon this Subject. We are going to ſpeak of whatever concerns the Jews, by unravelling the Hiſtory of their Patriarchs of Judæa, of their Princes of the Captivity of Babylon, of the different Orders of the Doctors, who have taught among them, and of the Tenets, which now make the Syſtem of their Religion. Theſe things ſhall be the Contents of the following Volume.

* Theodor. Dial. 1. t. 4. p. 22. † Cyrill. Catech. 12. p. 112.

The End of the Second BOOK.

THE Hiſtory and Religion OF THE JEWS. BEING A CONTINUATION OF JOSEPHUS.

BOOK III.

Containing the Hiſtory of the Patriarchs that govern'd in Judea: Of the Princes of the Captivity in Babylon, and of the principal Orders of the Doctors that have lived ſince the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. The Works and Character of the Talmudiſts, Gemariſts, Pyrrhoniſts, or Doubters, Excellents, or Gaons, Maſorets, Cabbaliſts, with the Particulars of the Cabbala, and of the famous Rabbins.

CHAP. I.

Of the Patriarchs of the Jews, or Heads of the Captivity in the Weſt.

I. The different Retreats of the Jews after the Ruin of Jeruſalem. II. The Deſtinction of the Eaſtern and Weſtern Jews: Its Origine. III. The Difference that is made betwixt the Patriarchs of Judea, and the Princes of the Babyloniſh Captivity. IV. The Patriarchs were not of the Houſe of David, but of the Tribe of Levi. V. The Authority of Patriarch diſtinguiſh'd from that of the Heads of the Academy. VI. Whether Hillel was the firſt Patriarch. VII. His Qualities. His Death. VIII. Whether Simeon, who embrac'd Jeſus Chriſt in his Arms, was Prieſt and Patriarch. IX. Jochanan the Third Patriarch. His Virtues, and Predictions to Veſpaſian. X. Whether it was he that removed the Sanhedrim to Japhne. XI. His Death, and Fears of God's Judgment. XII. Gamaliel of Japhne the Fourth Patriarch. XIII. Whether Samuel the Little was St. Paul. XIV. Whether Gamaliel was a Chriſtian. That Notion confuted. XV. Simeon, his Son, the Fifth Patriarch. The falſe Elogies that are given him. XVI. Arguments that theſe were imaginary Patriarchs. XVII. Joſephus did not know them. XVIII. They neither appear in War nor Peace. XIX. Irreconcilable Contradictions of the Rabbins upon this Subject.

I. THE Ruin of Jeruſalem was the Cauſe that the Jews were very much diſpers'd; whilſt thoſe who had eſcap'd the Sword of the Romans, and the Flames which reduced Jeruſalem and its Temple to Aſhes, or who, after the Deſolation of this great City, were not ſold in the Market, as Slaves, and Horſes, ſought out Places of ſanctuary and retreat: One they found in the Eaſt, and at Babylon, where there was ſtill a great number of thoſe who had been carried away captive in the ancient Wars; it being natural for them to go and implore the Charity of their Brethren, who had raiſed themſelves there to conſiderable Fortunes. Others took refuge in Ægypt, where there had been likewiſe for a long time Jews potent and rich enough to receive theſe miſerable People: But they carried with them their Spirit of Sedition and Rebellion, which occaſion'd a freſh Maſſacre of them. The Rabbins affirm, that the conſiderable Families were, even at this time, tranſported into Spain, which they called Sepharad; in which Country are ſtill the Remains of the Tribes of Benjamin and Juda, and the Deſcendents of the Houſe of David: Whereupon the Spaniſh Jews have always look'd upon thoſe of other Nations with contempt, as if the Blood-Royal, and the Diſtinction of the Tribes were better preſerv'd among them. We will examine in the Sequel, whether they are well grounded. At preſent let us obſerve that there was a Fourth Claſs of Jews, who with juſter Pretenſions might boaſt of their Origine. Theſe remain'd in their Country, either in the Ruins of Jeruſalem, or the neighbouring Places, where they diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by gathering up a little Body of their Nation; and by the Employs they exercis'd. The Rabbins alſo affirm, that Titus removed the Sanhedrim to Japhne, or Jamnia, and that Two Academies were erected, One at Tiberias, and the Other at Lydda. Laſtly, They maintain that there was alſo at that Time a Patriarch, who having firſt labour'd to re-eſtabliſh Religion, and his forelorn Church, extended his Authority over all the Synagogues of the Weſt; and 'tis of theſe Weſtern Patriarchs of the Jews I will firſt treat, before I give the Hiſtory of the Babiloniſh Captivity.

II. Every body knows that the Eaſtern Jews ſent their Offerings annually to Jeruſalem, all the time the Temple ſtood. They came themſelves thither in multitudes to worſhip; and theſe multitudes of Strangers were ſometimes ſo great, that they ſtartled the Roman Governor of Judea, and made him acquaint the Emperor with it, as fearing ſome potent Succours might come from thence, to relieve their oppreſſed Brethren, and defend their Religion, annex'd to the Temple of Jeruſalem. They were theſe Strangers arrived from all the Corners of the Eaſt, that heard St. Peter's firſt Sermon at the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, whereof part were converted: But when the Temple and Altars were demoliſh'd, and the Cuſtom of ſacrificing aboliſh'd, the Eaſtern Jews ceas'd coming to worſhip at Jeruſalem, and began to deſpiſe that part of their Nation which was in the Weſt, or was miſerable in Judea: Inſenſibly they became divided into Two different Parties, One of which, that inhabited Ægypt, Judæa, Italy, and the other Parts of the Roman Empire, were called Weſtern Jews, in oppoſition to thoſe who were ſettled at Babylon in Chaldea, Aſſyria and Perſia, which were call'd Eaſtern Jews. In proceſs of Time they had different Doctors and Heads. The Heads of the Weſt, who lived in Judea, ſtiled themſelves Patriarchs, and the Heads of the Eaſt, Princes of the Captivity.

III. The Jews make a great difference betwixt the Patriarchs of Judea, and the Princes of the Babyloniſh Captivity, calling the latter Rabbana, and the others ſimply Rabban: They maintain that the Princes deſcended from David in a direct Male-Line, whereas the Patriarchs proceeded only from the Females: They ſay that the Houſe of David has its whole Vigour, becauſe there are ſtill illuſtrious Perſons of this Family at Bagded, out of which are choſen the Chiefs of the Nation, as has been ever done time out of mind. In examining the Proofs of the Diſtinction they make betwixt the Princes and Patriarchs, we find them very weak. The Title of Prince ought to impoſe upon no body; for we ſhall ſee hereafter, that it has been given in the Weſt to thoſe who had the Super-intendance of but Twenty Synagogues in Germany or Italy. There is ſtill leſs Solidity in what is ſaid of the Family of David. For 'tis undiſputed that theſe were Deſcendents of this Prince in Judea, after the Ruin of Jeruſalem. Since Veſpaſian and Domitian his Son, had ſearch made after them, which cauſed new Perſecutions againſt the Jews. But how know they that David's Deſcendents fled to Babylon, and that this Family was preſerved in the Eaſt, rather than in Judea? And that the Princes always deſcended by the Males, and the Patriarchs, by the Females, ſince the Genealogies were deſtroyed? The Ten Tribes are hardly diſtinguiſh'd in the Eaſt, or rather there is ſuch a prodigious Confuſion among the Jews, that it is impoſſible to know them; and yet they imagine not only that the Tribe of Juda muſt ſtill have held the Scepter; but that it is David's Family that holds it at preſent in the Eaſt. There is nothing to be had hereupon, but incertain and fallacious Prejudices, of which there are Two, One in favour of the Patriarchs, who having re-eſtabliſhed their Nation in the Holy Land, and preſerved the Law, ſhould be preferr'd before the Princes; the other in favour of the Princes of the Captivity, who having ſubſiſted much longer than the Patriarchs, it was natural for the Rabbins, jealous of the Glory of their Nation, to give them a great Elevation, and prefer them to the Patriarchs. This laſt Prejudice taken from the Grandeur of the Princes, and the Duration of their Authority has prevail'd in the Rabbinical Nation; and is the true reaſon of the Preference they give to the Princes of the Captivity above the Patriarchs of Judea. Let us ſee their Original.

IV. We muſt not look for any great Myſteries here. Jeruſalem being deſtroy'd, and the People diſpers'd in diverſe Places, there remain'd only a ſmall number of the Prieſts and Laity, who endeavour'd to ſettle themſelves in Judea: The Remainder of the Prieſts and Levites labour'd to gather up the ſhatter'd Reliques of their Nation; for which Tiberias and Japhne ſeem'd the propereſt Places. The Authority was then entire in the Hands of the Prieſts, who were beſt inſtructed in the Law they were willing to preſerve, and the fitteſt to teach it to the People. The Houſe of David was almoſt extinct: His Deſcendants reduc'd to get their Bread by the Tillage of a few Acres of Land, had for a long time laid aſide the Thoughts of re-eſtabliſhing the Throne of their Anceſtors. The People were ſtill leſs mindful of reſtoring them, or even of giving them any ſhadow of Authority, becauſe this would have ſtirr'd up the Jealouſie of the Romans, and re-awaken'd their Cruelty. Agrippa, the laſt of the Herodian Family, was gone to Rome, where he lived as a private Perſon, far from any deſign of aſſuming the Empire of the Nation. So that if there was any ſhadow of Superiority among the Jews that remain'd at Tiberias, it fell into the Hands of the Prieſts, of the Race of Levi and Aaron, whom their Science and Underſtanding of the Law rais'd above the Vulgar. 'Tis eaſie to conclude, that this could be no great Authority in ſo aſtoniſhing a Deſolation as was that of the Jews. They were only a parcel of poor Fugitives, whoſe Miſery had made them ſlighted and deſpiſed of the Romans: But inſenſibly their Authority increas'd proportionably as the People grew numerous and potent; and as the Chief of every Claſs of Prieſts was call'd Roſch Abbot, the Chief or Head of the Fathers, they took the Title of Patriarch, which ſignifies the ſame thing in Greek, a Language better known than Hebrew in the Roman Empire. And thus the Heads of the Captivity in Judea were not of the Houſe of David, but of the Tribe of Levi.

V. This Patriarch was the Head of the Nation in all the Weſt, (as the Prince of the Captivity was in the Eaſt) Ægypt, and the neighbouring Places where there were any Jews depending on him. He decided Caſes of Conſcience, and the important Affairs of the Nation: He preſided over the Synagogues: He levied Tributes to defray the Expences of his Viſits; he had Officers under him which circuited cuited the Provinces to execute his Orders: In a word, he obtain'd by degrees a very great Authority over all the diſpers'd Jews, who were proud to acknowledge him for their Chief, and to depend on him, whereby to maintain ſome ſhadow of Union. Beſides the Patriarch, the Jews placed Doctors over their Academies, to whom they commonly gave the title of Heads and Princes; either to raiſe the Dignity of the Office, or to teſtify the Veneration Diſciples have and ought to have for their Maſters. Theſe Heads of the Academies were commonly Rivals of the Patriarchs, and there were ſometimes violent conteſts betwixt them. The ſame Perſon alſo ſometimes exercis'd both theſe Offices, which cauſes a great deal of confuſion: However they muſt be diſtinguiſh'd.

VI. If we credit the Jews, the Inſtitution of the Patriarchs preceded the ruine of the Temple an hundred Years: For they tell you, that thirty Years before the Birth of Chriſt, Hillel, Surnamed the Babylonian, (becauſe he came from that Country) arrived at Jeruſalem, and was conſulted about the celebration of the Paſſover, which fell that Year upon a Saturday. His Anſwer was ſo Satisfactory, that they made him Patriarch of the Nation, and his Poſterity ſucceeded him down to the fifth Century of the Chriſtian Church, in which the Patriarchs of Judea were aboliſh'd.

VII. They make a ſecond Moſes of this firſt Patriarch, becauſe he lived an hundred and twenty Years as that Legiſlator: Forty Years of them he ſpent in obſcurity; at fourſcore he was choſen Head of the People, and forty Years after he died.

They alſo compare him to Eſdras, becauſe like that ſacred Writer, he came from Babylon to Jeruſalem. Beſides that, he had his gentle Temper, and other good Qualities. They aſcribe a thouſand Diſciples to him, though ſome bring down this number to Fourſcore. In fine, his Death was bitterly lamented with this out-cry, where is the Saint? where is the Diſciple of Eſdras?

I queſtion whether Hillel be not confounded with the High-Prieſt Ananelus, who came from Babylon preciſely at the time ſpecified, and was ſet over the Clergy by Herod: For theſe ſorts of faults, tho' groſs, are common with the Jews. But not to charge them with this here, which is only grounded on a Conjecture, it ſuffices to obſerve, that Herod the Great, exceſſively Jealous of his Authority, would not have ſuffer'd a Prince of the Nation to be then Inſtituted, who ſhould preſide over the Synagogues, and divide the Government of them with him: And the Service aſcribed to Hillel in deciding a Queſtion about the Paſſover, which had been often determin'd, was not ſo conſiderable as to make a new Prince of the Nation. Notwithſtanding, we are obliged to relate this thought of the Rabbins, ſince it is from that Source they derive the Succeſſion of their Patriarchs.

VIII. Hillel is commonly made to be Succeeded by Simeon his Son in his Patriarchal Dignity and Preſidentſhip of the Sanhedrim; and the Chriſtians ſeeing this Man to bear a conſiderable Figure among the Jews, have fancied, that he was that Old Simeon mention'd in the Goſpel, who waited for the Kingdom of God, and received Jeſus Chriſt into his Arms. [a] Baronius makes a Prieſt of him, who in the Temple gave a glorious Teſtimony to the Truth. He produces the Images of his Church, in which Simeon is painted with his Sacerdotal Habits. He cites St. Epiphanius, who ſays, that the other Prieſts, provoked at Simeon's acknowledging Chriſt for the Meſſiah, left his Body without Sepulture, and refuſed to Bury it. He might add, that the Jews ſay ſo little of Simeon, that there is reaſon to ſuſpect it proceeded from Jealouſie and Revenge. [b] Allatius comes to the Succour of Baronius with a ſhoal of Antient Writers, who have all look'd upon Simeon as one of the Prieſts of the Law. But notwithſtanding all theſe Authorities, we cannot help rejecting this Notion, as a Conjecture without Foundation. 1. Simeon the Son of Hillel is a Man ſo little known to the Jews, that he ſeems only to be thruſt in to fill up a gap that was found in the Genealogy. Ganz, one of their beſt Chronologers, is obliged to own, that he is ignorant of the beginning and continuance of his Patriarchate, neither are his Actions better known. 2. There is only one thing very certain, that Simeon could not be Patriarch when Jeſus Chriſt was Born; for Hillel his Father did not Dye till the Meſſiah was Thirteen Years Old, and had already taught in the Temple. And indeed, ſince Hillel came from Babylon in the Reign of Herod the Great, and held the Patriarchate 40 Years, it was impoſſible for Simeon to receive the Infant Jeſus Chriſt in his Arms, as Patriarch and Chief of the Nation. 3. It's abſurd alſo to make him a Prieſt: They cite abundance of Authors in vain to prove it. For the names of St. [c] Athanaſius and St. [d] Epiphanius, aſſum'd by Impoſtors to advance this fact, are not ſufficient to convince us; and the reſt who have lived in later times have not ſufficient Authority to impoſe on us. All they depend on are either Works falſly father'd on the Antients, or modern Writings, or laſtly, Images and Pictures. But can it be concluded from hence, that Simeon was Prieſt and Patriarch of the Jews, when St. Luke is contented to ſay, he was one that fear'd God and lived at Jeruſalem? It was St. Luke's great Intereſt to raiſe the Dignity of Simeon, and to teach us that he was a Prieſt and Prince of the People, ſince his Office would have given an additional weight to his Teſtimony; and yet he does not do it; would he have ſpoke of his dwelling at Jeruſalem, and omitted his illuſtrious Dignity, if it were true that he were poſſeſs'd of it? This would be charging the Sacred Writer with a Criminal Omiſſion, without any proof of it. In fine, Simeon is ſo far from being degraded, that the Jews affirm he was the firſt that had the Title of Rabban: And indeed we find no other than that of Rabbi in the Goſpel.

IX. Jochanan Succeeded Simeon, whoſe Reign was ſhort. He was not of the Family of Hillel; but his merit rais'd him to this Dignity, and ſuperceded the Laws of Succeſſion. This Man is one of thoſe whom the modern Rabbins immoderately extol. He attain'd the Age of Moſes: He ſpent Forty Years in Commerce, and pleading before the Sanhedrim, and compoſed ſuch multitudes of Precepts and Leſſons, that if the Heavens were Paper, and all the Trees of the Forreſts ſo many Pens, and all men ſo many Secretaries, they would not ſuffice to write his Leſſons. He became Prince of the Nation and reign'd but two Years, tho' ſome allow him five. 'Twas he that ſeeing the Gates of the Temple open of themſelves, cryed out; O Temple! Temple! why doſt thou trouble thy ſelf? we know that thou muſt be deſtroy'd; for Zachariah has propheſied it; ſaying, Mount Libanon open thy Gates, and let the flame conſume thy Cedars. He left Jeruſalem beſieged, and came to Veſpaſian in his Camp, whom he call'd King: Veſpaſian ſurpris'd with a Title which it was dangerous to receive under the Empire of Nero, impoſed him ſilence: But he anſwer'd the General, that though he was not as yet King, he ſhould be ſo, ſince the Temple was to be demoliſh'd by a King, according to Eſaiah's Prediction. The Jews ſhould at leaſt know that Veſpaſian never beſieged Jeruſalem, for he was proclaim'd Emperor the Year before the Siege, and had buſineſs enough to defend himſelf againſt Vitellius, who was ſupported with a great many Legions. It was Titus that form'd this Siege, and it was then too late to Predict an Empire to Veſpaſian which he had already. Some more exact Doctors avoid the fault, by ſaying only, that Jochanan waiting on this Prince diſcover'd a profound Knowledge, which render'd him ſo agreeable to the Emperor Titus, as to obtain his leave to remove the Sanhedrim to Japhne. That City, which is alſo called Jamnia, was ſituated near the Mediterranean Sea in the Tribe of Dan. Here 'tis ſaid a famous Academy was erected, which ſubſiſted till Akiba's Death, in which were reckon'd three hundred Claſſes of Scholars: And this Academy was at the ſame time the Manſion of the Patriarch. Thus the Jews relate this.

[a] Baron. Arc. 1. n. 40. p. 58. [b] Allat. de Simeon. Scriptis. [c] Athanaſ. de communi eſſentia.
[d] Epiphan. de Interpr. prop.

X. But tho' this Hiſtory be built upon the Teſtimony of many Rabbins, and ſome Chriſtian Criticks, it's not the certainer for all that: And indeed there is a contradiction between theſe Doctors. Since the Tranſlation of the Sanhedrim to Japhne is placed forty Years before the Deſolation of Jeruſalem, it could not be Jochanan that obtain'd this Liberty of Titus during the Siege of the City. Lightfoot who [e] has given the Hiſtory of this Academy, has fallen into this palpable Contradiction. Jochanan could not be Prince of the Nation in Veſpaſian's Reign, ſince Hillel the firſt of the Patriarchs died at the beginning of the Chriſtian Æra; if Jochanan Succeeded him in this Office, he died in the Year LI. and if Simeon, the Son of Hillel be plac'd betwixt them, long before the Siege, whoſe Reign was ſo ſhort he could not reach the Year LXIV. of the Chriſtian Æra: And therefore, whatever way we reckon the years of the Patriarchs, Jochanan muſt be ſhut out, ſince he could not Reign under Veſpaſian; which is done by ſome Doctors. Beſides, the Privilege which Titus muſt have granted Jochanan of Re-eſtabliſhing the Sanhedrim at Japhne, was contrary to the Rules of Prudence and Politicks; for this would have been reuniting the ſcatter'd parts of a mutinous and rebellious Nation in a maritime Place, where they might eaſily introduce Succours after they were canton'd there. This was reſtoring Authority to the great Counſel, after the making a long War and violent Efforts to aboliſh it. We ſhall be ſo much the leſs inclin'd to conceive that Titus was guilty of ſo ſenſible a fault, from the care he took to carry away all the conſiderable Perſons of the Nation, to unpeople the Country, and diſperſe them in foreign Lands.

'Tis ſaid alſo, that in Jochanan's time, another Univerſity was ſet up at Lydda, a City known by the Scripture, in which the Chriſtians have buried their St. George, which was not very far from Jamnia. Here it was the famous Akiba Taught, till Gamaliel drove him from his School. 'Tis pretended there were at that time other famous Doctors, as Chanina, in whoſe favour, the Daughter of Voice cried, The World is nouriſh'd for the ſake of my Son Chanina. There was one Nicodemus, who ſignaliz'd himſelf by ſtopping the Sun in his c[illegible] as Joſhua had done at Gibeon: Tis true the [illegible]ſtians lay claim to this miraculous Man; but 'tis eaſy to obſerve, that they do it purely out of Jealouſie, and to prevent the Jews liſting among their great Doctors a Man who had heard Jeſus Chriſt forty Years before. But to return to the Succeſſion of the Chiefs of the Nation, or the Patriarchs, as we have it from the Jews.

XI. Jochanan died full of a profound Humility: He is made to weep and lament becauſe his Sins were to follow him before the Throne of God: And whereas the Kings of the Earth inflict only a tranſient Puniſhment which determines with life, God being more ſevere, difficultly pardons, and the Fire into which he plunges the guilty eternally burns.

XII. Gamaliel of Japhne, or of Dibanah, fill'd his place. 'The deſign was to put him to Death with his Father, when Jeruſalem was taken; but Titus gave him his Life at Jochanan's requeſt. He eſcap'd a ſecond time, when Turnus Rufus cauſed the Plough to be drawn over the Temple: He was ſo haughty and ſevere, that they were obliged to ſet bounds to his Authority. Some even maintain, that he was depoſed: But the Rabbins affirm at the [g] ſame time, 'That his Authority was ſo great, 'that not only the Jews throughout the Univerſe 'obeyed his Laws, but foreign Kings permitted 'the execution of them, and not one of them op-'poſed them. Samuel the Little, lived at that time, who was the Compoſer of the Prayer againſt Hereticks, which has ever been ſolemnly repeated; beging of God, That there may be no hope for Apoſtates: That all Hereticks may periſh by a ſudden death: That the reign of Pride may be broken and annihilated in our days: Bleſſed be thou, O Lord God, who deſtroyeſt the wicked, and humbleſt the proud.

XIII. In ſpight of theſe two men's hatred againſt the Chriſtians; (for the Apoſtates curſed by Samuel are ſuch as paſſed from Judaiſm into the Church) the Chriſtians fail not to challenge them for their own. They ſay that Gamaliel the Patriarch was St. Paul's Preceptor, and that Samuel the Little was Saul, who took the name of Paul after his Converſion. Both of them Perſecuted the Church; both had a great zeal for the Synagogue; and by retrenching an m from the name [h] of Samuel it is made Saul: Nor does that exploded Letter remain uſeleſs, for it ſerves to notify, that Saul became an Heretick when he embraced Chriſtianity. Laſtly, Paul may ſignify Little: What Pains do ſome Divines take to adorn themſelves with ſome Jewiſh names, and what advantage do they find in it?

XIV. Gamaliel is known from the Hiſtory of the Acts; for we there find him giving a Counſel of Toleration and Moderation towards the Infant Church, which has occaſion'd the Author of the Recognitions [i], who goes under St. Clement's Name, to ſay that he was a Chriſtian; he was, ſays he, our Brother in the Faith, but ſecret and conceal'd, and it was only by our advice that he remain'd among the Jews: The impoſture is manifeſt, for the Apoſtles were not ſo ſubtle, and the Politicks St. Clement boaſts of, would be Criminal. Baronius fails not to follow this Author, and to conclude that Gamaliel was a Chriſtian: He adds alſo, that the Saints buried him in St. Stephen's Sepulchre, who was the firſt Martyr. The fondneſs of Relicks had render'd this Cardinal credulous; becauſe a Body was found with that of St. Stephen, it was believed to be Gamaliel's; and upon ſo falſe a proof it is maintain'd he was a Chriſtian, tho' a zealous Phariſee. Gamaliel was not only no Chriſtian, but the Hiſtory of the Acts does not prove that he acted as Prince of the Senate; on the contrary, he gave his opinion only as Doctor of the Law. 'Tis worth while to weigh all the Cir-

[e] Lightfoot Academ. Japhnenſis Hiſtor. op. poſth. p. 87. & centuria Chrorograph. Math. præmiſ. op. t. 2. p. 181. [f] An. 76.
[g] Ganz. Tſemach. David. [h] שמואל take away the מ and there remains שואל Saül מ is the firſt Letter of Min, which ſignifies Heretick, and the קטן Katin of the Hebrews ſignifies Paulus, Alting. in Scilo. l. 4. 28. [i] Clem. Recog. l. 1. cap. 65.

cumſtances

cumſtances of this buſineſs: If they are inſignificant to convince the Jews who believe not the Goſpel, they become neceſſary to confute ſome Learned Chriſtians [k] who have eſpouſed this Opinion of the Jews, and fail not in ſpeaking of Gamaliel to place him at the Head of the Sanhedrim. 1. [1] St. Luke diſtinguiſhes the Perſons by the Offices they bore; he notes the High-Prieſt: He ſpeaks afterwards of the Captain of the Temple, who had a great Authority under him; but he calls Gamaliel a meer Doctor of the Law, who had great Reputation with the People. 2. The High-Prieſt was the Head of the Council, and diſcharg'd all the Functions of Preſident: 'Tis he that Convenes the Council. St. Luke expreſſes even his Motions, and the Diſturbance that appear'd in his Countenance, when the Council heard that the Apoſtles were not to be found in the Priſon where he had confin'd them the Evening before. Laſtly, 'tis he that riſes up and diſſolves the Aſſembly, when he heard the Reſurrection mentioned which he did not believe. But Gamaliel has no other Function in the Acts, than that of opining in his turn: The Council had been twice Summon'd, and Sat long before we heard him ſpeak; and the ſacred Hiſtorian is obliged to mention him. 3. It was Gamaliel's buſineſs to interrogate the Apoſtles when they were found preaching in the Streets, and the Captain of the Temple, who was alſo a Prieſt, (for he muſt not be confounded with the Commander of the Roman Band who guarded the outſide of the Temple, and was an Heathen) had brought them. The Interrogatory belong'd to Gamaliel on a twofold account, becauſe he is ſuppos'd to be the Prince, and the queſtion being of Perſons impeach'd, and who might have merited Death, that Function was annex'd to his Office, and did not belong to the High-Prieſt. Let it not be ſaid that the matter being a Proceſs of Religion, the High-Prieſt was the prime Judge of it; for Gamaliel was alſo Doctor of the Law: If he had never been brought in, there had been ſome pretence for ſaying that buſineſs regarded only the High-Prieſt: But all the Council had been call'd; Gamaliel was preſent; and yet inſtead of Interrogating the Criminals, and performing the ordinary Functions of the Office aſcribed to him, he lets them all be diſcharged by the High-Prieſt, and the only thing reported of him is, that he gave his Opinion in quality of a Doctor of the Law; an evident Proof that he had no other Rank, and that the Quality of Prince of the Council, or the Naſi, which is given him, is imaginary: He is only indebted for it to the Rabbins, who have herein impoſed upon the Chriſtians. 4. St. Luke ſpeaking of this pretended Prince, calls him a certain * Doctor of the Law, one named Gamaliel; which Appellation does not anſwer the Idea we muſt have of a Prince, elevated above the High Prieſt of the Jews; nor was ever a Preſident of a Council thus Characteriz'd, and therefore we have reaſon to conclude that he was not one. 5. Laſtly, there is an evident contradiction in it: For if Gamaliel Succeeded Jochanan, he did not live till after the ruine of the Temple. And yet others ſay, that this Prince died before the ruine of the Temple, in the Year of our Lord 52, and that with him periſhed the purity of Phariſaiſm, and the glory of the Law. But the contradiction is manifeſt, ſince he is made to Succeed Jochanan, who ſaw the Siege.

XV. Simeon II. His Son was Prince and Martyr, for he was kill'd during the Siege of Jeruſalem: 'Tis affirm'd that he was ſo far from Extortion, and enriching himſelf in the Temple, that he conſiderably abated the Price of the Birds which the Women were obliged to buy for their Purification; and his Death was ſo regretted, that the Jews added three Cups of Wine to thoſe they uſed to drink at the Funerals of their Saints and great Men: They were obliged to drink Ten, and they reſolved to drink Thirteen in Memory of the firſt Martyr that was made by the Roman Emperors. They grew drunk ſo often, by this addition of Cups, that the Sanhedrim was obliged to retrench them. Judicious People will wonder to find ſuch things produced as glorious to thoſe they were inſtituted for; but the Rabbins have no delicacy or good Taſte in their Elogies: They have preſerved Jochanan's anſwer to the Queſtion, What he did to live ſo long? I never made Water within four Cubits of an Houſe of Prayer; I have never diſguiſed my Name; I have celebrated the Feaſt Days, for which purpoſe my Mother ſold even the Ornaments of my Head to purchaſe Wine, of which ſhe left me three hundred Caſks when ſhe died. That of Baba the Son of Baba is more ridiculous: He was accuſed of being one of the moſt famous Cuckolds of his Nation, Piſh, ſays he, what ſignifies it, Semen non uritur igne, ut albumen ovi coagulatur colore.

XVI. Theſe are the Patriarchs that muſt have preceded the ruine of Jeruſalem, or according to others, immediately follow'd it; but to me they ſeem all imaginary: And indeed the Scripture never mentions theſe Princes of the Nation. The Aſmoneans who at once made themſelves Kings and High-Prieſts, would have been far from Suffering an Head of a People of the Race of David, whoſe bare Preſence would have reproach'd their Uſurpation: They were themſelves Supream in Church and State; how then would they have ſuffer'd the Patriarchs? and would theſe Princes that are made to Succeed one another from Eſdras, have Tolerated Uſurpers that Dethron'd them? On the other Hand, Herod would never have placed a Prince of the People near him, who might ſo cloſely ſtraighten his Authority, We ſtill find in the Goſpels the High-Prieſt at the Head of the Council: Caiphas preſides when 'tis deliberated about the Death of Chriſt, and pronounces, that 'tis expedient that one Man ſhould die for the People: Jeſus Chriſt ſhould have been carried before the Prince of the Nation rather than before the High-Prieſt; for Eccleſia neſcit Sanguinem: And yet he was led ſtill before Caiphas and Annas. 'Tis the High-Prieſt that impoſes ſilence on the Apoſtles, who had been haled and accuſed before the Sanhedrim: From him it was that Saul, going to Damaſcus to perſecute the Saints, received credential Letters to the Heads of the Synagogues. St. Paul, when Converted, appear'd before Ananias, another High-Prieſt, who as Judge and Head of the Sanhedrim, Commanded to give him a blow on the Face. Is it poſſible the Goſpel ſhould ſpeak ſo often of the High-Prieſt in all Proceſſes, and never mention the Prince of the Nation, who was the ordinary Judge.

XVII. Beſides, theſe Princes or Patriarchs are as unknown to Joſephus, as to the ſacred Writers. He could not be ignorant of their Names, Succeſſion and Privileges, if they had been Eſtabliſh'd before Jeruſalem was deſtroyed; and yet he has not ſaid a word of theſe Patriarchs. On the contrary, he places the High-Prieſt at the Head of the Council, and gives Ananias the direction of the War, which muſt of right have belong'd to the Prince of the Nation, preferably to a Prieſt; an evident proof that there were then none of theſe Princes.

XVIII. Theſe Princes muſt often have ſuffer'd from the Perſecution of the Herods, and the Inconſtancy of the People: How is it poſſible that they alone ſhould be the only undiſturb'd Poſſeſſors of ſo important a Poſt at Jeruſalem, whilſt the High-Prieſt was ſo often Depoſed? and yet we ſee no Revolution in the Family of theſe Patriarchs, where the Son conſtantly Succeeded the Father; we find them neither at the head of the People, nor at the head of the Church; neither in the Temple, nor the City; neither among the Rebels, nor thoſe that preferr'd Peace to the troubles of War: Where could they hide themſelves, and of what Uſe were theſe clandeſtine Men, on whom at preſent ſuch mighty Elogies are beſtowed?

[k] Lightfoot. [1] Act. 5. 17. 21. 24. 34. * Act. 5. 34. Ἀναστὰς δέ τις ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ Γαμαλιὴλ,

XIX. Laſtly the Rabbins, whom the Chriſtians take a pride to copy, or follow implicitly, ſhould at leaſt have given us a continued Hiſtory of thoſe Patriarchs that preceded the ruin of Jeruſalem.

The Tradition to which they give ſo great Authority, ought to have brought down the Succeſſion of theſe Patriarchs to the Talmudiſts. The Talmudiſts ſhould have tranſmitted it to the remoteſt Poſterity, without any contradiction or difficulty to be found in it: And yet I obſerve here three Things. 1. That neither the Talmudiſts, nor the antient Authors of the Jewiſh Church ſpeak of theſe Patriarchs; but only ſome Doctors who lived a long time after them. 2. They fall into palpable Contradictions. Maimonides, Abravanel, Abraham the Son of Dior, Abraham the Author of the Juchaſin, Ghedalia the Son of David, and David Ganz: Theſe Men ſo Celebrated for their Hiſtories, their Chronology, their Chains of the Cabbala or Tradition; can't agree upon the Liſt and Succeſſion of theſe Patriarchs: They change the Order, Names, and Story of them. In fine, tho' the utmoſt Efforts are us'd to reconcile theſe Writers with themſelves, or other Rabbins, it cannot be done, becauſe the diſagreement is too great and viſible.

I am perſuaded therefore, 1. That we muſt leave to the High-Prieſts the Authority of Governing the Church, whilſt the Temple ſtood, and that there was then neither Prince nor head of the Nation, nor Patriarch that preſided over the Sanhedrim, in a middle order betwixt the High-Prieſt and the King. 2. After the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, the Levites and the Prieſts that remain'd in Judea, took on them the Government of the People; but their Authority was proportion'd to the miſery of the Nation, that is very weak and obſcure. 3. But when they began to reaſſume vigour, the Heads of the People appear'd under the title of Patriarch, and their true Origine was under Adrian's Empire, as we ſhall ſee in the following Chapter.

A Liſt of the Patriarchs from Hillel the Old or his Family.

1 Hillel the Babylonian.
2 Simeon his Son.
3 Gamaliel Son of Simeon.
4 Simeon II. Son of Gamaliel.
5 Gamaliel II. Son of Simeon.
6 Simeon III. Son of Simeon II.
7 Juda, Son of Simeon III.
8 Gamaliel III. Son of Juda.
9 Juda II. Son of Gamaliel III.
10 Hillel II. Son of Juda.
11 Juda III. Son of Hillel II.
12 Hillel III. Son of Juda.
13 Gamaliel IV. Son of Hillel.

David Ganz reduces this Genealogy to ten Generations, and reckons them thus, p. 118.

1 Hillel the Babylonian.
2 Rabban Simeon his Son.
3 R. Gamaliel Ribona.
4 R. Simeon Son of Gamaliel.
5 Rabban Gamaliel his Son.
6 R. Jehuda the Prince.
7 Hillel the Prince his Son.
8 Rabban Gamaliel the Old.
9 R. Simeon III.
10 R. Juda Naſi the Prince.

CHAP. II.

A Diſcuſſion of the Dignity of the Patriarchs of Judea, or the Princes of the Weſt: Their Rights, Privileges, and Office, after the Ruine of Jeruſalem.

I. The firſt Patriarch under Adrian. II. The Reaſons for this Conjecture. III. Proofs taken from the Hiſtory of the Jews: Their Inſtitution under Nerva. IV. Simeon III. was Patriarch under Adrian. V. Tiberias was the Seat of the Patriarchs: Its Deſcription, and Hiſtory. VI. The Authority of the Patriarchs: Whether it proves Jacob's Oracle not to be accompliſh'd. VII. Their Officers: The Office of the Patriarchs ſubordinate to the firſt. VIII. Jewiſh Apoſtles: Their Miſſion and Employ. IX. The Original of the Tribute that was paid every Year, taken from the Didrachms of the Temple. X. This Tribute payed to the Emperors, was never to the Prince of the Captivity of Babylon: A fault of Bartolocci. XI. The Exaction of this Tribute in all the Provinces. XII. The Abuſe of this Exaction repreſs'd by Julian the Apoſtate: His true Letter. XIII. The Name of the Patriarch that Govern'd under Julian. XIV. The nomination of the Heads of the Synagogue: The Right of Life and Death examin'd. XV. The Law of Theodoſius concerning the Erecting new Synagogues. XVI. Concerning the Judgment of Proceſſes. XVII. Of the Prohibition to receive Proſelytes. XVIII. The Patent of an honorary Prefecture, or Letters of Command taken from Gamaliel by Theodoſius. XIX. Whether the Patriarchs were Depoſed: That Office Hereditary. XX. Its Abolition: A fault of Theodoret.

I. THE Emperor Adrian being in Ægypt was inform'd, That a Patriarch ſometimes came there, and that then ſome importuned him to worſhip Serapis, and others would have him worſhip Jeſus Chriſt. In vain ſhould we ſeek for this Patriarch in Ægypt among the Heathens, where there never was any; and as vainly ſhould we ſearch for him among the Chriſtians, as if St. Mark and St. Peter had Eſtabliſh'd them at Alexandria in the infancy of the Church; for that Dignity was not founded among the Chriſtians till long after the Empire of Adrian, and the ſecond Age of the Church. He that the Emperor ſpeaks of did not Reſide at Alexandria; but came there from time to time to viſit viſit the Synagogues, and his Nation. He was not an Heathen, ſince they would have forced him to worſhip Serapis; nor was he a Chriſtian, ſince he refuſed to adore Jeſus Chriſt: And of what Religion could he be, ſince he equally rejected Heatheniſm and Chriſtianity? He was a Jew, and the Patriarch of that Nation which we are in ſearch of: And here we diſcover the Origine of that Office, which is abſurdly made more ancient.

II. If we are ask'd the Proofs of a Conjecture that ſeems new, injurious to the Glory of that Nation, and contrary to the Teſtimony of the Rabbins, it is eaſie to anſwer, 1. That we admit of no Patriarch till we can find one noted by a Contemporary Author, that can't be ſuſpected. If they could produce Teſtimonies more antient than that of Adrian, they would have reaſon to inſult us; but whilſt they can only oppoſe that Ancient with Citations of ſome modern Doctors, we ſhall ſtill have a right to prefer an Heathen Prince before a Jewiſh Doctor. And indeed the latter have no other Means than we to come at the Knowledge of their own Hiſtory; and David Ganz, one of their moſt famous Chronologers was ſo ignorant of that of the Herods, and of the Time when their Patriarchs muſt have commenc'd their Reign, that he makes Herod Antipas the Tetrarch of Galilee, ſucceed his Brother Archelaus, and as if it had been permitted Subjects, baniſh'd by the Emperor's Order, to conquer the Lands of the Empire, he aſcribes to this Herod Antipas ſome prodigious Conqueſts in Spain, in the Time of his Exile. Laſtly, He makes Agrippa ſucceed this Antipas, that he might find a King ſtill reigning in Jeruſalem, which is evidently falſe.

III. Beſides, it muſt be owned that we follow probability. Titus who diſperſed the Nation, and ſold the Inhabitants in the Market, like Horſes, was far from granting them a Council with a Supreme Head. Domitian, his Brother, who ſucceeded him, treated the Jews with great Cruelty. It was only then under the Empire of Nerva, which was much more gentle, that they began to take breath again; and the Prieſts who remain'd in Judea took advantage of ſo favourable a Circumſtance to reſtore ſome Form of Government. The Firſt of theſe Prieſts, who was the Roſch Abbot, the Patriarch began to diſtinguiſh himſelf from the reſt. There was ſcarce any mention of him under the Reign of Trajan, becauſe this Prince puniſh'd them ſeverely; but he made himſelf known under Adrian, by the Viſits he made from time to time into Ægypt, to take Cognizance of the State of the Synagogues of that Country, and to collect ſome Money for the relief of his own and the People's Neceſſities.

IV. Conſequent to this Origine, it muſt be owned that Simeon III. Son of Gamaliel is the Firſt Patriarch that is known to us, for he lived under the Empire of Adrian. He deſcended in a right Line from Hillel the Old, and this Dignity remain'd in his Family till the Year 429 of the Chriſtian Æra, when it was aboliſh'd.

V. This Patriarch's Reſidence was neither at Lydda nor Jamnia, as is commonly ſuppos'd, but at Tiberias, a City ſituate upon the Banks of the Lake that bears its Name, and is frequently mention'd in the Goſpels. Herod the Tetrarch of Galilee, who built it, named it Tiberias, and its advantageous Situation quickly rendred it a conſiderable City, and it became the Metropolis of Galilee. Agrippa being obliged to leave Rome, retired thither with his Uncle. Claudius gave it him afterwards, which is the reaſon of its bearing the Name of Claudia Tiberias in Medals. Joſephus ſeiſed on it during the War, and ſuſtained a Siege; but Veſpatian at laſt made himſelf Maſter of it. It abounded with Fiſhermen; and that multitude of Seamen which batter'd down Herod's Temple, becauſe the figures of ſome Birds and Beaſts were painted in it came from Tiberias. For the ſame reaſon we ſee a Bark in many Medals ſtruck by this City. In another that was ſtruck under Trajan, we find Health ſurrounded with a Serpent, and ſeated upon a Mountain, from whence iſſued a great deal of Waters, becauſe Tiberias was famous for its Waters and hot Baths, which were very ſalutary to the Sick. In a Town ſo convenient as this, and leſs ſuſpected than Jeruſalem to the Romans, ſome Jews gather'd together, and ſome of their Prieſts. Here they laid the Foundations of an Academy, which became famous by the compoſition of the Miſnah, and the Reputation of the Doctors that taught in it: And here alſo was the Reſidence of the Patriarch of the whole Nation.

VI. The Authority this Dignity conferr'd on the Poſſeſſor, occaſion'd a Controverſie. The Chriſtians were at this Time accuſtom'd to preſs the Oracle of Jacob againſt the Jews, and to prove to them, that having no longer any ſhadow of Civil Authority, they ought to own the Meſſiah was come. Origen who enforc'd this Argument againſt them, obſerves that they oppos'd the Authority of their Patriarch, and maintain'd that there had ever been among them, in the Holy Land, a Prince deſcended of the Tribe of Juda, and the Houſe of David, who ſhould hold the Empire of the Nation, till the Manifeſtation of the Meſſiah. But not to obſerve that this Authority was taken from them at the beginning of the Fifth Century of the Chriſtian Church, which they could not foreſee when they diſputed with Origen; they built upon an uncertain and falſe Principle; for Hillel's Genealogy was not known, from whoſe Family they produce their Patriarch; and if it be true that this Man came from Babylon, as is affirmed, to Jeruſalem, how could he be of the Tribe of Juda, and the Houſe of David. The Rabbins maintain that he came from it only by the Womens ſide. Beſides, was the Authority of the Patriarchs a Sovereign and Royal Authority, when they were ſubject to the Romans, and abſolutely depending on the Empire? He muſt be perfectly ignorant of the Government of the Romans, and their Conduct towards the Jews, who would venture to aſſert it. The Jews did not believe that their Patriarch was a Sovereign; but they made uſe of this Shadow and Phantome of Authority, to confront a very forcible Objection, becauſe they had nothing better to ſay. However, that there may remain no difficulty upon this matter, let us repreſent, in a few Words, the extent of this Juriſdiction, and the different Changes that happen'd in it, before we give the Hiſtory of thoſe that poſſeſs'd it.

VII. Firſt, The Patriarch had under him conſiderable Officers, ſome of which had the common Title, with others, of Roſch Abbot, Patriarchs, or Heads of the Fathers, and the others were Apoſtles.

The Patriarchs often mention'd in the Imperial Laws, were ſubaltern Officers to the Grand Patriarch. Their Juriſdiction was confin'd to certain Places. They depended on his Orders, and were obliged to ſee them executed: They were even inferior to the Heads of the Synagogues; for they are conſtantly placed after them in the Emperor's Edicts: There the Grand Patriarch is ſtiled Illuſtrious, Illuſtris & Clariſſimus, and the Chriſtians who were often tranſported with a fierce Zeal, were forbidden to affront them; whereas much leſs regard was had to the Patriarchs of the Second Order, to whom the Emperors never granted ſo honourable Titles.

VIII. There were alſo ſome Apoſtles. We muſt not look for any great Myſteries in this Title, as if he that applied it to the Miniſters of the Jewiſh Patriarch, Patriarch, had a deſign to imitate or inſult the Chriſtians, to whom that Office was venerable; or as if Jeſus Chriſt, the true Head of all the Church, and of the Fathers, had borrowed this Expreſſion from the Jews, as being in uſe among them; for the Jews firſt acquaintance with theſe Officers, and uſing this Term, was not till after the ruin of Jeruſalem; when being totally ſubject to the Romans, they borrowed ſeveral Expreſſions from the Greeks; beſides, the obſerving its Signification is ſufficient to inform us, that there is nothing myſterious in it. For the Apoſtles of the Jewiſh Patriarch were Envoys, or Legats, who circuited the Provinces by their Maſters Order, to regulate, in his Name the Differences that aroſe betwixt private Perſons, or in the Synagogues. They had alſo a Commiſſion to levy the Impoſt that was paid annually to the Patriarch, and at their return they inform'd him in what Condition they found the Churches. They ſerved him as Councellors, and bore a diſtinguiſhing Character in the Nation.

IX. The Patriarch's greateſt Revenue was the Tribute, or Impoſt which he levied upon all the Synagogues under his Juriſdiction. It was an ancient Cuſtom in the Nation, to bring or ſend every Year a Didrachm to the Treaſure of the Temple. Moſes commanded it, and they that limit this Tribute to the Time of the Legiſlature, have not read Joſephus, who aſſerts that it was paid ſtill in his Time. Moſt Interpreters alſo believe that it was this Tribute which was demanded of our Lord in Galilee, * becauſe the Capitation impoſed by the Romans, was much greater, and proportion'd to the Subſtance of the Perſons that paid it. Beſides, the Collectors of the Empire would not have been ſo civil to Jeſus Chriſt, as to ask his Diſciple whether he would pay it, but would have exacted it with more rigour. The Didrachm was the half of a Sicle, which was worth about our Fifteen-pence. 'Tis ſaid there was upon this Coin, an Harp on one ſide, and a Vine on the other. But ſince, it is certain, that the Rod of Aaron, and the Urn of Manna were engraven upon the Sicles: I ſee no reaſon why they ſhould change this Signature, to put another upon the Semi-Sicles. 'Tis true, the remote Synagogues changed their Silver into Gold, for the convenience of carriage, but thoſe of Judea made uſe of the common Money.

The Talmudiſts affirm, that Proclamation was made every Year in the Synagogues, with the ſound of Trumpets, to mind them of the payment of their Tax, and that the laſt Day of May was the utmoſt Term for the payment: 'Tis much more certain, that the Synagogues had need of the Emperor's Warrant, and a particular Order to levy this Money, after Judea, and a part of Syria were conquer'd. At leaſt Joſephus † has related Agrippa's Letters, and Auguſtus's Order, permitting the Synagogues of Aſia and Ægypt to ſend their Money to Jeruſalem; and if it be true, that it was the Eccleſiaſtical Tribute which our Lord payed at Capernaum, we muſt not ſeek for the Civility of the Exactors in the Corruptions of thoſe Times, as the learned Grotius ‡ does. It proceeded rather from this, that the Farmers who had not perhaps as yet received the Emperor's permiſſion, or who durſt not ask it of Tiberius, for fear of being refuſed, could not conſtrain any body, and obliged none to pay but who did it voluntarily, and out of Devotion. For this Reaſon the Receiver at Capernaum asked St. Peter whether his Maſter would pay the Didrachm?

X. The Emperors ſeiſed this Tribute, after the ruin of Jeruſalem. Domitian exacted it with a Severity anſwerable to his inſatiable Avarice, Nerva relax'd a part of it, which the Patriarch of the Jews, who then began firſt to appear, appropriated to himſelf.

I know not how Bartolocci, who had rummaged ſo long the Works of the Jewiſh Doctors, could be able to ſay, it was not the Patriarch of Judea, but the Prince of the Captivity at Babylon, who appropriated this Tribute to himſelf, and cauſed it to be raiſed by his Apoſtles. For it is indiſputable from the Origine of this Tribute, the Writings of the Rabbins, and the Imperial Laws, that this Impoſt was brought into the Holy Land to Tiberias, where the Weſtern Patriarch reſided. Nay they have retain'd this ancient Cuſtom; for the Tribute this Nation raiſes in Holland, and in other Places, where it enjoys any Proſperity, is ſent to Venice, and from thence to Theſſalonica; they buy with it Things neceſſary to cloath the Doctors of the Holy Land, and afterwards remit them to the Hands of the Maſters of the Academy of Tiberias, who diſtribute them according to their Diſcretion, at the beginning of the Year. But the Veſſel does not always eſcape the Vigilance of the Pirates.

XI. The Patriarch exacted this Tribute of all the Synagogues of the Weſt. He eſpecially drew great Sums out of Ægypt, where the Jews had been long eſtabliſh'd, and were rich; and to do it the eaſier, he went thither in Perſon. There it was that the Emperor Adrian heard of this Head of the Nation. There Origen knew another of theſe Patriarchs, unleſs we had rather ſay he had ſeen him in Judea, when he retired there to avoid the Inſults and Perſecutions of the Biſhop of Alexandria. St. Epiphanius ſays, that the Apoſtles went to make their Levies as far as the Provinces of Cilicia; and we ſee by the Imperial Laws, that they came into all the Provinces of the Empire, where there were any Jews.

XII. This Power was often abuſed; for covetous or neceſſitous Patriarchs rendred themſelves odious to the Nation by their vexatious Ways of gathering of Money. They exacted the Tribute with ſuch Severity, that the People complained of it, and publiſh'd their Complaints, preſenting a Petition to Julian the Apoſtate, to be freed from it. The Emperor not only received them favourably, but aboliſh'd the †‖ Impoſt, and forbad the payment, that the People, ſaid he |||| being diſcharged from all Taxes, and enjoying an happy liberty, may pray more ardently for the proſperity of the Empire. This artful Prince was in the right, for the People never pray ſo earneſtly to God for the Sovereign, as when he leſſens the Taxes, though they appear neceſſary for the preſervation of the Church, and the ſubſiſtence of its prime Miniſters.

'Tis true, this Letter of the Emperor Julian is conteſted, as if it was falſe and ſuppoſititious; but I ſee no reaſon for it, unleſs it be out of Zeal for the Emperor Conſtantius, whom this Prince reproaches with the exceſſive Impoſts the Jews were oppreſſed with under his Reign. But this reproach, on the contrary, makes one of the Characters of Julian's Style, who loved to cenſure his Predeceſſors, and leſſen their Reputation, in order to raiſe his own. We ſee alſo that he endeavours to ſoften what he ſays of Conſtantius, by caſting the blame upon his Miniſters, who ſigned Edicts for the raiſing of Money without his Order, and had prepared new Ones when this Prince died. Laſtly, Ought we to be jealous of the Memory of an Arrian Prince, upon the point of Impoſts? 'Tis but too true, that Julian's Cenſure was well grounded.

* Mat. 17. 24. Grot. Not. † Joſ. Antiq. l. 16. c. 10. ‡ Grot. in Mat. 17. 24. †‖ Ann. 363. |||| Juliani Epiſt. Κοινῶ Ἰουδαίων. p. 223.

XIII. The

XIII. The Patriarch that Julian deprived of his Right, is called Julius by ſome, and Hillel by others. But the difference proceeds from this, that the Greeks have accommodated the Hebrew Name to their Language, and have changed Hillel into Hiulus; for Hillel then govern'd his Nation, and 'tis no wonder to ſee his Name a little metamorphoſed. The difference of Languages commonly produces more conſiderable changes.

XIV. Beſides the Tribute which the Synagogues paid the Patriarch, he had alſo a great Authority over them: Firſt, He nominated their Heads, who often bought this Dignity of him. Palladius, * a zealous Defender of St. Chryſoſtom, actually charged the Patriarch of his Time with his ſelling Eccleſiaſtical Dignities; and that the eaſier to inrich himſelf, he depoſed thoſe he had ſet over the Synagogues, that he might draw a new Sum of Money from other Candidates. Thus the Greek Patriarchs at Conſtantinople often depoſe the Metropolitans and Biſhops of their own creation, that they may more frequently ſell the Prieſthood, and the Grand Viſier in imitation of them, makes the Patriarch experience the ſame Fate. 2. He had moreover the power of erecting new Synagogues, but this privilege was often limited, and cancell'd by the Imperial Laws, which prohibited the Jews from making any new Structures, and commanded them to be content with thoſe they were in poſſeſſion of. 3. They judged the Differences that aroſe betwixt the Synagogues; they decided the Controverſies and Difficulties relating to the Law. Laſtly, Origen ſays, that the Patriarch ſentenc'd the guilty to death. And yet he wrote to one of his Friends, that this Nation had loſt the Right of condemning Adulterers and Murderers, and puniſhing them as the Law commanded. If he ſpoke only of Adulterers, we might eaſily reconcile the Contradiction, becauſe he might have been able to ſhow the ceſſation of the Miracle, which the Waters of jealouſie wrought upon the Women that violated their conjugal Faith. But ſince he adds Murderers, how can it be ſaid that the Patriarch ſentenced them to death, and that he had loſt the Right of puniſhing 'em; whoever reads the Imperial Laws, will eaſily diſcover that the Patriarchs were far from having a power of Life and Death over the Jews, nor can we find in all their Hiſtory one Example of ſuch an Execution, made publickly in due Form. Origen therefore is miſtaken in giving the Patriarch this Authority; or rather he meant to ſay, that they had the Privilege of puniſhing Criminals with great Severity in the Synagogues, where they whipt them till Blood was drawn, and even to Death, particularly when they were Perſons that deſign'd to embrace Chriſtianity, or had already done it. The Chriſtian Emperors permitted the Jews the exerciſe of their Diſcipline and Cenſures. Sometimes this permiſſion was abuſed by the Extravagance of the Puniſhment; and the Judges either tolerated, or being corrupted by the Head of the Synagogue, connived at this Encroachment upon the Sovereign Authority. But this was not a Privilege annexed to the Patriarchal Dignity, and it is ſtill true that the Jews had loſt the power of inflicting capital Puniſhments.

XV. The Emperor Theodoſius, under whom the Jewiſh Patriarchs flouriſhed, was † obliged to ſet Bounds to their Power. This Prince's Edict is obſcure in ſeveral places; but by unravelling its true meaning, we may come to a perfect knowledge of the extent of the Patriarchal Juriſdiction.

Firſt, He forbids Gamaliel, who was then Patriarch, to build new Synagogues, and commands Aurelian to demoliſh thoſe that were little frequented, if it could be done without occaſioning Commotions in the Cities. Gamaliel had abuſed his Power at Court; and fancying himſelf at liberty to build new Temples, becauſe he was protected, he built ſome. In the mean time there was a general Law in the Empire, That no body could erect new Churches, without the Emperor's Conceſſion: And St. Epiphanius |||| obſerves, that Joſeph, who had been one of the Patriarch Hillel's Apoſtles, and became a Chriſtian, ask'd the Emperor's leave to build new Chriſtian Churches at Capernaum, and other Places, where the Jews were potent. The Emperor Juſtinian ‡ commanded the Biſhops to take heed that no body took or gave any publick Place without Letters from his Majeſty: And when in Leo's Reign, ſome Monks, under pretence of Religion, ſeized on publick Places, appointed for Shows and Recreations, and conſecrated them to the Martyrs, whoſe Relicks they carried into them. The Emperor condemn'd this Uſurpation, and forbad the Monks attempting the like for the future. If the Chriſtians were ſubject to theſe Laws, the Jews who were tolerated in the Empire, had ſtill leſs liberty to erect new Synagogues. But whether Gamaliel had obtain'd the Prince's Letters to build any; or whether he uſurp'd a power he had not, he did it with exceſs, and Theodoſius deprived him of that Privilege.

XVI. Theodoſius alſo forbad Gamaliel to judge of Differences that aroſe betwixt Chriſtians and Jews; and when the Parties were of two Religions, he referr'd the Cauſe to the ordinary Magiſtrate. This ſhews that the Patriarch had right only to determine the differences of his Nation, which were commonly concerning the Obſervation of the Law. Gamaliel imagin'd it was ſufficient for one of the Parties to be of his Religion, to bring the other to his Tribunal, and give him power to judge of the Caſe; but Theodoſius put a ſtop to that ſecond Uſurpation, with which he only charges Gamaliel, who then govern'd.

XVII. The ſame Law forbids the Patriarch to diſhonour any Man, Slave or Free, with the Mark of Judaiſm. This Mark was Circumciſion, which the Patriarch thought he had right of conferring on all thoſe that quitted Heatheniſm, or the Chriſtian Religion, to become Jews. This happen'd particularly to the Slaves, which the Jews bought, and more eaſily inſtructed in the Principles of their Religion; but this part of liberty of Conſcience was taken from them. Antoninus had given a like Law before, which made it capital for a Jew to circumciſe a Man who was not of his Nation; but in order to cure this Miſchief ſtill more effectually, Theodoſius forbad the Jews to keep Chriſtian Slaves; becauſe, as we have obſerved, they were the Slaves that were kept in Jewiſh Houſes that moſt commonly embraced their Maſters Religion. This Nation therefore had liberty of Conſcience left to themſelves, but they were not allowed to make Conqueſts and Proſelytes.

XVIII. Here follows what is moſt obſcure, and moſt important in the Law of Theodoſius. This Prince orders Aurelian to withdraw out of the Hands of the Patriarch Gamaliel; the Letters of command he had received, and to leave him only the honour he had before, ſince he thought he might tranſgreſs with impunity, whilſt he ſaw himſelf raiſed to a greater Dignity. 'Tis a Puniſhment the Emperor impoſes on this Patriarch, becauſe puff'd up with his new Exaltation he had ſinn'd againſt the Laws. But what was that Dignity that had render'd Gamaliel ſo haughty; and what muſt we underſtand by the Letters of command, which the Emperor order'd to be taken from him? 'Tis certain Gamaliel had great credit at Court, ſince Theodoſius caus'd Dudus * Heſychius to be condemn'd to Death, at his Prayer and Entreaty, becauſe he had carried away his Papers. And the Decree was executed, tho' Heſychius was of conſular Dignity, and a conſiderable Perſon in the Empire. And yet it can't be imagin'd that this Jewiſh Patriarch had any Command. Interpreters think hereby is meant Patents of Doctor of Phyſick, becauſe Gamaliel, tho' a Patriarch, was notwithſtanding a Phyſitian, and exercis'd his Profeſſion, and gave Medicines, which have been commended by Sextus Empiricus: But the quality of Phyſician neither diſtinguiſh'd Gamaliel in the Empire, nor among the Jews, who have always exerciſed that Profeſſion to get a Livelihood. Nor can it be ſaid that theſe Letters of Command were thoſe he obtain'd of the Emperor to become Patriarch: For beſides that this Office was Hereditary, Theodoſius inſinuates, that it was ſome particular Favour he had granted Gamaliel, which he deprived him of, becauſe he had abuſed it. Theſe Letters of Command were rather the Patent of an Honorary Prefecture, which was ſometimes granted to Perſons in the Empire, diſtinguiſh'd by their Birth, Merit, or Services; or whom the Emperor pleas'd to honour. Theſe Patents gave no real Juriſdiction, but a Man bore in publick the Enſigns of his Prefectorial Dignity. He might even aſcend the Tribunal, and take his Seat among the Judges, tho' he had no deciſive Voice, nor ſat there otherwiſe than as a Poſt of Honour. The Emperor alone had the power of granting theſe Patents. Gamaliel had procured of him this Mark of Diſtinction, but loſt it by his Pride, and Aurelian was charg'd to take out of his Hands that Patent of Command, or honorary Prefecture.

* Pallad. Vita Chryſoſt. † Ann. 415. Cod. Theod. Lex 22. de Judæis pag. 232. |||| Epiph. Hær. 30. p. 128. ‡ L. xxvi. c. de Epiſcopis & Clericis & L. xxvi. c. de Epiſcopali authoritate.

This is the Senſe of the Law of Theodoſius the Younger, by which we ſee before the Patriarchs could have power to erect new Synagogues, they were firſt to obtain the Prince's Permiſſion: That the Authority of judging reſpected only the Differences that aroſe betwixt the Jews, and that if a Chriſtian was one of the contending Parties, he brought the Cauſe before the ordinary Tribunal. If they had liberty of Conſcience, it did not extend to the making Proſelytes. However, that was the happieſt Time for that Nation, ſince Gamaliel was, perhaps, the only Perſon of it that ever enjoy'd an honourary Patent.

XIX. There remains but one Thing to be examin'd concerning the Authority of the Patriarchs, which reſpects their Depoſition. As they were the Heads of the Religion and Church, it ſeems that no Tribunal in the Nation could pretend to judge, try and depoſe them when they had violated the Law. Theſe judicial Aſſemblies had been form'd with great difficulty in the Empire, where the Nation was moſt commonly oppreſs'd: And yet the Rabbins maintain that a Society can't be depriv'd of a Right of depoſing an Head, that is not vigilant to preſerve the Body, or that endeavours its Deſtruction. They alledge the Example of Meir, who had a deſign to expel Simeon III. and form'd a Conſpiracy to deprive him of his Office. Meir was Vice-Preſident of the Council. Simeon perceiving the ſame Honours paid to him, as to himſelf, when they entred into the Aſſembly, reſolved to make ſome diſtinction in them. Meir provokd, reſolv'd to lay a Snare for the Patriarch; to interrogate him upon an important Queſtion, 'twas that of Lice; and as they thought, he could not be ready upon the Subject, they were reſolved to depoſe him. But having notice of their deſign, he prepared himſelf, and anſwer'd their Difficulties. However Meir's Deſign proves a right of depoſing the Patriarch when he was found ignorant. 'Tis ſaid that Gamaliel was actually depoſed for ſome time. Laſtly, They maintain that this Dignity was ſo little hereditary, that Juda the Saint, preferr'd Chanina before one of his Children, becauſe he thought him abler and fitter to fill the Patriarchal-Chair. The laſt of theſe Facts is evidently falſe: For Juda the Saint conferr'd the Office of Prince, or Patriarch, on his Son Gamaliel, and Chanina was only made Head of the Academy. Saint Epiphanius likewiſe informs us, that the Patriarchat was ſo much Hereditary, that tho' Hillel left but one Son who was a Minor, yet he was created Patriarch, and he had learnt this from Joſeph a Jew, and Tutor to this Child, who ought to have underſtood the Laws of his Nation.

XX. The Fathers of the Chriſtian Church ſeem to have had no great Notion of all theſe Patriarchs. Cyril of Jeruſalem inſulted their Extraction, and maintain'd that it would be a ſhame to ſearch into the Baſeneſs of their Race. St. Chryſoſtom would not allow them to be deſcended from the Race of Aaron: And Cyril denied their Deſcent from that of David. And ſome accuſed them of a great Corruption of Manners, and an inſatiable Avarice: But we ought not to inſiſt upon all theſe Reproaches, which will be retorted upon the Hatred of the Chriſtian for the Nation. Theodoret † ſays this Office was aboliſh'd long before he wrote his Dialogues; but he is miſtaken, for it was but in the Year 429, a very little while before he publiſh'd his Work, that the Patriarchs were caſhier'd, and Princes were no longer ſeen of the Weſtern Captivity. Let us now give their Hiſtory.

* Hieron. de Pamach. de optimo genere interpr.

† Theodor. Dial. 1. p. 22.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

The History of the Western Patriarchs, from their Establishment, to their Abolition, in 429.

I. SImeon kill'd at Jerusalem with Nine Martyrs. II. Gamaliel the Second Patriarch of Judea. III. Simeon the Third. IV. Juda the Saint. V. The Time in which he lived. VI. The Place of his Birth. VII. His Interest with the imaginary Antoninus. VIII. The Faults of the Jewish Historians. IX. Juda's Sanctity. X. His Work of the Misnah. XI. The Time when he wrote it. XII. The Authority of this Patriarch. His miraculous Burial. XIII. Gamaliel the Third, and Juda. XIV. Hillel fixes the Years of the Creation. Whether he has shortned them out of Malice. The Jewish Epocha derived from thence. XV. His Cycle. Kepler and Bucher's Sentiment of the Jewish Calendar. XVI. Its History and Authors: Samuel the Lunatick: Adda and Hillel. XVII. The Reformation of the Tekupha, or the Equinox by Hillel. XVIII. His Conversion to Christianity. XIX. The Time when he lived. XX. Joseph's Conversion. XXI. Hillel the Third under Julian. XXII. Gamaliel the Fourth, Patriarch and Physician. XXIII. The Abolition of the Patriarchal Office. XXIV. Of the Primates.

I. WE have fix'd the Origine of the Patriarchs to Gamaliel II. who is made to descend in a direct Line from Hillel the Old. 'Tis said he was the Son of Simeon, whom Josephus [a] represents as a Man of extraordinary Merit, and a Pharisee, and who would have been able to restore the Affairs of the Nation had his Counsels been followed.

He was One of the Deputies which the High-Priest Ananus sent to Galilee, to take away Josephus's command, and he suffer'd himself to be taken by him, whom he design'd to send Prisoner to Jerusalem. They make him a Martyr, because he was kill'd by Titus's Order. 'Tis pretended that Nine famous Doctors died with him in the sacking of the City; and that their Tombs were still to be seen in the Twelfth Century, upon the Banks of Tiber, and many Jews imagine, at this Day, that their Sins are expiated by the Merits of these Ten Martyrs.

But that we may not be misled, we must observe what is said by a famous Jewish Chronologer, [b] that most of these Martyrs which are join'd with Simeon, the Father to Gamaliel, lived above fifty Years after the ruin of the Temple. Indeed Ismael, whose Skin was torn from his Scull before he was knock'd o' th' Head, survived the Desolation of his Country. The Chronologer confesses, that the error is manifest, but would have us pardon this defect of Memory in the Germans, and remember that they confound Things that ought to be distinguish'd.

We should also take notice of Benjamin of Tudela's gross Blunder, who [c] pretended to have seen the Tombs of these Ten Martyrs in one of the Catacombs, which are under a Mountain on the Banks of the Tiber. For how could they have built at Rome Monuments for those that had perish'd in Judea, in the ruin of Jerusalem? This Traveller did not remember what he had seen, since he affirms afterwards, that Simeon's Tomb was seen on the Banks of Jordan, at Kadesch, in the Tribe of Nepthali.

II. Simeon being dead at the taking of Jerusalem, left a Son named Gamaliel. They say that he became Patriarch the fifth Year after the ruin of the Temple; but this does not seem probable, by reason of the lamentable Condition the remainder of the Jews were then in. The Empire of Domitian, who treated the Jews cruelly, does not seem proper for such an Institution; and therefore we have fix'd it under that of Nerva, which was more favourable to them; and this agrees better with the Age of Gamaliel II. who must be still young when his Father died; and the more favourable Empire of Nerva was the propereſt for them to receive an Head. There was no Person more considerable than Gamaliel to fill the Place; he was Son of an illustrious Man, whose Memory was very much respected; which makes it very probable that it was he that was pitch'd upon to govern the remains of this wretched People.

'Tis said that Titus meant to put him to Death with his Father, but that being moved with the Intreaties of Jochanan, he gave him his Life. He ran another Risk, when Turnus Rufus caused the Plough to be drawn over the ruin'd Temple; for they sought to kill him, but an Officer substituted himself in his place, upon condition that he would give him an entrance into Heaven. The Officer was kill'd, and the Daughter of the Voice declared that he was in possession of Eternal Life.

They give him the Title of Prince; [d] and look on him as the Head of the Academy; but notwithstanding all this Authority, he had great Controversies with Joshua upon Three Heads: 1. Joshua maintain'd that he had seen at Lydda, the Moon in the East at Night, and in the West in the Morning, and Gamaliel affirm'd, that this was not only false, but impossible. 2. Joshua would have the Evening Prayers to depend upon the Devotion and Will of the People; and Gamaliel affirm'd that they were necessary. Lastly, They could not agree upon this Question, Whether the First-born, who came into the World with an Hair-lip, was perfect in the Sense of the antient Sacrifices, which were to have all their Parts. This Dispute proceeded so far, that the People, or at least the LXX Elders, being scandaliz'd with this Division, deposed Gamaliel. Eliezer, or according to others, Joshua, who was preferr'd to his Place, open'd the Gates of the School; and the number of the Disciples increas'd that Day 400; whereas Gamaliel, who made choice of his Disciples, lessen'd the number of them. 'Tis said he was restored to his See; but all these Facts are uncertain, because the Author [e] that relates them produces no antient Monuments which may be depended on.

III. The Second Patriarch appears evidently in Adrian's Reign, since this Emperor affirms that he came down into Ægypt from Time to Time, which shews that his Jurisdiction extended from thence to Tiberias, which was the Seat of his Government, according to the Genealogy of old Hillel, Simeon III. Son of Gamaliel was this Second Patriarch. 'Tis indisputable that he lived at that Time. The modern Jews make him Head of the Academy; Successor of Akiba, and Collegue with Meir, with whom he had great Controversies, and the Subject of the Difference could not be less important. We have already observed, that Simeon the President of the Assembly was saluted by every one; but the same Honour was paid to Meir, Vice-President, who followed him. He required that a difference might be made betwixt them, and determin'd the manner of ſaluting them reſpectively according to their Rank. Meir, who thought himſelf inſulted, reſolved to be revenged, in depoſing Simeon. Some contradict themſelves, in ſaying that Simeon was depoſed, and Meir took his Place. On the contrary, the Conſpiracy was diſcover'd: They had reſolved to catechiſe Simeon, and as they were perſuaded he could not anſwer the Queſtions propoſed to him, they were to take that occaſion to diſplace him for his Ignorance. But he had notice of their Deſign, and prevented it. Theſe are the Stories the Rabbies make of their Governours.

[a] Joseph de Vita sua, 1013. 1024. [b] Ganz Tsemach David, p. 94. ad An. 828. [c] Benj. Itiner. p. 10. compared with p. 54. [d] Ganz Chronologia p. 97. [e] Abraham Ben Dior in Sepher. Hakkabbala: He lived in the Twelfth Century.

IV. Juda the Saint was Simeon's Son, and became Prince of the Nation, after the Death of his Father. He lived under Three Emperors, [f] who perſecuted the Chriſtians, and were very favourable to the Jews; Antoninus Pius, Marcus Aurelius, and Commodus. The Firſt took poſſeſſion of the Empire in the Year 138, and the Laſt died in 194, ſo that Juda's Reign was long, and laſted 45 Years. Some ridiculouſly make him live in Dioclefian's Time. They have committed another Fault, in aſſociating him with a great number of Doctors, who lived not [g] till a great while after him: But this is a very common Fault with the Jews, who generally confound the Times.

V. Juda was born the ſame Day that Akibas died; and they imagine that this Event was foretold by Solomon, ſaying, the Sun ariſeth, and the Sun goeth down. [h] Akibas dying was the Sun that ſet, and Juda the Saint the riſing Sun. Akibas died under Adrian, who made him pay dear for his [i] Impoſture. Ghedalia places the ruin of Bither, and the violent Death of this Impoſtor in the 73d Year after the ruin of the Temple, and 3091, which would be the 143 Year of the Chriſtian Æra, but then it would be evidently falſe that this Event happen'd under the Empire of Adrian, who was already dead. We know that Bither was taken and ruin'd by this Prince, in the Year 135, and if Juda the Saint was then born, we muſt neceſſarily fix his Birth to the Year of our Lord 136.

VI. The Place of his Birth was Tſippuri. This Word ſignifies a little Bird, and the Town was ſituated upon one of the Mountains of Galilee. Its Name ſhews that it were a little City; and yet the Rabbins affirm that there were in it an hundred and fourſcore thouſand Confectioners. Phocas, who calls it [k] Semphori, inſinuates, that it had been great, ſince in his Remark that it was deſart and inhabitable, he adds, that in his Time there remain'd no Footſteps of its antient Proſperity. The Chriſtians praiſe it, as imagining upon Hegeſippus's Authority, that it was the native Place of Anna, Mother to the Virgin, and of Hermanna, Mother to Elizabeth. Thus every One is jealous for the Cities that have given Birth to their Heroes, or their Saints, and in this particular run into an exceſs, which denotes a weakneſs of Underſtanding. The Chriſtians are the more culpable, as they knew not the Name of the Virgin's Mother.

They knew it only from the Mouth of Hereticks, or by an uncertain and novel Tradition, that ſhe was called Ann. Hermanna her Siſter is ſtill leſs known; and ſince the Virgin was originally of Bethlehem, why muſt her Mother be born at Tſippuri, upon no other Authority than that of an Impoſtor?

VII. Juda, from the Time of his Birth, found himſelf in great danger, becauſe his Father had circumcis'd him, according to the Law of God, and contrary to the Prohibition of the Emperor, who had condemned that Cuſtom. The Accuſation was brought before Adrian. Juda's Father appear'd at the firſt Citation; but went firſt to Antoninus's Mother, took her Son, and proved to Adrian, that the Accuſation was falſe, ſince he produc'd his Infant, having his Preputium ſtill; returning, he exchanged the Boys again.

VIII. Let us obſerve Four Faults which Ghedalia has committed upon this Article. Firſt he makes Juda the Saint to be changed for Antoninus, who was too old to ſuck, for he was then 43 Years of age. Secondly, He aſſerts that of the Three Emperors, that loved Juda the Saint, there was One call'd Antipas; whereas this Name is unknown, and he muſt have been ignorant of the Liſt of the Roman Emperors, to make ſo ſenſible a Blunder. Thirdly, He makes the Son to reign before the Father, and Commodus before Marcus Aurelius. Laſtly, He places Conſtantine in the Time of Antoninus Pius, and makes Two Rival Princes of them, One of which encouraged the Chriſtians, whilſt the Other favour'd the Patriarch of the Jews.

IX. 'Tis ſaid that Juda bore the Title of Saint, by reaſon of the ſecret Circumciſion he received againſt the Emperor's Order: But they that are more jealous of his Glory, give him that Title, and even that of Saint of Saints, for the Purity of his Life: Nevertheleſs, I dare not ſay in what that Purity conſiſted; it would look like Banter and Ridicule. He became Head of the Nation, and had ſo great an Authority, that ſome of his Diſciples venturing to leave him, to ſpend ſome Time at Lydda, they had all an evil Aſpect, that is, they all died with an exemplary Puniſhment. But this Miracle is very uncertain.

X. Juda grew more venerable by the Repetition of the Law which he publiſh'd. This Book is a Code of the Jewiſh Civil and Canon Law, call'd Miſnah. He thought it abſolutely neceſſary to undertake it, becauſe his Nation, diſpers'd in ſo many Places, had forgot the Rites, and would have ſwerved from the Religion and Civil-Law of their Anceſtors, if they truſted them only to their Memory.

Whereas before, Tradition was explain'd according to the Will of the Profeſſors, or with reſpect to the Capacity of the Students, or, laſtly, ſutably to the Exigence of Circumſtances, Juda made a kind of Syſtem, and a Curſus, which was afterwards exactly followed in the Univerſities. He divided his Curſus into Six Parts: The Firſt runs [l] upon the Diſtinction of Seeds in the Field, Trees, Fruits, Tythes, &c. The Second regulates the Obſervation of Feaſts. In the Third, which treats of Women, are determin'd all matrimonial Cauſes. The Fourth, which reſpects Loſſes, turns upon the Suits that proceed from Commerce, and the Procedures that ought to be uſed. To this is added a Tract of Idolatry, becauſe 'tis One of the important Articles upon which Judgments depend. The Fifth Part reſpects Oblations, and in the laſt is examin'd all that's neceſſary to Purification.

He has inſerted in this Syſtem Five Sorts of Things, which ſerve as a Foundation and Support of it. He firſt diſtinguiſhes the Explications that proceeded from the Mouth of Moſes, and which admit no difficulty, becauſe they are expreſs'd in the Law, or may be drawn from it by an eaſie and natural Inference. 2. Here we find the Ordinances of Moſes upon Mount Sinai, which are received with the ſame reſpect as the foregoing, tho' there be no proof of Moſes's being the Author of them. He gives the different

[f] Ganz. Chronol. p. 107. [g] Vi. Ganz. Chronol. p. 107. [h] Eccl. 1. 9. [i] Liber. Hakkabbala. [k] Phocas in Allatii Συμμικτ. p. 10. [l] This Work has been tranſlated into Latin by Syrenhuſius, with Maimonides and Barcenor's Notes, at Amſterdam, in 6 Vol. Fol. 1702.

different Opinions, upon which a Man is allowed to take which ſide he pleaſes. He is at liberty, for inſtance, to follow the deciſions of Hillel, or Schammay, who have divided the School. 4. He forgets not the Maxims and Sentences which the Prophets and wiſe Men have pronounc'd from time to time, and which are called the hedges of the Law. Theſe Conſtitutions are much reſpected, yet the Rabbins often deviate from them. Laſtly, he relates the antient Uſuages and Cuſtoms, impoſing on his Poſterity the neceſſity of following them. And this is the ſubſtance of the Tradition, which they cry'd up ſo much.

XI. 'Tis difficult to fix the time when Juda the Saint began and finiſh'd this Work, which had given him ſo great a Reputation. We muſt only obſerve, 1. That it muſt not be confounded with the Talmud, whereof we ſhall ſpeak by and by, and which was not written till a long time after. 2. This Work has been miſ-placed in the Chronological Tables of the Synagogues, ſince they reckon [a] at preſent 1563. Years ſince its publication; for that Year would fall upon the 140th Year of our Lord, when Juda the Saint could be but four Years Old. 3. On the contrary, they give it too late a Date, who affirm it was publiſh'd an hundred and fifty Years after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; for that Year would fall upon the 220, or 218th Year of Jeſus Chriſt; whereas Juda was dead long before. 4. According to the common Calculation, Juda muſt be Born in the Year 136 of Jeſus Chriſt. He might have gone upon this Collection after he was Prince of the Captivity, and had often determined the Differences that roſe in the Nation: Therefore we may ſay, that he perform'd it about the Year 180, when he was forty four Years Old, in the Flower of his Age, having by a long experience learnt to decide the queſtions of the Law.

XII. Juda acquired ſo great an Authority by his Work, that he put himſelf above the Laws; if we believe at leaſt the Hiſtorians of his Nation. For whereas, whilſt Jeruſalem ſtood, the Heads of the Sanhedrim were ſubject to this Council, and obnoxious to Puniſhment, Juda rais'd himſelf above the antient Laws; and Simeon, the Son of Lachis, having dared to aſſert that the Prince ought to be whip'd when he offended, Juda ſent his Officers to Arreſt him, and would have ſeverely puniſh'd him, if he had not fled ſpeedily. Juda continued his [b] Pride to his Death; for he ordered his Body to be carried with Pomp, and Lamentations to be made in all the great Cities through which the Funeral paſs'd, forbidding to do it in little ones. All the Cities ran to this Funeral; the day was prolong'd, and the night retarded, till every one was return'd to his Houſe, and had time to light a Candle for the Sabbath. The Daughter of the Voice was heard to pronounce, that all who followed the Funeral Pomp ſhould be ſaved, excepting only one, who fell into Deſpair and broke his Neck.

XIII. Juda diſpoſed of all Offices before his Death. He appointed that one of his Sons, named Simeon, ſhould be call'd the Wiſe Man; that Chanina, the Son of Chanina, ſhould be Head of the Council, and Gamaliel III. ſhould be Prince. Thus he diſpos'd of the three principal Dignities of the Nation. The Prince was the ſame we call Patriarch, according to the Chriſtian Style. He that preſided, was the Chief of the Senate, held his Place in his Abſence; and the Wiſe Man had the third Rank: He was to be learn'd; for he was conſulted upon Controverſies and Doubts ariſing from the Law: He was ſeated on the Left Hand of the Prince, as the Chief was on the Right. Gamaliel therefore was choſen by his Father to Succeed to the Title of Prince. 'T is ſaid Gamaliel confirm'd the Miſnah, which his Father had publiſh'd, and died in the Year 229.

His Son Juda Succeeded him. We muſt make him live towards the end of the third Century, to make him cotemporary with the two Rabbins, Amaus, and Aſæus, who lived in the Year 4060. i.e. in the 300th Year of the Chriſtian Æra: But we have already obſerved, that we muſt not inſiſt on the Calculations of the Jews, who are not exact Chronologers.

XIV. Hillel II. Son of Juda, was famous both with the Jews and Chriſtians: He did three things which have been thought very Advantageous to his Nation.

Firſt, it was he that fix'd the Epocha from the Creation of the World, and reckon'd the Years from thence. Different Epocha's were made uſe of before: The Departure from Ægypt was the Æra of ſome: The Law given at Sinai, was that of others: One reckon'd the Years from the Dedication of the Temple: Another from the return out of Captivity: Some dated from Alexander the Great's entering into Jeruſalem, which they look'd upon as a conſiderable event to the Republick: But ſince the Gemara was finiſhed, they began to reckon the years from the Creation of the World; and we are told that it was Hillel who Eſtabliſh'd this Epocha, and tranſmitted it to Poſterity: For it is ſtill obſerv'd, and according to his Calculation, Jeſus Chriſt was Born in the Year 3760.

As this Calculation does [c] not agree with that of Chriſtians, it has been thought that the Gemariſts curtail'd the Years of the World out of Malice and Hatred to our Religion; and that Jeſus Chriſt being Born, at the time ſpecified by the Prophets, the Rabbins did all they could to ſettle the Faith of their People, who were ſtagger'd by this Circumſtance. They were themſelves ſo much the more ſhaken by this, that beſides the Oracles of the Old Teſtament, they had the Prediction of one Elias, who affirm'd that the Meſſiah ſhould be Born, and the Law ſhould be aboliſh'd at the end of the fourth Millennium: For he reckon'd two thouſand Years under Nature, two thouſand Years under the Law, two thouſand Years under the Meſſiah, at which term the World was to be at an end. It was ſo much the more neceſſary to enervate this Prediction, that the Jews who were converted, having brought it to the Chriſtians, thereby put into their Hands a very manifeſt Proof of the Truth of their Religion; but they found two ways of evading this Proof: The one was dating the Birth of our Lord from the time of Alexander Jannæus, long before he came into the World. The falſity of this anſwer was too evident, ſince Jeſus Chriſt had ſuffered under Tiberius, and the Memory of that Event was too freſh to be conteſted. The Gemariſts more ſubtly choſe rather to Abridge the Years of the World, that Jeſus Chriſt being Born two hundred Years before the end of the fourth Millennium; and the People of Iſrael being to live under the Law till that time, it might be concluded, that Jeſus Chriſt was not the Meſſiah. Upon the finiſhing therefore of the Gemara, or the Jeruſalem Talmud, they began to reckon the Years of the World; and Hillel, as Prince of the Weſtern Captivity, gave this Epocha to his Nation, but at the ſame time they abridged the Years elapſed ſince the Creation, in order to overthrow Elias's Prediction, and anſwer the Objection drawn from it by the Chriſtians. The modern Jews fail not to follow the ſame Epocha and Computation; becauſe that if on one hand we gravel them, by proving that the fourth Millennium is long ſince

[a] I writ this in 1703. V. Bartol. B. R. t. III. p. 78. [b] Otho Hiſt. Doctor. Miſnic. p. 161. [c] Jeſus Chriſt ought to be Born in the Year 3910.

paſt,

paſt, and that the Meſſiah muſt be come; they reply, that it is ſtill equally true, that Jeſus Chriſt is not the Meſſiah, ſince he came above two hundred Years before the end of the fourth Millennium.

This is a probable Conjecture: Nevertheleſs, I queſtion whether the firſt Chriſtians made any great account of the Prediction of Elias; a Perſon too obſcure to occaſion all theſe impoſtors: And the ignorance of the Jews in point of Chronology is ſo frequent, that it is a wonder to ſee Hillel miſtaken about the Age of the World. However, thoſe that read the Hiſtories written by the Jews, muſt remember that all their Authors reckon but 3760 Years from the Creation to Jeſus Chriſt, as Hillel had appointed, otherwiſe their Chronology can't be adjuſted with ours.

XV. This Prince of the Nation compoſed a Cycle of Nineteen Years, by which he reconciled the courſe of the Sun with that of the Moon by the help of [d] ſeven Intercalations; but the Matter deſerves ſome illuſtration, in order to ſee how the Calendar and Chronology of the Hebrews have been reform'd.

Kepler [e] thought that the Jews went by the Solary Year, like the Ægyptians whom they had left, or the Aſiaticks, to whoſe Empire they had been ſubject; but that [f] Jaſon willing to pleaſe Antiochus the Illuſtrious, introduc'd the Lunary Months of the Syrians into Judea, and the Cycle of eighty four Years compoſed of many Sevenths after the Hebrews Faſhion, to whom the number Seven was neceſſary, by reaſon of the Sabbatick Years and Jubilees. The Jews taken up with War, conſider'd little the motions of the Stars; but Alcimus [g] or rather Simon Maccabeus reſtored the Cycle of eighty four Years, and commenc'd his High-Prieſthood by it.

Others [h] have obſerved, that Calippus examining the courſe of the Sun, gave three hundred and ſixty five Days, and ſix entire Hours to the Year; and form'd a Period of ſeventy ſix Years, which he commenc'd from the Year following the Victory of Arbela, which Alexander obtain'd over Darius [i]. Hipparchus * who came after him, judiciouſly obſerved that the Solary Year was ſhorter by thirty four Minutes and forty eight Seconds, than Calippus thought it: But advancing this his Opinion timorouſly, the antient Calculation was followed, which was eſpouſed by the Greeks and Syrians. The Jews borrowed from their Maſters the Calippick Period: For this reaſon, in the Hiſtory of the Maccabees, the Years are always reckon'd after the way of the Greeks and Syrians, and it was Jaſon doubtleſs that introduced this practice in Judea; who giving only ſome alteration to the Months, and forming his Cycle of eighty four Years, added eight Years to Calippus's Period, in order to bring in the number ſeven: And indeed St. Epiphanius, who left Judaiſm, and had conſulted the Rabbins of his Time, has follow'd this Period; at leaſt it is the Sentiment of the Learned Bucher.

XVI. But there is a conſiderable fault in all theſe Conjectures, which is, that they are founded upon no proof. If we believe the Jews, it was Samuel the Lunatick that wrought the Reformation of the Calendar: and according to the remaining Monuments of their Hiſtory the Matter was thus.

This Rabbin Taught at Babylon in the Year 240, of our Lord, and was called Lunatick, or Jarkinæus, becauſe he was believed to be admirably ſkill'd in the Courſes of the Sun and Moon. He ſuppoſed that the Equinox of the Spring, in which the World was Created, preceded the New Moon ſeven days, and that the Moon began to appear the Thurſday of the Week following: From hence he commenc'd his Calculation, and he form'd a Cycle of nineteen Year, at the end whereof, the Moon exceeded the courſe of the Sun but an hour and ſome Seconds.

However, this Rabbin's Calculation proved not exact enough; for not to mention the abſurdity he advanc'd, in making the Equinox precede the Creation of the World, he gave three hundred ſixty five Days, and ſix entire Hours to the Sun, as Calippus had done among the Greeks. But a little after * R. Ada appear'd in the ſame School of Babylon, who following Hipparchus's Calculation, gave the Solary Year but three hundred ſixty five Days, nine hundred ninety ſeven Particles, and forty eight Moments; for he divided the Hour into a thouſand Particles, and the Particles into as many Moments. His Calendar being found more exact was eſpouſed, and has been followed for a great many Centuries: But this is a Rabbinical imagination.

Whether Ada had not publiſh'd his Calendar, or had need of a greater Authority to eſtabliſh it in the Weſt, where the Jews of Tiberias were jealous of thoſe of Babylon, or whether in fine Hillel added ſome new light to that of his Predeceſſors, it is ſtill true that he had the glory of compoſing the Calendar and Cycle of 19 Years, in which he made ſeven intercalations. The Jews have received it with the greater facility, becauſe he was the Prince of the Weſtern Captivity, and it has been all along followed till Sid reform'd the Calendar in Spain by King Alphonſus's Order.

Was I allowed to oppoſe ſo many Conjectures approved by the Jews or Chriſtians, I ſhould think it more reaſonable, that this Nation, which always received the Law of its Conquerors and Maſters, eſpouſed the Calendar reform'd by Julius Cæſar; which is the more certain, becauſe the Jews diſperſed through the Roman Empire, could not reject this Reformation which was generally receiv'd in it; it is nevertheleſs true, that many changes were afterwards made in it, in which Hillel had a good ſhare.

XVII. Hillel alſo reform'd the Tekupha. This word ſignifies the Revolution of the Year. But Maimonides comprehended the Solſtices as well as the Equinoxes; wherefore he reckons four Revolutions. Hillel perceived that the Autumnal Equinox was misplaced on the ſeventh of October, and he fix'd it to the twenty fourth of September. By this there remain'd thirteen Days which he rejected, according to Scaliger, [l] in an hundred twenty ſix Cycles, which made 4104 Years.

XVIII. 'Tis pretended that Hillel had written a Bible with his own Hand, which was preſerved to the ſixteenth Century. Kimki ſays that the Pentateuch of it was kept at Toledo; and one of thoſe that quitted Spain in the general Exile affirms, [m] that he had ſeen a part of it ſold in Africa; but he manifeſtly contradicts himſelf, ſince he notes, that this Bible was written but 900 Years before: For by this computation, Hillel muſt have lived in the ſixth Century, which is evidently falſe.

This was a very able Man, ſince Origen, who knew him, conſulted him often, but this Patriarch's Converſion has made him to be loved by the Chriſtians. This Matter may appear doubtful, ſince the Rabbins have obſerved a profound ſilence, as to this laſt

---

[d] He intercalated a Month to the 3d 6th 8th 11th 14th 17th and 19th Year. See Bartol. Diverſe Tables. B. R. t. 2. p. 416. 548.
[e] Kepler. Eclogæ Chronol. p. 93, 94. [f] 172 Years before Chriſt. [g] 162 Years before Chriſt, or 140. [h] Bucher de Paſch. cyclo. Jud. p. 336. [i] 330 Years before Chriſt. * 140 Years before Chriſt. [k] Ann. 250. r. Bartol. B. R. t. 11. p. 445.
[l] Scaliger. Canon. Iſagog. l. 3. p. 279. [m] Zacuthus in Juchaſin. S. proſæpiarum.

act

act of their Patriarch's Life. But without enquiring whether this silence be not an effect of their Jealousie for the glory of their Nation, which a change of Religion in a dying Patriarch might have scandaliz'd; as they have no Historical Monument of those Times remaining, 'tis no wonder we find no footstep of Hillel's Christianity. It suffices, that Epiphanius has related the fact in a manner not to be contested.

He had it from the Mouth of Joseph, who had been Hillel's intimate Friend, Tutor to his Son, and one of his Apostles. Eusebius of Verceil, and St. Epiphanius, coming to see Scythopolis, he told them that the Patriarch Hillel, descended from Gamaliel, who had held the Patriarchate, and from the Great Gamaliel, St. Paul's Preceptor, perceiving his approaching end, sent for the Bishop of Tiberias, under pretence of consulting him, about his Distemper, as an experienc'd Physitian, and immediately demanded to be Baptiz'd. The Domesticks brought Water, as if he meant to use it for some Remedy, and being dismiss'd, the Bishop of Tiberias baptized the Patriarch of the Jews. This Conversion was made in secret, for fear the dying Patriarch, being in the Hands of his Servants, should suffer some violence from them. However, it had been more edifying to have made it publick, since Constantine being upupon the Throne, the Christians had then sufficient power to protect him from the insults of his Nation.

XIX. 'Tis difficult to fix the time of this event, though we know that it happen'd under Constantine. The Rabbins, who make Hillel live in the Year 360, are mistaken, or confound him with another Patriarch of the same name, who lived under Julian the Apostate. Bartolocci [n] makes a more probable Conjecture, placing the Conversion and Death of Hillel in the Year of our Lord 320; but we must antedate his Death eight or ten Years, and place it in the Year 310, or 312. 1. Not to give him too long a Life or Reign. 2. Because this event must have preceded the Law which Constantine publish'd in the Year 315, concerning Proselytes, which we shall speak of in another Place. Scaliger, who makes him to reform the Calendar in the Year 344, and thence to commence his Cycle of nineteen Years, says it without any proof.

XX. He left one Son, a Minor, under the tutorage of two Friends, who Educated him in the Principles of his Religion. He became also Patriarch or Prince as his Father had been: He recompenced one of his Tutors, named Joseph, with an Apostleship: But the Jews perceiving that he dissembled like Hillel, treated him with that violence as obliged him to go to Court to complain to Constantius. He was well receiv'd of the Emperor, and obtain'd the privilege of building many Churches for the Christians. He enrich'd himself by this undertaking, and built fine Houses at Scythopolis, where it was that Eusebius of Verceil, banish'd by the Emperor Constantius, and St. Epiphanius, went to see him: He was then seventy Years of Age, and Juda his Pupil, who had persevered in Judaism, was then still Patriarch of the Nation in the Year 356.

XXI. He died a little after: For Julian the Apostate writing to the commonalty of the Jews, speaks of another Patriarch, named Julius or Hillel, and his Letter is of the Year 363. This Hillel was Son of Juda, and kept the Government of his Nation to the Year 385, or thereabouts.

XXII. Then the last of the Western Patriarchs appear'd, named Gamaliel. St. Jerome speaks of him in the Year 392, as a Man that had then had long Controversies with Hesychius. He had applied himself to the Study of Physick, and made so good progress in it, that Sextus Empiricus has cited him as a Man, who distinguish'd himself by his Experiments. The Patriarch, Gamaliel, said he [o] has shewn by many Experiments, that the Remedy he has found against the Spleen, is excellent. In truth we ought not be dazzled with the fastuous titles of Patriarch, or Prince, so often given to the Heads of the Jewish Nation. They were not rich enough to live upon their Revenues: They often practised Physick with success; and 'tis not to depretiate their Dignity, that we associate it with this Profession: For the Christian Bishops did the same at first; even the Bishop of Tiberias, whom the Patriarch Hillel sent for in his Sickness, must pass for a Physitian, since he was sent for in that quality. St. Jerome, and St. Chrysostome [p] affirm, that the Patriarchs fell into excesses, accomplishing the Curse of Esaiah, who had foretold that this People should be govern'd by Effeminates, since they fell into Luxury. And we have heard Palladius reproach them with selling the Dignities depending on them, to enlarge their Revenues, and thus they hastened their Destruction.

XXIII. Gamaliel still held his Dignity in 415, since it was in that Year Theodosius's Law was made, which lopt off part of his Authority. And whether Gamaliel continuing to abuse his Authority, offended the Emperor, or that the Patriarchal Race fail'd; it is certain this Dignity was abolish'd in the Year 429, after having lasted three hundred and fifty Years. Most of the Rabbins finish it too soon: For it proceeded to the thirteenth Generation of Hillel, and ended not till Gamaliel III. Moreover, they very rarely give them the title of Patriarch, preferring that of Prince to it.

XXIV. The Primates succeeded the Patriarchs, but their Authority was different. It has been pretended that these Jewish Primates resembled those of the Christians; Heads of a Province, and Presidents of the Council assembled in it. But I question the Truth of it; at least I observe that there were many Jewish Primates in that one City of Alexandria, when Cyril the Bishop of it terrified them. 'Twas the People that Elected their Primates by the plurality of Voices. Whereas the Patriarchship was Hereditary in the Family of Hillel. Cunæus has allotted them the same Authority as the Patriarchs, but he bottoms upon a Law of Theodosius, which that ingenious and bold Critick had not well read. He makes this Prince say in his Law [q] That the Primates Rule in the Council or Sanhedrim; but he should have read, that they are nominated or elected by the Council of the two Provinces. Palestine was then divided into three Provinces; and yet the Law speaks but of two; but there is no necessity of changing the Text, because perhaps there was neither Sanhedrim, nor Jewish Primate, in the third part of that Province, which was called the Salutary. Each Province maintain'd its Primates, and to that end, the antient Tribute was continued for some Years, which the Patriarchs exacted. But Theodosius the younger had it brought into his Treasury, and levied by his Officers.

[n] Bartol. Bibl. Rabb. t. 11. [o] Sext. Emp. l. 33. [p] Hieron. in Es. 3. 4.
[q] Cod. Theod. LXVI. l. 29. p. 245. Dominantur, read Nominantur Cunæus de Rep. Heb. l. 2. c. 23. p. 231.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Princes of the Captivity at Babylon.

I. THE Subject of this Chapter. II. The different Originals of the Princes of the Captivity. III. A Conjecture about their Inſtitution. IV. An Anſwer to the Difficulties. V. Whether the Princes extended their Juriſdiction over all the Jews. VI. This Notion confuted. VII. The Ceremonies of Inſtalling the Princes. VIII. Their place of Reſidence. IX. Whether they were all of the Race of David. X. The extinction of this Office. XI. The Erection of Academies in the Territories of Babylon. XII. The Academy of Sora. XIII. That of Pumdebita. XIV. Thoſe of Nareſh, and Mahuſia. XV. The Authority of the Heads of the Academy.

I. HAving given the Catalogue of the Patriarchs, or Princes of Judea, it would be methodical to treat of the Heads of the Academies of Japhne and Tiberias, who Taught the Jews in the Holy Land, and preſerved the Oral Law. But that we may not break off the Hiſtory of the Heads that have govern'd the People in their Exile and Diſperſions; I muſt firſt give a general Idea of the Princes of the Captivity that govern'd the other part of the Nation which took Sanctuary in Babylon, and other Provinces of the Eaſt. I ſhall be ſhort upon this Article, becauſe I muſt ſpeak of it again, when I give the Hiſtory of the Diſperſions. Beſides, materials are often wanting, we have but little knowledge of tranſactions in the heart of the East: The Jews themſelves are ignorant of the Events of their Nation in theſe remote Countries. Few Monuments and Books have arrived from thence to inſtruct us; it being rarely the Character of Refugees to write their own Hiſtory: People don't love to deſcribe their miſeries to no purpoſe; the deſcription is not only diſagreeable, but dry and barren, and the Jews have neglected it more than any Nation in the World. Laſtly, the Jewiſh Chronologers have taken the pains to preſerve the names of the Doctors who have taught in their Schools; or have been the Heads of their Academies both in the East and Weſt. But they ſeldom ſpeak of the Princes of the Captivity; they ſcarce mention three from Huna, who was the firſt, to the perfecting of the Talmud; that is in the ſpace of three hundred Years. This ſilence ſhews, that notwithſtanding the title of Prince, given to the Heads of the Eaſtern Captivity, they had no very great Power in that Country; for Hiſtorians never forget what may raiſe the glory of their Nation.

The Origine of the Heads of the Captivity is not known; it only appears that there was nothing of them before the end of the ſecond Century. Indeed whilſt the Temple of Jeruſalem ſtood, the Eaſtern Refugees ſent their preſents to Jeruſalem, and came thither from time to time to pay their Devotions. The Spirit of Schiſm expired in theſe ſtrange Countries, and they acknowledged the High-Prieſt for Supream in the Nation: If any continued addicted to the Schiſm of Samaria, and Gerizim, they ſent alſo their Oblations thither: There was no thoughts therefore of ſetting up an Head of the Captivity, whilſt there was any form of Government in Judea.

We muſt not look for a Prince of the Nation either in the Weſt or Eaſt, before the ruine of Jeruſalem. There was none in the Eaſt, for no Hiſtorian has mention'd any; and the firſt of theſe Chiefs that appears upon the Stage was Huna, who lived not till the end of the ſecond Century of the Church. Nor were there any other Princes at Jeruſalem, beſides thoſe that were appointed by the Romans. It will be ask'd no doubt, whether no change was made in the Eaſt after the downfal of Jeruſalem. Some Criticks maintain [r] that the Nation was divided into three different portions, which made to themſelves as many Heads. They that remain'd in the Holy Land, continued to have for their Head the Preſident of the Sanhedrim. The Ægyptians Elected a Patriarch, of whom the Emperor Adrian ſpeaks, and the Orientals ſet up in Babylon a Prince of the Captivity. Sometimes 'tis pretended that the Patriarch of Judea ruled over the whole Nation; and the Argument is, that the Emperor Adrian ſpeaks only of one Patriarch who extended his Authority into Ægypt, and from thence into the East. Origen, and St. Jerome have ſpoken after the ſame manner, and 'tis in vain to turn over the Imperial Laws, among which there are ſo many which regulate the Government of the Jews; we there only find the ſole Dignity of Patriarch elevated above the reſt.

III. If a Man may have leave to produce his Conjectures, on a ſubject barren and deſtitute of Proofs, it appears to me much more probable; 1. That the Eaſtern Jews imitated thoſe of the Holy Land, who had made themſelves an Head. Having no longer that bond of Unity which was form'd by the Temple of Jeruſalem and the High-Prieſt; theſe two parts of the Nation, vaſtly remote from one another, made themſelves Chiefs. 2. According to all appearances, the Orientals durſt not take this liberty, till the Parthians who tyrannized in the East, were beaten under the Empire of Alexander Severus, and the laſt of their Kings ended his life in a tragical manner. As they then enjoy'd ſome reſt by the overthrow of their Tyrants, they might take that Advantage to give ſome form to their Government. 3. This Conjecture agrees with the time in which Huna lived, the firſt that is known of all the Princes of the Babyloniſh Captivity: For Huna was contemporary with Juda the Saint, and was Elected Prince of the Nation in the Year 220, or 222. 'Tis true, a Jewiſh Chronologer [s] ſends Huna to the end of the third Century, the Year 4060, or 300 of our Saviour. But all the other Writers of the Nation acknowledge, that he was Cotemporary with Juda the Saint; and was elected Prince during his life, or a little after his Death. 4. Laſtly, 'tis eaſy to remove all the difficulties urged by the Criticks, about the Unity of the Patriarch, or the plurality of Heads aſſign'd to the Jewiſh Nation, which is what I ſhall attempt in the following Article.

IV. Firſt, it is true that the Patriarch of Tiberias was alone for ſome time, becauſe the Jews of Babylon had not the liberty after the ruine of Jeruſalem to make to themſelves a particular Head; yet it can't be ſaid that this Patriarch extended his Authority over the Jews of Babylon; for we find no track or proof of it. 2. It muſt not be wonder'd at, if in proceſs of time only one Patriarch was mention'd: Adrian had reaſon for this, ſince the Princes of the Babyloniſh Captivity were not yet known; and this Emperor took notice only of what paſſed in Ægypt. Chriſtian Authors, and the Imperial Laws only respected the Roman Empire, on which Judea depended; and it was not known what was done in the East under the Persian Empire. 3. This Remark ruines the sub-division that is made of the Nation into three portions; for the Ægyptian Jews depending on the Roman Empire, were subject to the Patriarch of Judea; and therefore Adrian affirms, that he came into this Country from time to time. His Seat was not there, nor did he reside in Ægypt, but he came from Tiberias to visit his Nation, and raise the Tribute in Ægypt. Origen, St. Jerome, and Theodosius, could not have been ignorant that there were two Heads of the Jews, one in Ægypt, and the other in Judea; and since they own but one, 'tis absurd to multiply them. 4. But in tract of time the Patriarchs of Tiberias being abolish'd, the Refugees of Ægypt, who were not accustomed to depend upon that of Babylon, thought they had right to set up a particular Chief of their own; and therefore Benjamin de Tudela [a] does not put Ægypt in the Diocese of the Babylonish Chief, whereof he has given a large Description: But moreover, sets over the Jews in Ægypt, a Prince of Princes, who was of the Nation, and presided over the Synagogues of this Country. 5. Lastly, after the Institution of two Heads of the Nation, one for the Roman Empire, and the other for the Persian, they have ever been independent of one another. The Babylonish Jews would not submit to the Patriarch of Tiberias after the ruine of Jerusalem; and it was, doubtless, to be quit of the obeisance and homages that the Jewish Patriarch required of them, that they set up an Head of their own.

[r] V. Gothofred. Cod. Theod. c. 16. t. 8. p. 219.

[s] Ganz. Tſemaſt. David p. 115.

V. 'Tis pretended that the Head of the Captivity was superior to the Patriarch, because all that were of David's Race, left Judea and retired into Babylon. They maintain, that there it was that the Scepter was found, mention'd by Jacob, because the Heads of the Captivity enjoy'd a great Authority, while the Lawgiver was in Judea, where the Descendants of Hillel, and some other very able Rabbins had taught the Law. Lastly, they cite a confession of Juda the Saint, who owns, that if Huna, who was Head of the Captivity of Babylon, came into Judea, he should be obliged to give him place, and to rise before him, because Huna was of the Tribe of Juda, and of the Race of David by King Jehoiakim, and he was only of the Tribe of Benjamin, and of the Race Royal by the Women.

VI. It signifies little who has the superiority, the Head of the Captivity, or the Patriarch of the Jews: But only let us observe the contradiction of the Jews, who make Old Hillel descend from the Tribe of Juda, and the Race of David. [b] They change their tone, and afterwards degrade this Family to raise the Chiefs of the Babylonish Captivity, because they have subsisted longer, and made a greater Figure. 'Tis said, without any certainty and foundation, that the Jews of the Race of David quitted Judea; for on the contrary, there were in the Emperor Adrian's time, Relations of our Lord in Being, and we don't find they changed their Habitation to retire into the East: Besides Hillel the Old, the Head of this Family was dead long before. Nor is there any probability of finding David's Posterity rather in Babylon than Judea. The Tribe of Juda had left this Country in Esdras's Time: The number of the ten Tribes infinitely prevail'd in the East; and these ten Schismatical Tribes, who had little respect to David's Posterity, would sooner chuse one of their Brethren, than a Stranger, for their Head: At least this Conjecture is more probable. The Discourse ascribed to Juda is ill placed in the Talmud of Jerusalem; for it is not likely that the Jews of the Holy Land, should insert a Clause to their own Dishonour: These words were not slip'd in, till the Doctors of Babylon had gotten the ascendant, and after the extinction of the Patriarchs: Huna was not Head of the Captivity till after Juda the Saint was dead; how then would he have given the Right Hand to a private Person? Lastly, the Heads of the Captivity depended on the Kings of Persia, and consequently had no Scepter among them.

VII. These Princes of the Captivity were Install'd with a great deal of Pomp and Ceremony. The truth is, the Heads of the neighbouring Academies, the Senators and the People came in throngs into the City of Babylon: The Assembly being form'd, and the Prince, suppos'd to be of the Race of David, seated upon a kind of Throne, the Head of the Academy of Syria exhorted him not to abuse his Power; representing, that he was call'd rather to a slavery than an Empire, by reason of the sad condition of the People. Thursday following the Governors of the Academies laid their hands on him in the Synagogue, with the noise of Trumpets and Acclamations. The People having conducted him home in Pomp, sent him great Presents. Saturday Morning all the considerable Persons came to his House; he put himself at the Head of them, and left his House, having his Face cover'd with a Piece of Silk: In this Equipage he went, the multitude following him, to the Synagogue, where the Heads of the Academies, and the Chantors, Sung Canticles of Benediction about his Chair. There they brought him the Book of the Law, which he read the first Line of; afterwards he spoke to the People, with his Eyes shut, out of respect; and if he fail'd, the Head of the Academy of Syria made the Sermon: He enlarg'd particularly upon the Charity that ought to be had to the Students, and gave himself an Example, by large Alms, and that Example was followed. The Ceremony ended with Acclamations to the Prince, and Prayers to God that he would deliver the Nation, under his Reign. He blessed the People, and prayed in particular for each Province, that God would defend it from Plague, or War. He ended with a Petition in a low Voice, for fear any one should hear him, and go and acquaint other Princes that he wish'd their ruine; because indeed the Empire of the Jews could not be Erected, but upon the Wreck of other Monarchies. Upon leaving the Synagogue, the Prince was conducted pompously to his Palace, where he made a sumptuous Entertainment for the principal Persons of the Nation. This was his last Exit; for after that, he was not permitted to leave his House, except to go to the Academy, and then every body rose and stood, till he desired them to take their Seats. He went to pay a Visit to the King of Babylon, which was done with a great deal of Pomp after his Installation. The King having notice of his design, sent his Chariot for him: The Head of the Captivity durst not accept this offer, but order'd it to go before him, to testify his Respect and Dependance. He was then Vested with a magnificent Cloth of Gold; fifty Guards march'd before him; all that met him upon the Road, made it a piece of Devotion to follow him to the King's Palace. The Eunuchs met him and conducted him to a Throne, while one of his Officers marched before him distributing Gold and Silver. Upon approaching the King, he prostrated himself to the Earth, to signify that he was his Vassal and his Subject: The Eunuchs raised him, and placed him on a Seat on the left Hand: After the first Compliments, the Prince open'd the Complaints and Affairs of his Nation, which the King decided.

VIII. These Heads of the Captivity have [c] sometimes had their Residence at Mahazia, but it was tranſlated to Babylon, or Bagded: There he had ten Courts of Juſtice, over which he preſided. There was alſo twenty eight Synagogues, amongſt which was that of the Prince, ſupported with Pillars of Marble of all Colours. Before the Cheſt, which contain'd the Law, was a Tribunal rais'd with ten Steps, on which was placed the Seat of the Prince of the Captivity and his Family. His Sovereignty extended over all the diſperſed Jews in Aſſyria and Chaldea, and all the Kingdom of the Parthians: Eſdras commonly calls them Orientals, in oppoſition to thoſe who lived in Judea and Ægypt, which are often called Occidentals. He conferr'd Ordination on all the Heads of the Synagogues of the Eaſt; thence alſo he received the neceſſary Contributions to ſupport his Dignity, and pay the Tributes exacted by the Kings of Perſia.

[a] Itin. p. 115. [b] He descended from the Son of Sephatia, Son of Abital, Son of David. [c] Solomon fil. virgæ Histor. Judaica. p. 302, &c.

IX. This Prince was to be of the Houſe of David, but it would have been extreamly difficult to have obſerved this order in a place where there were but few Jews of the Tribes of Juda, and the Little Benjamin, and where on the contrary the Poſtérity of the other Tribes were infinitely the uppermoſt This was perhaps only imagined, that they might not in any thing be inferior to thoſe who continued in Judea, whoſe Patriarchs deſcending from Hillel, traced their Pedigree up to David; or to raiſe the glory of the Nation.

X. This Principality ſtill ſubſiſted in the Eleventh Century, when it received a deadly blow. The famous Academies were ſhut up; the People and Diſciples fled to the Weſt, and particularly to France, where they taught for ſome Years with great Reputation. The Heads of the Captivity loſt their Power by the Deſertions of the People, and the Oppreſſion of the Infidels: Their Name remain'd till the 12th Century, ſince Benjamin de Tudela, who travell'd into theſe parts, found one ſtill there; but we find no footſteps of them from that time.

XI. 'Tis pretended that the Academies were Erected in the Year 220, or 230; which agrees well enough with the Conjecture we have made about the Inſtitution of the Prince of the Captivity. For as this Prince was really a Doctor, and was chiefly imployed in the Study and Obſervation of the Law, there is no doubt but that the firſt uſe he made of his Authority was the Eſtabliſhment of an Academy. The moſt antient was that of Nahardea, a Town ſituated upon the Banks of Euphrates: 'Tis ſaid there was a famous School there in the Year 185, that one Samuel a Rabbin, who went from thence young, and taught the Miſnah under Juda the Saint at Tiberias, return'd into his Country, took the conduct of this School, or ſet it up. This Samuel is a Man famous in his Nation, which diſtinguiſhes him by the titles of the Vigilant of Arioch, of Sapor the King, and the Lunatick, becauſe 'tis pretended he govern'd the People as abſolutely as Kings do their Subjects; and that the way to Heaven was as well known to him, as that of his own Academy. He died in the Year 250, of our Lord; and the Town of Nahardea being taken in the Year 278, the Academy was ruined.

XII. 'Tis ſaid an Academy was forthwith erected at Sora, which borrowed its name from Syria; for the Jews give it to all the Lands ſtretching from Damas and Euphrates, quite to Babylon. Sora ſtood upon the Euphrates, ſixty Miles from Nahardea. The Jews were afflicted there with a violent Peſtilence, which occaſion'd the change of its Name: For a Rabbin teaching the Inhabitants to recite a Section of Exodus, they were by this means cured, and in gratitude they call'd this City Matha Mechaſia, that is, a City of Propitiation, Grace, and Mercy; it had two Tribunals of Juſtice for the Jews that lived there. In the Year 3955, or 195, an Academy was ſet up there, which became the more famous, becauſe R. Huna was one of its firſt Heads; others place this erection in the Year 220, and with more reaſon.

XIII. Pumbedita was a City ſituate in Meſopotamia, agreeable for the beauty of its Buildings. It was much diſcredited by the Manners of its Inhabitants, which were almoſt ſo many Robbers; no Body would have any Commerce with them, and the Jews have ſtill this Proverb, that a Man muſt change his Habitation who has a Pumdebitan [d] for his Neighbour. R. Chaſda [e] made choice of it in the Year 290, to teach in it. As he was Huna's Collegue who taught at Sora, [f] there is reaſon to ſuſpect that ſome jealouſie or perſonal pique, put him upon this new erection: He could not however give his new Academy the Luſtre and Reputation of that of Sora, which always kept the Superiority of Pumdebita: For if we believe the Jews, the firſt had the title of Excellent, or Gaon, which was denied the other: He had the pre-eminence; he held the Right Hand of the Prince of the Captivity; he made the Prayer; he explain'd the Law in the vulgar Tongue, whilſt the Prince of the Captivity heard. Laſtly, he had one third more Salary than the other.

XIV. There were two other Academies erected the ſame Year, 353, one at Nareſh near Sora, and the other at Machuſia. A fifth was alſo ſet up at the end of the tenth Century, in a place called Peruts Sciabbur, where 'tis ſaid there were ten thouſand [g] Jews.

XV. The Heads of the Academies have given great Luſtre to the Jewiſh Nation by their Writings. They muſt not be confounded with the Princes of the Captivity, who reſided at Babylon, and regulated all the affairs of the Nation in that Country, with the ſame Authority, as the Patriarchs of Tiberias did in the Weſt.

However the Heads of the Academy partaked with them in their Command. For as the Government of the Jews depends on abundance of caſes of Conſcience; and Moſes has given political Laws, which are as ſacred as the Ceremonial; the Doctors which were often conſulted, were alſo Maſters of the People: Some even believe, that after the ruin of the Temple, the Councils being extinct, or confounded with the Academies, the power belonged intirely to the Heads of them. This is but a general Idea of the Princes of the Captivity, and the Governors of the Nation in the Eaſt: But we ſhall ſpeak more largely of them hereafter, becauſe we can't well inſert their Hiſtory here, without maiming that of the diſperſions: We reſerve it for the ſixth Book, where we ſhall inſert the Names and principal actions that have diſtinguiſh'd theſe Heads of the Eaſtern Captivity. Let us here examine the Succeſſion of the Doctors of Iſrael, and the different orders of Maſters that have taught the Jews, that we may the better know from what Fountain their preſent Religion is derived, and moſt of the Ceremonies they obſerve.

[d] Pumdebitanus te aſſociat, muta hoſpitium. [e] Cholin. p. 127. [f] In 260. [g] Bartol. B. R. t. 111. p. 667. An. 967.

CHAP. V.

The First Order of the Jewiſh Doctors.

The Tanaites, who have preſerved the Tradition from Eſdras to Juda the Saint, or the 200 Year of the Chriſtian Æra.

I. Of the Tanaites. II. Several Errors about Eſdras. III. Simeon the Juſt a Tanaite. IV The Method we are obliged to follow concerning the Tanaites. V. The Preſidents and Vice-Preſidents of the Senate. VI. Proſelytes and Hereticks Tanaites. VII. Tanaites that were never Preſidents of the Senate. R. Eliezer. VIII. Whether they had the Daughter of the Voice, or Bathcol. IX. Arguments to the contrary. X. A Paſſage of Joſephus explain'd. XI. Miracles of the Tanaites. XII. Their Maxims. XIII. Their Elogy. XIV. Their Succeſſion. XV. The Birth of Juda the Saint. XVI. His Work of the Miſnah.

I. THE Jews are perſuaded that God gave Two Sorts of Laws on Mount Sinai, One that Moſes wrote down, and another which he truſted to his Memory, which was tranſmitted to Poſterity, by the miniſtry of Doctors and Prophets. By the help of this Diſtinction they make God ſay what they pleaſe, and give a Divine Authority to their Imaginations. It was in their Doctor's Power to multiply the Commandments, and vary them according to their Caprice, and the People could not diſobey them guiltleſs, from the moment they were perſuaded that their Heads were the ſecret Depoſitaries of the Will of the Almighty.

It is not difficult to derive down theſe Traditions and Oral Law from Mouth to Mouth, whilſt there were Prieſts and Prophets, and Sacred Writers. They can chuſe in the Sacred Hiſtory the Saints that beſt pleaſe them, and produce them to the People as ſo many Conduits through which the Oral-Law hath ran. But the Confuſion is greater from Eſdras to Juda the Saint, and therefore the Succeſſion varies with the moſt judicious Writers, and is found frequently interrupted. However, they have not fail'd to find a Succeſſion of Fathers who have tranſmitted the Traditions to Poſterity, and they give them the Name of Tanaites, or Tanaans, that is to ſay Doctors; [a] this Word is borrow'd from another, which ſignifies to teach. They are alſo call'd Miſnaicks, becauſe the Work of the Miſnah is aſcribed to them. Laſtly, They give ſome of them the Title of Abba, which ſignifies Father; there is cited, for Inſtance, in the Miſnah, one Abba Saul, who was of the Stature of the Giants, and who burying the Dead, found Abſalom's Eye, in which he hid himſelf up to the Noſe.

II. They ſet Eſdras at the Head of the Tanaites, the Preſervers of Tradition; but the Rabbinical Genius will appear by the different Things they relate of him: 1. Some confound him with Zerobabel, others with Malachy, and alledge for a Reaſon, that there never was any Man named Malachy, ſince this ſignifies an Angel, or Meſſenger, and that of all the Meſſengers of God to Jeruſalem, there was none that more eminently deſerved this Title than Eſdras; they are charged in the Alcoran with making Eſdras not only an Angel, but a Son of God; but this is a Calumny founded upon the exceſſive Praiſes which they give him. 2. They make him contemporary with Baruch, who confided to him the Tradition at Babylon; with Plato, Demoſthenes, and at the ſame time make him live till Alexander the Great made his Entrance into Jeruſalem, in the Time of Haggai, Zachary, and Malachy, and when all Prophecy was extinct. 3. They attribute to him I know not how many new Regulations, as that of appointing Perfumers to run about the Streets of Jeruſalem, that the Women might buy of them more conveniently, in order to dreſs themſelves on the Sabbath. 4. Laſtly, They aſcribe to him the Inſtitution of a Council of an hundred and twenty Perſons, call'd The Great Synagogue, by whoſe Aſſiſtance he reſtored the Scripture to its primitive Perfection.

III. The Jewiſh Hiſtorians are ſtill leſs exact about Simeon the Juſt, whom they make Eſdras's Succeſſor. They conſider him as the laſt of the Great Synagogue, who ſurvived all the reſt, and preſerved the Tradition: They confound him with Jaddus, who received Alexander the Great in their City, and the better to diſguiſe him, they make him to ſucceed Jehoſhua in the High-Prieſthood; they make him diſpute, before this Prince, againſt the Africans, who came to re-demand the Holy Land, which belonged to them as Deſcendents of Canaan; but he confounded them by citing the Place where Canaan, who was curſed of his Father, was to ſerve his Brethren. They attribute to him a Miracle, to hinder an unknown Perſon call'd, Niſcalenus, from ſetting up in the Temple the Images he had brought: For this unknown Perſecutor died whilſt Simeon the Juſt celebrated the Feaſt with the People in the Temple. Laſtly, They affirm, that whilſt he lived, the Goat which was ſent into the Wilderneſs, was ſcarce thrown down the Rock, but he was ſeen to fall in pieces, whereas ſince his Death, he always ran into the Wilderneſs, and the Arabians often eat him. Some make him live 350 Years; they even ſometimes confound him with Simeon, who took Jeſus Chriſt in his Arms.

IV. We ſhould be no better inſtructed in the true Hiſtory of the Jews, though we ſhould proceed to relate all the Actions they tell of the Preſervers of Tradition, down to Juda the Saint, who put it in writing. The Jews, who neglect other Parts of their Hiſtory, are fondly devoted to thoſe Perſons who have preſerved their Tradition; as if the Honour of their Church and Nation ſolely depended on it. They load them with extraordinary Actions; their Lives abound with Miracles, and the Writers think it a particular Duty incumbent on them to preſerve at leaſt their Names. We find them in the antienteſt Chronicles, as in the famous Seder Olam, which has been lately reprinted in Holland, with new Annotations: Abraham, [b] Son of David, or Dior, who lived at Peſcaira, the beginning of the Twelfth Century, was obliged to go to the bottom of this Subject, by reaſon of a Diſpute he had with ſome Sadducees, or Caraites, which then flouriſh'd in Spain. He ſhews, in this Book of Tradition, a Succeſſion of Doctors from Adam to his own Age. Abraham Zacuth [c] expell'd Spain, with the other Jews, has drawn a Succeſſion of Genealogies from the beginning of the World to the Year 1500. The famous Gedalia [d] has also made a Chain of the Cabbala, or Tradition, to the Year 1586, in which he wrote. R. Ganz [e] has carried his Chronology to the taking of Bologne, where the Jews were plunder'd, and lost considerably. We ought therefore to find more light upon this Article, than others. And yet there is a great Disagreement [f] in the Calculations of these Historians; they differ even in the Names of their Doctors; they confound the Times, and make Persons live in the same Age, who were vastly remote from one another; they give these Doctors such Encomiums, as demonstrate their want of Taste for true Merit. That we may not engage too tediously in Particulars, and a Confutation which would never have an end, we will here content our selves with making some Reflections, which give a general Idea of them.

[a] Vide Otho. Hiſtor. Doct. Mimic. Bartol. B. R. t. 111. [b] Abraham Ben David Hallevi Sepher. Hakkabbal. Vide Bartol. B. R. 4. t. p. 18. [c] Abraham Zachut. Juchaſim eſt Liber proſapiarum. Ibid. p. 54.

V. First, It is pretended, that the great Council or Sanhedrim was govern'd by Two Persons, without reckoning the High-Priest; One was the Prince of the Senate, and the other his Vicar, these Two Chiefs were the Depositaries of Tradition, and these Offices were establish'd long after the ruin of Jerusalem. Josua the Son of Perachia, exercis'd it under Aristobulus, with Nathan of Arbela; this was the Name of the Place where this Great-Vicar was born, and a little City of Galilee, which we must not confound, as is sometimes done, with that famous Plain, in which Alexander the Great beat the Persians.

'Tis said that Josua, the Son of Perachia, the Head of the Sanhedrim, was also the Præceptor of Jesus Christ; that he took him with him into Ægypt, but perceiving in his Travels a great Inclination in him to debauch, he dismiss'd him with Ignominy. To make Jesus Christ Contemporary with Josua, the Son of Perachia, is confounding Times, and making the Messiah to be born under Alexander Jannæus, and to die at 36 Years of Age, under Aristobulus. They must maintain that the Emperor Constantine reign'd 420 Years after Jesus Christ, though we have evident Proofs to the contrary: But Abraham the Son of Dior, who has imagin'd this Story, does not trouble his Head about all these Distortions of Chronology; and he is in the right, since the Doctors of his Nation, for whom he writ, follow him without Examination.

This Author, who lived in the 12th Century, would not doubtless have forged this false Chronology, but to get rid of an Objection that was offer'd him, about the Temple's being ruin'd, a little after the coming of our Messiah; but the Artifice is too coursly spun. Another [g] distinguishes Two Josua's, One the Son of Perachia, Chief of the Senate, Preserver of Tradition; and the other that lived in the Time of Hillel and Schammay, and was Præceptor to Jesus Christ. But he falls into an Anachronism, as well as the other in the History of the 2d Temple, in making of Jesus Christ to be taken by Pompey, who went to Damas after that Performance.

VI. Historians also reckon among the Chiefs of the Nation, and Depositaries of the Oral Law, not only Proselytes, as Abtalion, whose Name they fancy they find in the Roman Law, as if he was a Lawyer among the Heathens, before he was President of the Sanhedrim, but also Hereticks, as Hillel and Schammay: For though these Doctors were of a very different Opinion, a Voice from Heaven pronounc'd that both their Sentiments were to be received; but the Daughter of Voice preferr'd Hillel, to whom Obedience was due upon pain of Death. However, great respect was had to the Disciples of Schammay. Baba, Son of Butah, who lived in the Time of Herod, and became President of the Senate, was one of the Disciples of Schammay, Chief of the Caraites; Tarphon, or Tryphon, was another Disciple of Schammay: Hence the Insult of the Robbers who pillaged him one Evening, telling him, Thou wouldst have foreseen this Misfortune, if thou hadst been an Hillelian; because these latter pray'd standing, and could see what was done; whereas Tarphon having his Head and Eyes downward at the Evening-Prayer, as Schammay had instituted, perceived not the Robbers till they were upon him.

They [h] count even Women in the List of the Tanaites, for Beruria Meir's Wife has a place there; and they pretend they are indebted to her for Three hundred Precepts or Maxims, which she had collected from 30 Doctors. Mean time this is no honourable Succession. Lastly, They reckon among the Depositaries of Tradition, the famous Akiba, Standard-bearer to Barchochebas, the Son of the Star, who boasted of being the Messiah, an Impostor that brought infinite Miseries upon his Nation.

VII. They place also in the Succession of the Depositaries of the Oral-Law, several Persons who were never Presidents of the Sanhedrim: But in recompence for their want of so eminent a Dignity, they attribute to them a prodigious Science, and heaps of Miracles: They say, for Instance, of Eliezer, That tho' the Firmament were Parchment, and the Waters of the Sea were changed into Ink; it would not suffice to write all that he knew; for he had made Three hundred Constitutions, purely upon the Subject of sowing of Cucumbers. Furnish'd with this profound Erudition, he thought he might contest the Post of President of the Senate which was vacant: He proposed Theses, as was the Custom of the Competitors for that Dignity, and not content thereby to demonstrate his perfect Acquaintance with Tradition, he proved it by a Train of Miracles: The Rivers ran up their Channel; the Walls of the School lean'd at his Word; the Daughter of Voice was heard, and pronounc'd Eliezer's Tradition to be follow'd: And yet for all this he was refused; whether because he was already old, or was hated for bringing from Lydda certain opposite Opinions to those of other Doctors. This is the Eliezer [i] the Traditioner of the Oral-Law, to whom they attribute certain Chapters of high esteem among the Jews, as if they had a venerable Antiquity, whereas they are very modern Writers who have forged this Piece, in which we find the History of the Old Testament, even to Mardochai, which Vorstius has translated. His Father, call'd Hircanus, ought not to be confounded with him in the Maccabees of the same Name; for he lived not many Years after [k] Jesus Christ.

When we tax the Jewish Doctors with ranking amongst the Guardians of Tradition, such as their Ancestors rejected for their particular Opinions, they retort the same Accusation upon the Christians, who respectfully follow the Tradition of some Doctors, whose Sentiments were not entirely pure. They add, that since the Christians boast the personal Succession of their Bishops, as if that was their Preservative from Error; and swell their Books with a long Catalogue of Popes, whom they look upon as the Depositaries of Religion; the Jews have right to take the same method, which Comparison is so far from offending the Doctors of the Romish Church, that it extremely pleases them: They fill up the [d] Gedalia Schialchelet. Hakkabbala; id est Catena Cabbalæ. [e] R. Ganz Tsemach David, sive Germen Davidis, in Chronolog. sacra & prophan. ad Ann. 1588. [f] See Examples of this difference in the Calculations of these Historians, apud Vorstium Observat. ad Chronol. R. Ganz. p. 213. ex Othon. Hist. Doct. Misnic. p. 94. [g] Gedalia Schialtscheler. Hakkab. [h] R. Ganz, Chron. p. 105. [i] Capitula Eliezer apud Vorstium. [k] An. 73.

Vacuities

Vacuities of this Sketch, and with new Proofs aſſert the conformity of the Popiſh Religion with the Jewiſh: For ſay they, the Pope is above the Church, whereof he is Head, as the High-Prieſt was ſuperior to all the Synagogue. One can't be depos'd, and another Pope ſubſtituted in his Place, as the other could not be diſpoſſeſs'd whilſt the Jewiſh Common-Wealth ſubſiſted. The High-Prieſt was always rich and powerful: He might even become a King, as appears by the Example of the Aſmoneans. The Pope is rich, eſpecially ſince the Donation of Conſtantine, and the other Princes. He is the Temporal Lord of Rome: He wears a Crown, and has a Royal Dignity, as Succeſſor to Jeſus Chriſt, who proceeded from the Houſe of David: The Cardinals are the Princes of the Church, as the Aſſiſtant of the High-Prieſt was called a Prince of God. They preſerve Traditions, and add new ones, as the High-Prieſt added to thoſe of Moſes. Laſtly, The Succeſſion of the Popes is continued as well as that of the Fathers of Traditions.

Surely there can't be worſe Reaſoning than this. Well, let Controvertiſts maintain that under the Goſpel, God annexing a new Grace to the Succeſſion of Biſhops, they derive the Doctrine from one hand to another; yet they give but a wretched Idea of this Succeſſion, by comparing it with that of the Jews: For if their Chain of Doctors has never been broken, and yet in ſpight of this Succeſſion, whereby the Religion was handed from Mouth to Mouth, from Moſes to Eſdras, and from Eſdras to Jeſus Chriſt, theſe Traditions are withſtood; becauſe Jeſus Chriſt has cenſured them; it muſt be confeſs'd that Religion changes, notwithſtanding the Succeſſion of Perſons, and that the Compariſon made between the Chain of High-Prieſts and Fathers of Tradition, and the Popes and Biſhops, ſhews the Falſhood of the Argument drawn from it, unleſs they have recourſe to Miracle.

Beſides the High-Prieſthood is abſurdly united with Royalty among the Jews; for theſe Dignities were always ſeparate. The Aſmonæans uſurp'd the Royalty, as the Popes have aſſumed Dignities and Titles inconſiſtent with Religion. If they are the Succeſſors of the Son of David, they ought, like him, to live in mean Eſtate, and have no place where to lay their Head. Simplicity better agrees with the Church, than the glittering Pomp of Riches: Conſtantine's Donation is a Chimera ſufficiently refuted. The Example of Solomon, who depoſed Abiathar, aſſerted by ſo many others, undermines the Pretenſion of the Popes, who may be expell'd their Sees, as well as other Biſhops. Theſe Princes of God, whoſe Title they have transferr'd to the Cardinals, are imaginary. There only remain then Three indiſputable Congruities, One whereof turns upon that heap of Traditions added to the Goſpel; the other upon the number of uſeleſs Laws and Commandments of the Church, annex'd to Traditions, under the multitude whereof Religion is overwhelm'd. Laſtly, The Succeſſion of Popes, perplex'd in their Beginnings, is as uncertain as that of the High-Prieſts, and the Succeſſion of Biſhops often as fabulous as that of the Fathers of Tradition. Let us return to theſe Doctors.

VIII, They pretend that the Daughter of Voice often aſſiſted theſe Depoſitaries of Tradition; thus it was that ſhe caus'd her ſelf to be heard, in order to make it known that Akiba, kill'd by Adrian's Command, was bleſſed: But her Declaration was particularly advantageous to Hillel the Old, and another Rabbin named Samuel, ſince ſhe pronounc'd, in Preſence of all their Diſciples, That they were worthy to receive the Holy Spirit. God alſo ſpoke to teach, That all the Univerſe was nouriſh'd for the ſake of his Son Chanina. They ſometimes make theſe Guardians of Tradition Prophets, who foretold Futurities.

IX. The Chriſtians have ſo often been told by the Jews of this Daughter of Voice which aſſiſted their Doctors, that they could not ſo much as imagine ſuch a boaſted Miracle to be fabulous; and they are ſo far from impleading their Relations of it of Falſhood, as to ſeek farther Arguments to confirm them in this Opinion. They believe Joſephus has mention'd it, ſince he affirms that Hircanus knew Antiochus's Defeat, the very Day that the Battle was fought. They find this Daughter of Voice even in the New Teſtament, in the Miracle that loſt Zachary his Speech; in the Baptiſm and Transfiguration of Jeſus Chriſt, when a Voice was heard diſtinctly.

But we ought not to believe a Thing becauſe we are often told it, and multitudes of Facts are amaſs'd to render it plauſible. We muſt ſtill examine the Nature of the Miracle, and the Teſtimonies whereupon it is founded. They are the modern Jews who do this honour to their Anceſtors, and mingle this Miracle with a great number of others, that are evidently fabulous. They don't ſo much as produce one Contemporary Author who has mention'd this Daughter of Voice, which is enough to render it very ſuſpicious: Beſides, they don't always ſay that it was a Voice from Heaven that was heard, but they give this Name to all the Preſages they had of an Event. Thus Simeon and Jochanan deſirous to ſee King Samuel, who taught at Babylon, reſolved to conſult the Daughter of Voice, about their Journey; to this purpoſe they liſt'ned, as they paſs'd by a School, and heard a Child reading theſe Words of Scripture, [l] Samuel is dead, from whence they concluded this Doctor was dead, and they were not miſtaken. Two other Rabbins [m] going to viſit one of their Friends, heard a Woman ſay, The Lamp is out, and her Neighbour anſwer'd her, Ah, let not the Lamp of Iſrael be put out; and they took this for the Daughter of Voice they deſign'd to conſult. From hence we may judge what they meant by this Daughter of Voice, whoſe Anſwers were often ſo diverſified. Thus it was that R. Acher having committed many Crimes, was led into Thirteen Synagogues, and in each Synagogue a Diſciple was interrogated, and the Verſe he read was examin'd: In the Firſt School they heard theſe Words of Iſaiah, There is no peace to the wicked: Another School read, God ſaid to the wicked, why doſt thou take my words into thy mouth, and in all the Synagogues ſomething of this nature [n] was heard againſt Acher, from whence it was concluded he was hated of God, ſince it was his Providence that determin'd the reading of theſe Scripture Verſes; and that was doubtleſs what they called the Daughter of Voice.

Some of theſe Doctors often imagin'd they heard a ſecret Voice ſpeaking to their Heart, from the Anſwers whereof they form'd their Reſolutions. And thus ſome myſtical and ſuperſtitious Chriſtians tell us of a Divine Voice, which they fancy they hear, and relate a good long Diſcourſe of Jeſus Chriſt, who ſpeaks and ſays to a Servant-Maid, Thou art no longer; thou art in me as the Fiſh in the Sea [o]. All this ſerves only to corrupt the Underſtanding, and give falſe Ideas to Man, too ſubject to flatter himſelf, and to imagine that God honours him with a ſtricter and more ſenſible Communication than others. The Rabbins might imagine they heard Voices from Heaven, God ſpeaking to them, to their Heart, and boaſt this Miracle, as if it were real, and it was taken by others upon truſt, without Examination; or perhaps their Poſterity has given them this Privilege, which they have neither ſought for, nor even thought of aſſuming. But beſides, the Effects of a pre-poſſeſs'd Imagination, the Jewiſh Doctors might do, what has ſince been done by a great number of Chriſtians. Theſe latter dipt into a Book, as the Goſpel of St. John, and the firſt Text they found, went for a Divine Oracle, which determin'd the good or ill ſucceſs of their Deſigns. The Jews had doubtleſs the ſame Weakneſs, and when they had form'd a Project, they conſider'd the firſt Word that could be applied to it, as an Anſwer from Heaven: For the Example of the Tanaites before cited, evidently proves it, and this was call'd the Daughter of Voice, becauſe it was a Voice heard in an unforeſeen manner, and ſuppoſed to be directed by a Divine Providence. This kind of Revelation was thought much inferior to prophetical Revelation.

[l] 1 Sam. 15. 1. [m] Otho Hiſt. Doct. Miſn. p. 87. [n] Excerpta Gemaræ apud Hottinger, p. 108. [o] Life of the good Armelle.

out

X. The Paſſage of Joſephus [p] alledged, proves that the Daughter of Voice, which muſt have been ſo well known in his Time, was not, for thus he ſpeaks: There goes an incredible Story of Hircanus, that God vouchſafed to ſpeak to him, for he ſaid that the ſame Day his Children gave battel to Antiochus Cyzicenus, the High-Prieſt burning Incenſe alone in the Temple, heard a Voice which inform'd him of his Sons Victory over the Enemy, which he immediately publiſh'd, and the Prediction prov'd true. Here you have the Daughter of Voice you ſeek for. But 1. Joſephus does not give it that Name. 2. He lays in his Precautions, that he may not be charged with the Falſity of Hiſtory, for he only relates it as a Story, a common Report, which is the Sanctuary the Hiſtorians commonly take, when they are not willing to paſs in ſilence a thing that they think uncertain. 3. He determines, that it was an incredible thing, whereas he could not ſpeak thus if the Miracle of the Voice had ſucceeded the Gift of Prophecy, and had been very common, as is ſuppoſed. Laſtly, They impertinently confound the Miracles of the Goſpel with uncertain Stories, which have no Authority.

XI. They aſcribe alſo to the Tanaites, the Preſervers of Tradition, the privilege of ſpeaking to Angels. Chanina did it. Beſides, he diſcover'd by the readineſs of his Prayers in his Mouth, whether the Sick were to live or die. The Tanaites had alſo the power of commanding Devils, and reſtraining Sorcerers. Thus Simeon, the Son of Sceta, One of theſe Tanaites who lived before Jeſus Chriſt, and even before Hillel, underſtanding that 80 Women were working magical Charms in one of the Grotto's of Aſcalon, conveyed himſelf thither with 80 Youths; he diſputed with theſe Women, and would prove that he was a greater Sorcerer than they, for with one Halloo he made the 80 Youths appear that were hid, who lifting up theſe Women in the Air, deſtroyed all the magical Power they were endued with, which cover'd them with ſhame. I don't wonder at the Talmudiſts publiſhing ſuch Stories as theſe to the Honour of their antient Maſters; but at the Chriſtian's ſeriouſly examining whether Simeon did not ſin, in cauſing theſe Women to be hanged all in a Day, ſince Women were not to be hanged, and Tradition did not allow many Criminals to die in one Day: This Story is alſo made uſe of to confirm what Hillel and the Gemara ſay, that he that multiplies Women, multiplies the Magical Art; becauſe moſt Women are addicted to it; as if there had not been as many Men as Women accuſed of Magick, or rather, as if we ought to reaſon upon ſuch doubtful Narratives.

XII. To each of theſe Tanaites are aſcribed ſome particular Precepts, as to each of the Apoſtles the Chriſtians have allotted an Article of the Creed. The Doctors [q] of the Great Synagogue eſtabliſh'd by Eſdras, commanded not to precipitate Judgments, to make many Diſciples and Ordinances. This is that they call an Hedge of the Law. Simeon the juſt, One of the Tanaites, ſaid, The World was built upon the Law, upon Religious Worſhip, and the Retribution of Benefits. He meant by that, that Men ought to ſtudy the Law; offer abundance of Sacrifices, and be charitable. 'Twas in the ſame Senſe that Joſe the Son of Jochanan ſaid, That the Door of the Houſe was to be open'd that was towards the High-way, that the Poor might enter; but he adds, That a Man ought to have but little Commerce with his own Wife, and none at all with another Man's; and the wiſe Men have confirm'd this Maxim, by ſaying, That he that ſpeaks often to Women, brings many Evils on himſelf, is diverted from the ſtudy of the Law, and throws himſelf into Hell. We may ſee elſe-where all the Maxims of theſe Tanaites; a Specimen is ſufficient here, to let us know what they are. They contain, in a few Words, Precepts of Morality, and Maxims that may be uſeful to Society.

XIII. There are no ſorts of Elogies but are given theſe Tanaites, that have preſerved Tradition. The ſucceeding Doctors don't even refuſe them Riches, for they boldy ſay, that R. Eliezer, the Son of Harſum, had a thouſand Cities upon the Land, and a thouſand Ships upon the Sea. Theſe are Hyperboles to let us know that Eliezar was very rich; but it need not be wondered that ſuch extravagant Figures are not reliſh'd by every body; they contain a childiſh Affectation and a Spirit of Falſhood, that is only fit to introduce Error.

'Tis in vain to ſay that theſe Figures are common, and that in the ſame Senſe it has been ſaid, there were 60000 Cities in the Mountains of Judea, each of which had 60000 Inhabitants. The multiplication of theſe kind of Examples, ſerves only to ſhew their violent Propenſion to Hyperbole, and the little Streſs that is to be laid upon what the Rabbins ſay to the advantage of their Nation, ſince they make no ſcruple of ſhocking Probability in the ſimpleſt Things. They maintain that the King of Perſia was not ſo rich as Juda the Saint's Maſter of the Horſe. They aſcribe to Akibas ſuch a profound Knowledge, that it was own'd to be a departure from Life, to deviate from his Deciſions. Moſes foreſaw, by God's diſcourſe, that this [r] Akibas was to be more holy than he, for which reaſon he ask'd him, why he did not prefer him to carry his Law to the People: But God anſwer'd, That the Birth of Akibas was remote, and that he could not wait ſo long, to make his Will known to the People. Nevertheleſs this Akibas was flay'd by Adrian.

XIV. 'Tis thus they expreſs their Reſpect and Veneration for the Tanaites, whoſe Succeſſion has laſted preciſely from Eſdras to Juda the Saint, who lived in the 215 Year of the Chriſtian Æra, for it was he that ſeeing the Diſperſion of the People, fear'd the Tradition would be loſt; wherefore he made that Collection of them which is call'd the Miſnah [s].

XV. This Juda the Saint deſcended from Hillel the Old, and counted amongſt his Anceſtors many Preſidents of the Council, whom we have called Patriarchs. He had R. Meir for his Præceptor, a mortal Enemy to his Father, and who had made violent Efforts to degrade him from his Dignity: But this Rabbin was of ſo much Learning and E-

[p] Joſeph Ant. l. 13. c. 18. p. 452. [q] Vide Tract. Thalmud. Pirke Abbot. ſive capitula patrum cum not. Leuſden. Fol. 1. [r] Alfonſi Dialog. Art. 2. B. Max. Pat. T. xxi. p. 185. [s] See Cap. ii. N. v. &c.

ſteem,

ſteem, that Simeon ſacrified his Hatred to the Education of his Son. Meir was one of the Tanaites, who was permitted to mingle Oyl and Wine on the Sabbath day, to make Medicines for the Sick, againſt the common Tradition, which allowed nothing to be done for them that Day. He was ſo humble and wiſe at once, that underſtanding an Huſband had commanded his Wife to go and ſpit in his Face, becauſe ſhe had ſtayed too long at Sermon, he feign'd himſelf to have a ſore Eye, and deſired this Woman to ſpit ſeven times upon that ſore part. Thus the Rabbin preſerved his Honour, and prevented the diviſion betwixt the Husband and the Wife. There are Chriſtians that compare this action to that of Jeſus, who cured the blind Man with Spittle and Clay. But muſt not a Man be exceſſively opinionated with Judaiſm to reaſon thus? 'Twas this able Maſter that taught Juda the Saint the Traditions.

XVI. This Patriarch was a perfect Maſter of the Hebrew, and from Moſes to him, Science and Magnificence had not been ſeen reunited in the ſame Perſon: He made a Collection [h] of all the Decrees, Statutes, Sayings of wiſe Men; all the Ordinances of the Council that had been made under the Miniſtry of the Prophets, or by Men of the great Synagogue, or laſtly, by the Tanaites we have been treating of. This Work was compleated towards the end of the ſecond Century of the Chriſtian Æra. It was received with the general applauſe, and all the Nation approved it by the order of Gamaliel, the Son of Juda his Succeſſor, in the Preſidentſhip of the Sanhedrim, and Headſhip of the Captivity. We will not repeat what we have already ſaid of him, it ſuffices to obſerve, that the Succeſſion of the Tanaites, to whom 'tis thought we are indebted for the principal deciſions of the Miſnah, ends here, to give place to another Order of Doctors, called Gemariſts, or Perfects; becauſe they perfected the Miſnah with their Commentaries.

[h] Ganz. Chronol. p. 108.

CHAP. VI.

The ſecond Order of Jewiſh Doctors.

The Gemariſts and Talmudiſts; the Archiperecites. The Antiquity of the Talmud Examin'd.

I. THE Extravagants of the Jews. II. The faults of the Miſnah. III. The Talmud of Jeruſalem. IV. The Talmud of Babylon. V. The Antiquity of the Talmud. VI. Father Morin's Arguments againſt it. VII. Juſtinian's Novel. VIII. Father Morin's Conjectures concerning it. IX. His Confutation. X. Voſſius's Explication rejected. XI. Of the Archiperecites. XII. The Jewiſh Notion of the Talmud. XIII. The Sentiments of ſome Chriſtians that commend it. XIV. The Apology that is made for the Talmud. XV. It is condemn'd to be burnt. XVI. The decrees of the Popes. XVII. Diviſions amongſt the Doctors. XVIII. An equitable judgment of the Talmud.

I. JUDA the Saint had no ſooner compleated the Miſnah, but a Rabbin, jealous of his glory, publiſh'd, before his Eyes, and in his Life time, quite contrary Traditions. A Collection [a] was made of them under the Title of Extravagants, and they were inſerted with the Miſnah, to compoſe one and the ſame Body of Law. Thus the Canon Law of the Romiſh and Jewiſh Church, was formed almoſt in the ſame mannner: Both of them are made up of Tradition, or what they call the Oral Law; both are full of Canons and Decrees of Fathers that have preceded them; both abound with inſignificant and ridiculous deciſions; both tend to raiſe the glory of their Church, and the Heads of it; both contain contrary deciſions, which leave the Mind in ſuſpence; both were hatch'd in the corruption of Ages, and the decay of the Church and Religion. In fine, the Romans have their Extravagants like the Jews, and the Jews have their Extravagants like the Romans.

II. Though Juda the Saint's Collection of Traditions, under the title of Miſnah, ſeem'd to be a compleat Work, yet two conſiderable faults were obſerved in it; one that it was very confuſed, the Author having reported the Opinions of different Doctors without naming them, and determining which of theſe Opinions deſerved the preference; much like St. Jerome's method in compoſing his Commentaries; which confirms the Conjecture, that Juda the Saint was only the Compiler of Writings before publiſh'd; and that inſtead of writing the Oral Law, he only heap'd together what was found in the more antient Chaldee Paraphraſes.

There was a ſecond fault which render'd this Body of Canon Law almoſt uſeleſs; viz. that it was too ſhort, and reſolved but a ſmall part of the doubtful caſes, and queſtions that began to be agitated among the Jews.

III. To remedy theſe diſorders, Jochanan, with the aſſiſtance of Rab, and Samuel, two Diſciples of Juda the Saint, wrote a Commentary upon their Maſter's Work, which is call'd the [b] Talmud of Jeruſalem: Whether it was compoſed in Judea for the Jews that remain'd in that Country, or was written in the common Language that was ſpoken there: The Jews are not agreed about the time that this part of the Gemara, which ſignifies Perfection, was made: Some believe, it was 200 Years after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; others reckon but an 150, and maintain that Rab and Samuel quitting Judea, went up to Babylon in the 219th of the Chriſtian Æra. However, theſe are the Heads of the ſecond order of Doctors, called Gemariſts, or rather Amorajim, becauſe they compoſed the Gemara; which work can't be dated till after the Reign of Dioclefian, ſince this Prince is mention'd in it. Father Morin even maintains, that there are barbarous words in it, as for inſtance Borgheni, to ſignify a Town, for which we are indebted to the Vandalls, or Goths, from whence he concludes, that that Work could not appear till the fifth Century.

IV. There was alſo a defect in the Gemara, or Jeruſalem Talmud; for it only contain'd the opinion of a ſmall number of Doctors: Beſides, it was written in a very barbarous Language, which was ſpoken in Judea, and was corrupted by the mixture of ſtrange Nations. For which reaſon the Amorajim, or Amoreans, that is, Commentators, [c] began a new Explication of Traditions. R. Aſa undertook this task: He kept a School at Sora near Babylon, where after he had taught forty Years, he produc'd his Commentary upon Juda's Miſnah: He did not finiſh it;

[a] R. Chuà was the Author of this Collection, which are call'd Baraiiethoth, from the Chaldee Word Bara, which ſignifies Extra. Some will have the word Barbarous to come from thence. Thus the Athenians call'd Strangers Bar, Bar, that is to ſay, Stranger. Bart. B. R. t. 3. [b] Talmud ſignifies Doctrine. [c] Ganz. Chron. p. 110.

but

but his Sons and Scholars put the laſt Hand to it. This is call'd the Gemara, or the Talmud of Babylon, which is preferr'd before that of Jeruſalem. 'Tis a large and vaſt Body, containing the Traditions, the Canon Law of the Jews, and all the queſtions relating to the Law. We ſhall ſee hereafter that the Jews have an infinite eſteem for it, and the Chriſtians very little.

V. 'Tis agreed by the generality of Jewiſh [d] and Chriſtian Doctors, that the Talmud was compleated in the 500, or 505th Year of the Chriſtian Æra; but Father Morin, ſtarting from the common Road, maintains that we ſhould be to blame to believe all that the Jews ſay of the Antiquity of their Books, of whoſe Origine they are ignorant themſelves. He aſſerts, that the Miſnah could not be compoſed till the Year 500, nor the Talmud of Babylon till 700, or thereabouts. We have no intereſt to contend for the Antiquity of Books ſtuffed with Traditions. And it muſt be alſo owned, that the time of concluding the Talmud can't be fix'd, but with a great deal of trouble, and uncertainty; becauſe it is a compilation made up of the deciſions of a multitude of Doctors, that have ſtudied caſes of Conſcience, whereunto new determinations might be added from time to time. There's no truſting in this matter, either to the Teſtimony of Jewiſh Authors, or the ſilence of the Chriſtians; becauſe the former have an intereſt to boaſt of the Antiquity of their Books, and are unexact in point of Chronology. 'Tis true, they aſſign a very plauſible Reaſon for Juda's deſign of Compiling the Traditions; which was, that ſeeing his Nation diſperſed in ſo many places, he was Apprehenſive that the Remembrance of the Oral Law might be loſt; and therefore they put in his Mouth theſe words of the Pſalm; Lord they have deſtroy'd thy Law. Moſt of the antient Traditions were ſo neglected, and particularly thoſe that had ceas'd in Practice, that he look'd upon the Law of God as deſtroyed, unleſs he reſtored it: But this is only a probability. Beſides, it does not prove that the Talmud was finiſh'd at that time; nay, we know the contrary; ſince the Gemariſts and Babyloniſh Jews have made ſome additions to it, that have ſwallowed up the firſt Work. The Chriſtians have ſeldom examin'd what occurr'd among the Jews, becauſe theſe made but a little Figure in the Empire: Their Converſion was rare and difficult, in order to it, their Language that was deem'd barbarous, was to be learn'd. 'Tis an amazing thing to conſider, that in ſuch multitudes of Prieſts and Biſhops, the Clergy conſiſted of for ſo many Ages together, there were ſo few that underſtood Hebrew, or were able to read the Old Teſtament, or the Commentaries of the Jews in the Original. Their time was ſpent in wrangling upon facts, or ſubtle queſtions, whilſt an uſeful or neceſſary Study was neglected. Teſtimonies are wanting on all Hands; how then can we be certain of Tradition, when we are deprived of their aſſiſtance? However, let us here offer what may be found out that is of greater certainty.

Juſtin Martyr, [e] who had lived at Samaria, upbraided Trypho the Jew, that his Maſters amuſed themſelves with teaching trifles, whilſt they neglected the eſſential parts of the Law. 'Tis ſuppoſed that the Trifles cenſured by this antient Father, were Traditions, and the Gloſſes added to them, which Application ſeems the juſter, as the ſame Character is at preſent diſcovered in moſt of the Explications of the Talmud; wherein commonly that which is eſſential to Piety and the Law, is neglected for the deciſion of infinite uſeleſs caſes of Conſcience: But as Juſtin Martyr does not ſay that theſe Trifles were written, it can't without raſhneſs be affirm'd, and eſpecially theſe words can't be applied to the Miſnah, ſince Juda the Saint had not as yet compoſed it, when Juſtin Martyr writ his Dialogue. Nay, it ſeems that the Traditions were not compiled into a Body in St. Auguſtin's time, ſince this Father mentions the Obſervances of the Jews, which paſſed from Mouth to Mouth and were unwritten. 'Tis ſaid that St. Auguſtin is the Commentator of Juſtin Martyr, who preceded him, and that he clearly explains what the other had left doubtful, ſince ſpeaking of the ſame Traditions, he affirms they were not written. But it ſuffices to obſerve, that St. Auguſtin writ in Africa, in his little Biſhoprick of Hippo, where the Jews were not known. He could not ſo much as read Hebrew, how then could he be acquainted with the Books of theſe Foreign Doctors? He ſpoke of unwritten Traditions, becauſe indeed this title is given to the Oral Law, which Moſes had intruſted to the Memory of his Succeſſors, which ſtill continued its name, after Juda the Saint and the Talmudiſts had publiſh'd their Compilation: And therefore, neither Juſtin Martyr, nor St. Auguſtin decide the preſent queſtion, and the one can't be conſider'd as the other's Commentator.

But St. Jerome is much more explicit, for he affirms, that there was in his Time a huge Volume of Traditions among the Jews; therefore they were then written: And though he does not determine it to be the Miſnah, or the Collection of Juda the Saint, with the Additions others had put to it, yet this is moſt probable; ſince there is no other Collection of Traditions aſſerted by the Jews.

VI. Nevertheleſs, this Opinion is oppoſed. Father Morin impugns it chiefly by the ſilence of Origen, and of St. Epiphanius, who have not mention'd this Jewiſh Code. St. Epiphanius, who was a Jew by Birth, ſhould have known it better than any Body, and yet he never cites it. R. Jochanan, Author of the Talmud of Jeruſalem, lived in St. Jerome's time, and kept his School in Judea. How is it, that this Father of the Church, who ſo carefully ſifted the Rabbinical Writings, never ſpeaks of the Talmud, that was juſt publiſh'd before his Eyes? How comes it that this Author, who ſought for Maſters in all places to remove his doubts, did not addreſs himſelf to him who taught in his Neighbourhood, and could have ſufficiently inform'd him, by producing either the Miſnah, or the addition he had made to it?

There is no ſhifting this off upon pretence of St. Jerome's negligence, who declares that he could not rummage over the Pharaſaical Traditions, ſince the bulk of the Volume did not permit it, and contain'd ſo many Fables and Obſcenities, that it was aſhame to mention them. It ſeems indeed that St. Jerome ſpeaks of a Volume of Jewiſh Traditions, the bulk whereof diſcouraged him; Dii craſſum & horribilem libellum! But it is a miſtake, the Volume he ſpeaks of was the Letter he was writing, which would have grown too prolix and tedious if he had copied the Fables and Obſcenities of the Jews; and though he ſhould point at a Volume of Jewiſh Traditions, it would be a Collection different from that of the Miſnah, ſince Origen, and St. Epiphanius knew not that Work which is attributed to Juda the Saint. This is the Explication Father Morin gives of St. Jerome's Words.

But his Argument is defective in all reſpects:

[d] Serarius de Rabbinis l. 1. c. 9. p. 251. Bartolocci Bibl. Rabbin t. 1. p. 488. t. 3. p. 359. Trigland. Diſſ. de Caraitis. p. 17, and 35. Hoornbeeck contra. Jud. l. 1. Morin. exerc. Bibl. l. 2. Ex. 6. c. 2, and 3. p. 294, &c. Hieron. Ep. 151. ad Algaſ. Q. 10. p. 1264.

[e] Juſtin. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 339.

For

for is the ſilence of Two Chriſtian Authors ſufficient to conclude that the Miſnah was not written? Don't we know how ignorant the Fathers were of the Jewiſh Books? Don't we know that it was a very hard thing to come at them, when the Manuſcripts were dear and ſcarce, and the Commerce of the Republick of Learning was ill eſtabliſh'd. St. Epiphanius, who is brought as an impenetrable Buckler, was ſo little acquainted with the Rites of his Nation, that he has ſaid many things of them which have been ſince cenſured as Faults, and Marks of his Ignorance: whether he was ill-inſtructed in his Religion, or had forgotten what he had learnt in his Childhood. Laſtly, His miſinterpreting St. Jerome, to maintain that he ſpoke of the Letter he was writing, in ſaying he would not rummage the Volume of Phariſaical Traditions. This ſhews that there was, at that Time, a Volume of written Traditions, and why ſhould we ſeek for any other than the Miſnah, ſince no body ever knew any other? At leaſt it were modeſt to determine nothing, and to leave us in the ſame uncertainty St. Jerome has done.

VII. A Novel of Juſtinian [aa] is cited, which deſerves to be explain'd. It was given by this Prince, upon occaſion of a Schiſm that aroſe in the Synagogues, about the Language, in which they were to read the Holy Scripture; ſome would have the Law only read in Hebrew, and others maintain'd that the Service was to be perform'd in a Tongue underſtood by the People. The Emperor underſtanding this Tumult, interpoſed his Authority, and did Three Things by his Novel: 1. He order'd the Scripture to be read in Hebrew, or Greek, or even Latin, if it was the Language of the Country; but in the uſe of Verſions, he would have that of the Septuagint preferr'd before all others: He alſo authoriſes that of Aquila. 2. He blames the Jews, for that giving themſelves up to fooliſh Interpretations, they had forſaken the right Way; and he complains of the Traditions or Additions they had made to the Law, which had been ſhewn him, and he forbids them to uſe that Second Edition, becauſe it did not belong to the Body of Scripture, nor had been given by the Prophets; but was only invented by Men having nothing divine in them, who ſpoke only of the Earth, that is, in a terreſtrial and humane manner. 3. For fear the Archiperecites ſhould fruſtrate the Effect of this Declaration, he forbids, under corporal Penalties, the Prieſts, who are elevated above others, and who are perhaps call'd Maſters, to uſe Anathema's, or other Cenſures, againſt thoſe that obeyed his Orders.

VIII. This Conſtitution made in the Year 548, has furniſh'd Father Morin with Two Arguments againſt the Antiquity of the Talmud and the Miſnah. The Jews, ſays he, occaſion'd this Ordinance of the Emperor, upon their Complaint, That new Traditions were introduc'd into their Church; mean while, theſe Traditions would have been very antient, if Juda the Saint had written them at the end of the Second Century: They could not have complain'd of them as a Novelty under Juſtinian, nor deſired a Remedy for ſo inveterate a Diſtemper: Moreover, the Archiperecites, whom the Emperor ſo ſeverely forbids to hinder the Execution of his Orders, were thoſe that read the Miſnah, divided into Sections, and who began the Section; for from thence the Name of the Office was derived, which Office being unknown before Juſtinian's Time, the Miſnah which gave the Name and Occaſion to that Function, muſt have been very novel.

IX. Father Morin has endeavour'd to draw too great an Advantage to his Opinion from this Novel: For the Diſpute the Jews had in hand was not new ſince the Emperor complains of its long continuance. Moreover, it did not turn upon the Traditions which ſome would introduce into the Synagogue, but upon the uſe of Verſions, which ſome would baniſh out of it. The Jews were far from complaining to the Emperor of the Introduction of Traditions, ſince they had them in the Days of our Saviour, and they could never be wean'd from their violent Fondneſs for them. 'Tis the Emperor that complains of theſe fooliſh Interpretations, and condemns the Second Edition, of Humane Traditions, becauſe they withdrew them from the knowledge of the Truth. 'Tis building therefore upon a Foundation evidently falſe, to draw an Argument againſt the Antiquity of the Miſnah, from the Jews Complaint againſt Traditions; for this was not the Queſtion among them, and it was doubtleſs the Chriſtians, who upon occaſion of the Diſpute that aroſe in the Synagogue, produced the fooliſh Interpretations, and Humane Traditions to the Emperor, to oblige him to condemn them, as he did: On the contrary, it appears by this Conſtitution of Juſtinian, that there was already a Body of Traditions added to the Law; but they did not complain that this was a new Cuſtom.

X. Voſſius [a] fondly conceited with the Septuagint Verſion, maintains that Juſtinian does not condemn here the Traditions of the Jews, but the Second Edition of Aquila, as contrary to the Chriſtians. And indeed the Fathers have ſo often exclaim'd againſt the Verſion of this Jew, a Chriſtian Proſelyte, and after an Apoſtate, that it would be ſtrange for Juſtinian to approve it. St. Ireneus complains, that he had robb'd us of the famous Paſſage of Iſaiah, where the Prophet foretels that a Virgin ſhall bring forth, by putting a [b] young Woman for the Virgin. St. Jerom abſolutely rejected this Verſion, as compoſed by a Man that loved Cavilling, and hunted after Etymologies; and the modern Criticks, [c] who judge of it by ſome Fragments that have been collected, maintain that this Interpreter has been partial to his Nation, and undertook this Taſk only to gratifie them, when he return'd to their Church. All this does not agree with the Approbation Juſtinian gave it in his Novel.

Notwithſtanding all theſe Reflexions, and the Conjecture of the learned Voſſius, we may perſevere in the common Sentiment; for 1. Aquila is ſpoken of, without knowing his Country or Religion. The Antients knew him not much better than we. St. Epiphanius, who has made him the Emperor Adrian's Father-in-Law, and Governour of a Town which he cauſed to be built in Judea, is evidently miſtaken. Neither is there any more proof of his Converſion made by the Miracles of the Chriſtians, which were then grown very rare, than of his return to Judaiſm, cauſed by his love for Aſtrology, and the Cenſures the Church had inflicted on him for his application to that Study. 2. St. Jerom condemned [d] this Verſion with the raſhneſs he was ſo accuſtomed to in his Judgments; but retracting afterwards, he confeſſes that he eſteem'd it, as finding a great many things in it which ſtrengthned the Chriſtian Religion; and being perfectly cured of his Prejudice, he praiſed Aquila as the exacteſt of all the Interpreters. 3. Juſtinian had the ſame Notion of it, and Voſſius, who imputes another to him, is forced to change the ſignification of Words; for that of Novel ſignifies Tradition. [e] But farther, he openly contradicts this Prince, who cenſures the Traditions of the Jews, as not coming from the Prophets, but from certain Doctors, who had no Aſſiſtances from God: To go about to apply theſe Words to Aquila's Verſion, rather than to Traditions, is to take great Pains to be deceived, and to darken the cleareſt Day.

[aa] Juſtin Authenticor. collat. 9 Tit. 28. n. 146. p. 613. [a] Iſaac Voſſ. Liber Obſ. Reſp. ad Simon. p. 351. interprete Διασκευάσιν, Secundam Editionem. [b] Νεανίς. [c] Vide Simon. Hiſt. Critique. Cave Hiſt. Lit. [d] Hieron ap. ad Pammach. Id. Q. 2. ad Damaſc. Id. Ep. ad Marcell.

XI. The Name of Archiperecites, which is found in Juſtinian's Novel, has given occaſion to many Conjectures: One will have it to be the Maſter of a Synagogue, where a part of the Nation was gather'd together, which eſcaped from the Perſecution and Miſeries it ſuffer'd almoſt every where. Another more [f] judicious, and much profounder in theſe Matters, makes them the Heads of the Academies, or the Synagogue. He cites for a proof the Action of the Prince of the Captivity, who removed to a City where Chanina taught, in order to ſet up a new School. The Word uſed in the Chronicle of the Jews, where this Fact is related, is the ſame Hebrew Word that is found in Juſtinian's Novel, whence 'tis eaſy to conclude, that it ſignifies a School, and that the Archiperecites Juſtinian ſpeaks of, were Doctors of the Law: There is no need then of going to the Sections of the Miſnah to find the Origine of this Word and Office, as if there was a particular Function eſtabliſh'd to explain theſe Sections. But without ſeeking for new Conjectures, may we not here obſerve Three Things. 1. That the Law being divided into many Sections, call'd Paraches, the Heads of the Synagogues that preach'd, and preſided over its Explication, might be call'd Archiperecites, without alluſion to the Talmud, or the Miſnah divided into Sections. This Explication agrees with Juſtinian's Paraphraſe, who explains this Word by that of Maſter. This was the Title given to Jeſus Chriſt, when he was addreſs'd to, to explain any obſcure place of the Law, from whence I conclude that this was no new Office, tho' the Name of it be not known. Nor does it follow that it was new, becauſe Juſtinian is the firſt that uſed the Word, ſince there has been no great uſe made of it ever ſince this Emperor inſerted it into his Laws. 'Tis no wonder that the Writers that preceded Juſtinian, have alſo neglected this Term, of which the Greeks furniſh'd one half, and the Jews contributed the other. Laſtly, Tho' it were granted Father Morin, that this Office was erected to honour ſome Perſons, in chuſing them to explain the Sections, this would agree with the Talmud, as well as the Miſnah, ſince that is divided into 524 Sections. We can therefore thence draw no proof againſt the Antiquity of theſe Two Works, about whoſe Original it is hard to make any ſolid Conjectures.

XII. Four different Judgments have been made concerning the Talmud, that is, concerning the Body of the Canon Law and Tradition. The Jews equal it with the Law of God. Some Chriſtians value it exceſſively; a Third Sort condemn it to the Flames as a deteſtable Book, and the laſt obſerve a juſt Medium betwixt all theſe Sentiments. Let us give a general Idea of them all.

The Jews are convinc'd, that the Talmudiſts were never inſpired with the Holy Ghoſt, attributing that Inſpiration only to the Prophets. Notwithſtanding which, they prefer the Talmud before the Holy Scripture: For they compare the Scripture to Water, and Tradition to excellent Wine; the Law is the Salt; the Miſnah is the Pepper, and the Talmud are precious Spices. They boldly maintain, That he that ſins againſt Moſes may be forgiven, but that he who contradicts the Doctors deſerves death. And therefore they inflict a naſty and ſtinking Puniſhment on [g] thoſe who don't obſerve them. They decide Queſtions and Caſes of Conſcience, as by a Sovereign Law; in the mean time they own that this Law is not ſufficient, and therefore often add new Comments to it, in which they enter into more preciſe Particularities, and often make new Deciſions: Nay, 'tis next to an impoſſibility that they ſhould do otherwiſe, ſince the Talmudick Definitions, which are ſhort, are often obſcure, and extend not to all Caſes. But when the Talmud is clear, they follow it exactly.

Nevertheleſs it ſwarms with a world of Things that might leſſen the profound Veneration it has obtain'd for ſo many Ages, if it were read with Attention, and without prejudice. 'Tis the Jews Misfortune to approach this Book with a blind ſubmiſſion to whatever it contains: They form their Judgment upon this Work, and are uſed to think nothing fine but what is conformable to the Talmud; whereas if they examin'd it as a Compilation of different Authors, who might be miſtaken, who have ſometimes had a lamentable Judgment in the choice of the Subjects they have handled, and who might be ignorant, they would obſerve One hundred Things that vilifie their Religion, inſtead of raiſing its Glory.

We are told there, That God, to paſs the Time, before the creation of the Univerſe, when he was alone, buſied himſelf with building diverſe Worlds, which he immediately deſtroyed, till by different Eſſays, he had learnt to make One ſo perfect as ours. They relate the Trick which a Rabbin put upon God and the Devil; for he entreated the Devil to carry him to Heaven-Gate, that having ſeen the Happineſs of the Saints, he might die with more Tranquillity. The Devil granted the Rabbin's Requeſt, who ſeeing the Gate of Heaven open, threw himſelf headlong in, ſwearing by the Great God, that he would never come out again: God, who would not ſuffer him to be guilty of a Perjury, was obliged to leave him there, whilſt the Devil being trick'd, ſlunk away in great Confuſion: Adam here is not only made an Hermaphrodite, but it is maintain'd, that having try'd to ſatisfie his Paſſion with all the Animals of the Earth, he found none but Eve that could content him. They introduce Two Women going to diſpute in the Synagogues, about the uſe an Husband might make of them: And the Rabbins clearly determine, that an Husband may innocently do what he has a mind to, becauſe a Man who buys a Fiſh, may eat the Head or the Tail, as he likes beſt. There are ſenſible Contradictions found in it, and inſtead of being at the Pains to remove them, they introduce a miraculous Voice from Heaven, crying, that One and the Other, tho' directly oppoſite, proceed from Heaven. The Method of Treatment they allow the Chriſtians, is harſh; for they think it lawful to rob them of their Goods; conſidering them as brute Beaſts; to puſh them down a Precipice, when they are ſeen upon the Brink, and to make ſome terrible Impreſcations againſt them every Morning. Tho' the hatred and deſire of Revenge, theſe Maſters are blinded with, had dictated theſe Leſſons, yet 'tis ſtrange there ſhould be inſerted in a Summary of Religion, ſuch Laws and Precepts as are evidently oppoſite to Charity.

The Doctors that have made theſe Collections of Traditions, taking advantage of the Ignorance of their Nation, have thrown upon the Paper whatever came into their Heads, without troubling them[e] Δευτερώσεις. [f] Petit Var. Lect. l. 2. c. 10. in Critic. Vitringa de Synag. l. 3. c. 7. p. 701. Perakahſchola. [g] Damnantur in Stercore Bullienti.

ſelves

ſelves with reconciling their Conjectures with foreign Hiſtory, to which they were utterly Strangers.

The little Story of Cæſar complaining to Gamaliel, that God was a Robber, is ridiculous enough; but it ought to have a place in this Collection. Cæſar ask'd Gamaliel why God had ſtollen a Rib from Adam? The Daughter anſwer'd, inſtead of her Father, that Robbers came the Night before to her Houſe, and had left a Golden Veſſel inſtead of an earthen One, which they took away, and that ſhe did not complain of them. The Application of the Story was eaſie: God gave an Handmaid to Adam inſtead of a Rib; the Change was advantageous, and Cæſar approved of it; but yet he cenſured God for doing it clandeſtinely, whilſt Adam ſlept. The Daughter ſtill ingenious, order'd a Piece of Fleſh to be brought her, that was baked in the Aſhes, and then preſents it to the Emperor, who refuſes to eat it. This goes againſt my Stomach, ſays [h] Cæſar. Very well, replied the Damſel, Eve would have gone againſt the Stomach of the Firſt Man, if God had given her to him groſly, without Art, after having made her before his Eyes. What Trifles are here!

XIII. And yet there are ſome Chriſtans, who in imitation of the Jews, regard the Talmud as an abundant Mine from which we may be furniſh'd with infinite Treaſures. They imagine that 'tis only labour that diſcourages Men from ſeeking theſe Treaſures, and inriching themſelves. They make ſad Complaints of the Contempt the Rabbins are in: They [i] make all ſorts of Efforts, not only to juſtifie them, but to improve what they ſay: They admire their Sentences; they find in their Rites a thouſand things which relate to the Chriſtan Religion, and unfold its Myſteries. It would ſeem that Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles could have no Senſe, but by copying the Rabbins that came after them. At leaſt 'tis in imitation of the Jews that this Bleſſed Redeemer has made ſo great an uſe of the metaphorical Style; 'tis from them alſo he has borrow'd the Parables of Lazarus, the fooliſh Virgins, and the Labourers ſent into the Vineyard, which contain ſuch excellent Inſtructions, for theſe are ſtill found in the Talmud. They affirm that moſt of the Truths of the Chriſtian Religion are to be found here included in Parables, that are eaſily explain'd. An Italian Author aſſerts, that the Talmud is an Abridgment of the Old and New Law; and that the Title of Talmud was given it, becauſe it includes all manner of Science. Talmud altro non vuole dir che dottrina perche contiene la dottrina tutta; ſi puo dire della vecchia Legge & della nuova. This Reaſoning may proceed from Two Motives. Self-Love commonly makes the Doctors ſpeak; they love to recommend themſelves by ſomething or other, and when once they have dipt into this Study, without conſidering the uſe that may be made of it; they cry up the Uſefulneſs of it out of Intereſt; a little Gold is the more eſteem'd for the adheſions of a great deal of Droſs, becauſe it coſts much Time to find it out. They cry out upon Negligence, and accuſe the Lazineſs of thoſe who will not be at the ſame Pains, nor follow the Road that they have taken. Beſides, People are eaſily opinionated of the Books they read. How many have been made Properties to the School-Divinity, which taught nothing but barbarous Terms, inſtead of the ſolid Truths we ought to ſeek. They imagine that the Study which coſts them ſo much Labour and Pains, can't be good for nothing; and thus out of Intereſt or Prejudice, they immoderately extol that which deſerves no praiſe at all.

Is it not ridiculous to make Jeſus Chriſt borrow his Parables and Lectures from the Talmudiſts, who did not live till 300 or 400 Years after him? What then, could neither our Lord nor his Apoſtles imagine any thing, but what was dictated to them by the Jews? Why muſt not the Talmudiſts that came after the Son of God, have been his Copiers, leaving the Glory of the Invention to him, as belonged to him by the order of Time? Moſt of the Parables found in the Talmud, were different from thoſe of the Goſpel, and have almoſt ever a different Drift. Is not that of the Labourers coming late into the Vineyard, cloath'd with ridiculous Circumſtances, and applied to R. Bon, who had labour'd more upon the Law in 28 Years, than another had done in an hundred? Abundance of Expreſſions and Thoughts have been gather'd from the Greeks, that correſpond with thoſe of the Goſpel: Will it be ſaid therefore that Jeſus Chriſt has copied their Writings? This might be ſaid with more probability, ſince theſe Authors had liv'd and publiſh'd their Writings before him: But yet it would be a manifeſt Falſhood. It is ſaid that theſe Parables were already invented, and were current among the Jews, before our Saviour taught: But whence do they know this? They muſt divine it, in order to make the Phariſees ſo many Original Doctors, and Jeſus Chriſt their Tranſcriber, who borrowed from them whatever they had more fine and delicate. Jeſus Chriſt followed his own Ideas, and utter'd his own Conceptions; but it muſt be own'd, that he had ſuch as were common to all Nations, and that many Men ſay the ſame thing without knowing one another, or reading each others Works. The moſt advantageous thing that can be ſaid for the Talmudiſts, is, that they have made Compariſons like thoſe of Jeſus Chriſt; But the Application which the Son of God made of them, and the Leſſons he drew from them, are always good and ſanctifying, whereas the Application of the other is generally childiſh and ridiculous.

XIV. Thoſe that are leſs opinionated endeavour to juſtifie the Talmud. They ſay [k] eſpecially Two Things: One, That the Rabbins fearing the Enemies of their Religion, who had the upper-hand, ſhould take from them the Traditions of their Fathers, thought it neceſſary to conceal themſelves in a myſtical Language, and veil the Truth under a Mask of Error, that the moſt exact Enquirers finding ſo many Extravagancies in theſe Works, might have nothing but Contempt for their Books, and ſo leave them in the quiet poſſeſſion of their Father's Labours. But this Subterfuge is invented ex poſt facto, for the Traditions began long before the Chriſtians were in a Capacity of taking away their Books. The Miſnah, which abounds with Errors and Fables, was made in the 2d Century; and the Authors of theſe Collections, trace the Origine of their Stories up to Eſdras and Moſes, from whom this Oral Tradition ought to deſcend; and the Fables, the Talmud is full of, were ſo far from guarding this Book from the Violence of the Chriſtians, that they occaſion'd Juſtinian's Conſtitution, that permitted the Jews to read the Bible in Greek, and forbad them the reading of Traditions, becauſe this Book abounded with Fictions purely of Man's Invention.

'Tis added, that the Myſteries are not ſufficiently attended to, which the Talmudiſts have lock'd up under metaphorical Expreſſions and Emblems, which are of frequent and eaſy Uſe to the Eaſtern People; when, for example they aſſert, that there is a Candle lighted upon the Bellies of all Women with Child, to enlighten the Child in the Womb, which Candle goes out when it comes into the World. There is a Philoſophical Truth conceal'd under this Emblem. It opens to us a Principle of the new Philoſophy; that the Eſſence of the Soul conſiſts in Thought; that it thinks even in its Mother's Belly, where it is united to the Body; but as it is born, all the luminous Ideas the Soul had are Eclipſed, and their remembrance with difficulty recalled.

[h] Sixtus Senens. Bibl. l. 2. p. 122. Galatin. de Arcanis Cath. Ver. l. 1. c. 7. Morin. Exerc. Bibli. l. 2. Ex. 5. c. 2. Sed præcipue Bartolocci Bibl. Rabbinica, t. 3. p. 359, ad 662. [i] Lightfoot, in Mat. 20. p. 405. Reland. Analecta Rabbinica Ultraject. 1702. Præf. Robert Seringhamius Præf. in Cod. Joma Thalm. [k] Adriani Relandi Analecta Rabbinica Ultraject. 1702. Præf. Galatin de Arcanis Cath. Ver. l. 1. c. 7.

When they aſſert that God in forming the Univerſe, left an Hole on the North-ſide, which he could never ſhut, and that he comforted himſelf with ſaying, that if ever any one offered to maintain that he himſelf was God, he would oblige him to cloſe that aperture, ſetting him that piece of work to do, as a teſt of his Power and Deity: We muſt not imagine that they accuſe God of Weakneſs and Impotence; They rather mean, ſays a Chriſtian Author, to furniſh us with a proof of the Meſſiah's Divinity: For the Hole in the North ſignifies Idolatry. Evil comes from the North, and it requires a God to aboliſh it. This is what Jeſus Chriſt has done, and he has proved his Divinity by it. Nor muſt we any more believe that they make God material, when they ſay he weeps over the ruine of Jeruſalem: That he roars like a Lion, that he bows down his Head when he is pray'd to, and that he loads his Hands with the Thephilim; for on the contrary 'tis one of their thirteen [a] Articles of Faith related by Maimonides and Manaſſah, that God is not a Body, nor is he united to Matter. They only follow the Scripture Style, which aſcribes Hands and Feet to God.

Laſtly, 'tis owned, that there are great Hyperboles in the Jewiſh Writings; but that their bombaſt Style ought not to be taken litterally, ſince that is not their intention. They mean only to deſcribe a Man exceſſively Rich, when they ſay Eleaſar poſſeſs'd a thouſand Cities, and that in one of them there were an hundred and fourſcore thouſand Markets, purely for the ſale of a certain Sweet meat. Peter, King of Arragon, asking a Jewiſh Doctor concerning what is read in the Talmud, that there was formerly a Frog as large as ſix Houſes, which was ſwallowed up by a Serpent; and the Serpent was ſwallowed by a Raven, who growing neither bigger nor fuller than before he had eaten, flew upon a Tree. The Doctor anſwered, that the Ancients were uſed to teach the People with the ſound of Inſtruments, which made their Leſſons go down the pleaſanter; but that cuſtom being ceas'd, they had taken the method of mixing Stories with their inſtructions, and concealing ſublime Truths under Fables [b] which diverted and inſtructed at the ſame time. In which myſtical Senſe the Frog, who by his obſtreperous croakings, preaches loudly the glory of God, is the Image of our Knowledge of Nature, which is compoſed of ſixty Parts, or different Houſes: Above that knowledge of the Earth, is that of Aſtronomy more noble and excellent, repreſented by the Serpent: And laſtly, the Raven is the Symbol of Divinity, and of the Knowledge of God, which flies to the very top of the Tree. It will be ſtill ask'd, whether ſo much pains was to be taken, and ſo many ſtrange Ideas borrowed, and ſo little agreeing to the ſubject, to ſay a thing that might have been compriz'd in three Words. Maimonides had reaſon to diſtinguiſh three Orders of Perſons that ſtudied theſe Parables: Some taking them literally, make their Doctors guilty of the greateſt Abſurdities, and produce the moſt fabulous Prodigies, for ſo many Truths. Others ingratefully and haughtily charge theſe Parables to the Rabbins account, and laugh at them. The third ſort ſeek a miſtical ſenſe in them. But ſhould he not have added a fourth order, wiſer than all the foregoing, that take not the pains either to read or unravel all theſe myſtical ſenſes.

XV. A third ſort compoſed of Chriſtians as the preceding, are ſo far from approving the Talmud, as to ſentence it to the Fire, and fancy that God approves ſo ſacred a Perſecution, with extraordinary Miracles. 'Tis ſaid that in St. Lewis's time [c] theſe Books were all commanded to be burnt in the Wood of Vincennes; and that an Archbiſhop oppoſing the Execution with an inſignificant Decree, it was publiſhed that he had been bribed, and that the very moment the Jews celebrated a Feaſt in gratitude for their ſaving of their Books, the Archbiſhop died, tormented with the pains of a violent Cholick. But St. Lewis was perſuaded that this was a Miracle; which was no hard matter to do, for he was a Votary, and with this prejudice he cauſed all the Hebrew Volumes that could be found to be caſt into the Fire, and they were burnt to Aſhes.

XVI. The Popes have often condemned theſe Books. 'Tis true, Clement V. Authorized by the Council of Vienna [d] order'd two Profeſſors to be eſtabliſh'd in all the Univerſities, as that of Paris, and all places where the Court of Rome makes its Reſidence, to teach Hebrew, and tranſlate the Books of theſe Languages into Latin: And the Council of Baſil [e] having forbidden the Jews the retaining by way of Pawn or loan the Calices and conſecrated Veſſels of the Chriſtians, confirm'd Clement's Bull, and appointed the eſtabliſhment of ſome Profeſſors to read and confute the Books of the Jews, and by that means to endeavour their Converſion. But they withſtood the Ordinances of a Pope and Council. They cavilled about the terms of Clement V. as if he had only permitted the Tranſlation of Grammars, which were what he call'd, the Books of theſe Languages [f]. John XXII. took a contrary method to that of his Predeceſſor: For he ſent a Brief [g] to the Biſhop of Bourges, and his Suffragans, wherein he exhorted them to oppoſe the Jewiſh Superſtitions, and to burn all [h] the Copies of the Talmud, they could find. Benedict XIII. the Antipope, confirm'd the Bulls [i] of Gregory IX. and Innocent IV. who had before ſentenced all thoſe Books to be Burnt. Laſtly, Julius III. cauſed a moſt exact ſearch to be made after all theſe Books, and a prodigious number of them were burnt.

XVII. There was a diviſion about this matter in the beginning of the ſixteenth Century. Reuchlin diſtinguiſh'd betwixt the Books of the Jews, ſome of which were uſeful, and others pernicious, becauſe they were full of Blaſphemies againſt Jeſus Chriſt. Theſe laſt he would have burnt, and the firſt ſaved, but he was very near being cruſh'd with the number and violence of his Enemies. Some People procured reſpect from the populace, under the pretence of a flaming Zeal againſt the Synagogue and its Writings; who at the ſame time enrich'd themſelves by ſelling again thoſe very Books they had cauſed to be condemn'd to the Flames; and cruelly

[a] Galatin. Arcan. l. 1. c. 7. p. 25. Artic. Fid. 111. apud Hornbeeck contra Jud. l. 1. c. 3. p. 11. [b] Solomon filii Virgæ Hiſtor. Judaica à Gentio. p. 209. [c] Ann. 1239. Serrarius Rabbin l. 1. c. 33. p. 291. [d] Concil. Vien. Ann. 1313. apud Bzov. n. 1. p. 201. [e] Conſil. Baſil. Seſs. 19. a. 5. p. 547. [f] Odoric. Rainal. An. 1320. n. 20. [g] Ann. 1230. [h] Ann. 1244. [i] Benedicta Bulla. M. S. apud Barcol. B. R. t. 111. p. 731.

perſecuted

perſecuted Reuchlin who defended them. Sixtus of Sienna afterwards call'd [k] the Talmud an Hydra, becauſe he ſaw it ſpring up again from all parts, when he thought he had deſtroy'd it. He oppoſed the Conſtitution of Clement V. as if it were impoſſible for him to have Authorized the Tranſlation of Hebrew Books. In fine, Arm'd with the Authority of Julius III. and Paul IV. he declared War with theſe Books; and underſtanding that they were ſheltered at Cremona, he went thither to ſearch for them, which he did ſo exactly, that he boaſted he had burnt an hundred and forty four thouſand Volumes in that one City. It were much better if he had ſet about the expoſing the Errors of this Book, than burning it; which is what Alphonſus choſe to do, a Jew of the twelfth Century who embraced Chriſtianity. Jerome de St. Foi, Phyſitian to Benedict the XIII[th], has alſo made a Catalogue of the Errors included in the Talmud; but the exacteſt of all is that which Bartolocci (who had made the Talmud and Rabbinical Works his chiefeſt Study) has inſerted in his Rabbinical Bibliotheque, extremely uſeful to thoſe who will treat of theſe matters.

XVIII. And indeed People are to blame to make ſuch a Bug-bear of the Talmud, as if it were dangerous. I confeſs it grates a Man and makes his Blood riſe, to read the ſeveral blaſphemies againſt Jeſus Chriſt, that are diſperſed in the Jewiſh Books; but in reality, if theſe impieties ſcandalize, they ſtagger no Body's Faith; and the reading of the Talmud, inſtead of reconciling the Chriſtians to favourable thoughts of Judaiſm, would make them abhor it. We may compare the Readers of the Talmud with the Travellers to Rome. They ſee there ſuch groſs Superſtitions, and ſuch a multitude of ſilly Ceremonies, and comical Sights, tho' Religious ones, wherewith they amuſe the People, that they are diſguſted with a Religion they went to ſeek in its Fountain, as if it was purer and finer there. They that read the Talmud, and the other ſo much applauded Books, are likewiſe as ſtrangely ſurpriz'd, to find in them ſuch multitudes of childiſh and uſeleſs things; and inſtead of preſerving that mighty admiration they had received for them, they find it inſenſibly languiſh and die away. The firſt Volume of the Miſnah is more proper for Gardiners and Tillagers than Divines, ſince it lays down all the Rules relating to Seeds, and the different mixtures that may be made of them in a Field. There are in the others many caſes of Conſcience, the deciſion whereof is uſeleſs. On the other hand we don't deny but there are a great many things, the knowledge whereof is abſolutely neceſſary to the Jews, and the Doctors that teach it. The Knowledge of it likewiſe is Advantageous to the Chriſtians, as they may draw from it great helps to the underſtanding the Holy Scripture and the Rites of Moſes, which were obſerved under the Old Teſtament. But that we may have a clearer Idea of it, we deſign the following Chapter to the Diſcuſſion of theſe two things: And without entering into too tedious particularities, we will obſerve the true Character of the Talmudiſts, and the uſe that may be made of their Works.

[k] Sixt. Sen. Bib. l. 11. p. 120.

CHAP. VII.

A Judgment concerning the Talmud, and the Doctors that have explain'd it.

The Ignorance of the Talmudiſts in matters of Religion, and in prophane Hiſtory. A Compariſon of their Faults, with thoſe of many Chriſtian Authors.

I. THE Study of Hebrew neceſſary. II. Explications of Scripture taken from the Jews. III. The abuſe that is made of them. IV. The lxviii[th] Pſalm ill explain'd. V. The Talmud juſtified by the Fathers. VI. By the modern Interpreters. VII. The Talmudiſts implicitly Copied. VIII. A little Worm that built the Temple. IX. The Knowledge of the Rites uſeful. X. The exceſs that is run into in this reſpect, proved by Examples. XI. The exceſs of the Chriſtians. XII. The faults of the Jewiſh Hiſtorians. XIII. The exceſſive age of Phineas. XIV. Whether Ariſtotle was a Jew. XV. A fabulous deſcription of Rome. XVI. Of Italy peopled by Eſau, XVII. Whether the Emperor Nero was a Jew. XVIII. The Death of Titus. XIX. Whether Metaphors and Hyperboles can be juſtified. XX. Miracles. XXI. Scruples. XXII. Blaſphemies.

I. MY firſt Reflection is upon the uſeleſs pains the Inquiſition takes to deſtroy the Books of the Jews. I know not why this Tribunal makes a monſter of the Talmud; for can the Fire annihilate Books that are reprinted the next Moment? were all the Copies of the Weſt conſumed, there are others in the Eaſt ſufficient to repair their loſs. Beſides, the uſe of the Hebrew Tongue ought not to be baniſh'd, as being neceſſary to the underſtanding of the Scriptures. Thoſe that would have us quit the Originals to follow blindly a barbarous verſion faulty all over, would take pleaſure to ſee the ignorance of the corrupt and groſs Ages revive: But we ought not to countenance either the negligence of Divines, or the contempt they have of Languages, which they don't underſtand. As there are but few Writers that were inſpired, we can get but a ſlight tincture of the Holy Tongue by reading them. By turning over other Jewiſh Writings, and comparing them with the ſacred Books, we more eaſily and certainly diſcover the Genius of the Language, and the Idiotiſms of Speech which are permanent in a Nation. We grow accuſtomed to the Genius of the Nation and its Style, which is always Figurative. If ſome controvertiſts had read the Writings of the Jews, they could not have waſted ſo much time in giving Rules to Metaphors, and making ſuch Efforts to confine the Uſe of them in ſo very ſtrait bounds. One Jewiſh Book alone would have taught them that it is the Style and Genius of the Orientals, who run into exceſs in that reſpect, by uſing commonly very harſh Metaphors, and imploying this Figure continually.

We muſt only remember one thing, which the Criticks forget; which is, that the firſt Book of the Tanaites having not been compoſed till two hundred Years after Jeſus Chriſt, and the Talmud not compleated till five or ſix hundred Years after him; we muſt not imagine that certain Expreſſions of our Lord and his Apoſtles are borrowed from the Talmud, or that ſome Greek words ought to have ſuch a ſignification, becauſe the like is found among the Talmudiſts. Let them conſult and ſtudy them, if they pleaſe, to diſcover the Genius of the Language: But

But let them not draw Conſequences from Words they have implyed ſo long after Jeſus Chriſt, and in a corrupt Age, to give Scripture-Paſſages, novel, uncommon, and forced Explications. One would think, in reading ſome Commentators, that Jeſus Chriſt and his Diſciples, had no other deſign than to make ſome perpetual Alluſions to the Sentences or Expreſſions of the Talmud; which is ridiculous.

In order to give an Idea of the Talmud, and the uſe that may be made of it, we muſt diſtinguiſh Seven Things: The Explications of Scripture: The Rites that have ſome Analogy to thoſe of the Chriſtians: The Hiſtorical Facts they relate: The Miracles they attribute to their Doctors: The Diſcuſſion of Caſes of Conſcience: The Errors they teach: And the Opinion they have of the Chriſtians.

II. We commonly find in it ſome uſeful Explications; and if they don't diſcover the true Senſe of a Paſſage, at leaſt they may ſerve to illuſtrate it. But it muſt be own'd, that they are often abuſed to a wrong purpoſe. The Miſnah [a] forbids, for inſtance, to go up to the Temple with a Staff, Shoes, and Purſe, for fear a Man ſhould ſeem armed, or Maſter of the Place, and deſigning to traffick there. 'Tis aſſerted that Jeſus Chriſt had the ſame view, when he forbad his Diſciples [b] to carry either Scrip, or Shoes, or Staves, in order to teach them to avoid all Pride, and Avarice, and Violence in their Miniſtry. But why muſt Jeſus Chriſt be made a Plagiary of the Miſnah? This Precept might be known in the Time of our Lord; but his Intention was rather to oblige his Diſciples to depend upon his Providence, and wait for the Fruit of their Labours from it: For the Labourer is worthy of his hire.

A learned Man, [c] conceited with the Works of Maimonides, of which he had the Manuſcript, pretends to have diſcovered in them the Explication of theſe Words of our Saviour, who declares, that him the Father hath ſeal'd; becauſe this famous Commentator of the Miſnah, relates, that the Angels weigh the Sins of Men on the Day of their Death, or every firſt Day of the Year; and if they be found good, they ſeal them for Life; and if they be found impenitent Sinners, they ſeal them for Death; and if the Judgment be dubious, they refer them to the Day of Propitiations, whereon their Repentance is examin'd. But I queſtion whether an Author of the Twelfth Century ought to be heard with ſo much Veneration, concerning what was done in our Saviour's Time. We ſee no body but himſelf who has ſpoken of this Cuſtom of ſealing Men; at leaſt the Rite does not appear in all the Jewiſh Antiquity: How then could Jeſus Chriſt allude to it? Is it not more natural and ſimple, to make him refer to Kings, and Men that put their Seals and Arms on the precious Veſſels that belong to them? 'Tis with better Succeſs maintain'd, that theſe Words of St. Paul to the Epheſians, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and Chriſt ſhall give thee light, are not borrow'd from the Prophet Eſaiah, or the Apoclypſe, as has been thought, but from the Proclamation that was made every firſt Day of the Year at Jeruſalem, with the Sound of the Trumpet. Awake thou that ſleepeſt, which ſignified the Obligation to renounce their Sins, and return to God by a ſincere Repentance. At leaſt, this may ſerve to illuſtrate the Apoſtle's Words.

III. But how many violent and forc'd Explications are there in the Talmud, and its Commentators: They aſſert that there was not one ſingle Man that had praiſed God from the beginning of the World to the Time of Leah, becauſe upon her delivery of her Son Juda, ſhe ſaid, [d] now will I praiſe the Lord. The Word Jadah, which ſignifies to praiſe, not being found before in the Scripture, all the Saints in the old World are abuſed, by ſaying that they never thought of praiſing God. Juda condemning his Daughter-in-Law to Death, becauſe ſhe was found with Child: They explain this by the Law which order'd the Prieſt's Daughter to be burnt, when ſhe was guilty of Fornications, and thence conclude, that Thamar was the Daughter of a Prieſt. The Prieſt is ſought for, as if he could be her Father, and they boldly father her upon Melchiſedec, as if the difference of Times was not a manifeſt Obſtacle to this Conjecture, tho' it ſhould not be true, that Thamar was a Stranger to the Covenant. If David [e] prays God to preſerve his Soul, for he is holy, or of the number of the merciful, they find here an oppoſition betwixt this Prince and other Kings, who muſter'd up a great Court, and thought of nothing but of diſplaying their own Glory, whilſt he was taken up in examining the Monthly-Courſes and Flowers of Women, to try whether they were pure, and might be reſtored to their Husbands, according to the Law. If Solomon adviſes, Prepare thy work without, and make it fit for thy ſelf in the field, and afterwards build thine houſe. [f] They find here the Scripture, the Miſnah, and the Talmud. To prepare the Work without, is the Scripture; the fitting it in the Fields, was the making the Miſnah, and the building the Houſe, was the accompliſhing the Talmud.

IV. I will produce no more of theſe Explications, which might be multiplied ad infinitum. Nor ſhall I mention the violence they offer to certain Paſſages of the Prophets, where they think they ſee ſomething relating to Jeſus Chriſt. Peter the Venerable, [g] long ſince upbraided them with their way of perverting that Oracle of David, which ſo expreſly repreſents the Aſcenſion of the Son of God: Thou haſt aſcended on high, thou haſt led captivity captive: thou haſt received gifts for men; yea for the rebellious alſo, that the Lord God might dwell among them. They ſuppoſe that David ſpeaks of Moſes, who aſcended to Heaven by the order of God; but the Angels, who were jealous of the Honour done him, deſign'd to kill him; God, who was aware of it, complain'd of this Inſurrection, and upon the Angels Remonſtrance, that this defiled Man ought not to mix amongſt them, God taught them, that he was ſanctified; being diſappointed in that complaint, they form'd another, upon the Laws being given to Men in preference to them; but God made them ſenſible of their Folly, by acquainting them, that the Law was given for the unrighteous, and not for ſinleſs Creatures; that Encomium ſweetned them; they treated with Moſes, and imparted to him half of their Wiſdom. David inſinuates all this in the LXVIII Pſalm, for he teaches, that God has robb'd Heaven and the Angels of their Gifts, in ſaying, Thou haſt led captivity captive. He denotes the Preſent he made Moſes and the Iſraelites, in theſe Words, thou haſt received gifts for men. Laſtly, He points to the Rebels, (that is the Gentiles and Chriſtians) who don't believe that God dwells in Moſes and the Jewiſh People. If there were but few of theſe Explications, they might be charged to the account of the Jewiſh Hatred to the Chriſtians; but they make the like, when not animated with Paſſion, and that in innumerable Inſtances. We muſt not therefore overſtrain the uſe which their Writings may afford towards the underſtanding the Scripture; for if they afford any Aſſiſtance, how many Rubs do they throw in the Way, when we muſt commonly read Authors, that deſert the literal

[a] Bartol. B. R. t. III. p. 106. [b] Mat. 10. 9. [c] Skinner. Letters of Uſher, Let. 102. [d] Gen. 29. 35. [e] Pſ. 86. 2.
[f] Prov. 24. 27. [g] P. Venerab. cont. Judæos B. Max. Pat. t. 22. p. 1028.

literal Senſe, to hunt after groundleſs Conjectures.

V. The Jews may juſtifie themſelves by the Example of ſome Chriſtians, who give them countenance by their Praiſes, and eſpouſe their Diſcoveries, and invent as boldly as they. And indeed the Antient Fathers have commonly ſplit upon this Rock, and given diverſe Paſſages of Scripture a different Senſe from the natural: I will only quote one Example, which will ſuffice to acquaint us with Origen's Method. [h] Abraham apprehenſive leſt Abimelech ſhould take away his Wife, and murder him, to be rid of a troubleſome Spy, conſented to be cuckolded, and contributed to it, by obliging Sarah to ſay that ſhe was his Siſter. Abimelech exemplarily puniſh'd for a Paſſion, which ſeems leſs criminal than Sarah's Lie, tho' authoriz'd by her Husband, declared to God that he was led into it in the purity of his Heart: Abraham prayed for him, and ſo his Wife and Maids were heal'd. This is an hiſtorical matter of Fact, which one would think we had no more to do but to receive as the Scripture relates it: But Origen maintains, that to take this Event literally, would require a Jewiſh rather than a Chriſtian Auditory; which ſeems to inſinuate, that the Jews in his Time were leſs curious of Allegories than the Chriſtians. He falls into them over Head and Ears; and gives out, that Sarah is Vertue: Abraham might call her his Wife, till he had attain'd to Perfection, becauſe indeed ſhe ought to reſt in our Boſom, and we ought never to abandon her, till we have enjoy'd her to ſatiety: But when Abraham was perfect, he ought to call her his Siſter, and leave her to Abimelech, becauſe it is the Duty of the Saints to lend and communicate Vertue to thoſe that want it. Abimelech, who could not poſſeſs Sarah, ſignifies the Philoſophers that are fond of Vertue: They ſeek it in the purity of their Heart, becauſe their Morals are pretty pure. In the mean time they can't obtain the Knowledge of the Truth, and the great Myſteries of Religion, becauſe it was a Privilege reſerved for Jeſus Chriſt to reveal it. The cure of Abimelech and his Servants puzzles Origen, but he paſſes by the difficulty, and maintains, that he may be allow'd to ſay, upon ſo obſcure a Paſſage, that Abimelech was Philoſophy, and his Maids the different Sects it has branch'd into: God heal'd them, and Abraham begg'd they might enter into the Church; but the Time of the calling of the Gentiles was not yet come.

Let a Man but read Gregorius Nyſſenus, and he will find ſome ſorry Interpretations: And tho' Gregory the Great lived in a colder Climate, yet his Imagination was very warm, by the help whereof he has trifled with abundance of Scripture Paſſages. Let a Man examine St. Auſtin, and many other Fathers, and he'll find in them materials of an ample and juſt Apology for the Jews, ſince they have been as bold and inaccurate as they.

VI. Some Moderns have follow'd the Ancients; and in ſpight of the Rules the Criticks have laid down for an exact Interpretation of Scripture, yet they abandon the literal Senſe, to purſue crude Imaginations; and the number of theſe Interpreters increaſes proportionably; they find it a ready and eaſie Road to get a Name, and they vent whatever their Fancy dictates.

Can it be imagin'd that David had the Martyrs in view, which ſuffer'd under Decius and Diocleſian, when he ſaid he walked with Aſſurance in the vale of the ſhadow of death? And that Jeſus Chriſt predicted the Converſion of the Infidels to be wrought by the Conſtancy of theſe Martyrs, when he exhorted all his Diſciples to let the light of their good works to ſhine before Men, that they ſeeing it, might glorifie their father which is in heaven?

Can it be imagin'd that Iſaiah telling the Jews that they came to Controverſies and Diſputes, thereby indicated the Diſputes of Luther and Zuinglius upon the Euchariſt, or thoſe of Marbach and Zanchius, about Predeſtination, with the Artifices of the Court of Rome, that fomented theſe Diviſions, as appears by the Confeſſion of Cardinal de Lorrain, who has left a Memoir of the Expences the Pope was at, to keep up the Diſputes of the Proteſtants. I confine my ſelf to one Author, and the firſt which came to hand, which ſuffices to ſhew that the Chriſtians commonly fall into the ſame fault as the Jews; for it would be but too eaſie to quote a great many others.

VII. They are not ſatisfied with imitating the Talmudiſts, but they alſo tranſcribe them, and borrow their Conjectures from them. They tell how a piece of Scarlet-Wooll grew white on the Day of Propitiations, to teach them, that the Expiation of their Sins was made. If they acknowledge that this Miracle ceaſed forty Years before the Ruin of the Temple, the Chriſtians make an advantage of this Story, without examining it. The Miracle is falſe; and no Track is found of it in the Sacred Hiſtory: And yet they conclude, that the Prophet Iſaiah alluded to it, when God promiſed by his Mouth, that tho' the Peoples Sins were as red as Scarlet, yet they ſhould be as white as Snow. They triumph alſo at this Miracle's ceaſing preciſely at our Saviour's Death, and make uſe of it as a Conviction for the Jews; whereas the Miracle is imaginary; the Prophet meant only to ſignifie, that there was no Sin ſo enormous, but that God perfectly pardon'd it, and he takes his Compariſon from the Nature of Wooll, which difficultly changes its colour, and never grows white again, when it is once died Scarlet. If the Talmudiſts preſcribe Fathers ſome Leſſons about the method of educating their Children till they are Twelve Years old, the Chriſtians give theſe Precepts an Antiquity that does not belong to them, to ſhew that Jeſus Chriſt, who went to the Temple with his Mother, whom ſhe gently chid for leaving her, was a religious Obſerver of them.

VIII. They take a pride to adopt the moſt extravagant Stories of the Jews. The Scripture ſays, that in building the Temple, there was not heard one blow of the hammer. This Place of the Sacred Story has no obſcurity in it; for it is obſerved in the ſame Verſe, that the Stones were all brought ready hewn: However let us hear the Jews, and then the Chriſtians.

The Firſt ſay that God created on the Sabbath-Eve a Worm called Samir, which cleft and poliſh'd the Stones by touching them. This unknown Worm was brought to Solomon by Aſmodeus; and they that will not have the Prince of Devils contribute to the Structure of the Temple, aſſert that Solomon taking the young ones from a Whoop's Neſt, incloſed them in a Glaſs; the diſconſolate old One found a Worm which broke the Glaſs, and delivered her Brood, and therefore we ſomewhere read that it was the Whoop that brought the Worm Samir to the Sanctuary. A Third Sort ſtill more ridiculouſly maintain that Solomon, who underſtood the Language of Birds, ask'd them where this Worm was, an Eagle immediately took wing, and found it in the Terreſtrial Paradiſe. It was employed to poliſh all the Stones of the Temple, and for this reaſon there there was not heard one ſtroke of the hammer all the Time it was building. This is grounded upon a Paſſage of Ezechiel, [i] wherein God tells the Prophet, that he hath made his Forehead like a Diamond, and harder than the Samir: Here you ſee the Worm that is harder than the Flint or the Diamond: Two Things are obſerved; One, that the Prophet does not compare the Samir, but the Forehead of the Prophet, to a Rock: The Other, that he ſpeaks of a Stone which Jewellers uſe, to poliſh the Diamond. Here is nothing ſaid then of a Worm, which would be Nonſenſe, but of a Stone that is harder than Diamond, to which he compares the Prophet's Forehead. Be that how it will, 'tis added, that the Worm Samir, after having ſerved to build the Temple, was ſhut up in Lead, and fed with a great deal of care; but it periſh'd with the firſt Temple. Part of this Story is found in the Miſnah, but there are great Additions to it in the Gemara and the Talmud.

[h] Origen. in Geneſ. h. 6. Integr.

It doth not deſerve any notice, had not one of our Hiſtorians of the [k] Thirteenth Century aſſerted, that Solomon underſtanding that the Stones of the Altar were not to be hewn, ſupply'd the Workman's Art, by the help of a Worm; for having incloſ'd in a Glaſs a young Oſtrich, the Mother of it found a Worm in the Deſart, whoſe Blood broke the Glaſs; and Solomon, who knew by this Experiment the Vertue of this Blood, employ'd it in poliſhing the hardeſt Marbles, inſtead of Iron, wherewith it was prohibited to cut them.

It will be ſaid, no doubt, that the Chriſtians Error does not authoriſe that of the Jews; 'tis true, but it will ſtill be concluded from hence, that theſe Explications, which create trouble to exact and judicious Interpreters, don't afford a ſolid reaſon for inhibiting the reading of the Talmudiſts. It will ſtill be ſaid, [l] That the Truths are to be taken, and the Falſhoods left; we muſt gather the Roſes, and avoid the Prickles; collect the Pearls, and reject the Shells. So much for the Interpretation of Scripture.

IX. It can't be denied, but that the Jews have preſerved many Rites of their Anceſtors, and that manifeſt Foot-ſteps of them are found in the Talmud. It is from theſe antient Rites that the beſt uſe may be made, becauſe they diſcover the Original of many Cuſtoms, which the Chriſtians have borrow'd from the Synagogue. Moreover, the Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt, and the Apoſtles, have often alluded to the Cuſtoms received by this People, the knowledge whereof muſt be very uſeful.

Did we, for example, compare the Government of the Primitive Church with that of the Synagogue, we wou'd put an end to a great many Queſtions and Controverſies; we wou'd not attribute to St. Peter the Diviſion of the World into Three Patriarchates, ſince the Patriarchs of the Chriſtian Church being later than thoſe of the Jews, proceeded from them; we would not diſpute about Epiſcopacy, and Eccleſiaſtical Offices, ſince the Biſhops ſucceeded the Heads of the Synagogue. And therefore there were many Biſhops in great Cities, as there were many Heads in the flouriſhing Synagogues. We find among the Jews, ſome Primates, Prieſts, Deacons, and a Government, like that of the Church, as a very learned Man has prov'd. [m]

Father Simon, who has treated of this Conformity of Rites, maintains that St. Peter is the Naſci, or the Prince of the Church; the Senators were the Biſhops that make up the Sanhedrim or Councils, to whom he gives his Infallibility. His Compariſon had been juſter if he had turned the Senators into Cardinals: Their College is at Rome, as the Sanhedrim was at Jeruſalem. The Sanhedrim was not infallible, no more is the College of Cardinals. It had the power of depoſing its Head, when he departed from the Law, and this Circumſtance would alſo have ſuited with Father Simon, who likewiſe makes the Pope a Prince depending on the Church.

By ſtudying the Jewiſh Rituals concerning the Temple, the Sacrifices, the Feaſts of Paſſover, Expiation, and the Sabbath; concerning Divorces, and the method of Judicature, we can't avoid drawing great Helps toward the Underſtanding of thoſe Paſſages of Scripture, where theſe Matters are too lightly touch'd to be void of all obſcurity.

X. Let us only obſerve, that we ought to be cautious of exceſs, ſince theſe Rites have not always the Antiquity that is pretended. The Doctors have intermix'd their private Imaginations with Divine Laws; and by attempting to be too particular they put off Circumſtances of their own Inventions, which afterwards divide the Doctors. I'll only quote One Inſtance.

The Scriptures acquaint us, [n] how the red Heifer was burnt, whoſe Aſhes ſerved for the Purification of the People. How many Queſtions have been form'd upon this Subject? Some ask whether this Heifer [o] might be with Calf, and deny it, whilſt others affirm it. Eliezer, one of the Tanaites, will not allow her to come from the Gentiles, but that Sentiment is conteſted. 'Tis affirm'd, that ſhe was ſeparated ſeven Days before the Sacrifice, and was only fed twice in all that time. They give the Plan of the Stall wherein ſhe ſtood, and the Catalogue of thoſe that have ſacrificed her from Moſes's Time to Iſhmael, the Son of Phebius; they diſtinguiſh the Wood wherewith ſhe was to be burnt, and the different ways of receiving her Blood. He that offered the Sacrifice fruſtrated the Effects of it, if he had not white Cloaths, and did not do every thing to the purpoſe of the ſacrificed Heifer. The Jews who compoſed the Talmud Two or Three hundred Years after this Sacrifice was aboliſh'd, could be no better inſtructed in all theſe Particulars than the Chriſtians; and they have ſupply'd by their Imagination, the want of ancient Books and Monuments.

XI. In the mean time there are ſome Chriſtians, that implicitely believe them. If they find in the Talmud a Plan of the Temple of Jeruſalem and its Chambers, they preſently ſeek for the Apartment of the Virgin, where ſhe might be incloſed as a Nun when ſhe was conſecrated by her Parents, in her tender Years. If the Altars are placed Eaſtward, they [p] fancy 'tis in imitation of the Altar at Jeruſalem. And yet they are miſtaken. Ingenious Criticks agree, that there were no Cells for female Novices and Nuns about the Temple; and the Hiſtory of the Virgin is fabulous. 'Tis known alſo, that the Altar of Jeruſalem was placed at the Weſt-end of the Temple. Spencer [q] even thinks that God appointed it ſo, in order to keep off the People from the Idolatry of the Perſians, who worſhipp'd the Sun. The Truth of the Matter is this, that Conſtantine, who erected ſome ſtately Temples to the Living God, divided them into Three Parts, like the Temple of Jeruſalem, where was the Outward-Court or Pavement, the Holy-Place, and the Moſt-Holy, and the Chriſtians have continued to conform themſelves to that Cuſtom. They ſeek among the Jews for the Origine of Proceſſions, and 'tis true that Maimonides relates, that the Sanhedrim, after the offering of the Euchariſtick Sacrifice, took Two Loaves, which were carried in Pomp before

[i] Ezech. 3. 9. Boch. Hieroz. l. 6. c. 11. p. 842. [k] Vincentius Bellovacenſ. Doctrin. l. 16. c. 123. [l] Gafferel. unheard of Curioſities, c. 2. p. 30. [m] Vitringa de Synag. [n] Numb. xix. [o] Miſnah ſextus ordo Codex 2. qui eſt Para. vacca, c. 9. [p] Iſidor. Orig. l. 15. c. 4. Valafr. Strabo Rit. Eccl. c. 4. [q] Spencer de Rit. Heb.

before it, and all the Councellors walked after these Loaves at the Ringing of Bells: They stop'd at the corners of the Streets; and sang some verses of the xxx^th Psalm, by the greatest Stone that was in Jerusalem. But this Rite, which appears not, except in an Author of the twelfth Century, and whereof we see no antient Proofs, is very suspicious: The Example of David Dancing before the Ark, would at once be more antient, and more solid. If they find that in the publick Fasts the Chiefs of the Synagogue and the People cast Ashes upon their Heads, and upon the Press which contain'd the Law, they conclude that the Custom of taking Ashes at the beginning of Lent, is almost as antient as the Law of God. If they hear a Story of some Soul, deliver'd from the Punishments it had deserved in this Life, they give a venerable Antiquity to the Opinion of Purgatory. There is commonly a caprice to be observed herein: For when we prove upon the Church of Rome, that she has revived the Ceremonies of the Law which Jesus Christ aboliss'd, she is angry, and disturb'd at it: She sometimes will have the Talmudists to be the Fathers of these Rites, and yet she refuses Moses and God himself for the Authors of them: How fantastical is this?

XII. We have already observed, that perhaps there never were worse History-writers than the Talmudists, and the Rabbins that succeeded them. What's the reason of it? Is it their want of Genius? Has Nature denied them the necessary Talents for the composition of this Work? It would be ridiculous to pretend it, since Josephus is one of the best Historians that Antiquity has produced; but they have two Infirmities: Great fondness for the Glory of their Nation, and as great contempt for the History of other People: In God's name let them praise their Ancestors, and extol them above the rest of Mankind; but however, they ought to consult Foreigners concerning their own History; examine their Calculations, and endeavour to reconcile their Chronology with that of Strangers, who have made a sufficient Figure in the World to deserve to be taken notice of. Lastly, they should not be so venturous in making Conjectures, and changing facts and events as they generally do.

XIII. They seem sometimes to be strangers to their own History. One would think they ought to know Phineas, a Man so famous in their antient Commonwealth; notwithstanding, they make him live above 300 Years. It doth not justify them to say that they have spoke thus without consideration: For by placing this Zealot in Moses's time, and ascribing a great action to him after Samson's, they must have believed that God prolonged his Life beyond the ordinary limits of those times. They say that Naama was Noah's Wife, and Dinah, Job's; because this holy Man being tormented by his Wife, told her she spoke like a foolish Woman, they have concluded that he tacitly upbraids her with a fault she had committed in her Father's House, which agreed to no body else so well as Dinah.

XIV. I shall not speak of the Monarchy of the Persians, whose Kings and Years they confound; but they have made Aristotle a Proselyte of their Law; to which purpose they metamorphose Jaddus the High Priest, who received Alexander the great into Jerusalem, into Simeon the Just, whom they make the Son of Joshua, who engaged in a Conference with this Philosopher, and convinced him of the truth of Judaism, which obliged him to insert several pieces of this Religion into his Philosophy. Rabbin Joseph [b] the Son of Job had read in a very antient Book in Ægypt, that Aristotle changed his Religion at the latter end of his days. [c] Abravanel had read it in Aristotle's Writings. Diogenes Laertius confirms the fact; and lastly, [d] Eusebius is cited, who is made to say, that Aristotle was a Jew by Birth, born at Jerusalem, of the Tribe of Benjamin, and the Family of Kalia. But 'tis to be perfectly ignorant of their own History, and that of the Greeks, to pretend that Alexander the Great was received at Jerusalem by Simeon the Just, the Son of Jehoscua; for, 1. There are four Generations betwixt Jehoscua, who return'd from the Captivity; and Jaddus who received Alexander the Great. 2. Simeon the Just, instead of being High Priest in Alexander the Great's time, was only the Grandson of Jaddus, who received this Prince. 3. His Conference with Aristotle is so much the falser, because this Philosopher had Principles quite opposite to the Jewish Religion. It does not appear that he so much as knew it, so far was he from professing it publickly, or being born in the Bosom of that Church: He no where speaks of his Conversion: Diogenes Laertius has observed the same silence. 'Tis true Diogenes quotes one Clearchus, who introduces Aristotle speaking, and deriving the Jews from the Greeks. He also praises a Jewish Philosopher by Birth, and Greek by Inclination; who had taught them many things. But a Man must divine to find Aristotle in this Jew by Birth, and Philosopher, and have a good assurance to make Eusebius say that Aristotle was of the Tribe of Benjamin.

XV. The Roman History ought to be better known, not only because it deserves to be so, and may be, without much pains and time, but the Jews have a particular interest in it, as having been a long time under their Dominion; one would think that a Man must be obliged to shut his Eyes, if he will not know what Rome has been; and yet 'tis certain they have committed the grossest faults upon this Article.

One boldly says [e] that the City of Rome was three hundred Parses long, and as many broad; judge of this Circumference, since each Parse contains 4000 Italian Paces, or five fourths of a League. There are as many Publick Places in it as days in the Year, and the Poultry Market which is the least of all, contains 16000 Paces, The King who commands in this City daily feeds all the People that are found in one of these three hundred sixty five publick Places, which he does by turns all the Year round. It is situate upon the Banks of the Sea, which defends it on one side, on another it is arm'd with high Mountains, on the third side there is a Wall of Iron; and a barren and unfruitful Soil helps to render it impregnable.

XVI. Italy, says another, was Peopled, and is still by the Posterity of Esau. The Bishop of Burgos, who had been a Jew, opposed this notion, and shewed the difference of these two Nations; their Habitation and Religion. But the Rabbin [f], accustom'd to call the Christians Edomites, and to whom this title was necessary to answer the Ideas they have of the Messiah to come, heap'd Reason upon Reason to confute his Adversary. He maintains, 1. That the Tradition, which makes the Italians descendants of Esau and Edomites, being as certain as that which makes them come from Troy, since there are no Chronicles nor Proofs, it may as well be received as that which the Christians have received from the Heathens. 2. He quotes Josephus the Hebrew, who affirms, that Joseph going to bury his Father, and having beat Esau's Army who opposed his Passage, carried his Unkle's Grandson Prisoner into Ægypt. This Grandson's Name was Zephon, who being weary of ſlavery went to Carthage, and from thence to Italy, where he perform'd ſuch noble Actions, that the Italians made him King, and changed his Name into that of Janus or Saturn. Thus you ſee Eſau's Grandſon Anceſtor to the Romans, who afterwards extended his Empire by building Genoa and Palermo. The Chriſtian Chronology agrees with this event, for Janus muſt have come into Italy fifteen hundred Years before Jeſus Chriſt, that is ſix Years after Jacob's Funeral. Beſides, the Latins borrowed their Name of Lotam, one of Edom's Generals noted in Geneſis. [g] There are ſome Rabbins that affirm, that the Apoſtles driven from Jeruſalem, came to the Idumeans, who embraced their Religion and went to Rome. Others ſay that Jacob granted his Brother Eſau all the Country which extended from Seir to Magdiel, which is Rome. Laſtly, they find ſix Reſemblances betwixt Eſau and his Poſterity, and the Chriſtians. All this makes it an evident Proof with the Rabbins, that the Inhabitants of Rome were Idumeans.

[b] Schalschelet. Hakkabbala. p. 102. [c] Abravanel in Pirke Aboth. [d] Euseb. Præp. Ev. l. 9. c. 4. p. 409. [e] R. Ula.
[f] V. Abravanel in Obbadium.

Abravanel might be referr'd to the Tradition of his Fathers, who having made Eſau's Family attempt to hinder Jacob's Burial, change their Fury into Reverence, and aſſure us that ſeeing the Crown of Jacob upon their Grandfather's Coffin, they came all and laid down their own there, inſtead of fighting, being conquered and led Priſoners to Ægypt as this Rabbin ſuppoſes; but this is another Fable; and the one has no more reaſon than the other. However, 'tis fit the younger Lye ſhould give place to the elder. 'Tis more worth while to obſerve the Error of Chronology; for the Chriſtians who are ſo confidently cited, bring not Janus into Italy till above three hundred and fifty Years after Jacob's Death. Though this Janus were the Grandſon of Eſau, which is impoſſible, could it be concluded that Italy was Peopled by one ſingle Fugitive? what became of thoſe that Crown'd him King, to recompence his Valour? To ſay that the Idumeans came and ſettled there after him, is another fact that ought to be proved, of which we find not the leaſt hint in Joſephus the Hebrew, which is cried up as if it were not the work of an ignorant Impoſtor. They commit a double fault in dating the Birth of Chriſtianity under the Authority of Nachman; for do they imagine we ſhall admit a modern Rabbin an Evidence of ſo remote a fact, and believe him upon his word? At leaſt the Evangeliſts we cite were Cotemporaries. Italy was already Peopled when Jeſus Chriſt appear'd. They were not the Idumeans that firſt embraced Chriſtianity, and carried it to Rome; though ſome private Perſons might go, it can't thence be concluded that they were the prevailing Nation; by which it is plain they are ignorant of Chriſtian, as well as Heathen Rome.

XVII. It's an hard thing to be ignorant of Nero and his Hiſtory; and yet if we conſult the Talmud, we ſhall find a great many things concerning this Prince's Life. For they tell [i] that having undertaken the Siege of Jeruſalem, that he might know the ſucceſs of it, he ſhot four Arrows, one to the Eaſt, and another to the Weſt, but they all fell in the City; from whence he concluded he ſhould take it. But he heard at the ſame time a little Boy read a paſſage of Ezekiel, in which God threatens his Houſe with approaching ruine, and afterwards to revenge it upon Edom. The Emperor from hence concluded that God would puniſh him, if he took the City. Therefore he became a Proſelyte, and had the famous Meir for his Son, one of the Tanaites of whom we have ſpoken.

They have been aſhamed of ſo ill contrived a Fable: However Honour will not ſuffer them to abandon the Talmud; and therefore they have imagin'd two Nero's, whereof one was the others General, and own that the Emperor continued an Heathen; but that he ſent his Name-ſake General againſt Jeruſalem. This does not remove the difficulty, ſince the Talmud ſpeaks of a Nero that was Cæſar. This is eluded by ſaying that the Gemara only means the Commander of the Army, or that there were at that time two Nero's Emperors, the one an Idolater and the other a Jewiſh Convert, the Father of Meir.

Laſtly, they excuſe themſelves by quoting I know not what Lives of Emperors, and particularly St. Auguſtin, who relates, that Nero lived, that is, that he changed their Law. The Jew could not more pertinently cite St. Auguſtin, for he relates in that place the Extravagances of ſome Chriſtians, which he had reaſon to admire, as not being inferior to thoſe of the Talmudiſts. Theſe Chriſtians imagin'd, that Nero was Antichriſt, and for that reaſon maintain'd, either that he muſt riſe again, or that he was not dead, but that he was conceal'd in ſome ſecret place, to appear once again in the Flower of his Age. But theſe deluſions of ſome Chriſtians don't deſtroy the Truth of the Hiſtory, nor juſtify others in ſo plain a fact. 'Tis even certain, that Sciullam, the Rabbin that cites St. Auguſtin for his Voucher, impoſes on him what he never ſaid; for he pretends that theſe words, Nero lived, meant, according to the Chriſtians notion, that this Prince had embraced their Religion, and had afterwards abjured it and turn'd Jew; and therefore he lived, and ſhall live; that is to ſay, ſhall be eternally happy. For there is nothing farther from St. Auguſtin's Thought, than this little Syſtem aſcribed to him, and he ſhould not be cited if they will not take his Notion.

XVIII. I will add but one word more concerning Titus, who ought ſtill to be better known than Nero. Notwithſtanding, they tell of him [k] that he grew Mad, on occaſion of a Fly entring into his Noſe. And when they are urged with the ſilence of all the Hiſtorians, they maintain, this ſilence to be concerted, for fear it ſhould be publiſh'd that this Puniſhment was inflicted on him for the Evils he had done to the People of God; or elſe they recur to myſtical Interpretations by help whereof they endeavour to excuſe them. In the mean time an ignorance ſupported with ſuch confidence, ſhews that they are unacquainted with the Events that happen'd in our Saviour's time, or at the Birth of the Chriſtian Church, and that there is no depending upon the matters of fact related by them.

XIX. They pretend to juſtify their extravagant Metaphors and Hyperboles; and 'tis certain they are not always to be charged upon them as faults: We ought not to father on them the belief of a corporeal God, becauſe they make him weep for ſo many hours a day: As we ought not to imagine the Heathens believed Beaſts and Birds could ſpeak, becauſe they ſometimes lend them humane Language. Theſe are Fables, wherein we change the Nature and Qualities of the Objects we introduce. Thoſe of the Heathens were leſs dangerous, though they mingled the Gods in them, becauſe the Moral was eaſier to be diſcovered; whereas we commonly can but conjecture at the meaning of the Rabbins: We want Commentaries to underſtand them, and the Commentators are divided; becauſe they can't ſpy out the true meaning of a thing, in which perhaps there is none at all. Peter the Venerable [l] upbraided them with their loading three hundred Camels, only with the Keys of the Treaſure which

[g] Gen. 36. 20. [h] In cod. Ghittin. 76. c. 5. p. 56. V. Ganz. Chron. l. 2. p. 197. Bartol. Bibl. R. t. III. p. 298.
[i] R. Ganz. Chron. l. 2. p. 180. [k] Pet. Venerab. contra jud. B. M. Nat. p. 22. p. 1028.

Corah had hid in the Dens and Caves of the Deſart, and in order to make theſe Keys the lighter, they had made them of Nerves, and dryed Hides: Would they ſignifie by this that Corah was the Richeſt Man in the World? I allow it; but the fact is falſe: For Corah in the Deſart was not Potent enough to give occaſion to this Hyperbole. But had he never ſo great Wealth, can't this be repreſented without ſhocking all probability, by giving more Camels to Corah alone, than Moſes had for all the People of Iſrael; by making all the Caves of the Wilderneſs to be lock'd up; by imagining the Keys to be made of Leather, which multiplies their number infinitely, to make them a ſufficient burden for three hundred Camels? What is meant by repreſenting Og, King of Baſhan, meaſuring the Camp of the Iſraelites, and then going tocut a Mountain of three Leagues to cover this Camp, and ſquaſh all the Jews? He cut up the Mountain, and laid it upon his Shoulders; but by the way the Piſmires had ſo hollowed it, that it fell upon Og's Neck; he endeavoured to throw it down and get rid of his Burthen, but his Teeth was grown ſo long as to ſtop its way and not let it paſs. This is no piece of Mirth or Drollery, but a fact that is read in the Talmud [m] and is founded upon a paſſage of Scripture: For whereas we read in the third Pſalm, Thou haſt broken their Teeth; the Text muſt be corrected, and put, Thou haſt lengthened their Teeth.

XX. The Miracles they attribute to their Rabbins are bunglingly contrived, but the greater part of Chriſtians have nothing to reproach them with upon that Article. The Legends are full of Stories, that ſhew how far the Extravagance of an human Underſtanding may be carried. They have not even ſpared Jeſus Chriſt; for they have attributed to him Miracles which he never did, and which, far from raiſing his Glory, ſully it. In the Goſpel of the Infancy, he is made to form Earthen Sparrows by way of ſport, which he animates, and which fly away, when he is chid for working upon that Day. The ſame Goſpel makes Jeſus Chriſt ſhut up by his Mother, becauſe he kill'd all thoſe that oppoſed his deſigns, though in the Sacred Writings this Son of God did no Miracle but what tended to the preſervation of Men. The Rabbins often kill their Enemies and thoſe that deſpiſe their Inſtructions. R. Eliſha changed his Tephilim into Pigeon's Wings, in order to avoid I know not what Perſecution of the Romans who forbad the wearing 'em, and the voilence of the Guard that had ſurpriz'd him in that flagrant Crime.

R. Eliſha grew an Heretick after he had pierced into the Terreſtrial Paradice; for he taught there were two Principles: He was ſent to Purgatory after his Death; but R. Meir praying for him, there was ſeen to proceed from his Tomb a great ſmoak, to ſhew that he was delivered from thoſe violent Flames by his Friends Prayers. How can thoſe laugh at theſe miraculous Deliriums, who admit a Purgatory, from whence Souls daily eſcape by the Prayers of their Relations, and often return to give them thanks for their deliverance? The praiſes that are given theſe miraculous Men are not more judicious than the Miracles; they commonly are grounded upon one's giving precedence to the other; upon a Maſter's viſiting his Diſciple; or upon Childiſh Devotions; and evidently ſhew they underſtood not true Devotion, nor had any juſt Ideas of Virtue. We need only read the Hiſtory of Jeremiah in Peter the Venerable [n] to give us an abhorrence of the Actions they have abſcribed to this Prophet, even when they meant to honour him. They give him a Grandſon, who at once was his own Son, conceived in a manner equally impure and impoſſible, though he was born of his Daughter, and afterwards they make this Child the Author of unheard of Prodigies.

XXI. They enter alſo into infinite particularities. They gravely determine, that a Knot may be untied on the Sabbath, if it be lax, but it is criminal if it be hard tied. They examine what days Maids and Widows ought to be Married: The fourth day of the Week is deſign'd for the one, and the fifth for the other; and the reaſons of this diſtinction are very important. Towns ought to be reſponſible for the Murders committed in their Territories: But how ſhall they meaſure the diſtance when the Body is divided from its Head; muſt it be rejoin'd to it? 'Tis diſputed whether the firſt Born of an Aſs ought to be redeem'd with a Lamb. Joſhua and Tſadoc determined, that if the young Colt dies, it ought not to be ranſom'd: But R. Eliezer is of a contrary Opinion, and gives the profit of it to the Prieſt. 'Tis eaſily perceived that they mix Errors with their deciſions. They even ſometimes introduce the Devils, or the Angel of Death inſtructing them. But we'll give the Hiſtory of their Opinions hereafter.

XXII. The Chriſtians are chiefly incens'd againſt the Talmud, becauſe they find imprecations in it againſt them; and their Name ſubſtituted for that of the Gentils, as if they were guilty of the ſame Idolatry. Laſtly, they have inſerted blaſphemies againſt Jeſus Chriſt and his Saints, which has often occaſion'd the burning of theſe Books.

Without any deſign of juſtifying theſe exceſſes, we may obſerve that they are not the moſt dangerous Enemies of the Chriſtian Religion. We ſee Treatiſes daily publiſh'd, infinitely more ſubtle, and capable of poſſeſſing the Soul with doubts and ſcruples. The Talmudiſts are not the Jews that have beſt underſtood and moſt carefully ſtudied the Chriſtian Religion. The Author of the Rampart of Faith, who lived ſince Luther, which Vagenſeil publiſhed, has made a more exact Apology for his Religion, and offered Objections better grounded againſt ours. Menaſſes, and Orobio have gone beyond their Predeceſſors. 'Tis not Blaſphemies that give any wound to Truth: At moſt they wound delicate Ears, and make the Blood riſe; they prevent the Underſtanding, and fortify its Prejudices. Sophiſms are more formidable than Blaſphemies; and we find but little of that nature in the Talmud.

People make impertinent complaints, that after the Miſnah has laid in Precautions againſt the reigning Idolatry of the Gentiles, application is made of it to the Chriſtians. Bartolocci [o] is miſtaken to imagine that the ſilence of the Miſnah, as to the Chriſtians, proceeded from their being confounded with the Jews; it is eaſy to diſcover the cauſe of it, and at once to juſtify the change of the Talmudiſts and Rabbins. The Heathens might confound the Chriſtians with the Jews, in Claudius's Reign, becauſe the Church iſſued out of the Synagogue, and Chriſtians were a ſeparate Branch from the ſame Stem. It was in Judea that the Goſpel had been preach'd; the Church conſiſted of converted Jews, and even retain'd a part of its antient Laws. No wonder then that ſtrangers, as the Romans, confounded the two Religions which had ſo many Relations; but the ſame thing can't be ſaid of the Jews, the mortal Enemies of this Religion, who had Crucified Jeſus Chriſt, ſaw the Chriſtians leave their Worſhip to adore him, and pleaded againſt the novelty of their Doctrine: Eſpecially they could not be confounded at the Time that Juda the Saint publiſh'd the Miſnah, at the end of the Second Century, for then the Diſtinction of Jew and Chriſtian, whoſe numbers multiplied by the Gentiles entrance into the Church, could not eſcape him. How comes it then that Juda laid down no Rules to ward the People from the Chriſtian Idolatry, and the modern Rabbins have taken ſo great Precautions againſt it, by ſubſtituting the Chriſtians for the Gentiles in their Writings? The reaſon of this change can be a Secret to no body, but ſuch as will not ſee. There were then in primitive Chriſtianity no Images in the Temples, and upon the Altars, nor Statues and Croſſes in publick Places. That infinite Crowd of Saints was unknown, which has been worſhipp'd ſince. In a Word, The Chriſtians could not be confounded with the Heathens, till a Worſhip like that of the Gentiles was introduc'd among the Chriſtians.

[m] Talmud Ordo. 1. Zeraum. cod. 9. p. 54. [n] Peter Venerab. contra Jud. B. M. Pat. t. 22. p. 1028. [o] Bartoloc. Bib. Rab. t. III. p. 177.

CHAP. VIII.

The different Orders of Doctors.

The Sebureans, that is to ſay, Pyrrhoniſts, and Doubters, the Gaons, or Excellents.

I. THE Sebureans odious: Whether this Sect was renew'd by the Reformation. II. The Duration of theſe Doctors very ſhort. III. The Authority of the Gaons. IV. Their Head. V. Juda, full of Light, was blind. VI. The end of the Excellents in the Eleventh Century.

I. THO' the Talmud was received with a general Applauſe, if we believe the Jews, yet there ſtarted up a new Order of Doctors that ſhook its Authority by their Doubts. They were call'd Sebureans, or Opiners [a] They were look'd upon by the Jews as ſo many Scepticks, becauſe they diſputed without determining, and finding only Probability upon all the Sides that can be taken of different Queſtions, they argued pro & contra. Bartolocci [b] maintains that this Sect is revived by the Reformation; but the reformed Divines are poſitive enough. Is it not a pretty Fancy, that a Man becomes a Pyrrhoniſt, from the Moment he does not blindly ſubmit to the Definitions of the Church, as the Sebureans did not implicitly ſubſcribe to the Deciſions of the antient Doctors? But let that paſs: Theſe latter rendred themſelves odious by the Doubts they form'd, and tho' the Talmud was not yet finiſh'd, they would not inſert their Sentences. There are even ſome that intirely ſtrike out this Order from the number of their Doctors, whether they fear ſome Diſhonour would accrue to their Religion from them, or that they never were in being.

II. And indeed we find ſo much Darkneſs and Confuſion in their Hiſtory, that the beſt Chronologers can't diſpel [c] it, all they can do being to produce ſome meagre Names, ſtript of all Events and Works. And yet R. Joſi, who was the Principal of theſe Opiners appear'd in the Year 4236, or 476 of Jeſus Chriſt. He taught 38 Years, according to this Calculation. Joſi began to appear 24 Years before the Talmud was finiſh'd. He had ſome Succeſſors who became the Heads of the famous Academies of Sora and Pumdebita; but theſe Academies having been ſhut up by the King of Perſia's Order, the Order of the Opining Doctors was extinct Seventy four Years after its firſt Eſtabliſhment.

III. The Opiners were ſucceeded by other Maſters, call'd Gaons, Sublime, or Excellents; which Title was not acquir'd by them till they had given ſome illuſtrious Proofs of their merit. The Chief of them were made Heads of the Academies, and the others were diſperſed in the Provinces where there were Refugees of their Nation. There they were conſulted upon all the Queſtions that aroſe, and were conſider'd as the Interpreters of the Law. Their Deciſions were received like Oracles. In the mean time, as each Province, independent of one another, had its Excellents, the Laws of each Doctor were received only in the Place where he had Credit and Authority.

IV. Chanan Meiſchka was the Head, and Firſt of theſe Excellents. He re-eſtabliſh'd the Academy of Pumdebita, that had been ſhut up for fifty Years, and appear'd with ſome Luſtre at the beginning of the Sixth Century. Some have [d] rank'd him with the Pyrrhoniſts; but Sherira, who muſt have known them better, makes him the Chief of the Excellents.

V. In the Liſt of the Excellents was numbred one Jehuda, ſurnamed Full of Light, becauſe he was blind. The Jews dare not reproach the Blind with want of Sight; and therefore for a Diſguiſe, they take a Courſe that ſeems to abound with Inſult and Raillery, calling them Full of Light. Juda the Blind taught with great Reputation in 763, and the Nation is indebted to him for certain Leſſons [e] in great requeſt.

VI. Scherira, one of the Excellents, appear'd likewiſe [f] with great Luſtre at the end of the Tenth Century. He reſign'd his Employ to confer it on his Son Haai, who was the laſt of the Gaons. He lived in the beginning of the Eleventh Century, and was eſteem'd as the moſt Excellent of the Excellents. He taught to his Death, which happen'd in the Year 1037, and with him ended the Order of theſe Excellent Doctors, having ſubſiſted 280, or 350, or, laſtly, 448 Years. The Difference of this Chronology comes from hence, that ſome commence the Eſtabliſhment of the Gaons ſooner, and others poſtpone it above a Century. The Academies of Babylon being ruin'd ſhortly after, the Remnant of them were convey'd into Spain and France, where the Jews made new Eſtabliſhments, and their Doctors flouriſh'd under the Title of Rabbins, of whom we ſhall ſpeak hereafter, for we muſt firſt inſert here what reſpects the Maſorethes.

[a] Sevara ſignifies Opinion. Seburæi are the Pyrrhoniſts. [b] Bartol. B. R. t. III. p. 367. [c] Ganz Chron. p. 121. [d] Ganz Chron. p. 122. [e] Halacoth Peſſucoth, Lectiones Deciſæ. [f] Ann. 997.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Maſoreths:

Their Authority and Criticiſm.

I. THE different Corrections they have made. II. The different Judgments concerning them. III. That of the Proteſtants. IV. Conjectures concerning the Antiquity of the Maſoreths: Whether Eſdras was the Head of them. V. Whether they were Cotemporaries with the Talmudiſts. VI. The Opinions of Uſher, Capel, and Father Morin. VII. They read without Points in the time of Eſdras. VIII. A Proof taken from St. Jerom, that the Maſorethes were not known in his Time. IX. The Talmudiſts have not known them. X. They are wrongfully cited in the Conference of the King of Cozar. XI. The true Origine of the Maſſorah in the Eleventh Century. XII. The progreſs of this Method. XIII. Whether there be any danger in following this Opinion. XIV. Anſwer to the Objections. XV. A diſintereſted Judgment upon the Maſſorah. XVI. The Sixth Order of Doctors: The Cabaliſts.

I. THE Maſorethes were Grammarians, who principally addicted themſelves to the reviſal of the Hebrew Text. They numbred the very Letters, imagining thereby to prevent any future Alterations. It has been queſtion'd whether they carried their Scruples and Diligence ſo far: But Father Simon, tranſcendently verſed in this matter, atteſts that he has ſeen a Manuſcript, wherein he found this part of the Maſſorah. Geneſis was reckon'd to contain Twelve great Sections, XLIII Sedarim, or Orders, 1534 Verſes, 20713 Words, and 78100 Letters.

Secondly, They make a Collection of all the different Readings that were known to them. [a] They turn'd eſpecially upon the Name Jehovah, and upon certain Words which were thought unſeemly, and others were ſubſtituted in their room. This Collection was commonly put at the end of the Bibles; afterwards they were inſerted in the Margin, and at the bottom of the Pages, for the Reader's convenience, and the reſt that would not come in there, were caſt in at the end.

Laſtly, They have added Vowels to the Conſonants; but as Religion has ſeem'd intereſſed in this laſt Article, every One has reaſon'd upon it according to his Prejudices.

II. Elias the Levite, after Twenty Years labour in explaining the Maſſorah, was amazed to ſee his Nation riſe againſt him for maintaining that the Points were invented by the Grammarians aſſembled at Tiberias, in the 504 Year of Jeſus Chriſt, whereas they carried their Origine as high as Eſdras and Moſes. The Jews jealous of all his Rites, conſented that every thing was divine in the Law and Writings of Moſes, the Points not excepted.

The Roman Catholicks prejudic'd for the Vulgar and Verſions, imagin'd, that if theſe Points were new, the Original might be accuſed of Imperfection, ſince we are not certain that the Maſoreths have added the neceſſary Points, or that they have not falſified ſome Oracles relating to the Meſſiah. They allege alſo an Inſtance pointed to by Calvin, the Words are thoſe of Iſaiah, where the Prophet affirms, [b] his name ſhall be called the mighty God, whereas the Maſoreths have ſtruck out the Divinity of the Meſſiah, and make the Prophet only promiſe, that the Almighty God ſhall call him [c] the Prince of Peace. Hence it is concluded, that the Originals are falſified, and that we are to blame for crying ſo often, Purius ex ipſo fonte bibuntur aquæ. The Roman Catholicks find a Second Advantage in this Opinion, for they pretend that Moſes took away the Vowels from his Writings, for fear the People ſhould read them, and entruſted them only with the Elders, who were the Repoſitories of Tradition.

III. Some Proteſtants ſtruck with this Prejudice, have maintain'd that the Points were of an Antient and Divine Original; which Opinion prevail'd a long time among them, [d] notwithſtanding the Authority of their Leaders, Calvin and Luther. But able Criticks [e] have rendred to the Maſoreths the Glory due to them, and prov'd that the addition of the Vowels do no prejudice to the Holy Scripture, nor made the Verſions preferable to the Original, ſince the Conſonants were pointed agreeably to the received Uſage, for a great many Ages, which could not vary, except in Things of no importance.

IV. Before we come to give Sentence concerning the Diverſity of Opinions, and to diſcover the Origine of the Points, we muſt examine the Age of the Maſoreths, ſince it is that whereon it depends. Some believe that Eſdras was the Head of this College; with which prejudice they are ſo bigotted, as to ſay [f] Two Things evidently falſe: One, that the Original reform'd by Eſdras, is at Bolonia, where it has been preſerved to this Time, but that the modern Jews alter'd it in ſome places, whilſt that City was left in their Hands for the Mortgage of the Money they had lent. The Other, that all Antiquity agrees, that Eſdras was oblig'd, at the return home from the Babyloniſh Captivity, to add Vowels to the Conſonants, becauſe he perceived, that the Study of the Holy Language, and the Scripture, languiſhing in the Exile, it was neceſſary to let the People have correct Copies, in which there could be no variation. Hitherto they could not fall into Error, and it was impoſſible there ſhould be Hereſies in the Jewiſh Church, becauſe the Originals of the Prophets were conſulted, and the Prophets themſelves, upon all the Doubts that aroſe; but the Prophets ceaſing, and the Originals being loſt, or neglected, Eſdras, who foreſaw the Miſchiefs that might enſue, invented the Vowels, and pointed the Copies which he left to the People. It ſeems the Vowels are a Remedy to all Diſtempers; but that is not ſo. The Originals of the Prophets were not kept in the Temple, and thoſe holy Men who cried in vain againſt the groſſeſt Idolatry, ſo clearly forbidden by the Law, and that Mixture of Heatheniſh and Divine Religion, which reign'd ſo long at Jeruſalem, without ſtopping it, were not more capable of hindring the growth of [a] The Maſoreths diſtinguiſh the degree of Authority; they give their Corrections by theſe Three Words, Keri, Ketib, Sbhir. This is a Conjecture. [b] Eſ. 9. 5. [c] The Jews point יִקְרָא Vocabit, inſtead of יִקָּרֵא Vocabitur. Father Morin, ex Bibl. p. 390. [d] Buxtorf Tiberias. [e] Capell. Arcanam punct. Revel. crit. Sacra. l. 6. c. 4. p. 397. Uſſerius. Walton prolegomenon. 3. p. 246, &c. Gouſſet. Comment. Linguæ Hebr. p. 755. [f] Finus Adrianus Ferrarienſis Flagel. Judæor. l. 9. c. 2. Angelus Rocha. Bibl. Vatic. p. 394.

Hereſies:

Hereſies: This is One of [g] Cunæus's Viſions, which has no Foundation.

V. Others will have it, that the Grammarians began to play the Criticks at the ſame time that the Talmudiſts appear'd, becauſe they promiſe Rewards to thoſe that teach to diſtinguiſh the Accents and Pauſes of the Law; and they forbid the employing the Right-hand to diſhoneſt uſes, becauſe it is deſtin'd to ſhew the Accents of the Law.

VI. Uſher, who has plac'd the Maſoreths before St. Jerom, does not differ from that Opinion. Capel has fix'd them to the end of the Fifth Century, when the Talmud being finiſh'd, they betook themſelves to the preſervation of the Text; the Senſe of it having been firſt explain'd. It appears by the Conference held in preſence of King Cozar, in the Year 740, that the Caraites had already received the Points. As they were ſcrupulouſly devoted to the Scripture Text, and abhorr'd Traditions, 'tis very probable they ſubmitted not to this Novelty, without a great deal of reluctance. Father [h] Morin aſſerts, that the Maſoreths did not appear till the Tenth Century; that being the Firſt Age, in which there were Grammarians among the Jews, and that they were the Grammarians that introduc'd the uſe of Vowels.

VII. In vain we ſeek for the Time of the Maſoreths appearing [i] ſince they were not a Society, nor even a Succeſſion of Men that applied themſelves to this Study for a certain number of Years, and afterwards diſappear'd. The Maſſorah is the Work of a great number of Grammarians, who without aſſociating, and communicating their Notions, compoſed this Collection of different Readings agreeably to Tradition, for ſo Maſſorah ſignifies. We may ſay, that they were not in Moſes or Eſdras's Time. Theſe holy Men would not only have withſtood the ſubſtituting other Words inſtead of thoſe dictated by the Holy Spirit, under Pretence of their being impure and diſhoneſt; but we know that all the Oriental Tongues, as the Syriac, Chaldee, and Arabick, having no Points at firſt, we have reaſon to believe the Hebrew had none neither. The Samaritans, who have preſerved the ancient Characters, have always read without Points, and do ſo ſtill, and the Jews ſtill have the ſame uſage: They have in their Synagogues ſome Bibles printed with Vowels, but the Copy that is taken out of the Preſs with the Huzzas and Acclamations of the People, is a Manuſcript unpointed, becauſe Moſes gave it them in that condition.

VIII. I know not how Uſher could ſay that the Maſoreths preceded St. Jerom; for if we read that Ancient Doctor of the Church, we muſt be convinced of the contrary. And indeed St. Jerom [k] being at a loſs concerning the Word דבר Devar, which according to its different Pointings may have different Significations, obſerves that this perplexity is owing to the want of Vowels among the Jews, and every One explaining according to his Diſcretion, the Connexion this Word may have with what precedes and follows it. St. Jerom could not have complain'd thus, if the Maſoreths had already fix'd the Pointing of this Word. 'Tis true, that Marianus Victor, who has printed this Father's Works, has ſubſtituted the Hebrew Letters inſtead of the Latin, which St. Jerome perhaps made uſe of, and moreover has pointed theſe Letters, and added the Vowels to them; but nothing could be more contray to St. Jerom's Notion, who complain'd that he could not find the pointing of this Word, becauſe the Vowels were not known in his Time, and the Jews did not then make uſe of them, as they did afterwards.

IX. The Talmudiſts [l] never ſpake of the Keri, and the Ketib of the Maſoreths, nor of the Pointing, which was of ſo important uſe. Would theſe Doctors, ſcrupulous to exceſs, and deſcending to the Particulars of the ſlighteſt Punctilio's, have omitted the Regulation of the Points, if they had not been invented after them? We find, I confeſs, in the Zohar, that Moſes brought theſe Vowels from Mount Sinai; and 'tis ſaid, that Words compoſed of Conſonants without Vowels, are Women undreſs'd, who dare not appear in publick deſtitute of their Ornaments: But this Cabaliſtick Book, which is not father'd upon Simeon, the Son of Jochai, who is ſuppoſed to have lived 120 Years after Jeſus Chriſt, or ſome time before him, began firſt to be known in the Thirteenth Century, and we have reaſon to attribute it to an Impoſtor of that Time, that conceal'd himſelf under a Name venerable for its Antiquity.

X. The Jews have myſtical Commentaries on the Holy Scripture, which they call Midraſchim, which were compoſed after the Talmud; and yet here is no mention of the Points or Vowels, becauſe they were not then known. It ſignifies nothing to find them among the Caraites in King Cozar's Conference in the Seventh Century. That Conference being imaginary, can be no evidence, for the Work did not appear till Four hundred Years after the Seventh Century, and no body conteſts the Points being then in uſe.

XI. There was at the beginning [m] of the Eleventh Century, a Schiſm betwixt the Children of Aſer and Nephtali concerning many Words of the Law. Theſe Two Rabbins were Aaron, of the Tribe of Aſer, and Moſes of that of Nephtali. Genebrard, who makes them live in the 476 Year of Jeſus Chriſt, is groſly miſtaken; for they ſtill taught and diſputed in the Academies of Babylon, when they were ruin'd in the Year 1039, and Ezechias, the Prince of the Captivity, was kill'd. Theſe are, if I miſtake not, the true inventors of the Maſſorah and the Points. 1. The Jewiſh Hiſtorians take notice of their Diſpute about many Words of the Law, becauſe it was impoſſible to add the Points, without meeting with ſome contradiction about the different manner of pointing certain Words. 2. It has always been believed, that Tiberias was the Birth-place of the Maſſorah, and here we find a reaſon for it; for Aaron's Opinion prevail'd in the Academy of Tiberias, which ſtill ſubſiſted, and according to Eben Ezra, who came there ſome time after, the Bible was read there with wonderful Exactneſs. This Academy having approved the Pointing, caus'd it to be receiv'd by the Synagogues of the Weſt. 3. It was no wonder that Juda Hallevy, who compoſed a little after his Dialogues with the King of Cozar, introduces this matter in it; for it was then novel enough to excite the Curioſity of his Readers. 4. As that was the firſt time of appearance of the Jewiſh Grammarians, we have reaſon to believe, that they began to fix the Scripture-reading, for ſuch as were not perfectly acquainted with the Hebrew.

XII. They began with the Keri, and the Ketib, that is, with the Corrections upon the Conſonants, and the Collection of the different Readings found in different Copies; and afterwards finding the number of theſe Readings to multiply, and the confuſion ſometimes cauſed by the want of Vowels, they added them in the Bibles, which from thence grew more precious and more dear. The Gain encouraged the Labour, which theſe Grammarians continued for many Ages, without perfecting; and it would have remained buried, if Bombergue, the Venetian Bookſeller had not undertaken the publiſhing it. To this purpoſe he imployed a Jew of Tunis, [o] forced to leave his Country, who ſpent a great deal of time in it. Elias the Levite, work'd upon it afterwards in Germany, at the requeſt of ſome Chriſtians; Buxtorf reviſed what they had done and inſerted it in his Bible Printed at Baſil. This is the Hiſtory of the Maſſorah, which in all probability was not begun, till the tenth or rather the eleventh Century, ſince that was the time that Grammarians were found among the Jews, and we find no antienter proof of their Original.

[g] Cunæus de Rep. Heb. p. 257. [h] P. Morin Exercit. Bibl. [i] Genebrard Chronol. p. 181. [k] Hieron in Jeremium c. 22. [l] Vide Morin Ex. Bib. l. 2. Ex. 12. c. 3. [m] Ganz Tſemach David. p. 131.

it

XIII. This work has given too great an Alarm, and too ſtrong Conſequences has been drawn from it. We muſt not wonder at the Controvertiſts accuſtom'd to imploy all ſorts of Arms, who maintain that Moſes retrench'd the Vowels. The Ignorance is groſs: For beſides, that the Law was in the Hands of the People, the contracts and all the Civil Writings were read without Points, as well as the ſacred Books. There was no greater difficulty in reading the Law, than a civil Contract. Nor muſt it be maintain'd, that the Scripture has been corrupted or altered by the change of the Maſoreths, and their addition of Points, for they have followed certain Rules, or rather the uſage received in all the Synagogues, and known by all the People. They could not make any conſiderable variation, without its being perceived; for the People accuſtomed to read prophane and ſacred Books without Points, would eaſily have diſcovered the ſacrilegious Preſumption of the Grammarians, who had no other deſign for their part, than the preſerving the purity of the Text, and had not ſufficient Authority to corrupt it with any ſucceſs. 'Tis a manifeſt proof of our Aſſertion, that the Samaritan Copies, which are read without Points, agree with ours.

The Syrians at firſt made uſe only of one Point, which they put ſometimes above, and ſometimes below a word, to prevent ambiguity: They have ſince borrowed certain Figures from the Greeks, which ſerve for Vowels; in the mean time they have not by theſe changes, alter'd the ſacred Writings which have been tranſlated into their Language.

Laſtly, the Jews, accuſtom'd to pronounce, for inſtance, theſe words of Geneſis: In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth, Bereſchit bara Ælohim ſchamajim vaaretz had nothing to do, but to fix under the Conſonants the Vowels neceſſary to form theſe words intire, and facilitate the reading, and they could not depart from the common Pronunciation, without making their crime manifeſt.

XIV. 'Tis alledged that there are words, whoſe pointing would have depended on the Maſoreths, ſince it was ambiguous: 'Tis ſaid they might change certain Oracles relating to the Meſſiah, or the Chriſtian Religion, of which he is the Founder. This difficulty which is made a Monſter to contend with, is not ſo conſiderable as is imagin'd. 1. Whether there were Vowels at firſt or not, it is impoſſible to avoid the ambiguity of ſome words, the Senſe whereof is not penetrated without a great deal of pains and trouble: This is common to all the Books of the World, and the Holy Scripture is not exempt from theſe difficulties. There are different readings as to the Conſonants as well as Vowels, and the Maſoreths have been as much perplex'd with the one as the other. 2. Whether Moſes or Eſdras added the Points, or they be of a later Invention. The faults of Tranſcribers, and the variations of the Pointing are inevitable: Therefore the difficulty is not removed by aſcending as high as Eſdras, or even Moſes. Beſides, theſe doubts about the pointing of certain words, rarely regard the controverted Myſteries. The Talmudiſts relate, that Joab deſigned to kill his Maſter, who had taught him to read wrong the word Zachar; for he thought he was to kill all the Males of Edom [p], whereas God only commanded him to aboliſh their Memory. Here you ſee a Maſſacre cauſed by the ambiguity of Pronunciation; but this is only a Romance, which proves there were no Points in David's time, nor at the compoſing of the Talmud. 'Tis alſo very ill contrived, for whether Joab had orders to deſtroy the Memory, or the Males of Edom, it was ſtill the ſame thing, ſince this People were to be deſtroyed by way of interdict. Father Morin has cited the words of Iſaiah, who ſpeaking of the Meſſiah, foretells that he ſhall be called the mighty God: He obſerves at the ſame time, that the Jews have made a very conſiderable change, in the xxii[d] Pſalm, where they read, as a Lyon, inſtead of what David predicted, they have pierced my Hands and my Feet. This laſt change turns upon a Conſonant. We muſt not therefore find fault with the Vowels, nor look upon the pointing as a ſource of Corruption; we muſt rather accuſe the Jews, or perhaps the Tranſcribers, who might be eaſily miſtaken in one or both of theſe Paſſages: If we deſcend to Particulars, we ſhall find that the number of Paſſages ſuſpected to have been alter'd by the Maſoreths, is neither conſiderable, nor of any great importance.

XV. Men judge of the work of the Maſoreths, and heighten or depreſs its Authority according to their Prejudices: Some conſider it as a fence of the Law, and a certain means of preventing the leaſt alterations. Others maintain that it is an uſeleſs undertaking; that the work is full of faults, and that the Verſions of the Septuagint, or St. Jerome, are preferable to the Copies Corrected by theſe Grammarians. There's an exceſs in all theſe judgments, tho' pronounced by great Men, both Jews and Chriſtians. The new Teſtament has been received with applauſe, loaded with all the various readings Curcellæus could gather up. Another is impatiently expected from England, which has been labouring a great many Years, and wherein the Collection will be much greater. The Grammarians, or Criticks are eſteem'd, who are at the pains of rummaging Manuſcripts, collating different Editions, and producing their Diſcoveries. We muſt paſs the ſame judgment on the Maſoreths, who have glean'd up the different readings of the Old Teſtament: But as theſe Grammar Obſervations are ſeldom important, tending only to cenſure the fault of a Printer or Tranſcriber, we ought rather to praiſe the exactneſs and diligence, than the eminent Learning of thoſe that undertook it. This tedious and painful collating of Manuſcripts, requires much more application, than fineneſs of Parts. As we fail not to derive ſome aſſiſtance from the various readings the Criticks obſerve in prophane Authors, tho' their Works are not always perfect; we may gain the like inſtruction from the Maſſorah, tho' it be defective, and there be multitudes of words upon which they have made no obſervation. Finally, the faults which are obſerved in the exacteſt Edition of the Grammarians, are no obſtacle to our preferring the Original before the Verſions. We ought to follow the Hebrew rather than the Septuagint and vulgar Tranſlations.

XVI. There is no end put to the Invention of new Methods for the interpreting Scripture, or rather

[o] R. Jacob Ben Chajim.

[p] He read Zachar Male, inſtead of Zechet Memory.

ther for the giving a vaſt range to the imagination too much ſtraitned by it. 'Tis our duty to hear God ſpeaking to us; to walk exactly in his ſteps; to rejoice that he has chalked out to us the way of Salvation, inſtead of obliging us to do it our ſelves. But we are not willing to pay an implicit Obedience to God, tho' we do it even to men that we eſteem. We pleaſe our ſelves with lending him our Ideas and Imaginations, and under pretence of making him ſpeak more nobly, we make him ſay a thouſand things which the Holy Spirit never dictated. The Fathers of the Church, have been extravagantly fond of Allegories, moſt of them being of the Sect of Plato, or eſpouſing his method and Philoſophy, imitated his Symbolical Style; and imagin'd that the ſacred Writers were exceſſively addicted to that kind. The Cabbaliſts are much more Extravagant; they call their Cabbala the Soul of the Soul of the Law, becauſe they prefer it to Revelation and the Miſnah, which they look upon to be the Soul of the Law. They believe that this is the way of arriving to the Knowledge of the Perfections of God and his Works, which he has concealed from the ignorant: They have ten Sephiroths, which they include in ten different Circles; and often range them under the Figure of a Man, or a Tree, and aſcribe to them ſome miraculous Effects: Beſides this, they have thirty two roads of Wiſdom, and fifty Gates of Prudence. There's not a Letter, or Number, or Name of God, but they think contains ſome profound myſteries, when we'll be at the pains to unfold them. We can't avoid ſpeaking of this Science ſo little known, ſince we deſign to diſcover all the ſources of the Jewiſh Theology. Beſides, that ſome Chriſtians complain, that this Subject is too much neglected, ſince the Converſion of the circumciſed would become much eaſier, if we entered into the ſecrets of the Cabbala, and made uſe of it to convince them. Laſtly, the antient Hereticks have hence derived their Æones, their barbarous Names, their Principles, and Amulets. Theſe old Hereſies are not eaſily unravell'd, becauſe we have not an exact knowledge of the clue they followed; which makes it neceſſary to diſcover the Principles of this Cabbaliſtick Science.

CHAP. X.

The ſixth Order of the Jewiſh Doctors, the Cabbaliſts.

A general Idea of the Cabbala, * taken from the Zohar, and from the explication of the Mercava, or Chariot of Ezechiel.

I. THE Elogy of the Cabbala. II. God and Angels the firſt Teachers of it. III. It was not written till Simeon Jochaides. IV. The time wherein he lived: The Apparitions of Elias to this Cabbaliſt. V. The Zohar the firſt Cabbaliſtick Book: A general Idea of it. VI. The Myſteries of the long and little face. VII. The Figure of Jupiter and the Sun alike, with the Ægyptians. VIII. Another Figure of Iſis and the Moon. The Symbols explain'd. IX. The eſteem the Zohar is in. X. General reflexions and judgment upon this Book. XI. Diviſion of the Cabbala. XII. The Mercava or Chariot of Ezechiel is rarely explain'd. XIII. The different explications that are given in it. XIV. Morus's general Principles to explain it. XV. The reign of the Meſſiah found in this Chariot. XVI. Four Worlds noted by the four Animals. XVII. Jeſus Chriſt the mover of all things.

I. THE Cabbala is regarded as a noble ſublime Science, conducting men by an eaſy method to the profoundeſt Truths. It is ſo much the more neceſſary, that without it the Holy Scripture can't be diſtinguiſh'd from prophane Books; wherein we find ſome miraculous Events, and Precepts of as pure Morality as that of the Law[a], if we did not penetrate into the Truths lock'd up under the external Shell of the literal ſenſe; the Angels could not appear upon Earth, and make themſelves ſenſible to men but by aſſuming a ſubtle Body. God who is infinite has been obliged, that he might communicate his Thoughts and Councils to Mankind, to cloath them in terms proportionate to the weakneſs of their Mind. As men were groſly deceived, when dwelling upon the ſenſible Object, they took Angels for Men, they alſo fall into Error or Ignorance, when they inſiſt upon the ſurface of the Letter, or words that change with Cuſtom, and aſcend not up to the Ideas of God himſelf, which are infinitely more noble and ſpiritual. Thus the Cabbaliſts exalt the Excellency and Advantage of their Science.

II. God was the firſt Teacher of this Science in Paradiſe, and the Angels learnt it of him immediately after the Fall of the firſt Man. God indeed ſaid, Behold the Man is become like one of us. The mortal Man did not by his Sin become like God; for his Crime had ſullied his Glory and his Nature, and inſtead of advancing it to a reſemblance of the ſupream Being: But God then ſhewed the Angels his Son whom he had Begotten, and who was not like created intelligences, but like the Divinity: In the mean time he concealed the Myſtery and the ſecond Adam under the name of the firſt, ſaying, Adam is become like one of us.

Moreover, God when he created the World, left a great Hole in the North ſide. The Angels thought this Hole an imperfection in his Workmanſhip; but he taught them that it ſhould never be ſhut up, till a Being like himſelf appear'd. God meant thereby to ſignifie the lapſe of the Angels who made a breach in Heaven, which could never be cloſed up but by the manifeſtation of the Meſſiah. It being of importance to reveal all theſe Myſteries to Man, God ſent the Angel Raziel, who taught him the Truths by means of the Cabbala. He aſſign'd Angels for the inſtructors of the ſucceeding Patriarchs: Jophiel was Sem's; Raphael, Iſaac's; Metatron, Moſes's; and Michael, King David's. Thus the Cabbala is as antient as the World, and deſcends originally from Heaven.

III. The Jews had leiſure to ſtudy it in the Deſart, where they had a great deal of time upon their Hands, and they could not better imploy it than in the meditation of the Divine Attributes. Moſes who was inſtituted in the Myſteries of the Cabbala, ſince he had received Leſſons from an An-

* Cabbala ſignifies Traditions, or rather what we have received from the word Kabal, which ſignifies to receive קבל Kabbal recepit.

[a] Abrahami Patriarchæ liber Jetſirah cum not. Rittangel. Cabbala denudata Aparat. in Lib. Zohar, t. 4. p. 195. Reuchlin de Cabbala. l. 1. p. 735. R. Menaſſe Ben Iſrael Conciliator in Exod. 2. 50.

gel,

gel, and penetrated to the forty ninth Gate of Prudence, help'd to resolve the difficulties that arose, in spight of the Pilgrimages, Wars, and frequent miseries of the Nation. He laid down in his four first Books the Principles of this sublime Science, and of its most exalted part, which insists upon the Perfections and Essence of God. And therefore the Cabbalists find these four Books more masculine and strong than Deuteronomy, which they call the Woman. The fifth Book, which contains the Death of Moses, is less valued than the rest, because the Cabbala is there wanting. There were some Masters that transmitted it from Hand to Hand: David and Salomon were most profoundly versed in it, but no Body ventured to write it.

Simeon Jochaides was the first that committed any thing of it to Paper, and composed the famous Book of Zohar, to which a great many Additions have since been made. 'Tis of moment to know what is said of this Author and his Book, since herein are contain'd the mysteries of the Cabbala, and the Glory given him of having transmitted them to Posterity.

IV. 'Tis believed that Simeon lived some Years after the Destruction of Jerusalem. Titus condemn'd him to Death; but his Son and he escaped the Persecution, by hiding themselves in a Cave, where they had leisure to compose the Book we speak of. However, as he was still ignorant of several things, the Prophet Elias now and then descended from Heaven into the Cave to instruct him, and God miraculously assisted him, by commanding the words to post themselves by one another, in the order that was necessary to the forming great Mysteries.

These Apparitions of Elias, and this miraculous assistance of God, perplex some Christian Authors. The Cabbala is in too much credit with them, to acknowledge, that he who reveal'd its Mysteries was an Impostor, who impertinently boasted of a divine Inspiration. To maintain that the Devil, who in the Infancy of the Christian Church, animated Apollonius Thyaneus, in order to shake the belief of the Apostle's Miracles, spread likewise among the Jews the report of these frequent Apparitions of Elias, to prevent the belief of that which was made in favour of our Lord, at his Transfiguration upon Mount Tabor; is to deceive one's self: For God hears not the Prayer of Devils, when they attempt the Destruction of the Church, nor suffers the Apparition of Prophets to depend upon them. They might turn these Apparitions into Allegories; but they chuse rather to say, that Simeon Jochaides dictated these Mysteries by Divine Assistance. This is the Testimony given him by a Christian [b] who has publish'd his Book.

V. The first Part of this Work is intituled, Zeniutha [c], or Mystery, because indeed, abundance of hidden things are revealed in it. They are pretended to be taken from the Holy Scripture; and the truth is, there is hardly any thing advanced without citing some place of the Holy Writers, which the Author explains after his own way. It would be hard to give a methodical Extract of it, especially before we have opened the Principles of this Science; but here in particular we discover the Microprosopon; that is the little Face; the Macroprosopon, that is the long face; his Wife: the nine, and thirteen Dispositions of his Beard, &c.

The following Book, which is call'd the [d] Great Synod, enters into a greater train of Particulars. Simeon had a great reluctancy to reveal these Mysteries to his Disciples; but as they represented to him, that the secret of the Lord is for them that fear him; and all of them assured him that they fear'd God, he engaged more boldly into the Explication of the grand Truths. He explains [e] the dew of the brain, of the old Man, of the great Face: He examin'd afterwards his Scull [f], his Hairs [g]: For he wears upon his Head a thousand millions of thousands, and seven thousand five hundred curls of Hair as white as Wool, to each curl there go four hundred and ten Hairs, according to the number of the word Kadosch. From the Hairs he passes to the Forehead [h] Eyes [i], Nose [k], and all these parts of the great Face, contain admirable things; but especially his Beard [l] is a Beard that deserves infinite praises: "It is, "precious in all its parts: This Beard transcends all "Encomium, never Prophet, nor Saint, came near "it. It is white as Snow; it reaches even to the "Navil: It is the Ornament of Ornaments, and "the Truth of Truths; woe unto him that touches it. There are thirteen parts in this Beard, all including great Mysteries; but none but the initiated comprehend them, and understand this obscure Language.

Lastly, the Little Synod [m] is the last farewel that Simeon Jochaides took of his Disciples. He was disturb'd to see his House crowded with People, by reason of the ceasing of the Miracle of a supernatural Fire, which kept off the multitude of Disciples, during the continuance of the great Synod; but some of them being retir'd, he order'd R. Abba to write down his last words. He explain'd once more the Old Man: [n] "His "Head is conceal'd in a superior place, where it "is not seen; but it expands its Forehead, which "is beautiful, agreeable; 'tis the complacency of "Delights; and therefore it has there the Figure "of a Forehead, which appears with the brightest "Light; and when it appears, the complacency is "manifest in all the Worlds. The Prayers are "heard; the Face of the little Visage is enlighten-"ed; the Eyes are as admirable as the Forehead: "They always behold, and never sleep; for the "Psalmist says, that he that keepeth Israel never "sleeps, and therefore he has neither Eye-lids nor "Eye-brows. He [o] speaks with the same obscurity of all the parts of the little Visage, not omitting that, which sweetens the Woman. We must believe that there are some great Mysteries conceal'd under this Shell of words, which are not to be taken in their literal Sense.

VI. If it be ask'd what is the meaning of all these mysteries, it must be confess'd it is very difficult to unriddle them, because all the Allegorical Expressions being capable of different senses, and raising very different Ideas, a Man must be at a vast deal of pains and trouble before he can determine; and who would take that pains, that did not promise himself great Advantage from it? However, let us try to penetrate into these profundities. The Cabbalists distinguish three sorts of Worlds, and represent them under the Figures of three Men, the terrestrial Man, the Celestial Man, and the Archetype, or the Original and Model of the other. To each of these Men they allot a Wife, and all the parts of the human Body, pretending that these parts are so many significant Symbols, which represent the Operations, and Effects of the Deity. They imagine likewise a long and a little Face, to which likewise they assign, 1. Some Wives, becauſe the firſt production of all Things is cauſed by Union, as Generation is cauſed by the Union of Man and Wife. 2. They aſcribe to them a Brain that is conceal'd, by which they inſinuate, that God comprehends all Things in his ſecret Council. 3. They ſay, That the Scull is full of a white Dew, as clear as Chryſtal. By which they mean, that all Colours have a very ſubtle Principle, and every thing is white. 4. The little [a] Face has a Right-Arm and a left, which are his Bounty and Severity; his Body is Beauty; his right Thigh is Power, and his left is Glory. 5. He has abundance of Hair to ſhade a part of that radiant Light which would dazle the Saints; for it would be impoſſible to behold this Light, were there not ſomething to rebate its Luſtre; and they that receive it directly, have attain'd to the higheſt Pitch of Exaltation. 'Twould be to no purpoſe to carry our Explications farther, our deſign being only to ſhew that theſe Emblems have Truths lurking in the Bowels of them.

[b] Knorrius à Rosenroth Cabbala denudata, t. 3. præf. [c] Siphra de Zeniutha sive Liber Mysterii. [d] Idra Rabba.
[e] Sect. IV. p. 393. [f] Sect. V. [g] Sect. VI. p. 396. [h] Sect. VIII. p. 399. [i] Sect. X. [k] Sect. p. 408.
[l] Sect. XI. p. 412. [m] Idra Suta Synodus parva. [n] Idra Suta Sect. III. 531. [o] Sect. XXII. p. 593.

VII. Let us rather obſerve, that this method of imaging the Operations of the Deity in humane Figures, is derived from the Ægyptians: For they pictur'd a Man with a Face of Fire, and Horns; a Croſs in his Right-hand; ſeven Circles in his Left, and Wings faſtned to his Shoulders. By this they repreſent Jupiter, or the Sun, and the Effects he produces in the World. The fiery Face ſignified the Heat that enlivens all Things; the Horns, the Rays of Light. His Beard was myſterious, as well as that of the Cabbaliſt's long Face; for it ſignified the Elements: His Croſs was the Emblem of his Power over all ſublunary Bodies; his Thighs were the Earth loaded with Trees and Crops; Waters proceeded from his Navil; his Knees denoted the Mountains, and rugged Parts of the Earth; his Wings, the Winds, and the Celerity of their Motions; laſtly, the Circles were the Symbols of the Planets.

VIII. The Ægyptians repreſented the Moon likewiſe, and her Effects under ſuch another Figure; for Apuleius gives us a Deſcription of Iſis, the Mother of the Gods, who has had her Names multiplied ad infinitum.

TE TIBI UNA QUÆ ES OMNIA DEA ISIS.

This Iſis was the Moon, who was painted like a Woman a little ſtooping, wearing a Globe upon her Head; Two Serpents-Heads, a Garland and Ears of Corn, having a thick Head of Hair, ſignifying the Influence ſhe has in the growth of Plants. Her Robe of various Colours was imboſs'd with Stars, and embroider'd with Rays; ſhe held a Seal in one Hand, and the Genius of the Nile in the other, and ſet one Foot upon the Earth, and the other upon the Sea, to intimate her Dominion over both theſe Elements; that ſhe cauſes the Revolutions of the Seaſons, the Tides of the Sea; the Overflowings of the Nile, the Fruitfulneſs of the Earth, and the Plenty of Harveſts repreſented by the Ears of Corn. Laſtly, Her party-colour'd Robe points to us the different Changes ſhe is ſubject to.

As we ſhall ſee hereafter, that the Cabbaliſts have borrow'd this Science from the Ægyptians, we muſt not wonder that Simeon, or he that forged the Zohar imagin'd a long and a little Face, that he furniſh'd him with a Beard and Hair, and a Scull, and Brain, and Head, which he knows not himſelf; becauſe as Man is unacquainted with his own Nature, God ſtill leſs underſtands his own Eſſence, which is infinite.

IX. Simeon expired with theſe Allegories in his Mouth. Whilſt he talk'd to his Diſciples, a dazling Light diffuſed it ſelf over all the Houſe; inſomuch that no body durſt look upon him. On the Outſide was a Fire, which denied admittance to the Neighbours; but the Fire and Light diſappearing, they perceived that the Lamp of Iſrael was extinguiſh'd. One kiſs'd his Hands, and another his Feet. Zipport's Diſciples came in multitudes to honour his Obſequies, and pay him their laſt Reſpects, but they were diſmiſs'd, ſince Eleazar his Son, and R. Abba, who had been Secretary of the little Synod, deſign'd to act alone. As they were burying him, a Voice was heard, crying, Come to the marriage of Simeon, he ſhall enter into peace, and reſt in his Chamber. A Flame preceded the Coffin, and ſeem'd to ſet it on fire, and when he was depoſited in his Tomb, a Voice was heard again: This is he that cauſed the Earth to quake, and the Kingdoms to ſhake. Thus the Jews make the Author of the Zohar a Man of Miracles, even after his death, becauſe they reſpect him as the Father of all the Cabbaliſts; however his Book was conceal'd for near a thouſand Years.

Nor are the Jews the only Perſons that mention him with admiration. Some Chriſtians affirm, that his Book is neceſſary, as being capable of ſupplying the deficiency of the Goſpel, wherein the Principles of the contemplative Divinity are abſolutely wanting. Beſides, this Author being contemporary with the Apoſtles, his Expreſſions may give a great light to many obſcure Texts of Scripture. In fine, Poſtel will have all the Chriſtian Religion to be plainly deliver'd in this Book.

X. Four Things may be obſerved upon it. 1. That there is no certainty that Simeon Jochaides, its Author, lived at the Time of the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. If this Book had been as ancient as St. John's Goſpel, 'tis impoſſible it ſhould not have been known and often cited. The current Opinion is, that it was compoſed a little before the Talmud, and it muſt be own'd, that we find ſome Hints of the Sephiroths in the Gemara; wherein it is aſſerted, that the World was created by the Six Perfections of God; and it often runs into myſtical Explications. But yet the Talmud is ſo very different from the obſcure Principles of the Cabbala, that we have reaſon to believe it was not compoſed till the Twelfth Century, in which it firſt appear'd. And tho' the firſt Author of it were as ancient as is pretended; yet there is ſuch a multitude of Additions to his Work, that there is ſcarce any poſſibility of diſtinguiſhing his part from the reſt, which thing conſiderably depretiates his Authority. 2. There is ſuch Obſcurity in what is ſaid, that it's almoſt impoſſible to dive into its meaning. We perceive indeed that the Author's drift was to explain the Perfections of God, and the production of the Univerſe, in Allegorical Expreſſions; but who can unriddle them? And when we have diſcover'd this long and little Face, all that we gain by it, is ſome viſionary Notices, incapable of ſatisfying a Divine who is in ſearch of any ſolid Truth. 3. The Precepts collected by the [b] Prieſt Jiſaſchar, [c] which are ſo often compared with thoſe of the Goſpel, and which the Chriſtians compare to a Lamp in the Hand, to diſcover the obſcurity of Holy Writ, are mingled with abundance of Errors. Can we believe, for Inſtance, that all the Souls that are created, divert themſelves in the Terreſtrial Paradice, and before they are embodied, are inveſted there with ſome ſort of Habit and Countenance? "But

[a] Vide Cabbala denudata Zenuitha. [b] Vide Apparatus ad Libr. Zohar in Cabbala denudata. t. 3. p. 1. [c] R. Jiſaſchar. fil. Nepthali Sacerdos Synopſis celeberrimi illius Codices Cabbaliſtici qui dicitur liber Zohar. Tit. XI. Porta retributionis. p. 110.

" the Pleaſures they enjoy are very different from " thoſe of this World. We are told there, that " the Children, which die before they have ſtu- " died the Law, have their Palace apart, where " they remain in cuſtody of a Governour, who con- " ducts them up to Heaven, and preſents them to " God, upon every Saturday and New-Moon. The " Soul of an Idolater, who dies in the Holy-Land, " ſuffers different Revolutions, till it depart out of " it. The Souls of the damn'd emit a certain Or- " dure, which is call'd Stercus fervens: They don't " ſuffer on the Saturday; however they can't come " out, and their Bodies are carried thither, which " are eaten with Worms: The Bones of the Heathens " will receive ſome Refreſhments in their Tombs by " way of Medicine, but they ſhall never riſe again. It would be endleſs to give an account of all the Errors that are found in this Collection. 4. Laſtly, This Piece contains abundance of ridiculous Stories, ſome of which reſpect the Author of the Zohar. We are told here an inſipid Tale, how God once explain'd in Heaven the Precepts of the Law, which explication perfectly correſponded with that which Simeon Jochaides had made on Earth. The ſame God had order'd ſome Birds to go and ſcreen the Heads of Simeon and his Diſciple, who ſtudied in the open Sun; but whereas they interrupted the Diſcourſe by their chattering, God produced a Fountain and Trees, whereupon they perch'd themſelves. Simeon one Day ſaw the Sun conceal himſelf three times, and a Serpent eat the Duſt, from whence he concluded, that the Inhabitants of the Country were menaced with ſome great Calamity, which he diverted by his Prayers. His Diſciple Abba, once ſaw a Star ſo eclipſe another, that it caſt no light, which made him conclude, that God entred into Paradiſe to diſcourſe with the Saints.

XI. There is no need of inſiſting longer on the Zohar, it ſufficing to have given a general Idea of its Author, Antiquity and Contents, which is the moſt ancient and venerable Work among the Cabbaliſts. Beſides that, thoſe who would dive into theſe Myſteries, are obliged to read it, becauſe they are hard to be underſtood, and every Reader may have very different Views in their Explication. All the Cabbaliſts are not ſo abſtracted, nor follow the ſame Method. The Moderns are the Interpreters of the Ancients, and give at leaſt ſomewhat more light to their Principles. Their Method is to find Myſteries every where in hiſtorical Events, in Words, in Letters, and in their Number and Conjunction. Hereby they pretend to raiſe Men to the Contemplation of the Divine Perfections, and to the Knowledge of the greateſt Secrecies, and Arcana of Nature, which the reſt of Mankind are entirely ignorant of.

XII. The Cabbala is commonly diſtinguiſh'd into Two Parts, One whereof treats of the Knowledge of the Divine Perfections, and Celeſtial Intelligences; and is call'd the Chariot, or Mercava, becauſe they imagine, that Ezechiel has explain'd the chief Myſteries in the miraculous Chariot he mentions at the beginning of his Viſions; and the other ſtyl'd Bereſchit, or the beginning, proceeds upon the ſtudy of the Sublunary World. This Name is given it, becauſe it is the firſt Word of Geneſis. [a] Maimonides was acquainted with this Diſtinction, who on the one hand juſtifies myſtical Expreſſions by the Example of Plato, who hath wrap'd up the Principles of his Philoſophy in Expreſſions and Figures, which are often obſcure; and on the other, he acknowledges, that their Obſcurity hath occaſion'd the loſs of a great many Myſteries contain'd in the Mercava, and eſpecially, becauſe no Book hath been writ to explain it. He ought to have done it himſelf; ſince he acknowledg'd that it was difficult to perform it, and impoſſible to be help'd by the Books of thoſe that went before him. But he thought that the Myſteries, which he look'd for, might be found in the Scripture.

The Maſters are not allowed to explain the Mercava before their Scholars. The Pumdebitan Doctors once conſulted a great Man, who travell'd that Way, and conjured him to teach them the ſignification of this Chariot. He promiſed, upon Condition they would acquaint him with what they knew of the Creation, which was agreed: But Joſeph, having heard them, refuſed to ſpeak of the Chariot, for which he borrow'd theſe Words of the Canticles, [b] Milk and honey are under thy tongue; that is, a ſweet and great Truth ought to remain under the Tongue, and not be publiſh'd. A young Student once ventur'd to read Ezechiel, and attempt the Explication of his Viſion; but a devouring Fire iſſued from the Chaſmal, and conſumed him; wherefore it was debated by the Doctors, whether it was convenient to conceal the Prophet's Book, which occaſion'd ſuch great Diſorders in the Nation. A Rabbin driving his Maſter's Aſs, R. Jochanan, the Son of Sacai, ask'd his leave to ſpeak and explain the Viſion of the Chariot to him, Jochanan diſmounted immediately, becauſe it is not lawful to hear this Explication walking, or aſtride upon an Aſs. The Diſciple ſpoke, and forthwith the Fire came down from Heaven, and all the neighbouring Trees chanted theſe Words of the Pſalm, [c] Praiſe the Lord from the earth, &c. By this we ſee, they aſcribe great Myſteries to this Chariot of the Prophet.

XIII. But they are divided about its Explication. Some will have it the Whirlwind which was to ruſh violently from the North, to repreſent Nebuchadnezzar, who deſtroyed Jeruſalem, and burnt its Temple: The Four Animals to be Four Angels that preſided over the Monarchies: The Wheels denoted the Empires, which received their motion and progreſs, and decay from the Miniſtry of Angels. There was one Wheel in another, becauſe one Monarchy deſtroyed another. The Baylonians were overthrown by the Perſians, the Perſians by the Grecians, who in their turn were conquer'd by the Romans.

This is the literal Senſe; but then they find here many other Myſteries, both in Nature and Religion: The Four Animals, are Four celeſtial living intelligent Bodies. The Wheel is the firſt Matter, and the Four Wheels are the Four Elements: But this is but the Surface of the Chariot, if you dive farther into it, you'll diſcover the Eſſence of God, his Attributes and Perfections; the Nature of Angels, and the State of the Soul after Death: All theſe Myſteries are contain'd in it. Laſtly, Dr. More, a great Cabbaliſt, has found the Reign of the Meſſiah in it; but his way of doing it deſerves a little to be inſiſted on, becauſe we ſhall thereby diſcover his Sentiments, and the Cabbaliſtick Genius.

XIV. Before he engages in a particular Explication, he [d] lays down many Principles, the chief whereof are theſe: All the Souls, without excepting the Meſſiah's, were created at the beginning of the World. The World in its original State was Diaphanous, and ſeparated into many Vortices, or rather ſo many Suns. There were Two Elements, of which this material World was form'd; one call'd the Spirit of Nature, or Sandalphon was the ſubject of the Divine Operations, and the other the Vehicle. The World, or this great Vortex, was divided into four unequal parts; whereof one is call'd Aziluthical, another Briathical, the third is the Jeſirathical World, and the leaſt of all is the Aſiathical. All the Souls were at firſt included in the ſuperior Aziluthick World, but they were clad with ſome kind of Body. Theſe Souls were ſubject to various Revolutions, and were to paſs into the four Vortices, or Worlds before mentioned. The Souls that don't Sin voluntarily; but are driven by Fate and Neceſſity into the Aſiathick World, are ſenſible of a Divine Vertue that ſuſtains them, and reſtores them again to the Aziluthick World, as being Veſſels of Election. The Souls and Angels therein apply themſelves wholly to the Contemplation of God and his Perfections; and therefore this may juſtly be call'd the Empyreal Heaven, by reaſon of the ardent Love its Inhabitants are inflamed with. The Soul of the Meſſiah, which was there with the reſt, made ſuch great progreſſes in the Love of God, as to become united with the Word Eternal in a ſuper Aſiluthick, or Hypoſtatick manner; and thus it was, that the Soul of the Meſſiah, and the Word, became one ſingle Perſon. The Soul of the Meſſiah, united to the Word, became the Empreſs of the four Worlds, preciſely at the time that the Briathick World was form'd, and before God had promiſed the redemption of Mankind. This was the Empire and Glory the Meſſiah enjoy'd before the Foundation of the World, and which he begs of his Father to reinſtate him in the Poſſeſſion of: [a] And now, O Father, glorify me with thine own ſelf, with the glory which I had with thee before the World was.

[a] Maimonides. More Nevochim. p. 1. c. 17. p. 20. p. 2. c. 39. p. 273. [b] Excerpta Gemaræ de opere currus apud Hottinger, p. 50, 53, 89. [c] Pſ. 148. 7. [d] Viſionis Ezechieliticæ ſive Mercavæ expoſitio ex principiis Philoſophiæ Pythagor. Theoſophiæque Judaicæ Cabbala denudata. t. 2. p. 225.

As ſoon as the Meſſiah's Soul receiv'd the Empire of the four Worlds, and promis'd to die upon the Croſs, it was inveſted with the Power of confirming the Souls and Angels in Heaven, that no evil might happen to them; which is doubtleſs what St. Paul intimates, when he ſays he has reconciled all things in Heaven and in Earth. The Souls that deſcended into the Briathick World, or if you pleaſe, to the Heaven of Saturn and Jupiter, lived there with a great deal of candour and integrity: But thoſe that came down to the third, or Jeſirathick World, which is the Heaven of Mars and Venus, were very ſubject to the Paſſions of Anger and Love; but the greateſt of all their faults was Pride and Ambition; and therefore it is very probable it was here the Battel was fought betwixt the Giants, and the Son of God, who vanquiſhed them, as [b] Baruch inſinuates. Here it was that Lucifer revolted, and cauſed Mankind to be tempted by Ophoneus his Ambaſſador. In fine, this was the cauſe of the fall of Man in Paradiſe, which the Scripture has related in ſo Ænigmatical a manner. And indeed, as by the Devil in the Revelations, we muſt not underſtand one ſingle Spirit, but all the Devils, we muſt alſo have the ſame notion of the Serpent. 'Twas the whole combination of Devils that acted; and Adam was not a ſingle Man, but Mankind, which being ſeduc'd, and with the Angels, fell from the third World into the fourth, which is the Aſiathick. The Devils remain'd in the Atmoſphere, and Men deſcended into the Body of that Cold Luminary.

XV. Having laid down [c] theſe Principles to explain the Creation and Fall of Man, he proceeds to Ezechiel's Viſion, founded upon this Syſtem. The Object of this Viſion was the Meſſiah's Reign, whoſe Soul had been united to the Word, and had received immediately upon it, the Dominion over Angels and Souls: Tis this whole combination of Spirits that makes up his Kingdom. The Spirit which influences the Vortex is the Spirit of Nature, which began to give Motion to the Units conceal'd in the Abyſs. For Ezechiel obſerves that the Whirlwind came from the North, that is, from a hidden place; the Sun ſeldom enlightning the Northern Countries, by reaſon of the two frequent Miſts and condenſed Clouds that gather there; for which reaſon it was moſt proper, to denote that profound Abyſs cover'd with darkneſs, from which the Spirit of Nature had ſent out a vaſt number of Beings. The four Animals, and four Wheels, which Ezechiel ſaw, were the four Worlds, Aſiluthick, Briathick, &c. whereinto the Souls might paſs; for it was an Error in the antient Cabbaliſts to allot to each Man four different Souls, under pretence that they might change their condition, it being much more natural to acknowledge but one Soul which travels into the four Worlds. The Prophet repreſents theſe Animals with human Faces, as a certain intimation, that they were the Emblems of Souls and Angels; and it may be obſerved by the way, that there is reaſon to believe that Souls and Angels are of the ſame Nature, Order, and Figure, ſince theſe Animals, tho' they have an human Face, are notwithſtanding call'd Cherubims. The Wings annex'd to theſe Animals prove, that the Souls fell not by their own fault, but by a ſort of fatality, from the upper World to the lower, where they found the aſſiſtance and grace of God, which winged them ſpeedily towards Heaven: Wings are indeed an Emblem of the adventitious ſuccours they have received, and of their expeditious return to God. The Calves Feet that are attributed to theſe Animals have perplex'd the Interpreters. The Seventy who were Cabbaliſts, and Apprehenſive leſt it ſhould be thought the Prophet gave too groveling an Idea of Souls, have avoided the Shoal, by aſſigning them winged Feet. But their Scruple was ill grounded; for Cherub [d] from whence the word Cherubim is derived, ſignifies an Angel, and an Ox; and therefore this term ſerves to confirm the ſtrict Union which is betwixt Souls and Angels.

XVI. Theſe Animals had each four Faces. As this renders them alike, it might be imagin'd they could not repreſent the four Worlds. But this is a miſtake, for their likeneſs was not ſo perfect as to exclude all difference. They all were partakers of the Nature of one another; and yet one was to be conſider'd as an Eagle, another as a Man, &c. This perfectly correſponds with the Hypotheſis of the four Worlds. Some modern Cabbaliſts have thought the laſt World of a quite different Nature from the firſt, but erroneouſly. Theſe four Worlds have ſomething in common, but they have alſo ſomething that is peculiar to each. The Eagle that ſoars on high, and ſteadily beholds the Sun, is fit to repreſent the Empyreal Heaven where the Souls elevated above all things, behold God face to face, The Man who engages in Society, makes Laws, and deliberates about Actions, is the Symbol of the Briathick World, wherein much Virtue ſtill ſubſiſted. The fierce and roaring Lion ſignifies the third World, where anger often ſwayed, and Pride and Haughtineſs corrupted Souls and Angels. Laſtly, the Aſiathick World is repreſented by an Ox, becauſe the Souls that ſinn'd grew more brutified; ſo as at laſt to fall into the very ſink of Corruption, like the Ox that ſcruples not to tread in the Mud and Dirt.

XVII. Laſtly, the Animals walk'd not but as the

[a] Joh. 17. 5. [b] Baruch 3. 26. [c] Cabb. de. nud. p. 240. [d] כרב Cherub. To labour.

Spirit

Spirit drove them, which is the true Reign of the Meſſiah, wherein Souls act only by the inſpiration of the Divine Spirit, and according to the Will of God, which alone is good, agreeable and perfect: And indeed the Man who is ſeated upon the Throne, is the Soul of the Meſſiah, Hyperaziluthically, or as the Schools ſpeak, Hypoſtatically united to the Word. Saint Jerome maintains, that this Man is God the Father; but his Notion ought to be rejected. 'Twas the Word that was pleas'd at this time to give an Idea of his Incarnation and Kingdom, which St. John confirms [b], when he quotes the Prophet Iſaiah, who ſaw the glory of Jeſus. Iſaiah's and Ezechiel's Viſion is the ſame; and if the Word appear'd in the former, there's no doubt but he was likewiſe in the latter. Theſe are the Myſteries which are diſcovered in the great Events of Scripture by the Art of the Cabbala, which is in requeſt with the Chriſtians as well as the Jews; but we muſt penetrate farther into the Principles of this Science.

[b] John 12. 41.

CHAP. XI.

Of the Myſteries contain'd in all the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet. Their Uſe.

I. THE Subject of this Chapter. II. The Myſteries of the Letter A. III. The Letter B. is a Woman, and would embrace her Husband. IV. The relation theſe Letters have to the Angels. V. Their relation to animate Creatures. VI. To inanimate Creatures. VII. The Myſteries of the ſeven double Letters. VIII. The Myſteries of the twelve ſimple Letters. IX. Of the Gematry, or value of the Letters. X. Accents full of Myſteries.

I. HAving given a general Idea of the Cabbala, 'tis fit to enter into ſome particular account of this Science. The Cabbaliſt Divines find Myſteries in every thing; there's not a Letter of the Law without them. We ſhall not follow them in all their Speculations, it being ſufficient to obſerve four main things upon the Letters.

II. Firſt, each Letter has ſome relation to the Sephiroths, or Splendors, or to the Works of the Creation. The א or A is the Doctrine. This Letter denotes the inacceſſible light of the Deity; that infinitum, call'd Enſoph, and relates to the firſt of the Sephiroths, which is the Crown: But this is not all; for this Letter is compounded of a Vau and two Jod's, which has ſtill ſome great Myſteries compriz'd in it; for the Vau that makes the middle Branch, ſignifies the Tipheret. The two Jods are two Arms, which open to embrace the Malchut or the Kingdom. The Jod on the right indicates Wiſdom, which always carries her views upwards; and ſheds her influences upon the other ſplendors beneath her. The Vau is the intelligence, which Wiſdom has conceived, and the Jod above beſpeaks the Knowledge which the Intelligence has produced. Another inverts the Letters which compoſe the word [c] Aleph, which making Pala, and ſignifying to conceal, he here diſcovers another way the firſt of the Splendors; that Crown which is actually conceal'd; for Eye has not ſeen it, nor has it enter'd into the Heart of Man.

III. How many Myſteries are contain'd in Beth, the ſecond Letter of the Alphabet! One maintains that this Letter is a Woman, and that the two Lines ב are two Arms, betwixt which ſhe receives and embraces her Husband Tipheret. This is ſignified by Solomon, when he makes the Spouſe ſay, ſet me as a Seal upon thy Heart; for Tipheret imprints his Figure in the Malchut deſign'd by the Letter B. others maintain that this ſecond Letter, which ſignifies Houſe, muſt relate to the Wiſdom, that is the ſecond Splendor: for the Scripture ſays that Wiſdom has built her Houſe. Laſtly, this Letter is open to receive the holy Spirit, which flows from the parts of A, ſhe being as a Diſciple receiving Leſſons from her Maſter's Mouth: She is alſo like an Houſe and the Foundation of Unity.

The Guimel, or the G anſwers to the Word גא which ſignifies Fire, and denotes the Holy Spirit. The Name Guimel is given it, becauſe it recompences, and does good to all the World; it reconciles the moſt oppoſite things, and reduces Juſtice and Mercy to a juſt equality.

Might, by means of this Letter, obtains the Effects of Mercy; hereby it is waſh'd in its Mother's Milk, and afterwards produces very advantageous Effects; which is ſignified by Moſes, relating that Aaron's Rod yielded Almonds [d]. The Text has ſome alluſion to the Word Guimel, and therefore has the vertue given it of ripening green Fruits, and tempering Juſtice with Mercy.

It would be endleſs to engage in a diſcuſſion of the I. and H. becauſe theſe two Letters coming into the Name of Jehovah, have almoſt infinite influences in the Cabbaliſtick Syſtem: And beſides, we ſhall ſpeak of them when we examine the Myſteries of this ineffable Name. For the preſent let us only obſerve two things concerning the Myſteries of theſe Letters; one is, that they are the Symbols of Angels, and of ſome order of Intelligences. The G, for inſtance, repreſents the Aralim. Theſe are great, ſtrong, vigorous Angels, deſcended in a third Degree from Goodneſs, illuminated by Intelligence, and conſequently having great Authority over inferior Orders. Some Chriſtians, jealous of theſe Aralim, maintain they are the Thrones mention'd by St. Paul, which the Cabbaliſts have ſtollen from the Church under another Name.

V. It muſt be farther obſerved [e] that the ten firſt Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, anſwer to the ten Sephiroths. The Caph denotes the primum Mobile, which is the firſt Cauſe, the Omnipotent God immediately moves, and the famous Metatron is its particular intelligence. The Lamed, or L. implies the Heaven of Saturn, and the firſt Sphere of the Planets. The M. is the Heaven of Jupiter.

VI. 'Tis fit the other Creatures ſhould have their particular Letter, otherwiſe they would be diſhonoured; and therefore this is not wanting. The P. [f] Capital is the Emblem of the Intellectual Soul: The [g] final denotes all the Animal Spirits. The [c] אלף by inverting the order of the Letters is פלא. Apparatus in lib. Zohar pars 1. Loci communes Cabbaliſtici ſecundum ordinem Alphabeticum concinnati. p. 1. & Kircher Oedipus Ægypt t. 2. Gymnaſ. Hieroglyph. Claſſis IV. c. 3. p. 225. [d] וינסל Numb. 17. 8. [e] Kirker Oedip. Ægypt. t. 2. [f] פ Pe Capital. [g] ף Pe final.

Tſade

Tsade represents the matter of the Heavens, and the four Elements: The Koph signifies Minerals, Mixta, &c. the R. Fruit-Trees, and all Vegetables; the S. is the Symbol of Reptiles, and all sensitive creatures. Lastly, the T. is the Symbol of Man; because as this Letter is the last of the Alphabet, so Man is the most perfect and accomplish'd of all the Works of God.

VII. 'Tis an Error to imagine that the Letters have no other Use than to make words by their combination; for according to the Cabbalists, the World was formed by Analogy to the Hebrew Alphabet, and the harmony of Creatures resembles that of the Letters, which God made use of to compose the Book of Life. 'Tis a certain combination of Letters that makes the Beauty and Excellence of the Universe; and since the World was made with relation to the Alphabet, certain things must necessarily be annex'd to a respective Letter, whereof it is the Symbol and Emblem; which is a thing of easy discovery to those that are initiated in the Cabbala: But here the Letters are distinguish'd into Simple and Double. There are seven double Letters, whose significations we shall see in this Cartoon.

The whole Mystery of this terminates in shewing two things.

First we are taught, that by the help of a Letter we may arrive at the knowledge of many Objects which have a Connexion with it. The single Letter B. reminds us of Death, of Life, of the Eye, which is the Gate of the Soul, of the Sun, the noblest of all the Planets; of Semeliel, one of the seven Spirits; of Nagiël, one of the seven intelligences; of the Angel Raphael, and by degrees we ascend up to Prudence, which is one of the Sephiroths, one of the Splendors, and principal emanations of the Deity. How many things are learnt by the assistance of one Letter; and the rest being as exuberant, a Man becomes learned at a cheap rate, and not only acquires the knowledge of Nature and its Operations, but rises up to the Contemplation of the Deity and his infinite Perfections.

Secondly, they exalt the Efficacy and Influences of the number Seven, whereby all things are made; for according to these Divines, the seven Sephiroths pour their influences upon the seven Intelligences of the seven Planets; which have great power over the œconomy of the Earth, and the Events in it consisting in seven things. There are seven Gates of the Soul, two Eyes, two Ears, one Mouth, and two Orifices in the Nose: There were seven days employed in the Creation of the Universe: There are seven Sabbaths from the Passover to the Pentecost, and seven times seven Sabbaths for the Year of Jubilee. Lastly, the seventh Millennium will be the grand Sabbath, and the time of rest for all the Creatures. There was a necessity therefore of seven double Letters, to which these seven things might be referred.

VIII. It must not be imagin'd that the twelve simple Letters are useless, whilst the double ones are so honourably employed. Their use is to represent the twelve Signs of the Zodiac; the twelve Months; the twelve Cardinal Winds; the twelve Tribes of Israel: But this being commonly known, that I may not prolong the account in a tedious manner, I will only put down here their Significations and their Angels.

The 12 simple Letters.	Their Numb.	Their Signification.	Their Angels.
He	5	Sight	Melchidale.
Vau	6	Hearing	Asmodel.
Zaïn	7	Smelling	Ambriel.
Cheth	8	Speech	Muziel.
Teth	9	Tast	Varchiel.
Jod	10	Copulation	Hamaliel.
Lamed	30	Operation	Zuriel.
Nun	50	Walk	Zetachiel.
Samech	60	Anger	Advachiel.
Gnajin	70	Laughter	Hamael.
Tsade	90	Suspicion	Garrubiel.
Koph	100	Sleep	Borahiel.

These Letters are not unactive, but God makes an Advantageous Use of them, and the combinations of his Name to influence the Angels: These Angels influence the twelve Signs of the Zodiac; these Signs shed their influences upon the Earth, and preside over all the Generations in it. Thus the Letters have Originally a great Power; as not only assisting us to find out the Analogy of the World, and a certain harmony of the Universe, of Terrestrial and Celestial Things, not seen by the ignorant, but as being so many Conduits thro' which God efficaciously acts upon the Intelligences.

IX. A third Use is made of these Letters; for as they serve for Arithmetical Figures, as we see in the two preceding Tables, every Letter that composes a Word is valued. They reckon how many Letters make tens, and hundreds; and when they have found a Word of equal Estimate, they put it instead of another; supposing that two Words which make the same number must have the same Sense: We easily discern the Consequences of this method, which is call'd Gematria, or Geometry.

X. Lastly the Accents of the Letters are not useless. Jesus Christ says that one Jod, or rather least point of the Law shall not pass away. Wherefore the Accents, and all the Particles of the Law, must be endued with a great Vertue; but this is not presently discover'd; the Cabbalists alone having that Advantage. They observe that all the Words of the Decalogue, are Accented, which is not found in any other part of Scripture; an evident proof that God has annex'd to them some profound Mystery, in quest whereof the Cabbalists are in full pursuit. We shall see hereafter that the Christians follow them; but at present we'll lay open the Cabbala.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Myſteries the Cabbaliſts find in the Words of Holy Scripture.

I. Words muſt have many Significations. II. The Myſteries of the word Fire. III. Of the word Fleſh. IV. The way of changing words invented by Jeremy. V. Of the method of the Cabbaliſts called Notaricon. VI. Solomon Meir converted by the Cabbala: A Jew's Hatred of him. VII. The Euchariſt found in the firſt word of Geneſis: In the beginning. VIII. The Trinity diſcovered in this word. IX. The Worſhip of the Trinity proved from the ſame word. X. The Chriſtians eſteem for this part of the Cabbala.

I. IF the Letters are of ſo great Uſe, 'tis no wonder that the words that are compoſed of them, are of great importance in Religion. Shall Man have the Privilege of giving a word many Significations, and in the mean time God, whoſe Knowledge is infinite, be deprived of that Liberty? ſhall it be in our power to determine the Uſe of a word to a ſingle Object, and to circumſcribe the Omnipotent within our bounds? Shall the ſupream Being be ſubject to our Caprice, or to a tranſient Cuſtom, and be obliged to adapt himſelf to our finite and limited notices? No, doubtleſs, it was poſſible for God to annex influences, to certain words, and a Vertue and ſignification not known by all the World; and ſince he could not manifeſt himſelf, he has conceal'd his Eſſence and Perfections under the diſguiſe of Words. We may therefore be allowed to penetrate beyond their common Signification, in order to diſcover what God has been pleas'd to conceal in them, and the relations they bear to the Deity.

II. And in reality, the word Fire אש anſwers to one of the Sephiroths, call'd Might, becauſe the Might of God is a conſuming Fire: But now there are ſeveral ſorts of Fire; a devouring Fire; a burning Fire; a conſuming Fire. The Binah, [a] or Intelligence, is a languid Fire; the Malchut, or the Kingdom, is an aſpiring Fire; becauſe hereby is meant the exact and ſevere Judgment, which is commonly compared to Fire. There is a whitening Fire; which is Judgment temper'd with Lenity, and the Fire of Water, Judgment dictated by Mercy.

III. The word Fleſh [b] repreſents the Malchut, or Kingdom, which is the laſt of the Sephiroths: but by inverting the Letters, the word ſignifies a Rupture, and that not without a Myſtery. For the Schekinah, which is on the ſide of Judgment, is call'd Fleſh, and is red: She ſhines with the Flames of her Love, and deſires to be united to her Huſband; and when through the corruption of the Age, there is neither Bleſſing nor Union, then the word ought to be changed. 'Tis no longer then a ſhining Fleſh, but a Rupture of Marriage; which particularly happens in the time of Famine. In proof of it a Text of Moſes is quoted [c] ſpeaking of the Famine in Ægypt. Moreover here we find a reaſon, why it was not lawful to ſeeth the Fleſh of the Kid in its Mother's Milk, becauſe Milk is the Emblem of Mercy, and the Fleſh that of Judgment; whereas Mercy ought not to be confounded with Judgment. Laſtly, there are two Canals, one of Judgment that flows with Blood, and the other of Mercy that runs with Milk; but when the Iſraelites ſuck, the Blood is changed into Milk by the ſtrength of Fire; and Milk iſſues from the Canal of Judgment inſtead of Blood. By this we are to learn, that God has a great deal of Goodneſs for the Iſraelites, and that his Wrath is turned into Bleſſing.

IV. When the Words don't ſignify what they would have them, they change them, and they have Rules preſcribed for this Alteration; whereof one of the principal is this. The laſt Letter of the Alphabet is to be ſubſtituted in the place of the firſt. The T. ת put for the A א the S ש for the B ב. They pretend that Jeremy made an happy Experiment of this method to conceal the meaning of his Predictions; when having nothing but miſeries to foretel, he was afraid of exaſperating the King againſt him: Being an able Cabbaliſt, he tranſpoſed the Letters of the words he was to ſpeak, and thus prevented their being underſtood. And indeed, by this change of the Words, they ſay and make others ſay what they pleaſe.

V. There is another Rule upon the ſame Subject, which is more frequently obſerved. They ſeparate all the Letters of a Word, and in the place of each Letter ſubſtitute a new Word, beginning with the diſmembred Letter. 'Tis a kind of Acroſticks made in Divinity, like thoſe of the Sybilline Oracles; it muſt only be obſerved that the ſubſtituted Word have the ſame number of Letters as the disjoynted. [d] Bereſchit is the firſt word of Geneſis, and ſignifies in the beginning. The ſix Letters this Word is compounded of are taken aſunder, and ſix other Words compoſed of ſix Letters each, are put in its place, the firſt beginning with a B, and the ſecond with an R, and thus the Senſe and terms of a ſacred Writer may be changed: Mean time this method, which is call'd Notaricon, is common enough: I will only quote one inſtance, which includes in it many others.

VI. Salomon Meir was Born at Caſal in the Year 1606. He was call'd (Meir) illuminating, becauſe on the Day he was Born his Father's Houſe was fill'd with a glazing Cœleſtial Light, growing rich in the plundering of his Native City beſieged by the Spaniards, he reſolved to retire to Jeruſalem. He came to Venice, where he applied himſelf ſo hard to the Study of the Cabbala, as to become one of the moſt famous Cabbaliſts of his time. Not only the Jews of Jeruſalem where he treated, but thoſe of Africa, Aſia, and Europe, to whom he was ſent to collect ſome Charities, heard him as an Oracle, till he turn'd Chriſtian in the Year 1664, receiving the Name Proſper at his Baptiſm. His Converſion drew upon him the hatred of his Nation, and particularly that of one David Jouaillier, an Italian, a Man in ſuch eſteem with the Princes of that Country, as to be ſtiled, il Duca delli Ebrei, the Duke of the Hebrews. This violent Jew deſign'd to eat the Heart of Proſper, having firſt broiled it upon the Coals. Proſper knowing it went to him, and condemning ſo bitter a Zeal, indeavour'd to explain to him the Motives of the changing his Religion, in a way he could not reprove. He only took for his Text the firſt Word of Geneſis, Bereſchit in the beginning, wherein he found all the Myſteries of the Chriſtian Religion. Thus he went to work in imitation of theſe Gentlemen who have found in this

[a] This is the third Sephiroth. [b] בשר Baſchar fleſh inverted, שבר it is made Schabar Rupture. [c] Gen. 42. 1. 19.
[d] בראשית Bereſchit.

this Word the Covenant of Fire, and a thousand things of this nature. [a]

Meir observed, that this Word in the beginning, does not make the Sense compleat. There is something wanting, which the Doctors are forced to supply, in the beginning of all things, or in the beginning of the Creation. God did not want Expressions to avoid this Ellipsis, but he did it designedly, to signifie, that there was a Mystery in it, which he reserved to be discovered by the Cabbalists. I. Dividing this Word, we may read it Bar Aschit, which signifies he has placed the Son: And thus we find the Son of God in the very first Word of Genesis; but farther, God calls him Bar, which signifies also Wheaten-Grain, because this Son was to be worshipp'd in the Bread of the Eucharist. The Argument is conclusive: But farther still, 'tis observed, that God has given Three Sorts of Names to Wheat, with respect to the Three States of Man. In the State of Innocence, Man was to receive his Nourishment from the Tree, which God had planted in the Terrestrial Paradice; and therefore this Bread was call'd Degan, as much as to say taken from the Garden. 'Tis also call'd Chitta, a Word derived from another, signifying Sin, because Man was to eat it after the Fall: But, lastly, Under the Gospel, the Son was to be the Bread of Believers: And therefore he was pleas'd that the Names of Bread and Sin should be confounded, and that both should equally be derived from the first Word of Genesis.

VIII. By substituting [b] Six Words for the Six Letters, which make up (Bereschit) the first Word of Genesis, Prosper discovered the Son in the first Letter; the Holy Spirit in the second, the Father in the Third; and these Words in the Three following, The Trinity is a perfect Unity. You see here the Jew is well advanc'd to discover the Trinity at one single Effort, and to prove it by one only Word: But farther, he observes, that the Son is the first that appears, because it is he by whom all things were made. That the Holy Ghost comes next, because it was the Son that sent him. If I go not away, he will not come unto you; and this perfectly agrees with the Custom of the Christians, who celebrate the Feasts of Passover and Assention of Jesus Christ, before the Pentecost, and the Feast of Trinity comes last of all.

IX. The Cabbalist wou'd not stop in so smooth a Road, but following the Principles of his Art, push'd home his Point; and without deserting the first Word of Genesis, by transposing its Letters, found other Explications containing so many important Doctrines of Christianity. He expounded the Adoration due to the Trinity by these Words, You shall equally worship the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and their Trinity. This Explication was succeeded by another more expres. You shall adore my First-born; my First, whose Name is Jesus, or Saviour. And this with a Third, When the Master, which is Jesus, shall be come, ye shall worship him. The Jew multiplied his Transpositions without end. I will relate but Two more of them, whereof One was: I will chuse a Virgin worthy to bring forth Jesus, and ye shall call her blessed. The other related to the Eucharist. I will hide my self in a Cake of Coals, because ye shall eat the body of my Son Jesus, for so it must be translated to answer the Original. Lastly, He had recourse to the value of the Letters, and from thence extracted new Mysteries, and attacking his Enemy by the Cabbalistick Figures, proved to him the greatest part of the Truths of the Christian Religion. There is nothing surprizing in this Story, since he followed the Method received by his ancient Brethren the Cabbalists, and admired by most Jews. A Proselyte of the same Nation, whom I question'd concerning the Motives of his Conversion, pretended to find them all in the Word Bereschit. Perceiving my Mistrust by my Smile, he pursued, with new Proofs, derived from some Words of Scripture, with equal Subtilty: Arm'd with this Science, he pretended to make great Conquests over his deserted Brethren: This is the best use that can be made of this Art. These Arms may be turn'd upon those that use them with great advantage. The Expedient is easie; in the mean time, the Truths of Christianity ought to be better supported, to make a solid Conversion.

X. But let us not be mistaken: There are Christians as [c] bigotted as the Jews, to this way of explaining Scripture. 'Tis nothing to see Divines try to reconcile the Principles of Plato, Parmenides, and Descartes, with those of the Cabbalists, to bring Doctors that seem so dissonant to a Confederacy, and to search for Coincidences and Arguments even in the Faults of the Impression of some of Cicero's Treatises: [d] But One's amaz'd to find an entire System of the Cabbala produced from the Lord's-Prayer. 'Tis the fault of the vulgar and careless Divines, if these great and noble Lights are lost. Men acquiesce in a common Erudition, instead of leaving and selling all for this Pearl of great price. Atheists would be easily converted, if the Cabbala was employed against them, to discover to them the Perfections of the Deity, which would convince them of his Existence. They have the Artifice to despise it, and make it despised by others, as fearing the Effects of it. The Christians would be wrapt up with Admiration, could they discover all the Mysteries contain'd in each Word and Letter of the Lord's-Prayer. They would not only see the Seven Periods of the Church, its Fate and Revolutions during these Periods, as they speak, but they would find all the Splendors, or Sephiroths in the same Prayer, which they daily repeat, without comprehending the Sense and Wonders of it. And indeed, don't these two first Words, Our Father, [e] contain in them the Three First Splendors, that is, the Crown, Wisdom, and Prudence? By this means we should rise to the Contemplation of the Divine Perfections, and the Divinity it self, which ravishes and charms all those that approach it. Thus the Christian Cabbalists, of whom we shall speak hereafter, argue.

---

[a] בראשית, Bereschit, in the beginning. Changing the Letters by way of Anagram, they make Berit Æsh ברית אש, Covenant of Fire, because the Law was given upon Sinai, with Thunder and Lightning. [b] Bartolocci Bibl. Rab. t. 4. p. 529. [c] Vide Cabbala denudata præf. ad portam cœlorum, & rationem nominum & Sephirarum t. 2. p. 15. [d] Στέφανες apud Ciceronem, read στέφανος, Corona, which is the First Sephiroth of the Cabbalists. Id. Apparat. ad Libr. Zohar, p. 3 & 4. [e] Præf. adumbratio Cabbalæ Christianæ, t. 4. p. 1, &c. Buddæus introduct. ad Histor. Philos. Hebræor Thes. 40. p. 281. vide & Bartolocci Bibl. Rab. t. 4. p. 233, & 524.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Myſteries which the Cabbaliſts find in the Names of GOD, and particularly in that of JEHOVAH.

I. THE neceſſity of knowing the Name of God. II. Why God did not take the Title of Jehovah till after the Creation. III. The extent of the Letter Jod inſcrutable. IV. Other Letters of the Name Jehovah full of Myſteries. V. The Explication of theſe Words, Thou ſhalt not take the Name of God in vain, different from that of Chriſtians. VI. The Name of Jehovah is a Tree, a General, a King. VII. The difference of the Jews from other Nations explain'd by the Names of God. VIII. The Miſeries of this People explain'd the ſame way. IX. The Subordination of the Names and Surnames of God: Four Lieutenant Generals with their Soldiers. X. How God takes the Standards of Juſtice and Mercy. XI. God's way of manifeſting himſelf, explain'd by the different Habits of a King. XII. The advantages of knowing the Names of God in Prayer. XIII. The Myſteries contain'd in theſe Names explain'd after the Chriſtian way. XIV. The value of Letters, and Combination of the Name Jehovah.

I. NO body ought to wonder at our giving Names to God, though he be a pure and ſimple Eſſence; for ſince we can't behold this Eſſence, it is neceſſary to know it by its Operations, and to render it in ſome ſort ſenſible to Men by the Effects which it produces. If the Scripture, ſtammering with us, aſcribes to God the Parts of an humane Body; an Heart to denote his Compaſſions; an Arm to remind us of his Strength, and the Aſſiſtances he has afforded us; by a much ſtronger Reaſon, we may call him the Eternal, the Omnipotent, the Self-ſufficient.

The Knowledge of theſe Names is of the higheſt Importance; the Books of Moſes being only a Concatenation of the Names and Surnames of the Deity. They all proceed from that of Jehovah, as the branches and Leaves of a great Tree iſſue from the ſame Stem; and this ineffable Name, is an inexhauſtible Fountain of Wonders and Myſteries.

II. Firſt, It is obſerved, that God took not the Title of Jehovah [a] till he had finiſh'd the Creation of the World, and Moſes before that call'd him Ælohim [b], for he ſays, In the beginning the Gods created the heaven and the earth. What is the reaſon of this? 'Tis that the Name Ælohim, which is imperfect, was ſuitable to the Time in which God accompliſh'd his Work by parts: But when the Creatures had been extracted from nothing; when the Univerſe was wrought up to its Perfection, he took the Name Jehovah, which is abſolutely perfect; and this is inſinuated by Moſes, in theſe Words of Deuteronomy, [c] He is the rock, his work is perfect. God aſſumed the ſame Title when he created Adam; when he drove him out of Paradiſe: He aſſumes it ſtill in abundance of other particular Events, relating to the People of Iſrael, becauſe it contains a perfect meaſure of Juſtice and Mercy. Juſtice and Mercy are Two Vertues that ſeem oppoſite. God hears them, he weighs their Privileges, and pronounces Judgment. [d] We find this Idea in the Three Patriarchs; for Abraham was Mercy, Iſaac Juſtice, Jacob who kept a Medium, pitching his Tents betwixt thoſe of his Grandfather and Father, is Judgment, being the Father [e] of the Twelve Tribes, and knowing their Weakneſs, and the wretched Fate they were to undergo if Judgment was rigorouſly executed, he ſollicits Mercy for his Children; God intervenes, and pronounces Sentence; and when the Iſſue of it is a Deliverance or a Puniſhment, wherein Juſtice and Mercy preſerve their Rights, the work of the rock is perfect, and God is then ſtiled Jehovah.

III. Moreover, this Name [f] ſerves for a Bond of union to all the Splendors or Sephiroths, It is the Pillar and ſupport of them: All the Letters that compoſe it are pregnant with Myſteries. The Jod, or the J, is One of thoſe Things which Eye hath not ſeen, but has been conceal'd from all Mankind. Its Eſſence and Nature are incomprehenſible; it is not lawful ſo much as to meditate upon it. When they are ask'd what it is, they anſwer not, as if it were nothing, as being as inconceivable as nothing. Man may lawfully revolve his Thoughts from one end of the Heavens to the other, but he can't approach that inacceſſible Light; that primitive Exiſtence contain'd in the Letter Jod. We muſt believe it, without examining and diving into it. Theſe are the wonderful Secrets of Wiſdom, We muſt not enquire into what is conceal'd, nor penetrate into what is covered, ſay the wiſe Men. Job ſpoke of this Letter, when he ſays, [g] it is hid from the eyes of all living, David ſpeaks to the ſame purpoſe: [h] He declares, that his thoughts are very deep; and Solomon ſays the ſame thing. [i] It was far from me. That which is far off and exceeding deep, who can find it out? And indeed the Maſters call this Letter Thought, Idea, and preſcribe no bounds to its Efficacy. 'Twas this Letter which flowing from the primitive Light, gave being to Emanations, it wearied it ſelf by the way, but reſumed new vigour, by the aſſiſtance of the Letter H. He, which makes the ſecond Letter of the ineffable Name.

IV. The other Letters have alſo their Myſteries, and their particular relations to the Sephiroths. The laſt H. ה diſcovers the Unity of a God and Creator; and upon this Letter that Grand Truth is built: But Four great Rivers iſſue from this Unity; the Four Majeſties of God, which the Jews call Schekinah. This we are taught by [k] Moſes, relating, that one River watered the Garden of Eden, the Earthly Paradice, and afterwards divided it ſelf into Four Branches.

V. The whole Name Jehovah includes all things in it in general; and therefore he that pronounces it, puts the whole World into his Mouth, and all the Creatures that compoſe it. Hence it ought not to be pronounc'd but with great caution. God himſelf hath ſaid it, Thou ſhalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain. The Queſtion is not about the violation of Oaths, wherein we abſurdly call God to witneſs to the Promiſes we make; but the Law forbids the pronouncing this great Name, except in his Temple, when the High-Prieſt entred the Holy of Holies, on the Day of Propitiations. And indeed how is a vile Creature able to bear upon his Tongue, the World, and that Omnipotent God who bears the Univerſe? Men muſt be taught a thing they are ignorant of, namely, That the Man that pronounces the Name of the Lord, moves the Heavens and Earth, in proportion as he moves his Lips and Tongue. The Angels feel the motion of the Universe, and are astonish'd, and ask one another whence comes this Concussion of the World? 'Tis answer'd, that the impious N. has moved his Lips in pronouncing the ineffable Name; that this Name has mov'd all the Names and Surnames of God, which have communicated their motion to Heaven and Earth, and all the Creatures: At the same time an Indictment is drawn up against this Wretch; all the Sins he has committed in his Lifetime are numbred, and he rarely escapes Condemnation.

---

[a] יהוה Jehovah. [b] אלהים Ælohim. [c] Deut. 32. 4. [d] Miſhpat, Judicium. [e] Vide Cabbala denudata appar. ad Lib. Zohar p. 385. [f] יהוה [g] Job 28. 21. [h] Pſ. 92. 6. [i] Eccleſ. 7. 25. [k] Gen. 2

VI. This Name has a supream Authority over all the Creatures, and governs the World by its Power. And lo! how all the other Names and surnames of the Godhead take their Places round it, like Officers and Soldiers about their General. Some of the first Rank are Princes and Standard-Bearers, others are as the Troops and Battalions that compose an Army. Below the Seventy Names, are the Seventy Princes of the Nations which constitute the Universe. When therefore the Name of Jehovah influences upon the other Names and Surnames, an Impression is made of these Names, upon the Princes depending on them, and of these Princes upon the Nations living under their Protection; and thus the Name Jehovah governs all the World.

This Name is represented by the Figure of a Tree having Seventy Branches, which draw their Juice and Sap from the Trunk; which Tree is that mention'd by Moses, that was planted in the midst of the Garden, and forbidden Adam to taste of; or else this Name is a King, who has different Habits, according to the different Capacities he appears in. When a Prince is at Peace, he cloaths himself in sumptuous and magnificent Habits, to dazzle the People, but when he is in War, he puts on a Breastplate and an Helmet: He undresses when he retires into his Apartment without his Courtiers, and Ministers, or at least puts off some of his Ornaments which were only for pomp and shew, and then his Officers see him closer and more familiarly. Lastly, He discovers his Nakedness when he is alone with his Wife. This Emblem admirably expresses the Properties and Effects of the Name Jehovah, which sits like a King upon his Throne, in the midst of the Names and Surnames, that obey him as so many Subjects and Vassals. The Reader does not immediately find out the Exactness of this Comparison, but we must explain it, and trace the matter higher.

VII. The Seventy Nations which People the Earth, have [a] their Princes in Heaven, which surround the Throne of God, as Officers ready to execute the Orders of their King: They encompass the Name Jehovah, and every first Day of the Year petition for their New-Year's-Gifts, that is a certain portion of Blessings they are to shed upon the People committed to their charge. For indeed these Princes are poor, and would have but little Knowledge, did they not derive it from the ineffable Name, which enlightens and enriches them. He bestows on them at the beginning of the Year a certain measure allotted to each Nation, whereunto nothing can be added or diminish'd: The Princes may beg and pray all the Days of the Year, and the People petition their Princes, but all to no purpose. And this makes the peculiar difference betwixt the People of Israel and other Nations. As the Name of Jehovah is peculiar to the Jews, they may every Day obtain new Graces. For Solomon says, [b] that the words wherewith he made supplication before the Lord, shall be nigh unto the Lord our God day and night. But David assures us, speakng of other Nations, that they shall pray unto God, [c] and he shall not save them. The Word in the Original is one of the Names of God, but is often given to Kings and Princes, to honour them. This was the thought of the Psalmist, who would signifie that the Nations should invoke their Prince every Day, without obtaining any Assistance from him, besides that portion granted by the ineffable Name the first Day of the Year.

VIII. The design of the Cabbalists is to teach us, that God has the immediate Government of the Jews, whilst he leaves the infidel Nations to the direction of Angels; but they carry the Mystery farther. There is a vast difference betwixt Nations and Nations, some of which seem less agreeable to God, and are harder treated than others; but this proceeds from these Princes being differently placed about the Name Jehovah; for though they all receive their Subsistence from the Letter Jod, or J, the initial of Jehovah, yet their Portion is different, according to the Place they possess. Those on the Right-hand are gentle, liberal Princes, but the Princes on the left are severe and pitiless. Hence the saying of the Prophet, That it is better to trust in the Lord than in Princes, as is done by the Jewish Nation, upon whom the Name of Jehovah acts immediately.

Again, We see here the reason of God's Conduct with the Jews. Jerusalem is the Navil of the Earth; a City situate in the middle of the World. Kingdoms and Provinces, People and Nations encompass it on all Sides, because it is immediately under the Name Jehovah. This is its peculiar Name, and as the Princes which are the Heads of the Nations are rank'd about this Name in Heaven, so the infidel Nations surround the Jews on Earth.

They farther hereby explain the Miseries and deplorable Condition of the Jews; for God has appointed Four Captains to the Seventy Princes, who are continually watching the Sins of the Jews, to take advantage of their Degeneracy, and to enrich themselves at their expence; and indeed when they observe that the People commit great Sins, they interpose betwixt God and the Nation, and divert the Channels, proceeding from the Name of Jehovah, and flowing with Blessings upon Israel, by inclining them towards the Nations who are inrich'd and fatten'd with them; which Prodigy Solomon has so well explain'd, saying, [d] The Earth is disquieted for a Servant when he reigns, and a Fool when he is filled with meat. The Servant that reigns are the Princes, and the Fool fill'd with Meat, are the Nations govern'd by them.

IX. There is a Subordination betwixt the Names, as betwixt the Powers of Heaven. There are Four Principals that are near the Name Jehovah, and for that reason can suffer no diminution: And these Four great Names have so many Surnames under them: As for Example, the Name Æl bears the Standard of Mercy, and has some inferior Officers that form his Squadron and his Army, viz. the Titles of Great, Gracious, Merciful, &c.

The Name Ælohim carries the Standard of Judgment, which is that of War, and his Subalterns are the Titles of Magnificent, Judge, Prætor, visiting Iniquity, and rendring to every one according to his Works. All which Names and Surnames are as so many Habits of the Name Jehovah.

---

[a] Appar. ad Lib. Zohar. p. 403. [b] 1 Kings 8. 49. [c] אל. [d] Prov. 30. 22.

X. 'Tis

X. 'Tis eaſy now to apply the Emblem of the King, and of the different Habits worn by him. When God means to ſhew Mercy, he takes his ſumptuous Habits; he cauſes the Standard of Mercy to be carried before him, and takes the name of * Æl.

When he deſigns to puniſh Sins, he Styles himſelf Ælohim; he arms himſelf with Wrath and Vengeance, and takes the Standard of Judgment, with the Officers that belong to it.

When he calls the Worldlings into Judgment, he takes a Party-coloured Habit, conſtituted of Juſtice and Mercy; but Mercy is the prevailing Colour, becauſe the Pſalmiſt ſays that God is ſlow to wrath, and abounding in goodneſs.

God never appears to the Nations but in pompous and royal Habits, in order to attract their Veneration. However, this diverſity of Habits is an Impediment to the diſcovery of him, and the exact Knowledge of his Perfections; but in treating with the Jews, he condeſcends to be that King who diveſts himſelf of all the Ornaments of the Crown, and lays down his Arms; and then the Name Jehovah appears in an undreſs. And therefore the wiſe Men ſay that the Name Jehovah is pronounc'd and written in the Temple as it ought to be; but in the Provinces it is only expreſs'd by Surnames and Circumlocutions; that is, the Jews know God better than the Gentiles.

Laſtly, this Name will appear in all its nakedneſs, and already does ſo to the Saints and Fathers, that have attain'd Perfection. This is the Church and the Wife of that ineffable Name, to whom he diſcovers himſelf without any ſcruple.

XII. By this we ſee that it is of the greateſt importance when we pray to God, to know the Signification and Uſe, and Myſteries of his Names, ſince by a miſtake in this point we might imprecate God's Juſtice and Wrath upon us, when we deſign'd to obtain his Mercy; we might damn our ſelves by aiming at Salvation. Moreover, we learn from hence that the true means of arriving to the higheſt pitch of Knowledge and Goodneſs, would be to approach the Name Jehovah.

XIII. When all is done, the Cabbaliſts carry us a long way about, to teach us, 1. That God is the Fountain of all Good, and the Director of all things. 2. That he judges Men with a Juſtice temper'd with Mercy. 3. That when he is provok'd againſt Sinners, he arms himſelf with Wrath and Vengeance. 4. That when he is prevail'd with by Repentance, he gives way to his Mercies and Compaſſions. 5. That he prefers the People of Iſrael to all other Nations, and has given them the Knowledge of Himſelf. Indeed he has committed to them his Laws and Ordinances, which he has not done to other Nations. Laſtly, they interſperſe theſe Truths with ſome Errors, as by pretending that God leaves all the Nations of the World to the conduct of Angels.

XIV. There is another method of finding theſe Myſteries in the Name of God. The Cabbaliſts caſt up the ſum and value of the Letters: And as they believe all the Letters of the Alphabet depend upon the name Jehovah, they make many combinations of them: They frame a Name of 12, another of 42, a third of 72 Letters, which is the moſt important of all; to each of which Letters they aſſociate a particular Angel, and fancy that this has a great power to expel or attract Devils, and to perform magical Operations. But we have been long enough upon this Subject, let us proceed to the Sephiroths, which make the Head of the Cabbala.

* אל

CHAP. XIV.

The explication of the Sephiroths *, or Splendors.

I. THE great difficulty of explaining the Splendors. II. The number of theſe Splendors: Their Circle. III. The Splendors are the Attributes of God. IV. An Explication of this Myſtery. V. The Cabbaliſt's want of method. VI. The extravagant Effects they attribute to the Splendors. VII. How Abraham had Iſaac by vertue of the word ſo: This paſſage of Scripture explain'd Cabbaliſtically. VIII. The Explication of the Enſoph or Infinite. IX. Whether the three firſt Splendors are the firſt Perſons of the Trinity. X. A deſcription of the firſt Splendor, or Crown. XI. Its explication. XII. The Union of the Splendors. XIII. Their Subordination. XIV. Twenty two Canals of the Splendors. XV. The deſcription of theſe Canals. XVI. The dependance of the Splendors on the Crown, &c. XVII. Of the thirty two ways, and fifty Gates of Wiſdom. XVIII. A deſcription of its Gates. XIX. The Art of the Cabbaliſts. XX. The difficulty of underſtanding them. XXI. Chriſtians that find their Religion in the Cabbala. XXII. The Trinity diſcovered by Rittangelius. XXIII. The Meſſiah and his Miracles. XXIV. A Compariſon taken from Glaſſes, which deſtroys this Syſtem. XXV. Another Compariſon of Schabté that overthrows it.

I. THE Sephiroths make the moſt ſecret part of the Cabbala; and the Knowledge of theſe Emanations and Splendors is not to be purchaſed without a great deal of Pains and Application. Herein conſiſts the Perfection of the Contemplative Divinity, which Charms and Raviſhes thoſe that are initiated in it: We don't pretend to dive to the bottom of theſe Myſteries: The various Interpretations that are given them, ſhew how difficult it is, eſpecially for Chriſtians, to underſtand them; however, we'll unriddle them as far as they are intelligible, and conſiſtent with Reaſon and good Senſe.

II. There are ten Sephiroths. They are ſometimes repreſented under the Emblem of a Tree; becauſe ſome reſemble the Root and Stem, others the Branches proceeding from them; they are ſometimes ranged in ten different Circles, as being contain'd one within another; but moſt commonly they are repreſented by the Figures in the Table ▫. The names of them are the Crown, Wiſdom, Underſtanding, Might, or Severity; Mercy, or Magnificence; Beauty, Victory, or Eternity; Glory; the Foundation, and the Kingdom.

III. Some will have it that the Splendors (which is the Name we ſhall give them for the future) are only Numbers; but they are rather Perfections and Attributes of the Deity. The Eſſence of God being Simple, it would be a groſs Error to imagine it compounded of theſe Perfections, as of ſo many different Parts; but in order to form a clearer Idea of its manner of acting, we muſt diſtinguiſh its Attributes, conſider its Juſtice, Mercy, and Wiſdom. The Cabbaliſts ſeem to have no other View, than the conducting their Diſciples to the Knowledge of the Divine Perfections, and to make them ſenſible that it is on the combination of theſe Perfections that the Creation and the Government of the Univerſe depends; that they have a ſecret and inſeparable Union, and that one moderates and qualifies another: And therefore they imagine Canals or Conduits through which the Influences of one Splendor are communicated to another. The World, ſaid [n] Simeon Jochaides, the firſt of all the Cabbaliſts; could not be govern'd by Mercy alone, "and by the "Pillar of Grace, and therefore God was obliged "to add the Pillar of Might or Severity, which "makes the Judgment; it was farther neceſſary "to reconcile theſe two Columns, and to place eve-"ry thing in a natural order and proportion: For "which reaſon the Pillar of Beauty is ſet in the "middle, to reconcile Juſtice with Mercy, and to "ſettle order, without which 'tis impoſſible for the "Univerſe to ſubſiſt. From Mercy which pardons "Sins, proceeds a Canal tending to Victory, or "Eternity, becauſe by vertue of this Attribute we arrive to Triumph and Eternity. Laſtly, the Canals that proceed from Mercy and Might, and terminate in Beauty, are full of numerous Angels. There are thirty five of them in the Canal of Mercy, which Recompence and Crown the Virtue of the Saints, and as many in that of Might to chaſtiſe Sinners; which number of ſeventy Angels, that have different Names given them, is taken from the 14th Chapter of Exodus. Here we have a manifeſt Truth enough; viz. that it is Mercy which Rewards the Righteous, and Juſtice which puniſhes the Impenitent.

* Sephirah ſignifies Splendor or Light. ▫ V. Table.

IV. I am apt to think that the clue of the Myſtery lies in this. The Cabbaliſts conſidering God as an infinite incomprehenſible Eſſence, not communicable immediately to the Creature, have imagin'd that he manifeſted himſelf, and acted by his Perfections flowing from him; as the Perfections and Eſſence of the Soul would be unknown, did ſhe not manifeſt and make her ſelf known by the acts of Reaſon and Virtue.

They call theſe Perfections the Habits of God, becauſe by them he manifeſts himſelf, One would think indeed that God hereby conceals, inſtead of revealing himſelf, as a Man that wraps himſelf up in a Cloak, would not be known; but there is a vaſt difference, in as much as Man is finite and limited; whereas the Eſſence of the Deity is imperceptible, without ſome intermediate Operation; as we can't ſee the Sun, becauſe his Luſtre dazles us, but we behold him behind a Cloud, or through a tranſparent Body.

They ſay too that they were the Inſtruments which the ſupreme Architect made uſe of; but to prevent any miſtake, they have added, that theſe numbers proceeded from the Eſſence of God himſelf, and that if we conſider them as Inſtruments, yet it would be a groſs Error to believe that God [o] can take them up and lay them aſide, according to his occaſions for them; as the Artiſt quits his Tools when the Work is finiſh'd, or he has a mind to reſt, and reſumes them when he begins again: This is impoſſible; for the Inſtruments are not faſtened to the hand of the Carpenter: "But Numbers, theſe re-"ſplendent Lights, proceed from the Eſſence of the "infinite, and are always united to him as the "Flame to the Coal. And indeed as the Coal diſcovers by the Flame its Strenghth and Virtue, which before were hid; ſo God reveals his Greatneſs and Power by the reſplendent Lights we ſpeak of.

Laſtly, the Cabbaliſts ſay that theſe are not only Numbers as More imagined, but Emanations which flow from the Divine Eſſence as Rays from the Sun, and heat from the Fire, without being divided from it. The Divinity has not ſuffer'd either trouble, or pain, or diminution, in giving them exiſtence, as a Candle loſes not its light, nor ſuffers any violence, when employed to light another that was put out, or never lighted. Theſe Compariſons don't run upon all four; for the Candle lighted, ſubſiſts independently of that it borrowed its Light from; whereas the drift of the Inventors was only to prove that God ſuffers no alteration by the emanation of his Perfections, and that they always ſubſiſt in his Eſſence.

V. Tho' this be the main deſign of the Cabbaliſts, in their deſcription of the Divine Perfections, yet it muſt be own'd, they load this deſcription with ſo many different Colours, as to throw it into confuſion. They carry their Allegories ſo far, as they make it difficult to follow them, and ſpeak ſo often of theſe Perfections, as of ſo many different Perſons, that it requires an almoſt infinite attention not to be miſlead by them; which is ſo true, that the Chriſtians that have attempted to write in Hebrew upon the Myſtery of the Trinity, finding no word to expreſs the Perſons, generally employ the word Sephirah, becauſe 'tis the Style of the Cabbaliſts to ſpeak of the Perfections of God, as of Perſons different from his Eſſence.

VI. Laſtly, they multiply the Effects of theſe Sephiroths ad infinitum. Theſe Effects that are often miraculous, are annext to the ſimple Letters, whilſt no reaſon can be given for it but the Caprice of the Cabbaliſts. For example, the Kingdom is the laſt of the Splendors; but the Word Coh [p] is annex'd to it, which often occurs in Scripture, and ſignifies So or thus. Simeon Jochaides maintains, that this Word is cloſe by the Kingdom, on the ſide of Might; but the ſame Author affirms in the Zohar, that there is a Coh both on the right and left: And therefore the Kingdom is call'd Coh, becauſe of the twenty five Gates that open on its right ſide, and other twenty five on its left. This Coh, or the word So, is the Gate of the Myſteries. By this the Prophets enter into the Prophetical Sphere; 'tis alſo the Gate of Prayers, and that which renders them effectual. By this it was that Abraham obtain'd the Birth of his Son; the Proof is evident; for God led the Patriarch, who complain'd of dying without Heirs, and ſhew'd him the Stars of Heaven, ſaying, So ſhall thy Seed be.

VII. This is the Senſe of theſe words, which vulgar Divines don't underſtand: God ſaid [q] to Abraham, Look now towards Heaven, there is not ſo much as one rank of Conſtellations or Stars that promiſes thee Poſterity: But what the Stars are incapable of doing, Coh ſhall effect by his Virtue; So ſhall thy Seed be, ſaid God: That is, paſſing through this Gate thou ſhalt aſcend to the Fountain of Generations, even to that place; that ſource of Liquor that flows upon, and influences over all the Productions of Nature, and by this means thou ſhalt have Children; So ſhall thy Seed be. God afterwards bleſſed Abraham; but of what Advantage were theſe Bleſſings to the Jews, if God had not given them the Key of this Reſervatory? Therefore he intruſted it to the Prieſts, ſaying to Aaron and his Sons, [r] On this wiſe, or So, ſhall ye bleſs the Children of Iſrael. There you ſee the Coh that open'd Sarah's Womb, and brings down bleſſings on her; ſo ſhall thy Seed be; be; So ſhall ye bleſs the Children of Iſrael. It would be eaſie to multiply theſe Examples, in diſengaging them from their obſcurities. But let us return to the particular explication of the Splendors.

[n] Simeon ben Jochai in Jeſirah cum not. Rittangel p. 185. & 186. [o] Abrahami Patriarchæ Liber Jezirah. c. 1. Sect. 2. p. 175.
[p] כהCoh ſo. [q] Apparat. ad lib. Zoh. t. 1. p. 466. [r] Numb. 6. 23.

VIII. The Enſoph, that is ſeated above the Sephirotick Tree, or the Divine Splendors is the Infinite. It is ſometimes call'd Being, and ſometimes no-Being. 'Tis a Being becauſe all things derive their exiſtence from it; 'Tis no-Being becauſe 'tis impoſſible for Man to penetrate its Eſſence and its Nature. It is involved in unacceſſible Light, and conceal'd in impenetrable Majeſty. Moreover, Nature has not any Creature that can be compared to it, or can repreſent it as it is. 'Twas in this ſenſe Dionyſius the Areopagite ventured to ſay that God was Nothing. He meant to ſignify by it, that God is an infinite Eſſence, that can neither be fathom'd nor known; that he poſſeſſes all things in a perfecter and nobler manner than the Creatures, and that 'tis from him they derive their Exiſtence and Qualities, by the means of his Perfections which are like ſo many Conduits through which the ſupream Being communicates his Favours.

IX. The three firſt Splendors are much more excellent than the reſt. The Cabbaliſts diſtinguiſh them, and bring them nearer to the Infinite, to which they are intimately united; and moſt make them the Chariot Mercava, which muſt be explain'd only to the initiates. The Chriſtians [s] ſeize this Advantage, maintaining, that here we have a Trinity of Perſons ſignified under one and the ſame infinite Eſſence. They even complain of the blindneſs and ignorance of the modern Cabbaliſts, who conſider theſe three Splendors but as ſo many Attributes of the Deity; whereas theſe Cabbaliſts are the wiſeſt among them. And indeed to little purpoſe it is to cite the Cabbaliſts, ſaying, "He that is one, "has cauſed an emanation of Lights: That he has "cauſed three orders of Emanations, and that theſe "Numbers prove the Trinity of the King from all "Eternity. Theſe indefinite Expreſſions of Iſachor Beer [t] are explain'd immediately after. This whole Myſtery conſiſts in the Emanation of the four Worlds; the Archetypal, the Angelical, the Stellary, and the Elementary. In the mean time theſe four Worlds have nothing common with the Trinity. Thus Simeon Jochaides, in the Name Jehovah, found the Father, the Son, the Daughter, and the Mother: With a little ſubtilty the Holy Ghoſt might be found in the Daughter of Voice, and the Mother might go for the Divine Eſſence: And yet 'tis manifeſt this was not this Cabbaliſt's intention. The Jod, ſaid he, is the Father, the H, or the ſecond Letter of the ineffable Name, is the Mother, the V is the Son, and the laſt H is the Daughter: And what does he mean by this? The Spirit, the Word, the Voice, and the Work. Maimonides is quoted, ſaying, "That "the Crown is the Original Spirit of the Living "Gods; that Wiſdom is the Spirit of the Spirit; "and Intelligence, or Underſtanding, the Water that "flows from the Spirit. That though there be ſome "diſtinction, betwixt the Effects of Wiſdom, Intelligence and Science, yet there is no difference; "for the end is conjoyned to the beginning, and "the beginning to the end. But he explains himſelf by comparing this to Fire or Flame, which emits many different Colours, as ſo many emanations, having all their Root and Principle in the Fire. The Perſons of the Trinity are not conceived as the Purple, Blue and White we ſee in the Flame. But yet the Cabbaliſts aſſert that the Splendors flow from the Deity, as the Colours from the Flame, or rather from the Fire. We ought not therefore to inſiſt on the Elogies the Doctors beſtow upon the Sephiroths, as if they were the Perſons of the Trinity; for as much as they united all the Sephiroths to the Eſſence of God; and the very inſtant we conceive theſe three firſt as ſo many Perſons of the Divine Eſſence, we muſt multiply them to ten, ſince they all ſubſiſt in the ſame manner, though there be ſome difference of Order.

X. The Crown is the firſt of the great Splendors; becauſe as the Crown is the laſt Habit the Man puts on, and is worn upon his Head; this Splendor is the neareſt to the Infinite, and the Chief of the Aziluthick World. It ſometimes has the Name of waiting, becauſe Job ſays [u] ſuffer me, or wait a little, and I will ſhew thee that I have yet to ſpeak on God's behalf; for we muſt wait, till the Crown manifeſts it ſelf, and reveals the Secrets and Depths of the Divinity, who is inſcrutable. Others ſay, [x] that as the Crown incircles the Head, the Splendor of that Name comprehends all the reſt: It is full of a thouſand little Channels, flowing with the Effects of the goodneſs and love of God. The Angels that ſurround the Throne of God, are in queſt of it, that they may perform the Coronation; but they cannot find it. And therefore they content themſelves with chanting Pſalms and Hymns, Some of which mount up to the Crown. She gathers up all the Prayers and Vows that are made by the repeating the Prayer Joſer Or. All the Choirs of Angels impatiently wait for the deſcent of a portion of this Splendor upon them; becauſe from hence they are ſupplied with Food and Nouriſhment; and this we are taught by David, ſaying, The eyes of all Creatures wait upon thee, and thou giveſt them their meat in due ſeaſon. The Crown is a Woman, becauſe what ſhe gives, returns into her. She is impenetrable, and can't be fathom'd. It dazzles the Eyes to attempt to behold her; the Mouth ſhuts up, when it goes to ſpeak of her; and the Soul, that has any Idea of her, remains motionleſs with admiration.

She is call'd the Non-exiſtence, becauſe ſhe retires into the ſecret boſom of God; into an inacceſſible Abyſs of Light; and is a moſt reſplendent Splendor, remaining naked; neither covered with any habit, nor dilated by any thing. Sometimes the title of Crown is given to the Kingdom the laſt of the Splendors, but in an improper Senſe, as being the Crown of the Temple of the Law, and the People of Iſrael.

XI. This is obſcure enough: However, we muſt relate what the Maſters ſay upon ſo important a ſubject. Durſt we venture to ſpeak our Thoughts, without being initiated in the Myſteries, the Crown would ſeem to have received this Name for two Reaſons, namely, its Perfection and Authority over the other Splendors. Let me add, that the Cabbaliſts believing God the ſupream Being, that [y] Infinite, who is above the Splendors, to act only by way of Emanation; the firſt and nobleſt of theſe Emanations, the neareſt to him, and conſequently the moſt perfect, has its influence upon all the reſt, and therefore from hence originally are derived all Goods. She is called the Being of Beings, becauſe ſhe gives exiſtence to all things: She fills the Univerſe from the Centre to the Circumference, with his Bleſſings and Effects. And therefore the Angels indefatigably chant her, and Prayers are addreſs'd unto her. It dares not be ſaid that ſhe is the very Divinity, becauſe the Enſoph, or the Infinite is ſuperior: But at leaſt ſhe is inſeperable from it; ſhe is the Canal elevated above all things through which the Divinity communicates his Favours to the firſt Order of Angels.

[s] Kirker Oedip. Egypt. Gymnas. Hierog. Claſſ. IV. § 2. p. 253. [t] R. Iſachor Beer fil. Moſis Peſach. l. Imre. Beriah. [u] Job 36. 2.
[x] Jezirah cum 32. Semitis Sap. Rab. Abrah. & not. Rittangel. p. 59. [y] Enſoph.

XII. The

XII. The ſecond Emanation is Wiſdom, and the third Underſtanding. But we ſhould be too tedious ſhould we go to explain theſe three grand Splendors, and afterwards deſcend to the other ſeven. 'Tis better worth while to obſerve the connexion between theſe Splendors, and the Creatures the Univerſe conſiſts of. To each Sephirah is annex'd a Name of God, one of the chief Angels, one of the Planets, a Member of the humane Body, a Commandment of the Law, and upon this depends the harmony of the Univerſe. Moreover, one thing leads our thoughts to another, and ſerves for a ſtep to carry us up to the higheſt degree of Knowledge and contemplative Divinity. Laſtly, we learn from hence what influence the Splendors have upon the Angels, the Planets, and the Stars, upon the parts of Man's Body. See the Table.

XIII. Thus there is a ſubordination of one thing to another throughout the Univerſe, and ſome things have a great influence upon others: For the Splendors influence upon the Angels, the Angels upon the Planets, and the Planets upon Man. And therefore it is ſaid, that Moſes who had ſtudied the Aſtronomy of Ægypt, where that Science flouriſh'd, compoſed his Law with relation to the Stars. He commanded the Seventh Day to be Sanctified, becauſe of Saturn who preſides over Saturday, and whoſe malignant influences would be dangerous, if the Effects of them were not diverted by Devotion and Prayer. He appointed the Precept of honouring Parents under the Sphere of Jupiter, who being a gentler Planet, is apt to inſpire Sentiments of Reverence and Submiſſion. I know not why Moſes, a Man of ſuch Abilities, placed the Prohibition of Murder under the conſtellation of Mars; he being fitter to further than ſtop the courſe of it. Theſe are the Extravagances and Viſions of the Cabbala; let us return to the ſerious part.

XIV. The ſuppoſition of the connexion of the Splendors or Divine Perfections, and their ſubordination obliged them to imagine Canals and Conduits, through which the influences of each Perfection are communicated to another: Otherwiſe the Harmony would have been confounded, and whilſt each Splendor acted in its own Sphere, the Worlds of Angels, Stars, and terreſtrial Men would have reaped no Advantage from them. And therefore the Cabbaliſts fail not to eſtabliſh twenty two Canals, according to the number of the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, which ſerve for the Communications of all the Sephiroths; conveying the influences of one to another.

XV. From the Crown iſſue three Canals, one of which terminates in Wiſdom, the ſecond in Underſtanding, and the third in Beauty. From Wiſdom proceeds a fourth Canal, which throws it ſelf into the Underſtanding; the fifth paſſes from the ſame ſource to Beauty, and the ſixth to Magnificence. As we have noted moſt of theſe 22 Canals in the great Table of the Splendors, we have only two things to obſerve here; one, that each Canal has its particular Seal conſiſting of three Letters: The firſt is that Letter of the Alphabet which ſhews the number of the Canal; and at the ſame time denotes one of the Perfections of God; and the two others are the Letters of the Name of God, Jah. Here are two inſtances ſufficient to explain this Matter. The Letter ל or L is the number of the twelfth Canal proceeding from Might and falling into Beauty. To this Letter are joyned the other two יה Jah, and this makes the God of the thirty ways of Wiſdom. The Letter ת or T is the number of the twenty ſecond Channel; and the יה being added to it, we find the God, who is the End of all things. To each Canal they have given an Epithet of the Deity, and the Letters of the name Jehovah, as one of the names of God is annex'd to every Splendor.

XVI. It muſt further be obſerved of theſe Lines of Communication, that they never aſcend, but always deſcend: For ſuch is the courſe of Waters that have their ſource upon the Mountains, and flowing ſpread themſelves over the lower places. And indeed though all the Splendors be united to the Divine Eſſence, yet the firſt has a ſuperiority over the ſecond; at leaſt from the firſt proceeds that Power and Vertue which actuates the ſecond; and the Kingdom, which is the laſt, derives all its vertue from the Splendors that are above it. This ſubordination of the Divine Attributes might ſeem erroneous; but the Cabbaliſts have a Salve for it, by ſaying, that this is only adapted to our way of Conception, and that the Splendors are rank'd thus only to diſtinguiſh them, and to facilitate the exact and pure Knowledge of their Operations.

XVII. With the ſame conſideration they have *imagin'd thirty two ways, and fifty Gates, that lead men to the Knowledge of all that's moſt ſecret, and myſterious. All theſe ways proceed from Wiſdom; becauſe the Scripture ſays, Thou haſt created the World in Wiſdom. All theſe roads are deſcribed in a Book ſaid to be the Patriarch Abraham's; and a celebrated Rabbin of the ſame Name, has added a comment to it, to guide men more ſecurely in them. There are fifty Gates to paſs through, which are ſo many degrees of Knowledge, which are obtain'd in proportion as Men ſtudy the Myſteries, or qualify themſelves for the reception of the Divine Light: But no Body ever arrived to the laſt. Moſes paſs'd through the forty ninth, but he could go no farther; for God ſaid to him, Thou ſhalt not ſee my face; that is, thou ſhalt not be able to ſee the Name of Jehovah, which I ſhall call before thee. Joſhua, Moſes's Succeſſor, proceeded but to the forty eighth Gate. Solomon alſo made a great progreſs, for his Wiſdom was as the Sand of the Sea, and yet he could not open the fiftieth Gate, nor arrive to the degree of Perfection.

XVIII. The Cabbaliſts diſtinguiſh theſe fifty Gates into five chief ones; each whereof comprehends ten.

The firſt great Gate includes the Knowledge of the firſt Matter, and the Chaos, of the Void, the Elements, and the Water that cover'd the Earth; the Air that proceeded from the Abyſs; the Waters, &c.

The ſecond great Gate contains the Knowledge of Minerals, Flowers, the juice that produces Metals, the Sea, Lakes, Rivers, Plants, Seeds, Inſects, Reptils, Fiſhes, Birds, and fourfooted Beaſts.

The third great Gate of the Cabbala proceeds to the Creation of Man; to the Clay he was formed of to the Soul he received; to the Myſtery of Adam and Eve, to Man that is the little World; to the five Senſes, the five inward Faculties; to the Celeſtial Man, the Angelick Man; to the Man that is the Image and Reſemblance of God.

Opening the fourth Gate, we find the Planets, the Firmament, the primum mobile, and the cœlum empyræum.

Knocking at the fifth Gate we ſee the nine Orders of Angels. This makes forty nine Gates, but the laſt never opens; for it is the Omnipotent God which Man never ſaw, nor is able to comprehend.

* V. Liber Jezirah Abrahami Patriarchæ cum commentario ſuper 32 ſemitis ſapientiæ a quibus liber Jezirah incipit cum notis Ritrangel, p. 1. &c.

XIX. Theſe

XIX. These are the general Principles of the Cabbala, which we have reduc'd to the most simple, natural and reasonable Sense. It must be own'd that there is a great deal of vanity, and even danger in this method: For if they say no more than what others have already taught concerning the Operations and Attributes of God, it is useless to employ some perpetual Allegories, and extravagant Metaphors, which instead of manifesting Truth serves only to obscure it. 'Tis casting a Veil over an Object that was in the dark before, and of which we discovered only some faint Glimpses: Besides, they overthrow the Scripture, changing the Sense, and even the very Words of it, to be able to find some Foundation and Support for their Conjectures. Moreover, they lead Men into Error, because 'tis impossible to follow these Divines that heap Figure upon Figure, and have not always Judgment in their Invention. That Mixture of Men and Women we find associated in the Splendors; their conjugal Union, and the manner of making it, are not Emblems noble and solemn enough to represent the Operations and Fecundity of God Almighty. These Things may be more naturally express'd; but 'tis the Art of these Divines to take a great liberty of discourse under the shelter of Allegories: They would quickly be at a stand, if they were to follow Revelation Step by Step. The Transactions of Heaven, or the manner of God's working, being secret and conceal'd, there is no discoursing long upon these Subjects. A Man perceives that he falls into Nonsense or Error; that he has no Idea of what he says, or would teach others, when he launches into Mysteries. Those, that continue the Discourse somewhat longer, are yet forced at last to cry out, O the depth of the wisdom of God. [a]But when Men throw themselves over Head and Ears into Allegory, they conceal their Ignorance under this shelter; they imagine there is something of reality in the Metaphors they use, and that there is an Idea annext to the sensible Object: They talk of a Crown, and Canals proceeding from it; of the Light conveyed and communicated by them; they boast of an Archetypal Man: They describe an Adam Kadmon, an Arik Anpin, or the long Visage, with a Scull, and Eyes, and Beard; a Seir Anpin, or the short Visage, which has likewise all these Parts; they discourse upon every Hair of the Beard; they make it the Subject of the Great Synod, and with the help of these sensible Images, they think they have reveal'd mighty Truths, and said a great deal, when indeed they have said nothing, but have, instead of conducting Men to the Truth, misled them farther from it.

XX. No doubt but my Ignorance will be complain'd of, and my want of Taste for these Mysteries. It will be said that I have treated of them two dryly, and have reduced them to too little room, whereas they who handle them more judiciosly, not excepting the Christians, discover admirable Truths in them.

I don't deny but abundance of Things may be seen in the Cabbalists, which I have not seen, or have had no Inclination to discover. There is commonly such an obscure Profoundness in their Writings, as is impenetrable. Nothing that Reason dictates can be reconciled with the Terms their Books abound with: After a long and useless Search, a Man is tired; he shuts the Book; he returns to it an Hour after, and thinks he perceives a little Glimpse, but it vanishes immediately: Their Principles at first seem to have some Connexion, but the diversity of Interpreters is so great, that one knows not where to fix: The Terms employed are so foreign, or remote from the Object, that they can't be brought together. And indeed it is easie to conceive, that in considering the Sephiroths, for Example, as Men that have their Wives, or as the Habits of the Deity, the Interpreters who think fit to outdo their Predecessors, carry the Allegory so far as to forsake the first Idea of their Masters, and the Principle of their Doctrine.

Besides these Ideas being not clear, but capable of many Explications, who shall fix them? In fine, they combine Metaphors, and wed together figurative Expressions, that ought to have nothing to do with one another; and adding heap upon heap, create new degrees of obscurity. I don't wonder then that some discover Mysteries here that escape others, in proportion to the Fruitfulness of their Imagination, find out Novelties that we are not qualified to perceive: But to supply this defect, we may consult the Zohar, and the Mysteries of the Cabbala, which a learned Man of our Time has reveal'd, in [a] a Language which all Scholars understand.

XXI. The Christians are divided about the Explications of the Cabbala, as well as the Jews, and nothing can better convince us of its uncertainty, than their different Conjectures; for they find the Trinity in it, and other Principles of the Christian Religion. More, [b] who had overstudied these Matters, thought the Sephiroths were nothing but Numbers relating to the ten Fingers of the Hands. He distinguish'd these Numbers into Physical, which manifest the Work of the Creation, and Metaphysical, which he divided into Three and Seven. He grounded this Distinction upon the Apocalypse; for as we there see Three different Persons, He that is, that was, and is to come, with seven spirits, which are before the throne. There are also Three principal Sephiroths, which are the Three Persons in One Essence, and the other Seven are the Seven Spirits, or the Seven Orders of Angels that stand before God. The learned [c] Kirker maintains that as obstinate as the Jews are, they must be forced to acknowledge that all the Creatures in the Universe bear the Seal of the Trinity, because, as has been observed, each Canal of the Sephiroths has its Seal of Three Letters, which express the Deity.

XXII. Rittangelius, [d] who has been at the pains of commenting the Ways of Wisdom, or the Cabbala publish'd in the Patriarch Abraham's Name, advertises his Readers, that since this Patriarch, all the Jews have receiv'd and worshipp'd Three Numbers or Three Modes of Existence, which are the Three First Sephiroths, the Crown, Wisdom and Understanding, that they have believed these Numbers to be equally eternal; that from hence, as from an impenetrable Abyss, proceeds a Light which is not God; that these Three Numbers are a perfect Unity, for if Numbers are ascribed to the Godhead, 'tis only as the Scripture ascribes to him Hands and Feet. Lastly, If there be owned any Subordination in these Numbers, 'tis only to distinguish their Operations, whilst they preserve a perfect Equality. Though all this were true, yet it were better to say plainly that there is only One God in Three Persons, than to perplex ones self with crude Terms, and under their Shelter vent all the Mysteries one has a mind to. But it is neither true, that Abraham was the Author of this Cabbalistick Book, as is said, or that the Jews have always believ'd the Trinity since his time, or that they design'd this Explication of the Mystery, to prevent the Frauds of Hereticks, who abuse the Words of Scripture; for

[a] Cabbala denudata. [b] Mori Epistola in Cab. den. t. 2. p. 53. [c] Kirker Oedip. Ægypt. Gymnas. Hierog. Class. iv. c. 9. t. 2. p. 307. [d] Liber Jezirah Abrahami cum not. Rittangel Semita 2 & 3. p. 3. & 5.

on

on the contrary, there are no Terms that are more ſecurely abus'd than thoſe of the Sephiroths.

XXIII. A Divine, who not only has read the Rabbins with great Exactneſs, but has drawn great Advantages, and made happy Diſcoveries from them, not being able to imagine, that the Cabbaliſts deſign'd to expreſs the Perfections of God by the Sephiroths, ſince no body that has Knowledge of an infinite God, can doubt of his being (Wiſe, Glorious and Potent) comes about to ſearch for Jeſus Chriſt, God and Man in them: He repreſents the Meſſiah, as St. John has deſcrib'd him in the Revelations, cloath'd in a long Robe, girded with a Girdle of Gold, after the Faſhion of the Jews and Eaſtern People; he finds a great reſemblance betwixt the Portraiture left of him by St. John, and that which the Cabbaliſts give of him in their Sephiroths. He ſets upon his Head the Crown, becauſe St. John affirms, a Crown was given to him. He bore a Name which no body underſtood, which is what the Cabbaliſts [f] ſay of the Crown, that it is a Non-exiſtence, that is, that it is incomprehenſible, ineffable, and conceals it ſelf in the Boſom or Abyſs of the Divinity. It would be to no purpoſe to run through all the Splendors, and their Explication. Magnificence and Severity are plac'd on the two Arms of the Meſſiah, and Victory and Majeſty on his Thighs, to which the Words of St. John in the Apocalypſe are apply'd; He had written upon his thigh King of Kings; and what was ſaid long before by David, Gird thy ſword upon thy thigh, thy Majeſty and Magnificence. Laſtly, is added, The Story of the Cabbaliſts, who ſay that every Day Proclamation was made round a Tower, That he that had kill'd the Serpent, who kill'd the Firſt Man, and his Poſterity, ſhould marry the King's Daughter. Many Heroes had attempted it in vain, ſince that Piece of Service was reſerved for the Silo, or Meſſiah, of whom it is written, [g] He look'd this way and that way, and when he ſaw that there was no man, he ſlew the Egyptian. The Serpent is the Devil, the King's Daughter is the Church, which the Meſſiah was to marry when he had conquer'd him; and there is nothing better known than the Reign of the Meſſiah, which is the laſt of the Splendors.

As this great Man diſcovers the Perſon of God incarnate in the Splendors, another finds in them the principal Miracles wrought by the Meſſiah, as the change of Water into Wine, at the Marriage of Cana, and the Cure of the Leper: For when Jeſus Chriſt bid him Go, 'twas Wiſdom that ſent him; when he added, ſhew thy ſelf, this was Prudence, and the Prieſts are Bounty. Laſtly, By a continual Alluſion to the Sephiroths he [h] finds the Lord's-Prayer, which Jeſus Chriſt dictated to his Diſciples; which he thinks ſo happy a Diſcovery, as not to doubt, but it may be uſed as an effectual Means for the Converſion of the Jews.

XXIV. For my part, I muſt own, that I don't find the Myſteries of Chriſtianity in the Cabbala, nor do I conceive there is any glory in diſcovering them therein. To make Abraham the Patriarch to communicate this Knowledge to his Children, from whence it was propagated to the remoteſt Generations, is to deceive ones ſelf. The Patriarchs and Prophets themſelves, had not ſo diſtinct a Knowledge of the Trinity, as to read Lectures of it in their Schools, nor can the Cabbala juſtly pretend to ſo venerable an Antiquity. Beſides the more I examine things, the more I find, that if theſe Cabbaliſts meant any thing, their deſign was to ſpeak of the Attributes of God. Muſt we now from their diſtinguiſhing Three of theſe Attributes, as the moſt excellent, conclude, that they are Three Perſons? The other Seven are repreſented as equally like Perſons, and united to the Divine Eſſence; and this will make them Ten inſtead of Three. Read their Doctors without prejudice, and you'll ſee that they compare the Sephiroths to ten Glaſſes, painted with ten different Colours: The Light of the Sun, verberating upon all theſe Glaſſes is the ſame though it ſhews different Colours; and thus the Light, or the Divine Eſſence is the ſame, tho' diverſified in the Splendors, and ſhedding on them quite different Influences, which Compariſon makes it manifeſt that the Sephiroths are not conſidered by the Cabbaliſt, like the Perſons of the Trinity worſhipp'd by the Chriſtians. We'll add another Example, which ſets the matter in a clearer light, though it be ſometimes uſed to prove the contrary.

XXV. Rabb Schabtè [i] compares the Splendors to a Tree, in which are diſtinguiſh'd the Root, the Stem, and the Branches: "Theſe Three Things "conſtitute the Tree, and the only difference ob- "ſervable in them is, that the Root is conceal'd, "whilſt the Stem and Branches appear without. "The Stem conveys its Vertue into the Branches, "which fructifie; but in reality the Stem and "Branches depend upon the Root, and make one "and the ſame Tree: Apply this to the Splendors: "The Crown is the conceal'd inſcrutable Root; "the Three Spirits, or Sephiroths, or Splendors, "are the Stem of the Tree, and the other Seven "are the Branches, inſeparably united to the Stem, "for he that ſeparates them would be juſt like a "Man that ſhould pluck the Branches from the "Tree, cut off the Stem, and offer it Nutriment, "by dividing it from its Root. The Crown is the "Root which unites all the Splendors, conveys its "Influences upon them, and compriſes them in its "Boſom and Vertue.

Now how is the Trinity to be found here? If it be any way, it muſt be in theſe Three Things which conſtitute the Tree, the Root, the Trunk, and the Branches: The Father muſt be the Root, the Son the Trunk, (for the Prophets ſometimes give him ſuch a Title) and the Holy Spirit the fructifying Branches. But then theſe Three Firſt Splendors ceaſe to be Perſons of the Trinity; for they all Three make but the Stem of the Tree; and what muſt become of the Root and Branches, if the Trunk alone, that is, the Three Firſt Splendors, be the Trinity. Beſides, as we ſee that the Ten Splendors conſtitute but one Tree, we muſt conclude there are Ten Perſons in the Trinity, if we will eſpouſe the Principles of the Cabbaliſts. I have often made this Obſervation, becauſe it unhinges all the Machines that are invented to find the Trinity in the Cabbaliſtick Syſtem.

---

[e] V. Vitringa Obſ. Sacr. l. 1. c. 10. p. 120. edit. 1689. [f] Rittangel in Jezirah. [g] Exod. 2. 12. [h] Vide Cabbala denudata, t. 2. [i] R. Schabtè in Jezirah.

CHAP.

CHAP. XV.

Of the different uſes of the Cabbala: Of Contemplative Divinity and Magick.

I. THE general uſe of the Cabbala, to inſtruct the Soul, and incline it to Piety. II. Five Orders of Cabbaliſts. A Deſcription of the ſpeculative Cabbala. III. The Ceremonies of this Cabbala, and Contorſions of the Body juſtified by Elias Moſes, &c. IV. The Cabbaliſt's Union with God. The Miracles it produces. V. The Aſtrological Cabbala. The Encomiums of the Moon. VI. The Magical Cabbala. VII. Eſteem'd by the Chriſtians. VIII. The Method of it. IX. An Inſtance of a Miracle wrought by the Name of God. X. Another Miracle by the Devil. XI. The myſterious Croſs of the Chriſtians. XII. That kind of Cabbala of ancient Date among them. XIII. Arguments proving the Innocence of the Magical Cabbala. XIV. The Vertue, the Holy Spirit was annex'd to Words. XV. The Influence of the Stars. XVI. An Objection taken from the Agnus Dei. XVII. Whether all the Prophets have exerciſed this Magical Cabbala.

I. THE Cabbaliſts maintain, that their Science leads the initiated to Perfection; by raiſing the Soul by degrees to the Contemplation of what is moſt perfect in Nature; which Knowledge helps the Soul mightily to form her ſelf to Piety, to diſengage her ſelf from Senſe, and to take pleaſure only in the ſight of God. Though it be true, that all don't make ſo good an uſe of it, yet it is not a defect of the Science: They ſin thro' their own fault, by adhering only to its Elements, and neglecting to raiſe themſelves to the contemplation of its Myſteries.

II. The Truth is, we may reckon Five Claſſes of Cabbaliſts. Some apply themſelves to the unfolding Nature and its Myſteries, which are all latent and included in the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, and this Science goes by the Name of the Natural Cabbala.

Others ſtudy the Connexion and Subordination, which God has eſtabliſh'd between all the Creatures, and fancy when they have found out this Contrivance, that they are able to do Wonders by their Mixture and Combination.

But the perfecteſt Order is that of the Contemplative Cabbaliſts. 'Tis not enough for the Soul to apply her ſelf to the ſearch of Celeſtial Truths, unleſs the Body and Senſes concur with her. Whilſt Adam was taken up with the Temptation of the Serpent, and of his Wife, who offer'd him ſome Fruit, he loſt his Innocence, and the clear and evident Knowledge of his Maker. We muſt therefore abſtract our ſelves from all ſenſible Objects, captivate the Senſes, and raiſe the Body, if we would be truly contemplative. The Angels are the Canals thro' which the Divinity flows, and communicates it ſelf to us. Unleſs we apply our Mouths to theſe Conduits, the Water will run out and be loſt in the Abyſſes, and we ſhall never quench our Thirſts. We muſt therefore maintain an intimate Union with them, and have our Senſes raviſh'd and exalted as well as the Soul. Don't we daily ſee in Nature, that when any Collection of a Bile or Choler ſtops the motion of the animal Spirits, that the Soul loſes the uſe of its Faculties, and the Man falls into a Lethargy or Palſie. But on the other hand, the Soul acts with eaſe, whilſt furniſh'd with continual Supplies of animal Spirits. The Caſe is parallel in Religion. The Soul, when captivated by the Senſes, or natural Objects, can't riſe to the Knowledge of God, or the Splendors; but when the Senſes, Body, and Soul concur to act together in ſpeculation, a Man is eaſily elevated, and made partaker of the Divine Nature.

But this is only the firſt Diſpoſition of the Cabbaliſt, to which he is oblig'd to join Prayer; but aſſiduous, ardent, intimate Prayer, which as it were, cements him to the Deity. It is ſometimes call'd a Touch and Kiſs of Divinity.

Thirdly, The Cabbaliſt is oblig'd to addreſs himſelf to Angels, becauſe theſe Intelligences are the Depoſitaries of the Gifts of God, and have Influences upon the Stars. And whereas the Planets have not always the ſame Aſpect and Situation, there is frequent occaſion of changing the Names of the Angels that are invok'd. For 'tis the Appointment of God, that we invoke the Angel that preſides over the Star, which can, or muſt ſhed its Influences in ſuch a Time, or ſuch a Place, or under ſuch a Circumſtance.

Laſtly, The Contemplative Cabbaliſt muſt mentally conſider the number of Letters that compoſe the Name Jehovah; their Figure, their Combination; the Names of the Angels that are annext to them. The Body muſt act as well as the Soul: Sometimes turning one way, ſometimes another; and the Tongue muſt move in a certain manner, and a Man muſt make certain Geſtures correſpondent to the Pronuntiation of certain Letters, Words, and Names.

They explain this by the Example of the Prophet Elijah, who when he prayed to obtain Rain, after a long Drought, put his Head between his Knees, and lay proſtrate upon the little Child that he would raiſe to Life again, applying his Parts reſpectively to the Parts of the Youth. Eliſha, Joſhua, and Moſes changed their poſture, according to the different Requeſts they made to God. All which is a proof that the Body of the Speculatiſt, in praying and repeating the Letters of the ineffable Name, muſt often change its poſture and ſituation. The Jeſuit Kirker ſays, that this would be of uſe, if it had the Authority of the Church, but without it the Cabbaliſt loſes his labour, and is expos'd to abundance of Illuſions of the Devil. And therefore he maintains, that Holy-Water, Holy-Salt, and the Merits of the Saints ought to be ſubſtituted inſtead of all theſe Ceremonies; which by the Wiſdom of God have each their reſpective Vertues, one to cure a Fever, another to promote Childbirth, which is a much certainer Method, than aſcribing to Angels the Power of producing certain Events, and making Addreſſes to them, inſtead of praying to the Saints, as if the Saints had greater Power than Angels; or that we were as certain of the Beatitude of the one, as of the Exiſtence of the other; or that the Church's Authority ſecur'd Men from Deluſions, and the Spirit of Viſion.

IV. The Cabbaliſt is ſo far from loſing his labour, that he finds an abundant Recompence, in the ſatisfaction and pleaſure which the Improvements of his Knowledge give him: He unites himſelf to God; and even ſometimes thinks himſelf transform'd into the Deity; and then he is perſuaded he is in a capacity of working Miracles, or receiving Divine Inſpiration; of this we have ſeen Examples in the Sect; for R. Iſhmael, after he had div'd into the Secrets of this Science, made a little Cake, which was no ſooner taſted of, but the Soul felt an emotion, and was fill'd with the Rays of Eternal Wiſdom. Eleazar finding one of theſe Cakes made whilſt the Names of God and Angels were invok'd, or elſe made by himſelf, fell into an Enthuſiaſm, and dictated many admirable Prayers, which the Jews repeat on Feſtival Days. Thoſe that have attain'd to the Speculative Cabbala, work a great many other Miracles: But who will believe them?

V. There is a Fourth Order of Aſtrological Cabbala, whoſe Myſteries we ſhall not here reveal, but only relate Three Things. 1. That the Cabbaliſts aſcribe great Influences to the Stars, and particularly to the Moon; ſhe is the Store-houſe and Receptacle of the other Planets, communicating with them, and eſpecially with the Sun, who fills her with an enlivening Vertue, which ſhe afterwards diffuſes upon other Creatures: She regulates all the Revolutions below: She is the only Wife of the Names of God: She holds a Medium betwixt God and the Creature; betwixt the Archetypal Heavens and the Angels; betwixt us and the Starry Heaven; ſhe is the Mediatrix betwixt Angels and Men. She is impregnated by her Conjunction with the Sun her Husband, and afterwards communicates her Conception to Men, bedew'd with the Grace of God. She receives from Venus all the Vertues neceſſary to Generation, and from Mars Strength, and a fiery Temper. 2. The pre-exiſtent Souls paſs through all the Sephiroths, and certain Spheres on which their Fate depends all the time of this Life. When Man is born, God ſends him a Guardian, or an Angel of the Conſtellation under which he is born. This Angel will direct him ſuitably to the Inclinations he has receiv'd from the Planet. But if a Man be refractory, and forſakes the Angel's Direction, he then falls into unavoidable Crimes and Diſaſters: Such were Saul, Belſhazzar, and Nebuchadnezzar, of whom the Scripture gives ſuch frightful Characters. Thoſe that are born under Mars's Conſtellation, are commonly brave and warlike, ſuch were Alexander, and Judas Maccabeus; but when theſe Warriors abuſe or diſcharge their Angel, they are beaten by the Enemy. 3. Hence ariſes a Third Principle, that if we would make a Child happy, we muſt pacifie and careſs the Angel of the Planet; and by this means the Cabbaliſts procure great Advantages to their Children.

VI. There is a Fifth Sort of Cabbala much run down by honeſt Men, becauſe they ſuſpect there is ſome Magick in it, and yet the Jews frequently ſtudy it. They explain the Precepts and Rules of it, that it may be the eaſier practis'd; and even when they are converted to Chriſtianity, they ſtill continue this Study: They annex a miraculous Vertue to Numbers, and thereby heal Diſeaſes, and avert the Misfortunes Men are threatned with. This Opinion is not peculiar to them; ſome antient Philoſophers having had it. The Hereticks that appear'd in the Infancy of the Church eſpous'd it, and made ſeveral Alterations in it. The ſame Notion is imputed, but wrongfully, to St. Cyprian and St. Jerome: All that theſe Fathers were to be blam'd for, was the Subtilty with which they argued about the odd number, becauſe of the Unity and Trinity; but they aſcribed no Vertue to it of working Miracles.

VII. 'Tis however true, that a great many Chriſtians have ſuperſtitiouſly believ'd they could expel Devils by theſe Words, [a] Let the Lord ariſe, and let his Enemies be ſcatter'd: And the Fathers [b] of the Church boaſted to have had it from the Devil's Mouth, that he was oblig'd to fly at the very Inſtant thoſe Words were pronounc'd.

There is conſtantly Sin and Error in theſe Notions: Men make the Devil an omnipotent Principle, like the Manichees, and imagine that by treating with him, they ſhall be able to do whatever they pleaſe. What a ſtrange Deluſion is this? Are the Devils Maſters of Nature, independently of God? And would God permit his Enemy to ſhare almoſt an equal Power with him! That which is call'd Magick, is an effect of the Art and Imagination of Men, willing to be deceiv'd. What Vertue can there be in ſome Words rather than others? Put them in what different Situation you pleaſe, will the Poſture change their Nature? If they have no Vertue naturally, who can communicate it to them? Is it God, or the Devil, or the Art of Man? No body can determine, and yet Men have been bewitch'd with this Fancy for many hundred Years.

Carmine [c] læſa Ceres ſterilem vaneſcit in herbam,
Deficiunt læſa carmine fontis aquæ:
Ilicibus glandes cantataque vitibus uva
Decidit, & nullo poma movente fluunt.

The Diſtemper lies in the Imagination of Men, which ought firſt to be cur'd; but it's a difficult Task to do it, therefore it is better to ſuffer this Art to dwindle into Contempt, than to give it a Strength which it naturally wants, by impugning and confuting it.

VIII. The Magical Cabbaliſts ſay, that Words rank'd in a certain Order, produce ſome miraculous Effects; and that they are proportionably apter for this purpoſe, as they are deriv'd from the Holy Language; and therefore the Hebrew is preferr'd before all other Tongues. The Miracles riſe in greatneſs, according as theſe Words expreſs either the Name of God, or his Perfections and Emanations; for which reaſon the Sephiroths, or the Names of God are in greateſt requeſt. Theſe Terms muſt be diſpoſed, and eſpecially the Seventy two Names of God taken from three Verſes of the 14th Chapter of Exodus, after a certain manner, [d] by means whereof they acquire an active Vertue.

IX. They ſometimes only invoke the Name of God in a Cabbaliſtick way; and thus M. Judas, Son of the Rod, deliver'd his whole Nation, that had like to have been ruin'd in Spain; a Jew having beaten a Monk, his Order was reſolv'd to revenge the Affront, and to that end went and dug up the Corps of a converted Jew, and carry'd it into the Cemetery of the Jews; complaint was made to the Governour of Seville, and of the whole Province, of this pretended Sacrilege; the dead [e] Man's Grave being empty, and another newly made, the proof of the Robbery appear'd too evident to be doubted of: All the Jews were put into cuſtody, but Judas preſenting himſelf to the Governour, deſir'd a Sheet of Paper might be brought: He deſir'd the Governour to fold it in Quarto, and to put it in his Boſom, then having invok'd the Name of God in a Cabbaliſtick way, he ask'd him to unfold the Paper before the Company, which was ſtrangely ſurpriz'd to ſee on one Leaf the Figure of three Monks unburying the dead body, on the ſecond Leaf appear'd three other Monks carrying it, and one of them untying the Cord of his Frock, and giving the end of it to a Brother, for the convenienter carriage of the Corps, that ſeem'd to be heavy. Three other Monks appear'd ſtanding Cen-

[a] Pſ. 67. [b] Queſtiones ad Antioch. apud Athan. t. 2. p. 336. [c] Ovid Amor. l. 3. El. 7. [d] Exod. xiv. 19, 20, & 21. [e] Salomon Ben Virgæ Tribus Judæ p. 222.

tinels

tinels upon the Avenues, and the fourth ſet was digging a Grave in the Jews burial Place. The Myſtery being diſcover'd by means of the Cabbala, the Governor condemn'd the Monks to be burnt alive: The People mutiny'd, and reſcued ſome of them out of the Serjeant's Hands, but two of them ſuffer'd for their impoſture. 'Tis no wonder the Jews would be ſo fond of the Cabbala, ſince they aſcribe to it ſo prodigious Effects. Another * Cabbaliſt raiſed a dead Child to Life, by putting the Name of Jehovah under his Tongue, which ſtop'd the Perſecution.

X. They are not always at the trouble of inſerting the Name of God; that of the Devil's being as fit for their purpoſe. They believe, for inſtance, that he that drinks Water by Night, will infallibly have Vertigo's and ſore Eyes: But to prevent theſe Diſtempers, or to cure them when they have them, they believe, that no more is to be done than to place the Hebrew Word Schiauriri in a certain Figure. Schiauriri is the Devil that preſides over Vertigo's and ſore Eyes: And the Name being written in the ſhape of a Carpenter's Rule, the Diſtemper is found daily to decreaſe and vaniſh away. The way of writing the Devil's Name, is thus.

ש כ ר י ר י
כ ר י ר י
ר י ר י
י ר י
ר י
י

Hence the antient Hereticks took their Abracadabra, which was thought an excellent Remedy againſt Agues. This is grounded upon thoſe words of Geneſis, where 'tis ſaid the Angels ſtruck the Men with blindneſs at Lot's Door, ſo that they could not find it. The Chaldee Paraphraſt having tranſlated blindneſs, Beſchiauriri, it was concluded that it was an Angel, or rather a Devil, that ſent this kind of Diſtemper, and that it was a perfect cure of it to write his Name, as we ſee above.

XI. Bartolocci has given a very different Specimen of this Cabbala, which one of his Friends, tho' a Chriſtian, communicated to him. It was a croſs of a Square Figure, on the ſides whereof were the LXXII Names of God, with their Latin explication. All theſe words are compoſed of three Letters; not one of them ſignifies what it is put for; but no matter for that, the deſign was to expreſs by it that God is the Lifter up, the Protector, the Hope, the Salvation, &c. In the middle of the Croſs were three different Circles. In the firſt was a little Croſs with theſe words; I will be the Almighty [a]; the Lord God; the Lord of Hoſts. The middle circle contain'd the ten Sephiroths in Hebrew, and in the laſt the ſame names tranſlated into Latin. Laſtly, the four corners of the Croſs were ſet off with Paſſages of David's Pſalms, and above, were read theſe Words, which ſhew'd the confidence of the contriver. A myſterious Croſs of great Vertue. There is no doubt but it was the work of a Chriſtian, as opinionative of the practical Cabbala, as the Jews.

XII. It may be ſaid too, that this was an ancient foolery among them: for St. Chryſoſtom upbraided ſome Women of his Time for combining certain Paſſages of St. John's Goſpel, and wearing them about their Necks as preſervatives againſt the Accidents of Life. The famous Agrippa [b] alſo accuſes Raban Maur, of having ſo diſpoſed certain Latin Verſes about ſome Images, that which ever way they were turn'd, they ſtill were read, and ſome Myſteries found in them. In fine, there have been ſome Ages in which People were ſo bigotted to that vertue of Taliſmans, and that kind of Cabbala, as to think it infallible. But we ſhall ſpeak more amply of it in the ſequel.

XIII. The Cabbaliſts want not Arguments to defend the innocence of their Magick. They maintain, that proper Names are the rays of Objects, wherein is a kind of Life concealed. 'Twas God that gave names to Things, and as he made their Union, he took care to make it an efficacious one. The names of Men are written in Heaven, and why ſhould God have put theſe Names in his Books, if they were not worth preſerving. There are ſome words ſo artfully managed in Muſick, which ſo vigorouſly ſtrike the Senſes, as to inſpirit a languiſhing Man, diſperſe his melancholy, expel his Diſtemper, and ſometimes throw him into madneſs: Unleſs there were ſome inherent Vertue in Words, they could never produce ſo great Effects. Why then ſhall we deny the ſame Efficacy to the Names of God, and the Words of Scripture?

XIV. Origen and Picus de Mirandula imagined, that Words had the greater Power by being barbarous, and pronounced in an unknown Language; which was alſo the notion of antient Hereticks, who to amuſe the People, borrowed Hebrew Words, and tranſpoſed the Letters to make the Pronunciation leſs intelligible. But another ſet of Cabbaliſts aſſert the contrary; that clear Propoſitions and Prayers are the moſt effectual; becauſe Truth contain'd in a compleat Propoſition, and Holineſs annex'd to a Prayer, communicate an additional Vertue; and therefore the Jews and Chriſtians make uſe of the Words of David, or ſome Portions of Scripture, and pretend there is no harm in it, ſince they uſe the words which the Holy Ghoſt has dictated, and impregnated with his influence, that they might be ſo employed.

XV. They farther imagine, that the Stars have great influences over certain words, to which they are connected, or ſtrictly united: And that's another Argument of their Efficacy.

XVI. Laſtly they object to the Church of Rome its Agnus Dei's worn about the Neck; its Scapularies, employed upon the Body as preſervatives againſt Dangers and Death: The Habits of ſome particular Order, which People covet to dye and be buried in, to eſcape Hell. For if there be any inherent Vertue in theſe material Objects, why ſhould we not allow the like in the words that are pronounc'd, and diſpoſed in a particular manner? They might alſo urge two Prayers that are ſaid to have been found in Jeſus Chriſt's Tomb at Jeruſalem. Whoever ſhall devoutly [c] carry them about him, ſhall be delivered from the Devil and avoid a ſudden Death; he ſhall be preſerved from Peſtilence, and all contagious Diſtempers. No Witch or Wizzard ſhall be able to hurt thoſe, who have theſe two fine Prayers about them. If it be ſufficient to carry certain Prayers in ones Pocket, there muſt be a Vertue annex'd to the conjunction of the Words they are compoſed of: But here is ſomething more particular; for in a Prayer [d] beginning with theſe words; God, moſt indulgent Father, &c. we find in a Cabbaliſtick way theſe barbarous words, [e] Ruba, Teh, Hyſtiton, Hya, Laverererareri: And 'tis aſſerted that Adam, who had been in Hell, was removed from thence into

* Salomon Ben Virge tribus Judæ. p. 337. [a] שרי אחיה אדני אלהים יהוה צבאית Bartol. B. R. t. iv. p. 234. Scaddai Achieh. Adonai, Elohim. Jehovah, Tſebaoth. [b] Agrip. de vanit. Scient. c. 47. [c] See the Practice for Worſhipping the Sacrament of the Altar. [d] 'Tis in the Antidotarium animæ. Fol. 92. And begins Deus pater piiſſime. [e] Thiers Of the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions.

Heaven, by means of the moſt holy Name Lavererarari.

XVII. They think it not enough to invent ſome Arguments to juſtifie the Cabbala, but they alſo give it a ſacred Original, and attribute the uſe of it to all the Saints. Indeed the Cabbaliſts will have it, that it was this Art which exalted Moſes above the Ægyptian Magicians, and rendred him formidable by his Miracles. 'Twas by the ſame Art that Elijah brought down Fire from Heaven, and Daniel ſtopt the Mouths of Lions. Laſtly, all the Prophets have ſucceſsfully uſed it for the diſcovery of Events involved in a long futurity. [f] Agrippa who after a long Study of this Science found the vanity of it, nevertheleſs ſays it was in uſe among the antient Jews, and that the Ophites, Valentinians, and Baſilidians, borrowed it of them: But he is miſtaken; at leaſt 'tis believed the Jews were not yet fallen into that exceſs, and that the Hereticks only borrowed the Hebrew names of them, whereof they made their Taliſmans, and that afterwards the Rabbins were the inventors of this Science.

But ſince the Cabbaliſts muſt needs trace the Origine of their Science up to the Boſom of God and Paradiſe; 'tis fit that we ſhould examine into the ſource of it. Beſides, ſince all Religions and Nations have had a myſtical Divinity, 'tis neceſſary to ſee in what manner they have treated it. The Compariſon I am going to make of the Cabbala of the Egyptians, Greek Philoſophers, Apoſtles, Fathers of the Church, and antient Hereticks, with that of the Jews, can't be thought a digreſſion. On the contrary, it ſeem'd the more neceſſary to enlarge upon this Subject, becauſe it deſerves to be known, but was never yet throughly diſcuſs'd, eſpecially in our Language.

[f] Agrippa de vanit. Scient.

CHAP. XVI.

A ſhort Hiſtory of the Jewiſh Cabbala.

I. THE Cabbaliſts ground themſelves upon the Example and Authority of the ſacred Writers. II. The Style of theſe Writers. III. Whether Eleazar was the firſt Cabbaliſt. IV. The Time he lived in. V. Factions in Ægypt upon the literal and myſtical Senſe. VI. Philo the Jew a Cabbaliſt. VII. As alſo the Eſſenes. VIII. The Chaldee Paraphraſts have neglected this method. IX. Joſephus has Authorized it. X. That of the Talmudiſts much like it: Six reflexions upon the Scripture. XI. Cabbaliſts in Ægypt in the twelfth Century. XII. Maimonides's Rule againſt them. XIII. The progreſs of this Science.

I. THE Cabbaliſts bottom upon the Authority of the ſacred Writers, who have chalk'd out the way they take, and given the example, which they follow. Moſes's Law is clog'd with Types and Ceremonies, and you muſt break the Shell, if you will taſt the Fruit of it. There are innumerable Precepts that ſeem unbecoming the greatneſs of the Divine Wiſdom, if they be taken literally. Would God ſpeak to no purpoſe, and amuſe himſelf with regulating certain inconſiderable Duties which the exacteſt Legiſlators would juſtly wave? The Divine Wiſdom has contrived and inſpirited even the Expreſſions of the Authors, and included whole Mountains of Myſteries under every Precept, and every Word. He that hath Ears to hear let him hear. With what deſign are Arms and Eyes, and Wrath and Jealouſie aſcribed to God, but to raiſe us by theſe earthly and ſenſible Ideas to the Knowledge of the greateſt and moſt inſcrutable things in Heaven? The Prophets above all things delighted in Metaphors and Allegories; they had Viſions, wherein God repreſented himſelf in a ſenſible manner. Theſe holy inſpired Men writ not for themſelves; but deſign'd their Writings ſhould be ſtudied, and their Viſions explain'd. Ezechiel has not left us his Chariot, that it might remain uſeleſs; on the contrary, this Prophet had too great views: that the Myſtery of this Viſion full of ſo many Truths ſhould be ſtudied; and that we ſhould imitate him in forming the like Ideas, whereby to arrive to the Knowledge and Contemplation of the Godhead. They might add, that Moſes left this Cabbala to the Saints, who tranſmitted it to Poſterity: But that ſecond Original is more dubious than the firſt.

II. It muſt be owned, that the ſacred Writers have frequently employed Metaphors and Allegories; becauſe it was the common Style of the Jews and the Eaſtern People, that eaſily underſtood them. The Viſions and Metaphors of Ezechiel, or Daniel, are bolder than thoſe of the other Prophets; becauſe they lived in Chaldea, where that Dialect was more familiar: It would be an Error to take all theſe Expreſſions literally; and the Types would be uſeleſs, were they not applied to the Meſſiah for whom they were made. But this is not the difficulty; theſe explications are carried too far; and Myſteries are found even in Hiſtorical Narrations: The plain ſenſe of the cleareſt words is evaded, to find out a remote meaning: And they delight to outvy bold and ſingle Writers, as Job, who wrote in Arabia, and handled a particular ſubject which required Fictions, Allegories, and Hyperboles: Two things therefore may be obſerved; firſt, that this method, or rather exceſs of the Cabbaliſts, inſtead of being ſacred, came originally from the Ægyptians. Secondly, that they have been Authorized by Authors of the corrupt and later Ages.

III. The moſt antient myſtical Interpreter to be met with in the Jewiſh Hiſtory, is Eleazar the High-Prieſt [g], who being queſtion'd about ſome little obſervances of the Law, which the Ægyptians thought not of ſufficient importance to be given by God, often recurr'd to the myſtical and figurative Senſe. He maintain'd that God appointed that ruminating, and gentle Creatures ſhould be eaten to teach the meditation of the Law, and the preſervation of Charity. The uſe of Weeſels was condemn'd by the Law, becauſe theſe Creatures were an Emblem of Delators; thoſe dangerous Men whom the King of Ægypt, upon diſcovery of their Malice, had reſolved to root out of his Kingdom.

IV. Eleazar lived in Judea in the Reign of Ptolomeus Philadelphus, or rather of his Father Ptolomeus Soter. And indeed though the Honour be given Ptolomeus Philadelphus of erecting an excellent Library, and procuring the verſion of the Septuagint; yet it is certain, that his Father had a greater ſhare in it than he: For Demetrius Phalereus, who form'd this deſign, and ſuggeſted it to his Maſter, was Ptolomeus Soter's Favourite; and ſo far from maintaining his intereſt in his Son's Reign, that he was hated and baniſh'd his Dominions by him, for having attempted to exclude him from the Succeſſion, and place one of his Brothers, the Son of Euridice upon the Throne. [h] Anatolius ſays, that the Septuagint verſion was compoſed under theſe two Princes. That is more probable; but yet it was Ptolomeus Soter, the Son of Lagus, who ſent his Ambaſſadors to Judea to ſeek for ſkilful Interpreters: And with them it was, that Eleazar the High Prieſt engaged in a Conference about the Myſteries of the Law. Therefore he lived in this Prince's Time. But, 1. The Prophets had then for a long time ceas'd. 2. The Interpretations which Eleazar gave of the Law, can't be conſider'd as Cabbaliſtick viſions; ſince he only gave the Reaſons of ſome Rites of his Religion, wherein the literal Senſe was ſo involved, as neceſſarily introduced the Myſtical.

[g] Eleazar ex Ariſteâ apud Euſeb. de præp. Evan. l. 8, 9. p. 372.

V. Euſebius ſays, that there were ſometime in Judea two Factions of the Jews, one whereof ſcrupulouſly inſiſted on the literal ſence of the Law; and the other piercing through the ſurface, entered into the ſublimeſt Phyloſophy. At the Head of the latter he ſets Ariſtobulus, a great Philoſopher known to Ptolomeus Philometor, in whoſe Court he lived, and who compoſed for him a kind of Commentary upon the Laws of Moſes. He actually gave a myſtical Explication to a great many Scripture Paſſages: He ſaid that Hands were aſcribed to God, not only to ſignify his Power, but becauſe of the numerous Army that march'd under his Command when the Iſraelites left Ægypt. He aſſerted that God only appear'd on Mount Sinai, under the Symbol of a miraculous Fire, which burnt, and did not burn; for a Million of Men ſurrounded the flaming Mountain, and not one of them was burnt. He added, [i] that God is ſtanding; to teach us that he has conſtituted the Creatures in a ſtate of conſiſtency.

Euſebius is miſtaken; for it was not in Judea but in Ægypt, that theſe two factions were form'd; for it was there that Ariſtobulus taught; and 'twas no wonder he eſpous'd this method, ſince Ægypt was the true Nurſery of the Cabbala; there it was born, and grew up to its full Stature. 'Tis true that in an antient Verſion of Euſebius, by ſome father'd on St. Jerome [k], by others on Ruffinus: Ariſtobulus is ſaid to be Born at Paneas, a City of Syria, which the Evangeliſts call Ceſarea Philippi: But 'tis a manifeſt miſtake of the Interpreter. At preſent it is read that Ariſtobulus lived formerly ὁ πάνυ O panu, of this Greek Word ſignifying formerly, was made the City of Paneas. The Tranſlator of St. John Climacus has made ſuch another of the ſame Word; producing one [l] John Opanius, that never was; whilſt the Author's meaning only was, that John had been heretofore.

It is farther true, that Ariſtobulus is made much younger than we think him; for a Learned Critick [m] aſſerts, that he lived but in the ſecond Century of the Chriſtian Church, in which People took a Pride to foſter ſome ſuppoſititious Works upon the Antients, and the Jews attempted to raiſe by it the Glory of their oppreſs'd Nation. We are told that Joſephus would not have fail'd to mention a Perſon of his Fame, if his Work had been Publiſh'd long before him. Euſebius, and Clemens Alexandrinus ſay, that Ariſtobulus lived in the time of Ptolomeus Philometor, but they are ſo uncertain about this matter, that Clemens, forgetting what he had ſaid of him, places him under Ptolomeus Philodelphus. This uncertainty gives us reaſon to ſuſpect that they are miſtaken, and that meeting with a Book which Ariſtobulus had dedicated to Ptolomy, they concluded without more ado that this was Ptolomeus Philometor. Indeed the Hiſtory of the Maccabees ſpeaks of an Ariſtobulus Preceptor to Ptolomy, deſcended of the Race of the Prieſts, who then lived in Ægypt, and made a conſiderable Figure. That Letter of the Jews to their Ægyptian Brethren, is dated the 188th Year of the Æra of Seleucides, which was then followed; and therefore Ariſtobulus, Ptolomy's Tutor, muſt have lived a long time after Philometor. Nor could he be the Tutor of Ptolomy the Beneficent, who was then upon the Throne, ſince he was advanced to it very late, not ſucceeding his Brother Philometor till he was much in Years. From all which reflexions it is concluded, that Ariſtobulus lived under one of the latter Ptolomy's, or rather after Joſephus, an hundred and fifty Years or thereabouts after Jeſus Chriſt: And if this Conjecture was well grounded, we ſhould be obliged to find a new Origine of the Cabbala.

But not to engage in any great diſcuſſion of this Matter; we may obſerve not only ſome uncertainty, but alſo a contradiction in theſe reflexions, which are made to bring down Ariſtobulus below the time of the compoſing the Septuagint, the eaſier to invalidate his Teſtimony concerning it. Firſt, Euſebius, and Clemens Alexandrinus agree in placing Ariſtobulus in the Reign of Ptolomy, to whom he had Dedicated his Book: And therefore we can't, (without the imputation of a groſs fault in them) bring him under the ſecond Century of the Chriſtian Church. Could Clemens Alexandrinus, who lived ſo near that time, have been ignorant that Ariſtobulus lived only ſome Years before him, and have made him ſo antient, or not diſcover'd a forgery of ſo freſh a date? Beſides there's no variation in Euſebius. He ſtill places Ariſtobulus in Ptolomy's Reign; and having once ſaid, that this Ptolomy was Philometor, it can't be denied but he perſiſted in that opinion; it being no ſign of his changing it, that he ſometimes forgot to add the Epithet of Philometor. We muſt therefore either abſolutely deſert theſe two antient Writers, or acknowledge with them that Ariſtobulus lived under Ptolomeus Philometor: But eſpecially, they could not believe that he lived in the ſecond Century of the Church. Secondly, 'tis not eaſily conjectured what Argument can be drawn from the Book of Maccabees againſt Ariſtobulus; for on the contrary 'tis manifeſt from the Letter of the Jews, that there was then in Ægypt an Ariſtobulus that was a Prieſt and Preceptor to the King. This part of the Hiſtory of the Maccabees muſt be forged, if this fact were not true; and if it be true that Ariſtobulus lived then, why will they have him live after Joſephus in the ſecond Age of the Church? This Ariſtobulus, whom the Jews call Preceptor to the King, might have been ſo fifty Years before, and yet be ſtill alive under Ptolomy the Beneficent, Brother and Succeſſor to Philometor. Read how you will, we can find nothing in the Original, obliging us to believe that Ariſtobulus was Preceptor in the Year 188, when this Letter was written. The King's Preceptor was an honourable Title, which a Man retain'd all his Life; and the Jews would take care not to forget a thing ſo much to the Honour of their Nation. Thus the Author of the Maccabees Authorizes us to perſevere in our Opinion, and to place Ariſtobulus [h] Scaliger in Euſeb. Chron. Animadv. p. 122. [i] Euſeb. Prep. Evan. l. 8. c. 10. p. 377. [k] Bridefertus in Gloſſis ad Bede lib de temporum ratione. c. 28. [l] Ιωάννης ὁ μοὶ πάνυ, Johannes Opanius Scala paradiſi. Gr. 455, 85. p. 82. [m] Humphredus Hody contra Hiſtoriam Ariſteæ de LXX. Interp. c. 10. integr.

and

and his Book under Ptolomeus Philometer, to whom it was dedicated.

VI. Philo [a] who liv'd in Ægypt in our Saviour's time, ran headlong into Allegories, and myſtical Interpretations. By which method he found whatever he pleas'd in Scripture. If God ſpeaks, and calls, Adam where art thou? He obſerves that Eve in theſe Words is confounded with her Husband, becauſe all the Faculties of the Soul muſt be awaken'd and alarm'd, when it is to be reclaim'd to its Duty. Eve is the Senſe which God would excite; but as the Senſe is brutal, God calls it together with the other Powers of the Soul. He cites the Woman with the Man, the Man with the Woman, the Body with the Mind, in ſaying Adam where art thou? This Inſtance is enough. Thoſe that have look'd into Philo's Works, know that he turn'd all the Scripture into Allegories and Viſions.

VII. It was alſo in Ægypt that the Eſſenes appear'd with greater Reputation and Luſtre, and theſe Secretaries taught, That Words were ſo many Images of Things conceal'd: They turn'd the Sacred Volumes and Precepts of Wiſdom into Allegories, according to the Cuſtom of their Fathers, who had left them many Books of that Science. Here you ſee the Seeds and Principles of the Cabbala. It muſt have been already advanc'd into a Science in Philo's and our Lord's time, ſince there were many Books upon that Subject, and the Eſſenes continu'd to add new ones to them. We ſee then that it was in Ægypt that the Jews firſt turn'd Cabbaliſts, becauſe they took the Style and Ways of the Country where they liv'd, as we ſhall ſee hereafter.

VIII. This Method of interpreting Scripture travell'd from Ægypt into Judea, but had much ado to find admittance. Jonathan, who liv'd, as they ſay, in Herod the Great's time, and Onkelos, whom Fagius makes [b] Uncle to the Emperor Titus, are known by the Chaldee Paraphraſes that go under their Names. Theſe two Expoſitors who wrote in Judæa, and for the Jews there, who ſcarce underſtood Hebrew, had frequent recourſe to a figurative Senſe. However they ought not to be confounded with the Cabbaliſts, ſince they not only confine themſelves to very narrow Limits; but their Explications are natural and eaſie.

IX. Joſephus, [c] who wrote at the ſame time, had a greater byaſs this way, for he maintains that Moſes had a double View in the penning his Hiſtory; firſt to give a clear Narrative of Matters of Fact, and next, to involve abundance of Myſteries in Allegorical Expreſſions: Whence he concluded, that the Way to take the Senſe of the Sacred Hiſtorian, was to follow the ſame Method, which he has often done. They ſay too that he promis'd to write a Treatiſe of the Cabbala, in the Eſſenian Way, becauſe he ſays, That the Examination of Cauſes produces a very ſublime Philoſophy and Science. And this Work he would perform if God ſpared his Life: But they are under a Miſtake: Joſephus only ſpoke of Facts related by Moſes in a clear and evident manner, and therefore his Deſign was rather to make a Treatiſe of Phyſicks or Divinity, than of the Cabbala.

X. The Talmudiſts and Gemariſts that appear'd after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and in the ſubſequent Ages, gave a much greater Vogue to Allegories, and may be ſaid to have revived that Sort of Cabbala which had its Origine in Ægypt, and began to ſpread in Judæa in our Saviour's time. They found ſix things in Scripture, whereon they grounded their Method and Interpretations.

Firſt, They obſerve in it the poſſible admiration. By which they mean the Parables that ſeem to include ſome ſurprizing Things, or Events, concealing under them ſome Lectures of Piety and Morality. Job is the Man that has furniſh'd them with moſt Examples of this ſort, in imitation of whom the Gemariſts [d] tell a Story of a Veſſel that was ſhipwreck'd in Floods of Fire; which Prodigy was known to above Three hundred thouſand People, becauſe theſe burning Waters had ſuch an Elevation in the Air, as might be ſeen from the Earth; which Parable ſignifies, that the Good ſometimes ſuffer with the Wicked, becauſe they are all in the ſame Veſſel. 2. The Thalmudiſts obſerve ſome Hyperboles in the Sacred Writings. Job is not their only Authority: But Moſes ſays, that the Anakims were as numerous as Graſhoppers; and Daniel aſſerts that Belſhazzar drunk as much Wine as a thouſand Men. And no wonder there are ſuch extravagant Hyperboles in the Talmud, ſince they have only imitated inſpired Authors. 3. They have often had obſcure and ambiguous Expreſſions. Thus the Gemara ſpeaks of Four famous Cubits after the ruin of Jeruſalem, by which we muſt underſtand the Four Letters of the Name Jehovah, which were then diſpers'd over all the Earth. 4. Allegories are frequent in Ezechiel, and the other Prophets, what reaſon is then to blame the Allegorical Style of the Gemara or Talmud? 5. There are Proverbs in Scripture as in the Talmud; for Solomon has made a Collection of them. 6. Laſtly, There are ſome Dreams in it, that not only diſcover Futurity, but reveal the Will of God. Jacob dreamt and ſaw a Ladder, and awaking cry'd out, the Lord is in this place, becauſe God had reveal'd to him in his Sleep, that he was preſent. And thus the Talmudiſt and Gemariſt Doctors, &c. have diſcover'd ſome Myſteries in a Dream, to which they were abſolute Strangers before.

The Talmudiſts build upon all theſe Truths; for it is not doubted but there are in Holy Writ ſome Parables, Hyperboles, Metaphors, Allegories, and Proverbs, and that God ſometimes reveal'd himſelf to the Patriarchs in their Sleep; but it is impertinently concluded, that Men may imagine what they pleaſe with an irregular and unbounded Fancy, and that afterwards their Conceptions muſt be receiv'd with equal Reverence and Submiſſion as the Holy Scriptures.

XI. However it can't be ſaid, that theſe are the true Cabbaliſts we ſeek for; and indeed we have diſtinguiſh'd theſe two Orders of Divines. Nor can we fix the time of the latter's Appearance, as being neither a formed Sect, nor a Society of Doctors, with Colleges, Maſters and Statutes. This Science having by degrees riſen to its Perfection. I only obſerve, that the Firſt that began to overſtrain the myſtical Senſe, and love of Allegories, appear'd in Ægypt, where a Symbolical Religion ever kept its Reſidence and Empire. Some particular Interpreters would not have the Jewiſh Religion come behind the Ægyptian in Myſteries, and made their Imagination work hard to find them; which Method pleas'd the Speculatiſts. The Eſſenes eſpous'd it, and therefore they may be conſider'd under the Notion of Cabbaliſts. Some ſeeing ſo great a liberty taken in the Explication of Scripture, and the literal Senſe deſerted without ſcruple, imagin'd they might carry the Licenſe farther, by changing the common uſe of Words and Letters. The firſt Productions of theſe Interpreters are loſt: However, we learn from the Chriſtians that they were very ancient, for we find them before St. Je- rome, who being better skill'd in Hebrew than the reſt, ſo evidently diſplays the Principles of the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts, that it can't be doubted but this Science was current at that time. The Sephiroths, with their Dependences, are alſo very ancient, ſince the Baſilidians borrow'd their Æones from them. The Agadici [d] often mention'd in certain Commentaries in great eſteem with the Jews, were alſo myſtical Interpreters, whoſe Works were mightily valu'd. Theſe latter made a Figure in the Twelfth Century: For Maimonides obſerves, that ſome Doctors in his time abus'd the Scripture, and made the holy Penmen ſay an hundred things which they never thought of. He wrote in Ægypt. He was no Enemy to the myſtical Senſe of Scripture, ſince he often explain'd it. He neither condemn'd the Talmud nor the Miſnah, upon which he wrote ſome Commentaries. But he pointed at ſome other Doctors of his time, who exaggerated every thing that went through their Hands.

[a] Philo de legis Allegor. l. 2. p. 53. [b] Fagius præf. in Targum, hoc eſt. Paraphr. Onkelos. [c] Joſeph. Antiq. Jud. Proœm. p. 4. [d] In Gemara titulo Bara Batra, c. v. fol. 73. vide Surenhuſii Epiſt. ad Hottingerum præmiſſa excerptis Gemaræ.

XII. The Rule which this Doctor [e] lays down againſt this Order of Interpreters deſerves to be related, ſince it may be of ſervice to Chriſtians as well as Jews. "The Foundation and Firſt Prin-" ciple that ought to be laid, is to fix upon the " principal Drift of a Parable, without attempting " a particular Explication of all the Circumſtances, " and of every Word contain'd in it. By taking " another Method we wander from the Deſign of " the Parable; we run into extravagance; we loſe " our labour, by endeavouring to explain things that " can't be explain'd. I know indeed many Do-" ctors are infatuated with this Conceit; they try " to make the Holy Penmen ſay a hundred things " they never thought of; but the Buſineſs is to " inſiſt on the main purport of the Teacher. Would to God ſo wiſe a Rule was always before our Eyes: 'Tis dictated by good Senſe, and we can't loſe the ſight of it, but we muſt deviate from right Reaſon.

XIII. The Cabbaliſts who were in Ægypt in Maimonides's time, inſtead of profiting by his Inſtruction, thought to carry their Science to perfection, by ſpeaking only in Symbols and Allegories; by ſeeking Myſteries not only in Words, but alſo in Letters; by imagining not only a Gradation, but alſo a Concatenation of ſenſible Creatures with ſpiritual, and by this means pretended to raiſe themſelves to the Contemplation of the Deity.

[d] They that diſguiſe Truths under Fables. [e] Maim. in More Nevochim Doctor dubitantium.

CHAP. XVII.

The Original of the Cabbala among the Ægyptians.

The Arguments of thoſe that believe it invented by the Patriarchs.

I. THE Diviſion of Opinions upon this Queſtion. Whether the Patriarchs brought the Cabbala into Ægypt. II. Abraham's Method and Cabbala. III. This Patriarch taught Mercury the Trinity. IV. Mercurius Triſmegiſtus the ſame with Moſes. V. Joſeph's pains to convert the Ægyptians. VI. Moſes alſo attempted it. VII. Manetho has copy'd Moſes and Joſeph. VIII. Socrates's Diſcourſe with an Ægyptian about Myſteries. IX. The Fables of the Greeks myſtically explain'd. X. The Conformity of the Ægyptian Myſteries with thoſe of the Jews, taken from Clemens Alexandrinus. XI. An Obſervation deſtroying this Conformity. XII. Oſiris is Adam, Abraham, Moſes. XIII. Apis was Joſeph. XIV. Arguments that Typhon was Og King of Baſan. XV. Typhon was the Devil. XVI. Or rather Moſes. XVII. The Defect of theſe Conjectures. XVIII. The Cabbala borrow'd from the Jews.

I. WE have obſerv'd, that the Jews deriv'd the Cabbala from Ægypt. But this Opinion is conteſted by a great many learned Men: They maintain on the contrary, that the Heathens took their Religion and Myſteries from the Jews. Some think the Patriarchs Abraham and Joſeph inſtructed the Ægyptians: Others ſay, the Phenicians were the Channel that convey'd this Knowledge into the Iſles of the Ægean Sea, Greece and Sicily, even to Spain and England, whither this Nation had ſent Colonies, who brought with them the Religion which their Anceſtors had receiv'd from the Patriarchs. This Religion appears ſomewhat diſguis'd, becauſe it was receiv'd but at the ſecond-hand, and theſe People being remote from the Source, underſtood not Hebrew, and could not infallibly reach the true purport of the Types of the Law; but yet there is ſufficient Vindication, that theſe are Streams that flow'd from the Jewiſh Religion. Laſtly, They fancy, that when the Books of Moſes were publiſh'd, the Heathens ſeiz'd on them, and attempted to form a Religion like the Jewiſh, by copying the Writings of that Lawgiver. We take the quite oppoſite Opinion, as believing 1. That the Religion of the Ægyptians was much ancienter than that of the Jews. 2. That each Nation deified its Heroes, or made its Gods, without begging them from others. 3. That if there be any conformity betwixt the Heathen Religion and the Jewiſh, 'tis only in ſome faint Strokes that are artfully heightned. 4. But eſpecially we are certain that the Jews deriv'd their Cabbala, and the method of teaching we are in queſt of from the Ægyptians, which is what we are going to prove; but firſt we will relate the Opinion and Reaſons of thoſe that think this Science was brought into Ægypt by the Patriarchs.

II. The learned Kirker [a] thinks that Abraham was a perfect Maſter of the Cabbala, and that it was he who brought it to the Ægyptians. They only endeavour'd to enrich it: For this Patriarch, who would not make Images nor humane Figures, for fear they ſhould be abus'd, contented himſelf with ſignifying Myſteries by Letters, or by the different Names of God; whereas the Ægyptians pictur'd [b] Men, Women, and Birds, and diſguis'd their Religion under the Repreſentations of different Animals, which they drew upon the Walls of their Grotto's and Temples, and Tables conſecrated to the Service of the Gods. This is what Ezechiel [c] alludes to, when he ſays that God having commanded him to dig in the Wall, he ſaw ſeveral

[a] Kirker Oed. Ægypt. Gymnaſ. Hierogl. Claſs. iv. c. 4. t. 2. p. 231. [b] See Menſa Iſiaca Pignorii. [c] Ezech. viii. 10.

Forms

Forms of creeping things, and abominable Beasts, and all the Idols of the house of Israel pourtray'd upon the Wall round about. According to Kirker, [d] the Prophet gave a Description of the Religion of the Ægyptians, which the Jews in their turn imitated in tract of time.

III. The same Ægyptians had receiv'd from Abraham the Mysteries of the Trinity, for Mercurius Trismegistus teaches that the Unity is the Principle and Root of all things which it produces. He explains himself clearly by saying, that there was only one spiritual Light, which has always enlightned the Soul, [Mens] and that their Union is nothing else, but the Spirit, which is the bond of all things. The Soul, Light, and Spirit, are the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. He adds [e] with Zoroaster, that God the Father of all things produc'd not the World by his Hands like a Workman, but by the Word; and that this Word which proceeds from him, communicating its Fecundity to Nature, has given Water the power of Generation and Production. Therefore we not only find one God amongst these antient idolatrous Doctors, but the creation of the Universe by the Word which proceeds from him, and in whom are all things. As Mercurius Trismegistus was Contemporary with Abraham, there is no reason to doubt but that he learnt from this Patriarch this great Mystery of the Christian Religion; and the Ægyptians forthwith made an Emblem of it, which is to be seen at present, representing the Trinity, in the Figure of a Globe wing'd with two Serpents.

IV. When we throughly study the History and Religion of the Ægyptians, we find other Mysteries in it, which evidently prove that they drank at the Patriarch's Fountain. Here are some Arguments, which the rather deserve relating, as they have been collected by an Ingenious [f] Critick, and the Veil of a strange Language is an Impediment to their being known as they deserve to be.

First, The Ægyptians confess themselves, that the Sciences began not to flourish with them, till after Osiris and Isis, whom they worshipp'd as two Gods. Socrates reporting what he had learnt in Ægypt, says Theuth was ador'd there, who had taught the Inhabitants the Arts, the use of Letters and the Sciences: And therefore they make him the God of Wisdom and Eloquence; but Theuth was Mercurius Trismegistus, who is the same with Moses. Osiris was the Patriarch Abraham: And thus the first knowledge of Religion, Arts and Sciences, was brought into these Places by the Israelites.

V. It can't be deny'd but Joseph liv'd long in Ægypt, where he chang'd the Form of Government that Pharaoh had committed to him. Jacob, who came down thither to embrace his Son, had the pleasure of seeing the flourishing State of this Kingdom, and had many Conferences with the King. The Father and Son taught the Ægyptians Astronomy, the Knowledge whereof they retain'd, even after they had corrupted that of God and Religion. Joseph, who took care to preserve the Interests of the Ægyptian Clergy, would not abandon their Souls after he had fed their Bodies. For can it be imagin'd that he was so diligent to fatten all these Priests, that they might be better able to serve their Idols, and the Devil? This would be a reproach to this Patriarch, who was more sollicitous for the Salvation of their Souls, than the nourishment of their Bodies, and who having given them some political Laws, spread the Knowledge of God, and the Jewish Religion; for by his means it was propagated in this Country.

VI. This Knowledge was corrupted some time after the death of Joseph, but was restored by Moses; for the Scripture does not mention all that he did towards the conversion of the Ægyptians, before he left them to themselves. He must have labour'd much in their Conversion, if what Strabo says be true, that he was expell'd the Country, for deriding their Gods, and refusing to worship them. Their Commerce with the Jews was greatly improv'd, when Solomon married Pharaoh's Daughter; and it was impossible but that this Prince's Wisdom was dispers'd in Places where he was so strictly ally'd. Alexander the Great plac'd abundance of Jews in Ægypt, who deriv'd the Waters of the Sanctuary into the famous School of Alexandria.

VII. Manetho is the most antient of all the Ægyptian Historians. 'Tis said that he decypher'd the Inscriptions of the antient Pillars; that he made Extracts from Mercurius Tresmegistus's Books, and from all these Pieces not only compos'd the History of the Dynasties, but also of Religion.

This Historian living in the Reign of Ptolomeus Philadelphus, who had the Bible translated by LXX Interpreters, gives grounds for two Conjectures. One that this Prince who was a great Lover of Learning, being charm'd with the sight of the Scripture-Succession of Mankind from its Original, oblig'd his Priests to compose one like it, in order to confront the antient Ægyptian Monuments with the Jewish.

This First Conjecture is very probable, to which is added this other, that Manetho copy'd the Memoirs of Joseph and Moses: One of these great Men being Mercurius Tresmegistus, and copying the Holy Scripture, disguis'd it under Fables, which the simple and credulous Vulgar had mixt with the Truth. These are the Channels through which the Jewish Religion was deriv'd to the Ægyptians, but the proof of it would be more manifest, by examining the Religion of these Nations. We will only offer some Sketches of their resemblance, that we may not straggle too far from the Subject we are upon.

VIII. Socrates [g] relates, that in his Voyage to Ægypt he discours'd the Sages of the Country about the principal Events of the Grecian History; concerning Deucalion and Pyrrha's Deluge, and the Adventures of Niobe and Phoroneus. The Ægyptian laugh'd at the wise Man of Greece, and upbraided him with the Juvenile Spirit of his Nation; said they were ignorant of Antiquity, and did not penetrate into Theological Mysteries. The History of Phäeton, for Example, so famous among you, said the Ægyptian, is not a Fable, but contains a great Mystery; which is, that at the period of certain Revolutions, a great Conflagration happens in the Universe, wherein the Inhabitants of the Mountains are miserable sufferers: But the Nile, on whose Banks we descend, guards us from this Calamity, and on the contrary, when the Gods afflict us with too great an Inundation, the Mountains serve for our retreat.

IX. We see that the Ægyptian was [h] a Cabbalist, who saw farther into the Grecian Mysteries than Socrates himself, though he was of Greece. The Ægyptian acknowledg'd too, that there were some great Mysteries conceal'd under the Emblems of Phäeton, Niobe, Deucalion and Pyrrha; and what were

[d] Kirker Oed. Ægypt Theatr. Hierogl. Synt. 1. Mensa Isiaca. c. 2. t. 4. p. 82. [e] Ibid. Anacephalœosis totius operis. c. 1. t. 4. p. 576. [f] Theophilus Gale; the Court of the Gentiles; of Discourse touching the Original of Humane Literature, &c. from the Scriptures and Jewish Church, in 4° Oxon. 1672. 2 Tom. l. 1. c. 2. p. 38. [g] Socrates apud Platonem in Timæo. p. 524. [h] Gale, ibid. l. 3. c. 6. p. 68.

were theſe Myſteries! Phaeton repreſented the burning of Sodom; Niobe, Lot's Wife changed into a Pillar of Salt; Deucalion's Deluge, was Noah; and Phoroneus, was Pharaoh drowned in the red Sea. All theſe were Truths derived from the Jews, and myſtically taught the People both in Ægypt and Greece.

X. Clemens Alexandrinus * who grew old in the moſt famous School of Ægypt, and muſt have been very well acquainted with the Rites of the Ægyptians, relates, "That in the front of their Ceremo-" nies appear'd a Singer with an Inſtrument of " Muſick in his Hand, and two Books of Mercurius " Triſmegiſtus, one whereof contain'd Hymns, and " the other the Rule of the Kings. The Aſtrono-" mer followed, holding a Dial and a Palm with " four Books of Aſtrology, compoſed by Mercurius " The Scribe came after, carrying a Pen in his Ear, " a Book and a writing Desk in his Hand: His bu-" ſineſs was to know the Art of the Hieroglyphicks, " the Deſcription of the Nile, &c. A fourth appear-" ed with a Chalice to make Libations, who was to " be well verſed in all that related to Victims, Sa-" crifices, &c. And all the Devotion of the Egyptians conſiſts in Prayers, Hymns, Sacrifices, Feſtivals, and the oblations of firſt Fruits.

XI. "Here we ſee, ſays Dr. Gale [a], the Rites of " the Jews, who had alſo their Chanters; their ſo " famous Scribes; their Cup in the Sacrifices; their " Shew Bread; their Victims; their Feaſts, &c.

Not to go to confute every one of theſe Articles, it may be here obſerved, that it is not ſufficient to meet with Singers and Prieſts, Sacrifices and Libations, among the Jews as well as the Ægyptians; ſince theſe things were common to all Religions; as it is not enough to find two Men with a Noſe and Eyes; to conclude that one is the Son of the other, or that they have any great reſemblance. We muſt enquire whether the Ægyptians did not differently Cloath, and give their Singer and Scribe a different Office. Did the Jewiſh Chanters carry Triſmegiſtus's Books into the Temple? Were there any Aſtronomers with a Dyal in their Hand? was it the Office of the Scribe to decipher the Hieroglyphicks of the Temple and Altar? Theſe are all Characters of diſtinction, which ſhew a manifeſt difference betwixt theſe Religions. A Proceſſion has been diſcovered [b] made to the Honour of Iſis, in which a Woman carries a muſical inſtrument like thoſe which the Jews employ in chanting their Pſalms: Another has Palm-branches, a third a Globe in her Hands. Shall we ſay that this was the Feaſt of Tabernacles in which they carried Branches, played on Inſtruments, and ſung Pſalms, and praiſed God, the Author of the Univerſe? But the ſame Proceſſion preſents us with ſome manifeſt Characters of Heatheniſm; for one of the Women bears the Statue of Horns; another carries that of Harpocrates and Iſis: Laſtly, we find the Figure of an Ox, which was the Symbol of the Ægyptians. We muſt not therefore be dazled with ſome Ceremonies that are found in all Religions, and may be common to the true as well as falſe; but we muſt examine the whole Rite, to paſs an unprejudiced judgment.

XII. Dr. Gale does not ſtop at theſe general reflexions; but examines the Divinities ſo famous among the Ægyptians, and finds Adam in Oſiris, and Eve in Iſis: For God gave her the Name Iſcha, which is near a-kin to that of Iſis. In the ſame Oſiris he diſcovers Abraham, whoſe Name was celebrated for bringing from Chaldea the Knowledge of Aſtronomy and the true Religion. He eſpecially diſcovers in the ſame Divinity, Moſes the Hebrew Legiſlator, 'Tis ſaid that Oſiris was buried in an Iſland of the Nile, becauſe Moſes in the Bulruſh Ark was expoſed upon the Waters of this River; Hercules was Oſiris's General, which is the Scripture Joſhua, that commanded Moſes's Army. Oſiris had with him Anubis, who is commonly painted with a Dog's Head, becauſe he wore a Dog's Skin; this relates to the Name of Caleb. Pan made War under Oſiris, which Pan is the Meſſiah, who conducted the People of Iſrael in the deſart. Oſiris is repreſented with Horns, like Moſes; becauſe the reflexions of Light are miſtaken for Horns.

Laſtly [a] another God is conjoyned with Oſiris, which might be the Sun, becauſe his Name ſignifies Light: But this is Aaron Moſes's Brother. I queſtion whether theſe correſpondencies between Moſes and Oſiris will appear very manifeſt; but I am obliged to relate them, as having taken upon me to repreſent the Arguments of this Author. Let us farther obſerve, that Thoth (the God, whom the Phenicians brought into the very Heart of Germany) was the Mercury of the Ægyptians: the Inventor of Arts and Sciences, and likewiſe the Moſes of the Hebrews.

XIII. Some Criticks fancy that Apis was a King of Memphis, who having fed his Subjects in a time of Famine, that depopulated the Country, was after his Death worſhipp'd by them in the Figure of an Ox. Not only becauſe it was the cuſtom of the Ægyptians to conſecrate certain Creatures to their Heroes, and that an Ox which is imploy'd in Agriculture, was a proper Emblem to keep up the Memory of a King that had fed them; but becauſe in the Ægyptian Tongue Apis ſignifies an Ox. The majority both of Jews and Chriſtians imagine, that it was Joſeph, who was worſhipped under this Similitude; and therefore the Iſraelites were the eaſier induced to give him divine Honours in the Deſart. Pharaoh had highly honoured Joſeph; he call'd him his Father Ab; whence came the Name of Apis. Beſides, Joſeph nouriſh'd the People. We ſhall not ſtand to diſcuſs all theſe Opinions, it being ſufficient to obſerve, that Dr. Gale maintains the latter; and at the ſame time aſſerts, that Joſeph might be the Ægyptians Thoth, or Triſmegiſtus.

XIV. Some believe [c] that Typhon, terrible in Ægypt for the miſchiefs he did the Inhabitants, was the Serpent Python which Apollo kill'd, from whence he took the Name of Pythian, and indeed Python is made by the Anagram of Typhon; but they ſee in the ſame cruel and barbarous God, Og the King of Baſhan. It has been ſaid that Typhon was plunged into the bottomleſs gulphs, which the Jews believed to be the Manſions of the Giants and Anakins; for they call'd the Aſſembly of the Giants Hell. They ſaid likewiſe that Typhon was drown'd in a Lake, or in the River Orontes, which was taken from Job [d], who ſays the Giants ſuffer in the Water. Moreover, they commonly picture Typhon with Serpents, becauſe it was the cuſtom of the Hebrews to call the Giants and their Enemies Servants and Dragons. They add too [e] that the Serpent ſtop'd Apollo in his March, when he went to Delphi. Og the King of Baſan oppoſed Joſhua, in his march to Shilo, and there is ſo great an Affinity betwixt Shilo and Delphi, that it can't be doubted but it is one and the ſame place. The Greek Poets have attributed even the very Bed of Og, King of Baſhan, to Typhon, that no ſtroke of reſemblance might be wanting. There, ſays Homer, [f] were the Beds of Typhon.

* Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 6. p. 633. [a] Gale ib. t. 2. l 1. c. 2. p. 30. [b] Colomna in hortis Medicæis montis pinciari apud Kirkerum Oedip. Ægyp. Templum Iſiac. c. 9. t. 1. p. 225. [c] Gale ibid. p. 1. l. 2. c. 7. p. 94. [d] Dickinſon Delphi Phenicisantes c. 1, 2. p. 1. ad 20. in faſciculo. 1. [e] Job. 26. 5. [f] Δαιμόνι & ἠν ἀγνοσόφις Callim.

Εἰν ἀριμοις ὅθι φάσι Τυφωέος ἔμμεναι εὐνάς.

Theſe Beds were in Arama, a Mountain, which ſome place in [g] Cilicia, and others in Lydia; but it was in Syria; for Aram the Son of Sem, was the Father of the Syrians; and the Greeks muſt needs believe, that Typhon died in that Country; ſince they caſt him into the River Orontes. This is ſtill far from the places of Joſhua's March, but a verſe of Homer inſenſibly brings them nearer. Typhon was killed

Χώρῳ ἔνι δρυόεντι Τάης ἐν πίονι δήμῳ.

At Tde in a place full of Oaks, in the midſt of a fat People. If we inquire for a place full of Oaks, and a People fatned with Proſperity; we ſhall find this to be the People of Canaan, where there were Oaks in abundance. The Oak of Abraham; the Foreſt of Sichem are well known; and the Inhabitants were an happy People. There needs no more then, but to correct the Text, corrupted by the Tranſcribers, and make it Judæa; for Tde is Judæa [h], and thus the Typhon of the Ægyptians and Greeks, will appear in his proper ſhape, Og the King of Baſhan.

XV. As for Dr. Gale [i] he immediately Conjectures, that the Ægyptians repreſented the Devil under the Name of Typhon; for they ſuppoſed this haughty and cruel Prince had made War with Jupiter, who with a Thunderbolt plunged him into the Abyſs of Fire under Mount Ætna, which ſtill ſends out eruptions of Flames. And what's this, but the Hiſtory of the Angels, and the Devil thrown into Hell, according to St. Peter? His very Name comes from Topbet, that Valley of Canaan ſo infamous under the Name of Gehinnon, becauſe of the Fires made in it to burn the Children to Aſhes that were offered to the falſe Gods; and this word ſignifies to burn. [k]

XV. Mean while this Typhon may be alſo Moſes, whom the Ægyptians hated for the Plagues which he had brought on their Nation. They ſaid that Typhon the Son of a Queen, had been ſhut up in a Cheſt; that afterwards the command of all the Creatures was given him; but not content with that, he raiſed an Army, which he divided into thirteen different Bodies, with which he made War upon the Gods. This is the Hiſtory of Moſes; for he paſs'd for the Son of the Ægyptian Princeſs: He was put into an Ark upon the Banks of the Nile. Jethro committed his Flocks to his keeping: He divided the People of Iſrael into thirteen Tribes, ſubdividing that of Joſeph into two. Laſtly, he made War upon the Ægyptian Gods. Since he oppoſed their Idols.

XVII. Beſides the diverſity of Conjectures about this Divinity, there is a general defect in the Arguments; which is, that Moſes is fit for every thing. He is the Oſiris, or the Beneficent God of the Ægyptians; he is at the ſame time the Devil; he that does them good and hurt, whom they both worſhip and deteſt. Joſeph is at once Mercurius Triſmegiſtus and Apis. 'Tis not probable the Ægyptians ſhould make a God and a Devil of the ſame Man, or even different Perſons of him. The Idolaters accumulated the Actions of many upon the ſame Hero to excite the admiration of the People with the Narrative of a more illuſtrious Life; but they did not divide the Subjects: If Moſes therefore with all his Characters, and bright Actions of his Life be found in an Ægyptian Deity, they ought to fix there; and not to proceed to Metamorphoſe him into Typhon and Triſmegiſtus; for otherwiſe it ſeems that Moſes may ſerve for every thing. If it be ſaid that the Idolaters, to diſguiſe his Hiſtory, have diſtributed to each of their Divinities a little portion of his Life, as the Superſtitious divide the Relicks of a Saint into different places; it muſt then be confeſs'd, that it is very hard to diſcover a Moſes ſo odly diſguiſed, and we are no ſurer of finding him in the Ægyptian Gods, than the Relicks of the Saints, in the ſeveral places that pretend to them. But this is a Reflexion only by the by. Let us end Dr. Gale's Syſtem.

XVIII. The Egyptians, [l] when they had borrowed their Heroes and Saints from the Jews, and made their Gods of them, derived from them alſo the way of teaching Religion to the People. And indeed every Body knows the extream fondneſs of the Perſians, Medes, Syrians, and Chaldeans, for Fables and Mythology. This was ſuitable to the Infancy of the World, and the times wherein the Rules of Hiſtory were yet unknown. However, we muſt not imagine that theſe Antient Nations groſly believed and propagated the Fables, that have come down to us. This was an agreeable way of teaching and ſhadowing ſome important Truths under Emblems and Allegories. Voſſius [m] Apologizing for Diodorus Siculus obſerves, that the antient Stories that to us ſeem fabulous and ridiculous, comprehended ſome great Events; as the Deluge, and the building the Tower of Babel, mention'd by Beroſus, Alexander, Polyhiſtor, Mnaſeas, and others. He adds, that 'tis no wonder that theſe antient Compilers of miraculous Stories, often contradict themſelves; becauſe 'tis impoſſible but theſe Matters ſhould be diverſifyed in ſo long a tract of Years and Ages; it being ſufficient that they ſometimes are conſiſtent. Fable, ſays Ariſtotle, preſents an Event that cauſes Admiration: No wonder then that the Ægyptians, and other Nations of the Idolatrous World, borrowed their Fables from the Scripture. 1. Becauſe we find there a great many miraculous Events, fit to raiſe the Admiration of Men. 2. We find alſo in the Law abundance of Types and Ceremonies, under which God conceal'd the moſt important Truths of Religion, from whence the Idolaters learnt to veil their Myſteries and their Gods; ſuch is the ſource of the Ægyptian Cabbala.

[f] Homer Iliad 2. p. 89. [g] Didymus Scholia ibid. [h] Ibid. p. 13. Τάης read Ιάδα. [i] Ibid. c. 4. p. 51. [k] Hence according to Mr. Bochart, comes the Greek word Τύφειν ardere. He believes alſo that Typhon was Moſes, and has fancied ſome correſpondences betwixt them. V. Bochart, Hierozoicon. [l] Gale ib. p. 1. l. 3. c. 2. p. 32. [m] Voſſi. de Hiſtor. Gr. l. 2. c. 2. p. 168.

CHAP.

CHAP. XVIII.

A different Syſtem oppoſed to the foregoing, concerning the Theology of the Ægyptians. They were the Inventors of their Gods and Cabbala.

I. THE Deſign of this Chapter. II. A gap in the Line of Communication betwixt the Jews and Ægyptians. III. The Ægyptians jealous of their Religion, did not borrow that of others. IV. An Argument taken from the Chriſtians living in Ægypt. V. The Original of the Ægyptians Error about their Antiquity. VI. The time in which the firſt of their Kings lived. VII. Whether Chus brought Idolatry into Ægypt. VIII. Menes cotemporary with Cham or Miſraiim, the Author of the Ægyptian Religion. IX. The Deluge unknown to the Ægyptian Sages. X. An Argument taken from Socrates's converſation. XI. The Deluge mention'd by Diodorus Siculus, different from Noah's. XII. Whether Prometheus was Noah. XIII. An Abſtract of the Truths preſerved by the Ægyptians. XIV. Cham was Jupiter Ammon. XV. Of the Writings of Mercurius Triſmegiſtus: Whether he changed his Religion in Ægypt. XVI. The Exiſtence of a God always owned. XVII. The Notion of a ſupream God, who did not create the World. XVIII. A ſecond God the Author of the World: His deſcription in an Oracle. XIX. The uſe and neceſſity of Symbols and Emblems. XX. The Sun the Image of the Divinity. XXI. Triſmegiſtus's parallel betwixt the Sun and God. XXII. Oſiris was the Sun. XXIII. And ſo was Serapis. XXIV. Mitras. XXV. Several Figures of Harpocrates explain'd. XXVI. Oſiris turn'd into an Hero. XXVII. A myſtical explication of his Hiſtory.

I. HAving expoſed to view the Syſtem of the Criticks, who conſider the Jewiſh Religion as the ſource of all the reſt, and the method of the Cabbaliſts as the Plan, which all Nations have copied, it is reaſonable to oppoſe our Conjectures to them, and to ſhew that the Ægyptians were the firſt Cabbaliſts of the World; that they have carried this Science farther than any other Nation, and that after they had invented their Gods, they found out this method of teaching Religion to the People.

II. Firſt, 'tis taking pains to no purpoſe, to ſeek for Lines of Communication betwixt the Jewiſh and Ægyptian Doctors: For not to reckon thoſe terrible gaps of four or five hundred Years, from one Perſon to another; from Abraham and Joſeph, to Moſes; from Moſes, to Solomon; from Solomon, to Alexander the Great [a], though we allowed the commerce of theſe Doctors to have been much more frequent, it can't be thence concluded, that the one borrowed their Religion of the other.

III. And indeed the Ægyptians, conceited of their Antiquity, their Knowledge, and the fineneſs of their Wits, had a contemptible regard for other Nations, and look'd upon the Jews as Slaves, that had long ſtoop'd under their Yoke, before they ſhook it off. Men commonly receive their Gods from their Maſters, but ſeldom if ever, take them from the Hands of their Slaves. 'Tis obſerved as a thing extraordinary in this Nation, that Serapis was brought from another Country into Ægypt. This was the only Divinity they took up from Strangers; and even this is a conteſted Fact, ſince the Worſhip of Serapis ſeems much antienter in Ægypt, than the time of Ptolomeus Lagus, wherein this Tranſlation was made from Sinope to Alexandria. The Worſhip of Iſis was convey'd to Rome, but the Gods of the Romans never came into Ægypt, though they were its Conquerors and Maſters.

IV. The Chriſtians lived much longer in Ægypt than the Jews; where they had Biſhops and Doctors of extraordinary Learning. And their Religion not only flouriſh'd there, but was often ſupported by the Supreme Authority: And yet the Ægyptians, with our Rites and Ceremonies before their Eyes, maintain'd a ſcrupulous adherence to thoſe of their Anceſtors; neither adding to the bulk of their Religion with our obſervances, nor admitting them into their Worſhip. How then can we imagine, that Abraham, Joſeph, and Moſes, had the Art to perſuade the Ægyptians to relinquiſh their old Superſtitions, for the Religion of the Jews, whilſt the Chriſtian Church, which had ſo great a Commerce, and near a Neighbourhood with the Ægyptian Idolaters, could make no impreſſion on them, by the Miniſtry of ſo vaſt a number of Biſhops and Learned Men, in the ſpace of ſo many Centuries? Socrates relates, how devoted the Ægyptians of his Time were to their Temples, Ceremonies, and Myſteries. We don't find any track of Chriſtianity, in the deſcriptions of their Religion, which Macrobius, or Clemens Alexandrinus and others have given us: How then do they obſerve ſome evident Characters of Judaiſm in it?

Beſides, it is not enough to diſcover ſome ſhadow of reſemblance between two Religions, or two Writers, to conclude that one proceeded, or ſtole from the other; becauſe there are ſome notions of Religion, which are common to moſt Nations, as there are ſome thoughts incident to the Minds of ſeveral Writers. An Example will demonſtratively prove it.

The Church of Rome worſhips Saints and Images, and the Proteſtants diſcover the Origine of this worſhip in Heatheniſm. And indeed there are twenty reſemblances betwixt them; which can't be denied. In the mean time the Chriſtians that pray to Saints, did not adopt the Worſhip of the Heathens. They invented it themſelves; and on that reſpect there is a conformity betwixt the two Religions, tho' one was not the Parent of the other. Their Admiration of the Martyrs conſtancy, and the ſervice it did the Church and God himſelf, made them fancy they had a more immediate acceſs to him than great Sinners. They imagin'd, that the Saints ſhortned the paſſage betwixt us and God; the Soul has no occaſion to fly ſo high as the Supreme Being, who is at an infinite diſtance from her; but ſhe reſts her ſelf by the way upon theſe Mediators, who are Men as our ſelves. Images were placed in Temples by way of Ornament; to revive the Memory of the antient Heroes of Chriſtianity, and to be the Book of the Ignorant. If we compare Popery with Paganiſm; their Heroes turn'd into Tutelar Gods of every Kingdom, Province, Profeſſion or Family; we ſhall find not only the Worſhip of the Romiſh Saints, and Heathen Heroes, to be grounded upon the ſame reaſon; but the parts of this Worſhip and Ceremonies attending it to be alike: Yet who will venture to ſay that the Chriſtians, who firſt paid their Devotions to Saints, or Images ſought after the Books of the antient Heathens to form their Worſhip by them, and took ſo infamous an Idolatry for a Model of their own? We muſt do the Heathens the ſame Juſtice, and not imagine them perpetual Plagiaries of the Jews; becauſe they have ſome little Parts of their Religion reſembling that of the People of God: Moſt commonly, theſe are only Proportions artfully adjuſted, and very hard to be diſcern'd.

[a] From Abraham to Moſes are reckon'd 430 Years; from Moſes to Solomon 480 Years; from Solomon to Alexander near 600 Years.

Theſe Inſtances ſhould convince us, that it was not ſufficient for one Theologiſt, as Abraham or Moſes, to have travell'd from one Country to another; nor even for two Religions to be Neighbours, to ſuppoſe them transform'd and incorporated into each other. There is no certainty of the Ægyptian Religion's being grafted upon that of the Jews, becauſe we diſcover ſome Touches of reſemblance in them, or ſome Line of Communication betwixt theſe Nations by means of the Phenicians or the Patriarchs.

V. The Ægyptians deluded themſelves with the Notion of an Antiquity which they had not; when finding in their ancient Monuments a long Catalogue of Kings who had govern'd in this Country, they have drawn them out into a continued Succeſſion, which multiplies their Number, and their Years, or rather Ages of their Duration. They were not willing to reflect that Ægypt had been divided into three Parts, the Upper whereof Memphis was the Capital, the Lower, where the Iſraelites ſettled, near Heliopolis, by Joſeph's Direction, and the Thebais, to which the City Thebes, ſo celebrated by the Poets for its largeneſs and beauty, gave its Name: Each of theſe Kingdoms had its reſpective Kings. They might too have been ſubdivided, ſince we are convinc'd from the Deſcription of the neighbouring Country of Canaan, that every City had its King. They have therefore unreaſonably augmented the number of their Kings, by bringing all the Kings of theſe Three disjointed Kingdoms into One Liſt, and making them ſucceed one another, though they were Cotemporaries, or as we may ſay Collaterals, which Deception is the Original of the Antiquity, the Ægyptians ſo much plume themſelves upon.

VI. But notwithſtanding all their Errors, they fail not to ſettle a fix'd Period, comporting with the Sacred Hiſtory. For they ſay that Menes was the firſt of their Kings, from whoſe Reign they reckon a thouſand four hundred Years to Seſac, or Seſoſtris, who beſieg'd Jeruſalem, in the Reign of Roboboam. This Computation is exact enough, for by riſing Fourteen hundred Years upwards from this Siege to Menes, we come pretty near the [a] Deluge; and this firſt King of Ægypt appears to be Cham, Noah's Son, who peopl'd Africa. Miſraiim, Cham's Son was undoubtedly King of Ægypt, ſince that Country goes by his Name in the Sacred Writers.

VII. I ſhall not inſiſt upon what Gregory of Tours [b] ſays, that Chus, Cham's Son, driven by the Devil, eſtabliſh'd Idolatry and Magick, before unknown: "That he was the firſt that erected a Statue to "be worſhipp'd. Having made a League with the "Devil, he brought down Fire and Stars from the "Firmament: He went to the Perſians, and taught "them to worſhip the Fire; and after his death, "they ador'd him under the Name of Zoroaſter, "or the living Star. Kirker [c] produces a long Paſſage out of Mor-Iſaac, a Maronite, who imputes the ſame thing to the Children of Cam. He adds, that they plac'd Statues upon Pillars, and the tops of Walls, which by the Art of the Demons ſpoke, and anſwer'd when they were enquir'd of, or were offer'd Victims; and taught what was tranſacting in foreign Parts. Laſtly, He aſſerts, that theſe particular Cuſtoms of the Ægyptians ſpread over all the World. If this be true, the Ægyptians, inſtead of deriving the true Religion from Noah's Sons, learnt of them to corrupt it, and worſhip Idols. But 'tis better to remain in our preſent uncertainty as to the Religion of Chus and Miſraiim, and content our ſelves with Two Obſervations.

VIII. Firſt, That Menes having been King of all Ægypt, (which was not divided, till under his Succeſſors) Four hundred Years before Abraham, and a great deal more before Joſeph, it is not conceivable, that the Ægyptians liv'd without any Religion and Worſhip the ſpace of Five hundred Years. Therefore their Religion was much anci-enter than the Patriarchs; and 'tis in vain to attempt to make their Gods of a more modern Extraction, by confounding them with Abraham and Moſes. Abraham muſt have chang'd the Religion of theſe Idolaters, during a very ſhort ſtay among them, and have made himſelf ſo conſiderable in the Nation, as to be worſhipp'd after his death, to the prejudice of its Kings and Heroes. In the mean time not one of theſe things is prov'd, and it muſt be own'd that not one of them is probable.

IX. If Cham, or his Children had eſtabliſh'd a Religion in Ægypt, that continued there, we ſhould find in all the antient Monuments of this Country an Emblem of the Deluge, rather than of other leſs conſiderable Events of the Sacred Story. For which there is this manifeſt reaſon, that Cham having remain'd ſo long in the Ark, could not forget to acquaint his Poſterity with a Judgment, that was the Conſequence of the Sins and Idolatry of the firſt World. Yet we don't ſee that the univerſal Deluge had a place in the Hiſtory, Religion, or Cabbala of the Ægyptians.

X. Socrates's Converſation with a learned Ægyptian [d] demonſtratively proves it; for having inform'd the Grecian Philoſopher, that the great Diſaſters the World is threatned with, will happen by Conflagrations and Inundations, he obſerves, that when the Earth lies under Water, the Ægyptians have a great advantage above the other Nations of the World, becauſe then the Shepherds, inhabiting the Mountains are ſecure. Therefore it was not believ'd in Ægypt that there had been a Flood, that roſe above the tops of the Mountains; but he farther obſerves, that in Ægypt the Water never falls from Heaven, and that the Inundations proceed from the over-flowing of the Nile, and the Waters that proceed from the Bowels of the Earth. In a Word, He makes an oppoſition betwixt his Country and Greece, where Deucalion's Deluge was divulg'd. Laſtly, He aſſerts that Ægypt was ſafe from great Inundations, and therefore the antient Monuments and Pillars long ſince erected, were ſtill ſeen ſubſiſting. A learned Man that had had any Idea of Noah's Flood, for which the Cataracts of Heaven were open'd, and the Rain pour'd down for ſo many Days together, which had cover'd the higheſt Mountains, and buried thoſe that fled to them as a ſafe Retreat; could never have ſpoke thus. Whence it appears, that only the Inundations of the Nile were known in this Country, which were carefully meaſur'd.

XI. Diodorus Siculus [e] ſpeaks of a Deluge that happen'd in Ægypt in Prometheus's Reign; but he obſerves, that it was the Nile, that burſting its Banks, overflow'd one Part of the Country, and particularly that where Prometheus reign'd, and deſtroy'd part of his Subjects. Prometheus, the King of one Part of Ægypt, has nothing in common with [a] The Deluge happen'd in the Year 1657, and Jeruſalem was beſieg'd by Seſac, King of Ægypt, in the 3033 Year of the World. [b] Gregor. Tur. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 5. p. 6. [c] Mor. Iſaac de Studiis Philoſoph. apud Kirker Oed. Ægypt. Temp. Iſiac. t. 1. p. 171. [d] Plato in Timæo. p. 524. [e] Diod. Sic. Hiſt. l. 1.

Noah. The overflowing of the Nile, that only overflows ſome neighbouring Banks; a Province of a little Kingdom, wherein part of his Subjects eſcape the violence of the Water, can't be taken for the Deluge that overwhelm'd the whole Earth, and had quite another Cauſe than the ſwelling of a River. Here we neither ſee Prometheus that only eſcapes with his Family, nor an Ark, ſerving for a Veſſel, nor the reſtoration of Mankind by this ſingle Man. On the contrary, the Ægyptian Hiſtory ſays Oſiris employ'd Hercules to reduce the Nile to its wonted Channel. They were ſo perſuaded, that the antient Inundation, which was [f] preſerved in remembrance, proceeded from the Nile, that the ſubſequent Kings took Precautions againſt its overflowings. Seſoſtris rais'd ſome ſtrong Banks near the Cities; Sabacon ſtill added to their height. But eſpecially great Mounds were rais'd near to Bubaſta, which had been the greateſt Sufferer, becauſe it was ſituate in the lower Ægypt.

Qua [g] dividui pars maxima Nili,
Ad vada decurrit peluſia, ſeptimus amnis.

XII. However ſome will have it, that Prometheus, [h] was Noah; that Herodotus calls this Prince's Wife Aſia, and that Noah's Wife was certainly an Aſiatick. Beſides, we find a Deluge under Prometheus, as under Noah. But are theſe Arguments? Muſt all the Kings, in whoſe Countries Inundations have happen'd, or ſhall happen, be ſo many Noah's? Is it ſufficient that Noah's Wife was born in Aſia, to confound her with Prometheus's Wife, who had that Name. Laſtly, Don't we ſee that the Fable of Prometheus has no affinity with the Hiſtory of this Patriarch? And therefore other [i] learned Men think that Prometheus was Magog, the Son of Japhet, who ſettled with his Family upon Mount Caucaſus, where the Fable ſays, that Prometheus was bound. As this Mountain has two ſubterraneous Fires in it, he was accus'd of ſtealing Fire from Heaven, and carrying it thither. Laſtly, Magog ſignifies Conſumption, which agrees with the Story of a Vulture's eating Prometheus's Liver. This Conjecture is perhaps as ſubtle as the other, but this diverſity of Opinions ſhews at leaſt that Noah is not manifeſtly Prometheus; and that the Deluge of the one is very different from the other's.

The univerſal Deluge therefore was not known to the Ægyptians. And if this Truth was ſo buried among them, as to leave no Footſteps of it, how is it likely to find the other Events of the Sacred Hiſtory, the Types and Shadows of the Law?

XIII. And indeed the Hiſtory of Events, which Cham and his Children publiſh'd, were quickly forgot in Ægypt, but they preſerved much longer ſome general Principles of Religion; as the Exiſtence of a God, the Creation of the World; the Immortality of the Soul, and the knowledge of a miſchievous Principle. Nor is it any wonder, that theſe fundamental Truths that were taught by Cham, were not ſo ſoon forgotten as the reſt, becauſe theſe are Principles that are common to all Religions, without which Religion periſhes, or very difficultly ſubſiſts.

XIV. In the mean time a conſiderable change happen'd after the death of Cham; for the Ægyptians, in profound Gratitude to the Hero, whom they conſider'd as the Founder and Father of their Kings, worſhipp'd and deify'd him, who was afterwards known by the Name of Hammon. They afterwards referr'd the Worſhip that was paid him, to the Sun; whether they had forgotten that Cham was the Founder of the Nation, or that their Devotion for this Luminary engroſs'd moſt part of the other Worſhips: Certainly [k] Hammon was repreſented with Horns, and worſhipp'd in this Figure, like the Sun: Let us not be accuſed here of making Conjectures like thoſe we are confuting; for 'tis own'd that Cham and Ham are the ſame thing. Plato [l] obſerves, that there was a King of Thebes in the upper Ægypt, who ruled over all the Country, who was worſhipp'd by the Inhabitants, and ſtyl'd by the Greeks, The God Hammon. Here you have the Deſcription of Cham, or Menes King of Thebes, and all Ægypt, which was not divided among his Children till after his Death and Deification. As he became famous, each Nation in proceſs of Time gave him different Names, according to the Genius of its Language; but he preſerved that of Cham, or Hammon in Africa, Διὸς κεκλήμενος Ἄμμων.

And the Greeks themſelves, who gave him the Title of Jupiter, left him ſtill his antient Name, that ſpecified his Original. The Jupiter Hammon, who had ſo famous a Temple in Egypt, was the Cham of the Hebrews. Philaſtrius, who has confounded him with the Pharaoh that was drown'd in the Red-Sea, is groſly miſtaken: For Hammon was Cham the firſt Ægyptian Hero, the Founder of their Monarchy and Religion, whom in Gratitude they made a God.

XV. Some time after there appear'd among them a ſecond Inſtructor call'd Thoth, or Mercurius Triſmegiſtus, to whom is aſcribed the Invention of Arts and Sciences. 'Twas he that invented Writing, which was a thing not known before. Which ſhews that he can't be conſider'd either as Moſes or Joſeph, ſince there were Books already written, and Pyramids whereon they drew Figures repreſenting publick Events. To him they aſcribe a prodigious number of Books: Seleucus reckons Two thouſand. Manetho, who was an Ægyptian, makes the number conſiderably greater, which has given occaſion to the Criticks to ſay they were only Verſes; or that inſtead of Books we muſt underſtand the Revolutions of the Heavens, or the Years of the Ægyptian Dynaſties, as if Mercury, who liv'd a long time before the end of theſe Dynaſties, could have ſpecified the Years of them. The number of Books might be enhanced, becauſe the Ægyptians took a pride to paſs their Works under Mercury's Name. But rather than impertinently to confound, the Revolutions of the Stars with Books, or to run into Conjectures, let it only be obſerved, that theſe Books were but little Diſcourſes about Nature and Religion, which an Author might carry up to the number of Two thouſand, without fatiguing himſelf to death.

It ſignifies little to know whether it was he that gave the Form to the Ægyptian Religion, and made freſh Alterations to the Truths which were taught by Cham. 'Tis impoſſible to pierce through the Obſcurity of ſo many Ages; however, this Honour has been aſcribed to him for above Two thouſand Years. The Ægyptians have always ſaid, that he was the Miniſter of Oſiris, the Favourite of the Gods. Perhaps he might ſpread this Report himſelf, to give a greater Authority to the Religion he eſtabliſh'd, which is the Artifice of Innovators. The moſt antient Greek Authors that have ſpoken of him, follow the Ægyptians. Jamblicus has diſcover'd the Principles of his myſtical Theology, and though he never ſaw Triſmegiſtus's Books, which

[f] Herodot. l. 2. c. 137. [g] Lucan. Pharſal. l. 8. [h] Gale ibid. l. 2. c. 6. p. 73. [i] Stillingfleet. Origin. Sacr. l. 3. c. 5. p. 594. Bochart Phaleg. l. 1. c. 2. [k] Corniger Ammon. [l] Plato in Pharo p. 1241.

which muſt have been loſt before his Time, yet we can't deny him the Glory of having derived what he ſays out of ſome Fragments and Extracts that were ſtill in being. But not to dwell upon Triſmegiſtus or Thoth, it is ſtill certain that the change was brought into the Ægyptian Worſhip before Joſeph and Moſes. Let us ſee what this change was.

XVI. Firſt, The Idea of a Supreme God, which Cham had left was ſtill preſerved: If this Father of the Nation ſhall not be allowed to have left his Children the Knowledge of a God, that will not affect us, ſince they might have this Notion of a Firſt Principle from the Light of Nature, without the aſſiſtance of Revelation or Tradition. In ſhort, there's no need of deſcending to Abraham or Moſes, to find this Firſt Foundation of Divinity.

XVII. Mercury call'd [m] "This Supream Being, "One only God, who exiſted before the Firſt God, "and was immovable, remaining in the ſolitude of "his Unity. It was not he that produced the Univerſe, for he was ſuperior to the Creator and Father of Nature. You are miſtaken, O Men, ſaid Numenius, [n] ſpeaking of this Firſt Principle, by imagining God the Creator of Heaven to be the Firſt, there is another above him. They placed him in the higheſt Heaven, ſurrounded with thick Clouds, which rendred him inviſible and inacceſſible to the Eyes of Men.

Αυτὸν σ' ἐκ ὁράω περὶ γὰρ νέφος ἐσήρκται.

I don't ſee him, for he has a Cloud about him, ſaid Orpheus. He was ſo rarely ſpoken of to the People, that 'tis no wonder they forgot him, or did not think of him: But to the ſhame of the Philoſophers, the Vulgar had better Notions in this reſpect than they; ſince there is nothing above the Creator of the Univerſe, unleſs you'll find a ſecond Perſon of the Trinity in this Creator, which Myſtery the Philoſophers never dreamt of.

XVIII. Be it how it will, the Ægyptians had a Second Principle inferior to the Firſt, who tho' he never was ſeparate from him, yet he received his Ideas of him. He was no Production, but an Emanation of the Firſt God. He was Father to himſelf: Eſſence and Unity flowed from him as from their Fountain. He was the Agent in the Production of the Univerſe; and therefore was call'd Demiourgos, the Framer of the World, a Term well known to the antient Hereticks, who took it from hence.

'Tis ſaid that Pharaoh ſeeing himſelf overwhelm'd with the Plagues that Moſes had brought upon his Land, ſent to conſult the Oracle of Memphis what God it was that did him ſo much miſchief: The Oracle anſwer'd, "That the God of Iſrael was a "[o] Light, which proceeded from the God of Hea- "ven, eternal and immortal; more glorious than "any Light, under whom the Heaven and Earth "trembled. A God without Father, Father to "himſelf: A Father, and at the ſame time his own "Son; begotten, taught by himſelf; without Mo- "ther; ſteady, immoveable, whoſe very Name "cannot be expreſs'd. He lives in pure Fire; but "as for us, we are only Angels. This Oracle de- ſerved relating, ſince we find in it the Deſcription of the God we ſeek for.

Lactantius ſays, [p] that this Oracle was deliver'd at Colophon in Ionia, and he concludes that it is falſe, ſince Jupiter had a Father: But it is of little moment to know the Place where theſe Verſes were compoſed; but yet it is ſurprizing that the Heathens had an Idea of the Deity coming up very near to that of the Chriſtians. Moreover this was the current Divinity in Ægypt; and therefore Julius Firmicus [q] before he embraced the Chriſtian Religion, compoſing his Books of Aſtronomy, and beginning to explain the Ægyptian Myſteries, according to their Principles, invok'd Him that is the Father and Mother of all things; who is beneficent: Father and Son to himſelf: And this was the ſupreme God, going by the Name Oſiris.

XIX. Mercury [r] imagin'd that the Gods took delight in ſcreening themſelves behind the Creatures; and that they gave them to Men as ſo many Images, and Symbols of themſelves. Since the Deity lov'd whatever imitated him, and wore the moſt ſenſible Characters of his Power and Greatneſs, they were obliged to reverence and conſecrate the Images that moſt perfectly repreſented him. To which concurr'd [s] another reaſon, viz. that the People being incapable of riſing up to the Contemplation of a latent God, they were to repreſent him by ſenſible Objects, the eaſier to inſtruct them. Images are the Books of the Ignorant: And thoſe which Nature furniſhes, and which God himſelf has made, and impreſs'd with his Greatneſs and Beauty, are much more agreeable to him, than thoſe that are faſhion'd by the Hands of the Artiſt.

Purſuant to this Notion the Ægyptians made diverſe Symbols of the Second God, whom they conſidered as the Author of the Univerſe. Theſe Symbols and Names did not depend upon the Fancies of Men, but the Deity communicating himſelf to the Ægyptians in preference to other Nations, they choſe the propereſt Terms and Symbols to repreſent him. Would to God, cries Jamblicus, [t] they had never been changed. "Prayers are grown in- "ſignificant, becauſe they have changed the an- "tient Rites. The inconſtant and deſultory Greeks "are always innovating, whereas they ſhould re- "ligiouſly obſerve the Inventions of Ægypt, after "the Example of the Barbarians, who are more "ſteady in their Religion. Here you ſee the O- rigine of the Cabbala, whoſe Antiquity is acknowledg'd and apologiz'd for by the Greeks.

XX. Of all the Symbols of the Deity, the moſt ſenſible, moſt beautiful, and moſt eloquent, was the Sun; and this was preferr'd by Mercury, and the Ægyptians before all the reſt. He was called the King of Nature, or the King by way of Excel-

[m] Jamblicus de Myſteriis Ægypt. Sect. 8. c. 2. [n] Numenius apud Euſeb. præp. Ev. l. 11. c. 18.

[o] Εσι κατ' ἐρημιοίο Θεοῦ μεγαλοίο βεβηκὼς,
Φέγγος ὑπερβάλλον ἠ, ἀένναον. ἀθάνατον πῦρ
Ὃς τεσμεῖ πᾶν γαῖαν ἠ ἔργον ἠδε θάλασσα,
Ταρτάριοί τε βυθοὶ ἠ δαίμονες ἐρρίγησε
Αὐτοπάτωρ, ἀπάτωρ τε πάλιν υἱὸς αὐτὸς ἑαυτῷ,
Αὐτομυὴς ἀδίδακτος ἀμήτωρ ἀσυφέλικτος
Οὔνομα μηδὲ λόγῳ χωρέυμενον ἐν πυεὶ ναίων,
Τῷ τί Θεὸς μικρὸν δὲ Θεοῦ μέρος ἄγγελοι ἡμεῖς
Λοιπὸν ἀπιθι σιγῶν ἐκ βώμων ἡμέτερων.

Cedrenus Hiſtor. Compend. p. 33.

But theſe ſame Verſes have been corrected by Thomas Gale, in his Notes upon Jamblicus, from whence we have taken them. The Sixth and Seventh Verſes are entirely wanting in Cedrenus. We only read there another Word, τεισόλιος, thrice happy, which the Latin Interpreter has ſo tranſlated to introduce the Trinity. Atque unus triplici ſub nomine felix. [p] Lact. de falſâ Relig. l. c. 7. p. 38. [q] Jul. Firmi. Aſtron. l. 5. Præf. [r] Jambl. de Myſt. Ægypt. Sect. 8. [s] Ibid. Sect. 7. c. 1. p. 150. [t] Jamb. ibid. c. 5. p. 155.

lence,

lence, and in time God was forgotten, whoſe Image this Luminary was, and he ſtole the whole Adoration of the People.

There is no need of fetching this Idolatry from the neighbouring Arabians, who ſpending their Nights in tending their Flocks, in a Country where they could hardly appear abroad in the Day-time, addicted themſelves to the ſpeculation of the Stars: For moſt Nations have agreed in acknowledging the Sun as the Father of Nature, and have given him the Title of God, in an abſolute manner. Themiſtius obſerves, [a] that thoſe who would ſee God, but can't directly gaze at him, look upon the Water where he is pictur'd. And this was the common Language of the Greeks.

Deus ille locus ſub nomine Graio Dicitur———.

Some ſay too that his Name was derived from the Name of God, [b] and that his fiery Chariot drawn by Four Steeds, which the Poets give him, was borrowed from that of Elias. Sedulius at the Head of a great Train of Authors ſays, that the Sun derived his Name from Elias, only by the alteration of an Accent.

Quam bene flammivomi prælucens ſemita cœli,
Convenit Eliæ meritoque & nomine fulgens?
Hæc ope dignus erat, quoniam ſermonis Achivi
Una per accentum mutetur litera Sol eſt.

As the Greeks and Perſians ſacrificed, and conſecrated Horſes to the Sun, this Cuſtom muſt come from Scripture; becauſe the Kings of Judah kept a number of Horſes for the Sun. Kimki ſays that the Kings mounted them to meet this Luminary, and ſalute him at his Levee; but to ſupport this, they muſt ſuppoſe that the Poets had read the Scripture, and that the Sun wanted this Name till after Elias's Time.

The Beauty of this Star, and its Influences upon the Earth were ſufficient to excite the Admiration of the People; and we ought not to ſeek any other Origine of the Worſhip that was paid to him. It muſt alſo be confeſs'd that this Symbol of the Deity was the nobleſt and moſt becoming him, of all that ever were invented. God alone was capable of giving a Repreſentation of himſelf, and whoever reſolves to worſhip him by Images, ought certainly rather to do it by the Sun, than by a Picture or a Statue; and therefore we have ſeen Hereticks, who notwithſtanding the Light of the Goſpel, have thought fit to worſhip him, and imagin'd that the Sun-flowers invigorated by this Luminary, deſerved a kind of Adoration.

XXI. 'Tis certain that Mercurius Triſmegiſtus preferr'd this Symbol of the Deity to all others, for its beauty and Luſtre. He ſaid, 1. That [c] as the Sun communicates its Influences not only to all the Parts of Heaven, but to all Nature; ſo God diſplays the Effects of his Power upon all Things. 2. As the Sun is never weary of acting and doing good, ſo the Bounty of God is inexhauſtible, and this ſupreme Being never changes. 3. There is no Creature more capable of expreſſing the Unity of God, and the Multiplicity of his Operations, than the Sun, who alone does ſo many things. 4. The Symbols of this Luminary were generally ſeated upon Clay, to ſignifie that it is He that gives Strength to the Earth, to Matter and to Nature. 5. He was elevated upon a Lote-Tree, as a kind of Throne, to teach, that the Sun was above Matter, and that the Deity inhabits the Empyreal Heaven, whoſe Perfection is expreſs'd by the roundneſs of the Leaves, and Fruit of the Lote [d]: We might add to what Jamblicus ſays, that it is a watery Plant, whoſe Leaves dip into the Nile at the ſetting, and emerge at the riſing of the Sun, as if it refuſed to give any Signs of Life, but in proportion to the Influences it receives from him.

XXII. Oſiris, that famous God of the Ægyptians, was the Sun, or rather the Sun was the Emblem of the beneficent God Oſiris: But it's common to give Images the Names of the Originals they repreſent; and as the People worſhipp'd the Sun without thinking of the Deity it repreſented, it grew cuſtomary to take Oſiris and the Sun for one and the ſame thing. He was call'd Polyophthalmos, [e] that had many Eyes, becauſe the Sun enlightens the Earth, and ſees all its Productions. O Sun thou ſeeſt and heareſt every thing, ſaid Homer.

Ἥλιος ὃς πάντ' ἐφορᾷς καὶ πάντ' ἐπακούεις.

Diodorus Siculus [f] obſerves, "That Iſis and Oſiris, the Sun and Moon) were lookt upon as "Gods that circuited the World with a continual "motion. They nouriſh'd the Earth; and tho' "contrary, formed the Year by their Union: "They are the Fountain and Principle of Gene"rations, becauſe both are humid: All Bodies "receive their Exiſtence or Nutriment from them. "In a Word, the Sun and Moon perfect Nature. It would be loſs of Time to produce more Arguments to prove that Oſiris, or the Sun, was the God of the Ægyptians.

XXIII. They reduced almoſt all their other Gods to this one. Serapis was another Name for the Sun; and therefore the Gates and Windows of his Temple were opened at the moment of his riſing, to admit his Beams.

Vulcani [g] & Phœbi radios cæpere priores
Surgentis ſolis foribus delubra recluſis.

Reineſius gives an Inſcription to Jupiter the Sun [h], the invincible Serapis. The Ægyptians repreſented him ſometimes as a youthful God, and ſometimes as an old one. 'Tis thought they [i] alluded to what Tacitus ſays; that a young Man appear'd to Ptolomy, who adviſed him to ſend for his Image at Synope in Pontus; but Serapis was worſhip'd in Ægypt long before Ptolomy's time. He had already ſome Temples at Memphis, and even at Alexandria; but he was repreſented under both theſe Figures, becauſe in his Aſcenſion he is very different from what he is in his Declenſion.

XXIV. Mithras was likewiſe the Sun, or rather was but a different Name, which the Perſians beſtowed on the Ægyptian Oſiris.

Seu [k] præſtat Oſirim
Frugiferum, ſeu Perſæi ſub rupibus antri
Indignata ſequi torquentem cornua mithram.

---

[a] Themiſt. Or. xi. [b] Ἥλιος, the Sun, ab אֵל God. [c] Jamblic. de Myſter. Ægypt. Sect. 8. c. 2. [d] This Plant is common in Ægypt. upon the Banks of the Nile, and has a ſoporiferous vertue. It was uſed to be ſaid to thoſe that made long Voyages, that they had eaten Lotus, that is, that they had forgotten their Country. [e] Kirker Templum Iſiac. c. 3. p. 176. The Ægyptian Word anſwers to the Greek πολυόφθαλμος. [f] Diodor. Sic. l. 1. c. 1. [g] Poſidippus ἐπιγεάμμασι [h] Inſcript. Reines δεῖ ἡλίῳ μεγάλῳ Σεράπιδι. [i] Vide Cuper Harpocrates. [k] Stat. Theb. 1.

Indeed

Indeed he was ſometimes repreſented, mounted upon a Bull, with a Torch, Plants, a Dog and a Lion, to note, that upon the Sun's entring into the Sign Taurus, he impregnates the Earth with the vertue of producing Plants and Animals with the Power of Generation: He had alſo [l] a Scorpion near a Plant ſhutting up it ſelf, to teach us, that as the Sun loſes its heat, when it enters the Sign Scorpio, nature loſes its vigour and beauty.

XXV. Laſtly, Harpocrates alſo repreſented the Sun. 'Tis true he was the God of ſilence; he put his Finger upon his Mouth, becauſe the Sun was worſhip'd with a reverential ſilence: And hence came the Sige of the [m] Baſilidians, who had their Origine from Ægypt; he was pictured half naked, becauſe the Deity is immaterial. He had [n] Wings to ſignify the quickneſs of his Operations. He held a Bucket in his Hand inſtead of a cornu-copia; becauſe all good things proceed from God and the Sun; and in the other [o] a Soothſayer's crooked Staff, with a Bird at the end of it, which ſome, as Suidas ſays, have taken for a Stork, others for a Lark; but it was a Whoopo, who by the variety of his Plumes, denoted the prodigious diverſity of the Creatures produced by God.

A Triangle hung upon his Back, or was placed at the Pedeſtal of his Statues, to ſignify the Perfection of the Univerſe, or that the World was made by an infinite Wiſdom, as Kirker aſſures us [p], who had ſtudied theſe matters with a wonderful exactneſs. Laſtly, Harpocrates was ſeated upon a Lotus, the Plant of the Sun. He commonly held the Whip, the Club, the Bucket, and the other Ornaments attributed to this Luminary and Oſiris. It would be in vain to be more particular in the proof of it, ſince Mr. Cuper [q] has ſo exhauſted the Subject in a Diſſertation, that 'tis impoſſible to add to it. Let us only obſerve that Orus, another famous Ægyptian Deity, was alſo the Sun. Thoſe that have a mind to derive his Name from the Hebrew, will find Aor [r] to ſignify Light.

XXVI. Such frequent mention was made of the Sun, or rather of Oſiris, under which Name he was worſhip'd, as a Deity and a Perſon, that it was imagin'd he had been an Hero, who had diſtinguiſh'd himſelf on Earth by his noble Exploits. They give out that this Prince built ſome Cities in Ægypt; ſtopt the inundations of the Nile; invented Agriculture; the uſe of the Vine, Muſick, Aſtronomy, Geometry. He raiſed a potent Army wherewith he pierced through Aſia, even to the Indies: He march'd to the very extremities of Europe, teaching the Arts and Sciences he had invented, to the Inhabitants of thoſe great Provinces of the World. In his abſence Typhon often attempted to embroil his Kingdom: But Queen Iſis whom he left Regent, who was a gracious Princeſs to her Subjects, had a watchful Eye over all his Motions. At laſt Oſiris, ſurfeited with Conqueſts, return'd to Ægypt; where he fell a Sacrifice to Typhon's Malice, who cut his Body into many pieces. His Wife gather'd them all up, excepting only one part.

XXVII. 'Tis no great venture to ſay that all this is myſtical, it being the grand method of the Ægyptians to inſtruct the People with ſuch kind of Stories. They pictured their Gods like Men, the Sun himſelf not excepted, and ſo 'tis no wonder that in tract of time they made a Hero of him: Beſides, we don't find in the firſt Ages any Conqueror that reduced the whole World to his Obedience. We may ſay then, that this Oſiris ſo celebrated for his Victories, was the Sun, who carries his Light over all the Univerſe, who is the Father of Nature, and the Author of the Goods ſhe abounds with. His abſence, whilſt Iſis ſits at the Helm is the Night; and then the Moon preſides, and ſhe is thought to diſſipate the Clouds and thick Miſts wherewith the evil Principle would darken the Air. Typhon prevails when the Sun paſſes from one Hemiſphere to the other; for then it is he kills Oſiris; he removes the Light, he raiſes Storms and Tempeſts, and Nature changes her Complexion. If this ſeems too ſubtle, and Oſiris muſt paſs for one of the antient Kings of Ægypt, famous for his Conqueſts, and worſhipped by the People after his Death, I ſhall not contradict it; but this does not ſo perfectly compromiſe with the Ægyptian Theology, which was Symbolical. We can't conceive how Oſiris came to be the Sun, whereas it was common to equip the Sun like a Hero, and a Man.

---

[l] Apud Kirker. Templ. Iſiac. c. 7. p. 217. [m] Sige Σιγὴ ſilence. [n] Cuperus Harpocrat. p. 25, 36. [o] Pignorius Menſa Iſiaca. Fol. 15. [p] Kirker Oed. Ægypt. Templum Iſiac. Synt. 2. c. 7. p. 151. [q] Cuperi Harpocrates in Quarto. 1687. [r] אור Aor. lux.

CHAP. XIX.

A Continuation of the ſame Subject.

Abraham, Joſeph, Moſes, taught the Ægyptians nothing: The Antiquity of their Cabbala; its Explication; its compariſon with that of the Jews.

I. A Third degree of Idolatry: The Animals, Symbols of the Gods. II. A Reflexion againſt the Divines taken from the progreſs of this Worſhip. III. The worſhip of the Moon; an Oblisk conſecrated to her. IV. Whether the Horns ſhe is painted with, were taken from thoſe of Moſes at the Devil's inſtigation. V. Iſis become a Heroine: An Inſcription to her Honour. VI. Whether the Greeks worſhip'd her: The Origine of this Error. VII. The frightful Figure of Typhon, and its Explication. VIII. The Original of the Ægyptian Religion. IX. The Hiſtory of Abraham caſt into the Fire, and not burnt. X. The worſhip of the Sun antienter than Abraham. XI. This Patriarch did not teach Aſtronomy in Ægypt. XII. Their Religion more antient than Joſeph. XIII. Four Circumſtances proving, that the Ægyptians did not derive their Religion from Moſes. XIV. A paſſage of Maimonides, proving the ſame. XV. The Cabbala invented to conduct Men to God. XVI. Its Origine attributed to Triſmegiſtus: Its two views. XVII. The ſacred Letters Hieroglyphical. XVIII. Their Antiquity. XIX. Divers Examples of theſe Hieroglyphicks explain'd. XX. A neceſſity of explaining the Hieroglyphicks myſtically. XXI. The difficulty of attaining to this Science: Precepts concerning this matter. XXII. The Elevation of the Soul neceſſary. XXIII. The concatenation of Cauſes produces great Effects when it is Studied. XXIV. Whether the Golden Calf, and the brazen Serpent were Ægyptian Taliſmans. XXV. Marſham, who maintains it, confuted. XXVI. The brazen Serpent miraculous. XXVII. Moſes very averſe to Magick. XXVIII. A Compariſon of the Ægyptian Cabbala with the Jewiſh.

 of

I. THE Ægyptians advanced a third Step farther, and ſo compleated the groſſneſs of their Idolatry. They believed they were to conſecrate Animals to the Heroes, or the Sun, which they adored; or that they ought to have living and ſenſible Symbols of their Deities; or rather their Divines had both theſe views at once. The Ox ſeem'd an admirable Symbol, not only becauſe of the uſe of this Creature in the Tillage of the Ground, but alſo becauſe the Sun when he enters the Sign of the Bull [a], communicates a vegetative Virtue to Plants. And therefore they repreſented Serapis mounted upon a Bull. They had two of theſe living Bulls, which they carefully fed; but to multiply the Images of their Gods, they made them of Metal, Gold, and Silver, and from hence the Iſraelites borrowed their Golden Calf.

Thus it was, that they chang'd the worſhip of the true God, whom Cham's Poſterity could not but know, into that of the Sun. They afterwards changed the Sun into an Hero, and the Hero into the Figure of an Ox: For as David reproach'd the Iſraelites [b] They changed the glory of God into the Similitude of an Ox that eateth Graſs. The People worſhip'd theſe Symbols of the Deity, as the Chriſtians have done the Images of the Saints. One would think there was no great harm to conſider the Sun as an Image of the Deity; but when once Men abandon the Creator, who alone deſerves their Homage, they ſlide inſenſibly from Symbol to Symbol, from Image to Image down to the vileſt Creatures. We often lament the groſs Idolatry of the Nations that worſhipp'd Beaſts; but have not living Creatures a nearer relation to God and Men, than a painted Canvaſs, or a carved piece of Marble? Divines complain, that the People have always a violent propenſion to ſenſible Objects and Idolatry; and I don't deny it; but in the mean time Divines of all Ages have been more to blame than the People, ſince they conducted them to the Adoration of Creatures: That they might be able to Diſcourſe longer, and to diſtinguiſh themſelves from the Croud, they have diſguiſed Religion with obſcure Terms, Emblems, and Symbols: They have ſpoken of theſe Emblems and Symbols, as if they were alive; as if they were Perſons; and have dreſs'd them like Men and Women: This has train'd up, and encouraged the People in their carnal Notions: They thought that they might devote themſelves to the Symbols, which were furniſh'd with a wondrous Efficacy, and treated more of than of the Deity himſelf. Whereas they ought to give the People the ſimpleſt Ideas of God, and talk ſoberly of him; they embelliſh, they enrich, and magnify their Ideas of him, and this is what has corrupted Religion in all Ages, as is manifeſt from the inſtance of the Ægyptians. By veiling Religion under pretence of procuring it reſpect, they have buried and deſtroyed it.

III. When the Sun was thus worſhipped, it was not reaſonable to leave out the Moon, whom the Greeks entituled Goddeſs, and who according to the antient naturaliſts, has mighty influences in the production of Plants and Minerals. The Ægyptians call'd her Iſis. We find an obeliſque, upon which there is a creſcent with theſe words, which expreſs whatever can be ſaid to her Honour and Advantage.

Ισις [c] εγω ειμι παντο γεγονω και ον και εσομενον και το εμον ωεπλον ουδεις των θνι θων απε καλυ ψε
ν.

I Iſis am all that has been, that is or ſhall be, no mortal Man hath ever me unveile d.

becauſe Iſis was not only conſider'd under the notion of the Moon, but under that of Nature, whoſe Operations and Methods of acting are inſcrutable.

IV. Whereas ſhe was repreſented with Horns on her Head, Pignorius [d] has fancied, that the Devil, who would ever be aping God, poſſeſs'd the Ægyptians with the Notion of this Figure; becauſe Moſes deſcending from the Mountain, had Horns on his Forehead. The fault is very groſs. Dr. Gale [e] has ſomewhat alter'd it, in ſaying Oſiris was painted, for the ſame reaſon with Horns; becauſe the radiations of Light which ſhone about Moſes's Head were miſtaken for Horns; they had ſome very natural Reaſons for giving Horns to the Sun and Moon.

Ardua [f] ſuſpiciens minuentis cornua Lunæ
Nortivagoſque colens aſtrorum conſulit ignes.

But it is not true, that Moſes had Horns; and ſtill leſs likely that the Ægyptians ſhould go to copy the Author of the Vulgar, who took the Light for Horns; and an Analogy that is founded upon ſuch Errors as theſe, has but a bad Foundation.

[g] Iſis is alſo made a Heroine, as you ſee in this Inſcription of hers: "I am Iſis Queen of Ægypt, "the Wife of Oſiris, Mother of King Orus; no Bo- "dy can infringe my Laws: I have invented the "Art of Tilling the Ground, and producing Har- "veſts: I am a glittering Star; Bubaſta has been "built to my Honour; Rejoyce, rejoyce, O Ægypt, "that I was bred in Thee.

Laſtly, this Goddeſs was worſhipp'd under the Figures of Birds and Beaſts. For [h] Ælian ſays, that Vultures were conſecrated to her; and a Dog is commonly joyn'd with her.

VI. It ſeems that the Greeks worſhip'd Iſis and Oſiris under other Names, as that of Bacchus.

Ogygia [i] me Bacchum canit.
Oſyrin Ægyptus vocat
Arabica gens Adoneum.

This worſhip was difficultly introduced in Rome, becauſe of the impurity its Myſteries abounded with, which uſually adminiſtred ſome favourable opportunities for debauchery.

Famque expectatur in hortis
Aut apud Iſiacæ potius Sacraria lenæ.

[a] Apr. 20. [b] Pſ. 106. 20. [c] Apud Kirker Templ. Iſiac. c. 7. t. 1. p. 152. [d] Pignonius Menſa Iſiaca. Fol. 16.
[e] Gale ubi ſupr. p. 2. l. 2. c. 7. p. 94. [f] Corrippus ad Juſtinian. [g] Ego ſum in aſtro canis refulgens. Apud Kirker Templ. Iſiac. c. 4. p. 193. [h] Ælian. l. 2. c. 22. [i] Auſonius.

A Goddeſs can't be more hardly uſed, than to be tax'd with the managery of Love-intrigues, and have her Temple made the Rendezvous of Gallants. However, the Latins worſhipped Iſis as well as the Greeks. She had a publick place in Rome, that went by her Name, her Temple, her Houſe, her Altars; and we find a Medal of the Emperor Claudius, who put himſelf under her Protection.

SALUS AUG.

Mariners and Painters took her for their Patroneſs.

Pictores quis neſcit ab Iſide paſci?

But it is eaſy to obſerve, that this worſhip of the Goddeſs was much degenerated. Triſmegiſtus, or the Authors of the Ægyptian Religion, meant to worſhip the Moon as a Symbol of the Deity; and this Symbol diſcarded God and Nature: Nay, the Moon her ſelf was forgotten; to worſhip an imaginary Woman under the Name of Iſis; and afterwards the Prieſts added abundance of Ceremonies, that were celebrated by Night, becauſe the Moon preſides over it; and the young Initiates, and the Prieſts themſelves took advantage of this Circumſtance to content their Paſſions: 'Tis however certain, that this Worſhip originally related to the Moon, or Nature. 'Tis ſaid, that Triſmegiſtus foretold that it ſhould one day come to paſs, that the Ægyptian Religion ſhould be forgotten, and nothing remember'd but the fabulous and incredible part of it: But this Prediction was made ex poſt facto, and after the arrival of the thing.

VII. As Oſiris was worſhipp'd in Ægypt, and conſider'd as the Author of all goods, ſo Typhon was dreaded as the Source and Principle of all Evils. I have already obſerved the impertinence of making him to be Moſes. The Ægyptians had been obnoxious to Storms, Tempeſts, inundations of the Nile, Peſtilence and Famine, long before Moſes's Appearance in the World: So that Typhon, to whom they attributed all the changes of the Air, was much antienter than the Deliverer of Iſrael. It might more probably be ſaid, that Typhon was the Devil, of whom they had heard Cham and his Poſterity talk in a doleful manner; but I queſtion whether the Memory of this rebellious Angel, and his wretched fate was ſo long preſerved. There was no need of reſorting to Scripture, and the Anceſtors of the Jews for a Knowledge that was natural. All the Eaſtern People have been convinc'd there was an evil Principle, as being ſenſible of the blows he gave them; and the Ægyptians were as much poſſeſs'd with that Notion as the reſt. They confin'd all his influences to the miſchiefs he could do in this World, and never thought of ſhutting him up in Hell, to ſuperintend the Puniſhments of the Wicked. They [k] picture him like a Man rearing his Head above the Clouds, into the Starry Heavens. His Hair was briſtly; his Beard thick and flaming; his Eyes ſparkled with Fire; his Body and Thighs, and eſpecially his Hands, were full of Serpents; they were extended from Eaſt to Weſt: His Feet reſted upon the Sea and Mountains.

This Figure diſcovers Typhon's power over the Planets and the Air. He cauſed the Thunder, and ſent the Rain, and confounded the Elements of Fire and Water, and uſher'd in the Winds that blow upon the Sea and Land. Some find in this Portraiture the darkneſs of the Underſtanding; the Fire of Luſt and Envy, ſo well repreſented by the Serpents, and moſt of the Vices that breed the miſeries of the Univerſe. But this is driving Conjectures much too far.

There was no neceſſity for the Ægyptians to borrow their Religion from the Jews. All theſe Articles of their Faith, which we have related, had been for a long time among them: In which there was nothing but humane wit might have invented in any part of the World. The variations obſerved in other Religions, proceed from the difference of Climates, the ſubtilty of Wit, and the progreſs of Sciences, which have flouriſh'd in ſome Provinces more than in others, why then muſt the Heathens have derived their notices from Abraham or Moſes. Religion was already corrupted, and Idolatry more antient than Abraham.

IX. Saint Jerom [l] produces an antient Tradition of the Jews, which certifies that Abraham was caſt into the Fire by the order of the Chaldæans, becauſe he would not worſhip it; that he eſcaped, but that Haran his Brother was burnt to Aſhes; according to the account of Moſes, who ſays that Haron died before his Father in the Fire of the Chaldeans; for ſo they tranſlated it, whereas our Interpreters have put it, Haran died at Ur, which was a City of Chaldea where the Fire was worſhipp'd. The [m] more modern Jews confirm this Tradition, telling how Abraham meeting a Maid, who carried an Idol, after ſome conteſt broke it. Complaint was brought to Nimrod, who commanded Abraham to worſhip the Fire: The Patriarch anſwer'd, he would ſooner worſhip the Water, which extinguiſhes the Fire, the Clouds from whence the Water proceeds, the Wind that gathers the Clouds, and Man who is a more perfect Being than the Wind. Nimrod provok'd by his Anſwers, cauſed him to be thrown into the Fire, from whence he came out without being burnt; but Haran, whoſe Faith waver'd till he ſaw the Miracle, having declared for Abraham, was condemn'd to the Fire, and conſum'd by it.

X. 'Tis no matter whether this Tradition be true or falſe, as this is moſt probable: We know at leaſt, that the Fire was worſhipp'd in Chaldea, ſince a Town derived its Name from it. This Fire was the Symbol of the Sun, which is never extinct, but enlightens and heats. He was worſhipp'd in Ægypt under other Repreſentations. Therefore there is no neceſſity of metamorphoſing Abraham into Oſiris, or Triſmegiſtus, or of aſſerting, as has been done, that the Ægyptian Gods were of much later Date than this Patriarch. On the contrary, the worſhip of the Sun had already gain'd moſt part of the habitable World, and the uſe of the Signs under which he was adored, was very well known a long time before Abraham.

XI. There was no need of this Patriarch's bringing Aſtronomy out of Chaldea into Ægypt. The Chriſtians and Jews make themſelves ridiculous, when opinionated with the Learning of their firſt Heroes, they convert them into ſo many itinerant Aſtrologers, propagating their Art into foreign Countries, where they made but a little ſtay. It was not Aſtronomy, but Faith, that diſtinguiſh'd Abraham from the reſt of his Cotemporaries. Tho' he had been perfectly skill'd in the Motions of the Stars, it is not probable he would have ſet up for a School-Maſter, or a Profeſſor of Aſtronomy in Ægypt, to vend his Knowledge there. Perhaps there were no People in the World, who were more inquiſitive after Science, or had more convenience for learning Aſtronomy, than the Ægyptians. The Nights were clear, the Heavens ſerene; the exceſſive Heat often obliged the Inhabitants to turn Night into Day: And therefore they might

[k] Kirker. Templ. Iſiac. c. 8. p. 221. [l] Hieron. Quæſt. in Geneſ. p. 1319. [m] R. Chaia Ben Adda.

eaſily

eaſily apply themſelves to Aſtrology, without having recourſe to Abraham; or ſtanding in need of his Journey into this Country for his Improvement.

XII. Joſeph was very ſerviceable to the Ægyptians in their Polity and Government; but 'tis certain that inſtead of introducing his Religion into the Country, he a little depraved his own: For he ſwore by Pharaoh, and did not eat after the manner of the Hebrews, for fear of rendring himſelf odious to the Ægyptians, whoſe Cuſtoms he had adopted: He muſt needs have diſſembled a great many things, ſince he ſo exactly obſerved the Rites of the Country, as to refuſe to dine with his Brethren, becauſe that carried ſome ſhadow of Religion. Whatever it was, there was at that Time ſo prodigious a diſtance, betwixt the Jewiſh and Ægyptian Religion, that the Rites of the one were abominable to the other. We have reaſon then to ſay, that Idolatry was of a much antienter ſtanding than Joſeph, in that Country. If they reſpected him in his Life-time, they quickly forgot him after his Death; which is no wonder, for Joſeph had bought up the Country, and reduc'd all the Subjects Lands to the King's poſſeſſion. This ſort of Miniſters, even whilſt they ſerve the State, are always hated by the People, whom they reduce to a wretched Vaſſalage. His Memory grew odious; the paſt Famine was forgotten, and only the Slavery he had brought upon them was remembred. And therefore they were far from worſhipping him. He was buried in the Lower Ægypt, where his Brethren liv'd. His Bones were ſuffered to reſt, till Moſes took them away. Is not this demonſtrative, that Joſeph was not worſhipp'd by the Ægyptians? And indeed they would not have left his Tomb and Bones to the cuſtody of ſlaviſh Shepherds, whom they infinitely deſpiſed; but would have conveyed them into the ſtately Pyramids, deſign'd for the Sepulture of the Heroes. and great Lords of the Country; they would not have ſuffer'd this Object of adoration to be removed into the Land of Canaan. In ſhort, the Ægyptians had enough of their native Heroes to deifie without Strangers. Joſephus reproaches the Lazineſs of their firſt Kings: But 'tis certain they reckon'd ſome great Men, as Æſculapius, Mercurius, and many others, whom they would have choſen to worſhip before a Canaanite Hebrew Slave, who was diſmiſs'd from a Priſon, to make his Fortune in their Country.

XIII. As to Moſes, there is no manner of difficulty; for though it be more confidently affirm'd, that this Legiſlator was Triſmegiſtus, and that the Ægyptians tranſplanted their Religion out of the Nurſery of his Books, yet we may obſerve Four Circumſtances which overthrow this Conjecture. 1. Moſes was educated in the Ægyptian Learning, which the Scripture would not have taken notice of, if the Ægyptians had not been renown'd in the World for their Arts and Sciences. They were then the moſt literate and polite People of the Earth; and can it be imagin'd that this Nation, that had ſo well ſtudied Nature, built Obelisks and Pyramids to engrave Events, and preſerve the Memory of Religion and the Gods, ſhould have their Worſhip ſtill to form? 2. This appears, becauſe Pharaoh permitting the People to ſacrifice to their God, Moſes anſwer'd, they ſhould ſacrifice the Abomination of the Ægyptians, that is, by ſacrificing Sheep and Oxen, they ſhould render themſelves abominable to the Ægyptians. So that God was not only worſhipp'd under the Emblem of the Sun, and the Sun under the Name of Oſiris, but they had already conſecrated Oxen and Animals to him: And the Religion of the Ægyptians was more ancient than Moſes and Joſeph, and already contain'd the ſame Abomination, becauſe the Hebrews fed upon the Animals which the Ægyptians had conſecrated to their Gods. 3. This is ſtill more clearly explain'd by the Hiſtory of the Golden-Calf, which was a Relick of Heatheniſm practis'd in Ægypt, where they conſecrated molten Animals inſtead of living ones, and particularly Bulls of Gold, becauſe that is the Metal of the Sun. 4. Inſtead of the Iſraelites lending their Religion and Heroes to the Ægyptians, this captive People adopted the Gods of their Maſters: For Joſhua, a little after the death of Moſes, ask'd them, Whether they would ſerve the Gods which their Fathers ſerved in Ægypt. The Religion brought thither along with Jacob, was ſo far from ſpreading and diſperſing it ſelf among the Idolaters, that it ſunk with their Poſterity. The Worſhip was aboliſh'd; and therefore when God renew'd his Laws, bid them remember the Sabbath, the Obſervation whereof had been interrupted during their Time of Bondage. A great number worſhipp'd Idols, and the Diſtemper was inveterate; for not only thoſe that came out of Ægypt had been guilty of the Crime, but their Fathers had ſerved theſe falſe Gods beyond Jordan, and the Red-Sea. It can be no longer then diſputed, but that the Ægyptians invented their Religion before Moſes; and to pretend after that, that they extracted it from his Writings, is to fall into a ridiculous Abſurdity.

XIV. Maimonides, [a] ſo famous among the Jews, is perſuaded that the Law was given in oppoſition to the ſuperſtitious Cuſtoms of the Ægyptians. "Moſes inflicted a capital Puniſhment on the Ma- "gicians, becauſe he had ſeen a prodigious num"ber of them in Ægypt, who boaſted of their Pow"er of killing Serpents and Worms; of preſerv-
"ing the Crops of Corn from Tempeſts; and daz-"led the People with ſeveral Prodigies. He would "not ſuffer an Iſraelite to ſhave his Beard and "Hair, becauſe the Ægyptian Prieſts did ſo. Laſt-
"ly, He forbad Men to diſguiſe their Sex, becauſe
"the Arabian Magicians would have Men, when "under the Conſtellation of Venus, to dreſs them-
"ſelves like Women, and Women to take the Hel"met and Breaſt-plate. The Law therefore was very oppoſite to the Cuſtoms of the Ægyptians: We have ſaid enough of the Origine of their Religion, let us examine at preſent their Cabbala, whereof we have already given ſome little Sketches.

XV. It was conſider'd as ſomething Divine, and they believed they could not arrive to the Knowledge of theſe great Myſteries, without the Aſſiſtance of Inſpiration: And therefore it was ſaid, Phtas the God ſpeaks to you, which was a kind of Proverb applied to thoſe, who raiſing themſelves above the Vulgar, explain'd the Secrets of Religion, becauſe it was imagin'd they had derived this Knowledge from the Boſom of the Deity.

XVI. They trace the Original of it up to Mercurius Triſmegiſtus, who invented this kind of Science for two Reaſons: Obſerving ſo prodigious a number of Objects in the Univerſe, which wore the Impreſſes of the Grandeur and Excellence of their Maker, he did not doubt but that they were ſo many Images and Symbols that repreſented the Deity. He thought therefore that he might propoſe all theſe Objects to the People, as the eaſieſt Mediums to recommend God to their Senſes, and cheriſh their Devotion. He obſerved next, that in the vaſt multitudes that peopl'd Ægypt, there were very few ſpiritual Votaries. The reſt were of a groſs and carnal Underſtanding, fitter to prophane the Divinity, if it were committed naked, as we may ſay, into their Hands, than to honour it as it ought to be. He therefore imagined certain Symbols of the Deity, which he intruſted to the Vulgar, whilſt the more intelligent, piercing through the Myſteries, might riſe to the Contemplation of God.

[a] Rambam, or Moſes, Maimonides more Nevochim, l. 3. c. 3.

Proclus perfectly explains this Notion which is alſo aſcribed to Mercury. " As the Godsact differ-
" rently according to the reſpective Genius of Men:
" They beſtow ſenſible Goods on all, but reſerve
" the ſpiritual for thoſe that are capable of ſeek-
" ing and enjoying them. Mythology manifeſts
" the Gods to the Vulgar, but their Nature and " Perfections are diſcover'd only by thoſe that " know how to imitate them. To diſcover the " Truth, is the way to furniſh a Fool with an oc-
" caſion of deſpiſing it, and to render the Wiſe
" lazy, whereas the Emblems and Fables that veil " Religion, prevent the Contempt of the one, and " engage the other in the diligent Study of it.

XVII. As Mercury invented the Art of Painting the Speech, he was careful to give ſome particular Characters to the Prieſts, who handled the Myſteries of Religion: But there was a third kind of Writing which was call'd Hieroglyphical, which it ſeems had the preheminence above the reſt. It was made uſe of not only to veil the Myſteries of Religion, but alſo to explain the Vertue of Plants in Phyſick; the Revolution of the Stars in the Heaven; and even Hiſtorical Events, were repreſented in this manner.

XVIII. I ſhould be loth abſolutely to aſſert, that this Practice was as ancient as Mercurius Triſmegiſtus, or that he was the Author of it, though that may be, and it is commonly aſcribed to him. But theſe two Things can't be diſputed: Firſt, That Hieroglyphicks were very frequent among the Ægyptians: 2dly, That they were of a very great Antiquity, ſince not only all the remaining Monuments of that Nation, as the Obelisks, and Table of Iſis are full of them, but alſo the moſt antient Writers, who have treated of the Ægyptians, have attributed to them this method of teaching the People.

XIX. Thoſe that will be at the trouble of examining the Nature of theſe Hieroglyphicks, may caſt their Eyes upon the Table of Iſis, or the Books of Pignorius [b] and Kirker. The Eyes are immediately dazled with the Beauty and Variety of theſe Figures. In the mean time, if we find ſo many Difficulties in Hiſtories, wherein each Event is expreſs'd in a number of known and uſual Terms, which clearly declare the Event or Thought of the Author; what hideous Darkneſs muſt involve the Ægyptian Hiſtory and Religion, which were only known by ambiguous Signs? 'Twas impoſſible but they muſt often vary in the Explication of theſe Signs, and in a long Tract of Ages forget what the Ancients mean by them. And then every one made his Conjecture; and the Prieſts taking advantage of the Obſcurity of the Signs, and Ignorance of the People, made the beſt of their own Learning and Fancies, and hence neceſſarily happen'd two Things: One, That Religion often changed; the Other, That the Cabbaliſts were in great eſteem, becauſe they were neceſſary Men.

However, it muſt be own'd, that they had ſome Rule for the ordering and diſpoſing of theſe Symbols. They join'd certain Figures to others, and each Figure having its Signification, by their Combination, they made a Train of Myſteries. The Table of Iſis, for Inſtance, which is crowded with ſuch a multitude of Figures of Men, Women, Dogs, Birds and Monſters, was invented, chiefly to repreſent God, and the Production of the Univerſe: There we find the Gate of the Gods, that is, the Univerſe; and the Deity ſurrounded with certain Figures denoting Empire; the Facility of his acting; the Abundance and Variety of Creatures produced by him; with a great many other Truths mingled with Errors: They made uſe alſo of a Circle, to ſignifie that God had neither beginning nor end; and whoever thinks fit, may compare this Circle with the Crown of the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts. Laſtly, They repreſented God in the Figure of an Ibis, a Bird very well known in Ægypt, and nearly reſembling a Stork; by his piercing ſight they ſignified the Wiſdom of God; and by placing him ſitting, they underſtood the Quiet and Empire that God exerciſes without any trouble. This Bird, which they deſcribed with the Hands and Feet of a Man, held the Staff of Iſis with one, and with the other a Croſs faſtned to a kind of Globe. Lipſius out of Zeal for the Croſs, as if it ought to be peculiar to the Chriſtians, conteſted this Particular; but 'tis but opening ones Eyes to ſee his miſtake. And beſides, the ſuperſtitious Chriſtians might triumph upon it, as if God, who inſpired Sybils to ſpeak more expreſly than the Prophets, of the Sufferings and Death of his Son, had alſo taught the Idolaters the Myſtery of the Croſs, which was one Day to be erected over all the Earth; and they would have ſo much the juſter Grounds for it, as this Symbol was in high eſteem with the Ægyptians. We ſee it in moſt Obelisks; it was thought the apteſt Emblem of all the reſt, and even the moſt excellent Amulet in the World. Judaiſm is not ſo clearly expreſs'd in the Ægyptian Myſteries, as Chriſtianity. The Croſs was the Symbol of the Planets, and ſignified, that God was the Pilot that ſteer'd their Motions. Indeed Saturn's Character was a Croſs and a Ram's-horn; Jupiter alſo bore an Horn with a Croſs; Venus's Sign was a Circle with a Croſs. This was therefore the true meaning of the Ægyptians; and Marſilius Ficinus alledging the Reaſons that obliged the Ægyptians to prefer the Croſs to all other Symbols, takes them from the nature of Bodies, which are long and broad, like the Croſs, ſo that nothing can better repreſent their Surface. He derives it alſo from a certain ſituation of the Stars, wherein, ſays he, they dart their Rays, and form the Figure of a Croſs. Ibis's [c] Head was adorn'd with a Circle of Flames, Serpents, and Wings, all which expreſs'd the Properties of the Deity, which has neither beginning nor end, which for ever lives, ſends Light and Heat, and exerciſes all its Operations with an incredible quickneſs.

XX. We have already obſerved, that the Cabbaliſts left theſe groſs Symbols to the People, but the learned and initiated piercing through theſe Objects, pretended to aſpire to the Knowledge, and even Contemplation of the Deity. They believed the ſenſible Objects, whereof the Univerſe conſiſts, to be ſo many Images of the Supreme God; and that when they did not ſtop at the Surface of Bodies, but dived into their relations with the Celeſtial and Empyreal World, they acquired an exact and perfect Knowledge.

XXI. But this was not attain'd to without great Application and Pains; and they were not admitted

[b] Pignorius Menſa Iſiaca, Kirker Tabula Iſiaca, in Oedip. Ægypt. t. 4. See abundance of theſe Hieroglyphicks in the ſame Book.
[c] Vide Plura apud Kirkerum in Obeliſco Pamphyliano. l. 2. Ibi de cruce anſata.

ted to this Study, without a great many Ceremonies. Strangers were excluded from them, unleſs they were circumciſed; and Pythagoras, who had the curioſity to enter into theſe Myſteries, was obliged to ſubmit to this Law, and be circumciſed. The Paſſions were to be expelled out of the Soul, to approach God with greater Tranquillity. It was one of the Maxims aſcribed to Zoroaſter, and received in Ægypt, Call the Hunters of the Soul. There were Two of theſe Hunters, Knowledge, and Purity of Heart, and they took their Name from their driving away Ignorance and Impurity. Silence was abſolutly neceſſary, which was ſufficiently known by the Figure of Harpocrates ſtanding at the Gates of the Temples, with his Finger upon his Mouth. Waſhings were uſed, that the Myſteries might not be defiled; but this was common to all Religions.

Tu genitor, [b] cape ſacra manu, patrioſq; penates:
Me bello è tanto digreſſum, & cæde recenti,
Attrectare nefas, donec me flumine vivo Abluero.

But among the Ægyptians they were to take off their Cloaths, to ſignifie to the Novices, that the Heart and Spirit ought to be naked in the preſence of the Gods. They had a Maxim, not to adhere to ſenſible Objects.

Μὴ φύσεως καλέσης ἄϋτοπλον ἄγαλμα.

Ne vocaveris imaginem naturæ perſpicuam. The initiated [c] were taught, that there was an intelligible Object, to which they muſt give the Flower of the Soul. They had another Precept, That they muſt haſten to the Light, to the Rays of the Father, from whence the Soul arrayed with abundance of Spirits, is deſcended.

XXII. Laſtly, They ſaid, That there were two Cups, one above, and the other below: Whoever drank of the latter was always thirſty; his Deſires increaſed inſtead of abating; but he that drank of the other, was fill'd and ſatisfy'd. This firſt Cup was the Knowledge of Nature, which never fully ſatisfies thoſe that dive into its Myſteries; and the ſecond Cup, which was wholly to quench thirſt, was the Knowledge of the Myſteries of Heaven [d]. Some Chriſtians apply to this, the Words of our Saviour, He that believes in me ſhall never thirſt, to which they add what he ſays in another place, that whoever loves his life ſhall loſe it, but he that hates his life ſhall keep it unto life eternal, becauſe they ſuppoſe that Mercurius Triſmegiſtus ſaid, that we muſt hate our bodies to love our ſelves, and that by loving our ſelves, we gain our Souls. But my deſign by producing all theſe Rites, is only to ſhew, that the Ægyptians had long ago chalkt out to the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts a Road for their contemplative Divinity.

XXIII. Beſides this Advantage, their Cabbaliſts had another that ſeem'd conſiderable. They underſtood the Dependences betwixt Second Cauſes, and Superior Intelligences. Obſerving that every Plant, or Object partak'd of the Qualities of a Superior Being, they diligently ſtudied out the Planet, and then the Genius, or Celeſtial Intelligence that preſided over this Object. They next ſtudied the Channels through which this Planet and Celeſtial Intelligence poured their Influences upon the Object: In a Word, they examin'd the ſecret Rings of the Chain which links Heaven to Earth; and having diſcovered them, they had the Power of bringing down theſe Genius's, either by paying them ſome proportionate Honours, which they approved of, either by Herbs or Perfumes, which they delighted in; and this Aſſiſtance of the Genius communicated to the Terreſtrial Object, a vertue which it naturally wanted.

They diligently ſtudied under what Planet a Child was born; what Genius preſided over the Planet, and by this diſcovery, they found means of avoiding Misfortunes, and of making themſelves happy.

'Tis plain, that the Ægyptian Cabbaliſts furniſh'd the Jewiſh ones with the Example of ſtudying Magick. They were ſo expert in this Art in Moſes's Time, that tho' he was inveſted with the Power of God, he had much ado to riſe above their Enchantments, and to triumph over their Subtilty. There is nothing better known than the Amulets, and Taliſmans of Ægypt; and therefore I will only inſiſt upon one Thing that deſerves to be minded.

XXIV. Marcilius Ficinus pretends that Aaron caſt the Golden-Calf in the Deſart, only for a Taliſman, becauſe the Aſtrologers aſſured him, he would gain by it the Protection of Venus, againſt the Influences of Scorpio and Mars, which were oppoſite to the Jews. He adds, That the Brazen-Serpent was another Taliſman made uſe of in Ægypt, to drive away Serpents. The famous Marſham has not only eſpouſed this latter Opinion, but embelliſh'd it with ſeveral Stories, which are told concerning the method of enchanting Reptiles: He that had ſo little Faith in other reſpects, makes no ſcruple to vent Fables, becauſe they ſtruck at a conſiderable Event of the Sacred Hiſtory.

XXV. He grounds himſelf upon the Example of Medea, who by her Voice prevail'd upon the Dragon, that kept the Golden-Fleece: He quotes Orpheus, who fetcht back his Wife from Hell, that a Serpent had bitten. Laſtly, He produces a whole Nation of Enchanters, the Marſi that laid the Serpents to ſleep.

Marrubiâ [e] venit de gente ſacerdos
Vipereo generi, & graviter ſpirantibus hydris
Spargere qui ſomnos cantuq; manuq; ſolebat.

Theſe Examples are childiſh, for the Golden-Fleece was not guarded by a Serpent. The Ambiguity comes from the Hebrew Word Nachaſh, ſignifying Braſs as well as a Serpent. The Golden-Fleece was a Treaſure ſhut up by a Brazen Gate, which Medea had the Art of opening. This ſimple and natural Explication ruins all the Tales about theſe Enchantments. The Story of Orpheus is ſtill more ridiculous: For tho' this Muſician ſhould have had the Art of ſtupifying Serpents, muſt it have extended to the raiſing a dead Woman, becauſe ſhe was bitten by a Serpent? Laſtly, Would Mr. Marſham be pleas'd to have all the Stories of Witchcraft paſs for ſolid Truths? And yet thoſe ſupernatural Operations are better proved than thoſe of the Marſi about Serpents.

XXVI. Some Naturaliſts ſay, That there is nothing apter to exaſperate the Sore, or to cauſe the death of thoſe that are bitten by Serpents, than to look upon or touch Braſs. So that Moſes would have invented a very improper Taliſman; but to bottom upon this Aſſertion, is to oppugn the imaginary vertue of the Taliſmans with another Falſhood,

[b] Virg. Æn. 2. [c] Effatum xv. xxiv. xxix. apud Kirker. Gymnaſ. Hierogl. t. 2. p. 143, 146, 148. [d] Kirker Theatr. Hierogl. in Oed. Ægypt. Anacæphaleos. c. 1. p. 584. [e] Virgil Æneid. l. 7. V. 750.

ſhood, and ſupport the Truth of Moſes's Hiſtory by chimerical Events. Thoſe that believe, that mortal Woaunds and bitings were cured by the Effigies of a Serpent, ought to prove the Truth of what they advnce, and the Power of Amulets. They would be obliged to acknowledge, after a ſorrowful Experiment, that there was a miraculous Vertue in Moſes's Brazen Serpent, of a very different Nature from what is aſcribed to the Taliſmans.

XXVII. Moſes, inſtead of borrowing the Ægyptian's Cabbala, and Myſtical Theology, took all the Precautions to alienate the Iſraelites from them. 1. He prohibited them, by the Divine Command, to make Images, which annull'd the uſe of the Ægyptian Hieroglyphicks. 2. He made publick Regiſters of the Hiſtory of the Nation, that they might eaſily ſatisfie their Curioſity, without recurring to certain ambiguous Signs, which every one explain'd in Ægypt according to his Will, Humour, and Intereſt. 3. He expreſs'd ſuch an Averſion to Enchantments and Magick, as to make it a capital Crime to tamper in it.

XXVIII. 'Tis true, the Jews borrow'd their Cabbala from the Ægyptians, but this was a long while after Moſes, and after the Conqueſts of Alexander the Great, under the Reign of Ptolomeus Philadelphus, who drew into his Kingdom abundance of Jews, and made the Commerce with that Nation more frequent than before.

And indeed we need only compare theſe two Cabbala's together, to be ſatisfied of their reſemblance; and ſince the Jews did not ſtudy this Art till a long time after the Ægyptians, it muſt be own'd, that the latter are only Copyers, and the others the Authors of it.

Firſt, They own'd in Ægypt a Firſt God, encompaſs'd with Clouds, impenetrable, which is the Enſoph and Infinite of the Jews.

The Second Principle, that proceeded from the Firſt, and was inſeparably united to him, but yet received his Ideas and Influences from him, was the Crown, or the Firſt of the Sephiroths. As the Jews aſſerted theſe Emanations of the Deity, only becauſe they could not conceive that the Moſt Supreme Being, (if I may uſe that Expreſſion) was the immediate Agent in the Creation of the Univerſe, and therefore imagin'd a Gradation of Principles ſubordinate to one another: So the Ægyptians had invented this perfect and different Being upon the ſame account.

They ſpoke ſometimes of a Third Principle, which has led the Chriſtians into this miſtake, that they had received the Knowledge of a Trinity of Perſons in the ſame Eſſence, from the Patriarchs; but this Third Principle, which the Platoniſts afterwards call'd Mens, was the Soul of the World diſperſed through all the Creatures.

The Ægyptians gave different Names to the Deity, according to the diverſity of his Operations. They call'd him Amun Phtà Oſiris; thereby expreſſing his Power, Truth and Goodneſs, which anſwers to the Sephiroths which the Jews have multiplied.

The Ægyptians believed that there were Three Worlds, or Three Heavens; the Archetypal, Celeſtial and Senſible World. Each of which had its Trinity preſiding over it, the Father, the Power, and the Spirit. There was a great Subordination between theſe Worlds, ſo that the Images of all Things in Heaven are found here below: Whatever is on Earth, exiſts in Heaven ſpiritually and inviſibly: And heavenly Things, as the Intelligences, exiſt in God, as in their Source and Original: 'Tis eaſie to be obſerved, that theſe are the Aziluthick, Briathick, &c. Worlds of the Cabbaliſts.

The Ægyptians aſſign'd ſome great Influences to the Sun, and Moon, and Stars. They carried the thing ſo far, in defence of Free-Will, as to maintain, [f] that every Man had two Souls, one that came immediately from God, the other from the Stars and Celeſtial World; the firſt was perfectly free, but the other had its byaſs from the Impreſſion of the Stars and Intelligences.

Jamblicus reporting this in the Fragments of Mercury and Porphyry, aſſerts, that this Opinion ſtill prevail'd in Ægypt in his time. 'Tis but taking a view of the pompous Elogies the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts beſtow upon the Stars and Moon, to find the Conformity we are ſeeking for.

Laſtly, The Ægyptians thought by the help of Symbols to aſcend to the Contemplation of the Deity, whoſe Union makes the Happineſs of the Creature. Bithys, an Ægyptian Prieſt, who had read the Writings of Triſmegiſtus, extracted this Truth from them: "That [g] a Man is happy by his Union with "God. Don't imagine that the Ægyptians had "neglected this Part of Religion; on the contrary, "they have taught it in a divine way. Don't "think that their Divines conſulted God about tri-"fling Things, but they interrogated him about "their Purification, the Separation of the Body, and "Salvation. They don't ſtand to examine crab-"bed and uſeleſs Difficulties, but apply them-"ſelves to that which is advantageous to the "Soul. Laſtly, Don't fancy that they give way "to any Dæmon to ſeduce them into Error, "for they riſe above the Devils, and aſcend even "to the Divine Nature. Thus the Ægyptians had the ſame end in their Cabbala as the Jews; but theſe latter abhorring Images, declined the uſe of Symbols, and humane Repreſentations, and by this means preſerved themſelves from Idolatry.

[f] Jambl. de Myſter. Sect. 8. c. 8. p. 162. [g] Ibid. Sect. 10. c. 7. p. 178.

CHAP.

CHAP. XX.

Of the Cabbala of the Greek Poets and Philoſophers: Their Uſe of Fables, Emblems, and Allegories.

I. THE Deſign of this and following Chapters. II. The Greek Poets have diſguiſed the Truth under Allegories. III. Orpheus knew the Sephiroths, and taught the Myſtery of the Trinity. IV. The praiſes of Homer: The Conformity of his moral Maxims with thoſe of David and Solomon, proved. V. The method he took for the inſtruction of Men. VI. His manner of treating the Gods, myſtically explain'd. VII. The Truths of Religion: The Adventures of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iſhmael, related by Homer. VIII. The Cabbala neceſſary to the Philoſophers: Pythagoras known to the Ægyptians and Ezechiel. IX. The correſpondence of his Religion with that of the Jews. X. His Cabbala Explain'd. XI. How he had derived it from the Jews. XII. Euclid rejects Allegories and Symbols in Phyloſophy and Religion. XIII. Socrates does the ſame. XIV. However he was a Cabbaliſt. XV. The perpetual Allegories of Plato. XVI. A continuation of his Allegories about the Creation. XVII. Whether he knew the Jews, and explain'd their Doctrines. XVIII. Whether he lived in Jeremy's time. XIX. His Ideas and noble Expreſſions about the Deity explain'd. XX. He knew the Truth. XXI. What might be the meaning of his Allegories. XXII. A Reflexion upon the Philoſophers and their contemplative Divinity.

I. THE Cabbala has had great influences upon all Religions: The Chriſtians have uſed it, as well as the Heathens; and from hence the antient Hereticks derived their Æons and Dogms, which have hitherto been impenetrable. As it was compoſed of different parts, all the Sects did not follow the ſame Syſtem. Each Religion took what agreed with it; and therefore I ſhall diſtinguiſh the different degrees of this Science, and examine the uſe which the Heathens, Chriſtians, and Hereticks have drawn from it.

II. 'Tis pretended, that the Heathen Poets and Philoſophers not daring to explain Religion, and their private Thoughts to the People, diſguiſed them under ſome perpetual Allegories. The vulgar took their Diſcourſes literally; but wiſe Men look'd through the Curtain, and diſcover'd the ſublime Truths that were taught under Emblems and fabulous Stories.

Salluſtius [a], an antient Philoſopher, look'd upon the Fables as ſomething Divine. The Gods, ſaid he, inſpired the Poets that invented them, and ſometimes uſed them, to manifeſt themſelves to Men. There was no finding the reſemblance and Images of the Deity, but by this means: There was a neceſſity therefore of uſing it to diſcover him. As the Gods ſhower ſome ſenſible Goods on all Mankind, but reſerve the Gifts of the Spirit for ſome Favorites; the Fables reſembling ſenſible Goods, are for the Vulgar and Artificers; but the ſecret and particular underſtanding of the Myſteries included in Symbolical Divinity, is reſerved for the Wiſe. To ſpeak properly, the World is but a Fable; for it is conſtituted of Bodies and Spirits. The Bodies are ſeen; but the Spirits are inviſible, and only diſcover'd by Study. The Deity would be deſpiſed, if the Knowledge of him was proſtituted to Fools and ignorant Men; but you prepoſſeſs them with a Reverence for the Gods by concealing them, and at once kindle a noble ardour in the Breaſts of the Wiſe, to penetrate through the Veil, and ſee what is hid under it. Laſtly, we ought not to wonder, that the Fable attributes Robberies and Adulteries to the Gods; for theſe Crimes are uſher'd in only to teach Men, that there is a Truth incloſed in theſe diſhoneſt Stories, and that we ought not to ſtick to the Letter. I have alledged this reaſoning of Salluſtius, 1. To ſhew that the Heathens had actually a Cabbaliſtick Divinity. 2. That they Apologize for it with the ſame Arguments as the Jews. And indeed they made uſe of the Example of the Deity, who often conceals himſelf. They alledged the compariſon of the Soul and Body, of ſenſible and ſpiritual Objects: They juſtified the Follies of the Poets, by the neceſſity of preventing the Vulgars contempt of the Gods, and inſpiring the Wiſe with a deſire of a thorough Knowledge of them. Laſtly, they thought the Extravagance of fabulous Stories was only a caution to the Reader, not to ſtop at the Gate of the Myſtery, but to dive into the bottom of it. 3. The Authority of this Heathen juſtifies thoſe Chriſtians who really believe this to be the true deſign of the Poets; and not only find in their Writings, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, as the Supreme God, but pretend alſo to diſcover in them all the Religion of Moſes and the Patriarchs, which had been communicated to them by the Phœnicians, the Diſciples of Abraham, and Neighbours of the Jews, with whom they had an intimate commerce. Truly this is a great Myſtery; yet ſince Men have taken ſuch pains to diſcover it, and are certain that they have ſucceeded, 'tis neceſſary to ſpeak of this Heathen Cabbala.

III. Orpheus, the moſt Antient of all the Poets, travelling into Ægypt, was initiated in all the Myſteries; and therefore he is ſaid to have been a Magician of this Country. They aſcribe to him the Art of taming wild Beaſts by his Muſick; but we muſt underſtand in a [b] Cabbaliſtick meaning, that he united Men naturally wild, and diſperſed in Foreſts, and gave them Laws when he had united them into Society. This we have from Horace. [c]

Sylveſtres homines ſacer Interpreſque Deorum,
Cædibus, & victu fœdo deterruit Orpheus,
Dictus ob hoc lenire tigres, rapidoſque leones.

Beſides, this Poet has mention'd Councel, Light, and Life in ſuch a manner as eaſily diſcovers the three firſt Sephiroths, the [d] Crown, Wiſdom, and Underſtanding: And he extracted them from the Writings of Moſes, which he had read in Ægypt.

But farther, [e] they find alſo the Trinity explain'd by this Antient Poet. 'Tis true, his Words would not have been ſo explain'd before the Incarnation; but they immediately diſcover this Myſtery in his myſtical Verſes, in this manner.

He calls Night the Mother of the Gods. This Night procreated Heaven, which he alſo calls the Father of all things; Aged by his Birth; the Beginning and End of all things. This Heaven, the Off-

[a] Salluſtii Damaſcii de Dyſet mundo c. 3. pag. 245, 246. Ed. Th. Gale. 1688. [b] Gale, the Court of the Gentils. p. 2. l. 2. c. 2. p. 92. [c] Horat. de Arte Poet. [d] Kirker Oed. Ægypt. Gymn. Hier. Claſſ. 3. c. 4. p. 150. βυλὴ, φάος, καὶ ζωή. [e] Ibid. c. 12. p. 194.

ſpring

ſpring of Night is the Light; this Light is Jeſus Chriſt, who is Conſubſtantial with his Father. The Scripture ſays in this Senſe, that his Darkneſs is as the Light. JESUS, the Sun of Righteouſneſs is the Alpha and Omega.. He is alſo the Aged by his Birth: Aged, becauſe he is from all Eternity; but he was born in Time. Laſtly, Orpheus ſpeaks of a Power ſupremely high, to which nothing can reſiſt, which conquers all, which is a Light and a Fire. Here you have the Holy Ghoſt very naturally repreſented, and why was there not added one Stroke farther, to have ſhewn invincible and victorious Grace. Will you ſay, that the Jeſuit Kirker was not willing to read in Orpheus the condemnation of the Society? In the mean time, does not this all-conquering irreſiſtible Fire, which is the Holy Ghoſt, teach us, the grand Myſtery of the Converſion of Men by an irreſiſtible Light and Energy?

IV. Several Authors have attempted to make Homer conſiſtent with the ſacred Writers in Four Things. 1, In the Style: For there are ſo many Hebraiſms in his Verſes [a] that one can't avoid perceiving that he had read Moſes, and the one may be often explain'd by the other. 2. This Poet relates many Rites that have an evident relation to thoſe of the Old Teſtament. 3. His two Poems, which may be juſtly call'd the two Eminences of Parnaſſus, are full of admirable Sentences, and therefore they are compared to thoſe of Solomon, and a [b] Parallel is drawn betwixt this King's Thoughts and this antient Poet's. Scaliger went too far in ſaying, that Homer was divinely inſpired; but at leaſt he entred into a kind of Enthuſiaſm, which inſpired him, and rendred his Genius next-kin to Divine.

Eſt Deus in nobis; agitante celeſcimus illo:
Impetus hic ſacræ ſemina mentis habet.

The Antients have ſaid, that Homer travelled into Ægypt, and the Ægyptians aſſerted that he was born there. No wonder then that he was acquainted with the Books of Moſes, and inſtructed in the Jewiſh Religion in this Country. If the Ægyptian Pretence be falſe, it can't however be diſputed, but that this Poet lived long at Samos, and had a Correſpondence with the Phænicians for a great while, who had taught him the Hiſtory of the Jews. 'Twas the Notion of Juſtin Martyr, "That Homer had taken a great deal from the Writings of "the Old Teſtament. But without inſiſting upon "this Diſcuſſion, it ſuffices that the Sentences, "which are innumerable in this Poet's Verſes, are "like thoſe diſperſed in the Books of David, Solomon, and ſacred Authors. A modern Author has fill'd a great Volume with this Parallel of Sentences and Maxims, becauſe if St. Paul has ſanctified a Saying of the Poet Menander, he might likewiſe ſanctifie the Maxims of Homer. But amongſt a thouſand Examples, we'll content our ſelves with one.

Βυλομ' εγὼ λαὸν σόον ἔμμϐναι ἢ ἀπόλεσθ.

Homer here introduces a Prince ſaying, He had rather have his People ſafe, than ſee them periſh. 'Tis firſt obſerved, that this is not the true meaning of this Maxim. The King meant, no doubt, that he would die, in order to ſave his People. However take the Words as you pleaſe, they have a great reſemblance with thoſe of Scripture. For God ſpeaks like this King, ſaying, I will not the death of a ſinner, but rather that he ſhould be converted and live. God would not that any ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come to repentance. If this ſecond Senſe be preferr'd to the firſt, we find Jeſus Chriſt, who would have all Men ſaved, and to that purpoſe voluntarily ſuffers death: However the Names of Mars, Mercury, and the falſe Gods, found in his Verſes, in the midſt of his Sentences, ſhould not ſcandalize us, ſince by them the Poet means War, Wiſdom, &c. or ſome Attributes of God.

The Fourth Article of Conformity is much more important than the reſt, ſince Homer under pretence of recounting the Adventures of Ulyſſes, is proved to have related thoſe of Abraham, Iſaac, the Judges and Heroes of antient Iſrael.

To give the greater Authority to this Conjecture, 'tis obſerved that the Antients [c] have given this Teſtimony to Homer, that he generally made uſe of Allegories. The Anonymous Author of his Life, which ſome abſurdly will have to be Plutarch [d], (for then he muſt have written two different Lives of the ſame Man) and others, Dionyſius [e] Halicarnaſſenſis, maintains, that Homer deſign'd to [f] repreſent the Strength of Body in his Iliad, and the Strength of the Mind in the Odyſſes. He has only employ'd Fables, ſays he, to awaken the Attention and Admiration of his Readers: For they admire what aſtoniſhes and ſurprizes. He has comprized the Hiſtory of Nature under theſe Fables, which proves that he knew every thing, and has furniſh'd ſome Memorials not only for Poets, but for Orators, Hiſtorians and Philoſophers which came after him.

Heraclides, an antient Author, has made a Collection of this Poet's Allegories: Who this Heraclides was is not eaſily gueſs'd, ſince there are a Dozen or Thirteen of the ſame Name. However we muſt not with Geſner confound him with the Heraclides, whoſe Life Diogenes Laertius has left us; for he was a Platoniſt; and this Treatiſe of Allegories ſeems to have been compoſed only to vindicate this Poet againſt Plato, who had baniſh'd him out of his Republick.

He obſerves [g] that the uſe of Allegories is very antient. And thus Alcæus has given the Deſcription of a Veſſel in danger of being loſt, in ſo natural a manner, that it looks to be his only Aim. Whereas he repreſented the Tyranny of Myrſilius, who was about to ruin the Republick of Mitylene, and ſink the liberty of his Country; becauſe in Allegories one thing is ſaid, and another meant.

Homer would be an impious Atheiſt, if this had not been his method, ſince he ſays a thouſand things affrontive of the Gods. He would perpetually contradict himſelf, ſince he ſpeaks [h] honourably of them, and maintains that they ought never to be reſiſted.

Οὐκ ἄν ἔγωγε θεοῖσιν επουρανίοισι μαχοίμλω
Νήπισι οἵ Ζηνὶ μλυεαίνομλῳ ἰσοφαρίζειν.

Non ego Cælicolis unquam pugnavero divis:
Stultitia eſt nos velle Jovem contendere contra.

Apollo, of whom Homer tells ſo many Stories, is the Sun, whoſe Nature, Operations, and Effects he decribes: In calling him Exaerges, he means, that he operates a great way off, ſince he ſends his

[a] Vide Bogani Homerus Hebraizans, in which he would prove that there is no Poet comes ſo near the Sacred Writers, neminem Poetam tantopere referre ſacros Scriptores. [b] Homeri Gnomologia duplici paralleliſmo illuſtrata, uno ex locis ſacræ Scripturæ, quibus Gnomæ Homericæ, aut prope affines, aut non prorſus abſimiles; altero ex Gentium Scriptoribus, per Jacobum du Portum Cantabrigienſem, in 4°. 1660. Cantabrigiæ, p. 4. There are 291 of them. [c] Crœſius Homerus Hebraiſans in 8°. an. 1704. [d] Vide Plutarchus de Audiendis Poetis, p. 19. Id. de vitâ & poeſi Homeri. [e] Theoph. Gale præf. ad opuſcula Mythologica phyſica, ed. Amſtæl. 1688. [f] Homeri vita ib. p. 284. [g] Heraclites Ponticus allegoriæ Homericæ, ibid. p. 412. [h] Ibid. p. 409.

Rays

Rays from Heaven down to the bottoms of Valleys; and 'tis abſurd to believe, that he made him the Son of a [i] Woman, that came from the Banks [k] of the Tanais, or Volga, to Delos, to perform her Devotions. In Stiling him Lucegenetes, he deſign'd not to have it thought, that he was born in Lycia, ſince that Fable was invented a great while after; but he inſinuated, that the Sun is the Author of the firſt twilight that uſhers in the Morning. His Verſes abound with ſuch like natural Truths, which the ignorant don't underſtand.

V. Dion [l] Chryſoſtom likewiſe affirms, that Homer finding it very difficult to inſtruct the Men of his Age, made uſe of Fables to teach them Hiſtory and Morality. Some diſcover ſome Aſtronomical Truths in the debauchery of Mars and Venus; becauſe the Conjunction of theſe two Planets makes a Nativity fruitful in Adulteries. Theſe impurities are ſecret at firſt, but when the Sun riſes higher, they grow publick. Others have diſcovered in them ſome Lectures againſt Muſick and obſcene Songs, which corrupt the Heart, and inſenſibly draw it into the greateſt debaucheries. We are taught from Juno's Marriage with Jupiter, that love-toys don't laſt always. We grow weary of a Miſtreſs that has decoyed us; Enjoyment grows diſguſtful, the Family is diſturb'd with jealouſies and perpetual quarrels.

VI. Moſt ignorant Readers, and a few Cabbaliſts, are ſhock'd to ſee the Gods in Chains like Saturn, thrown headlong from Heaven like Vulcan; one while they are diſmembred of their noble parts; another, they run madding after Women. Juno raving with Jealouſie, is always reſtleſs, and in an ill humour; but there lies the Art of the Cabbala, to involve a myſtical Senſe under Stories that at firſt ſight appear ridiculous. The Chains of Saturn denote [m] the concatenation of Secondary Cauſes, by the Power of the Deity. Vulcan tumbling from Heaven down upon Earth, is a Symbol of the Divine Influence, which leaves Heaven, and deſcends to the low parts of the Earth. Laſtly, all the Cabbaliſts underſtand by the Marriage of the Gods the Generation of the Creatures; and the vehement deſire of Nature to produce them is ſignifyed by Juno's Jealouſie and Paſſion to converſe with Jupiter. The Ægyptians repreſented Iſis, every where in queſt of her Husband's Body, and panting after an Union; and the Jews, in imitation of them, give Women to the long and little Face, as well as to the Sephiroths. Homer was a Cabbaliſt as well as they: He muſt therefore be explain'd in the ſame manner; and the rather, becauſe 'tis improbable, that this Great Man, prefer'd by Antiquity before all the Poets, ſhould have dealt in ſuch unſavory and indigeſted Fables, without fixing a myſtical Senſe to them.

VII. We muſt not imagine, that his Verſes treat barely of the Operations of Nature; for the Poets were the Divines of their time: Homer was their Maſter and Founder, and therefore he preaches up the exiſtence of a God in the moſt evident manner. He gives him the name of Jupiter, which is derived from a Word ſignifying to live or to burn, becauſe God is eternal, and a conſuming Fire. But rather let us ſay, that his Name came from the Hebrew Word Zeis [n], which ſignifies, that which is, and imports as much as the ineffable Name Jehovah. Homer [o] was ſo exact in his Odyſſes about the Unity of a God, that he only ſtiled the Heroes Divine Men, though it was the cuſtom of his Time to Worſhip and Deify them: He expreſſes himſelf otherwiſe in his Iliad, becauſe ſinging the Adventures of the Pagan Heroes, he was obliged to ſpeak their Language; but in his Odyſſes, giving the Hiſtory of the Patriarchs, he kept to the Style of a ſacred Orthodox and Religious Writer.

The Names of Ulyſſes and Penelope are imaginary, or Metaphorical, in imitation of the holy Penmen, who call Jeſus Chriſt, David, and Jehu, Zimri. The Iſle of Ithaca, where the Poet has ſeated the Empire of Ulyſſes, is Meſopotamia, the Country of the Patriarchs. Minos who lived ſo long, and was the Head of the Family, repreſents Abraham, who was very Old when he begat Iſaac. Atrides, or Agamemnon, is the Scripture-Lot, whoſe Name ſignifies to conceal. He has alſo ſpoken of Abraham under the Name of Neſtor, and his Son's Name is Αγλαῶ, from an Hebrew Word ſignifying to laugh, a plain proof that this is the Iſaac, that Neſtor, that is, Abraham was obliged to Sacrifice. Telemachus is Iſhmael, for this Name being Hebrais'd, ſignifies to draw the Bow. The Lacedæmonians, of whom Homer ſo often ſpeaks, expreſs'd their Original in their Name; they were a People of the Eaſt, as being the Children of the Patriarchs, who came from the Eaſt into Canaan. Laſtly, [p] Agamemnon's Iphigenia, is Jephtah's Daughter, which has the exacter coincidence, becauſe theſe two Princes lived at the ſame time. And thus Homer is [q] made a good Divine and Cabbaliſt, who wrote all the ſacred Hiſtory in Allegories and Adventures, which ſeem fabulous and Romantick.

VIII. The Cabbala was much more neceſſary to the Greek Philoſophers, than the Poets, as having a great intereſt to conceal their Sentiments in matter of Religion, and to reveal them no farther than was agreeable to the Peoples Palate. Pythagoras made an happy uſe of this Method: He was Born at Samos, and had learnt of the Phœnicians ſeveral Truths, which they had received from the Patriarchs. He travell'd into Ægypt, where he had a great intimacy with the Jews that were captive there. Selden thought that Pythagoras was cotemporary with Ezechiel; that he had converſed with this Prophet, and was inſtructed in the Jewiſh Religion, whereof ſome Lineaments appear in his Writings. He borrowed of the Jews the method of forming his Colleges, and making different Orders of Diſciples; for the Jews had two Claſſes of Proſelytes, and the Maſters cauſed their Diſciples to ſit on Benches on the Ground, elevated above one another, till they became perfect, which St. Paul [r] alludes to, ſaying, he was not yet perfect. Laſtly, he imitated the Diſcipline of the Eſſenes, which were of a longer ſtanding than is commonly believed. For this College of Caſideans was form'd during the Captivity. Theſe Votaries [s] ſeeing the People too much addicted to the World, and Idolatrous Worſhip, thought, that they ought to ſeparate from this impure Body, and enter into a more private and Religious Society. Pythagoras, who found them in Chaldea, was charm'd with their way of living, and borrowed their Auſterities and Rules.

IX. But this Philoſopher eſpecially, ſtudied the Religion of the Jews, and their Ideas of the Deity, on which account he calls his Philoſophy a Theology. He gave God the Name of Quaternity [t] which was taken from the Name of Jehovah, that was never pronounced, and conſiſted of four Letters. God was Being by way of Excellence; and the Stile of the Jews ſpeaking of God, was he that is: He [u] and an Unity of Principle; whence proceeded the duality in an indefinite manner; but this duality was always dependent like Matter, on its Principle, or its Author. He believed that all things proceeded from this Unity; that God animated and enliven'd all things; and that he ought to be the principal Object of the Study and Knowledge of Men; he ſerved him very religiouſly, and Worſhip'd him before the Æons, Demons, and Heroes; he condemn'd [x] the Images of the Deity, and would have his worſhip burden'd with few Ceremonies. Salt was in his Meals the Symbol of Union, which he had taken from the Jews, with whom it was the Sign of their Covenant with God; and therefore he forbad any Sacrifice to be offer'd him without Salt. The Tranſmigration of Souls was a Jewiſh Tradition a little diſguiſed; for he fell into that Error from his having learnt in Chaldæa that the Bodies ſhould hereafter riſe again. And thus the Jews who believed the Reſurrection, eſpouſed alſo the Tranſmigration of Souls, as appears by Herod, who was afraid that Jeſus Chriſt was the ſame John Baptiſt, who had been Beheaded by his Order. Laſtly, he enjoyned his Diſciples ſilence, as the moſt certain means to arrive to the Contemplative Divinity, which Pythagoras had ſo often heard of from the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts. [y]

[i] Exaerges was the name of this Votary. [k] Ibid 416. 417. [l] Dion Chryſ. or. de Homero. v. p. 561. [m] Kirker Oed. Ægypt. Gymnaſ. Hier. 3. c. 7. p. 171, 180. [n] Ζεὺς ab Hebr. יהוה Jeſ. הוה Zeh. He that is. [o] Homerus Hebraiſans. Croeſ. Introd. c. 12. p. 181. and Odyſſ. c. 1. p. 240. An. 1704. [p] Du Portus. Ibid Præf. [q] Gale Court of the Gentiles. p. 2. l. 2, c. 2. p. 93. [r] Phil. 3. 12. [s] Gale. ib. l. 2. c. 6. p. 147. See the ſecond Book of this Hiſtory. c. 13. where I prove the contrary. [t] Τέτραχτὺς from Τέτραγράμμαϛον. Gale. c. 8. p. 147.

X. From them it was, that he learnt thoſe numerous Symbols, wherewith he ſhadowed ſome important Truths from the People, and only revealed them to the Initiated. This Cabbaliſtick Art was in Uſe among the Jews in Sampſon's Time, at whoſe Marriage, Riddles were propoſed, which could not be read, without the Aſſiſtance of his Wife. They were in great vogue in the Eaſt, and particularly among the Jews in Solomon's Reign. Therefore Pythagoras took his method from thence. He forbade the uſe of Beans; under which myſtical Language he meant the Pleaſures of the Fleſh: "Dont taſte "them, ſaid he [z], in Summer; rarely in Spring and "Autumn; they are more allowable in Winter; "but never do it, except when you would weaken your ſelf. He would have the upper hand given only to his Diſciples; which is a Precept wholly Jewiſh and Chriſtian; for he [a] meant by it that no commerce was to be had with Strangers, nor holy things given to Dogs, as Jeſus Chriſt ſaid afterwards. He commanded not to approach dead Beaſts; which was alſo forbidden by the Law, to teach Men to avoid the dead Works of Sin. Laſtly, Pythagoras made uſe of Numbers; the Unit was the number of Perfection, and the Symbol of the Deity, who is the Author of all things. Minerva, or Wiſdom, was notified by the number Seven. This perfectly correſponds with the Sephiroths, and eſpecially with the Notions of More and other Cabbaliſts, who believe the Sephiroths to be Numbers.

XI. Pythagoras therefore perfectly underſtood the Cabbala, having learnt it of the Jews. Clemens Alexandrinus calls his Doctrine an Hebraiſing Philoſophy, not only becauſe it agrees with the Jewiſh Principles, but becauſe he followed their method of inſtruction. A great Man [b] who has unravell'd the Life and Sentiments of the Antient Philoſophers with a moſt wonderful Accuracy and Learning, has in a few words compriſed the Summary of this Subject. 'Twas Pythagoras, ſays he, that brought into Greece this method of teaching by Emblems and Silence, which he had borrowed of the Jews. When his Diſciples ask'd him any thing concerning any important matter, they were contented with his anſwer, and acquieſced. He has ſaid it. And thus the antient Cabbaliſts [c] with an implicit Obedience ſaid, the Wiſe Man hath ſpoken. All this part of the Pythagorical Philoſophy, reſpecting the Deity, was expreſs'd by Symbols, like the Cabbaliſtick Divinity: And indeed, this was the method of all the antient Philoſophers and Poets, who beſides that, they believed Religion to be beſt expreſs'd this way, conceal'd the Truth under Allegories and Emblems, to prevent irreligion and and contempt. The Symbols were ſo many aſſiſtances and ſupports to the Memory; and each of theſe Symbols had its Badge and known Signification, as Soldiers have their particular Liveries to diſtinguiſh them; and ſo that there could be no miſtake. Laſtly, it was with great Wiſdom, that Pythagoras gave Reputation to this Method in Greece, becauſe material Objects are the Images of ſpiritual and heavenly things, and ſerve to raiſe the Soul to the contemplation and fruition of God.

XII. Euclid of Megara, not the Mathematician of that Name, took a contrary Method to Pythagoras's. For he Prohibited his Diſciples the uſe of Emblems and Allegories, as what obſcured Matter and Diſputation, inſtead of clearing them. If the Emblems and Compariſons, ſaid he, be juſt, we ought rather to go directly to the Object they repreſent, that being the ſhorteſt and ſureſt way of knowing it. We diſcover it without a Veil, which ever ſpreads ſome ſhade and obſcurity over it. If the compariſons are defective, they occaſion a thouſand difficulties, and are fit only to give falſe Ideas. But this Method was not followed. The Poets and Philoſophers continued to darken their Doctrines, and to conceal the Knowledge of their true Sentiments from the Vulgar. I believe notwithſtanding that, the thing is overſtrain'd, and Notions are fathered upon the antients which were none of theirs.

An Author, for inſtance, who has lately publiſh'd an explication of many Antiques, ſuppoſes that the Antients expreſs'd the Unity of God by the Pantheon of which they have often ſpoken; becauſe they included all their Deities in one ſingle Temple. This Conjecture is no better than that which he has made upon a Chariot and four Horſes, encompaſſed with the twelve Signs of the Zodiack, which he takes [d] for a Taliſman of the Priſcillianiſts. The Truth is, the Pantheon was no invention of the Philoſophers, nor is it to be found in their Writings; but it was the work of Statuaries and Architects, who never dreamt of the Unity of God, nor meant ſo ſubtilly to conceal it. They aim'd rather at the conveniency of the People, who found in one place all the Gods they deſired to Worſhip; and here the moſt capricious had wherewithal to regale their fancies.

XIII. I queſtion whether Socrates ought to be rank'd among the Cabbaliſts: For, 1. He was ſo open in his Opinions, as to expoſe himſelf to the Jealouſie of the Poets and Sophiſts of his Time, who brought an Accuſation againſt him, and cauſed him to be ſentenced to Death. He was a Martyr to the Unity of God: whereas if he had wrapt up his Doctrine in figurative Expreſſions, they could not have convicted him of teaching it; for there is an inexhauſtible Fund of Subterfuges in this Science, as well as in Scholaſtick Divinity. 2. Socrates's Excellency lay in Moral Philoſophy. He was ſenſible of the Defect of the old Philoſophy, which confined Men to the ſtudy of the inſcrutable Secrets of Nature, inſtead of raiſing them to the Contemplation of God. He perceived alſo that it was impoſſible for the Soul to be united to the Deity, whilſt it was burthen'd with Vices, and tormented with Paſſions. He compared moſt Philoſophers to Phyſitians, that ſtudy Diſeaſes, but either cannot, or will not labour to find out the neceſſary Remedies to cure them. And therefore he changed the antient Method, reducing Philoſophy to the Knowledge, Love, and Imitation of God, for he talk'd in this manner; and in order to qualifie his Soul for the Imitation and Contemplation of God, he labour'd to purge it of Vices. 3. In fine, his Method of teaching was natural, and ſome Ironies excepted, with which he interwove his Diſcourſes, nothing could be more plain. He maintain'd too, that it was ſpoiling Children to inſtruct them by Fables and Allegories, which they could not unriddle in ſo tender an Age. This is the Judgment we muſt give of Socrates, when we examine without prejudice what we know of him.

[u] Diogen. Laert. Pyth. l. 8. §. 25. p. 507. Ἀρχὴν μὲν ἀπάντων, μόναδα· ἐκ δὲ τῆς μονάδος ἀόριστον δυάδα ὡς ὕλην τῇ μονάδι αἰτίῳ οὔσῃ ὑποστῆσαι. [x] V. Reuchlin de Cabbala l. 2. Gale Court of the Gentils. p. 2. l. 2. c. 67. 8, 9. ibid. p. 177. [y] Reuchlin de Cabbala l. 2. 775. [z] Pythag. apud Diog. Laert. l. 8. Segm. 9. p. 494. [a] V. Gale. c. 9. p. 194. &c. 200. [b] Stanley. [c] Stanley Hiſtory of Philoſophy of Pyth. Fol. 136. [d] Le Gemme Antiche figurate di Michel Angelo cauſeo de la chauſſe Fig. 110. and 55. in Roma 4. 1700.

† was

XIV. But notwithſtanding, [a] there are Three Things ſaid of this Philoſopher. 1. That he was acquainted with ſome important Truths, as the Perfection and Unity of God, ſince he was a Martyr for it: The Corruption of Man, in whom he ſuppoſed a Vice, an Evil born with him; a neceſſity of Divine Inſpiration, both to know God, and to do good; and tho' the Demon that attended him was rather an evil Angel than a good One, yet it is proved, that Socrates begg'd the Aſſiſtance of Spirits, and of a particular Inſpiration 2. They ſay that he borrow'd his way of diſputing from the Jewiſh Doctors: For he obliged his Diſciples to ask him ſome Queſtions, which he anſwer'd rather by overthrowing their Opinion, than eſtabliſhing his own, becauſe he was convinced, that he knew but little. This was alſo the method of the Jews, which continued down to our Saviour's Time. For thus the Phariſees came to queſtion him, and demanded a Miracle; and on another occaſion, "[b] they urged " him vehemently, ſeeking to catch ſome thing out of " his mouth. They laid Snares for him but Jeſus " Chriſt, as well as Socrates, eluded their Queſti- " ſtions with Railleries Cenſures, and Parables. 3. They find a kind of Cabbala in this Philoſopher; and if he condemned Fables and Allegories, it was only for the ill uſe that was made of them, for he was 'willing that Men ſhould be conducted thro' that Road, provided it was made eaſie, and they were led more directly to the Truth.

XV. Plato likewiſe frequently employed Riddles, and made uſe of obſcure and impenetrable Terms. to thoſe that were not initiated, for fear they ſhould diſcover his true Sentiments.

Plato ſays, " That the Gods kept a great Feaſt " after the Birth of Venus, in which Porus was " drunk; at the end of the Banquet, Poverty came " to the Palace-Gate, to beg the Leavings. She " found Porus profoundly ſleeping out his Debauch " in the Garden; ſhe had a mind to lie with him, " and to have a Child to comfort her in her Ne- " ceſſities, and ſo ſhe conceived, and brought forth " Love. Euſebius [d] owns that this is obſcure, but yet believes with Origen, that Plato, as a Cabbaliſt, deſign'd to repreſent the Original of the World. Venus is Nature, which then appear'd; becauſe God created the Univerſe. The Feaſt ſignifies that Abundance of Goods, that Nature is enrich'd with. In Porus you find Adam giving himſelf up to Pleaſure, and growing drunk with it. Poverty is the Devil that tempts him in that Condition.

XVI. The ſame Philoſopher, willing to teach Men what was the Source of Love, which they knew not before, gives them this Leſſon to communicate it to others. " Firſt, ſays he, [e] we muſt " know that Men were not always made as they " are at preſent; for there are only two different " Sexes, the Man and Woman, whereas there were " ſome Androgynes, or Hermaphrodites, whoſe Spe- " cies is loſt, and only their Name remains. The " Male proceeded from the Sun, the Female from the " Earth, and the Hermaphrodite from the Moon, who " participate of the Earth and Sun, as the Hermaphro- " dite of the two Sexes. Moreover Men were entire- " ly double, which rendred them active; for they " wheel'd about with great Celerity. They were ſo " ſtrong as to attempt to make War with the Gods. " Jupiter, who ſaw, and was alarm'd at this Attempt, " convened his Counſel, which was in extream con- " fuſion; for to deſtroy the Men, would be to aboliſh " Religion, Worſhip, and Sacrifices. Jupiter be- " thought him of an Expedient which ſucceeded; " which was to divide them into two halves; from " which accrued a twofold Advantage, one was " the weakning Man, and the other doubling the " number of Worſhippers; and ſaid Jupiter, if ever " they offer to ſtir again, I'll divide them once " more in two, and then hopping only upon one " Foot, be their Deſigns never ſo miſchievous to " us, they can't proſper. This Counſel was ap- " proved by the reſt of the Aſſembly, and Men " were divided. Apollo was employ'd to turn eve- " ry One's Face to a right ſituation, to draw to- " gether the Skin where the Sciſion was made, to " make a Purſe of it, which is the Belly, and to " tie it up with what they call the Navil. He af- " terwards poliſh'd the Skin, employing to that " purpoſe an Inſtrument like that of the Curriers, " to prepare their Leather. Men thus ſeparated, " ſought conſtantly a re-union; they embrac'd and " kiſs'd, but ſtill Generation was wanting, and " Mankind periſh'd by this barren Love. Jupiter " relented, and altering his firſt Reſolution, chang- " ed the ſituation of the Genital Parts, placing " them before, whereas they wore them ſuper na- " tes. This reſtored Order to Nature; Generati- " on was perform'd; Love was ſatiated, and eve- " ry one laboured to get his Living; every one " ſought his other half, but the Hermaphrodites are " infinitely fond of Women, commit frequent A- " dulteries, and from them moſt commonly Whore- " mongers are produced.

XVII. When we give theſe Words an unprejudiced Reading, we find nothing in them becoming a Philoſopher, far from exciting the Admiration of Chriſtians, and obliging them to rob him of the Glory of his Invention, and to make him a Plagiary of Moſes, or the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts: And yet People are uſed to make Plato ſteal from Moſes, and to ſay, that in his Travels in Ægypt, [f] he ſtruck an acquaintance with Jeremiah, who was removed thither, after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. [g] Euſebius ſays poſitively, that the fore-going Allegory is the Hiſtory of Eve taken out of Adam's Side, copied from Geneſis, and paraphraſed by Plato. 'Tis added, [g] That this Philoſopher ſpeaking of the Immortality of the Soul, and the Creation of the Univerſe, owns that he extracted a ſolid Proof of it from an antient Tradition, from a certain divine Diſ- courſe, and from a probable Fable. That is, from ſome written Tradition of the Jews, who call'd it the Word of God.

---

[a] Κάλον ἔμφυλον. Gale Court of the Gentiles. p. 2. l. 3. c. 1. p. 216. [b] Ibid. Mark viii. 11. Luke xi. 53. [c] Kirker Oed. Ægypt. cl. 3. [d] Euſeb. Præp. Evan. l. 12. c. 11. p. 584. [e] Plato in Convivio. p. 323. [f] Euſeb. ibid. c. 12. p. 585. [g] Παλαιὸς λόγος, apud. Plut. παλαιὰν πίστιν διὰ λόγου θεῖα τινὸς ἢ ἔκοσα μυθὸν, i. e. The antient Tradition; the antient Faith; the probable Fable. Gale's Court of the Gentiles, p. 2. l. 3. c. 2. p. 229.

Others not ſatisfied to make Plato tutour'd by Moſes or Jeremiah, will have it, that the old Jewiſh Cabbaliſts inform'd him of all theſe Myſteries, and of the Art of teaching them as he has done: They pretend, that being well acquainted with the Gradation of their Sephiroths, or Splendors, he has ſpoken of that call'd Malcouth, the Kingdom, which is Female, and joins her ſelf to her Husband Tiphereth, which ſignifies Beauty, and denotes the Adam Kadmon. Why don't they rather ſay, that Plato eſpous'd their Dream about Adam's Formation, for they ſay, that he was created double, and that God cut him in two, as Plato ſays Jupiter ſerved the Giants, that went to dethrone him: Or rather, why ſhould we ſeek for ſo many Myſteries, that can't be ſupported but by weak Conjectures; and though they were well grounded, would do no honour to the Chriſtian Religion?

XVIII. Plato is made to be Cotemporary with Jeremiah, meerly for the ſake of having him inſtructed by this Seer of the Lord. This is a much groſſer Fault, than that of Ælian, who makes him fight at the Battle of Tanagra and Corinth, one of which was fought ſeventeen Years before he was born, and the other when he was but ſix Years old. Diogenes Laertius makes Euripides and Plato to be in Ægypt together; and ſo he would have had on one hand the Prophet Jeremiah, and on the other the moſt famous Poet of his Age, which muſt have made an uſeful and agreeable Converſation. But Euripides was dead ſome Years before Plato's Travel's into Ægypt, and Jeremiah near two Centuries, ſo that the Acquaintance of this Prophet and Poet with the Philoſopher is equally chimerical. Had Jeremiah been his Maſter, he would have taught him to diſlike the Cabbaliſts, who annulled the Law and Truth, by their Allegories.

XIX. Plato had ſome grand Ideas of the Deity, or rather he has ſpoke more nobly of him then other Philoſophers. He aſſerts, that as he is an Intelligent Being, his Conceptions muſt be immutable and eternal. He call'd God Good, becauſe he heaps Goods upon the Creatures: Beautiful, becauſe his Eſſence is always equal; True, becauſe he is the Fountain of Truth; Father, becauſe he is the Principle of all Things: Laſtly, He is Ineffable, becauſe indeed there is neither Genus nor Species nor Difference that can be applied to him. He tranſcends our Expreſſions and Thoughts; becauſe Man that depends upon his Senſes, is ſtill dropping upon ſome ſenſible Object, whereas he ought to abſtract from every thing that is corporal, and to conceive a pure Spirit.

Theſe are charming Expreſſions to thoſe that read him, without being at the pains of connecting his Syſtem; but when we go deeper, and enquire, for inſtance, how the World was made, we learn from him that the matter of it was eternal, and that it was not poſterior to the Deity, from whom it flowed, except in order of Nature. He diſtinguiſhes, 1. The internal and intelligible Word, which is the Pattern or Model which God framed to himſelf of all the Things that he was to produce. 2. A Second Word which he uttered, which was Matter, which God began to force out of his Boſom; this Matter was form-leſs, being only the Receptacle, Nurſe, Mother, and the Subject of all Forms, for it was capable of receiving all ſorts of Figures, but it had none of them; as when we would make the impreſſion of a Seal upon the Wax, we chuſe a Piece which as yet has received none, leſt the Figure we would impreſs upon ſhould be confuſed; God deſigning the Production of the World, iſſued from his Boſom a Matter without Form, that it might be ſuſceptible of all the Figures he would pleaſe to give it. 3. From theſe Two Principles aroſe a Third, call'd the only Son of God, μονογενὴς, which was the World in the Order we now find it. He gave this World a Soul to animate it, and a Reaſon to conduct it; and as he ſpeaks himſelf, he made it animate and rational [h].

Turn this Sentiment on what ſide you pleaſe, you'll never find in it the Hiſtory of the Creation deſcribed by Moſes; and if he has not embraced Moſes's Principles, how can it be ſaid that he has copied him in this matter, and only cloath'd him wih ſome Cabbaliſtick Allegories, to avoid ſcaring the People, accuſtom'd to another Syſtem, by the Novelty of his own?

XX. Whoever will examine this Philoſopher's Allegories, and not be prejudiced by the Authority of Origen and Euſebius, (who have found Moſes's Syſtem in it under other Terms) will manifeſtly ſee that theſe Ancients are miſtaken. And indeed there is no Analogy betwixt Porus and Adam, and the Devil and Poverty: Was innocent Adam drunk with Pleaſures, and aſleep before he was tempted? Is it not better to ſay that Poverty was the Woman created whilſt the firſt Man ſlept, who afterwards entred the Garden, and robb'd him of all his Happineſs? He knew her; but inſtead of producing Love, Cain was the Fruit of that Conjunction.

They will have it, that the Men, who were created double, expreſs the manner of Eve's Extraction from the Side of Adam: Very well: But what will become of the Hermaphrodites, who were of both Sexes? What will they ſay of Jupiter's Deſign, who upon mature conſultation reſolved one time or other to cut Men into two equal Parts, and to maim them all, leaving them but one Leg, if they continued their Inſolence, and attempted to dethrone the Gods? What will they do with Plato's Conjunction of theſe Men after they were divided? That is ſo beaſtly, that Euſebius ventured not to relate it, but was content to take a little part of it, and leave the reſt, which affronted Modeſty, and could not be read without bluſhing. However, all this is patch'd together and tends to ſhew how Love was produced. What reference has all this to the Two Sephiroths, the Malcouth and the Tiphereth; the Kingdom and Beauty married to each other: I know not why the Kingdom is made the Wife, and Beauty the Husband. The Jews ſay that the Malcouth is the Aſſembly of Iſrael; that ſhe receives the Prayers and good Works of the Saints; that ſhe adorns her ſelf with them, and preſents them to Tephereth her Husband: In God's Name, let the Church have the Office of preſenting to God the Prayers of the Faithful that compoſe her; but this is far enough from the Creation of Adam and Eve, and their Marriage related by Plato.

XXI. It will be ask'd, perhaps, what could be Plato's Meaning? But it is not my Buſineſs to unfold it: He might have a thouſand different from thoſe imputed to him; and might have taken them from the Heathen Religion rather than the Jewiſh. But it is not enough to aſſert at random [i], "that "Heſiod and Ovid have framed their Gods out of "the Antient Patriarchs, and their Fables out of "the moſt ſacred Truths, or the Scripture: That "Plato was ſtiled Divine, only for the Divine "Knowledge he derived thence; that Socrates [h] Ἐμψυχον καὶ λογικὸν. [i] Macè Chefcier, Curate of St. Oportune. Chron. & Hiſt. Abridgment of the Old and New Teſtament, in 4°. Paris, 1704.

" would not have been ſentenc'd to die, if he had " not found in Holy Writ the Unity of God; and " that Ariſtotle extracted the nobleſt Strokes of his " Morality from it. But theſe Aſſertions ought to be proved: For Ovid and Heſiod had never read Moſes, or the Hiſtory of the Judges. The Heathenish Fables did not always comprehend the Truths of our Religion; and it would be doing the Poets, the Authors, or Reporters of them too much Honour, to aſcribe to them that Deſign. Plato, I confeſs, was more judicious; but he had a mind perhaps to play upon the Credulity of the People, or make them ſenſible of the Ridiculouſneſs of their Superſtitions. He deſign'd, perhaps, to wrap up ſome particular Opinions, under ſome whimſical Ideas; and there is no need of his reading Moſes, to have ſaid all that we have related; or rather, all that he ſays is no manner of proof of his Deſign to paraphraſe this ſacred Hiſtorian. What if we ſhould carry our Conjectures farther, and maintain with a learned Man, that Uranus, Saturn, Jupiter, thoſe falſe Gods of Antiquity, and the Sphere it ſelf of the Barbarians, came from the Titans, the Sacræ, or the Celtæ, among the Greeks and Ægyptians! In the mean time, theſe Barbarians had never read the Holy Scripture [k], and we muſt find out ſome new Lines of Communication before we can derive the Jewiſh Religion to the Greeks, thro' their Hands.

XXII. There are but two Things neceſſary to be obſerved concerning the Philoſophers; Firſt, That excepting Socrates, who ſpoke more naturally than the reſt, they were exceſſively fond of Allegories, Symbols, and a myſtical Theology. However, this was a dangerous Method, and liable to Illuſion. A modern Philoſopher, accuſtom'd to ſolid Reaſoning, maintains, that Rhetorick is an Impediment to the exact Knowledge of the Truth; whereas the Antients thought it neceſſary to paint the Objects, and make them ſenſible to the Mind; he affirms [l] that Men ſhould be ſpared theſe ſenſible, lively, and moving Images, by reaſon of the Wounds that they make in the Heart, and the Images, which the moving Impreſſions of ſurrounding Bodies leave upon the Mind. We can't be too cautious in avoiding theſe Images, becauſe they tend to debilitate its Strength and Liberty, Iliacos intra muros peccatur & extra.

The Antients fell into exceſs; it being certain that ſenſible Images buried Truth, and weaken'd inſtead of adorning it. In the mean time, there are ſome Subjects ſo naturally profound and obſcure, that we can't give Novices an Idea of them, without this Aſſiſtance.

Secondly, The Antient Philoſophers bigotted to this Symbolical Divinity, imagin'd, like the Cabbaliſts, to arrive to the Contemplation of the Deity; and they ſaid they were not only united with him, but transformed into him. Jamblicus [m] ſmiled to hear a Man ask him whether it was true, as was reported, that when he ſaid his Prayers, he was lifted ten Cubits from the Earth; that his Body and Cloaths changed colour, till ſuch time as he came down again; but it was believed at leaſt at that time, that contemplative Philoſophy produced theſe Effects, and conferred a Power of working Miracles. He ſaid himſelf, [n] that this drew him near to the Deity. Proclus alſo maintain'd, " That Men " arrived to the ſupreme Good by this ſame con- " templative Divinity; which requires no great " Study nor Learning, but the Repoſe and Tran- " quillity of the Soul, and a Conſtancy of Mind, " which carries us to the Deity in an unſpeakable " manner. We muſt, inſtead of much Diſcourſe, " offer our ſelves to the Divine Light, ſhut up " our Senſes, and only contemplate that Unity of " ſecret Beings, to reſt in it. We have ſaid enough of the Philoſophical Cabbala; and we ſee it has ſo great a Conformity with the myſtical Divinity of the Chriſtians, that we can't but find the one in the Picture of the other.

[k] Pezeron Antiquity of the Celtæ. Preface. [l] Father Lamy againſt the Rhetorick of the College. [m] Eunapius Jambl. Vita. p. 2. & 4. [n] Jambl. de Myſt Ægypt. §. 1. c. 11. p. 121. & §. 2. c. 11. p. 55.

CHAP XXI.

Of the Method Jeſus Chriſt uſed in his Diſcourſes, and of that of St. Paul in the Explication of Types and Allegories. The Explication of that of Agar.

I. Whether Jeſus Chriſt was a Cabbaliſt. II. An Explication of theſe Words, One tittle of the Law ſhall not paſs away. III. The Phariſees were not Cabbaliſts. IV. St. Paul accuſed of being a Cabbaliſt. V. The Story of Agar turn'd into Allegory. VI. Bentley's Conjecture. How this Text ought to be explain'd. VII. St. Paul's Parallel betwixt Abraham's two Wives explain'd. VIII. St. Paul does not make it an Argument againſt the Galatians. IX. His Method can't be made a Precedent.

I. JESUS CHRIST going to juſtifie himſelf againſt the Accuſation of the Jews, who gave out that he came to aboliſh the Law, aſſures them, [a] Till heaven and earth paſs, one jot or one tittle ſhall no wiſe paſs from the law, till all be fulfilled. Which Words have made it believed, that our Lord was a Cabbaliſt, who counted the Points of the Law, to draw Myſteries out of them. And Capel [b], who rejected the Antiquity of the Points, obſerves, that the Word tranſlated in our Verſion, ſignifies the little Point of the prickle of a Thorn, which was put over the Letters; and that our Saviour alluded to their Cuſtom, who not only reckon'd the Letters of the Law, but alſo the little ornamental Points of them, and boaſted that they underſtood all their Excellence and Value. This Conjecture may be confirm'd by the Authority of a learned [c] Rabbin, who aſſerts that there were ſome in the Prophet's Time, who employ'd themſelves to examine the Particles of the Law: They weigh'd each Letter, one after another, and found a myſtical Senſe in them; and they not only ſcann'd the Letters, but even the minuteſt Points, wherein likewiſe they found ſome Myſtery.

II. But this Rabbin lived but in the Fourteenth Century; and the Author of theſe Paths of Faith is not the famous Meir, a Proſelyte of the Race of Nero,

[a] Mat. v. 18. [b] Capel in Mat. v. Critic. t. 6. p. 152. [c] R. Meir in Semitis fidei, Semita 8. init. fol. 104. c. 4. ibid.

who

who lived a little after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; but a Spaniard, call'd Meir Aldebi [d], who flouriſh'd a long time after; ſo that his Authority doth not go far. 'Tis no wonder that a Man, who ſaw the Cabbala eſtabliſh'd in his Nation, and had heard the Exactneſs of the Maſoreths cried up, ſhould believe that there were ſome exact Criticks in the Prophet's Time, who buſied themſelves to calculate the Letters, and their Points: But he ſays too much of them to be credited. Our Lord followed the Prejudice of the Jews in behalf of their Law. They believed that not the leaſt part of it whatever could be loſt. Purſuant to this Prejudice our Saviour ſaid, that not a Jod, the leaſt of the Letters, nor a Point of the Law ſhould ever paſs away. 'Twas in the ſame manner, that he uſed another Jewiſh Expreſſion, when he ſaid, he was not come to deſtroy the Law, that is, to releaſe any one from obedience to its commands [e]; for this was the Jews way of ſpeaking: ſo that there is no need of ſetting up Cabbaliſts at that Time, who counted the Letters, and every Point of them, and annex'd ſome Myſteries to them; ſince it does not appear from Scripture that this Science was yet invented.

III. There's not only no Footſteps of it in the Goſpel; but the two reigning Sects in our Saviour's Time ſeem not to have known the Cabbala. It was the Phariſees's great Intereſt to prove that their Traditions were contain'd in Scripture, and conceal'd under the Shell of ſome Expreſſions. What advantage had they not had over the Sadducees in their Diſputes with them, if every Letter of the Law, every Comma, every little Point of a Letter had furniſh'd them with a Tradition?

Inſtead of recurring to a precarious Succeſſion of Doctors, which is very uncertain, they need only to have dipt into the Book, and ſhewn by the Cabbala all their Doctrines in the Five Books of Moſes, which had been the eaſier for them, becauſe they derived the corruption of the Law, from the Law it ſelf. The Word which forbids Murder, would Cabbaliſtically have authoriſed the hatred of Strangers, and confined Charity to the Jews. And yet the Phariſees never employ'd this ſort of Armour, which would have dazled the Eyes of the People. Jeſus Chriſt never charged them with this depravation of Scripture. They call'd Tradition an Oral Law; they derived it from the Mouth of Moſes; they inſiſted upon the Teſtimony of the Ancients, and knew nothing of this Cabbaliſtick Art of drawing Myſteries from Letters, or from their Conjunction and Tranſpoſition. They then were ſatisfy'd with ſome Allegorical Interpretations, which obtain'd in their Nation.

IV. Jeſus Chriſt likewiſe was contented to employ ſome Parables againſt the Phariſees, and to uſe the figurative Style that was cuſtomary with the Jews. But St. Paul is accuſed of tranſgreſſing the Bounds that our Lord kept in, of finding Types where there were none, and giving a myſtical Senſe to Hiſtorical Narratives, which is not due to them, but by the Rules of the Cabbala.

V. The Apoſtle ſcruples not to ſay that Agar was the Law that only brought forth Slaves, and that Sarah was the Goſpel-Diſpenſation, that brought forth free Children, and Heirs of the Houſe. Had he been contented to produce this Story as an Emblem, without drawing Arguments from it againſt the Galatians, who equal'd the Law with the Goſpel, the difficulty had been leſs. Preachers often give themſelves this liberty, and Writers are forc'd to borrow theſe Types, to make themſelves more intelligible to the People. But he diſputes againſt the Galatians [f], Tell me, ye that deſire to be under the Law; and he calls his Explication the Law it ſelf, as believing it was ſo neceſſary a Conſequence of Scripture, that it might be confounded with it. Beſides, St. Paul affirms, that Agar means Mount Sinai; but the difficulty is to find out this Signification, tho' declared by an Apoſtle. To ſay that he alluded to the Word Agar, which in Arabick ſignifies a Stone, which has ſome reference to Sinai, and Arabia Petroſa, ſo call'd, becauſe its Capital, built upon a Rock, was called Petra, whither St. Paul retired when he left Damaſcus, is to make him over-witty and ſubtle.

VI. A learned Engliſhman [g], thinks that theſe Words, Sinai is a Mountain in Arabia, ſlipt into the Text from the Margin, where they had been put to notifie the place where the Law was given; and it muſt be own'd that this Conjecture removes the Difficulty; but it is bold and unneceſſary, for without altering the Text, it may be thus tranſlated; For Agar ſignifies Sinai, which is a Mountain of Arabia. As Jeſus Chriſt ſaid, This is my Body, in giving the Bread, which was the Symbol and Repreſentation of it: St. Paul might ſay, Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, that is, this Bond-Woman is the Type, and ſignifies that Place upon which the Law was given. And this clears the Text of all difficulty.

VII. The Parallel, which St. Paul draws betwixt Abraham's two Wives, their Poſterity, and the two Churches of the Old and New Teſtament, cauſes ſomewhat more Confuſion; however it may be ſaid that as the Hagarenes, or Iſhmaelites, the Children of Agar are circumciſed, but for all that are Slaves, ſo the Jews, the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, notwithſtanding their Ceremonies and Covenant, retain the Spirit of Bondage. As in the Marriages which the Patriarchs contracted with their Servants, there always remain'd a Stain, ſince the Wife had no Dowry, nor did the Children ſhare the Inheritance, but had only ſome portion of Land aſſign'd them; ſo the Jewiſh Church, tho' in alliance with God, was deſtitute, notwithſtanding that, of the Title of Spouſe, and its Members of the glorious Denomination of Children of God, who partake of the incorruptible Inheritance of Glory. In fine, Let us abridge the Parallel, and only ſay, that here we find Two Wives, Two Children, Two Mountains, Two Nations, Two different Conditions, One of Slavery under the Law, and the Other of Adoption under the Goſpel, where the Spirit teaches us to cry Abba Father [h].

[d] Ganz. Tſemach David. an. 120. that is 1360. p. 145. [e] Λύσαι Solvere. [f] Gal. iv. 25. [g] Bentley.

[h] St. Paul's Parallel betwixt Agar and Sarah.

Two Wives of Abraham.

Agar, a Slave. —^— Sarah.

The two Children.

Iſhmael. —^— Iſaac.

The two Mountains.

Sinai. —^— Sion.

The two Covenants.

The Law given upon Sinai. —^— The Goſpel upon Sion at Jeruſalem.

The two Cities.

Jeruſalem in Judea. —^— The Heavenly Jeruſalem.

The two Nations.

The Jews, having the Spirit of Bondage. —^— The Chriſtians, in whom the Spirit cries Abba Father.

The two Conditions.

The Spiritual Slaves. —^— The Children by Adoption, Heirs of God.

VIII. The

VIII. The main thing to be obſerved is, that this is only an Allegory, and St. Paul does not pretend to draw any Argument from it againſt the Galatians; for having demonſtrated in the preceding Chapters the advantage of the Goſpel above the Law, and the impoſſibility of being juſtified by its Ceremonies, he concluded his Epiſtle with a paſſionate Exhortation, My little Children, of whom I travail in birth again until Chriſt be formed in you; I deſire to be preſent with you now, and to change my Voice, for I ſtand in doubt of you. This has no air of diſputation; and in concluſion of ſo pathetical an Addreſs, remembring the Subject he had been treating of, he adds, ex abundanti, the Allegory of Agar, which ſerved at once for an Embelliſhment to his Diſcourſe, and gave a freſh blow to their Infidelity, already ſtagger'd by more forcible Arguments. He addreſſes himſelf to thoſe that deſired to be under the Law, and talks to them by an Allegory, becauſe they were accuſtom'd to this kind of Interpretation received in the Synagogue. He aſks them, whether they did not hear the Law; becauſe this Type ſeem'd clear to thoſe that followed this Method, and had already drawn other Myſteries from this Story, which was capable of furniſhing a great many: There is nothing more uſual than to fight an Enemy with his own Weapons, and to oppugn him with one of thoſe Arguments, which we call ad hominem. This was St. Paul's deſign, who employ'd ſome Allegorical Explications againſt the Jews, becauſe they were uſed to them, and thought perhaps at that time, that the Story of Agar was fraught with excellent ones of this kind.

IX. But no conſequence can be drawn from hence to authorize theſe interpretations. For if a Perſon divinely inſpired, and acquainted with the drift of the Holy Spirit has allegoriſed an Hiſtory, muſt we imagine that all the other Stories are big with Mountains, and are ſo many Types of the future Events of the Church? If St. Paul has done it once or twice, it does not follow that we are Privileged to ſift all the Places, that leave room for a Conjecture, and confidently to produce it. Laſtly, if St. Paul made uſe of an Allegory, when diſputing with Adverſaries, that thus interpreted Scripture; it does not follow that we have a right to give the like Interpretations to thoſe that ſtick to the literal Senſe of Scripture.

We ought to have St. Paul's Authority, his Prudence, his Knowledge, and engage with the ſame Enemies as he; to turn the antient Events into Types and Allegories: And all that can be concluded from his Application of Agar and Sarah is, that this part of the Cabbala was well reliſh'd with the Jews at the time of this Apoſtle's Writing his Epiſtle to the Galatians, whereof this Allegory is one of the obſcure Paſſages, and hardeſt to be underſtood.

CHAP. XXII.

The Cabbala of the Chriſtians: The firſt part. Which relates to the exceſſive fondneſs of the Fathers for Allegories.

I. ST. Barnabas finds Jeſus Chriſt in the Land flowing with Milk and Honey. II. Several faults he has committed. III. The Myſteries he extracted from the Hiſtory of the Creation. IV. Whether Man be King of the World: His Empire conteſted. V. St. Barnabas's Epiſtle ſuppoſititious: But very antient. VI. Hermes a great Cabbaliſt. VII. The Greek Fathers more Cabbaliſts than the Jews. VIII. The reaſon why the Fathers took this method. IX. A rule to be obſerved. X. How the exceſs of the Fathers may be juſtified. XI. Celſus's Accuſation againſt the Chriſtians about it. XII. The praiſes given by Origen to the myſtical Senſe. XIII. Obſervations upon Origen. XIV. His Apology: The Judgment that ought to be made of it. XV. A Compariſon between the Chriſtians and Jewiſh Interpreters. XVI. A Prophetick Syſtem. XVII. Rome deſcribed in an antient Oracle. XVIII. Attempts to retake the Holy Land in vain. XIX. The Prophetick Phoſphorus: The ruine of the Jews foretold. XX. Chriſtian Hereticks pointed at in Moſes's Song. XXI. The Reformers deſcribed in the Revelations. XXII. The modern Divines much addicted to the myſtical Senſe.

I. ST. Barnabas, St. Paul's Scholar went much farther than his Maſter; at leaſt the Letter that goes by his Name is ſtuff'd all over with moſt unnatural Allegorical Explications. If God promiſes his People that they [a] ſhall enter into a Land flowing with Milk and Honey, he diſcovers Jeſus Chriſt in this Sentence, by the underſtanding of Parables, and by a knowledge given by God. The Land is Man; and this Man is Jeſus Chriſt; we enter into this Land when God calls us into his Church; and as Children live by Milk and Honey, (for Jupiter himſelf was fed with them in his infancy) the faithful are ſuſtain'd and enliven'd in Jeſus Chriſt by Faith. Nor was he the only Perſon that has had this Notion: For St. Jerome, who firſt found an Image of the Jews in the Milk and Honey, becauſe under the Law they were not qualified for ſolid Food, at laſt finds out in them the faithful, who enter into the Church, and are fed by Faith, till they can be ſupplied with more ſolid Nouriſhment. Add to this, that the Milk and Honey given to the Catechumen's after Baptiſm; and from this conjunction of Ceremonies and Promiſes, you'll make one of the moſt overgrown Myſteries in Nature. The Land of Canaan will flow with Milk and Honey, only to ſignifie the Church, which was to nurſe up its Children with both theſe aliments after Baptiſm. Jeſus Chriſt muſt needs be this Land, becauſe he is Man ſprung from a Virgin Land, and at the ſame time is the Fountain and Origine of Grace. Laſtly, God in promiſing his People a Land flowing with Milk and Honey, promiſed them the Meſſiah, and the Nouriſhment which he affords by Faith.

II. Had St. Barnabas derived this from a divine and particular Revelation, the Truth of it could not be queſtion'd, but he makes it depend upon his Piety. Beſides, he falſly quotes a paſſage of Iſaiah [b], whom he introduces, ſaying, Who is he that ſhall know the parable of the Lord? who? but the Wiſe, the Learned, and he that loves the Lord his God? Whilſt Iſaiah ſays nothing of a Parable, which is a word of St. Barnabas's own invention, ſlipt into the Text to authorize his Explication. He adds farther out of his own Head, It ſhall be the Wiſe, the Learn'd, and thereby deſtroys the whole deſign of the Prophet; who by ſaying, who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord? would have it underſtood that his Council is impenetrable. But St. Barnabas, by changing the Spirit into Parable, and adding, that he that loves God ſhall know it, makes the Prophet ſpeak directly contrary to his meaning.

[a] Barnabæ. Ep. p. 18. [b] Eſa. 40. 13.

III. St. Jerome [c] has cenſured ſome Interpreters of his Time, who grounding on St. Paul's Authority in Stiling Jeſus Chriſt the ſecond Adam, and the celeſtial Adam, carried theſe Applications to our Lord too far. But St. Barnabas had beaten the way for them long before; nor could they come up to him within diſtance, though they made all the haſte imaginable. For indeed, he turns the whole Hiſtory of the Creation into Allegories; and finds Jeſus Chriſt in the greateſt part of it. If God ſaid to our firſt Parents increaſe and multiply, he underſtands the Chriſtian Church, and the progreſs of the Goſpel; for the Children, wherewith the Earth was to be fill'd, were the ſame that St. Paul ſpeaks of, for the bringing forth which, this Apoſtle underwent ſo much pain and travail, as Methodius [d] ſpoke afterwards.

If the Prophet David ſays, that the Righteous ſhall be like a Tree planted by the Rivers of Water, he finds in this Tree the Croſs, and Baptiſm in the Water, together with the Reward he beſtows on the Good, [e] whoſe Words are, thoſe Leaves that never wither, becauſe they are inſtrumental to the converſion of Infidels.

IV. God ſaid to Man, that he ſhould have Dominion over all the Beaſts of the Earth, and the Fiſhes of the Sea. Man from hence aſſumed a faſtuous Title, and proudly ſtiled himſelf King of the Univerſe. However, 'tis ſomewhat difficult to diſcover the nature of an Empire, which has left ſo few footſteps of it. An Anatomiſt ſome Years ſince drew a whole Legion of Enemies upon his Back, for degrading Men from the Dignity of Kings of the World. They would not ſo much as ſuffer him to abdicate in his own particular. " I am very " ſenſible, ſaid he [f], that I have no ſhare in this Do- " minion; the Dogs bite me, unleſs I take care of " my ſelf; I dare not venture into a Wood, when " I know there are Wolfes in it; and I ſcarce think " my ſelf ſafe when I ſee Lions in Chains; even " the Oxen in the Streets of Paris put me in a fright, " and I ſlip into a Shop till they are paſs'd by. In the mean time, he might have defended himſelf by St. Barnabas Authority, who had maintain'd the ſame thing before him; and even overſtrain'd that Truth. For as if Man in the State of Innocence had never had this Empire, and knew nothing of his having loſt it by Sin; he aſſerted, that God refer'd Men to the State of Perfection, to enjoy the Effects of his Promiſe.

V. Should we relate all the Allegorical Explications he gives of the Creation, or of the Oracles of the antient Prophets, we muſt tranſcribe this Venerable Author; but muſt it be from hence concluded, that the Apoſtles, or their Collegues in preaching the Goſpel were great Cabbaliſts? But this piece has only St. Barnabas's Name, the Aſſociate of St. Paul; and ſeeing it is not inſerted in the Canon of Scripture, it ought to be rejected as ſpurious. However, 'tis a very antient Author, and muſt have lived in the ſecond Century, ſince on the one hand, he wrote his Letter after the taking of Jeruſalem, and on the other, appear'd many Years before Clemens Alexandrinus, who has quoted ſome things out of him. And therefore this part of the Cabbala conſiſting in extravagant Allegories, and giving a myſtical meaning to every thing which was borrowed from the Jews, is of great Antiquity with the Chriſtians, who at that time made a great uſe of it.

VI. It muſt needs have been much in vogue, ſince he that father'd the Paſtor upon Hermes the Brother of Pius, has ſtuffed it with viſions and allegorical Explications, which Origen afterwards eſpouſed, as if they had been dictated by the Holy Ghoſt.

VII. Juſtin Martyr, who had a correſpondence with the Jews, and been Educated amongſt them, could not fail to follow the ſame Method. 'Tis no wonder then that we find in his Writings ſo many violent explications of Scripture, that can't be reckon'd ſolid, when they are vigorouſly examin'd. The Greeks exceeded the Method of the Jews by the Vivacity of their Genius, and the pleaſure which they took to multiply ad infinitum, the Arguments of the Chriſtian Religion. It will be ask'd whether they were in the right to interpret Scripture after this rate, and whether they did not impoſe upon themſelves, and thoſe they would inſtruct, by giving them only ſome chimerical Conjectures, inſtead of ſome Proofs for the Meſſiah.

VIII. I own that theſe Fathers are commonly weak in their Reaſonings, and their Allegories are very unnatural; but the number of Arguments diverts an Adverſary, and takes off his Application, by a ſuperficial view of one Object after another; he is pleaſed, and conſequently the eaſier conquer'd. Beſides, he is overwhelm'd by a multitude of Arguments; whilſt he is prepared to anſwer ſome, he has nothing to ſay to others, though of leſs force, becauſe they are new to him; and it can't be denied, but that the Antients have often uſed this Art with the greater ſucceſs, becauſe they had to do with the Eaſtern People, whoſe imagination is briſker than ours.

IX. There are ſome paſſages of Scripture commanding Crimes, in which caſe there is a neceſſity of having recourſe to the figurative Senſe, according to the Rule laid down by St. Auguſtin, and others, where the Scripture would lead Men into Error, if it were literally purſued, as when Members are aſcribed to God. There are ſome Oracles that can't be applied to the Prophets of the Old Teſtament; as when David introduces God, ſaying to his Lord, ſit thou on my right hand, or Iſaiah foretells that a Virgin ſhall bring forth; we muſt neceſſarily apply theſe Paſſages to Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe 'tis impoſſible to find any other Object they can belong to; but inſtead of multiplying them, they ought to be contracted, and collected all together: For as each Lineament of a Picture gives a reſemblance of the Original, but 'tis their Conjunction alone that makes it perfectly and eaſily known, ſo every Oracle and Type leads us to Jeſus Chriſt; but it muſt be owned that they make up an evident Demonſtration, when inſtead of diſſecting them, and going from paſſage to paſſage, they are combined into one circumſtantiated Relation to the Perſon and Life of the Meſſiah. Divide the parts of an Human Body, and you make it an uſeleſs thing, but when they are united, we admire this Maſter-Piece of the Power and Wiſdom of God. The ſame thing may be ſaid of the Meſſiah, whoſe Perſon and Life, never merit a greater admiration, than when we ſee all the Lines terminate into this Center, and all the parts of Scripture united to prove and manifeſt his coming into the World.

Laſtly, there are ſome Facts in the Lives of Princes and Patriarchs, that may be applied to Jeſus Chriſt: But this is a ſlippery ground, and muſt be trod with great fear and caution, in as much as we know not the intention of the Holy Spirit; and the literal Senſe being Juſt and Natural, it ſeems that we can't ſearch for any other without giving too great a ſwing to our imagination; eſpecially it can't be produced as an Argument, ſince it can't be made one without a new Revelation.

[c] Ibid. p. 19. [d] Meth. apud Phot. Cod. 237. [e] Barn. Epiſt. p. 37. [f] Lamy's Reflections upon the Anatomical Diſcourſes. p. 166.

X. The Ancients have ſo frequently broken theſe four Rules, that 'tis impoſſible to juſtifie them, unleſs we ſay, that they followed the received method of their time; and as their buſineſs was to convert the Jews or Greeks, they were to be commended. They might urge the Jews with the Cabbala, and certain Interpretations received among them: And as a Cabbaliſt, at preſent, has no right to object againſt our drawing ſome Proofs for the Chriſtian Religion from the firſt Word of Geneſis; ſo the Ancients were obliged to admit Objections taken from allegorical Interpretations, which were received by the Rabbins of that time with veneration. And indeed, Joſephus, who was contemporary with the Apoſtles and their Diſciples, admitted Allegories. The Thalmudiſts have gone farther than their ancient Maſter, and have alembick'd, as we may ſay, the Old Law. We have ſeen ſome other Interpreters, [g] who call'd the literal ſenſe of Scripture the little Word, and the myſtical ſenſe the great Word. The Cabbaliſts have brought this Art to its perfection. And, therefore, in all Ages the Chriſtians have had ſome right to employ this method againſt the Jews, when they went to convert them, ſince it was their way of interpreting Scripture. The Greeks, who were at firſt converted, were, for the moſt part, diſperſed Jews, or Proſelytes, who had ſtudied the Law, and the reſt being accuſtomed in their old Religion, and even Philoſophy, to court myſtical Interpretations, were far from complaining, when they were employed on their behalf; becauſe they were paſſionately fond of them, as we have ſeen, in treating of their Poets and Philoſophers.

XI. But notwithſtanding this, the Chriſtians may be tax'd with their not being contented to uſe this method againſt the Jews, who were accuſtomed to it; for they often took pleaſure in giving their Imagination a looſe, and hunting for a myſtical meaning in the ſacred Writings, becauſe the literal ſenſe ſhock'd them with its ſimplicity: And this Dotage on the myſtical Senſe was ſo great, that Celſus thought it was an artifice of their inventing to explain ſeveral Paſſages of the Law and Goſpel. This Enemy of Chriſtianity maintain'd, that our ſacred Authors had commanded Crimes, and Things reproachful to Nature; and in order to their excuſe, the Jew and Chriſtian had confederated, to find Allegories in all theſe Precepts, that ſo they might be capable of a rational Meaning. Origen caſt the blame upon the Jews, that is, upon Ariſtobulus and Philo, whom he accuſed of inventing too violent Allegories, and juſtified the Chriſtians by the Example of the Philoſopher Numenius, who took a great many things out of the Writings of Moſes. But this was but a poor Apology: for it ſignified little that Philo ſhew'd the way, ſince the Chriſtians followed it; Origen eſpecially launch'd into a boundleſs Exceſs.

XII. He was ſo opinionated this way, as to ſay, that Jeſus Chriſt, who came with the Embaſſy of Peace, would never have ſuffer'd his Diſciples to read the Hiſtory of the Wars of Iſrael, if they had not allegorically explain'd them. And, therefore, Jeſus Chriſt was the inventer and teacher of Allegories to the Chriſtians, as Moſes had been to the Jews; and whereas we imagine, that theſe Hiſtorical Facts are to be literally interpreted. Origen will have it, that our Lord and his Apoſtles diſcover'd ſome great Myſteries in them. Where-ever the word Law was found, he confidently aſſerted, a Myſtery was to be ſought, ſince the Law was a ſhadow of things to come. He conſider'd the literal ſenſe, as the Body of Chriſt, which was ſeen by the Unbelievers; and the myſtical Senſe, as the Divine Nature united to the Humane, which was known only by the Saints; one was the hard Shell of the Almond, which Aaron's Rod produced, and the other the delicious Fruit which can't be taſted till the Shell be broke. He farther compared the common Interpreters to Men walking in deep Valleys, whoſe Proſpect is intercepted all around, whilſt thoſe that are exalted upon the Mountains diſcover diſtant Objects. Laſtly, He turn'd the whole Hiſtory of the Creation into Allegory, after which, he had ſome reaſon to call it a Fable: for not critically to enquire, whether this Word be capable of a good meaning; and whether an Hiſtory may be call'd a Fable, as the fabulous Siege of Troy is call'd an Hiſtory.

Hactenus Hiſtoriæ,

ſays [h] Propertius; it is ſtill true, that by allegorically interpreting the Creation of Man in Paradiſe, nothing that Moſes ſays can be depended on; and his Hiſtory of the firſt World muſt be reckon'd among the Fables of the Golden Age.

XIII. We may obſerve Three Things concerning Origen. Firſt, That he referr'd the Origine of allegorical Interpretations to the Jews, from whence they were derived to the Chriſtians: For he often ſays it. Secondly, That there were before Origen many Doctors who took up this Jewiſh Method. And indeed, Barnabas, or the Author of the Letter that goes by his Name, and Hermes did it; but he obſerves farther, that ſome had ſaid before him, that the Ægyptian Midwifes were humane Sciences; or that Sophora, one of theſe Midwifes, was the Law, and Phua the Goſpel. He [i] ſpeaks too of Doctors, his Predeceſſors, and Cotemporaries, who had handled the ſame Queſtion; an evident proof, that there were then a conſiderable number of Divines, whoſe Names and Works are loſt, that in interpreting Scripture came very near to Origen's Method: But there were alſo more judicious Divines that conteſted [k] this liberty of Origen; for he confeſſes, that when he went to tear off the Veil of Moſes, and dive into the latent ſenſe, he found himſelf overwhelmed with Letters and Complaints: his Friends alſo accuſed him, and broke with him, becauſe they thought he dug Wells to no purpoſe, whilſt Truth was to be found upon the Surface. Laſtly, He frequently ridiculed thoſe that being Friends to the Letter, rejected his [l] Interpretations; from whence it appears, that this kind of Interpretation was not received either in Syria, or in Ægypt, where Origen moſt reſided.

XIV. He juſtified himſelf by St. Paul's Example, as if it was allowable to follow this Apoſtle in all the ways he has choſen. We now find Philo Metrodorus and Heraclides quoted for his excuſe, as if the Jews and Heathens were Patterns fit for him to imitate, in ſo nice a matter as the Interpretation of Scripture. It has been ſaid of him, that he is the beſt and worſt of Interpreters: but the latter of theſe Characters ſuits better with him than the former. Whilſt we admire his Fancy, we muſt own that he exceſſively indulged it; for the very moment that he found any difficulty in the literal ſenſe ſtop'd his carrier, or any thing that did not ſuit with the ſubtilty of [g] Theſe Interpreters were ſometimes called Agadici in Midraſh Tehillim; they ſpoke often of the Devar Katon, the little Word; and of the Devar Gadol, the great Word. They paſs'd for Wits, were Rare, and their Works not eaſie to be had.

[h] Proper. l. 4. Eleg. 1. [i] Orig. in. Exod. Hom. 1, 2. [k] Orig. in Gen. Hom. 13. [l] Orig. in Exod. Hom. 2.

his Wit, he run in queſt of Allegories, which was his common Refuge, to wind himſelf out of a Perplexity. The Remedy is eaſie, but not ſecure.

XV. His fondneſs for Allegories frequently led him into Error. Tho' the Greek and Latin Fathers took the ſame method, yet they condemn'd the Extravagance of this over-volatile Wit; and he had a thouſand Enemies that attempted to blaſt his Memory. Juſtinian the Emperor was one of them, who would have his [m] Books condemned. But the Remedy came too late, and only ſerved to revive Controverſies in the Church, and a Scandal that had been too long continued; the particulars whereof would carry us too far from our Subject.

XVI. Origen was attack'd in vain; there having been Divines in all Ages, who have thought, that Myſteries were to be explored in the Prophets, and Scripture Hiſtorians. And there are at preſent ſome ingenious Doctors, who not content to diſcover here and there ſome Truths in them, do alſo build ſome prophetical Syſtems. This is the Principle that they lay down, viz. that the Holy Ghoſt, who is infinitely perfecter than Man, might have different Views, and include ſeveral Meanings under the ſame Expreſſion: And therefore we muſt ſift the different ſignifications of each word, if we intend to follow the Holy Ghoſt in his Views, and penetrate his Deſigns: Inſtead of fixing upon the firſt obvious Meaning, we muſt go deeper, and conſider whether there be not another Meaning conceal'd under the ſurface of the Letter. Beſides, as it is believed, that the Fate of the Church, and the principal Revolutions which have happen'd, or ſhall happen in it for the future, are characteriz'd in Scripture; that the Prophets have foreſeen, and foretold them; or elſe that they are hid under the Hiſtorical Facts of the Old Teſtament: Thoſe who by their application and inſight, can reach the meaning of the Holy Ghoſt, are much happier than others; becauſe they know the future Miſery or Proſperity of the Church, and a thouſand things which others are unacquainted with. Let us give ſome inſtances, that we may the better judge of them.

Adam [n] ſpoke myſtically of his Wife, and he gave Names to the Creatures; had prophetick Views, which appear to thoſe that will take the pains to look into them: And therefore the firſt Man is conſider'd as the firſt of the Prophets that foretold the Fate of the Church, David, ſaying, Let the Lord ariſe, and let his Enemies be ſcatter'd, deſcribed in large Characters the Fate of Perſecutors. And conſequently Domitian was kill'd; Decius was depriv'd of Burial; Valerian was made a Footſtool for the King of Perſia to mount his Horſe; Aurelian was ſtabbed by his Friends; Diocleſian obliged to abdicate the Empire, and Licinius to give it up to Conſtantine, who had declared War againſt him. All theſe miſerable Events, by which God avenged his Church of its Perſecutors, appear in the Oracle of David: When God ariſes, his Enemies are ſcattered.

XVII. Rome is found deſcribed in that ancient Oracle, The unhappy Seat that eſtabliſhes Iniquity againſt Law; becauſe the Title of Seat, or See, has been given to the Biſhoprick of Rome in preheminence of all others. The Prophecy was fulfill'd in Sylveſter's time, who firſt appropriated it, without conſidering, that his See might one time or other, from hence, be proved to be that of Antichriſt ſignified by a Prophet. The truth is, this Pope writing to the Council of Nice, ſtyl'd himſelf Biſhop of the Apoſtolick See; and Syricius had before mention'd the Decrees of the Apoſtolick See, which no body ought to be ignorant of. It might be objected, that ſeveral little Biſhopricks, as that of Troyes in France were call'd Apoſtolical Sees, but this might eaſily be anſwer'd, becauſe in point of prophetical Explications, no body is ſo very ſtrict. 'Tis much more hazardous to caſt Nero out of the number of the firſt Perſecutors of the Church, and to thruſt Licinius in, who only eſpouſed the Heathen Party to win them over; and yet it is done without ſcruple, becauſe, otherwiſe, by aſcending up to Nero, the Calculation would be too long, and too ſhort by leaving out Licinius. The Council of Nice, by eſtabliſhing the Worſhip of Images, and publiſhing the frequent Miracles wrought by Relicks, accompliſh'd Zachariah's Prediction, that the Idols ſhould ſpeak Vanity.

XVIII. The Chriſtians have often made ſome inſignificant attempts to retake Jeruſalem, and to found an Empire there; which was a ſtrange madneſs in all reſpects: for St. Luke having foretold, that Jeruſalem ſhould be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the Times of the Gentiles be fulfilled; there was no difficulty in reading the Prophecy, to perceive, that the Infidels ſhould be ever Maſters of the Holy City; and therefore Saladin retook it from the Chriſtians, and expell'd the Kings they had ſetled there. Frederick II. made another attempt, which at firſt ſucceeded; but the Sultan of Babylon came, and made himſelf Maſter of the City, and maſſacred abundance of Chriſtians. They raiſed a doleful Cry over Tyre and Sydon, which had been the Garden of God. Judæa was filled with Slaughter, and Chriſtianity ſuffered every where. But yet, as the Prophet Iſaiah foretold, that God ſhould viſit his Flock, and make them as his goodly Horſe in the Battel, the Event anſwer'd the Prediction: for indeed, this Flock made up of Albigeois, Vaudois, Wickleviſts, Bohemians roſe up amidſt the general reigning Corruption. God muſtered them, and drew them up into Battalia. This Battel-horſe did him Honour; for they maintain'd the Truth in the midſt of cruel Torments.

XIX. The prophetick Phoſphorus [o] is a Treatiſe ſo much the more extraordinary, that by the aſſiſtance of the Light, it ſheds upon Moſes's Song; we diſcover in this little Abridgment the Hiſtory of the Jews and Chriſtians. The Rock of Ages which the Jews diſhonour'd by their Ingratitude, is Jeſus Chriſt, the Refuge and Support of the Saints, who appear'd in ſo mean a condition on Earth, that he was deſpiſed. God threatned to hide his Face, becauſe the holy Nation actually loſt the Knowledge it had received. The Doctors brought forth nothing but Viſions and Fables, which manifeſt the blindneſs which Sin had brought upon them. The Romans ridiculed their Ceremonies; Caligula placed his Statue in the Temple. Jeruſalem was taken; but the Romans, puff'd up with this Conqueſt, forgot themſelves, and ſaid, 'Tis not the Lord that hath done this. They gave all the Glory of it to Jupiter Capitolinus; they perſecuted the Chriſtians, becauſe they proceeded from the Synagogue. God, to puniſh them, preſerved the remainder of the Jewiſh Nation, which was often burthenſom to the Romans.

Latiùs exciſæ peſtis contagia ſerpunt,
Victoreſque ſuos natio victa premit.

Conſtantine puniſh'd his Perſecutors, and in his Perſon was fulfill'd the Prediction of Moſes: One ſhall chaſe a thouſand, and two ſhall put ten thouſand to flight.

[m] See Euſtathii Antiocheni de Engaſtrimutho contrà Originem ab Allatio Ed. Crit. c. 8. p. 419. & Origeniana Huetii.
[n] Gurtleri Baſilæenſis in Academia Daventrienſi. Profeſ. Syſtema Theologiæ Propheticæ, 1702.
[o] Salomonis Van Til Phoſphorus Propheticus, ſeu Moſes & Habacuci Vaticinia novo ad iſtius canticum Commentario illuſtrata, 1700.

flight. For neither Maximin, nor Maxentius, could not withstand Conſtantine, who was alone.

XX. Moſes's Song likewiſe preſents us with thoſe Hereticks, that over-valuing the Law, went to make a jumble of this Oeconomy with the Goſpel, or that robbed God of the glory of Juſtification to give it to Man. Arianiſm is repreſented there with a ſingle Stroke; 'tis a ſpeaking Picture: for their Rock is not as our Rock, ſince they had not the ſame Ideas of Jeſus Chriſt that we have. Preſently after appears that Vine which is of the Fields of Gomorrah; their Grapes are Grapes of Gall, their Cluſters are bitter. This is the Reign of Antichriſt, the degeneracy whereof is prodigious.

XXI. Laſtly, [p] Another finds the Reformation ſo naturally repreſented in the Revelations, as to manifeſt the particular Perſons that have laboured in it. Cranmer, Thomas Cromwell, Queen Elizabeth, and the Treaſurer Cecil, are evidently ſignified in the Angels that God ſpeaks to. The Church of Sardis is that of Wittemberg, which was the firſt which was reform'd by Luther; and this Church, which had the reputation of Living, is Dead, becauſe it retain'd the Impanation, the Ubiquity, and the corporeal Preſence of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt. Philadelphia is the Type of the Churches of Swiſſerland and Geneva, united by a reciprocal Charity, and of long continuance. Laſtly, Laodicea, whoſe Angel is neither Cold nor Hot, was the Type of the Engliſh Church, which on one hand zealouſly eſpouſed the Reformation; there you ſee her Heat; but preſerved Epiſcopacy, which chills her, and keeps her in a medium betwixt Hot and Cold. It would be endleſs to give the Particulars of all theſe kind of Explications.

XXII. Theſe Specimens are ſufficient to ſhew, that the Jews are not the only Interpreters, who find in Scripture a very different Senſe from the literal one. Every one diſcovers his different Myſteries; every one has his initiated, that ſearch the Mines, and extract Gold lurking in the Veins of the Earth. They that pretend to ſlight theſe Diſcoveries, do it only perhaps becauſe they want Genius to make them themſelves; and think them too ſubtle, becauſe they have not ſubtilty enough to taſte the pleaſures and advantages of them. Be it as it will, theſe Chriſtians have nothing to upbraid the Jews with, as to this firſt part of the Cabbala, which relates to the myſtical and ſecret meaning of Scripture. Let us proceed to the ſecond part, which depends upon the value and ſignification of Letters: for the Chriſtians mimicking the Jews and Heathens, made a great deal of uſe of them in St. Jerome's time.

[p] Brightman Apocalypſis, Ἀποκαλύψεως. V. Hammond in Apocal. c. 2. & 3. p. 855. & 881.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of the Second Degree of the Cabbala.

Each Letter ought to ſignifie a Word. This a commom cuſtom with the Heathens in Inſcriptions. An Explication of many Inſcriptions, and Medals.

I. THE Original of the Second Kind of Cabbala. Letters written upon Belteſhazzar's Palace Wall. II. Each Letter went for a Word in Inſcriptions. III. The Monogram ☧ common among the Heathens. IV. An Explication of the Letters D. M. upon Tombs. V. Theſe Tombs were of the Heathens. VI. An Explication of the Epitaph related by Father Mabillon. The mixture of Heatheniſm and Chriſtianity common. VII. Theſe Letters ſignified the Gods Manes. Fabretti confuted. VIII. The Romans did not divide the Letters: Two contrary Inſtances. IX. The Medal of Caracalla differently explain'd. X. The Title of King given the Emperors. XI. An Inſtance of Medals, whoſe Legend is unexact. XII. The Title of Emperor given Valerian, who was not one. XIII. The Kings of France and Spain with the Title AUG. in their Coins. XIV. The famous Epheſian Letters. XV. The Method of the Cabbaliſts dangerous. XVI. The Reaſoning of ſome Chriſtians.

I. DAniel relates, that Belteſhazzar giving a ſumptuous Entertainment to all his Court, ſaw a Man's Hand draw ſome Characters upon the Wall, which none of the Wiſe Men could read: The Obſcurity aroſe from hence, that each Letter including a Word, it was next to impoſſible to gueſs at the meaning of that miraculous Scribe. This Example ſhould diſguſt Men with Abbreviations, the underſtanding whereof depends either upon the imagination of Interpreters, or Divine Inſpiration. However, the Jews fancy, that God, who writ theſe Characters upon a Wall, took the ſame method in penning the Law, and that Mountains of Myſteries depended not only upon every Word, but upon every Letter ſeparated from one another. They followed this Notion when return'd from the Babyloniſh Captivity, during which, the Inſcription upon Belteſhazzar's Wall, Daniel's Explication, and the Accompliſhment of this Prophecy, had made a great noiſe. We can't determine whether they began to weigh the Letters, and ſeparate them from the Words which they compoſe, immediately after the Babyloniſh Captivity; or, whether this Abuſe crept in amongſt them a long time after. The Cabbaliſtick Art had probably its Progreſſes like the reſt. At firſt they found ſome Myſteries in Hiſtorical Narrations, and in the Words employed by the Holy Pen-men; but whether they were weary of digging in this Mine, or that the Mind of Man, which is fond of Variety, found a new degree of Glory in extracting Myſteries from each Letter a Word conſiſted of, they betook themſelves to this Study; which, perhaps, the Abreviations, ſo common with the Heathens, gave occaſion to: Which is what we ſhall at preſent enquire into.

II. The Heathens had a cuſtom of making Anagrams like the Cabbaliſts, and computing the value of the Letters, to draw Conſequences from them. Lycophron [a] grew more famous by his Anagrams than his Verſes. He lived in the time of Ptolomeus Philadelphus, who was the Father of Learning, whoſe Name he derived from [b] Honey. He handſomely call'd Arſinoé [c] the Arrow of Venus. 'Tis ſaid, he learnt this Art from the Hebrews, whoſe Language be understood. 'Tis certain, they at that time flourish'd in Ægypt, in the Reign of a Prince who intrusted them with great Employs, and that they then applied themselves to this kind of Study: But we may save Lycophron the labour of learning Hebrew, to be their Disciple in point of Anagrams; for the Jews that were setled in Ægypt, generally spoke Greek: And therefore Ptolomy was obliged to send to Jerusalem for Interpreters, who perfectly understood Hebrew to translate the Bible. But without having recourse to this, the Greeks computed the number and value of the Letters, and found Mysteries in them, as well as the Jewish Cabbalists. And thus it was, that a Poet playing the Satyrist upon * Demagoras, found that the numeral Letters of his Name, made a Number equal to that of the Plague. This Number amounted to 420; from whence he inferr'd, that his Enemy was the Plague. [d] Suidas relates, that Eratosthenes having been invited from Athens into Ægypt by Ptolomy the Beneficent, had the Name of Seats or Degrees given him, as the Latin Interpreter speaks; but this is a gross Error. Suidas's meaning was, that Eratosthenes was call'd Beta, because of the second Rank he bore amongst the Learned of his Age; and therefore he was also call'd the Second or the [e] Younger Plato. There is a Critick of opinion, that he was call'd Beta, because he was second, or under Librarian to Ptolomy: But it is more probable, that Plato was reckon'd the first of the Philosophers, and Eratosthenes the second. Therefore Letters were made use of by the Greeks, to note the Rank of Learned Men in the Republick of Letters; which Practice Martial imitated among the Romans, to whom it was not common.

[a] V. Tzetzes Proleg. in Lycophr. Alexandr. Λυκόφρονος. [b] Πτολεμαῖος, Ptolomy. The Anagram is ἀπὸ μέλιτος, from Honey.
[c] Ἀρσινόη ἴον ἥρας: Arſinoe, the Arrow of Venus.

Quod Alpha dixi, Codre Penulatorum
Te nuper aliquâ cum jocarer in Chartâ:
Si fortè bilem movit, hic tibi versus,
Dicas, licebit me [f] Beta Togatorum.

In fine, the Greeks and Romans expres'd an entire Word with a Letter or a Character, which was particularly in use with the Lawyers:

Hic etiam Legum Tabulas & condita jura
Noverit, atque notis levibus pendentia verba;
Et licitum sciet & vetitum, quæ pœna sequatur
Perpetuus populi privato in limine Prætor.

Though this Poet says, it was easie to know these Letters and Cyphers, which the Ancients made use of, yet 'tis certain, they occasion a great Obscurity at present in the Explication of ancient Monuments. We read in an Inscription of [g] Gruterus, P. H. C. and we gues that they signifie Provinciæ Hispaniæ Citerioris, whereof Petreia was Priestess. Each City had its particular Gods; but all the People of a Province agreed in sacrificing to a single God, who was their common Patron; and the Priests of this Deity, were those of the Province, dignified above the rest. There are on Medals, a thousand other Examples of peculiar Characters, which can't be fill'd up by the very word the Engraver design'd; because the Practice that was then familiar and well known, is in process of time grown obscure.

III. We often find upon some Christian Monuments, the A and Ω to signifie Jesus Christ, who bears that Name in the Apocalypse. There was nothing more common after Constantine than the Cypher of Jesus Christ, ☧ or ☩. And yet we must not mistake our selves; for the Heathens also used it. Fabretti has produced the Collar of a Fugitive Slave, having upon it the ☧ with these words: Stop me, for I am a Run-away: tene me quia fug. & reboa me Victori, &c. He pretends that this Slave was characterized by his Christianity; and offers his conjecture and prejudice for a proof: for it is certain, that Slaves wore Collars with this Cypher, to note their Name, or Office in their Master's House. The same Character is seen upon a [h] Medal of Decius, the Persecutor of the Christians, with this word upon it, BA☧ATO; and this Cypher is also put upon the Staffs of Osiris and Isis. Martianus Capella speaks of two Letters X. N. who would not think here was a Character of Christianity? Χρὶς ὁ Νικᾶ, Christ Victorious. But it was a mystical Name of the Sun; and these two Letters design'd a certain Number he was used to be signified by. Nothing can be more opposite to Jesus Christ, than the Oracle of Jupiter Hammon. And yet the same Cypher served the false God as well as the true one; for we see a Medal of Ptolomy, King of Cyrene, having an Eagle carrying a Thunderbolt, with the Monogram of Christ, to signifie the Oracle [i] of Jupiter Hammon, which was in the Neighbourhood of Cyrene, and in the Kingdom of Ptolomy. Lastly, Socrates and Sozomenus relate, that when the Temple of Serapis was demolish'd, they found in it the Monogram of Jesus Christ; an undoubted proof that it was employ'd by the Heathens long before Constantine fix'd it in his Standards. The Ægyptians maintain'd, that this Letter signified the Life to come. We must not therefore imagine, that where-ever this Letter is found upon Tombs and Monuments, it is a characteristick of Christianity; for this could only be since the decay of Heathenism, and the Reign of Constantine.

IV. We have still another proof of the obscurity of Abbreviations in these three Letters, D. M. S. 'Tis pretended, that the Christians had them cut upon their Tombs, and Fabretti will [k] have them to signifie Deo Magno Sacrum. This Tomb is consecrated to the Great God; and the rather, because the Cypher of our Lord is sometimes found with them. D. M. S. X. that is to say, Deo Magno Sancti Uno. There are found other Criterions of Christianity upon these Tombs, as Innocence, which Baptism alone could impart. They likewise discover Baptism and Confirmation in another, which [l] Father Mabillon had already publish'd.

D. M. SACRUM XL
LEOPARDUM IN PACEM CUM
SPIRITA SANCTA ACCEPTUM
EUM TE A BEATIS INNOCENTEM.
POSUERE, &c.

* Δ 4 Λ 30
A 1 O 70
M 40 I 10
A 1 M 40
Γ 3 O 70
O 70 Σ 200
P 100 ———
A 1 420
Σ 200
———
420

[d] Suidas voce Eratosthenes, p. 1024.
[e] Grut. Thes. p. 321. Inf. 8.
[f] Mart. Epigr. l. 5. ep. 27.
[g] Humphredus Hody contra Histor. Aristeæ, c. 9. p. 163.
[h] Apud Tristan. T. 2. p. 595.
[i] Χρησήριον, Scaliger in Euseb. Chron.
[k] Fabretti Antiquar. Inscript. Explic. c. 8. p. 547.
[l] Mabill. Iter. Ital. p. 73.

Lastly,

Laſtly, we [m] find theſe ſame Letters upon the Tombs of three Women, named Victoria, who were interr'd in the Burial-place of Tertullinus Martyr; and if theſe three Women were at firſt Heathens, 'tis probable they crept by ſome ſecret Paſſage into the Catacombs, where they heard the Goſpel preach'd, and were converted.

V. The ſingularity of this Matter deſerves a little pauſe and conſideration: Nor is it mere curioſity that engages me to decypher theſe Letters; for the reaſon why the Abbot Fabretti has found Chriſtianity and the praiſes of the great God in them is only, becauſe the Reputation of the Catacombs of Rome, and the Veneration of Relicks receive a terrible blow from ſome touches of Heatheniſm, which are ever and anon diſcover'd in them; and we are concern'd in the vindication of this Truth.

Theſe Letters D. M. which they fill up with the Great God, the Heathens ſo peculiarly employed to ſignify Dii Manes; that nothing but a preſſing Intereſt of Religion, ſeventeen hundred Years after, induced them to Conjecture, that they ſignifyed the Great God. But Fabretti was ſo tranſported with his prejudice, as to leave one amongſt the Chriſtian Monuments, in which the Diis Manibus is expreſs'd at length. [n]

DIIS MANIBUS
PRIVATA MATER
ASTEROPÆ FILIÆ FECIT.

VI. Father Mabillon, who could not doubt but that the D. M. ſignifyed the Dii Manes, and found an hideous medley of Religions in the Epitaph, he had Tranſcribed from the Abbot Fabretti, imagines that this was done in the firſt Ages of the Church, by ſome Body that underſtood his Chriſtianity by Halves, and had retain'd ſome dregs of his Heathen Religion: But the confuſion would ſtill be great, if ſuch ſort of Chriſtians were found in the Catacombs, inſtead of the Saints they look for; and Votaries that Sacrificed to the Gods Manes, inſtead of Martyrs that Sacrificed their lives for God. Beſides, this Epitaph inſcribed in barbarous Words, could not be of the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, but muſt be refer'd to later times. Nor is there any likelihood that the Chriſtian Cemeteries were mark'd with the numbers XL, as this muſt have been. It were better to own that they were Chriſtians not very nice, who finding a Stone fit to cover their Grave, upon which was this firſt Line, made uſe of it, without raſing out this Character of Heatheniſm. A Man of Father Mabillon's Judgment and Learning could not but know, that they did not ſtand much upon this, but commonly only turn'd the Stone, which is Chriſtian on one ſide, and Heathen on the other. We muſt not therefore miſapply this Word Spirita Sancta, and conclude that the beginning is Chriſtian as well as the end; for the Dii Manes are there confounded with the Holy Ghoſt, and Heatheniſm with Innocence acquired by Baptiſm or Confirmation.

D. M. Sacrum XL.

VII. In the third place we find in theſe Inſcriptions the word Sacrum, joyn'd with the D. M. which was ſtill the Style of the Heathens, who invoked the Dii Manes, and conſecrated their Tombs to them; but the Chriſtians never did any thing like it. We ſee alſo ſome Tombs, with a Veſſel for Libations on them; this, in conjunction with the Dii Manes, to whom the Libations were made, is a Character of Heatheniſm. Fabretti [o] in vain reads Deo Noſtro Chriſto, to God our Chriſt, becauſe there is a leg of the M that is thus confounded, D. M. His Error is manifeſt. Beſides, Libations were unknown to the Chriſtians; for they had not yet borrowed their Holy Water from the Heathens, and I am miſtaken, if ever they ſet any Veſſels of it by dead Bodies, or upon their Tombs. Tertullinus's burial place, wherein Fabretti has found the three Women Victoria, whom he dreſſes up for Chriſtians, is one of the moſt ſuſpected. Aringhus, who mention'd it, and upon whoſe Teſtimony this is grounded, bottoms himſelf only on the ſpurious acts of Saint Stephen. How is it known that theſe three Women, call'd Victory, went into the Chriſtian Aſſemblies? Conjectura tantum? And is one Conjecture ſufficient at this time of day to find out their Chriſtianity, which was unknown to all the World before? And what is this Conjecture? it is Founded upon nothing, and meer prejudice. Beſides, it is not enough to convert the Women, unleſs the Husband alſo be made a Chriſtian. For it was Teleſphorus that erected this Tomb to his Wife, who had deſerved it, bene merenti. And yet we find on it the Dii Manes, the manifeſt Character of Heatheniſm.

Laſtly, the Monogram of Jeſus Chriſt was not in uſe with the Chriſtians before Conſtantine. Some Heathens at that time made uſe of it, no wonder then that we ſo frequently find it joyned with the Dii Manes: And indeed, it is to be imagin'd, that in thoſe wretched Times, when the Perſecution obliged them to conceal the Bodies of Martyrs from the Eyes of their Perſecutors, that they were induſtrious to engrave the Cypher of Jeſus Chriſt upon their Tombs; and to inform all Comers, that theſe Tombs were Conſecrated to the great God, which was not done even when Chriſtianity prevail'd. It muſt therefore be concluded, that the Abbreviations are miſapplied, and that wherever theſe Letters D. M. S. are found, we muſt leave them to the Heathens, who conſecrated their Tombs to the Dii Manes.

VIII. 'Twas another Cuſtom of the Heathens to inſert on Medals, and Inſcriptions, ſome Syllable of a Name denoting the Perſon, or his Dignity. They only wrote AUG. TRIB. to ſignify the Auguſtus's, and the Tribunes. But then the Letters of each Syllable went only to make a Word, and they were not ſeparated to make ſo many different Words. The ſame Method was obſerved by a ſtronger Reaſon, when two entire Syllables were expreſs'd. There was perhaps only the CONOB, that made an exception to the Rule. For this Word muſt make Five, which are fill'd up with a great deal of difficulty. There is another Example taken from a Greek Inſcription, in which ΚΥΡΣΑ is divided into Κυρίῳ Σαραπιδι; but perhaps this was two words, ΚΥΡ-ΣΑ having the point expunged betwixt them. Moreover, theſe Inſtances are very rare, ſince only one can be produced in each Language. Laſtly, theſe Examples are not preciſely contain'd within the Rule; for theſe two Syllables can't make an intelligible Word; for what will you make of Conob, or Κυρσα?

IX. There is notwithſtanding, a Medal of Antoninus Caracalla, in Mr. Foucault's Cabinet [p], with theſe words upon it, Ανλονῖνον βασι, muſt we ſeparate theſe two laſt Syllables with a Learned Antiquary, and read,

Ανλονῖνον [q] βιόδωρος ἀγαπᾶ σῖλω Καφυαλῶν,

Antoninum diligit alma ceres Caphyatarum,

Ceres the nurſing Mother of the Caphyates, loves Antoninus.

[m] Fabretti, ibid. [n] Fabretti, ibid. p. 550. [o] Fabretti, ibid. 275. [p] Intendant at Caen. [q] See this Medal in the Memoirs of Arts and Sciences, March and April, 1701. p. 222, and September, October, 317.

or must we more simply understand [r] Antoninus the Emperor? whichever way you take, the difficulty is great. If of the two Syllables Βασι you make three words, you overthrow the Rule we have just laid down, and which is certain: If compleating the Word you read Emperor or King, you give a blow to another Rule which was never broken; which was, not to give this Title to the Emperors upon their Medals.

X. I pretend not to determine this Question between the Antiquaries, who controvert it with a great deal of Learning and Wit: But it is more natural to believe that the Greeks have varied as to the flattering Title of King, than as to the Rule, which they more inviolably observed than the Latins, of never separating the Letters which composed one or two Syllables: And indeed the Greeks were used to give their Princes the Title of King. The Ægyptians gave it to the Ptolomies; the Syrians to Antiochus. It was not the custom to joyn the Titles of King and Autocrator, and yet we see this done in some of their Medals. Tryphon, when he could not get himself acknowledged King of Syria by the Roman Senate, yet order'd a Medal to be struck for him with this Inscription, Τρυφωνος Αυτοκρατορος Βασιλεως.

Some Medals of Abgarus, King of Edessa, of whom we have spoken enough, had also the Title of King: It would be no wonder then that the Community, or City of Caphyia, should do the same thing for Caracalla at a time, when this Title began to be less scrupled. The Greek Historians have often called the Emperors Kings, though they could not be ignorant how odious this Title was at Rome. Herodian mentioning the same Caracalla, whose Medal we have explain'd, says, that Severus made him partaker of [s] the Kingdom as well as his Brother Geta, Zozimus [t] relating that the Gordians were expected from Africa in the Year 235. Styles them Kings. Tertullian who should have been more exact, or better inform'd, asserts, that it was not [v] lawful for the Supream Pontifex, the King of the Age to marry again. The Emperors were the Supream Pontiffs and Kings, Tertullian speaks of.

XI. Besides, they were not so exact in Medals, but that they sometimes departed from the common Rule, Father Pagi [x] has produced one of Numerianus, of which we read.

IMP. C. M. AUR. NUMERIANUS.

He has attempted to prove by it, that after the Year 198, the Title of Emperor was given to those who had neither been Tribunes nor Proconsuls, because Severus had done it in favour of Geta. But he is evidently mistaken; for the rule was observed a long while after, of reserving the Title [y] of Emperor to the Augusti, and of not giving it to the Cæsars. Hence Maximian's bitter exclamation: Must I be always Cæsar? He could not bear this Superscription upon the Letters that were written to him, but was desirous to be styled Emperor, because this Title was annext to the Supreme Dignity: Nevertheless, we see it in the Medal of Numerianus, who was not Augustus. So that the Medallists did not always follow the common Rules; but when they had a mind to flatter the Princes for whom these Monuments were made, they took the Title that was most agreeable to them; and if any Cities have done it, it must be acknowledged that the Greeks who were used to design their Princes by the Title of King, were more likely to do it than others.

XII. We find such another Monument in Trebellius Pollio. [z] The younger Valerian having been kill'd near Milan, these two Words were Engraven upon his Tomb.

VALERIANUS IMPERATOR.

It signifies little whether Trebellius Pollio was mistaken, in taking Valerian for Gallienus's Brother, whereas he was his Son, as Casaubon thought, which is not probable. It still remains true, that the Majesty or Dignity which Valerian exercised, was disputed; some maintaining that he was Cæsar, others imagining that he was made Augustus; and the third Party degrading him from both these Dignities. If he had been truly Emperor, there could have been no doubt made of it. The doubt arose from his Epitaph, in which this Title was inserted in an Honorary manner, and by Claudius's Order. Here then you see some Medals and Inscriptions with Terms not us'd in the Ages wherein they were Engraven. Another has lately been discovered upon the Mountain Fourvieres at Lyons, made in the Reign of Antoninus Pius, by Æmilius Carpus, who having been present at one of the Sacrifices call'd Taurobolium offer'd at Rome, for the prosperity of the Emperors, carried away the Blood and Head of the Bull that was Sacrificed, and building an Altar at Lyons, consecrated a Priest to attend it, and offer the like Sacrifices for the Prince's Preservation. At the beginning of the Inscription are these words.

Taurobolio [a] Matris. D. M. I. D.
Quod factum est & imperio.

MATRIS D. DEUM.

Here you see two Mothers of Gods; one was Cybele the Mother of the God's, the Great Idea; the second was Faustina, the Wife of Antoninus, who wore the Title of Mother of the Gods, not only because she was deify'd after her Death, but also because she was the Mother of Marcus Aurelius, and Lucius Verus. But that which is more important to be observed in this Inscription, is the Title of Lords and Gods, given to these Princes Dominorum Deum. 1. It was not usual to stile young Princes Gods, before they mounted the Throne, or deserved this Honour, by some important Service. But yet we find some Examples of this; and there is a Greek Medal stamp'd for Drusus and Germanicus, on which they are call'd ΝΕΟΙ ΘΕΟΙ, New Gods. 2. 'Tis still more uncommon to style Princes Domini, Lords. Augustus refused this Name, that it might be appropriated to Jupiter, and it was not commonly used to Princes, till towards the decay of the Roman Empire. Nevertheless, we find in an Inscription dug up at Lyons this Title of Lord, given M. Aurelius, and Lucius Verus. It seems too, that this was commonly practised in this City, since we find another of Antistius with these words.

Secundum mandata Impp. Dominorum NN Augg.

By order of our Lords the Emperors.

which has no ambiguity, since the word Lord is Engraved at length with all its Letters. It will be ſaid perhaps that the City of Lyons was apt to flatter Princes, ſince ſhe had erected an Altar to the Honour of the Cæſars. Aram Cæſarum. But this, inſtead of invalidating, confirms our Conjecture; for it proves that Cities and Provinces had ſome certain particular Cuſtoms for their Medals and Inſcriptions.

[r] By reading Βασίλεα Regem. ibid. [s] Herod l. 3. c. 9. Κοινωνὸς τ῀ βασιλέιας, participes regni. [t] Zozim. H. l. 1. 16. [v] Tertul. ad Uxor. l. 1. c. 7. [x] Pagi. crit. Bar. p. 112. an. 284. [y] Lactan. de Mort. Persecutor. c. 9. p. 84. and Bauldry not. ibid. [z] Treb. Pollio in Valeriano Junior. p. 175. and Gallienis. p. 181. [a] V. Memoirs for the History of Arts and Sciences. Apr. 1705. p. 652.

XIII. Should we relate the moſt extraordinary Cuſtoms, we might produce that of Ptolomy Phiſco, that is, the Gor-bellyed. 'Twas an affront offer'd to this King of Ægypt, to put his Belly upon the Medals, which made Scipio and the Roman Ambaſſadors laugh ſo heartily; and yet it was done by a Medalliſt. Laſtly, ſhould we deſcend lower, we might obſerve, that the Kings of France and Spain ought not to be call'd Auguſti, ſince this Title was that of the Roman Emperors; and yet Gregory of Tours gives it Clovis, as he had given the Title of King of the Romans, Rex Romanorum to Syagrius, againſt the Rules; becauſe he commanded at Soiſſons. But farther; we find a Medal of Recaredus King of Spain with theſe words.

VICTORIA AUG.

And Mr. Le Blanc [b] has produc'd another of Childebert with the ſame Inſcription, which did not belong to this Prince, nor could be given him but to flatter him.

You may explain how you pleaſe Antonimus's Medal; but it is more natural to leave him the Title of King, and not to ſeparate the Letters to make ſo many words of them, ſince this was not the Cuſtom of the Greeks and Latins.

XIV. Laſtly, the Heathens annex'd a Miraculous or Magical Vertue to certain Words and Letters. 'Tis ſaid, this Art was at firſt invented [c] at Epheſus; where there were Magicians to whom they brought the Poſſeſs'd, and by muttering ſome Letters or Words, they expell'd the Devil, and cured the Sick. 'Twas believed that thoſe who repeated, or carried about them thoſe Epheſian Letters, or rather Words, were always Victorious. They enchanted the Enemy, and ſo made themſelves certain of Victory. An Experiment was made of them upon a young Epheſian, who in the Olympick Games had already maſter'd thirty Combatants: The laſt, who was of Miletus, had not ſo much as the power to combat, which weakneſs made it ſuſpected that there was ſome Charm in the Caſe. They ſtript the Champion, and found the Epheſian Characters faſten'd to his Heel, and he was vanquiſh'd as ſoon as they were taken from him. The Inhabitants of Miletus did not long yield to thoſe of Epheſus; for a Famine depopulating this City, one Branchus bethought himſelf of caſting Leaves of Laurel, and marching at the Head of a Troop of Children, into whoſe Mouths he put theſe words, Cantetis pueri, Heus Hecaergon, atque Hecaergam.

The People anſwered with ſeveral barbarous words, and the Famine ceaſed.

Such ſort of Fictions or Imaginations as theſe, are found in all Nations; and we muſt not wonder to ſee them among the Greeks; for theſe People were as Superſtitious, as they were Polite. Beſides, only the credulous vulgar, were opinionated with theſe kind of Prodigies, and aſcribed them to the vertue of Characters. Philoſophers maintain'd, that there were ſome natural Myſteries in them, and that theſe barbarous Words Aſcki, Cataſki, Hex, Tetrax, Damnameus Æſion, which were thought at Epheſus to be fit for doing wonders, were ſo many Symbols, containing an important Truth. And indeed, Clemens Alexandrinus ſpeaks of a [d] Pythagorean Philoſopher who explain'd them ſo.

Theſe words ſignifyed darkneſs, light, the Earth a Quatrain, or the Year, the Sun that ſubdues every thing, and Truth: And this Symbol ſhewed, that by comparing Darkneſs with Light; the Sun with the Year; and the Earth with all its Productions, we diſcover the Ornament of things Divine.

Clemens Alexandrinus [e] admires this method of the Greeks, as of great uſe to conduct Men to the Knowledge of true Religion. It is fit for every thing; for it exerciſes the Wit; it inſtructs in a little time, and infuſes Piety. And therefore he ſought for Examples of it as far as the Scythians, who painted their Hero Anacharſis, holding his Right Hand upon his Mouth, and his Left upon his noble Parts, thereby giving a lecture of Morality. For greater care is to be had of curbing the Tongue, than the inclination to carnal Pleaſures. We have already ſeen, that if the Heathens annex'd ſome Myſteries to certain Words and Letters, the Doctors of the Chriſtian Church were taken with this method; and extoll'd the Uſe of it in Piety and Religion.

XV. However, this method is more dangerous than uſeful. Firſt, Abbreviations occaſion a great deal of obſcurity: If it be ſo difficult to ſupply the Letters that are wanting, and to fill up a Word, even when thoſe that ſtamp'd a Medal, or Engraved the Inſcription, had a deſign of indicating this Word; how can we diſlocate all the Letters of Scripture, to Compoſe ſome new Words of them, when we are not aſſured that this was the Deſign of God?

The Heathens did not diſunite the Letters of a Diſcourſe of a Book; we have already obſerved, that this was hardly ever done, when the Letters compoſed two Syllables, or an entire Word; whereas the Cabbaliſts reſpect neither the Words of God, nor his Diſcourſes, nor entire Books; on the contrary they think, that Letters ſo much the fitter to produce the Myſteries as they compoſe an Auguſt and Sacred Name, as that of Jehovah.

XVI. The Cabbaliſts juſtify themſelves by the Authority of the Heathens; for ſay they, if Men can make every Letter repreſent a Word, God who is infinitely wiſer, muſt have included ſome ſublime Truths in each Letter of his Law, which ſwarms with Myſteries. Some Chriſtians have eſpouſed this Principle. St. Jerome found ſome Myſteries in each Letter of the Hebrew Alphabet: Many have followed him in that dark Road, and others add, that if Men have very different Views in writing or pronouncing a Word; God might, and ought for a ſtronger Reaſon, to have employ'd each Word of Scripture in all the Senſes they are capable of; and we ought not only to explain whatever they ſignify with the Jews or Greeks, but the diſcovery made by this means are of the higheſt uſe.

[b] Le Blanc Treatiſe of French Coins. [c] Thence came the Epheſian Letters, that is, Magical Characters. [d] Androcides apud Clem. Alexand. Strom. l. 5. p. 568. [e] Androcides ibid. p. 559.

CHAP. XXIV.

The uſe that the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts and Chriſtian Doctors have made of Letters. St. Jerom's Alphabet.

I. AN Example of the Cabbala, taken from Geneſis. II. The Separation and Combination of Letters. A falſe Etymology of the word Maccabeus. III. The Acroſticks of the Sybills. The Subtilties of the Chriſtian Fathers upon the word Ἰχθύς, which includes the Name of Jeſus. IV. St. Jerome's Hebrew Alphabet explain'd. V. The Applauſe he gave himſelf upon that Diſcovery. VI. The abuſive Terms he finds in Semei's Malediction. VII. The Myſteries of the Name JESUS compared with thoſe of Jehovah. VIII. The Cabbaliſts change the Letters. IX. St. Jerome thereby explain'd a very obſcure Paſſage of Jeremiah. X. Sheſhach changed into Babel. XI. Examples upon which St. Jerome grounds this Change. XII. The Opinion of Modern Criticks upon Sheſhach. XIII. Sheſhach was Seſoſtris. XIV. The Application of his Story to the Prophecy. XV. St. Jerome's Fault.

I. THE Cabbaliſts change the Scripture-terms, and ſubſtitute others in their room, which have no relation to thoſe dictated by the Holy Spirit. Moſes ſays, that in the beginning God created. Theſe three words are diſplaced, to make room for three others: Inſtead of the [a] beginning they put Wiſdom; and thence conclude, that God did not create the Univerſe immediately; but that Wiſdom, one of the ten Sephiroths, was an Emanation from him, and employed by an Inſtrument, with the other Lights or Splendors in the Creation of the World. Inſtead of the word Created, they ſubſtitute the Goodneſs of God, becauſe God created the World by his infinite Goodneſs. Laſtly, By the Name of God, they underſtand Might, becauſe it is derived from a word that ſignifies Strong and Mighty; and it was by his Power that God produced the Univerſe out of Nothing. Thus, in theſe three words, in the beginning God created; they diſcover Wiſdom, which directed the Creation, Goodneſs, which was the motive to this great Work; and Power, which effected it: Which Method is of great Antiquity, ſince the firſt of theſe Explications is obſerved in the Targum of Jeruſalem; nevertheleſs it is dangerous: For by this means, Men may find in Scripture whatever they have a mind to. [b] Gaffarel ſo conceited as he was with this Art, had reaſon to ſay, that the Cherubims of the Ark were perhaps of the Figure of a Saddle, becauſe by tranſpoſing the Letters of Cherub, from whence they derive Cherab, and Cherubine, we find Rechab, which ſignifies to ride on Horſe-back, and a Saddle: or elſe they may ſay, they were like Rain, becauſe Cheraviu has a great affinity with Cherubin, and ſignifies like Rain. In the mean time, there's nothing more ridiculous.

II. They ſeparate the Letters that make up a Word, and of each Letter make another Word. They are happy when this Word happens to conſiſt of as many Letters as the firſt; for herein lies the Skill, but it is not always obſerved. Junius thought, that he had hereby diſcovered the Origine of the Name Maccabeus, which is ſo obſcure. He fancied, that the Letters, whereof this Name was compoſed, were the four initial Letters which Judas Maccabeus had inſcribed in his Standards. מ. כ. ב. י. M. C. B. I. Miccabi; and that they were to be fill'd up with four words, ſignifying, Who is equal among the Gods to thee, O Lord? This Notion has been confuted [c] by ſaying, that the Notaricon, or that part of the Cabbala, was not invented in the time of the Maccabees, and that the Romans, upon whoſe Authority Junius built, only put ſome Arithmetical Figures in their Colours, to let the Soldiers know the number of their Cohort. But theſe two Obſervations are falſe: for the Romans had ſomething more than Arithmetical Figures in their Enſigns; namely, theſe Letters, S. P. Q. R. And there were alſo ſome other Characters, denoting the Name of the Legion. 'Tis no matter, whether there were any Cabbaliſts in the time of the Maccabees; for this cuſtom of abbreviating Words, and only putting ſome Capital Letters in Inſcriptions, is of more ancient date; and therefore the Maccabees might uſe it. But I obſerve Two Things that more ſolidly overthrow this Opinion: Firſt, That Judas was call'd Maccabeus, before his raiſing of any Troops, and diſciplining them. Secondly, That this Name was given to all thoſe that ſuffer'd at that time upon the ſcore of Religion. For thoſe ſeven Martyrs were call'd Maccabees, that ſuffer'd with their Mother at Antioch; and yet they had neither Arms, nor Soldiers, nor Standards, whereon to inſert theſe Letters. 'Tis better to own our ignorance of the derivation of this Word, than to imagine Facts repugnant to [d] Hiſtory, or to ſay that theſe two Words are to be divided, one whereof ſignifies a Wound, and the other by me; both which; repreſent the Courage and Strength of Judas, as the counterfeit Joſephus ſays. Let us ſeek for another Example of the Cabbala, ſince this is unexact.

The Beginning, which is the firſt Word of Geneſis, conſiſts of ſix [e] Letters. Of this Word they make ſix others, the firſt of which begins with [f] a B, the ſecond with an R. by which means the Jews find abundance of Myſteries; they caſt an Eye upon Geneſis. They can find as many different meanings as there are Words in Hebrew beginning with a B. He diſcovers ſome new Myſteries, by joining certain Words beginning with a B, to others beginning with an R. The Combinations and Significations infinitely multiply, by taking the ſame method with the four ſucceeding Letters. The Chriſtians likewiſe find in this Word the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt.

III. The truth is, the Chriſtians have * eſpouſed this method. We find ſome Acroſticks of the Names of Jeſus Chriſt in the Sybilline Verſes, which, however ſpurious, are notwithſtanding very ancient, and were compoſed rather by a Chriſtian than a

[a] Berechit in the beginning; They put Hacacamah, Wiſdom. Bara, that is, created, denotes Goodneſs. Ælohim, or Æl, the ſtrong God, is Power. V. Menaſſe Ben Iſrael Probl. de Creatione. Probl. 13. p. 56.
[b] Gaff. Curioſitez Joüies, c. 1. p. 21. But there is a fault as to the word Rechab.
[c] Fuller Miſc. l. 2. c. 13. [d] Fuller, ibid. p. 1320. [e] בראשית Bereſchit. [f] ב ſignifies Ben, ר ſignifies Rouach.

* Ἰ χθὺς, Piſces,
Ἰ ησᾶς, Jeſus,
Χ ειςὸς, Chriſtus,
Θ εὖ, Dei,
Τ ἱὸς, Filius,
Σ ωτὴρ, Salvator.

Jewiſh

Jewiſh Cabbaliſt. It has been imagin'd, that in the firſt Century, they were commanded never to pronounce the Name of Jeſus Chriſt; but to ſupply this defect, they framed a Word of five Letters, which ſignified Fiſh; but the initiated meant by it, Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of God, the Saviour. By the help of this little Cloud, they ſo dextrouſly hid themſelves from the Heathens, as not be diſcover'd, and hereby eſcap'd Perſecution. But not to examine what was the preciſe meaning of the Fathers, and whether they borrowed this Word from the Verſes fathered upon the Sybills, as [g] Proſper ſays, 'tis certain that they ſubſtituted, in the Cabbaliſtick way, the like number of Words for that of Letters, which the word Fiſh was compoſed of. And not content with this, the Fathers annex'd ſome Myſteries and important Truths to it: [h] St. Auguſtin found the Purity of Jeſus Chriſt in it: For he is a Fiſh that lives in the midſt of Waters, or that could deſcend into the Abyſs of our Humanity without loſing his Innocence. He lived without Spot and Sin. [i] St. Paulinus ſaw Jeſus Chriſt in the Miracle of the five Loaves and two Fiſhes, who is the Fiſh of the living Water. [k] Proſper finds in it the Sufferings of Jeſus Chriſt; for he is the Fiſh dreſs'd at his Death, which feeds, and furniſhes us with excellent Remedies. All this is drawn from the Alluſion of the five Letters that make up the word Fiſh, and which may likewiſe compoſe theſe five words, Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of God, the Saviour. Laſtly, [l] Optatus of Melevis, compares this Divine Fiſh to that of Tobias, whoſe Liver expell'd Devils.

Nor is this all; for [m] Tertullian finds the Chriſtian Church in it. All the Faithful were with him. So many Fiſhes bred in the Water, and ſaved by our great Fiſh. Baptiſm is this Water, out of which there is neither Life nor Immortality. They muſt have been wonderfully taken with this Notion, ſince they have diverſified it ſo many ways, and dwelt upon it ſo long. For [n] St. Jerom commending a Man that deſired Baptiſm, tells him, that like the Son of a Fiſh, he deſires to be caſt into the Water.

IV. This is but a ſmall part of the Chriſtian Cabbala, which St. Jerom has carried a great deal higher. Firſt, The Hebrew Alphabet appear'd to him full of Myſteries, which he was not content to explain vivâ voce, to a Woman of his Acquaintance, but put them in Writing for fear ſhe ſhould forget them. In order to diſcover theſe grand Truths of the Alphabet, he divided it into ſeven parts: The firſt contains the four firſt Letters A. B. G. D. The A. ſignifies Doctrine; the B. is an [o] Houſe; the G. is Fulneſs; the D. a Table or a Gate. What is the meaning of all this? Each Letter contains a Word, and theſe four Words united together, teach us, that the Doctrine of the Houſe of God, which is the Church, is found in the fulneſs of the Divine Books. The better to underſtand it, we muſt know, that the Gate is ſometimes taken Figuratively for the firſt Page of a Book. The four following Letters ſignifie this [p] and that Life; which teaches us, that there is no Life without the knowledge of the Scriptures, which conduct us to Jeſus Chriſt. The laſt Section is ſo obſcure, that I don't underſtand it; it contains four Letters, which make theſe four Words, [q] Vocation, the Head, the Teeth, Sign, i. e. the Vocation of the Head, the Signs of the Teeth: this is very dark. St. Jerom, explains himſelf, by ſaying, That Words are articulated, and pronounced by means of the Teeth; and that by theſe Signs, that is, by theſe Words, we come to Jeſus Chriſt; who is the Head, and who conducts us to the eternal Kingdom.

V. "Tell me, I pray, cries this [r] Father and "Doctor of the Church, after this happy Diſcove-"ry; tell me what's more ſacred than this Sacra-"ment? What's more delicious than this Plea-"ſure? What Diſhes are ſo pleaſant, what Ho-"ney ſo ſweet, as the Knowledge of the Wiſdom "of God, the entring into his Cabinets, and pene-"trating into the meaning of our Creator and our "God? We'll give the Prophane leave to laugh, "whilſt we arrive to this ſpiritual Science. Let "others hunt after Wealth; let them carouſe in the "richeſt Veſſels; let them ſparkle with their Golden "Garments; let them be applauded: But as for "us, our Riches conſiſt to meditate Day and Night "upon the Law of God; to knock at a Gate that "is ſhut, to receive the Bread of the Trinity; and "with our Lord, to trample upon the Waves of "the World." Theſe Congratulations of St. Jerom to his Female-friend, upon the Myſteries of the Hebrew Alphabet, are ſo extraordinary, that I could not withſtand the Temptation of producing them, to ſhew what ſatisfaction this Father took in the Cabbala, and in the Advantages which he pretended to draw from it.

VI. The ſame Father, ſtill purſuing the Cabbaliſtick Principles, obſerved, that David repreſenting to Solomon on his Death-bed, how Shimei curſed him, made uſe of a Word [s] of five Letters: Each of theſe Letters imported an abuſive Term; ſo that Shimei, ſays St. Jerom, call'd David Adulterer, Moabite, Impious, Leprous, Abominable. Which is a freſh proof of this Father's being a grand Cabbaliſt.

VII. We have ſeen, that the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts diſcover the greateſt Myſteries in the Letters that compoſe the ineffable Name, Jehovah: But don't fancy, that the Chriſtians have been willing to yield to them in this point of Glory. The Name of JESUS is a Name above every Name; and 'twas God himſelf that gave it. It includes the Name of Jehovah, and conſequently we can't doubt of its Excellency. But obſerve farther, that Jehoſchuah is compoſed of the four Vowels which form the Name of Jehovah; which four Vowels ſignifie the eternal and ſupreme Divinity of Jeſus. He is the Jehovah. In the middle is a ſingle Conſonant, an S. ש which has no Sound unleſs you join it to a Vowel: Join it to to an A. אש Æſch, the Fire, and you find a Name of God; and JESUS came came to ſend Fire on the Earth, and what will I, if if it be already kindled? And the Holy Ghoſt deſcended on the Apoſtles in the ſhape of fiery Tongues. Beſides this S. ש compoſed of three Lines in the middle of the Name of [t] JESUS, expreſſes the Trinity of Perſons in a ſingle Eſſence. The Name of Jehovah was ineffable; but ſince JESUS was to be incarnate, and his Name declared to the Gentiles, that at the Name of JESUS every Knee ſhould bow, it was neceſſary to add a Letter to it; and what Letter more pro[g] De Prædeſtinatione, cap. 19. [h] Auguſt. de Civit. Dei, l. 18. [i] Paulin. Ep. 33. [k] Proſper. ibid.

---

[l] Optat. contra Parmen. l. 3. [m] Tertull. de Bapt. c. 1. p. 459. [n] Hieron. ad Bonoſ. Ep. 43. [o] בית Beth, Domus.
[p] He iſta, Vau & hæc, Zain hæc, Chet vita. [q] Koph Vocatio, Reſch Caput, Schin Dentes, Thau Signum.
[r] Hieron. Ep. 155. ad Paulam Urbicam, p. 1307, & 1308.
[s] The Hebrew Word is Nimreſeth, compoſed of five Letters; and each Letter makes a Word. N makes Næph, which ſignifies Adulterer; the M makes Moabite; the R makes Reſhang, Wicked or Impious; Tſad makes Tſara, Leprous; and the T Thoaba, Abominable, not only to Men, but to God. Hieron. in 3 Reg. p. 373.
[t] יהשוה Jehoſchuah, Kirker Oed. Ægyp. Gymn. Hierogl. Claſs. iv. c. 7. p. 284.

per than the S? As two [u] Authors have learnedly proved it, this is the Name that is higher than Heaven, deeper than Hell; the Enemy of Devils, that drives away Distempers, in which all the other Names of God are comprehended. Methinks I can't prove by stronger Testimonies, that the Christians have, for many Ages, doated on the Cabbala.

VIII. The Cabbalists have a second method [x] of changing Letters. I'll give it in a few words, and will insist upon it no longer than is necessary, for the explaining a Passage of the Prophet Jeremiah, which all the Commentators have been gravell'd with.

When they find in the Old Testament a word beginning with an A. א they change it, substituting the last Letter of the Alphabet, which is the T. ת among the Hebrews, and the Z in our French Versions. If the next Letter be a B. ב as in Abba, Father, they transplant another from the end of the Alphabet into its place, which is the S. ש of the Hebrews, and the Y of the French; and from this combination of Letters they make a new Word.

IX. This Method was practised in St. Jerome's time, who has left us an Example of it. But this Father, misled by the Rabbin that instructed him, or by the Authority of those he had read, pretended, that this change of the Letters was long before practised by the Prophets.

He grounded himself upon a Passage of Jeremiah, which could not be interpreted without the Cabbalistick Art. The [y] Prophet menacing the Kings, that God shall cause them to drink of the Cup of his Fury, declares, that the King of Sheshach shall drink after them; and afterwards, upon the accomplishment of this Threatning, exclaims, [z] How is Sheshach taken? and how is the Praise of the whole Earth surprized? how is Babylon become an astonishment among the Nations?

X. The Interpreters of St. Jerome's time, believed that Sheshach was the Devil, who, after he had inebriated all the Nations of the World, was to suffer, in his turn, all the Punishments which he deserved. But this Interpretation being disliked by this [a] Father, he thought he could remove the Difficulty, by the Method before observed; according to which, Sheshach is metamorphosed into Babylon. He bottoms his Conjecture upon the Ingenuity of Jeremiah, who seeing the King of Babylon besiege Jerusalem, durst not say openly, that he should one Day suffer the Punishment due to his Tyranny. But as he was a good Cabbalist, he put Sheshach instead of [b] Babel. In the word Babel, there are two B's, for which two S's are Cabbalistically substituted, and a Lamed or L instead of the Caph.

XI. St. Jerom farther enforces this Method by St. Paul's Example, who used the same cunning as Jeremiah, for writing to the Thessalonians against the Emperor, and fearing, lest by naming him, he should stir up a violent Persecution against the Christians, was contented to say in general terms, The Mystery of Iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth, will let until he be taken out of the way. Antichrist, says St. Jerom, could not come till the Roman Empire was destroyed; and, lest the Prediction of the Fall of the Empire should occasion some disturbance to the Christians, St. Paul does not name it, as Jeremiah waved the naming the King of Babylon, and only pointed him out by Sheshach, which no body but a Cabbalist could understand: This deserves some Examination.

XII. Modern Criticks think, that Sheshach was a Babylonian God; Grotius has gone so far as to say, that Meschach, one of Daniel's Collegues, borrowed his Name from hence; because the Names of the Gods were often given to Men. We find among the Assyrians a Feast of five Days continuance, which answered to the Saturnalia at Rome, which was call'd Sacea: And [c] Vossius fancies, this Feast was instituted on account of the Sacæ, a barbarous People, who had made frequent incursions into Assyria. They were repulsed into their own bounds; and the Memory of that joyful Deliverance was celebrated with a solemn Feast. But Strabo assures us, that the Sacæ, instead of being destroyed in Jeremiah's time, beat Cyrus's Army that made War upon them. Besides the Feast which the Persians celebrated with Bonfires, and publick demonstrations of Joy, did not relate to these conquered People, but to the Night. And indeed, the Persians have a Feast call'd [d] Sasa and Sadak, that is, the Night of Funeral Piles, or Fires. The People, and even Kings, divert themselves with Bonfires on the Hills and Plains. They take Wild Beasts, and Birds, tying dry Herbs to them set on fire, and so convey the Fire and Flame into the Air and Woods. And the true reason of all these Diversions, which are perform'd in the longest Night of the Year, is not to express their Joy for being delivered from the Sacæ; but that the Winter being far spent, and the Days beginning to lengthen, they hope for a more serene and finer Season. I am inform'd, that the same thing is done in some Counties in England.

XIII. I can't see how the Criticks cou'd have over-look'd this Sheshach of Jeremiah in Scripture, since he is described in so visible Characters. For the Sacred History tells us, that in [e] Reboboam's time, Sheshach, King of Ægypt, came up against Jerusalem, and took it, plundering all the Treasures of the Temple, and taking away all Solomon's golden Shields. And Josephus copying this sacred Writer, adds, that Herodotus calls this King Sesostris, and ascribes to him the Conquests of Sheshach. He was therefore a Prince call'd by the Greeks Sesostris, by the Jews Sheshach, and by the Ægyptians Sethosis. This Prince, after having ravaged Judæa, which was in his way, and made the King tributary of it, march'd on with his Army, consisting of Twelve hundred Chariots, of Sixty thousand Horse, and a greater number of Foot, into Assyria; beat the Medes and Persians; and conquer'd their Country, having first destroy'd part of its Inhabitants. He spread the Terror of his Name into all the East. Diodorus Siculus affirms, that he submitted all Asia to his command, and not only push'd his Conquests as far as Alexander, but pass'd the Ganges, penetrated into the Indies, as far as the Sea, and subdued the Scythians as far as the Tanais, at present called the Volga. Here you have the Scripture-Sheshach, who from an Hero, and a Conqueror of Asia, became a God, according to the Practice of those Times and People.

Indeed, this ambitious Prince left behind him, in all places, some Monuments of his Courage and Conquests. When he found any couragious Nations that withstood him, he caused the vital Parts of a [u] Archangelus Novoburgensis Lib. de Nomine Jesu & Reuchlinus de verbo mirifico. Kirker. ibid. p. 285.

---

[x] They call the general method Themoura, which signifies Change, and makes one of the thirteen principal Rules. And under the Themoura, they comprehend that which they call Atbatch, אתבש

[y] Jer. xxv. 26. [z] Ibid. li. 41. [a] Hieron. in Jerem. p. 620.

[b] בבל the ב is the second Letter of the Alphabet: And therefore, by taking the last but one, which is the ש, and putting the ג instead of the ל, they make ששך

[c] Vossius de Idol. l. 2. c. 22. p. 211. [d] V. Hide Historia Relig. veter. Persarum, c. 19. p. 255. [e] 1 Kings xiv. 25.

Man to be carved on the Statue, or Pillar he erected; but when they cowardly ſubmitted, he put the pudenda of a Woman with theſe Words.

Βασιλεὺς [f] βασιλέων, καὶ δεσπότης δεσποτῶν Σεσώστρις.

Seſoſtris King of Kings, Lord of Lords, Conquer'd this Country by his Arms.

XIV. There was ſeen a Statue of this Heroe, which repreſented him five Hands high, holding an Arrow in his Right Hand, and a Bow in his Left, arm'd Cap-a-pee, with theſe words Engraven on his Shoulders.

I have conquer'd this Country by my [g] Strength.

The faſtuous Titles of Lord of Lords, King of Kings, and Maſter of Maſters, make it conceivable enough, that Sheſhach ought to be rank'd with the Gods of Aſia: There is no need therefore of changing Babylon into Sheſhach, nor recurring to the Sacæ for the Explanation of the Paſſage in Jeremiah. He has repreſented Babylon by one of the falſe Gods worſhip'd there; having ſaid in another place that Bel was fallen upon his Knees; and this God was Sheſhach, or Seſoſtris, who had made himſelf Maſter of this Country in Rehoboam's Time, long before Jeremiah. It appears then that Jeremiah did not want the Aſſiſtance of the Cabbala to diſguiſe his Predictions.

XV. St. Jerome is manifeſtly miſtaken, in believing that the Prophets made uſe of it to perplex their Prophecies, and render them unintelligible to thoſe whom they threatned. However, we learn from this Father two things; one, that this part of the Cabbala was very well known in his Time; the other, that the Chriſtian Doctors, and thoſe that were look'd upon amongſt the Fathers as the moſt judicious Interpreters of Scripture, made no ſcruple to eſpouſe it.

[f] Diodor. Sicul. l. 1. p. 35.

[g] 'Tis in the Greek by my Shoulders. Herod. l. 2. c. 106.

CHAP. XXV.

Of the Alphabet of the Heavens.

I. HOW the Meſſiah and the Comforter are diſcovered by means of ſome of the Hebrew Letters. II. The Celeſtial Alphabet eſpouſed by Poſtel. III. Picus of Mirandola aſcribes it to the Jews. IV. Heaven is a Book: The Stars are Letters. V. How the Lines are made. VI. The Characters are Hebrew: The Method of Studying them. VII. The Uſefulneſs of this Science. VIII. Futurities are known by it. IX. An Apology for the Jews, concerning this Alphabet. X. Whether Origen believ'd this Alphabet true. XI. Picus of Mirandola's Problem: Whether all things are written in Heaven, to them who know how to read them. XII. This Alphabet a Fiction.

I. THE Chriſtians have made ſome farther uſes of the Alphabet. The famous Picus of Mirandola [a] maintain'd, that by the Myſtery of the Cabbala, a cloſed Mem [b] taught us the Reaſons of the Paraclete coming after the Meſſiah. The Vau [c] and the Jod teach us how Jeſus Chriſt as God, is the Principle of himſelf as Man. If you join the two A's that are in Jacob's Prophecy, the Scepter ſhall not depart from Juda, to the two A's we read in theſe words of the Proverbs, Wiſdom poſſeſs'd me from the beginning; and to other two A's in the beginning of Geneſis; the Earth was void, you'll eaſily diſcover that Jacob ſpoke of the Name of the Meſſiah; Jeſus the Nazarene [d]. Laſtly, the Name of three Letters הוא He, Vau, Aleph, given to God, not only ſhew the Myſtery of the Trinity, but alſo the poſſibility of the Incarnation; not only according to the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts; but alſo by the Method of Dionyſius the Areopagite. This Eſſay is ſufficient to manifeſt what [e] Agrippa ſaid, that theſe are the witty conceits, and the Sallies of an irregular fancy.

II. An Aſtrological and Cœleſtial Alphabet is attributed to the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts, which the Chriſtians have borrowed of them. One can't imagine any thing more poſitive than what Poſtel ſays upon it. I ſhall be reckon'd perhaps a Lyar, if I ſay that I have read in Heaven in Hebrew Characters, which Eſdras has given the Key of, whatever is in Nature; yet God and his Son are my witneſſes that I lye not; I will only add, that I have read it but implicitly.

III. Picus of Mirandola fathers this Notion on the Jewiſh Doctors; and as he had much ſtudied the Cabbaliſts, whoſe Art had dazled him, it may be imagin'd that he was not miſtaken. [f] As Aſtrologers ſee in the Heavens certain Images, from whence they draw their Conſequences; the Jewiſh Maſters have alſo their Celeſtial Alphabet, and aſſert that they diſcover in it the Elements and Characters of their Language. Agrippa [g] ſays the ſame thing; and Gaffarel [h] adds to their Teſtimony, the Authority of a great many famous Rabbins, Maimonides, Nachman, Aben Eſra, Kimki, Abravanel. One would think a Fact could not be conteſted, that was ſupported with ſo many citations.

IV. 'Tis worth while to hear what theſe Gentlemen ſay. 'Tis not impoſſible for God, who governs the Clouds as the reſt of the Creatures, to paint in them ſome ſtrokes denoting future Events. The Rain-bow which is a Sign of the Covenant made with Noah, and an aſſurance, that the World ſhould no more periſh by Water, may be at the ſame time a ſign of Grief. We may find a thouſand ſuch Hieroglyphicks in Clouds, which we might eaſily decypher, did we ſtudy them with a little care. But above the Clouds are the Stars that make ſome more legible Characters. Iſaiah ſays, that the Heavens ſhall be rolled up like a Book; but the Caph has been ill Tranſlated; for the כ ſignifies becauſe it is a Book: So that the Prophet conſider'd the Heavens as a real and true Book, which ſhould one time or other be rolled up. This Book contains Letters and Characters; it being improbable that God ſhould leave it blank, and wholly uſeleſs; and indeed Moſes ſays, that in the beginning God created the Heavens. There is a little Word in the [i] Hebrew

[a] Joh. Picus Miran. Concluſiones Cabbaliſticæ lxxi. ſecundum opinionem propriam ex ipſis Hebræorum Sapientum fundamentis Chriſtianam Religionem maxime confirmantes. p. 72.
[b] Th. 41. p. 74. [c] Th. 43. [d] Id. The. 31. 34. p. 74. [e] Agrippa de Vanit. Scient. cap. 47. [f] Picus Mir. In Aſtrolog. l. 8. c. 5. p. 443.
[g] Agrippa de occulta Philoſoph. l. 3. c. 30. [h] Strange Curioſities. c. 13. p. 279.
[i] et, את but it ſhould be read aot אות which ſignifies Sign, Character.

which is not tranſlated, which ſignifies the Letters or Characters of the Heavens.

V. We have found the Letters of the Book; let us now look for the Lines. David moſt expreſly takes notice of them in one of his Pſalms [i]; for where he ſays that the ſound of the Heavens is gone out into all Lands, it ſhould be tranſlated Line. 'Tis true the Septuagint has Tranſlated it, that the ſound of the Heavens [k] which declare the glory of God, is heard in all places; and St. Paul quoting theſe words of David, has followed them: What then were the Copies corrupted in St. Paul's, and the Seventy Interpreters Time? The difficulty is conſiderable; but not to accuſe the Jews of Infidelity, or Negligence, we may ſay that theſe Interpreters have preferr'd the Senſe to the literal Signification; and this afterwards occaſion'd ſome variation in the Hebrew Copies. Maimonides adds upon this paſſage, that David could not ſay the Heavens declare the glory of God, becauſe this [l] Word is never applied to inanimate Things; but the Reaſon is, that there are ſome intelligences that move the Heavens; that ſituate the Stars in a fit poſture to frame Letters, by which God meant to notify the Events impending over Mankind; we muſt not wonder after this, if Heaven be conſider'd as a Sacred Book: This Name is often given it by the Rabbins; and the Fathers of the Church going farther than they, have aſſerted, there are ſome Pages in it, and in theſe Pages ſome wonderful inſtructions; for thus St. Ambroſe, and St. Proſper ſpeak. Albertus Magnus added, that it was the univerſal Book. Laſtly, St. Auguſtin [m] compared Heaven to an Human Face; for as by the Motions of the Face we diſcover the inward Sentiments and Affections, ſo a great many things may be diſcover'd in the Firmament, and read by the Light of the heavenly Bodies.

VI. It would be to no purpoſe to give the Precepts of this Art; they that deſire them may [n] conſult thoſe that have a greater Faith and Experience in this matter, we will only obſerve three things, 1. That the Characters made by the Stars are Hebrew. For this is the ſacred Language, wherein God ſpeaks from Heaven, and by Heaven to Men upon Earth. 2. We muſt ſtudy this heavenly Alphabet; for the ſame Stars don't always conſtitute the ſame Letters; this depending upon the Aſpect, or declenſion of the Stars, we muſt ſometimes read from Eaſt to Weſt, and ſometimes take the contrary way. And yet ſome have made ſo conſiderable a progreſs in this Reading, that Porphyry one day going to kill himſelf, Plotinus who read his deſign in the Stars, came and diverted him from it. Flud ſo well known by his Apology for the Roſi-crucian Brethren, was ſo extraordinarily verſed in this Art, that he eaſily diſcover'd future Events; and we have already heard Poſtel's Oath, who call'd God to witneſs his Knowledge in it.

VII. Laſtly, nothing is more uſeful than this Science. Inſomuch, that Cardinal d'Ailly has obſerved, that the Planets have had ſome great influences upon the birth and Origine of Religions. Saturn was the Father of Judaiſm, and Venus the Mother of Mahometiſm, and therefore theſe People celebrate Friday, and are much given to Venery. The Chriſtian Religion [o] was born under the Aſpect of the Sun; for which reaſon we celebrate Sunday. The Pope, the Head of this Religion, lives at Rome, the City of the Sun; and the Cardinals are cloath'd in Red, which is the colour of this Luminary. In the mean time Saturn had ſome hand in the Birth of Jeſus Chriſt, for which reaſon he was melancholy; he was never ſeen to laugh, but wept ſometimes; and as Melancholy dries the Skin and Bones, Jeſus Chriſt Born under Saturn, appear'd much older than he was; and the Jews believed him to be near fifty. His Face was all over freckled, becauſe Venus was in Conjunction with Saturn. The Wiſe Men knew by their Calculations that he was to be born the 25th of December, in the 42. Year of Auguſtus, and came to Jeruſalem to worſhip him. Laſtly, by exactly tracing his Horoſcope, and reading in the Stars, Jeſus Chriſt muſt neceſſarily be crucified.

VIII. 'Tis a ſmall matter to tell what is paſt. R. Chomer, who had obſerved that Meduſa's Head, or the Stars it was made up of, had denounc'd Deſolation to Greece, becauſe they form'd a Word that ſignifies Deſolate [p], maintain'd that the two Eaſtern Empires were menaced with approaching Ruine; one of them was the Turkiſh, over which was read this Word Cak [q] which ſignifies to be ſick, weak, and beaten. By the Rules of the Cabbala we muſt caſt up the Sum of the Letters in this Word, which is MXXV. which ſhews the duration of this Empire. And by reckoning this number of Years from the Year DCXXX, wherein it began, the Ottoman Empire muſt have been deſtroy'd in the Year MDCLV. Gaffarel is commonly made the Author of this Prediction, but the Rabbin is the inventer of it, and he only the Reporter of it. He found likewiſe the other Prediction concerning the fall of the Chineſe Empire ſo obſcure, that he was not able to explain it. This is enough to give an Idea of this Science, and we need no more to diſcover its vanity. Let us add only a word of an Apology for the great Men, that are accuſed of falling into this Extravagance.

IX. A judicious and [r] impartial Critick has acquitted theſe Learned Rabbins from the Calumny which Gaffarel has caſt upon them. For he obſerves that the Citations he produces, import only that the Heavens are a Book; but it muſt not be concluded from this metaphorical Expreſſion, that all who call them ſo believe, that there are Letters in Heaven which may be read as one of Cicero's Books. Not only Maimonides and Kimki have never maintain'd ſo Chimerical an Opinion, but they have alſo ſaid things that abſolutely overthrow it. Aben Ezra [s] was ſo far from believing it, that he laught at the Aſtrologers, who ſpoke of the fall of the Stars, and attributed Influences to Lyra, and other Signs of the Zodiack. We muſt therefore confine our ſelves to ſome Rabbins of leſs Reputation, as Chomer and others, who may have borrowed this Notion from the Arabians, where Poſtel boaſts of his having learnt it.

X. We muſt juſtify the Fathers by the ſame reaſon. There is only ſome doubt concerning Origen. Sixtus Senenſis [t] accuſes him of believing that the Heavens were legible; becauſe this antient Doctor taught three Things: Firſt, that the Stars could not be the cauſe of Events, for that human Liberty would be deſtroy'd by it. 2. That however, the Stars were Signs of what was to happen to States and private Perſons. Futurity, ſaid he, [u] may be written in Heaven, as being a Book, and a great prophetick Volume. "Hence Jacob bad his Children "read in the Leaves of Heaven, what muſt be the "fate of you and your Children. And when the "Prophet Iſaiah ſays, that the Heavens ſhall be "rolled up like a Book, he meant perhaps to teach "us that the Events which God has printed in this

[i] Pſ. 19. [k] Inſtead of Koam Sonus, read Kavam Linea or Line. [l] ספר Sephar. [m] Aug. contra Man. l. 2. c. 21.
[n] Gaffarel's ſtrange Curioſities. c. 3. p. 296, &c.
[o] Cardan. Comment. in Ptolom. l. 2. Card. Ab. Alliaco apud Sixt. Senens. Bibl. Sanct. l. 6. p. 425. Gaffarel's ſtrange Curioſities.
[p] Charab. [q] כאח. [r] Buddæus Introd. ad Hiſtor. Philoſ. Hebræor. p. 337. [s] Aben Ezra apud Picum de Aſtrol. l. 8. c. 5.
[t] Sixtus Sen. Bibl. l. 5. An. 15. p. 331. [u] Origen apud Euſeb. de præd. l. 6. c. 11. p. 292.

cœleſtial

" cœleſtial Book, ſhall be entirely accompliſhed; " as the Oracles of the Prophets, which are ful- " fill'd by the Event." Laſtly, [x] Origen confeſſes, that it is difficult for Men to read in Heaven their future Deſtiny, whether good or bad; but that the Angels at leaſt have this knowledge; and that there are alſo ſome Men that acquire it, either by their Obſervations, or dealing with Devils. So that according to Origen, Heaven is a Book, a Parchment, fill'd with Characters; the Stars are ſo many Signs, which denote the Fate of private Men and Kingdoms. To read them, is above the ordinary Capacity of Men; but they may attain to it, and ſometimes do. It muſt be owned, that Origen ſpoke boldly; but yet, I believe, he look'd upon the Stars as Signs, whoſe different Aſpects noted Events: But he did not ſuppoſe, that they were ſo many Letters of the Alphabet.

XI. [y] Picus of Mirandola made it a Problem, Whether all things were written and ſpecified in the Heavens to him that was able to read them. He maintain'd alſo, that Moſes had expreſs'd all theſe Effects of the Stars by the word Light; becauſe it is Light that derives and carries all the Influences of the Heavens upon Earth. But he alter'd his Opinion, and obſerv'd, that not only theſe Characters, extoll'd by the Hebrew Doctors, were chimerical; but alſo that the Signs themſelves had not the Figures of the Names that were given them: that the Sphere of Aratus was very different from that of the Chaldeans, who confounding Libra with Scorpio, reckon but eleven Signs of the Zodiack. Aratus himſelf, who was the inventer of theſe Names, was, in the opinion of the Ancients, very ignorant in Aſtronomy.

XII. Laſtly, A Man muſt be very whimſical to think, he ſees Letters in the Heavens, and reads them, as Poſtel pretends to have done. Gaffarel had no more ſenſe, though dignified in the Church. If he did not prognoſticate the Fall of the Ottoman Empire, yet he at leaſt believed it, and proved the ſolidity of the Science by a very learned Collection. In the mean time, he had the mortification to ſurvive his Prediction, which is ſo manifeſtly falſe. 'Tis the common Fate of thoſe that take not a pretty long time for the accompliſhment of their Prophecies. They ſhould be ſo wiſe as not to run the risk of a Blow, that ſullies all their Glory, and convicts them of having been whimſical. But theſe Aſtronomers are too bigotted to their Science and Principles, to hearken to Reaſon and good Advice.

[x] Origen, ibid. p. 286.

[y] Pic. Mir. Heptaplus, c. 4. p. 51. Idem in Aſtrol. l. 8. c. 5. p. 443.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of the Numbers and Value of the Letters. Of the Uſe made of them by the Cabbaliſts, the firſt Fathers of the Church, and the Baſilidian Hereticks. The true Explication of their Abraxas.

I. THE plurality of Words eſtabliſh'd by the firſt Letter of Geneſis. II. The Virtue of the Number Fifteen. III. Myſteries found by St. Barnabas in the Number 318. The Faults of this Father. IV. Different Myſteries, which the other Fathers have found in it. V. The Myſteries of the Baſilidians in their Æons. VI. Abraxas and Abracadabra explain'd by a new Interpreter. VII. The Vanity of this new Explication. VIII. The Verity of the Satisfaction abſurdly aſcribed to the Baſilidians. IX. The only Myſtery of theſe Words conſiſts in the Number 365. X. The Greeks imagin'd the ſame thing. XI. The Ægyptians fancied the ſame of the Nile. XII. The firſt Order of Taliſmans, compoſed of barbarous Words. XIII. The ſecond Species taken from Numbers. XIV. The third from the Names of God and Angels. XV. The Chriſtians have practiſed it. XVI. The fourth kind, compoſed of Groteſk Figures. XVII. The Images of St. Peter and St. Paul, imploy'd for Taliſmans.

I. THE Hebrews uſe Letters for Numbers, like the Greeks; and the Cabbaliſts have, by this means, open'd a new Magazine of Myſteries. When they examine, for Example, whether there were more Worlds created before this, which we inhabit, they are divided. Maimonides maintains, that we ought not to admit more Words, becauſe this would introduce the Eternity of Matter. But a great many Doctors believe, that the World muſt be deſtroyed at the end of Seven thouſand Years; and therefore it is not impoſſible, but there might be another World before this which Adam and Eve have peopled. They add, that this Opinion brings no prejudice to Faith; becauſe they ſuppoſe that God created them, and that there is no eternal Matter. Laſtly, The [a] Cabbaliſts interpoſe, and decide the Queſtion by the firſt Letter of Geneſis: For Moſes commencing his Hiſtory with a B, ([b] Bereſchit) muſt neceſſarily denote by it the ſecond World. The Letter B is the Number Two. Moſes has put it in the beginning of Geneſis; and therefore he believed, that there was another World which God had created before this.

II. Nor are they content to find ſome great Myſteries in Numbers; but they, beſides, aſcribe miraculous Virtues to them. William of Moncada, who was a Jew, and had learn'd the Secret of his Father Alphrag, confeſſes, that he always wore a thin Plate of Gold, whereon was engraven the Head of a Lion, with nine Letters, which diſpoſed in three different Columns, made the Number [c] XV, which way ſoever you read them; and above were theſe two words, in the Name of God, becauſe the Name of God יה makes alſo the Number XV; and by the help of this Secret, he could make himſelf happy.

III. [d] Zonaras relates, That the Jews having attempted to make a Proſelyte of Helena, Conſtantine's Mother, this Prince appointed a Conference between their Doctors and Pope Sylveſter. The Pope had the better of the Jews, when Zambrez, one of their Doctors, ordering a Bull to be brought, pronounc'd ſome Letters, or the Name of God, in his Ear; upon which, he fell dead at his Feet: He thought this Miracle a deciſive Argument for his Religion; but the Pope anſwered it by raiſing the Beaſt to Life again; which made it appear, that the Pope and the Chriſtians knew more upon this Head than the Jewiſh Doctor. But 'tis eaſie to obſerve, that this is rather a Fable than an Hiſtory.

It is only true, that the Chriſtians have been as weak as the Jews in all theſe Particulars: And

[a] V. The Zohar, and Menaſſes Ben Iſrael, of the Creation. Probl. 12. p. 51.

[b] בראשית

[c] V. Bartolocci, B. R. t. 4. p. 250.

[d] Zonaras Annal. t. 3. p. 5.

not

not only the common sort of Christians, but also the celebrated Doctors, imprudently styled Apostles, have sought for Mysteries in Numbers.

And indeed, [e] St. Barnabas asserts, that Abraham circumcised Three hundred and eighteen of his Slaves. The Fact is false, and Moses says nothing like it. The Mystery he draws from it, falls to the ground: However, 'tis plain, that mistaking in this Circumstance, he alludes to the number of Slaves, that Abraham arm'd to rescue Lot out of the hands of the King of Sodom, who had carried him away; and here it is the Mystery appears, which is the Foundation of the Gospel, Jesus, and him crucified. For the two first Letters of the Name Jesus make eighteen, and the T, which stands for [f] 300, is the Image of the Cross, to which Jesus Christ was nailed: And thus the Greek Arithmetical Figures of three hundred and eighteen make Jesus Christ on the Cross. If St. Barnabas had been reminded, that Moses wrote in Hebrew, and that the Greek Figures and Letters he reckons by, don't agree with those of the Jews, he would have had the mortification to see his Mystery fall to pieces.

'Tis no great wonder for such a silly thing to escape a Man; but for a Doctor to call God to witness "that it is true; to give Thanks for it, "as for a Revelation; confidently to assure his "Readers, that he never said any thing truer and "more natural;" this would be inconceivable, did we not find this fault imitated by a great number of Fathers, who have out-stript Saint Barnabas.

IV. [g] Clemens Alexandrinus finds a Cube in the Number 8, with a perfect equality in all its Dimensions: The Number 10. has been judged perfect by all Nations. There is thrice 100 in the Number 300, which is also a perfect one. Clemens afterwards turns his Thoughts every way, and combines these Numbers in several manners, to draw out of them more Wonders still. Origen would not lose so fair an opportunity of finding some Mysteries. The Poet, who has attack'd the Marcionites in Verse, under Tertullian's Name, finds the Cross in the Number of Three hundred Soldiers. But instead of those that were led by Abraham, he puts those who followed Gideon, and he mounts them on Horse-back.

Hoc [h] etenim signo prædonum stravit acervos
Congressus populo Christi, sine milite multo
Tercenteno equite numerus Tau, littera Græca, Armatis facibusque & cornibus ore canentum.

Liberius, writing to the Bishops of Macedonia, to acquaint them how overjoy'd he was, that the East and West had agreed upon the Article of our Lord's Divinity, found the Council of [i] Nice represented by Abraham's 318 Servants. This was diverting the Mystery, and bringing it down from the Master to his Domesticks: But this shews, that the same Number may be applied to a great many Uses, by the help of a good Invention. I don't know whether Liberius was the first Author of this Notion; but in all appearance, it was thought to be extremely ingenious, since it has been so often repeated. [k] St. Epiphanius having collected an hundred and eighteen Scripture-Passages against the Marcionites, triumphs upon this Number, as if these Hereticks must necessarily be confounded with this Circumstance: For the 18 seem'd to proceed from the Person and Name of Jesus Christ, and his glorious Benediction is declared by the Number 100. This Passage is so obscure, that his Interpreter has not ventured to translate it; and the learned Petau has forgotten to illustrate it in his Notes. In the mean time, this shews, that St. Epiphanius found a profound Mystery in the Number of an hundred and eighteen; that he believed with the Ancients, who preceded him, that eighteen I H. represented the Name of JESUS, and that an hundred, which was a perfect Number, signified the Benediction of God, and Eternal Life; for [l] many of the Fathers believed the same. A Man must be very fond of Mysteries drawn from Numbers, to carry them so far. And yet these illustrious and admired Doctors of the Church have done it: We might add to them St. Ambrose, St. Chrysostom, St. Augustin, and the Poet Prudentius, who says, that the Knowledge of the Mystery included in the Number 318, makes a Man rich and happy.

Nos [m] esse largè Vernularum divites,
Siquid trecenti bis novenis additis
Possint, figurâ noverimus mysticâ.

V. No wonder that the Gnosticks loved Numbers, since they saw the Jews and Fathers of the Church find such Mysteries in them. In imitation of them, they discover'd their eighteen Æons in the two first Letters of the Name [n] JESUS. They maintain'd, that Jesus Christ suffer'd in the twelfth Month, and that there are twelve Hours in a Day to signifie the twelve Æons: And lastly, they believed that Jesus Christ lived thirty Years, to intimate the xxx Æons.

VI. the Abraxas of the Basilidians gives the Criticks some trouble, because they can't readily conjecture what was meant by it. Tertullian says, that they consider'd it as the supream God; but afterwards, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and the Salvation of the World by the Cross, were found in it. Interpreters pretend, that part of this Term is made up of Hebrew Words, and the other part of Greek; and observes how the P. H. who has the last attempted its [o] Explication, finds the Mystery in it.

A	Ab,	Father.
B	Ben,	Son.
P	Rouah-Hakadosh,	Holy Ghost.
A	Ἀνθρώπους,	Men.
C	Σώζων,	Saving.
A	Ἁγίῳ,	By the Holy.
Ξ	Ξύλῳ,	Wood.

We find the Trinity expres's'd, and the Mystery of the Cross design'd by the Holy Wood. By the same Method they explain Abracadabra.

---

[e] Ep. Barnabas, c. 9. p. 29.

[f] I makes 10
H ——— 8
T ——— 300
N° 318

[g] Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 6. p. 658.
[h] Apud. Tertull. Carm. ad Marc. l. 3. c. 4. p. 1065.
[i] Liberii Ep. ad Episc. Maced. apud Socr. l. 4. c. 12. p. 223.
[k] Epiph. Hær. 42. p. 374.
[l] V. Cotel. Monum. Pat. Not. p. 29.
[m] Prudent. Psychomachiæ Præf.
[n] I H. 18. } V. Iren. l. 2. c. 2. p. 190.

[o] An Explication of the Names Abraxas and Abracadabra, in the Memoirs of Arts and Sciences. Sept. & Oct. 1701. Art. 29. p. 249. Edit. Holl. de Nicholas de-Siglis.

A	Ab,	Father.
B	Ben,	Son.
P	Rouah-Hakkadoſh,	Holy Ghoſt.
A	Ἀνθρώπους,	Men.
C	Σώζων,	Saving.
A	Ἁγίῳ,	By the Holy.
Δ	Δένδρῳ,	Tree.
A	Ab,	The Father.
B	Ben,	Son.
P	Rouah-Hakkadoſh,	The Holy Ghoſt.
A	Adonai,	The Lord God is one.

We muſt not forget, that Vendelinus found three other Words in theſe three Letters, CAΔ: for he Σωτηρία ἀπὸ Νόξης, Salvation comes from Glory, and by Glory he meant the Trinity.

VII. Thus it is, that Men amuſe themſelves in finding great Myſteries where there are none. I ſhall not ſtand to obſerve, that theſe Criticks attempting to find the Trinity here mingle Hebrew Words with Greek and Latin Characters, which are very different. They are forced to return ſometimes to the Greek, ſometimes to the Hebrew, which cauſes a great confuſion; and when they have found the Greek Words, they have ſtill occaſion for a Comment to find out the Trinity in them, or to learn that three Perſons are one God. For the Glory does not ſignifie the Trinity. This Word being underſtood, makes another very uncertain Conjecture; and by ſuppoſing all we can, this Expreſſion, Salvation comes from Glory, or the Trinity, will never be juſt, nor the Myſtery evident. For 'tis from the Croſs and Shame of Jeſus Chriſt that Salvation comes. The P. H. ſuppoſes, that the Trinity of Perſons being twice expreſs'd in Abracadabra, the Valentinians had a deſign to add the Unity of God to it by an A, which ſignifies Adonai. 'Tis the leaſt concern of Hereticks to eſtabliſh the Unity of God in a Trinity of Perſons; and though they ſhould have this Deſign, the Title of Lord, or Adonai, does not expreſs that there is only one Lord God, except in the imagination of a Chriſtian full of this Doctrine, who would find it in every thing.

VIII. But theſe Interpreters ſeem not to have ſtudied the Notions of the Baſilidians, the inventers of this barbarous Term; for it was not the Style of the firſt Ages to call the Croſs the holy Wood, and the holy Tree: And though theſe Expreſſions ſhould have been uſed by the Orthodox, it can't be ſaid they were by the Baſilidians, who denied the reality of our Saviour's Sufferings. And indeed it is very ſtrange, that theſe Words of [p] St. Ireneus are forgotten. Baſilides affirms, "That Jeſus Chriſt "did not ſuffer, but that one Simon, a Cyrenian, "undertook to bear his Croſs, and that this Ægyptian was crucified for him; Jeſus Chriſt having "ſo transfigured him, that the Jews were deceived, and thought, that they were crucifying "him himſelf, whilſt he laugh'd at them under the Shape of Simon, which he had aſſum'd: "For Jeſus Chriſt being the ſpiritual and eternal "Virtue of the Father, could change his Likeneſs "as he pleaſed; and thus he aſcended into Heaven, laughing at thoſe who thought they had "him, tho' he was inviſible." 'Tis impoſſible, that Hereticks, who ſaid Jeſus Chriſt was not crucified, and boldly maintain'd, that we ought not to believe in him, as having brought from Heaven only the Appearance of a Body, and that thoſe who died for their Religion, were Martyrs of Simon the Cyrenian, ſhould be ſollicitous to inſert in their Myſteries, that Salvation came from the ſacred Tree, or holy Wood.

IX. We ought to look for nothing in this barbarous Word, but Numbers. By computing the Sum of the Greek Letters this Word is compoſed of, we find CCCLXV.

The Jewiſh Cabbaliſts believed, there were many Heavens involved one within another, like the Coats of an Onion. The firſt is infinitely active; but the Motion leſſens proportionably as they multiply, ſo that the laſt is purely paſſive. Some have confin'd their Number to ſeven, and pretend there is a like Number [q] of Earths, whereof one is higher than the other; for Judæa is ſituated upon the higheſt Earth, and Jeruſalem upon the higheſt Mountain of Judæa: but others multiply the Number of the Heavens a great deal more; and the Baſilidians did the ſame. They reckon'd, ſaith [r] St. Ireneus CCCLXV Heavens, as many as there are Days in the Year.

X. This is the only Myſtery contain'd in Abraxas; and 'tis in vain to ſeek for any others. Hereby they expreſs'd the ſupreme God, who created the CCCLXV Heavens, and divided the courſe of the Sun into Three hundred ſixty five Days; and therefore they encloſed the ſupream God, and the Name Abraxas, in the Circle of the Sun.

The Greeks found the Number CCCLXV in the Name of Meitras; for ſo it ought to be written, as they writ Neilus. They ſignified hereby the CCCLXV Days of the Year, and the Sun, who is the Father of the Day, and whom they worſhip'd as a Great God. Hence come the Inſcriptions related by [s] Gruterus, wherein he is call'd, the only God, the invincible Mithra, the holy, the invincible, the omnipotent God.

As it is believed, that the [t] Perſians alſo call'd him by a Name, which ſignifies Great, and the greateſt of all the Gods; a [u] Learned Man has obſerved, that this word ſignifies Love, Mercy, and was attributed to the Sun, becauſe he nouriſhes Mankind, and ſuſtains the Univerſe by his Love. He aſſerts alſo, that Mithra was not the true God of the Perſians, who guiltleſs of Idolatry, only conſider'd the Sun, as the moſt glorious and perfect of all Creatures. But to defend this Opinion, we muſt impugn that of all the ancient Greeks and Latins, who have affirm'd that Mithra was the Sun, who was invoked the Day before a Battel, and was ſworn by, in any ſolemn Affirmation of a Truth.

XI. The Ægyptians had the ſame Notion of the [x] Nile. They found the Number CCCLXV in the Name of this River: they call'd him King, and Auguſtus; they adored him as a beneficent Deity; they ſtyled him ſometimes the Ægyptian Jupiter:

Te [y] propter nullos Tellus tua poſtulat imbres
Arida, nec fluvio ſupplicat herba Jovi.

It ſeems, they had no need of Jupiter; becauſe this River ſupplied the Wants, and even Labour of the Husbandmen.

The Baſilidians being ſprung from Ægypt, borrowed their Abraxas thence. This was the ſupreme God they worſhip'd; and they gave him this Name, to ſhew that he had created Three hundred ſixty five Heavens, and diſtributed the courſe of the Sun into Three hundred ſixty five Days.

But afterwards ſome of theſe Hereticks made Taliſmans in imitation of the Cabbaliſts, of which they invented four principal kinds. Firſt they Engraved upon a Seal, or a thin plate of Gold certain barba-

---

[p] Iren. l. 1. c. 23. p. 119.
[q] In Zohar Menaſſe de Creat. Probl. 28. p. 107.
[r] Iren. ibid.
[s] Gruter Theſ. Inſcr. p. 34. n. 3, 5, 6.
[t] Voſſius de Idol. l. 2. c. 9. p. 178.
[u] Mether. Hyde de Relig. Perſar. c. 4. p. 107.
[x] Νεῖλος, p. 365.
[y] Tibullus.

rous

rous words, to which they annex'd ſome miraculous Vertues. The Poet Serenus, who is rank'd amongſt the Baſilidians, maintain'd, that the Word Abracadabra, written in a certain manner was a Specifick againſt an Ague.

Inſcribes [z] chartæ, quod dicitur Abracadabra,
Sæpius & ſubter repetes; ſed detrahe ſummæ
Ut magis atque magis deſint elementa figuris.
Singula, quæ ſemper rapies: & cætera figes,
Donec in anguſtum redigatur litera conum;
His lino nexis collum redimire memento.

We find another of theſe Taliſmans, which the Orthodox, in imitation of the Hereticks, have compoſed of words without any meaning. Theſe words are to be ſo written, that which way ſoever you turn the Figure, you ſtill read the ſame words.

S	A	T	O	R
A	R	E	P	O
T	E	N	E	T
O	P	E	R	A
R	O	T	A	S

XIII. Secondly the Baſilidians made ſome Taliſmans of the number of their Æons, or of the three hundred and ſixty five Heavens. The Jewiſh Cabbaliſts alſo made uſe of Numbers. Bartolocci [a] produces three of them, one whereof is the Moon with her Creſcent, having on the Reverſe the number 369, which is always found in the different Lines of the Square. On the ſecond we ſee Mercury with his Rod, and on the Reverſe the Number 260. On the third is Mars, and on the reverſe the number 175, all in Hebrew Characters.

XIV. Thirdly, of all the Cabbaliſtick Taliſmans, there is none that goes beyond that wherein they join the Name of God with thoſe of Angels, Uriel, Michael. Hereticks likewiſe imitated this Cuſtom. Fabretti [b] has produced a Seal made for the uſe of ſome Gnoſticks, having the Figure of an human Body with Six Arms: The two uppermoſt carry Torches: The middlemoſt are Arm'd with Daggers, and the laſt with Whips, with theſe words, Saba Abraxas; the God of Armies.

Mr. Germond, Auditor in the Chamber of Accounts at Paris, has another, with theſe words Ingraved upon it, Abraxas, Adonai, Jao, Sabaoth, which are thus Tranſlated, the Father, the Son, the Holy Ghoſt, ſaying Men by the Croſs is the Lord of Hoſts. But we have already overthrown this Interpretation, which goes upon a falſe preſumption; we muſt therefore Tranſlate [c] them, Lord God, Lord of Hoſts. Abraxas is the Characteriſtick Title aſcribed by the Sect to God, and the reſt are borrowed from Scripture. Upon the reverſe we read the Names of Uriel, Gabriel, Raphael, Michael; ſo that we have a proof, that the Hereticks join'd the Names of Angels to that of God in their Taliſmans.

XV. The Chriſtians have been no wiſer than the Cabbaliſts and Hereticks; for a famous Traveller [d] has diſcover'd ſuch a kind of Taliſman in the Greek Church for the City of Miletus. We ſee there the Name of God written in Greek Characters, diverſified fifteen times over, and the Letters ſo tranſpoſed, as to make a barbarous Word of it.

ΙΕΟ ΥΑΗΩ	ΙΗΩΑΕC	ΥΑΗΟΙΩΕ	ΗΟΛΙΑΩΕ	ΙΗΕΟΥΩΑ
ΑΕΗΙ	ΕΗΙΟ	ΗΙΟΥ	ΙΟΥΩ	ΟΥΩ
ΟΥΩ	ΥΩΑ	ΟΑΕ	ΑΕΗ	ΑΕΗΙ
ΑΓΙΕ	ΑΓΙΕ	ΑΓΙΕ	ΑΓΙΕ	ΑΓΙΕ
ΦΥΑΑCΟΝ	ΦΥΑΑCΟΝ	&c.	&c.	&c.
ΤΗΝ ΠΟΛΙΝ	ΤΗΝ ΠΟΛΙΝ
ΜΙΛΗCΙΩΝ	ΜΙΛΗCΙΩΝ
ΚΑΙ ΠΑΝΤΑC	ΚΑΙ ΠΑΝΤΑC
ΤΟΥC ΚΑΤΟΙ	ΤΟΥC ΚΑΤΟΙ
ΚΟΝΤΑC	ΚΟΝΤΑC
ΑΡΧΑΓΓΕΛΟΙ.	ΦΥΑΑCCΕΤΕ	ΤΗΝ ΠΟΛΙΝ	ΜΙΛΗCΙΩΝ	ΚΑΙ [illegible]ΤΑΣ ΚΑΤ

This Prayer is found with it; Holy Jehovah, preſerve the City of Miletus, and all its Inhabitants. O Archangels let the City of Miletus and all its Inhabitants be preſerved. The diſcoverer of this Monument aſcribes it to the Baſilidians; but what intereſt had theſe Hereticks to pray for the whole City of Miletus, and its Inhabitants? Did they ever Reign there? The Church wherein it was found, ſhews what ſtreſs was laid upon it for preſerving the City from the dangers that might threaten it.

XVI. Laſtly, the Baſilidians draw Figures and Groteſks upon their Taliſmans. Baronius has produced one of them having the figure of a Man arm'd with a Lance. As the Cabbaliſts and Ægyptians gave their Taliſmans an human Figure, its Body is cover'd with Characters hard to be decipher'd; but it can't be doubted, but that this belong'd to theſe antient Hereticks, ſince Abraxas may be plainly read in it. There is another of theſe Taliſmans Engraved with the Figure of a Man, whoſe Head is incircled with Rays as the beatified Saints are painted. He has ſome Wings ſpread upon his Shoulders, with theſe words upon the Reverſe, Raphael, Gabriel. 'Tis the Opinion of a Learned Man, that this [e] radiating Head, and winged Body, repreſented the Sun; and that the Baſilidians alluded to the words of Malachy, who promiſes the riſing of the Sun of Righteouſneſs with healing in his Wings; for the Name of Raphael ſignifies a God that heals, or brings health. But this was rather a mixture of Heatheniſm with Chriſtianity, and Angels with the Images of the Sun, who was painted in Ægypt with Wings. Iſaiah cries, [f] Wo to the Land ſhadowing with wings, that ſendeth Ambaſſadors by Sea, even in Veſſels of Bulruſhes. This relates to the Feaſt of Oſiris and Iſis, or the return of the Sun, whoſe Images and Repreſentations were ſent on Veſſels of Bulruſhes upon the Nile and Sea, and commonly had Wings faſtned to them. Maimonides alſo relates that the Ægyptians had a Cuſtom of laying four Women naked on their Backs upon the Ground, who lifting their Feet, pronounc'd certain words whereby Hail was ſtop'd, becauſe they had loſt the Taliſman, which ad that vertue, whereupon was a Venus lying in tha t poſture.

[z] See above p. 203. how Schiauriri was written. [a] Bartolocci Bibl. R. t. 4. p. 251. [b] Fabretti Inſcript. Ant. Explic. c. 7. p. 535.
[c] Memoirs for the Hiſtory of the Arts and Sciences. Sept. Oct. 1701. p. 297.
[d] Wheeler's Voyages. t. 2. p. 277. [e] Le Moine Diſs. de Jehova Juſt. noſtra. [f] Iſ. 18.

The Jews were more averſe to the Engraving any human Figure, becauſe of the danger of Idolatry, Nulla [g] autem effigies nulli commiſſa metallo

Forma Dei.

as Statius ſays of the Athenians, who had an Altar in the middle of their City conſecrated to Mercy without any Human Figure. 'Tis ſaid that the Arabians have imitated the Jews, and that in repreſenting the Conſtellations, they have uſed different Figures from ours. They deſcribed, for inſtance, Aquarius by a Mule loaden with two Tuns of Water, inſtead of a Man; and Gemini by two Peacocks; but both the Arabians and Cabbaliſts have at laſt laid aſide that point of nicety. We have produced the Images of Mercury and Mars cut by a Jewiſh Hand, and there was to be ſeen a Silver Taliſman, at Mr. Mareſcot's [h] Maſter of Requeſts of Paris, having the Figure of a Woman repreſenting the Sign Virgo, or rather the Moon, with theſe three Letters, אהא which ſignify theſe [i] three Words, God is one: And the Angelical Characters obſervable in this Taliſman, as in Solomon's Clavicula, don't Authorize our denying it to the Jews; for on the contrary, we find them often inſerting the Names of Angels.

XVII. The Taliſman made publick by Mr. Sponde can't be attributed to the Gnoſticks, ſince we find the Images of St. Peter and St. Paul upon it; we muſt therefore acknowledge that the Chriſtians have followed the Cabbaliſts and Hereticks in all their Methods. The Term Abraxas upon the Reverſe, is no Argument that a Chriſtian did not make uſe of this Amulet. They have copied the Hereticks even in their Characteriſtick Terms, when they have fancied ſome Vertue annex'd to them. And thus many have made trial of the Remedy Abracadabra. It is not certain that the Inventer of it was an Heretick; only he was a Phyſitian, and a bad Chriſtian. 'Tis imagined, that they who had theſe Images of the Apoſtles, had a reſpect for them; and leaſt they ſhould diſparage them, inſcribed the Abraxas upon the Reverſe; as if People who employ'd an Image for the playing a trick of Magick, and put the barbarous Word on the Reverſe of a Medal, ſhould not dare to inſcribe it round theſe ſacred Heads. Don't we find Men in St. Chryſoſtom's Time, annexing a Vertue to ſome Words of St. John's Goſpel? And if they did not reſpect the Word, nor the Maſter, how is it likely that they ſhould reſpect the Image of his Diſciples? They that employed theſe Heads of the Apoſtles, were ignorant Chriſtians, or doaters on Magick, fancying, that they could perform Miracles by it; and they put the Characteriſtick Term of Amulets upon the Reverſe, according to the uſual Cuſtom. In ſhort, has not [k] Wierius given us a deſcription of the manner how the Chriſtians exerciſed Lightning and Thunder, Hail and Tempeſts? They took three Hail Stones, and threw them into the Fire in the Name of the Trinity; they repeated twice or thrice the Lord's Prayer, and two or three Chapters of Saint John's Goſpel; after which they made the Sign of the Croſs, againſt the Cloud, and the Thunder, drawing it on the Ground towards the four points of the World, and then the Exorciſt thrice pronounc'd theſe words, The Word was made Fleſh, Verbum caro factum eſt; and adding as often, Let this Tempeſt fly, fugiet tempeſtas iſta, and it immediately ceaſed: Here we have whatever is moſt Sacred in Religion; the Trinity, the Word, the Lord's Prayer, the Goſpel of St. John, the Exorciſm, the Sign of the Croſs; God knows what effect all theſe Ingredients produced. What then do People think of, that maintain, that theſe Chriſtians have had ſuch reſpect to the Heads of St. Peter and St. Paul, as not to dare to Engrave Abraxas about them? And that out of a pious Veneration for the Figures of the Apoſtles, they cut it on the Reverſe of the Medal. A Man muſt be ſtrangely bigotted to Images, and think a mighty reſpect is due to them, to talk at this rate.

[g] Stat. Theb. l. 12.
[h] Gaffarel's Curioſities. c. 7. p. 176.
[i] Or elſe God; his Name is one Æl Haſchem achad. Gaff. Ibid.
[k] Wierius de præſtigiis Dæmonum. l. 4.

CHAP. XXVII.

The Cabbaliſtick Sephiroths compared with the Valentinian Æons. An Explication of theſe Æons, and the deſign of the Hereticks.

I. THE laſt part of the Cabbala. II. Baſilides and Valentinus were Ægyptians. III. They derived their Cabbala from the Jews. St. Ignatius corrected, explain'd. IV. St. Irenæus confirms it. V. An Amulet of the Baſilidians publiſh'd by Fabretti. VI. Its Explication. VII. The general deſign of the Hereticks. VIII. An Explication of the two firſt Æons. IX. The Plan that God lays down: The third and fourth Æons. X. The Creation of the World. XI. Curioſity puniſh'd: The production of three Creatures. XII. The ſecond claſs of Æons. XIII. The Word Æons compared with the Sephiroths: Its Origine. XIV. The Æons were not the Attributes of God. XV. The Æons and Sephiroths are the Emanations of the Deity. XVI. The Marriages of the Æons and Sephiroths. XVII. Syneſius's conformity with the Cabbaliſts. XVIII. How the Cabbaliſts expreſs the ineffable Majeſty of God. XIX. Several Æons compared with the Sephiroths. XX. The Origine of the Error of the Cabbaliſts. XXI. Their common principles concerning the Nature and Revolutions of Souls. XXII. Concerning the Sun. XXIII. Concerning the Cauſe of Evil. XXIV. The Difference between the Gnoſticks and Cabbaliſts. XXV. The Apology of theſe Hereticks. XXVI. The Defects of their Method.

I. THE firſt part of the Cabbala gave riſe to the reſt: For when a Man is perſuaded, that the Holy Pen-men concluded ſome great Myſteries under their Expreſſions, and that there are ſome profound Truths conceal'd under the ſimpleſt Words and Letters, he takes the ſame liberty as they; and as Origen made uſe of St. Paul's Authority, to turn the whole Scripture into Allegory, the Jews and Hereticks conceited with their Cabbala, thought that they might conceal the Creation of the World, and the Redemption of Mankind under ſome particular Words, whoſe meaning was only underſtood, by Perſons that were initiated, or more enlightned than others; and therefore they gave themſelves the Name of Underſtanders, or Gnoſticks.

II. All this while, this Contagion was derived from Ægypt; for as Philo and the Therapeutes had there particularly ſtudied the Allegories of Scripture, and Origen in Chriſtianity, had carried this Study to the greateſt extreme; ſo it was this Country that produced the Baſilidians and Valentinians, thoſe famous Cabbaliſts of the firſt Centuries. Baſilides, the Founder of one of theſe Sects, was an Ægyptian Born; and there it was that he ſpread his Errors in the Reign of Adrian. St. Epiphanius ſays, that it was unknown in his Days, of what Country Valentinus was; he only gueſs'd that he was a Phrebonite. There is a corruption in the Text, which Petau has judiciouſly Corrected. Valentinus was of Pharbæbita, an Epiſcopal City of Ægypt, whereof Arbelion the Biſhop ſubſcribed to the Council of Nice. This City was ſituated in the ſecond Auguſtamnick, which Name was given to the Province, becauſe it ran along the Nile, as far as Arabia Petræa. So that Valentinus was born in Ægypt on the Peluſian Coaſt. He left his Country early, to go Study at Alexandria; where, as there were abundance of Jews, Philo's Admirers, who had carried the Study of the Cabbala to a great heighth; he borrowed a part of their Principles, which he afterwards ſucceſsfully diſperſed through all Ægypt. He boaſted of being the Diſciple of Theudas, St. Paul's Friend. This Theudas might be a Jew, who had made a compound of Chriſtianity and his Old Religion, as was Cuſtomary enough at that time; and pretended to have taken from St. Paul his myſtical Explications of Scripture.

III. 'Tis ſo true that the Hereticks derived their Cabbala from the Jews, and Ægypt, that St. Ignatius ſpeaking of the Antient Gnoſticks, gave them a Jewiſh Origine. This Father [a] exhorts the Chriſtians not to ſuffer themſelves to be ſeduced by ſtrange Doctrines, and uſeleſs Fables; for if we live ſtill according to the Law and Manner of the Jews [b] we own that we have not received Grace. He imputes the invention of Fables and ſtrange Doctrines to the Jews, which ought to be avoided to preſerve our Chriſtianity. He afterwards ſhews what theſe Fables were, which were exactly thoſe of the Valentinians, who made the word to proceed from ſilence. Believe them, ſaid he, that there is but one God who manifeſted himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, who is the word Eternal; who did not proceed from Silence. This Paſſage is hard to be underſtood; and ſome chuſe rather to make this Author ſay a ſilly thing, than to own that he alluded to the ſilence and Sige of the Valentinians [c]. But now would not this be an handſome alluſion of this Doctor of the Church, if he ſaid, that Jeſus Chriſt is the word Eternal? but he did not proceed from ſilence, as common Speech, which is never heard, but when ſilence is broken.

Quid [d] me alta ſilentia cogis
Rumpere, & obductum verbis vulgare dolorem?

They introduce other Authors, that have made as inſipid Alluſions, and rob Valentinus of the invention of his Hereſies, to father them upon others. Laſtly, they go ſo far as to ſay, that this Paſſage is Surreptitious. In the mean time, ſince Valentinus made the Word to proceed from ſilence, and that nothing is more notorious in the Sect than the Sige, it ſtands to reaſon that Ignatius alluded to this Error; and they could not avoid ſeeing it, were not they ſtrongly prepoſſeſſed in favour of the Epiſtles that go under this antient Doctor's Name.

IV. It is of little moment, whether theſe Epiſtles be real, or fictitious; ſince it will ſtill be true that they were written by an antient Author, who knew the Extraction of the Valentinians, and informs us that they had drawn their ſtrange Doctrines, uſeleſs Fables, and their Generation of Æons, from the Jews. And indeed the ſame Author elſewhere repeating the ſame things, adds to them the infinite Generations, and the Jewiſh pride; for theſe later words are ſtill read in ſome Copies, tho' they are expunged from many: And not to examine what Hand writ them, it evidently appears that the deſign of theſe Writers was to confound the Valentinians with the Jews; becauſe the Cabbala of the one, was the Off-ſpring of the Cabbala of the other. St. Ireneus [e] who had ſtudied theſe antient Hereſies, aſſerts alſo, that Baſilides only exalted this God of the Jews, or their Prince above all the reſt, in order to pleaſe his Brethren, and give the preference to the Jewiſh Nation, before all the reſt of the World. Ireneus therefore believed Baſilides to be a Jew, or that he aſſociated with them in their Doctrines.

V. 'Tis ſo plain, that the Chriſtian Cabbaliſts derived their Myſteries from the Jews, that we find ſome Hebrew words inſerted in them. Abbot Fabretti [f] explaining ſome antient Inſcriptions, has produced an Amulet of theſe Hereticks, wherein we ſee a Myſterious Figure. Under the Feet of this Symbol are the Moon and Stars. A Serpent biting his Tail ſurrounds the Medal, and round about are theſe words.

Ιαὼ ἀδωναὶ ελωαὶ Αβραξας.

with ſome other terms that ſeem to be barbarous. Upon the Reverſe is an Anubis, with a kind of St. Andrew's Croſs upon his Breaſt. His Head is incircled with Rays. He holds a Serpent in his Right Hand, having a Ring hanging on his Left with the Letter T. There are alſo many words, none of which are decipher'd beſides Abracapei.

VI. There's not a ſingle word in theſe Figures, but is pregnant with ſome Myſtery; but it would be loſs of time to attempt to fathom them, and we ſhould always make random gueſſes, ſince theſe Symbols depended on the wit and fancy of the Inventer, who endeavour'd to diſguiſe under them the Myſteries of his Sect. The deſign here was to repreſent the Creation of the World, the Supremacy of God, who commands the Stars, and his Eternity ſignify'd by the Serpent biting his Tail. But not to dive farther into this Myſtery, let it be obſerved, that theſe antient Hereticks borrowed the Names they beſtowed on God, of the Jews; and to render them more barbarous and unintelligible to the People, wrote theſe Hebrew Names in Greek Characters, which indeed are thoſe of Jehovah, Adonai, and Ælohim, the common Scripture Appellatives of God, the eternal, the Lord, our God. The Jewiſh Cabbaliſts fancied, that the Name of God was more apt to produce certain miraculous Effects: And therefore not daring to conteſt the Miracles of our Lord, they ſaid he ſtole the ineffable Name of God, which

[a] Ignat. Epiſt. ad Magnes. c. 8. p. 19.

[b] This paſſage is confuſed: It is in the Greek κατὰ νόμον Ιυδαισμὸν. Some correct it Ιυδαικὸν; others entirely leave out the Word, becauſe it was added by thoſe that thought Judaiſm would not be underſtood by the word Law. Others will have it read νόμον Ιυδαισμῦ, the Law of Judaiſm. But may not we correct the paſſage thus, νόμον καὶ Ιυδαισμὸν, according to the Law and Judaiſm. For there was a difference between the Law, and the manner of the Jews living in Ignatius's Time, or rather of the Hereticks, who mingled Judaiſm with the Chriſtian Religion.

[c] Pearſon Vindic. Ign. c. 4. p. 355.

[d] Virg.

[e] Iren. l. 1. c. 23. p. 119.

[f] Fabretti Inſcript. Antiquar. Explicatio Romæ. An. 1699. p. 536.

was choicely preſerved in the Temple. Beſides, they annex'd to the Hebrew Tongue an Efficacy and Vertue, which all others wanted: And, therefore, the Baſilidians imitated them, and introduced the Names of God into their Emblems. They inſerted likewiſe the Names of Angels, after the manner of the Jews, who aſcrib'd a great Power to celeſtial Intelligences, and imagined different Titles to diſtinguiſh them. The barbarous Terms of Hereticks, commonly make the Readers ſtare; but they were commonly borrowed from the Hebrew Tongue, which is a confirmation of our Aſſertion, that the one is tranſcribed from the other. 'Tis true, that they ſometimes intermix'd ſome Ægyptian Terms, and ſometimes corrupted the Hebrew; but this but ſeldom happen'd.

VII. But not to dwell upon theſe Reflexions; let us obſerve the correſpondence of Opinions, and Method of the Valentinians and Jewiſh Cabbaliſts. In order to make this more evident, we'll firſt give a general Idea of their Deſign, and afterwards enter into a nicer Explication of Particulars. As we are upon an obſcure and difficult Subject, we muſt leave nothing unobſerv'd, not only to explain it, but to make it intelligible to thoſe who are not initiated in theſe Myſteries, and who have often read Irenæus and Epiphanius, without diſcovering the tendency of the Errors, which they have mention'd, and confuted.

The general purport of the Cabbaliſts and Gnoſticks, was myſtically to repreſent the manner of God's creating the Univerſe: but theſe latter went farther; explaining alſo the Work of the Redemption, of which the others had hardly any Idea, tho' moſt expreſly manifeſted to them.

VIII. The Gnoſticks conceived the ſupreme Being as an inacceſſible Majeſty, which no body could ſound or fathom; which therefore they ſtyl'd the [r] Profundity. And, indeed, it is an Abyſs which totally abſorbs a Man that attempts to dive into it. This ſupreme Being forms his Deſigns in a ſecret and hidden manner, who has aſcended into Heaven, and who has been the Counſellor of the Almighty. And this was what they expreſs'd by [s] Silence, which was the ſecond of the Æons.

IX. God having reſolved the Creation of the World, formed the Idea of it; He drew the Plan in his Mind, which he afterwards executed: but as the [s] Picture can never come up to the Original, the World, that was faſhion'd by the firſt Model of God, was inferior to Underſtanding and Truth. Theſe two Æons therefore ſignified the Plan and Project which God had form'd in his Mind for the creation of the Univerſe.

X. From Underſtanding and Truth, proceeded the Word and Life. By which they meaned, that God created the World, and gave Being, Life, and Motion, to the Creatures, by his Word: And hence proceeded a fourth Marriage between Man and the Church. They therefore comprehended the Creation of the World under theſe Terms, Profundity, Silence, Underſtanding, Truth, Word, Life, Man, and the Church. They meant, that God inhabits an inacceſſible Light, that he had drawn the Plan of the World in his Mind, which he executed by the Word, for the ſake of Man and the Church. This is the Explication of the eight firſt Æons, whereof they made four Couples, or Marriages; as we have ſeen the Cabbaliſts give Wives to the Little, and Long Face.

XI. Afterwards they were more particular in their Accounts of the production of the Creatures. Wiſdom was very deſirous to ſee her Father; but approaching too near him, ſhe narrowly eſcaped being abſorb'd by his Luſtre: By good fortune, Horus ſtrip'd her by the way, and diverted her Deſign. By which they intimated, that we muſt not attempt to pry into the Deity, nor carry our Curioſity out of the bounds preſcribed by him. The raſhneſs of the Angels occaſioned their downfall, and had lamentable Effects. But indeed, Wiſdom being impregnated, or puniſh'd for her deſire of ſeeing her Father, brought forth as ſhapeleſs lumpiſh Matter, full of ignorance, which they term Achamoth; a Word corrupted from the Hebrew. This wretched Woman gave her ſelf up to Tears and Grief; but for all that, contributed to the production of the World. Matter and Earth were the reſult of her Tremblings, and Water was the product of her Fear and Tears. Chriſt coming to comfort her, gave birth to the Soul of the World; ſhe laugh'd, and from her Laughter iſſued Light, and from Light proceeded three ſorts of Subſtances. The ſpiritual, which are good, exempt from Sin; the animal, which are capable of Good and Evil, of Happineſs and Miſery; and laſtly, the material. In the mean time, that the ſame Misfortune which happen'd to Wiſdom might not fall upon the other Æons, God ſent Chriſt to them, to teach them, that they ought not to penetrate too far into the Nature of God, but keep modeſtly within the bounds of their Duty. It farther appears by theſe myſtical Expreſſions, that they deſign'd to explain how the Matter of Water and Earth were produced, and that they diſtinguiſh'd in Man the Body which is material, the Animal Spirits, and the Soul. They imagin'd a Soul of the World, which govern'd it, after it had produced it. But this Soul was called Achamoth, that is, the Wiſdom of God, becauſe 'tis this Wiſdom indeed, which governs the Univerſe.

XII. Laſtly, The Valentinians multiplied theſe Æons up to thirty; but 'tis eaſie to obſerve, that the ſecond Claſs, conſiſting of Ten, contains the Perfections and Powers of God; his Self exiſtence, his Unity, his Immutability, his Beatitude; and the reſt reſpect Man, as Faith, Hope, Charity, Wiſdom and Felicity.

XIII. The Æons of the Gnoſticks ſignified the Perfections and Attributes of the Deity, which were derived from one another. The Cabbaliſts gave them another Name; but at the bottom, they were the ſame Attributes which they call'd Splendors, or Sephiroths. It would be hard to conjecture the reaſon of the Gnoſticks preferring the Title of Æons, or Ages, to all others: I can only ſay, that this Word was à la mode, at the time that theſe Hereticks appear'd. For Sanchoniathan affirms, that Colpia and his Wife begat Æon, or the Age, who taught others to ſeek their Suſtenance in Trees. Æon therefore was reputed the firſt Product of the Deity; and as this Term was common among the Phœnicians and Ægyptians, 'tis no wonder that the Hereticks of this Country ſhould make uſe of it. Indeed, every body is now ſatisfied, that this Work of Sanchoniathon is ſpurious. [u] Cyril of Alexandria imagin'd, that Joſephus was the Author of the Greek Verſion he had read; but he is palpably miſtaken. He miſtook Joſephus for Philo, and Philo the Jew for Philo Biblius: And the truth is, it was this laſt Writer who put Sanchoniathon's Name to his Piece, and compoſed it at the end of the firſt Century, or beginning of the ſecond of the Chriſtian Church; ſo that the Gnoſticks might have borrowed their Æons from it. They prefer'd alſo the Number Thirty before Ten, as believing it the more perfect; and therefore they maintain'd, that the Moon perform'd her courſe in thirty Days. And they divided the Hour into thirty Parts, to equal them with the Number of their Æons. We ſee alſo by ſome Inſcriptions, that the Romans divided their Hours into many Scruples:

[r] Bythos. [s] Siege. [s] Valentinus apud Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 4. p. 509.
[u] Cyrill. contra Julian. l. 6. t. 6. p. 205.

VIXIT H. IV. SCRUPULOS VII.

but they reckon'd but Twenty four. Beſides, the Gnoſticks by multiplying their Æons to thirty, more eaſily comprehended in this Number the Perfections and Attributes of the Deity, than in the ten Sephiroths.

XIV. The Gnoſticks made the Æons ſo many emanations of God, and then turn'd them into Perſons. The Cabbaliſts did the like with their Sephiroths. Hence the Chriſtians commonly find in the Sephiroths the Perſons of the Trinity, which the Cabbaliſts never thought of; and the others juſtifie themſelves by the Authority of the holy Writers, who have given Hands and Feet to God. By this means, the obſcurity of both their Writings is increas'd: for as they attribute to the Perfections of God, the Power of Creating, Acting, Speaking, 'tis commonly forgotten that this is only metaphorical, and nothing is meant but the Divine Mercy, Wiſdom, or Power. Tertullian was ſo ſenſibly miſled by it, as to accuſe Valentinus of owning many Gods, though he worſhip'd but one: for he took the greateſt part of the Æons, who were made the Authors of ſo extraordinary things, for ſo many Gods.

XV. However, it muſt be own'd, that Tertullian's Error was ſo much the more natural, becauſe, altho' the Gnoſticks conſider'd their Æons as the Perfections of the Deity, yet they made them ſo many emanations from it; which ſeems neceſſarily to import a real Exiſtence diſtinct from the ſupreme Being; but they had [x] borrowed this Idea from the Cabbaliſts, who diſpute ſtill, at this day, concerning the manner of the emanations and ſubſiſtence of the Sephiroths. Indeed, ſome follow the Opinion of Avicenna, who taught, that the Power of God is added to his Eſſence, and ſubſiſts out of it, which all the Syrian Mahometans have eſpouſed. Some diſtinguiſh the Sephiroths from the Divine Eſſence; but yet look upon them as emanations ſtrictly united to it; almoſt as the Rays are to the Sun, the Flame to the Coal, or the laſt point of a Line to the firſt. But others make theſe ſame Sephiroths to be Platonical Ideas. Laſtly, Some ſay with Pythagoras, that the Æons are Powers diſtinct from God, like the Angels, which are pair'd together. We find the ſame difference of Opinions among the Gnoſticks: for ſome of them will have their Æons to be the Model which God form'd of all the Creatures, which he deſign'd to produce; and others aſcribe to them, ſome Motions and Actions that ſeem to import a real Exiſtence; or conſider them as Emanations, proceeding from the firſt point of the Deity. A learned Man [y] is of opinion, that they borrowed their Æons from Pythagoras, who conſider'd them as Powers like unto our Angels.

XVI. 'Twas farther a common Principle with the Hereticks and Jewiſh Cabbaliſts, to match their Æons and Sephiroths by pairs, in a kind of Marriage: The Malcouth, or Kingdom, is the laſt of the ten Sephiroths; and this Kingdom is the Church, which, [z] in the effuſion of Dew, cloaths her ſelf with the Vertues of the Saints, and dreſſes her ſelf up with them, like a Bride: And thus adorn'd, ſhe goes to ſollicit her Husband Tiphereth, to pour his Influences upon her. Here you have a Marriage between the Tiphereth and the Malcouth; and the ſame Author aſſerts farther, that the Sephiroth of Malcouth is the Congregation of Iſrael; good Works, ſpiritual Intentions and Prayers, aſcend to this Sephiroth, who decking her ſelf up with them, preſents her ſelf to her Husband Tiphereth. Philo Biblius, of Phenician Extraction, who took from the Cabbaliſts rather than Moſes, what he has ſaid of the Jews, and the Creation of the World, and who writ in Adrian's Reign; coupled the different Beings that had contributed to the Creation of the World: For the Æon, before-mention'd, was the Off-ſpring of the Wind Colpia, and of his Wife Baau. The Bohu, whom the Cabbaliſts had made the Wife of the Wind, was the Chaos, upon which the Wind had blown; the Wind, her Husband, denoted the Holy Spirit, which had brooded over the Waters, to make them fruitful. For the ſame Word that Moſes employed to ſignifie the Spirit, ſignifies alſo the Wind. No wonder then, that the Valentinian Doctors followed theſe Ideas, that were at that time very common, and thus match'd their Æons.

XVII. What is more ſurpriſing, is, that the Chriſtians have imitated this Language. The truth is, Syneſius has come very near the Valentinians; and if his words are to be taken literally, he muſt be reckon'd amongſt Hereticks inſtead of the Doctors of the Church. 1. His myſtical Wit conſiders God as an [a] ineffable Profundity. Here we find the Valentinian Bythos well expreſs'd. 2. He ſeems to make many Gods, which theſe Hereticks are accuſed of; for he ſays, it is not lawful even for [b] the Gods to behold the Deity: He adds, in praiſe of the Father, that he is above the Gods, and that they received their Being from him. What are theſe Gods, unleſs they be the Son and Holy Ghoſt? 3. Whereas the Valentinians married their Æons; Syneſius makes God Male and Female, Fœmina & Mas. Orpheus had the ſame Notion, which Lactantius upbraids him with, as one of the greateſt Abſurdities that was ever ſpoken: "To whom would you "[c] have God united, ſince he was alone? Did he, "who is Omnipotent, want the Society of any "other, to create? Shall we be obliged to ſay "with Orpheus, that God was Male and Female, "becauſe he could not generate, unleſs he had both "Sexes." 4. Syneſius conſiders Wiſdom as the Creatrix and Midwife of all [d] things: 'Tis ſhe that begets the Son as well as other Creatures. Laſtly, He calls this Wiſdom, the fruitful Counſel, the middle Principle, the center of the Father, the center of the Son: She [e] is the Mother, and Siſter, and Daughter, and Midwife: The Father willing to diffuſe himſelf in the Son, the Effuſion met with the Semen, and kept the middle.

We find in the Verſes of this Chriſtian Poet, not only the Terms of the Valentinians, Wiſdom, dreſs'd up into a Woman, and a Midwife; but the Deity, Male and Female. I don't think, that he dealt with theſe Hereticks, but having been an Heathen, and living in Ægypt, where the Cabbaliſtick Language was ſtill in great Repute, he borrowed theſe myſtical Expreſſions, which are erroneous, when literally taken. But to return to the other Cabbaliſts.

XVIII. Their Correſpondence becomes more perſpicuous, as we enter farther into the Particulars of their Opinions. The Profundity, or Bythos of the Valentinians, is the ſame with the Or and Enſoph of the Cabbaliſts; which they ſo call'd from being [x] V. Menaſſes de Creat. Prob. 28. p. 105.

[z] A Cabbaliſtick Book, ſo called.
[b] He ſpeaks alſo of Hyle, v. 264. Εἰς ζόφον ὕλας. In tenebris Hylæ, idem, v. 164. Ἐπεχεῖνα θεῶν. Superans Deos, idem, ver. 169. Ὀχεύσῃ δὲ θεῶν. Originem præbens Diis. idem. ver. 187. Θῆλυ καὶ ἄῤῥεν. Fœmina & mas.
[c] Lactant. Inſtit. l. 4. c. 8. p. 370.
[y] Gale's Court of the Gentiles, p. 2. l. 2. c. 8. p. 188.
[a] Syneſ. Hym. 3. Ver. 190. Βυθὸν ἀῤῥῆτον. Profunditatem ineffabilem.
[d] Syneſ. ibid. p. 323.
[e] Id. Hom. 4. v. 97. to the 111. p. 334, and 335.

a profound impenetrable Light. It is infinite, and inconceivable; or as Syneſius, tho' a Chriſtian, ſaid, the Gods themſelves can't behold theſe Torches, and theſe Fires.

Ἄγνευε· θέμις ἐστὶν ἀθρεῖν
Ἐπὶ σοὶς πυρσοῖς
Θείμις ἐσθλὴ Θεοῖς.

XIX. The Valentinians ſaid, that Man was made by the Model of [e] another Man. They aſſerted, that Adam having been form'd by the Image of a Prototype, made the Angels tremble by it; who, out of jealouſie and fear, ſpeedily deſtroyed their own Work. 'Tis eaſie to perceive here, the Adam Kadmon of the Cabbaliſts. This firſt Adam is the Prototype of the ſecond. The celeſtial Adam is a great World, and the firſt of all Beings; as the terreſtrial Adam is a little World, and the firſt of humane Race. That Dunamis, or Power, to which the Gnoſticks aſcribed ſo great Effects, is Might, one of the ten Sephiroths, which would have conſumed the Univerſe; becauſe ſhe is joined with Juſtice; had not Magnificence, or Mercy, which is on the other hand, prevented it. By which they meant, that all would go to ruine, if God only exerciſed his Power and Juſtice; but that Mercy temperates his Acts, which would deſtroy Mankind. Laſtly, The Church concludes the firſt Claſs of the Gnoſtick Æons; and the Kingdom, which is the Congregation of Iſrael, is the laſt of the Sephiroths, becauſe it is for the ſake of Man, and the Church, that God created all things.

XX. The Hereticks and Cabbaliſts bogled all at the ſame Difficulty. Neither of them could comprehend, how God, who is at ſuch an infinite diſtance from Man, ſhould create him immediately himſelf: And, therefore, they fancied [h] many Emanations of the Deity ſtill deſcending one below another; and it was to theſe Intelligences, that they aſcribed the Creation of this lower World. We have already intimated, that the Valentinians affirm'd, that Man was form'd by the Angels, and ſome particular Vertues. Thus the Cabbaliſts made a ſucceſſion of Sephiroths, or Emanations inferior to one another, till they came down to a Principle that made the World. The Gnoſticks ſtyl'd it their Demiourgos, a Word employ'd alſo by Syneſius, to expreſs the Author of the World. The Cabbaliſts call it their Sandolphon, which is the Soul of the World. More, who was ſo well verſed in this Science, thought that the Soul of Nature was called Metatron: but he underſtood afterwards, that this latter was the Prince of Angels, and that the other is truly the Soul of Nature.

XXI. The Gnoſticks were accuſed of imagining three ſorts of Men; one whereof was Animal, that he might reſemble the Demiourgos that created him. He was afterwards cloath'd with a Body, as with a Garment; and afterwards, Wiſdom gave him ſome grains of her Light, which made him ſpiritual. This ſeems to be St. Paul's Doctrine a little diſguiſed; for he ſpeaks of the Body, Mind and Soul, which ought to be preſerved pure. [i] St. Ireneus relates the thing a little otherwiſe: for, according to him, the Angels bethought themſelves of making Man in their Similitude; but when he was made, they could not give him power to ſtand upright and walk; and therefore he crauled like a Worm: but a ſuperior Vertue, pitying his Weakneſs, gave him a ſpark of Life.

The Cabbaliſts alſo introduce Angels in the production of Man. They diſtinguiſh three ſorts of [k] Souls. One is purely ſpiritual and divine. The ſecond participates of Body and Divinity, that it may not have the horror of remaining in Priſon. There is another, which is, as it were, the Scale of the Body, which cauſes Diſorder and Death. If the one believe the Tranſmigration of Souls, the others have their Revolutions; of which, we ſhall treat in the ſequel.

XXII. The Ægyptians worſhip'd the Sun, as their great Deity: The Jewiſh Cabbaliſts did not make a God of him, but they gave him high Encomiums. They look'd upon him as the Father of Nature, and attributed the Products of the Univerſe to his Influences. Baſilides, who ſet up a School at Alexandria, ſpoke alſo very magnificently of the Sun, and therefore his Diſciples afterwards adopted the Ægyptian Harpocrates; for we ſometimes find him on their Amulets, with his Finger on his Mouth, his Head crown'd with Rays, a Star above, and the Creſcent of the Moon on the ſide. He holds a Whip in his Hand, like a Coach-man driving a Chariot; and he is ſeated on a Lotus. All this ſerv'd to repreſent the Sun.

Hoc ſidus currum rapidaſque agitare quadrigas
Commenti & radios capitis, & verbera dextrâ.

The [l] Baſilidians did not worſhip the Sun; but reſpected him as a beneficent Star, an auguſt Symbol of the Deity: and being accuſtom'd with the Ægyptian and Jewiſh Cabbaliſts, to aſcribe great Influences to him, they did not ſcruple to repreſent him as the Ægyptians had done long before.

Laſtly, As the Ægyptian and Jewiſh Cabbaliſts gave a great Empire to the Moon, the Baſilidians eſpouſed the Symbol of Iſis, and brought it into their Amulets, inſerting the Name of Angels, and God, or that of Abraxas, by which they expreſs'd him.

XXIII. The Ægyptians, Jews, and Baſilidians, were almoſt equally at a loſs concerning the Origine of Evil, and believed that this fault proceeded from Matter. Baſilides is accuſed of having taught before Manes, that there were two coeternal Principles, Enemies to each other. A learned [m] Roman has publiſh'd the Diſpute of Archelaus, wherein this Biſhop aſſerts, that Baſilides went into Perſia a little after the Apoſtle's time, to vent the Doctrine of two Principles, which were Light and Darkneſs. Baſilides added, that theſe two Principles acted at firſt as they pleaſed; each did what he had a mind to; but approaching to each other, Darkneſs envied the happineſs of Light, and declared War upon him. Here we have more myſtical Language; and, as Archelaus learnt this only from Tradition, we can't be certified of its truth.

Anothor [n] Author, who has aſſum'd Origen's Name, repreſents Valentinus thus: Obſerving a Man guilty of a great many extravagant Vices, carrying his Revenge beyond his Enemies Death, and raking up his Carcaſs to throw it to the Dogs, was ſtartled at theſe ſtrange Objects, and ſtop'd a while to meditate upon the ſource of ſo terrible a Corruption. He conſider'd all the ways by which Evil could enter into the Heart of Man; and not being able to conceive, that God was the Author of it, ſince he would not puniſh it ſo ſeverely if he had produced it, he concluded that our Depravation came from Matter. He doubted not, but that Matter was coeternal and coexiſtent with God: but the ſupreme Being reſolving to extract from it all

[e] Syneſ. Hym. 3. v. 124. [g] Valentini Fragm. apud Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 3. p. 375. [h] Irenæus, l. 1. c. 22. p. 118.
[i] Iren. ibid. [k] Nethama, Ruah, Nephes. [l] V. Cuperi Harpoor, p. 7. [m] Zacagnius Monumenta vetera, p. 101.
[n] Origenis Dial. contra Marcionit.

that

that was good; and throw aſide all that was naught in it; from this refuſe of Mud and Clay which God threw away, all our Evils were produced. I queſtion whether the Valentinians reaſon'd thus; for I have taken it from a Dialogue againſt the Marcionites, and tho' Valentinus is one of the Interlocutors, yet it is a Stranger, and an Orthodox Perſon that reaſons and repreſents the Senſe of the Hereticks. But not to examine this at preſent, which we ſhall have occaſion to do elſewhere, the Gnoſticks could not digeſt the difficulties that occurr'd about the Origine and cauſe of Evil. This was common to them with the Manichees, and even with abundance of Chriſtians, who have believed, and ſtill are perſuaded that they can't be reſolved [o]. And the Cabbaliſts are put to the ſame ſtand. Hence they have form'd ſo many different Opinions about the Creation and Falls of the Devils; hence they vilify Beings in proportion to their partaking of Matter which thickens, and becomes liable to a thouſand imperfections, proportionably to its removal and diſtance from the [p] Deity. The Valentinians called Evils and Sins the Appendix's of the Soul [q] becauſe there are certain Spirits affix'd to a reaſonable Soul, by a mixture made at the beginning, which cauſe commotion and trouble. The Cabbaliſts called theſe Spirits Rinds, becauſe they are the loweſt ſort, who ſeeing ſome Men aſpiring towards Heaven, envy them this Advantage, and endeavour to reduce them [r] under their Empire. They differ in Words, and even in things; but at bottom they agree that the Diſturbances of the Soul are cauſed by I know not what Spirits that envy our Happineſs, ſtick to our Souls, and are of a more impure and material Rank than the reſt.

XXIV. The Gnoſticks have not always followed the Cabbaliſts ſtep by ſtep: They borrowed their general Ideas of them; but at the ſame time they diverſifyed them, that they might be thought Originals; and even the Heads of this Sect, which ſpread it ſelf into ſo many Branches, did not always agree with one another. 'Tis certain, that whether Ideas multiply, and Men add to the diſcoveries of their Maſters to improve them, or whether the ſhame of Tranſcribing, obliges the Scholars to recede from their Maſters, and diſguiſe their Notions, we never find a perfect conformity betwixt them. We muſt not wonder then to find ſome difference between the Jewiſh Cabbaliſts, and the Gnoſticks. But it appears from what we have ſaid, that the Cabbala is the Fountain of the moſt antient Hereticks; an evident proof that it was known in thoſe early times.

XXV. Hereby likewiſe we learn to cure our prejudices againſt antient Hereticks. They have been odious to the higheſt degree; and the Fathers have upbraided them, as perhaps the impurity of their Lives deſerved. But farther, 'tis imagin'd that theſe Heretical Doctors had no Principle; and that contented to dazzle the ignorant with barbarous Terms, they conceal'd nothing under their Jargon. They are generally abandon'd to their Barbariſms, and the Reader curſorily turns over Irenæus, who ſpeaks often of the Æons, and Principles of theſe Hereticks; becauſe he does not underſtand them, and thinks, that there is nothing real or conſiderable in them. In the mean time, to do Juſtice to one and the other, Cabbaliſt, or Heretick, we muſt grant two things. 1. That under theſe Hebrew, Greek, and Latin words, which they often confound, they explain'd the Attributes of God, the Perfections of the Supreme Being, and his manner of creating the World. They lock'd up in the ſame way ſome other Truths of Religion, and ſpoke honourably of the Soul of the Meſſiah, and its Production. Beſides, we muſt not impute to them all the groſs Errors that ſeem to flow from their Principles and Expreſſions. In ſuch a vaſt diſtance of Ages, and the incapacity we are under of knowing them, eſpecially ſince the Writings of theſe antient Divines are loſt, it is hard to penetrate into their real Sentiments; but it would be uncharitable to ſuſpect every thing of theirs to be Criminal, that is obſcure. Their Expreſſions being capable of very different Senſes, and the reading their remaining Fragments, manifeſtly proving that they annex'd ſome uncommon Ideas and Significations to theſe Terms, we muſt not abſolutely condemn them upon Suſpicions, that may be ill grounded. They would not perhaps have explain'd their Notion in a very different way from ours; and if ever we are obliged to admit the explication of a Man in his Defence, 'tis when the Expreſſions he employed were Figurative, Metaphorical, and capable of ſeveral Meanings. How many diſputes have riſen about the Senſe of Janſenius, who ſpoke without a Figure? Can they who believe, that neither the Popes, nor the Church, have underſtood a Modern Writer, who explains another, and expreſſes himſelf plainly and clearly, be aſſured, that they ſufficiently underſtand the antient Gnoſticks, to condemn them without Mercy?

XXVI. This we ſay only by the by; and to encourage equitable Perſons to think, that we ſhall obſerve a juſt Moderation, in writing the Hiſtory of the antient Hereſies, which will follow this. If we don't beforehand condemn theſe Doctors, neither do we excuſe them for the method they have taken: For the Cabbala, and obſcure Expreſſions, which make the Soul of this Science, are the apteſt in the World to cauſe invincible difficulties, to render Notions unintelligible, to give Advantage to thoſe that but lightly examine them; and infinitely to weary thoſe that would comprehend them. It muſt alſo be confeſs'd, that by running after theſe Expreſſions, which captivate by their Charms, we commonly fall into Error; our Ideas grow perplex'd, and more obſcure. This degree of voluntary obſcurity, added to the natural depth of Myſteries, carries them perfectly out of ſight. Men feed themſelves with words and crude Imaginations, whilſt they let go the Subſtance of the Myſtery: And thoſe that are thus dazled, ſtill exceed their Predeceſſors, tacking one Imagination to another, till they have entirely loſt the end they aim'd at. Which is the grand imperfection of the Cabbala.

---

[o] V. King, Epiſcop. Derenſis de Origine mali. Lond. 1702. c. 2. p. 37, &c.
[p] See our IV^th^ Book, Chap. of the Creation of the World.
[q] Apud. Clem. Stromat. p. 408.
[r] Pneumat. Cabbaliſt. Diſſ. 1. c. 4. p. 213, 214.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Of the Uſe that may be made of the Cabbala.

I. THE deſign of this Chapter. II. The Cabbala inſignificant to the underſtanding of Scripture. III. Arguments taken from theſe words: Jeſus Chriſt is God bleſſed for ever with his Father. IV. The Trinity proved by the Cabbala. V. The falſity of this Argument: The uſe that may be made of it. VI. Converſions by ſuch ſort of Arguments uncertain. VII. The Jew expoſed by the Cabbala to the Arguments of his Adverſaries.

I. WE have two Reaſons for our enlarging upon this ſubject; one is, that it is rarely treated in our Language; the other, that there are ſtill ſome conceited People that think, that ſome important Truths may be diſcovered or illuſtrated by the uſe of the Cabbala. Their Cure would be very difficult, and therefore I ſhall not undertake it: Beſides, if when this Science is expoſed in its natural colours before their Eyes, they don't perceive its emptineſs and vanity, and ſee how little Myſtery is hid under words obſcure, and often unintelligible, to thoſe that uſe them; all the Arguments we could offer, would not be able to convince them.

II. This Science is not very proper for the underſtanding of Scripture, or the Works and Perfections of God. For will a Man of good Senſe, who ſhall have throughly ſtudied the Sephiroths, the Crown that denotes Perfection, Wiſdom, or Magnificence, better underſtand for this, that God is a Being infinitely perfect, and the Creator of the World? On the other hand, he muſt Study a great deal before he advances ſo far. He muſt read the Cabbaliſts; hear the different explications they give of the Splendors; follow them in the Conſequences they draw, and conſider whether they are juſt. After all, he muſt recur to Moſes; and why ſhould he not go to him directly at firſt, ſince he is the Maſter to be depended on, and the Cabbaliſt goes aſtray as ſoon as he leaves this Guide. All that is gain'd by this Art, is to be able to perplex our Ideas, and pompouſly to ſet off ſome unintelligible things, under the ſhade of certain dark Expreſſions. The Sephiroths are like the Schoolmens diſtinctions, ſo many Ramparts, behind which, a Man of exact reaſoning can never make Impreſſion on a Fool, who is Maſter of his Gibberiſh. This is the great uſe of the Cabbala, it ſerves to obſcure the cleareſt Truths; whereas we ought to uſe our utmoſt Efforts to explain them; for it requires a great deal of pains to do it.

III. The Sacred Writers have ſpoken like wiſe and judicious Men, who deſiring to manifeſt ſublime Truths, make uſe of words that are clear and evident. They ought neceſſarily to have fix'd their own; and the Readers thought, unleſs they meant to lead us into endleſs Labyrinths, and dangerous Errors. If it be allowed to make God ſay, whatever he might ſay, whilſt neither the Words he has imployed, nor the connexion of the Diſcourſe determine the preciſe and literal Senſe, we can never agree about any thing. The Syſtems of Religion will vary in proportion to the fruitfulneſs of the fancies of thoſe, that read the Scripture; and whilſt one ſhall be buſied in ſeeking the future Events, and the fate of the Church in the ſimpleſt Expreſſions, another will eaſily find in them the groſſeſt Errors. Theſe words of St. Paul, ſpeaking of Jeſus Chriſt, God bleſſed for ever with his Father, ſeem to be expreſs for the Divinity and Eternity of the Sun; but making theſe words ſignify all that they can ſignify, and giving them all the Senſes they are capable of, I ſhall find that Jeſus Chriſt is God; that is, a Magiſtrate, an Hero, a Man of diſtinction: For the Scripture calls Kings, Gods: The Goſpel ſays of Herod Agrippa, The Voice of God; and with the Greeks this Title was common to Heroes. This God was bleſſed, by alluſion to the firſt Born, who received by their Fathers Benediction, a right to the Covenant, and to the Inheritance of their Father. He was bleſſed for ever, as the Law was to laſt for ever; and as the Reign of David and his Family was eſtabliſh'd for ever; becauſe it was of very long continuance. He is bleſſed with his Father as the reſt of the Saints; for God is the Father of Mankind, and the Saints are particularly his Children, deſign'd to the poſſeſſion of his Glory. How many ſuch paſſages may be wreſted from the Orthodox? In order to prevent this, we muſt as much as poſſible ſtick to the literal Senſe of Scripture, and never recur to the figurative, but when the words and deſign of the holy Penman neceſſarily requires it.

IV. But however, ſince the Jews, whom we are obliged to impugn and convert, are wedded to this Science, would it not be advantageous to make uſe of it, the eaſier to convince them? What a Gain and Glory would it be to us, to find a Trinity of Perſons by the Cabbala, which is the Bugbear the Jew ſo much dreads and boggles at: What a Pleaſure and Satisfaction, to diſcover all the Myſteries in a Science, which ſeems made for nothing but to Eclipſe them? A modern Author goes ſtill farther; for having diſcover'd Ariſtotle's Logick and Philoſophy in the Cabbaliſtick Principles, and his Predicaments in the Sephiroths, he maintains that we may uſe the ſame Artifices againſt the Jews, as they employ againſt us, and baffle their Sophiſtry with Sophiſtry; Cum vulpe nonnulli vulpinantur; & cum Sophiſtis σοφιςικῶς congrediendum. But is it any great Honour or Advantage to cheat Men into Truth? And is this Method ſuitable to the ſimplicity of Chriſtianity [a].

V. Firſt, 'tis playing the Hypocrite to pretend, that Chriſtianity is included in the Sephiroths; ſince this was not the deſign of the inventers of them. If they diſcover our Myſteries in them to expoſe the folly and weakneſs of this Method, 'tis well enough; but More, and the other Chriſtian Cabbaliſts, enter the Liſts with an Air of Seriouſneſs, which puts one out of Countenance, becauſe it ſhews that they deſign to prove what they advance, and are convinc'd that all the Chriſtian Religion is to be found in the Cabbala. They inſult thoſe that have a mind to Laugh, and pretend 'tis only ignorance that breeds thoſe contemptuous Smiles.

We may employ this Science againſt the Rabbins that doat upon it, in order to ſhock their infidelity by Arguments fetch'd from themſelves, and fight them with their own Weapons: But we muſt take care to preſerve our diſcretion in the midſt of the Combat, and not to be elevated with the glory of a Victory ſo cheaply won, or to puſh it on too far. We ought to remember the Vanity of theſe Imaginations and Principles, and not lay the ſtreſs of our ſolid Chriſtian Truths upon them;

[a] Jonas conradus Schrammius Introductio in Dialecticam Cabbalæorum methodo parepateticorum potiſſimum confirmata. Brunſvigæ. 1703. in 8°.

them; otherwiſe we ſhould incur two palpable faults.

VI. For indeed the Jew converted by Cabbaliſtick Arguments, can never have a true Faith; but it will waver the very moment his Reaſon diſcovers the Vanity of this Art; and his Chriſtianity, if it only bottoms on the Cabbala, will fall with his good Opinion of this Science. And though his deception ſhould continue to his Death, would there be much got by it? You have introduced a Man into the Chriſtian Church, whoſe Faith is only built upon Reeds. Can ſo imaginary a Knowledge produce any real Vertues? But moreover, the Proſelyte diſengaged from the Prejudices of his Nation, and the Authority of his Maſters and their Science, will by degrees loſe his eſteem for it, and begin to doubt, you'll hardly bring him back; becauſe he will miſtruſt his Maſters that began with a fraudulent inſtruction; and if his Intereſt prevents his return to Judaiſm, he'll continue without Piety and Religion.

You do a greater miſchief to the Chriſtians, and the Prophane, who ſeeing the Chriſtian Religion diſcover'd in the Cabbala, where undoubtedly 'tis not, queſtion whether it be in the Scripture, where ſome have attempted to ſhew it to them.

VII. The Jew fancies perhaps, that it is of great Advantage to him; but how is that poſſible, when it is a Magazine that ſerves every ones turn. The Cabbaliſt lies open on all ſides, to the Heathen, Mahometan, and Chriſtian, and as ſoon as he is fix'd in his Principles, he muſt be expos'd to the Attacks of his Enemy; we find the Meſſiah's Reign in the firſt Cabbaliſtick Table; by beginning at the fourth Sephiroth, which is greatneſs and applying theſe words of Baruch, O Iſrael, how great is the Houſe of thy God, we plainly ſee the Meſſiah's Reign, ſignified by greatneſs, which is the fourth Sephiroth. A Man muſt be blind not to ſee this Greatneſs, ſo clearly expreſs'd. And they that ſay that theſe are nothing but the words and dreams of waking people, are themſelves aſleep, when they are awake.

CHAP. XXIX.

Of the Rabbins.

The different Titles they give themſelves. The Functions of their Office.

I. THE Rabbins the laſt Order of the Doctors, II. The fondneſs men have for Titles. III. The great Men among the Jews took none. IV. The Phariſees affected the Title of Rabbi: An uncommon explication of Rabboni. V. Our Lord's cenſure of the Phariſees, concerning Titles, explain'd. VI. The Doctors of Babylon aſſumed the Name of Mor, Lord. VII. An Explication of the Title Maran: From whence came Maranatha. VIII. The Titles given the Jews of Jeruſalem. IX. An Explication of the Title Sage, given to the Spaniards. X. The reaſon of the Name Marbitſitorah, given to thoſe that give reſt to the Law. XI. Of the Title Dom which they have taken in Spain. XII. The Qualification to be ſtyled Rabbins. XIII. This Employ dangerous: The cauſe of the ſuddain Death of Joſeph the Patriarch. XIV. The Offices of the Rabbins: What binding and looſing ſignifies with them, XV. Their Ordination. XVI. The Authority they take upon them: Jochanan kills his Diſciple by a look. XVII. They are not damned: The Example of R. Acher. XVIII. Their love of Antiquity: Forged Pieces. XIX. The Midraſhim, or Commentaries ſuppoſititious. XX. Hiſtorical Reflections upon the Midraſhim Rabbot. XXI. The Sentences of the Fathers, or Pirke Abbot: A falſe Antiquity aſcribed to them. XXII. The Language uſed by the Rabbins.

I. THE Rabbins conſtitute the Ninth Order of the Jewiſh Doctors; for they firſt reckon the LXX. Elders which Moſes appointed to judge the People, and diſcharge him from that oppreſſive burden. From thence they come to the Prophets, who make the ſecond Claſs; to the Doctors of the great Synagogue the Excellents, the Cabbaliſts, and ſo come down to the Rabbins. We have ſpoken ſufficiently of theſe different Orders of Teachers; let us now deſcend to the Rabbins.

II. If Titles were infallible Badges of Honour and Vertue, it would be a diſgrace to be without them, and that earneſt contention for them would be blameleſs; but theſe at preſent are Appellatives dictated by Flattery or Vanity. Thoſe Elogies that were beſtowed on Vertue and Heroes, are inſenſibly degenerated: They are ſquander'd at random, or become Titles of Office, common to Poltroons, as well as Heroes; to the ignorant Wretch, whom the Cabbala places in the Chair, as well as to the Man of Learning, whoſe Merit has raiſed him to it. However, the Diſtemper is of long ſtanding: The Romans had their faſtuous and ſwelling Titles Engraved in Braſs and Marble: Mark Antony reduc'd to Extremity in the Parthian War, took freſh Courage, upon hearing the Soldiers and Officers call him Imperator. The Grecian Emperors run into a greater Extravagance than the Latins; and the Titles which Juſtinian gives himſelf at the beginning of his Edicts, want an Apology for ſuch as diſcover their Falſhood.

Doctors are as weak as Princes; whilſt they ſhould be content to tranſmit their Name to Poſterity naked, and unincumber'd with the Title of an Office, which does them no Honour, when they are poſſeſs'd of a real Merit; they omit nothing that may ſerve to magnify them in the Eyes of the People. They fancy their worth is heighten'd and extended, when they are never named without a pompous heap of Titles, or a Name that ſignifies their Authority. What a ſtrange fallacy and deception is this for ſuch as profeſs themſelves only lovers of Vertue, and Diſciples of the Maſter of Humility?

III. The Jews have judiciouſly obſerved, that no Title was given the Prophets, nor the five Preſidents of the Sanhedrim, that lived before Jeſus Chriſt, whereof Joſhua the Son of Perachia was [a] the firſt, becauſe theſe great Men were Superiour to all the Titles that could be given them: And thus Divine Inſpiration raiſing the Prophets above the reſt of the World, they wanted no other diſtinction beſides the Title of Seer, or Prophet. This Obſervation is very juſt; for it teaches us that when Men have a real Merit, they need nothing more. There is no farther neceſſity of heightning it by additional Appellatives and Titles. In the Ages paſs'd, ſaid R. Nathan, when Men had an extraordinary Merit, there was no need of diſtinguiſhing them by the Titles of Rabbi or Rab. Their bare Name was ſufficient to make them known.

[a] V. Otho. Hiſt. Doctor Miſnicor. Joſhua, the Son of Perachia, was Preſident in the Year, 3560. with Nathan his Vice-Preſident. Simeon with Judah in 3621. Schemaiah with Abtalion in 3722. The Sons of Bethiracame afterwards, and at laſt Hillel and Schammai in the Year 3728.

IV. When Knowledge and Vertue ſunk in this Nation, it fell into the ſame Diſtemper, and carried its Vanity farther than its Neighbours. The Phariſees, in our Saviour's time, having corrupted Religion with their Traditions, would be ſtyled Rabbi [b] and Rabboni, becauſe this Title diſtinguiſh'd them from the ignorant Vulgar, which did not underſtand the Law. An ingenious [c] Critick has obſerved, that their Pride roſe higher than is commonly believed, becauſe Rabboni not only ſignifies Doctor, but a Maſter inveſted with an abſolute Authority. There is ſomething more in it; for when the Thalmudiſts would expreſs the Power of God, they are contented to call him [d] Rabboni. Hence Mary Magdalene wondring at our Lord's riſing from the Grave by his own Power, call'd him Rabboni, a Name that was never applied to him before, before his Death; becauſe he had never given ſo glorious an inſtance of his Power. Laſtly, The Jews expreſs'd by this Term, the ſame thing that the Syrians meant by Marim, or Lord, which they beſtowed on Kings, and God Almighty. There is this difference between the Titles of Rabboni, and Marim, that one is much more gracious than the other. By the one, we conſider God as a Father, and our ſelves as his Children; but by Rabboni, we repreſent him as a Maſter, inveſted with a deſpotick Power, and our ſelves as his Slaves.

V. According to this conjecture, Jeſus Chriſt did not cenſure the Phariſees for affecting a pompous Title, to diſtinguiſh them from the People; but for a piece of Pride abounding with Blaſphemy, ſince they conſider'd themſelves as abſolute Maſters and Gods of the Nation. We ought not to diſpute here about Words; for Moſes, David, and [e] Micah, frequently call God Ribbon, when they meant to expreſs his Power over all the Univerſe; and the alteration of a Vowel, cauſes none in the ſignification of a Word; for the Hebrews, that lived before the Conqueſts of Alexander the Great, pronounced it Ribbon: but after their mixture with the Syrians, they often changed the I into A. And thus Miriam, Moſes's Siſter, was called Mary, according to the Syrian Dialect. And Migdal, a City of Syria, bears the Name of Magdal, for the ſame reaſon.

'Tis then true, that they gave God the Title of Rabboni; and Mary Magdalene, upon ſeeing ſomething ſupernatural and divine in our Saviour's Reſurrection, gave him the ſame Style: but ſhall we hence conclude, that the Phariſees had the Pride to conſider themſeves as the Maſters and Gods of the People. This is the harder to believe, becauſe Infallibility was not yet in faſhion, and the Sanhedrim did not it ſelf pretend to it. They might aſſume a Title that belong'd to God, without joining his Power with it. And indeed, Jeſus Chriſt does not cenſure the Phariſees as Blaſphemers, but only condemns their fondneſſes for Reſpects, Titles, and other Marks of Honour, which they required from the People. Laſtly, He does not tell his Diſciples, that there is only one God in Heaven, whom they are obliged to obey; but he propoſes himſelf, inſtead of the Phariſees, to inſtruct and govern them. The conjecture therefore is abſurd; and would be better founded upon the following Verſe, where Jeſus Chriſt forbids them to call any other Father, except him that is in Heaven. For, indeed, the Title of Father was affected by ſuch of the Phariſees as were grown old in the Sect, and pretended to a greater Authority by their Age, and their conſummate Experience in the Law; for they call Abba [f] Father, the Sages, when grown old.

VI. They have ſince turn'd the Title of Rabbin, and traveſted it every manner of way, to find a new degree of Honour in it; and at laſt they have given it up to the Learned in general, to take others ſuitable to the Taſte and Genius of the Nation wherein they have lived.

The Eaſtern Captives at Babylon, took the Title of Rabba and Raf, or [g] Rou, becauſe they pronounc'd the Kamets, or the A like an O. This Title ſeems peculiar to the Babylonian Doctors, whilſt thoſe at Jeruſalem were called Ribbi: But the Orientals changed afterwards, and uſurp'd the Title of Lord, [h] Mor. They did it, becauſe the Chaldeans and Syrians uſed it to Princes, and thoſe that poſſeſs'd the ſupreme Authority. They had the ſame cuſtom at Alexandria; and therefore the Inhabitants of this City, who always loved Raillery, by way of inſult to Agrippa, call'd the Mad-man, Marim, whom they led about under Agrippa's Name.

[i] Buxtorf ſays, that this Name came from Babylon; and 'tis certain that Daniel uſes it, to expreſs the Deity. 'Tis read alſo in the Book of Job, who lived in the Eaſt: but ſince it is ſometimes found in the Pſalms and Exodus, there ſeems to be no reaſon to derive it from the Chaldeans and Syrians, as if they had help'd the Jews to it. However it be, the Chiefs of the Nation at Babylon, and the [k] Heads of the Academy at Sora, appropriated this Title to themſelves, which exalted them in the Peoples Opinion, and ſeem'd to give them a ſupreme Authority.

VII. There is another almoſt like it, which is Maran, from whence is derived the Maranatha in the Goſpel, ſignifying the great Excommunication: Let him be Anathema Maranatha. This Word is compounded of Maran Atha, that is, the Lord comes; becauſe the Sentence of Excommunication begun with theſe two Words. The Thalmudiſts call'd their Excommunication Scammata, according to the ſame method; for this ſignifies, the Name comes; and they expreſs themſelves in this manner, becauſe they ſubſtitute Name inſtead of the Word Jehovah, which is ineffable. Schammata ſignifies God comes, as well as Maran.

The Title of Maran was nobler than that of Mor, as Rabban is more than Rabbi; and therefore, it is denied the generality of Doctors, and reſerved for the Maſters, that teach and judge the reſt. Notwithſtanding, it is now grown very common, and particularly in Italy. They call the Doctors Morenu; that is, our Doctor, our Maſter, and our Lord.

VIII. The Doctors of Judæa were commonly called Ribbi, or Rabbi. Hillel, who had ſo great a Reputation there, received the Title of Rabban. It is given alſo to Simeon; but, is it not a miſtake to add, that this was the ſame Saint that received Jeſus Chriſt into his Arms, and expreſly determined him to be the Meſſiah ſo long expected? They that boaſted of their Deſcent from the Houſe of David, diſtinguiſhed themſelves by the Name of Rabbana. We can't omit noting all theſe Differences; becauſe we deſign to treat here concerning the Doctors, and the knowing theſe things is neceſſary to thoſe that deſign to ſtudy them.

---

[b] Matth. xxiii. 7. [c] Caninius Diſquiſitiones in locos aliquor. N. T. c. v. Crit. t. 9. p. 3700.
[d] רבוני של עלם Rabboni Schal gnolam: The Maſter of the Age. [e] Exod. xxiii. 27. Pſ. xii. 5. Mic. iv. 13.
[f] Rabbi Nathan. [g] Rab רַב or Rau. [h] 'Tis properly Mar, מָר but as we have ſaid, the Syrians pronounced the Kamets, or A, like O.
[i] V. Buxt. Lex. Thalm. [k] Roſh, רוש Caput.

IX. The Spaniards took the Title of Wiſe; but 'tis a queſtion whether this Name was very honourable. For Elias the Levite, who lived to the ſeventeenth Century, ſays, that it was given to thoſe who had not received the Impoſition of Hands; becauſe Doctors were created by this Ceremony only in the Holy Land. There was therefore this Difference between Rabbin and Wiſe, that the former had received Ordination in all the forms required by the ancient Maſters; whereas Impoſition of Hands was wanting to the latter. But 'tis obſerved on the contrary, that the Prophet Jeremiah has advanced the Wiſe above the High Prieſt, when he declares, that the Law ſhall not periſh from the Prieſt, nor Counſel from the Wiſe, nor the Word from the Prophet. Jeremiah, ſay they, has obſerved their reſpective Dignities, and placed the Wiſe in the middle betwixt the Prophet and the Prieſt. But St. Paul ſeems better to have underſtood Jeremiah, and the cuſtoms of his Nation, than the modern Interpreters: for when he asks the Corinthians, whether there be no Wiſe Man among them to judge, he teaches, that the Wiſe Men were Judges of the Nation, choſen in the Synogogues to ſtate Caſes of Conſcience, and determine Controverſial Queſtions. The Jews ſtill retain theſe Judges in all their rich and numerous Synagogues; and as the Civil Affairs are decided by the Political and Ceremonial Law, which ſtill ſubſiſts among them, theſe Judges were the Doctors. Jeremiah inſinuates plainly enough, that this was his Notion, ſince he attributes Counſel or Determination to the Wiſe, whilſt the Law inhabits among the Prieſts, and the Word, or Oracles, proceed from the Mouth of the Prophet. Whereas the Heathen Philoſophers were contented to tell the People, that they were lovers of Wiſdom; the Jewiſh Doctors would have them believe that they were truly Wiſe.

X. They imagin'd another Title much more faſtuous, calling themſelves Marbitſi Tora. This Word is derived from [l] Rabats, which ſignifies to lye down. They hereby deſign'd to teach Two Things: Firſt, That the fugitive, and baniſh'd Law of Jewry, found a Bed and Reſting-place in Spain: Secondly, That the Law reſts in the Boſom of the Doctors that teach it others: for to give repoſe to the Law, is to teach it. Elias the [m] Levite, appropriates this Title to the Heads of the Academies, and gives the others only that of Wiſe and Rabbin.

Laſtly, The Spaniſh Jews, who would needs imitate the State and Pride of the Country where they lived, took the Title of Dom. The Style of Lord belong'd to God, but Men thought they might uſurp it, only by retrenching a [n] Letter.

Cœleſtem Dominum, terreſtrem dicito Domnum.

This Name was at firſt given to Kings, becauſe they were an Image of the Deity, and had a Sovereign Power. It was tranſlated from Earth to Heaven; and the Saints were call'd Dommus, becauſe they were eſteem'd very potent Men. In purſuance of this Language, it was not long ſince that the Votaries ſaid, My Lord Saint Peter, and my Lord Saint Martin. From thence it deſcended to the Biſhops and Abbots, who were like ſo many Sovereigns in their Dioceſes.

Raban obſerves, that this Title was grown peculiar to the Kings of France. This might be in his time; but it was given to the Sons and Daughters of Spain. [o] Fortunatus exalting the good Fortune of Germany, who had produc'd Queen Brunehaut, cry'd out,

Quis crederet autem
Hiſpanam tibimet Domnam Germania naſci.

The Spaniards abridged this term, and only gave the Title of Dom to great Lords and Princes. The Jews, who commonly made themſelves conſiderable in this Country by their great Employs, uſurped it; and we ſhall ſee, in the ſequel, many of theſe circumcis'd Doms.

XII. [p] Serrarius thought, that none were called Rabbins, but ſuch as were advanc'd in Years, and had received Impoſition of Hands, and taught ſome Diſciples. But though he was well read in this Subject, yet he was miſtaken: for Nachmanides was ſtyled Rabbi at eighteen Years old, becauſe he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf at this green Age, and began to teach. Beſides, the Impoſition of Hands is not a neceſſary qualification for this Title; it being given in the Weſt to thoſe that have no Diſciples, when they preach in a Synagogue, or have the Government of it.

XIII. Indeed, the Rabbinat often ſignifies the Office of Judges and Magiſtrates. The Thalmudiſts ask, why Joſeph died before his Brethren, and anſwer, becauſe he had exerciſed the [q] Rabbinat; that is, had been a Miniſter of State in Ægypt. They are perſuaded, that grand Employs overwhelm the Poſſeſſors, and ſhorten their Lives, by the Pains and Cares that inſeparably attend them. They obſerve, that there was no Prophet but out-lived four Kings, to ſhew the danger of this Dignity; and that whilſt Prophecy prolongs Life, Royalty ſhortens it. Woe to [r] the Power that buries its Maſters. Laſtly, it was one of Schemaiah's Precepts to his Diſciples, My Son, love labour, and ſhun the Rabbinat; that is, the Magiſtrates or Profeſſor's Office, according to Fagius's Interpretation. Theſe are wiſe and judicious Precepts, which are heard and admired, but not practiſed.

XIV. The Rabbins Office conſiſts: 1. In preaching in the [s] Synagogues, ſaying Prayers, explaining the Law, reſolving all Caſes of Conſcience, about which they are conſulted, and inſtructing Youth. 2. They have the power of binding and looſing. The Controvertiſts have compiled great Volumes on occaſion of this Word; but if they had remark'd its true ſignification with the Jews, from whom our Saviour borrowed it, the Diſpute would be at an end, or rather it would never have begun. For they mean by it, that the Rabbin had the power of declaring what is allowed or forbidden. He binds, when he forbids the uſe of a thing that defiles; and he looſes, when he determines it to be lawful. 3. When the Synagogue is poor and ſmall, it has but one Rabbin, who diſcharges at once the Functions of Judge and Doctor. 'Tis he that has the care of the Synagogue of the Poor, and of deciding Differences. But when the Jews are numerous enough in a place, they appoint three Paſtors, and an Houſe of Judgment, where all the Deciſions are made: and the Inſtruction only is reſerved for the Rabbin, if it be not thought fit to bring him into the Counſel for his Advice, and then he takes the chiefeſt Place.

XV. They have alſo Authority to create new Doctors. This permiſſion was formerly to be obtain'd of the Head of the Captivity, eſpecially in the Eaſt. They ſay, that before Hillel, private Doctors ordain'd their Diſciples; but they laid aſide this Authority in favour of this great Maſter: but [l] רבץ Rabats cubare, to give repoſe to the Law; that is, to teach. [m] Elias Levita in Thisbi.

[n] They ſaid Dominus, ſpeaking of God; and Domnus, ſpeaking of Men. [o] Lib. 6. [p] Serrarius de Rabbinis, c. 4.
[q] Thalmud in Sota. [r] Ibid. in Paſachim, fol. 87. V. Buxtorfii Lex. Thalmudicum.
[s] V. Selden. de Syned. l. 1. c. 14. Vitringa de Synagoga, l. 2. c. 10. p. 569, &c.

now,

now, after a great many Ages, they are content to make up a Congregation of ſome Doctors, who conſent to the inſtallation of a new Rabbin. This is the moſt ſolemn Ordination; but as it cannot be always obſerved, the Rabbins lay hands on their Diſciples. Some [t] think, that the Impoſition of Hands, which came from Moſes, can't be practiſed, ſave in the Holy Land; and 'tis to avoid violating this Law, that the Rabbins, particularly in Germany, create Doctors, only by Word of Mouth. In creating them, they often confine their Power to particular Things. To one, they give only the Authority of explaining the Law, or even ſome Queſtions of it; on another, they confer the power of Judging; and they can only exerciſe thoſe Functions to which they are appointed; nor muſt they do that in their Maſter's Preſence. Some maintain, that the Maſter ought to be dead before the Diſciple teaches: Others, leſs vigorous, require ſome Leagues diſtance, to avoid Jealouſie betwixt theſe two Perſons; but ordinarily, 'tis enough to have obtain'd Licenſe of exerciſing their Functions, and to be confirm'd by the Houſe of Judgment.

XVI. The Rabbins are often deſpiſed by the People; however, they omit nothing to ſet off their Office, and to inforce their Authority. This Pride is of old ſtanding in the Synagogue, ſince it was cenſured by our Lord; and thoſe that have lived in Baniſhment and Miſery, have reſerved the conſolation of talking magnificently of themſelves, and imprinting Fear and Dread on thoſe that are under them: Men naturally love to be fear'd and honour'd; and our Submiſſions to them are more acceptable, the more exceſſive they are. The Rabbins aſſert, that a Man can't break their Laws without incurring Death; and they alledge ſome terrible Examples of this. For Jochanan, by a ſingle look, reduc'd one of his Diſciples to an heap of Bones, who refuſed to believe what this Rabbin ſaid, that the Gates of Jeruſalem ſhould one day be Carbuncles, till he ſaw an Angel cut the Stones of the ſame bigneſs, repreſented by his Maſter. Here we ought to have recourſe to the Figurative Language, and not reproach the Jews with believing, that their Maſters carried a Virtue in their Eyes, capable of murthering Men by a ſingle look. They are not ſo ſtupid as this comes to; but they make Jochanan the Author of a Miracle, like that which St. Peter wrought upon Sapphira; and the deſign of this Romantick Story, is to eſtabliſh an implicit Obedience upon the exemplary Death of an incredulous and impenitent Diſciple. How many Chriſtians laugh at theſe Rabbinical Tales, who afterwards preach, as the neceſſity of a blind Obedience, and the dreadful effects of Excommunication, pronounc'd againſt thoſe that conteſt it?

XVII. But the Rabbins don't ſtop here; but plainly declare, that they ſhall not be damned like the reſt of the World. R. Acher was equally famous for his adherence to the Law, and for his Sins. He is accuſed of many Crimes. 1. He had cut the tops of the Branches of Trees. By this they mean, [u] that he had attack'd the Power of the ſupreme Being; like an inſolent Wretch that enters a Garden, and breaks and ſpoils all that is Beautiful in it. In a word, he was ſuſpected of holding the Error of Two Principles. 2. He had blaſphem'd againſt the Angel Metatron; imagining, that God alone had a right to ſit in Paradice. He could not conceive, that this Angel had a Stool there; and this was the ground of his Belief of two ſupreme Principles. 3. He beſtrid his Horſe on the Sabbath-day, which is forbidden; becauſe a Man can't meaſure the number of Steps he may make upon this Day; and it often happens, that he plucks a Twig from a Tree to whip his Horſe, which is a Crime. 4. Laſtly, He met with a lewd Woman, and had a mind to be dealing with her. He was conducted to the School, and the Child ſaying his Leſſon, pronounc'd theſe Words: There is no Peace to the Wicked. He paſs'd from that School to twelve others, where all the Children that were repeating their Leſſons, pronounced ſome Anathema; which ſo violently provok'd him, that he caught the thirteenth Scholar, tore him in pieces, and ſent the Parts of his mangled Body to thirteen Synagogues, as the Levite ſent thoſe of his Concubines to the Tribes. 'Tis impoſſible to vilifie a Doctor by more unlucky Paſſages, than theſe we have noted. 'Tis ſaid alſo, that the Gate of Repentance was ſhut againſt him, becauſe the Angel Metatron having received many Laſhes on his account, he was debar'd from future Grace. Notwithſtanding all this, he had the good luck to eſcape Damnation. At his Death, the Doctors, who determine the Deſtiny of their Brethren, durſt not judge. They could not condemn him to Hell, becauſe he had taught the Law; nor durſt they ſeat him in Heaven, becauſe of his Sins. R. Meir, who had been his Diſciple, and paſſionately loved him, found an expedient to condemn him, and to ſave him afterwards. He [x] promiſed, that when he died, he would cauſe the Smoke to aſcend from Acher's Tomb: the thing happen'd as he had foretold, and afterwards ceaſed; which was an Evidence, that Meir had reſcued Acher's Soul from Hell. The Jaylor of Hell, ſaid the Panegyriſt, or the Weeper, that made Meir's Funeral Oration, could not ſtand before our Maſter.

XVIII. Their Writings are in high Eſteem: but the Jews are as much prejudiced for Antiquity as the Chriſtians; and Men became venerable to them, in proportion to the remoteneſs of the Age they lived in. Time is commonly more conſider'd than Merit: And therefore, thoſe that would be reverenced by the People, have father'd their Writings on the ancient Doctors, or like the Chriſtians, have aſcrib'd new Works to the old Maſters, in order to give them more Authority than they would have, if they had appear'd with the true Name of their Authors.

XIX. They have, for Example, in the Synagogues, ſome Commentaries upon Scripture, call'd [y] Midraſchim, to which they aſcribe a great Antiquity. The Mechilta ought to have been compoſed by the Rabbins, that were cotemporary with Juda the Saint. And yet the [z] Gemara is cited in it, to prove a cuſtom invented by the Rabbins for ſtoning. 'Tis there ſaid, that the Criminal was placed upon a little Precipice, and that the Witneſſes threw him down. If he died of the Fall, they did no more; but if he retain'd any thing of Life, the Witneſs threw a Stone, and the People threw more upon him till he died: This cuſtom, which they derive from Exodus, is not to be found there. Neither Philo the Jew, nor Joſephus, knew it: but 'tis ſufficient that it is taken from the Gemara, to prove that the Authors of this Commentary upon Exodus, were not the Cotemporaries, or immediate Succeſſors of Juda the Saint. We ought to pardon them what they ſay of the Jews Deſcent into Ægypt, in the Reign of Trajan, who maſſacred them there. This is not exact, but yet it can't be denied, but they loſt a great deal of Blood in their Inſurrection againſt this Prince. But the Story in the ſame Book, [t] V. Morin. de Ordin. p. 3. Exerc. 7. c. 4. [u] Excerpta Gemaræ apud Hottinger. p. 101, &c. [x] Ibid. p. 110.

[y] מדרש Midraſh ſignifies Commentary, from a Root, דרש Daraſh, quæſivit, becauſe the Commentator ſought the ſenſe of Scripture. [z] Ganz. Tſemach. David, p. 109. Morin ex Bibl. l. 2. Ex. 11. c. 1.

concerning God's retarding the march of the Iſraelites; becauſe ſome, who had before attempted to paſs into the Holy Land, were killed by the Philiſtines; and that God was willing to have their Carcaſſes conſumed, leſt the People ſeeing them in the Wilderneſs, ſhould be diſheartned, and deſirous of returning, is taken from the Thalmudiſts. How then can we allow this Book ſo venerable an Antiquity, tho' in reality, it is the ancienteſt of all their Books?

XX. [a] They have moreover in their Synagogues, ſome Great Commentaries, Midraſchim Rabbot, which are ſaid to be Nachmanides's, who ought to have lived in the end of the third Century. And yet they make mention of Diocleſian's Empire; and Julian's attempt to rebuild the Temple of Jeruſalem, and in general, ſtill call the Roman Empire the Empire of Edom; which ſhews, that this Work was not compoſed till after Conſtantine, under whom the Chriſtians became Maſters of the Empire. They pretend indeed, that Italy was peopled by the Children of Edom: But yet they never gave this Name to the Empire, nor imagin'd this Fable, till after it came into the hands of the Chriſtians, whom they call Edomites. Laſtly, They tell a Story, [b] that Trajan's Son being born on one of the Jew's Faſting Days, and dying on the Day they celebrated the Dedication of the Temple, the Empreſs perſuaded her Husband, that this Nation mourn'd for his Proſperity, and rejoiced for his Affliction. Trajan being enraged, immediately embark'd; and by the favour of an extraordinary Gale, arrived at Alexandria in five Days: At that very moment, the Jews were reading theſe Words of Deuteronomy, [c] The Lord ſhall bring a Nation againſt thee, as ſwift as [d] the Eagle flies. Trajan applied theſe Words to himſelf, appear'd to the Jews as that Eagle that had flown, and come to tear his Prey. For the Legions murder'd the Jews, whoſe Blood flowed in ſuch Streams into the Sea, as to die it red as far as the Banks of the Iſle of Cyprus. The Hyperbole is hideous, and the Ignorance barbarous: for the Iſle of Cyprus is at ſo great a diſtance from Ægypt, that to give ſome little probability to the Story, they have been forced to change it into a River of the ſame Name, which is imaginary, and never heard of. What is more: Alexander the [d] Macedonian, muſt have headed this Expedition. Either then the Title of Macedonian muſt be ſtruck out, or a new Alexander found, who was General of Trajan's Troops with Adrian, and might perhaps come from Macedonia. The Thalmudiſts have made this Blunder; and from whom, this ſo ill contrived Fable is borrowed: But this ſerves only more indiſputably to prove, that theſe Commentaries of the Rabbins are not ſo ancient as is pretended; which Reflexions is the more neceſſary, ſince ſome Chriſtians eſteem, and often cite them, becauſe they fancy from hence, to ſtrengthen our Religion, and draw ſome helps for the Explication of the Scripture.

XXI. In the laſt [e] place, They have publiſh'd the Sentences of the Fathers, Pirke Abbot. They have publiſh'd others under the Name of R. Eliezer, who muſt have lived in the time of Gamaliel II. ſince he was his Brother-in-Law. Nevertheleſs, the Impoſtor is ſo ill diſguiſed, that he quotes Akiba as one of the ancient Fathers, who muſt have been the Diſciple of the great Eliezer. The Fault is ſtill more manifeſt, to quote Juda the Prince, the Son of Gamaliel, who was not born till Akiba was dead. He ſpeaks of the Kingdom of the Arabians, which was not erected till Mahomet. We muſt excuſe him for all the Stories which he tells, viz. That the Tempting-Serpent was as big as a Camel; and that Adam uſed him for a Pad: That God cloath'd the firſt Man with a precious Robe, and a cloud of Glory; but after his Sin, dreſs'd him in the Serpent's Skin. However, his firſt Robe was preſerved in Noah's Ark; Cham, who ſeiz'd upon it, gave it Nimrod, who wearing it, ſaw all the Beaſts of the Earth, and the Fowls of the Air, come and worſhip him, as their Lord and King. This is deducible from Scripture, which ſays, That Nimrod was a mighty Hunter before the Lord.

It muſt be confeſs'd, that Veneration for Antiquity is not peculiar to the Jews; the Chriſtians being ſeiſed with the ſame Diſtemper: They have father'd, as well as they, Writings upon the ancient Doctors of the Church; and when they quote a Teſtimony in their favour, they often aſcribe the Book to an Author of the firſt Centuries, though ſuch Impertinences are found in it, as are unworthy of thoſe great Names, under which they would have them paſs.

XXII. The Rabbins commonly imitate the Scripture Hebrew; their pronunciation, particularly in Germany and Poland, differs more from the Ancients than their Style. As they have written upon divers Subjects, not handled by the Prophets, they have been obliged to invent ſome new Words: for the Scripture wanting Terms, relating to Phyſick, Natural Philoſophy, Aſtrology, and even Divinity, as it has been treated for ſome Ages, they have been forced to coin Words according to the Analogy of their Language; ſuch as Non-exiſtence, Efficient Cauſe, Reaſonable Creature, Center, Zodiac, Heretick, Apoſtate, and Academy: but there is no Tongue but is ſubject to theſe Innovations. They muſt neceſſarily increaſe, as People improve in Learning and Converſe with other Nations.

[a] Ganz Tſemach David, p. 114. Morin. ibid. [b] In Midraſh, Eſther & Midraſh, ſup. Lament. Jerem. c. 4. ver. 19.
[c] Deut. 28. 29. [d] Ganz Tſemach, p. 104.
[e] Pirke R. Eliezer, hoc eſt, the Chapters or Sentences. This Book has been Tranſlated by Vorſtius, and printed at Leiden, in 1644. Pirke, c. 17. p. 38. c. 28. p. 63. c. 24. p. 54.

CHAP. XXX.

Of the Jewiſh Prieſts.

Of the Ten Otioſi of the Synagogue. Diſputes about this Matter.

I. THe Functions of the Prieſts. II. The Examination of theſe Prieſts raiſes the jealouſie of Severus. III. Their Genealogy. IV. Of the Arch-Prieſts. V. Of the Ten Otioſi. Lightfoot's Opinion. VI. This Opinion confuted. A ſecond Hypotheſis upon this Subject. VII. A third Opinion different from the foregoing. VIII. The Otioſi unknown in the Old Teſtament. IX. An Obſcure Paſſage of Joſephus concerning the Otioſi, explain'd. X. Whether the Thalmudiſts have ſpoken of them. XI. The Idlers of Benjamin of Tudela, examin'd. XII. Remarks upon Benjamin, and the Academies of Babylon. XIII. A different Notion of the Otioſi, given by Jarchi, and his Oppoſition to R. Niſum. XIV. A Method of reconciling all theſe Authors. XV. An Abſtract of the preceding Reflexions. XVI. Weak Reaſons of the Number Ten. XVII. The Abrogation of the Otioſi.

I. THE Samaritans alone, have retain'd the liberty of Sacrificing. But though the modern Jews have neither Temples, nor Altars, nor Sacrifices, yet they have Sacrificers and Prieſts. But whereas the principal Function of their Office has ceas'd for a great many Ages, 'tis eaſie to conceive, that they are much degenerated.

However, the Firſt-born are ranſom'd of them; but as the Jews are ſeldom poſſeſſors of Lands, and Flocks, they very rarely pay them Tythes.

Secondly, They have the precedence in reading the Law in the Synagogues: The [a] Prieſt always reads firſt, the Levite next; and, laſtly, the Iſraelites read, upon the Prieſt's failure, or after them. They are ſometimes ſo ignorant, that they can't read; but when they can, the wiſeſt and learnedſt of the Iſraelites is obliged to yield them that Honour. They alſo give the Bleſſing to the People, at the end of the Service; which ſhews, that they ſtill retain ſome reſpect for the Office, whoſe Succeſſion is ſo uncertain.

II. 'Tis probable, that they are ſometimes choſen to be Doctors, and that they may pretend to any Office of the Synagogue when they are capable of diſcharging it. [b] Lampridius relates, That Alexander Severus could not bear that the Jews and Chriſtians ſhould make any publick Scrutinies into the Lives and Manners of their Prieſts, and that the ſame thing ſhould be omitted in the Empire for the choice of Governors of Provinces, on whom the Peace and Happineſs of the People depended. It appears by this, that the Prieſts were then admitted to the publick Offices, but not without a rigorous Examination of their Life. Laſtly, The Imperial Laws ſpeak often of theſe [c] Prieſts, as of conſiderable Perſons in the Jewiſh Nation.

III. [d] Mr. Petit maintains, that theſe Prieſts don't deſcend from the Race of Aaron; and that they have this Title only from their ſucceeding into the Functions of the Prieſts, in interpreting the Law, and teaching the People. 'Tis eaſie to conceive, that he is in the wrong, and yet in the right. He is in the wrong, if he ſays, theſe Prieſts don't pretend to be of the Race of Aaron: for 'tis the reſpect that is preſerved for that Family, which gives them a ſort of diſtinction among the People. But theſe muſt be an unſpeakable confuſion in Genealogies, after ſo many Ages, and ſo long Succeſſions; ſo that 'tis impoſſible, at preſent, to diſtinguiſh the true Off-ſpring of Aaron, and the Tribe of Levi. As this is only done by a Family-Tradition, it muſt needs be uncertain, fraudelent, or falſe.

IV. They ſay likewiſe, that there is an Arch-Prieſt in every Synagogue: And indeed, [e] Benjamin of Tudela obſerves, That in the Twelfth Century, the Head of the Levites was Preſident of the Second Council. And, Lampridius had ſaid long before, that the Ægyptians inſulting Alexander Severus, becauſe he was born in Syria, call'd him Head of the Synagogue, and Arch-Prieſt. But a [f] Critick, equally judicious and well-vers'd in theſe Matters, affirms with greater Reaſon, that theſe Arch-Prieſts were unknown in the Synagogues; and that Lampridius has ſignified but one and the ſame Office under different Names: for he evidently ſpoke of the Head of the Synagogue.

V. Laſtly, 'Tis aſſerted, that there are [g] ten Otioſi in the Synagogue: Whereas the modern Criticks have thought it incumbent upon them, to explain the Functions of this Office, and have fancied, that they did a great Service to Religion, and the Republick of Learning, by diſcovering it. We can't wave giving an Idea of it, and relating what they have ſaid, that is moſt material.

Criticks have given three different Opinions upon this Queſtion. [h] Lightfoot, who had principally ſpent his time in the ſtudy of the Thalmudiſts and Rabbins, who have obſerved, that the ten Otioſi are neceſſary to compoſe a conſiderable Synagogue, thought them to be Men of Learning, imployed in the inſtruction of the People, and buſineſs of the Synagogue.

At the Head of theſe Otioſi, he ranks the three Magiſtrates, that judge of Civil Affairs; the fourth is the Chazan, or the ordinary Miniſter of the Synagogue, whom he conſiders as the Biſhop and Angel of the Church. He does not read the Law, but makes choice of thoſe that are to read it; and, as an Inſpector, examines whether they change either the Words or Letters of the Law. Hence, we are told the Chriſtian Biſhops came. For the Holy Ghoſt [i] has preſerved the Titles of Angels and Biſhops, and introduced their Functions into the Chriſtian Church: 'Tis for this Reaſon, perhaps, that the ancient Biſhops of Rome never preached, but only elected thoſe that were to have the Inſtruction of the People.

Each Synagogue has three Parnaſſim, which are Deacons; whoſe Province it is, to collect the Alms, and diſtribute them to the People. Theſe three Miniſters increaſed the number of the Otioſi. The eighth is the Interpreter. This Office became neceſſary at the return from the Captivity; becauſe the People having loſt the perfect uſe of the Hebrew Tongue, Eſdras was forced to interpret, line by line, all the Chapters that were read in the Temple.

---

[a] Or Chaiim, Tr. 135. §. 3. & 4.
[b] Lamprid. in Alex. Severo, c. 45.
[c] Hieres.
[d] Petiti Var. Lect. c. 24. Crit. t. 9.
[e] Benjam. Itiner. p. 70.
[f] Vitringa de Syn. l. 2. paſſim.
[g] Barlanim, Otioſi.
[h] Lightfoot, in Matth. 4. ver. 23. t. 1. p. 279.
[i] Vitringa de Synagog. l. 3. p. 2. c. 3. p. 909. Rhenferdius Diſſ. Philol. de Decem Otioſis. Diſſ. 1. p. 82.

They

They are at a great loss to find two [k] other Persons to make up the number ten: But Lightfoot adds a Doctor of Divinity to teach in the Schools, and his Interpreter, or Usher, to make the Repetitions.

VI. This first Hypothesis is subject to great inconveniences; not only because the number of ten Persons is not easily found in it; but also because those which are reckon'd for Otiosi, are not so. Indeed the Judges or Jewish Magistrates ought not to labour in publick, if they obey the Precept of their Masters. For R. Hunna says, that he that has the command of a City, ought not to labour before three Persons, for fear of cheapning his Dignity: But however, they have their liberty to work at home, when they are alone, or before two Witnesses. Besides, these Rules are not rigorously observed, otherwise the Judge should not eat or drink in publick, nor exercise his Office, unless he was rich enough to keep a Servant. The Judges therefore can't be rank'd among the Otiosi. Lightfoot, though very well versed in these Matters, has overthrown the whole Ecclesiastical Polity of the Jews; for he makes a Bishop and Angel of the Church, of the Chazan who is the Porter of the Synagogue. But farther [m], he has metamorphosed the Parnassim into Deacons; whereas these are the Doctors and Heads of the Synagogue, that judge and instruct it. The Doctor of Divinity and his Interpreter teach in the Academy, and don't belong to the Synagogue. Besides, these Doctors had commonly a Trade which they followed, as St. Paul was a Tentmaker. And therefore others maintain [n], that the three Heads of the Synagogue [o] are to be reckon'd the first of the Otiosi, and the number ten is to be filled up with seven Readers, who are obliged to read the Law every Saturday.

VII. Others have afterwards [p] invented a third System, very different from the two foregoing. 'Tis the Notion of the Jews, that God is provoked, when he does not find ten Persons in the Synagogues at Divine Service. To this they apply the words of Isaiah [q], when he introduces God complaining; Wherefore when I came was there no Man? when I call'd was there none to answer. In order to prevent an abuse, that incurs the Wrath of God, they resolved to chuse ten Persons of eminent Piety, who should have no other business, but to attend on the Synagogue, that the number of the Petitioners might be always full. They are to go to Church at Sun rising, the time that Prayers begin, and not to depart till ten of Clock. They were obliged to return half an hour after four, the time of the Afternoon Service; and as the Evening Prayer immediately succeeded, they continued in the Synagogue till Sun setting. For this purpose they were disengaged from all Civil Affairs, and had Sallaries assign'd them. They have all the same Rank in the Church, and they don't leave it till the time specified for the Service is over. This Opinion is built upon the Authority of Jarchi, who has left an exact definition of these Otiosi.

VIII. This Question is of no great moment, and tis better to leave it to the Reader's Judgment, than warmly to dispute it. 'Tis certain, these ten Otiosi are not known under the Old Testament, when the Jewish Republick being in the most flourishing condition, they ought to have assign'd Sallaries to these Votaries in all the Synagogues. The Jewish Doctors insinuate, that they must have flourish'd in the most prosperous State of Judæa, since by this Character they distinguish great Cities from little ones. Nevertheless, we find not the least track of their Institution, either in the Writings of the Prophets, or the History of the Maccabees, or of the Herods that succeeded them. Besides, this Office is long since abolish'd, and those that have mention'd it, have done it very obscurely. So that it seems to be pursuing a Phantom, to hunt after this idle Company unknown to the Antients.

IX. Josephus is suspected to have hinted them, in relating John's Capitulation with Titus. This Prince besieged Giscala, and fearing that if he took it by Storm, the Inhabitants would be put to the Sword, he offer'd to admit them to conditions. John the Head of the Robbers and Profligates who commanded in the place, intreated Titus to give him the respite of the Sabbath day, during which it was not lawful for the Besieged to Capitulate, or defend themselves. He politickly made use of this delay, and fled in the Night. He [r] carried with him not only the Soldiers; but many idle people with their Family, which he conveyed to Jerusalem. This passage of the Historian has been thought very obscure [s]: It has been sifted, for the Candidates of Giscala, that is for the Magistrates. Afterwards they have discover'd in it, People in rapid haste, which was very necessary for flight; but by Misfortune there appears a great many Women and Children who are not so very fleet. They have at last pitch'd upon the Otiosi, by which they understand the Governors of the City Giscala. The famous Arnaud d'Andilly following Rutinus's Version rather than the Greek, has Translated it, some of the principle Inhabitants with their Family. But why does this Passage seem so obscure? Josephus makes an Opposition betwixt those that kept the Day of Rest, and the Soldiers of John of Giscala, who labour'd and travel'd without scruple. Now [t] having related, that the Jews could not make War or Peace on the Sabbath day, because they were obliged to be idle, or to rest, there is no farther difficulty as to the idle Persons, he took with him in the Night; these being the very same, that had kept the idleness and rest of the Seventh Day: For which reason he expresly uses the same Term. 'Tis in vain then to look for the Candidates, or the Otiosi, since he only meant those that having more Religion than John Giscala's Soldiers observed the rest of the Sabbath, and scrupled to violate it by a long Journey.

X. The ten Otiosi are not only unknown to the Sacred Writers, and to Philo and Josephus; but there is hardly any track of them in the Talmud. The Gemarists of Babylon and Jerusalem [u] speak sometimes of the Ten Idlers, but neither mention their Character, nor their Functions, nor the time of their Institution, unknown to all Antiquity. The distinction the Talmudists make betwixt a City and a Town, is chiefly insisted on. That is call'd a considerable City where there are ten Otiosi, and when there are less it is a Town: 'Tis added, that a Synagogue ought to be built in all places where there are ten Otiosi. But may we not understand hereby ten Persons of suffieiency to live upon their own incomes, without working? And must so indefinite an Expression be enough to Establish a new Office [k] Three Judges, the Bishop, three Deacons, the Interpreter, the Doctor in Divinity, and the Repeater, are Lightfoot's Ten Idles.

---

[l] Rhenferd. ibid. p. 28, 29.
[m] Buxtorf. Lex. Thalm. p. 1821. Vitringa de Syn. l. 3. p. 1. c. 2. p. 629.
[n] Vitring. de 10. Otiosis. c. 10. p. 237.
[o] Parnassim Id. de Syn. l. 2. c. 6. p. 533.
[p] Rhenferdius diffect. Philol. de decem. Otios.
[q] Isai. 50. 2.
[r] Joseph. de Bello Jud. l. 4. c. 4. p. 869.
[s] Αργὸς, S. Albus; αργόλιθοι, Candidiores or Candidati, λευκείμονες, Latinis Albati. The others understand Veloces, celeres Vitr. Decem V. Otiosis. c. 12. p. 113.
[t] Ἀργὴ πάντων αὐτοῖς ἦν ἡ τῆς βρυμαίου θεοῦ. Josep. p. 869.
[u] Vitringa. ibid. c. 2. p. 13, 14.

upon

upon a Society of Men of Learning or Devotion, who muſt be hired by the Synagogue to fill up its vacuities. Indeed the time is ſpecified in the Miſnah, wherein theſe Otioſi were obliged to diſcharge the Conjugal Duty, and they were ſuch as had no painful Office or Employment [x].

XI. We muſt deſcend as low as the twelfth Century of the Chriſtian Church, before we can hear of theſe Otioſi; but then the word had very different ſignifications. Benjamin of Tudela [y] ſays this Title was given ten Perſons at Bagded, becauſe they had no other buſineſs than to apply themſelves to the Affairs of the People. They judged the Caſes all the Week, except the ſecond Day, at which Time they Aſſembled at the Head of the great Council's Houſe; and theſe ten Otioſi, in Conjunction with him, determin'd all the Actions that were brought before them.

XII. Theſe ſeem to be Lightfoot's Otioſi, who were wholly taken up with the publick Good, and the Controverſies of the People. And therefore thoſe that oppoſe this Opinion, invalidate Benjamin's Authority, by obſerving, that this Traveller has related a great many things, wherein he is miſtaken; becauſe he was not an Eye witneſs of them as he pretended to be. This Reflexion is well grounded; but I queſtion whether it be juſtly applied; for Benjamin had travell'd to Bagded. He does not exceſſively extol the Glory of his Nation in this Country, ſince he reckons but a thouſand Inhabitants of his Religion: In fine, he names the Otioſi he ſpeaks of one after another. He ſets Samuel at the Head of them, who was alſo called Jacob, becauſe of the Eminence of his Poſt: He mentions an Eleazar, who deduced his Genealogy from the Prophet Samuel: Has he then forged all theſe Names, and imagin'd a Chimerical Government of the Jews at Babylon?

They ſay, that 'tis improbable there ſhould be ten Academies at Babylon, and that in all appearance there was but one, wherein Samuel Taught, who was its Head and Profeſſor, and nine Colleges wherein the Sub Præceptors made the Scholars repeat the Leſſons, and explain'd to them at large what the Maſter had determin'd in few words. As there is but one Academy at Amſterdam, and many Claſſes wherein they repeat their Lectures, I don't know how they come to compare the Univerſity of Babylon with that of Amſterdam: But ſince Benjamin gives all [z] the Profeſſors the ſame Title, why muſt the Heads of the Academy be chang'd into Sub-Regents, that only made Repetitions. Is it not more natural to ſay, that what Benjamin calls Academies, were ſo many different Schools, in which each Profeſſor handled certain Subjects? We may methinks, without weakning or rejecting this Teſtimony, obſerve that the Otioſi are not thoſe of Lightfoot, ſince there are neither Deacons, nor Biſhop, nor Interpreter of the Synagogues amongſt them. They were ſo many Profeſſors, which could not conſtitute a College of Otioſi, except at Bagded, ſince none but this City had ten Academies, and ten Profeſſors that explain'd the Law. So that Benjamin's Teſtimony is of no Conſequence for other Cities, and the Service of the Synagogues.

XIII. Solomon Jarchi was Benjamin's cotemporary, who grew acquainted with him when he went through Lunel: And yet he had a very different notion of the Otioſi, during the twelfth Century; for this Rabbin, who was the Honour of his Nation in Languedock, affirms, that the Otioſi were diſingaged from all Affairs, and maintain'd at the publick expence, that they might be preſent in the Synagogue at the time of Prayer.

It can't be alledged againſt Jarchi, that he was a lover of Fables, and that he is commonly miſtaken in the Matters he has related; for this is almoſt a general prejudice againſt the Rabbins. Beſides, if theſe common place Reflexions of the Criticks weaken an Author's Authority, they don't abſolutely deſtroy it; ſince he may be miſtaken in many things, and be in the right in that, which is conteſted. The ſtrongeſt Allegation againſt the Lunel Doctor is, that R. Niſſim, that celebrated Man, who was conſulted from all parts upon Caſes of Conſcience [a], and Rules of Diſcipline, aſſerts, that Jarchi is miſtaken, and that the Otioſi who fill'd the Synagogue, had no Stipend: That is not neceſſary, ſays he [b] but they are call'd Otioſi, who leave their work, and are conſtant at the Synagogue at the hours of Prayer, for that ſuffices. Thus you ſee a third Opinion among the Jewiſh Doctors. For here is nothing ſaid of an Office, or a Commiſſion given to certain People with Wages, or an honourable Penſion; but of the voluntary Devotion of ſome Perſons, who were more exact in frequenting publick Aſſemblies; which Opinion is the more probable; for as much as Maimonides, who ſpeaks of theſe Otioſi, and lived in Jarchi's, and Benjamin de Tudela's Time, aſſigns them no Penſion.

XIV. However, we may reconcile all theſe Authors, inſtead of making them contradictory, and guilty of groſs Miſtakes. For indeed, as the Rites of the Synagogue have been different according to Time and Place, we may ſay, 1. That as there was at Babylon ten Heads of the Academies, they gave theſe Poſſeſſors the Title of Otioſi; becauſe they were only employed upon national Affairs. But this uſage was peculiar to Bagded; becauſe this City was the only one that had ſo many Academies and Profeſſors. Benjamin of Tudela, and Lightfoot after him had reaſon to conſider theſe Otioſi as Men of Letters, but they ſhould not confine them only to that particular Uſe; for in reality, there was another at Lunel in the ſame Age: For as Devotion flouriſh'd there, and they had a Notion, that God was diſpleas'd, when there were not ten Perſons in the Synagogue at Prayers, they Elected ten Votaries to be always there preſent. Charity ſo prevailed in this City, that the Profeſſors took upon them [c] to Feed and Cloath all thoſe that came to ſtudy the Law there. No wonder then that thoſe who were ſo bountiful to Strangers, ſhould allow ſome Penſion to ſuch as daily frequented the Synagogues, as Jarchi affirms, and Benjamin ſo far from contradicting him, ſeems to ſtrengthen this Opinion by the Encomium he beſtows on the Charity of Jarchi and his Collegues. 3. But whereas all the Synagogues had not an equal Devotion, nor the ſame Charity, they were contented to leave every one at their Liberty of going to the Synagogues: Some frequented them conſtantly as a point of Devotion, without the Recompence of a Salary; and this was practiſed in R. Niſſim's Time in the fourteenth Century.

XV. From the foregoing Reflexions we may collect four things. Firſt, the ten Otioſi were not known during the Proſperity of the Jewiſh Church, before the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, tho' it was then in a capacity to maintain them. Thoſe therefore that imagine as Capel and Hottinger, that this is a very antient uſage, and that the Talmudiſts, who have mention'd it, have only followed the Tradition of the Fathers, are evidently miſtaken. Would the [x] Miſnah Tit. Cetuvoth כתובות de Dore c. v. § 6. t. 3. p. 74.

[y] Benj. Tudel. Iter. p. 71.

[z] He calls them all Hajeſchibah. הישיבה ראש Caput Academiæ. Benjamin, ibid. p. 70.

[a] There are many celebrated Rabbins of this Name; one the Head of the Academies of Babylon, compoſed the Prayer, that is repeated on the day of Expiations in the Spaniſh Synagogues. Another has made ſome Sermons. This here has Commented, R. Alphez. He lived according to Ganz, in the Year 120. of the VI^th Millen, that is, in 1360.

[b] Apud Rhenferd. Diſſ. Phil. 2. c. 14 n. 10. p. 292.

[c] Benj. Iter. p. 6.

City

City of Jeruſalem have maintain'd three or four hundred Drones, to fill up the numerous Synagogues it contain'd within its Walls? And if there had been ſo many mercenary Votaries in the Church's pay, is it poſſible that they ſhould be never mention'd, and that no track of them ſhould be found in the Authors that are left us? We muſt therefore give the Talmudiſts the Glory of this Invention.

Secondly, the Word Otioſi has often changed its Signification. The Doctors that require ten Otioſi to make a conſiderable City, or would have a Synagogue built in places where Perſons of this Character are found, mean by it, Men of Subſtance, that could attend the Service of God: But afterwards the Name was given to the Heads of the Academies, to the Votaries that were paid for their Aſſiduity in the Synagogue; and laſtly, to thoſe that were voluntarily devout; becauſe they anſwer'd the Original Idea of this Term, which was the renouncing a Man's own Affairs, to attend upon thoſe of God and the Church?

XVI. Thirdly, we muſt not ſearch for a Reaſon of the number ten aſſigned to theſe Otioſi; for indeed 'tis a meer Superſtition of the Jews, who are ſcrupulouſly devoted to this number. They tell, that Joſeph's Brothers, when they had ſold him, ſwore with Imprecations not to reveal it to Jacob; but that Juda perceiv'd that the Anathema became Null by Reuben's abſence, becauſe they were only nine; ſo that to fill up the number ten, they aſſociated God to them, to make him a party to their Oath. This is Stuff: They maintain, that they ought not to repeat the [d] Schema, lift up their Hands, and give the Benediction in the Synagogue, but when there are ten Perſons; and when the number is leſs, they muſt ſtay till it is compleat, alledging for a Reaſon, that God complaining of the ten Spies that made the People murmur, cries, How long will this wicked Congregation murmur? There were then but ten Men that conſtituted this Aſſembly [e]; for Joſhua and Caleb did not murmur. Since God calls ten Perſons a Congregation, there muſt be preciſely this number to form a Synagogue, and praiſe God in the Aſſembly. The Reaſon is very weak; and yet Maimonides reports it as the Foundation of this Practice. We muſt not therefore enquire for a rational Original of this Cuſtom, nor ask why they reckon ten Idlers.

XVII. Laſtly, the ten Idlers continued but a ſhort time, and in particular places; and therefore the Doctors ſpeak with ſo much obſcurity and diſagreement about them. 'Tis an Error to believe them eſſential to the Synagogues, ſince they were not known in the flouriſhing State of them, and are now perfectly aboliſh'd: For as Potent as is the Synagogue of Amſterdam, it does not maintain ten Otioſi, to fill up the gaps of the Aſſembly.

We have ſaid enough of the different Orders of Doctors, and Heads of the Jews; let us now give an Abſtract of their Doctrines, and afterwards of their Ceremonies.

[d] ברכת שמע Benedictio Schemah. 'Tis a form of Prayer repeated Evening and Morning; the Schemah properly contains three periods. The firſt is taken from Deut. 6. 4. 9. Hear, O Iſrael! whence comes the Name Schema, that is given it; the ſecond is taken from Deut. 11. 19, 21. and the laſt from Numb. c. 15. 37. 41. They add to it ſeveral Benedictions. V. Vitring. de Syn. l. 3. p. 1. c. 15. p. 1052.

[e] Apud. Vitrin. Decem. Otioſi. c. 26. p. 183.

28 E 58

The end of the third Book, and ſecond Tome.

THE Hiſtory and Religion OF THE JEWS. BEING, A CONTINUATION OF JOSEPHUS.

BRITISH MUSEUM

BOOK IV.

Containing the Tenets of the Jews; their Confeſſion of Faith; Variations and Hiſtory of their Religion from the Deſtruction of the Temple to this time.

CHAP. I.

The Confeſſion of Faith of the Jews, with their Fundamental Articles.

THE Jews commonly reckon but thirteen Articles of their Faith. Maimonides reduc'd them to this number when he drew their Confeſſion about the end of the Eleventh Century of the Chriſtian Æra: And it was generally receiv'd. All the Jews are obliged to live and die in the Profeſſion of theſe Thirteen Articles. A Commentary hath been ſince added to them to explain ſome places that are too ſhort. We will inſert here this Confeſſion of Faith, and add ſome of the Explications that are tack'd to it in the Commentary of the Bible of Bomberghen, that we may thereby have a general Notion of all the Jewiſh Religion.

I.

I believe with a firm and perfect Faith, that God is the Creator of all things; that he guides, and ſupports all Creatures; that he hath done every thing; and that he ſtill acts, and ſhall act during the whole Eternity. The Commentary adds, that whatſoever he hath created ſhall return into its primitive Nothing by his good Pleaſure; but that his Eſſence ſhall no ways be alter'd.

II.

God is one. There is no Unity like his. He alone hath been, is, and ſhall be eternally our God. The Commentator adds, that he is not a Being, which comprehends any different Genus's under it, as a Being, that may be divided into different Parts, or as a Body capable of addition or diminution. His Unity is abſolute and perfect; and no other Eſſence can be compared to it.

III.

God is not corporeal; he cannot have any material Properties; and no corporeal Eſſence can be compared with him. The Commentator ſays upon this Article, that God can neither go, nor ſtop, nor ſpeak, &c. and that the Scripture only aſcribes to him theſe corporeal Actions to comply with the mean Capacity of Mankind. This is worth notice; becauſe ſome Chriſtians lay another Opinion to their Charge.

IV.

God is the Beginning and End of all Things, and ſhall eternally ſubſiſt. The Commentator adds, that the God, Kadmon, is eternal; and that all other Principles have had a beginning, and Being in time.

V.

God alone ought to be worſhip'd, and none but him is to be ador'd. The Commentary obſerves, that to remove Idolatry, which is condemn'd by the Law, and all the Scripture, neither Angel, nor Saint, nor Planet, nor any Creature ought to be worſhipp'd; and that no Mediators, or Sollicitors between God and Man ought to be ſet up.

VI.

Whatever has been taught by the Prophets is true.

VII.

The Doctrine and Propheſy of Moſes, are true. He is the Father and Head of all the Cotemporary Doctors, that liv'd before or after, or ſhall live after him.

VIII.

The Law, that we have, was given by Moſes. The Commentator adds the Oral Law to that writ by Moſes.

IX.

This Law ſhall never be alter'd, and God will give no other. The Commentator forbids adding, or taking away any one point of it.

X.

God knows all the Thoughts and Actions of Men.

XI.

God will regard the Works of all thoſe, who have perform'd what he commands; and puniſh thoſe who have tranſgreſs'd his Laws. The Commentator places this Reward in Heaven, or in eternal Life, and the Puniſhments in Hell.

XII.

The Meſſiah is to come, and although he ſtays a long time, I will ſtill wait for him till he comes. The Commentator adds two things; one, that whoſoever doubts of the coming of the Meſſiah, accuſes the whole Law of Lies and Falſhood; the other, that the time of his coming ought not to be look'd for in Scripture: And therefore the Sages were mightily in the right to ſay, may he be burſt, who reckons the times of the Meſſiah.

XIII.

The Reſurrection of the Dead ſhall happen when God ſhall think fit. Bleſſed and Glorify'd eternally be the Name of the Creator. Amen.

The Commentator concludes with theſe Remarks, that whoſoever embraces theſe Fundamental Articles of Faith, ought to be look'd upon as a Jew, and to be belov'd and pitty'd; that if he is guilty of thoſe Sins which flow from natural Corruption or the Impetuoſity of the Paſſions, God will puniſh him in this World, but yet that he ſhall obtain eternal Life; and that whoever rejects any of theſe fundamental Articles, plucks up what God hath planted, and deſerves to be caſt out of the Congregation, and abhorr'd as an Epicurean.

I will not make here any Reflections upon this Confeſſion of Faith. For I am not obliged either to confute it or to ſhew how it ſhocks the Chriſtian Religion, againſt which it was drawn in order to ſettle the Reſpect they always had for Moſes. But we ſhall come to the particular Tenets of the Jews, after we have given a ſhort view of their Religion.

CHAP. II.

The Notion, which the Jews have of the Deity.

I. God, a ſpiritual and perfect Being. II. The Attributes of the Deity explain'd to the King of Cozar. III. Some Expreſſions of the Doctors, that ſeem impious, explain'd. Why God weeps. IV. The roaring of God, which makes Cæſar tremble, and the Roman Women miſcarry. V. God's Walks in the Terreſtrial Paradiſe. VI. Some Rabbinical Expreſſions, which degrade the Deity, cenſur'd.

THE Unity of God is one of the fundamental Tenets as well of the modern as of the antient Jews. They equally differ from the Heathens, who believe the plurality of Gods, and from the Chriſtians, who admit three divine Perſons in one Eſſence.

The Rabbins own, that had God a Body, he ſhou'd be a finite Being. So that although they often ſpeak of God as of a Man; yet they look upon him as a Being purely Spiritual. They aſcribe to this infinite Eſſence all the Perfections that can be thought of; and free it from all the defects inherent to human Nature, or other Creatures. They chiefly acknowledge in it an uncontrolable and unlimited Power, whereby it governs the Univerſe.

II. The Jew that converted the King of Cozar was Orthodox in his Explanation of the Attributes of the Deity to this Prince. He ſays, that altho God is call'd Merciful, yet he never feels any yearnings of Bowels, or any motions of the Heart; which are Weakneſſes in Man: But what is meant thereby, is, that the Supream Being doth good to ſome body: That he is compar'd to a Judge, who condemns to, or abſolves from Death, thoſe, that are brought before him, without altering his Nature. He aſſerts, * that God muſt be called Light; but we ought not to fancy, that he is a real Light, or like that which inlightens us; becauſe was he really Light, he ſhou'd be corporeal. But that Name is given him becauſe it is fear'd leſt he ſhou'd be conceiv'd as being Dark; and as this notion wou'd be too mean, we muſt remove it, and conceive God under that of a reſplendant and inacceſſible Light. He affirms, that altho Creatures alone are ſuſceptible of Life and Death, yet it is ſaid that God lives, that he is the Life; but it is thereby underſtood that he exiſts from all Eternity, and not deſign'd to reduce him to the State of mortal Beings. All theſe Explications are good, and agree with the Account, which the Scripture gives of God

III. It is certain, that we often find in the Writings of the Rabbins ſome bold Expreſſions, and Actions aſcrib'd to the Deity, which ſcandalize thoſe who do not dive into the meaning of them, and is the reaſon that they charge theſe Doctors with Blaſphemies and Impieties, whereof they are not guilty. And indeed a good meaning † may be given to theſe Expreſſions, altho they ſeem impious to ſome, and ridiculous to others. When they introduce God weeping during the three Watches of the Night and crying, Wo to me, who have deſtroy'd my Houſe, and diſperſ'd my People among the Nations of the Earth, they only mean, that it was with reluctancy, that God puniſh'd his People. Notwithſtanding that this Expreſſion is bold, yet ſome like it are found in the Prophets. However, it muſt be acknowledg'd that they carry things too far, when they add, that they have often heard this lugubrous Voice of the Deity, when they go over the Ruins of the Temple: For this is a downright Falſhood. They trifle in a ſerious Matter, when they add, that two of the Tears of the Deity, who weeps for the deſtruction of his Houſe, fall into the Sea, and make it very tempeſtuous; or when fond of their Tephilim, they place ſome round the Head of God, whilſt he prays, that his Juſtice may

* Coſri Pars 2. §. 2. p. 77. † See alſo Maimonides, More Nevochim, p. 1. c. 46, 47, 48, where he explains the Expreſſions of Scripture, and the Chapt. 59. 60. p. 99. 103.

at

at laſt give way to his Mercy. If they have a Mind to recommend thereby the neceſſity of the Tephelim, they ſhou'd not do it by degrading the Deity, which they draw to the Vulgar in a ridiculous Dreſs.

IV. They only deſign to repreſent the Effects of the unbounded Power of God, when they ſay, that he is a Lion, whoſe roaring makes a dreadful noiſe; and relate, that Cæſar having a Mind to ſee God, Rabbi Joſhuah begg'd of him to give ſome ſenſible marks of his Preſence. At this Requeſt the Deity remov'd 400 Leagues from Rome, and roar'd, and the noiſe of this roaring was ſo terrible, that the Walls of the City fell down, and all the big-belly'd Women miſcarry'd.——God comming a hundred Leagues nearer, and roaring after the ſame manner, Cæſar frightened by the noiſe, fell from his Throne, and all the Romans that were then alive loſt their Check-Teeth.

V, They intend to expreſs his Preſence in the terreſtrial Paradice, when they make him walk there as a Man. Tney inſinuate that the Souls come ignorant into the World, and with much ado, learn the Wonders of Paradiſe, when they repreſent the ſame God as a School-maſter, who teaches the new Comers into Heaven; and they mean to ſet forth the Excellency of the Synagogue, when they ſay, That it is the Mother, the Wife, and Daughter of God. They deduce the Title of Mother from a Place of the Prophet Iſaiah, wherein God ſays, † Give ear unto me, O my Nation, becauſe by altering the Vowels of this laſt Word, they make it my Mother; and thence conclude that the Synagogue is the Mother of God. Laſtly, they ſay || two things of moment in their own Vindication. The Firſt, that they are obliged to ſpeak of God as if he had a Body, to make the Vulgar conceive, that he is a real Being, becauſe the Crowd apprehend no real Exiſtence but what is material and ſenſible. The Second, that they aſcribe no Actions to God but what are noble and denote ſome Perfection, as that of Moving and Acting: And therefore they never ſay, that God eats or drinks.

VI. However, it muſt be confeſs'd, that theſe Divines are neither exact, nor ſincere enough in their Expreſſions. For they make God weep. Beſides, why will they oblige People to put themſelves to the rack to reach their meaning? Is it a clearer way of explaining the ineffable Nature of God, to add ſome new Shaddows to thoſe, which his Greatneſs already ſpreads over our Minds? What is impenetrable they ſhou'd endeavour to unfold, inſtead of ſpinning a new Veil, which makes it more inacceſſible to our Sight. All Nations, and the generality of Mankind are inclin'd to frame a Notion of a corporeal God. If the Rabbins have not had the ſame Conceptions as the Vulgar, they have affected to ſpeak like them; and they thereby leſſen the Reſpect due to the Deity. Whereas we muſt always have noble and ſublime Ideas of the Deity; and inculcate theſe Notions into the Minds of the Multitude, who are but too prone to vilify them. Why then do the Rabbins ſo often repeat things, which are only fit to make the Vulgar look upon God as a material Being? Theſe Doctors can't be altogether juſtify'd. For what do they mean, when they affirm, that God could not reveal to Jacob that his Son Joſeph was Sold, becauſe his Brothers had oblig'd God to ſwear with them, that this Secret ſhou'd be kept upon Pain of Excommunication? Or when they aſſert that God being ſorry that he had created Man, comforted himſelf that he had not fram'd him out of a Celeſtial Matter; ſince Man had then involv'd all the Inhabitants of Paradiſe into his Rebellion. What wou'd they be at, when they relate that God plays with the Leviathan, and that he hath kill'd the Female of this Monſter, becauſe it was not decent, that God ſhould play with a Female? The far fetch'd Myſteries drawn from thence muſt be very coarſe, and always unworthy of the Deity: And if thoſe, that ſtudy them are puzz'led to find out their myſtical Senſe, and unable to unravel it, what ſhall the Croud think, to whom theſe Whims are preach'd?

† Iſai. 51. 4. || Maimon. More Nevochini, p. 1. c. 27. p. 32.

CHAP. III.

The Origine of the Tenet of the Trinity taught by the Patriarchs and Philoſophers. Cudworth's Syſtem.

I. Different Methods to prove the Trinity to the Jews. II. Whether the Patriarchs, and the Jews are the firſt Authors of this Myſtery. The Advantages that are taken from this Opinion. III. The Method that ſhall be followed in this and the following Chapters. IV. Why God revealed the Trinity to the Patriarchs. V. This Myſtery found among the Perſians, Egyptians and Samothracians. VI. Orpheus taught it. VII. Arguments, that it was the Tenet of Pythagoras. VIII. Plato embrac'd it. IX. His Thought unfolded. X. Plato is Orthodox. XI. The Conformity of his Trinity with that of the Chriſtians. XII. Another Conformity. XIII. A third Conformity. XIV. The Encomiums, which the Fathers give him. XV. Theſe Philoſophers more excuſable than the Fathers. The Teſtimony of St Auguſtin, who ſays it. XVII. They own'd a Subordination between the Hypoſtaſes. XVII. The Fathers have done the ſame. XVIII. Some Variations among the Diſciples of Plato. XIX. What Uſe Dr Cudworth hath made of theſe Variations.

THE ſecond Step that the Chriſtians make in Religion, is to ſeparate from the Jews; for after they have join'd together in the Adoration of a God, who is ſuperlatively perfect, they immediately find the abyſs of the Trinity, which ſets them at an infinite diſtance from one another. The Jews look upon three Perſons, as upon three Gods, and they abhor this Tritheiſm: But the Chriſtians, who believe the Unity of a God, will have this Title to be aſcrib'd at the ſame time to the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe to be ador'd. It is impoſſible to reconcile ſo contrary Opinions; and yet ſome bold Divines have endeavour'd to do it. They think, the Method, which the generality of Divines follow to reconcile the Jews to this great Myſtery of Chriſtianity, to be uſeleſs and defective: That the Trinity is not clearly enough taught in the Old Teſtament to convince the Jews of it; that it wou'd be in vain to quote to them the New, becauſe they do not receive it. And, that Time is waſted in Diſputes about every Oracle, and whilſt Objections and Anſwers are weigh'd, Life is ſpent, and, no progreſs made in their Converſion. So that they believe, that the Jews muſt be brought back to the Origine of this Tenet, which ſhocks them ſo much; and made ſenſible that we are obliged to them for this Myſtery, becauſe their Anceſtors taught it. Rittangelius, who follow'd this Method, affirms *, That a Jew, who had a long while diſputed with him, was at laſt convinc'd by a paſſage of the Targum; and cry'd out, We are undone, if theſe Words will admit of no other Senſe; and your Religion is here mightily ſtrengthened.

II. Two different ways are employ'd to prove to the Jews, that they are the firſt Authors of the Tenet of the Trinity. 1. The learned Dr Cudworth maintains, that they had ſpread this Tenet in Caldea and Egypt a long time before Moſes writ; and that it was from this Tradition, that it was preſerv'd in all the Places, thro which the Iſraelites paſs'd; and that the Perſians, Greeks, Latins, and Samothracians had pretty clear notions of it. 2 It is alſo pretended, that ſince the Writings of Moſes came out, this Tenet was receiv'd in the Jewiſh Nation; that it was clearly taught not only by the Prophets, but alſo by the Authors of the Apocryphal Books; and that it is found in the Caldee Paraphraſes, in Philo, and in all the Authors, who writ before Jeſus Chriſt. So that the Jews reject it only out of Malice and Spite.

It wou'd be a very great Advantage, cou'd the Jews be convinc'd, that their Anceſtors, and even the Patriarchs themſelves, have believ'd the Trinity; that the holy Scripture doth not only teach this Tenet, but alſo, that it was preſerv'd by Tradition from the beginning of the World down to Moſes; and that it is ſo comformable to right Reaſon, that the Heathens willingly receiv'd it, from the antient Iſraelites.

The Unitarians wou'd alſo be oblig'd to lay aſide their Syſtem, and ſubmit to ſo deciſive a Proof. They ought not to complain, that they are brought before the Synagogue, as if it was a proper Judge of Controverſies. For the Patriarchs and Authors that are quoted, living before the Publication of the Goſpel, cannot be ſuſpected. And indeed were it true, that the Doctrine of the Trinity had been believ'd in all times, and in all the Centuries of the Jewiſh Church; and that the Heathens receiv'd it as well as the Jews, it cou'd no longer be doubted, but this Tenet agrees with right Reaſon, and was taught by Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles, who have ſpoken more plainly upon this Matter, than the Patriarchs, Jewiſh Doctors, or Heathens.

III. But without inſiſting upon the Advantages that ariſe from the two Syſtems we are going to repreſent, we cannot omit relating what the Jews have believed and do believe concerning this Myſtery, and diſtinguiſhing what is imputed to them, and what they teach, ſince we write the Hiſtory of the Tenets of the Jews. We are indiſpenſably obliged to aſcend to the Origine of this great Myſtery, and ſee, 1. Whether the Patriarchs and antient Jews taught it as ſoon as they were ſettled in Caldea, and Egypt; and whether it was conveyed among the Heathen Philoſophers through the Canal of Tradition, or Divine Cabbala. 2. We ſhall afterwards examine, whether it be true, that the Jewiſh Writers, who preceeded the Birth of the Meſſiah, have explain'd this Myſtery, which they took from the Writings of Moſes, as well as from Tradition. 3. Laſtly, we ſhall examine, whether it was a Hatred to Chriſtianity, which hath induc'd their modern Doctors to reject wholly this Tenet.

We ſhall begin with Dr Cudworth's Syſtem, whoſe Book is full of extenſive and profound Learning. But ſince Truth ought to be preferr'd to whatſoever may ſeem moſt conducive to the Advancement of the Chriſtian Religion, we will always prefer it accordingly.

We ſhall now preſume to unravel ſome new Methods, and the Arguments that are alledg'd to ſupport them, and we ought to be allow'd the ſame liberty, which we give to others, either to reject, or follow them. It is enough for us to ſtate fairly what may inform and pleaſe without being forc'd blindly to receive it. The Chriſtians may make uſe of theſe Weapons, if they find them fit for their purpoſe; and the Jews may eaſily ſee, that we do not deſign to over-reach, or delude them.

IV. Mankind, according to Dr Cudworth, cou'd never attain to the Knowledge of the Myſtery * of the Trinity, by the help of Nature and Reaſon. God was oblig'd to reveal it: He inſtructed the Patriarchs with this Truth; and they ſpread it wherever they dwelt, but eſpecially in Caldea and Egypt, where they went often. This Tenet was conveyed by a Canal of divine Tradition, and Cabbala from the Jews to the Pagan Philoſophers, who taught it to their Diſciples. Thus God prepar'd Mankind to the full Manifeſtation of this great Myſtery, which was to be more perſpicuouſly unfolded by Chriſt and his Apoſtles; and gave us thereby a good Argument againſt thoſe Wretches, who maintain, that this Myſtery is contrary to Reaſon. For if the Heathens without being conſtrain'd by a divine Authority receiv'd it; if they admitted the Tradition of the Iſraelites, and made it a part of their Philoſophical Syſtem, they muſt of neceſſity have believed it agreeable to their Principles, and natural Reaſon.

V. And indeed, ſome Footſteps of the Trinity are diſcover'd in the Myſteries, which the Perſians celebrated in honour of Mithra. Whether Zoroaſter, who reform'd the Religion of the old Perſians, had convers'd with the Jews, or read the Books of Moſes, he not only foretold the Magi the Birth of the Meſſiah, but alſo poſitively ſaid, that the Father hath perfected all things, and given them to the ſecond Spirit, which all the World calls the Firſt. Here is the Father and the Son; one Creator, and the other, who hath all things tranſferred to him, and is at the ſame time the Second and the Firſt.

Παντα γαρ ἐξετελεσε Πατηρ τῳ παρεδωκε
Δευτερῳ ὃν πρωτον καλιζεται πᾶν γενος ἀνθρων

Omnia † enim perfecit Pater, & menti tradidit
Secundæ, quam primam vocat omne genus.

The Egyptians, who had a Correſpondence with Iſaac and Jacob and their Poſterity, knew alſo this Myſtery. In a Word, it was ſpread among the Samothracians, ſince they ador'd a certain number of Gods under the Hebrew Name Cabirm, that is to ſay Almighty.

VI. The Greeks learn'd their Theology from Orpheus. This Father of the Greek Religion own'd a Trinity; Phanus, Uranus, and Cronus, were the three divine Perſons, which have been transform'd into three different Gods. Pythagoras inſtructed by Aglaophe, drew his Principles from thence; and Plato, who read the Writings of Pythagoras and Orpheus, follow'd thoſe Maſters. So that it muſt not be thought ſtrange, that the Myſtery of the Trinity, which Orpheus, by a divine Tradition receiv'd from the Jews, ſhou'd be known and acknowledged by the Greeks, and particularly by the Diſciples of Pythagoras and Plato.

VII. It can't be doubted, but that the Trinity was one of the great Myſteries of the Pythagorean School. For Moderatus aſſures us, that theſe Philoſophers admitted a firſt Unity, which is above all Beings whatſoever; that they alſo own'd a ſecond Unity, which was intelligent, and the Idea of all things; and that they acknowledg'd beſides a third Unity, which was Phyſical, the Soul of every thing, and which participated of the

* Rittangelius liber Jeſirah, p. 112. * Cudworth the true Intellectual Syſtem of the Univerſe, Book I. c. 4. p. 546, &c.
† V. Hyde de Relig. Perſar.

firſt

first and second Unity. Can any thing be more plain? Here are three Unities, which partake of one and the same Nature; a first Person above all Beings whatsoever; a second, which is the Understanding or eternal Wisdom; and a third, which is the Soul or Spirit. Farther, when Plato taught publickly this Tenet, he observ'd that it was not a new Opinion; but an old one, which he explain'd, because Parmenides had set it but in a very dim Light. As Parmonides was a Pythagorean, no doubt but it was one of the Tenets of his Sect.

VIII. But Plato hath handled this Subject much more clearly and fully, than all the Philosophers that writ before him; and is for that reason look'd upon as ỹ Father of that Tenet. *And indeed, he went into Egypt, as Apuleius says; and there learn'd of the Prophets this Mystery of the Trinity. It was he, that introduc'd it among the Greeks, who communicated it afterwards to the Romans. For Minerva was the eternal Wisdom of God. She was the Pallas of the Athenians, that came out of the Head of Jupiter, that is, she was begotten in a wonderful and supernatural way. Aristotle, who often forsook his Master's Principles, yet acknowledg'd that the number three was mysterious both in Nature and Religion, and was therefore us'd in Sacrifices, and Purifications.

The rest of Plato's Disciples have done three things; 1. Some have explain'd his notions, and made them clearer. 2. Others have spoil'd them, because they attempeed to make this Theology agree with that of the Vulgar, which cou'd not endure that the Plurality of Gods shou'd be oppugn'd For this oblig'd them to fall into Thritheism, and call three Gods the Persons of the Trinity. 3. Lastly, Those who liv'd since the preaching of the Gospel, were forc'd to disguise and alter Plato's Principles. that so they might the more easily keep out of the Christian Church wherein they cou'd not avoid entring, had they acknowledg'd the most sublime and incredible of all its Mysteries. However, this impenetrable Mystery did not hinder many from forsaking the School, and becoming Fathers of the Church. All these Observations are sufficient for Confirmation that Plato taught the Trinity.

IX. Plato † as well as the Pythagoreans distinguish'd two sorts of Gods; some were eternal, and intelligible above the World; others were begotten, sensible, and spread abroad in the World. He observ'd, in the first Order, three Hypostases, the Being, the Word, and Spirit or Soul. These were the three Persons.

X. Dr Cudworth observes, that the Trinity of this Philosopher agrees in three things with that of the Orthodox Christians. First, he kept a just medium between the Error of Sabellius, and that of the Arians. The first acknowledg'd only a Trinity of Names; and the other pretended that the second Person was drawn from Nothing; that there had been a time, when it had no Being. Whereas Plato ‖ ascrib'd to the Understanding an ineffable and eternal Generation. 1. He did not maintain a Trinity of Names or of Words, but acknowledged a real distinction between the Hypostases or Persons. 2. He asserted, that those Persons did necessarily exist· and were Infinite and Almighty. 3. Lastly, he call'd these three Persons one God. So that he came nearer the Orthodox than the Unitarians and Arians.

XI. First, Plato distinguish'd three different Principles: The Grand-father, the Father, and the Grand-son; but when he said, that the Second Hypostasis was Reason, we must not imagine, that he depriv'd the first of all manner of Knowledge so much, as that it should want Reason to guide it. Even Proclus, who said, that this first Principle did not know it self, did not make it a blind Being. The Reason why he argu'd at this rate was, because he was afraid lest the knowledge of the Understanding shou'd imply an Idea of Composition inconsistent with the Simplicity of the first Being. Yet for all that he ascrib'd to it a most sublime Light, from whence all others flow'd. He compar'd the Knowledge of the first Hypostasis to the Light of the Sun, and that the Word, or Reason to a Ray; One was the inaccessible Light, the other a shining Brightness of his Glory. St Paul made use of this Expression. As when the Christians call the Son, the Word, they do not thereby insinuate, that the Father was without Knowledge and Wisdom; because to divest him of that Perfection, wou'd be to destroy his Deity upon a pretence of glorifying him in his Son: We owe also the same Justice to the Platonists who when they distinguish'd Reason or Thought, as a different Principle, or Hypostasis, they did not deprive the first Being of its Knowledge. So that Philosophers had better notions of the Trinity than many Christians. For St Augustin reproch'd some of these, for maintaining, that the Word was the Wisdom; whereby the Father was enlighten'd and govern'd.

XII. Secondly, Plato maintain'd, that these three Hypostases were eternal *. They were Universal, Infinite and Omnipotent Beings. The first begot the second, and the second the third. He asserted, that they were of the same Nature. So that these † Philosophers anticipated the Decree of the Council of Nicæa, and were so far from occasioning the Arian Heresy, that they supply'd the Church with strong Arguments against it. Plato added likewise, that these three Hypostases necessarily existed; that the first cannot be without the second, nor the second without the third. Therefore Plotin confuted the Gnosticks of his time, who attempted to multiply these Persons. To encrease, or lessen the number of these intelligible Beings is, says he, to overset Order and Nature. For he that lessens them, is obliged to say, that the Soul, and the Understanding are one and the same thing, or that the Understanding is the first God. But these three Principles differ from one another. Let us now examine of what Nature these Hypostasis wou'd be, were there more than three.

Lastly, This Philosopher attributed to these three Hypostases the Creation of all things.

Thirdly, The Trinity of Plato, and that of the Christians agree, since this Philosopher own'd that those three Principles were one God. It can't be deny'd, but the Platonists often call'd these Hypostases † three Natures, three Principles, three Causes, three Agents, three Gods. But these were only their way of speaking; for they in the main acknowledg'd but one Deity. When Plato says that the World is the Image of the eternal Gods, he means thereby the three Hypostases, which have contributed to the Creation of the Universe. Plotin speaks often of that God, who is All in All, and fills the Universe. He affirms, that there is nothing between these Hypostases; and that they are only distinguish'd, because one is after another; and that one begot, and the other was begotten. Thus far their Trinity agreed with that of the Christians. And indeed they drew it from the Fountain head, since both received it from the Jews.

XIV. The Fathers of the Church have acknowledg'd this Truth, and commended * Plato, as one of the Masters, who hath unravell'd this grand Mystery. Amelius got some Admirers in the Church, because he had quoted, with some little Alterations, certain Verses of St John. Justin Martyr maintain'd that Plato gave

* Kidder. Demonstration of the Messias, T. 3. p. 278. † Θεοὶ αἰδιοι νοητοὶ ὑπερκοσμιοι, and the Gods, Θεοὶ γεννητοὶ ἀιδ ιοὶ κοσμιοὶ Among the first Order he put ἐν which he also call'd μοναϛ, and τωνδε ἀγαθον τῆϛ ψυχῆϛ. ‖ Ibid. p. 592. * Cudworth, ibid. p. 578. † They call it συγγενὴϛ, ὁμογενὴϛ, ὁμοειδὴϛ ibid. ‖ Ibid p. 588. 590. * Ibid. p 622.

the

the ſecond place to the Word; and the third to the Spirit that was ſpread over the Waters. Clemens Alexandrinus † found the Trinity in a Letter, which Plato writ to Dyoniſius. The Holy Trinity, ſays he, is taught in it: For the third Principle is the Holy Ghoſt, and the Son is the ſecond. Origen || quoted Plato againſt Celſus, with all the aſſurance in the World. The Man, ſays he, who fancies that he knows every thing, and quotes his Plato ſo often, ought to explain what that Philoſopher ſaid of the Creator and Governour of the Univerſe, whom he looks upon as the Son of God. Euſebius * goes ſomething farther. For he affirms, that the Platoniſts follow'd the Oracles of the Hebrews, which confirms Dr Cudworth's Thoughts, that they took this Tenet from the antient Tradition of the Jews, which was ſpread in the World.

Dr. Cudworth does not diſſemble, but fairly owns, that the Platonick Philoſophy is defective. The Philoſophers preſerv'd the Eſſence of the Myſtery; but err'd in ſome Circumſtances. As they had not the Torch, that is, the H. Scripture in their hands, and that the Jewiſh Cabbala, which was not written, had gone thro ſeveral Maſters, it became obſcure. Councils were not call'd to ſupply that defect. So that theſe Pagan Divines being wholly deſtitute of help and aſſiſtance, deviated a little from the Truth. But if we compare their Deviations with thoſe of the firſt Fathers of the Church, we ſhall not only find them very like one another, but alſo that the firſt were more excuſable than the Fathers, ſince theſe had better Helps and more Knowledge. St Auguſtin obſerv'd that difference. Philoſophers, ſays he, ſpeak very freely in Matters of Religion, and are not afraid to offend the Ears; but as for us, we are confin'd to a certain way of ſpeaking, leſt ſome terms being underſtood in their natural Signification might give birth to Impiety. We dare not in ſpeaking of God ſay, that there are two, or three Principles, two or three Gods, notwithſtanding we ſay, when we ſpeak of the Father, that he is God; and affirm the ſame thing of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

XVI. It is certain, that the Platoniſts did not expreſs themſelves clearly enough concerning the Unity of the divine Eſſence. Beſides, they acknowledg'd a Subordination, and dependance between theſe three Hypoſtaſes. They look'd upon the firſt as containing virtually all things in it ſelf; and this firſt Principle was before All *. They thought that Ideas begun to be unfolded in the ſecond Principle, and diſtinguiſh'd there: And therefore they call'd it Reaſon and Wiſdom, and ſaid that it was All. Laſtly, the third Hypoſtaſis gives Being to things, which were but virtually in the firſt, and begun to unfold themſelves in the ſecond; and therefore they ſaid that it was One and All. One was the infinite Power; the other, that Wiſdom, which gave an Idea of Productions; and the third really produc'd them. One was the fountain of Goodneſs; the other, which was in it one Nature, Wiſdom, had Goodneſs by participation; and the laſt, which was the Mover and principle of Motion, was Partaker of the Wiſdom and Goodneſs of the others. One was a ſimple Light, above all Eſſence, and all Underſtanding; to which Philoſophers endeavoured to be united by a contemplative Life; and they did it ſometimes with Succeſs. Porphyry boaſted, that he was arriv'd to the Enjoyment of the ſupream Light by contemplation, as well as the myſtical Votary's of Chriſtianity. The ſecond was Wiſdom and Reaſon, and the third was always acting and in motion. The firſt was immovable; as the King of all things ought to be, who commands without working himſelf. The ſecond, tho immovable in its Nature, yet had ſome Action ſince he fram'd the Plan of the World; and the third put it in Execution. It was this laſt Principle, which they call'd Venus or Love, becauſe from this Spring, which empty'd it ſelf, all manner of Goods and Creatures flow'd.

XVII. In the main, if the Platoniſts put ſome difference between their Hypoſtaſes, they are not more Heterodox than the Fathers who taught as they did, that the Father was the Spring and the Son the Rivulet; that the Father is the Sun, and the Son a Ray that darts from it. The Fathers, who liv'd before the Council of Nicæa having acknowledg'd ſome difference between the Perſons of the Trinity, how can Philoſophers, who have only done the ſame thing, be condemn'd? Beſides, this difference ſeems grounded upon right Reaſon, and doth not ſhock our Faith: for we muſt have another Idea of him, who is, as the primitive Eſſence, and Principle of Generation than of him who receiv'd it; and tho the Father and the Son have an equal Power over all Creatures; yet the Father had at leaſt a Power of begetting, which the Son had not.

XVIII. To conclude, Dr Cudworth makes and eſſential Remark to ſtrengthen his Syſtem, viz. that Plato's Diſciples have alter'd the Doctrine of their Maſter, whence he concludes two things; one, that we ought not to think it ſtrange that we find the Tenets of the Platoniſts different from thoſe of Chriſtianity; the other that we muſt not lay any ſtreſs upon the Opinions of thoſe Diſciples of Plato, who have differ'd from us.

And indeed Proclus, Simplicius and other Platoniſts made ſome Beings flow out of theſe three Hypoſtaſes, which were like unto them, and became ſo many Gods. They thereby reſtored the Polytheiſm of the Heatheniſh Vulgar; and loaded their Myſtery of the Trinity with new Abſurdities.

They affirm'd, that from the firſt Principle which they call'd One, and entirely Good Sprung, I know not how many Unities and Goodneſſes, which they deify'd. For theſe Goodneſſes being produced by the firſt Goodneſs, and having the ſame Nature as He, muſt have been God †. But where can they find any Footſteps of theſe Unities in Plato? They were, no doubt, invented ſome time before Proclus, who finding that he cou'd not vindicate them, ſcreen'd them under ambiguous Terms, and maintain'd that theſe Unities were Ideas.

However it muſt be acknowledg'd, that moſt of them made many Intellects, or Ideas to flow from the ſecond Hypoſtaſis, which had the ſuperintendency of Souls, and became ſo many immutable and impeccable Gods as the firſt Intellect which had produced them.

There was only ſome Difference between thoſe who explain'd this Emanation. Plotin did not diſtinguiſh thoſe Ideas of the Soul. He looked on them rather as the Point or Head of Souls: and they ſay Porphyry ſeemed abſolutely to reject them.

---

† St John ſays, ὁ γεγόνεν ἐν αὐτῷ ζωὴ ἦν; but Amelius read ἐν ᾧ τὸ γενομένον ζῶν ἦ ζωὴ, ἦν ὃν πεφυκεαὶ; that is, in whom whatever hath been made, is living and Life, and really exiſting. || Strom. l. 5. p. 598 Orig. cont. Cels. l. 6 p. 308. * Euſeb. Prap. Ev.ang. l 11 c. 20.

* They call'd

1. Ἓν πανῶν	1. Πάντα ἑνικῶς
2. Ἓν πάντα	2. Πάντα νοερῶς
3. Ἓν ἦ πάντα	3. Πάντα ψυχικῶς
1. One before all things.	1. All unitively
2. One All.	2. All Intellectually.
3. One and All.	3. All actively, or (Word for Word) after an Animal manner.

† Id. p. 569.

They

They agreed better on the third Hypoſtaſis, which is the Soul; for they own'd that it animated the Univerſe, and was in this great World as the Soul is in Animals, which moves them, and cauſes them to act. Thus God became an odd Compound of created Things, corporeal and ſenſible, and, at the ſame time, of infinite Power; and by that means they fell again into the Spinoſiſm of the antient Philoſophers, after they had taken a great deal of pains to get out of it. Numenius the Pythagorean ſaid alſo very plainly that the World was God. To ſay that the World became God by Accident, by Reaſon of the Soul, which gave it its Force and Energy, is to elude the difficulty inſtead of removing it. Moreover, they maintained that out of this Soul came forth all the Souls of the World, which had the ſame Purity and Excellence, when they conſidered them quite naked, and diveſted of all things corporeal, which diſhonour them.

XIX. Dr. Cudworth was in the right in prepoſſeſſing his Readers againſt thoſe Notions of the Platoniſts; for it muſt be confeſs'd that they mightily disfigure their Syſtem of the Trinity. But I don't know whether we ought to diſtinguiſh the Diſciples that profeſs'd they follow'd their Maſter; or whether it be true that Plato had been more orthodox than they, or at leaſt that he believed the Trinity more orthodoxly than the Unitarians and the Arians, or that he receiv'd that Doctrine of the Antients by way of Tradition: That is what we ſhall undertake to examine in the following Chapter.

CHAP. VI.

The Trinity was not believed by the antient Jews, nor known to the Heathen. Platoniſm unfolded. A Refutation of Dr. Cudworth.

I. The Jews had no Tradition about the Trinity. II. Whether Plato got it from Moſes. How he underſtood the Voice of God. III. The Perſians ignorant of the Trinity. The Oracles of Zoroaſter relating to the Meſſiah. The Myſtery of Mithra. IV. Orpheus did not believe the Trinity. Uranus and Saturn Kings of the Gauls. V. Pallas not J. Chriſt. VI. Whether the Diſciples of Plato have alter'd the Doctrine of their Maſter. VII. His Errors about Ideas. VIII. Plato by his eſtabliſhing three Hypoſtaſies, meant three Perfections in God. IX. He deſign'd rather to make a Ladder of the Creatures to God. X. Timæus of Locri, the Author of that Opinion. XI. The gloſs of Marcilius Ficinus upon this matter. XII. A Subordination among the Hypoſtaſies. XIII. The Expreſſions of the Platoniſts tho alike reſembling thoſe of the inſpir'd Writers, prove nothing. XIV. Explication of the firſt Hypoſtaſis, idle and weak. XV. It gives Birth to two others. XVI. The advantageous Idea of the ſecond Hypoſtaſis. XVII. Its Defects. XVIII. Of the Soul of the World. XIX. The Apology Dr. Cudworth makes for it. XX. The Encomiums the Fathers have given to Plato. XXI. Reaſons for the Exceſſes into which they fell. XXII. The Errors that have ſprung from them. XXIII. A Juſtification of his Doctrines. XXIV. If Plato were an Idolater.

I. DR. Cudworth hath built upon three Suppoſitions that are very uncertain not to ſay falſe.

Firſt, He ſuppoſes that the Myſtery of the Trinity was known to the antient Jews by an antient and divine Tradition. But from whence does he know it ſince he has not any proof of it? We do not find in the Hiſtory of Abraham, Iſaac, and the other Saints that lived ſince the Deluge, that they had any clear Notions of that Doctrine. How have they tranſmitted to the Heathen World a Myſtery which they themſelves were ignorant of? How was that Tradition preſerved among the Gentiles ſo pure, that Plato has ſpoken of it more clearly than the Prophets, and is more Orthodox than a great many Chriſtians? We muſt not therefore ſuppoſe this Cabal or Myſtery to be Divine; and ſince it is the Source from whence the Gentiles have derived their Knowledge, they ought to have diſcovered it, and to lead us to it.

The Defenders of Tradition commonly ſay, that God and J. Chriſt thought fit to make uſe of this Cabal, and to give an Oral Law, becauſe they would conceal certain Opinions from the People and from Infidels. But there is not any Reaſon why God ſhou'd be obliged to commit to Tradition the Myſtery of the Trinity, ſeeing he was willing it ſhou'd be known to the Heathens and Idolaters in all Ages, and to ſhew by their own conſent that he perfectly concurs with Reaſon.

If God had been pleas'd to reveal this Myſtery to the Jews and the Heathen, why did he not engrave it in groſs and legible Characters in the Writings of Moſes, inſtead of leaving it to the uncertainty of Tradition which often varies? This was ſo much the more neceſſary, that the ſecond Perſon of the Trinity was ỳ Meſſiah, the Protector and Deliverer of the Church And yet Moſes ſays nothing of the Perſons concerned in the Creation but indirectly and curſorily, as he finds it in his way; whereas Plato explains the nature of thoſe three Principles, diſtinguiſhes their Rank and their Operations, and makes upon this matter a Syſtem conformable to that of the Chriſtians. 'Tis ill arguing to ſay, that the Myſtery of the Trinity cannot be known but by Revelation; The Heathen have taught that Myſtery, it muſt therefore follow, that it was known to them by ſome Revelation. But there is no written Revelation; therefore there was a Tradition among the Jews, which has paſs'd to the Heathen; for it may be ſaid on the contrary that ſeeing the Myſtery of the Trinity cannot be known but by Revelation, and that there is no ſuch thing among the Heathen, nor among the antient Jews, they have not therefore taught that Myſtery.

II. Euſebius ſays that Plato had drawn this Doctrine from the Oracles of the Hebrews; they add, that that Philoſopher, who had been in Egypt and Phœnicia, where the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets were ſo well known, might have read them, and ſo much the more as there was an old Greek * Verſion before Alexander the Great. It † appears that he had read them, ſince he aſſures us that the Sovereign Good is the Author of all that is very good and beautiful in the World; for thoſe Words are borrowed from Moſes, who ſays in the beginning of Geneſis, that God ſaw that all he had made was very good.

But by taking this ſide, they leave Tradition and the Divine Cabal to have recourſe to the Sacred Scriptures. It is not neceſſary that that Philoſopher ſhould have read them, to ſay, that what is very good and beautiful comes from God; for Reaſon dictates it, and that flows naturally from Plato's Principles. Moreover,

* Th. Gale's Court of the Gentiles. † Le Moine's varia Sacra, p. 1120.

there

there is not found in all the Writings of Moſes ſo bright Ideas of the Trinity as thoſe that are attributed to that Philoſopher; ſo that it is not from thence he drew his Syſtem of the Trinity. The Platoniſts were ſo far from acknowledging themſelves to be Copyiſts from the Jews and their Cabal, that they publickly declared that their Maſter had taught the Voice of God himſelf; that is to ſay, that by Study and Meditation he had aſcended even to the Godhead, ſo as to know the Nature and Perfections of it. He had got ſo near to it, that he ſeemed to have heard its Voice and Anſwers; for this was the Idea of the Contemplative Philoſophers. To fancy that the Platoniſts underſtoood by the divine Voice, either the divine Cabal of the Jews, or the Writings of Moſes, that God had dictated, would be to aſcribe a Thought to them which never entred into their Heads; for they were not ſo well acquainted with the holy Scripture as to ſpeak of it with ſo much Reſpect; and in the time of Plato there was no mention either of the Oral Law, or divine Cabal, or Tradition about the Articles of Faith.

Since that is the foundation of Dr. Cudworth's Opinion, he ought, before all things, to prove, that there was a conſtant Tradition of the Trinity among the Jews, and to ſhew us the Channels thro which it had ran from Adam to Noah, from Noah to Abraham, from the Patriarchs to Moſes, and the traces of it which have been preſerv'd pure in the Nation from Moſes to Plato; but yet he has not done it, which is a very great defect in his Syſtem.

III. Neither has he any better proved that the Heathen after they had got this Tenet from the Jews, did tranſmit it to Plato. In ſhort, this divine Tradition ſhould have been much more clear and pure among the Perſians and Egyptians than among other Nations. But thoſe who have more than ordinarily ſtudied the Religion of the antient and modern Perſians, aſſure us, that * keeping ſtrictly and religiouſly to the Precepts of Zoroaſter, they adore one only God, without ſpeaking of any Perſons. In a Word, the Author of their Sacred Book † entituled Sad-der, begins it in the Name of God, of the Divine Eſſence, and of his Attributes, the Original Source of Fulneſs and Life; in the Name of God who created the Soul and the Intellect; of that God who made the Body and the Soul; of that God who is the Maſter of our Exiſtence and Life; of that God who is the only One in the Univerſe.

We are aſſured likewiſe that the ſame Zoroaſter had inſtructed the Magi, that when they ſhou'd ſee a Star appear, wherein they ſhould obſerve the Image of a Virgin, they ſhou'd take the Road to the Jews Paradice, that is to ſay, to Jeruſalem. From whence they concluded that tho he acknowledged the Unity of a God, yet he was not without ſome faint glimpſe of the Birth of the Meſſiah, and having advertis'd the Magi of it, they profiting by his Inſtructions, went to Jeruſelam juſt at the time when J. Chriſt came into the World; but all the Oracles attributed to Zoroaſter concerning the Meſſiah and the Trinity, are evidently ſuppoſititious. They alſo || differ very much about this; for they make him ſay, that there are three Children to be born of a Virgin, the laſt of which ſhould eſtabliſh the true Religion. They make theſe Children to be begotten after an impure manner; and if the Chriſtian Interpreters are to be believed, thoſe three Children pointed out the three different Eſtates of J. Chriſt. But thoſe are very wild and fruitleſs Conjectures, ſeeing the Precepts and Oracles of Zoroaſter have been loſt many Ages ago, and even Zoroaſter himſelf is unknown.

To conclude, there was nothing in the Myſteries of Mithra that had any Relation to the Trinity; for they performed their Ceremonies in deep Caves and Places under Ground; ſome of them took it for the Image of the World, and others for a Symbol of the Deity, which they ſaw but obſcurely and in part; and all the Honours that were paid to Mithra, reſpected the Sun, or (if you pleaſe) referred to the Sovereign Maſter of the World; but there were not in it any Footſteps of the Trinity, ſuch as Chriſtians believe of it.

IV. We leave to Orpheus the Glory of having invented the Grecian Theology; but what Affinity had this Muſician with the Jews to borrow from them the Myſtery of the Trinity? Of all the Myſteries there is not any more incomprehenſible than that. The Chriſtians have much ado to receive it, notwithſtanding the Evidence of Revelation; how then ſhall we perſwade our ſelves that the Heathen had adopted it upa little thread of Tradition, which was ſcarce known to them? Becauſe Orpheus ſpoke of * three Gods, Phanus, Uranus, Cronus, can we therefore conclude from thence that he † taught the Grecians that there were three divine Perſons in one and the ſame Eſſence? Read the learned Treatiſe || lately publiſhed about the Antiquity of the Celtes, and you will there find, that thoſe Gods which they had for ſo long time adored, were the firſt Kings and Heroes of the antient Gauls. The firſt whom they call Atmon, Father of Uranus, carry'd his victorious Arms into Cappadocia and Phrygia, was there ſlain as he was hunting, and after his Death the People of that Country conſecrated to him Altars and Groves; offer'd Libations to him; put him into the Degree of the Gods, and gave him the title of Moſt High, as if he had been the greateſt of them all.

Uranus his Son, not contented with his Succeſſion to ſo great an Empire, puſh'd on his Conqueſts much farther. His Name, in the Language of the Celtes, ſignifies a Man * of Heaven, becauſe he had very much ſtudied the motions of it, and by the Aſſiſtance of Aſtrology, had foretold to his Subjects great and ſtrange Evènts. He had married his Siſter Titæa, which among the Celtes, ſignifies the Earth; whereof the Poets ſaid that Heaven had marry'd the Earth, and they have Philoſophiz'd upon that Marriage. However, Uranus paſſed the Boſphorus, ent'red into Thrace, which he brought to ſubmit to his Laws: From thence he went into Greece and the Iſle of Candia; The Government whereof he gave to one of his Brothers, who had ten Sons that were named Curetes. 'Tis ſaid alſo, that he went up to the fartheſt Parts of Spain, and into Africa. Theſe Conqueſts cauſed him to be known almoſt over all the World, and to be adored as a God, particularly among the Grecians who had owned his Empire.

Saturn his Son was called Chronus †, becauſe he was the firſt of the Titan Kings that wore a Crown. Tertullian obſerves || further, that he took great Delight to cover himſelf with a ſcarlet Cloak, becauſe

---

* Hyde de Relig. Perſar. † Sad-der Proem. ibid. c. 33. p. 396. || Abulpharag. Hiſt Dyn. D. 5. p. 54. * Dr Cudworth, p. 547. † See what we have ſaid of Orpheus. l 3. c. 20 t. 2. p. 940. ||Dom. P. Perron, Antiquity of the Nation and Language of the Celtes, p. 50. * In the Language of the Celtes, Ur is a Man. From thence came the Vir of the Latins. En ſignifies Heaven; Titæa is the Earth. ibid. p. 60. † Chronus ſeems to come from Kroone, which is the ſame as Crown. Rhea in the Celtick Language ſignifies Lady, as Rhy ſignifies Lord. In this ſame Language Di Sadorne ſignifies Saturday, ibid. 72 73. || Tertull. de Pallio. c 4.

in

in truth the Scarlet of Phrygia where he reigned, was the moſt beautiful of all Colours. He declared War againſt his Father, and puſhing him from Province to Province, at laſt did caſt him into Priſon, where he died with ſpight and vexation. or in ſome ſuch violent manner. After he had ſurmounted this firſt Obſtacle, he had a ſecond to overcome, becauſe Titan the eldeſt Son of Uranus, had the Right of Succeſſion; but Saturn being Commander of the Troops, thereby got the Empire. He marry'd his Siſter Rhea, which in the Celtick Language ſignifies Lady; and it was by the Artifices of that Princeſs that he eſcaped the Ambuſhes were laid againſt him, and thereby made himſelf Maſter of his Father's Kingdoms. His own extended from Syria even to the end of all Spain. He had alſo preſerv'd the Mauritanians, which his Son Jupiter had taken away from him with the reſt of the Kingdom. See now the Gods whom they wou'd have to be the Perſons of the Chriſtian Trinity, even when the Celtes never were deſcended from the Titans. What we read of the Lives of theſe Gods in the Antients, don't inſpire us with reſpect enough to make our B. Trinity of them.

V. We muſt be very deſirous indeed of finding out the Trinity to diſcover J. Chriſt in the Pallas of the Greeks, and Minerva of the Latins, which was made to come out of Jupiter's Brain; and to put Varro in the Rank of Witneſſes to prove the Unity of a God; him, of whom St Auguſtin * ſaid, that at the ſame time he ſeemed to confeſs this Unity, he eſtabliſh'd a prodigious number of them, ſeeing that his God was divided into two Parts, viz. Heaven and Earth; Heaven was divided into two other Portions, and thoſe four parts brought forth a World of Spirits which were all adored. It is not ſufficient then to ſuppoſe, that the Heathen taught the Trinity after Zoroaſter, Mercurius Triſmegiſtus, and Orpheus down to Plato; or to alledge for a full proof, certain doubtful and glaring Expreſſions. We muſt look into the Syſtem of theſe Authors, examine their Thoughts and their Doctrine, ſee the Connection theſe thoughts have the one with the other. Whereas Dr. Cudworth ſlightly paſſes over all this, as if what he ſuppoſes, viz. that the Heathen who preceeded Plato, believed and taught the Trinity, was a thing certain and too clear to be proved.

He has been very large on the Platonick Syſtem. He has view'd it every way; he argues; he weighs what he finds to be good and what bad; but he does not fail making a third Suppoſition. To the end he might make Plato Orthodox, he has been forced to ſay, that the Diſciples had alter'd the Doctrines of their Maſter, and the antient Interpreters had not rightly underſtood him. This had need of Proofs; for are we ſure that we are able to penetrate the Sence of Plato's metaphorical Expreſſions better than Plotin, Porphyry, Proclus, Numenius, and thoſe other Profeſſors of the antient Platonick Philoſophy, whoſe Study it was almoſt all their Lives long?

Firſt † Plato owns, that he wrapt up what he ſaid under Enigmaes, which add to the depth or obſcurity of the matters he treated about, rendered him impenetrable, and often ridiculous to thoſe who were not well initiated, and uſed to him. He was afraid of explaining himſelf, and having one day wrote ſomething upon this matter, he deſired Dyoniſius to whom he addreſſed his Letter, not to return an Anſwer to him. He trembled for fear leſt his Letter ſhou'd be loſt either by Sea or Land, and gave I know not how many Aſſurances that he never would touch this matter again, for fear of expoſing himſelf. In ſhort, his Diſciples did not begin to underſtand and believe what he ſaid, till after thirty years Study about it. All which proves that it is very difficult to penetrate into the Thought of Plato; and beſides, that we have need of Men well inſtructed to be our Interpreters, to underſtand this Philoſopher aright. But where ſhall we find better Interpreters than thoſe who have profeſs'd blindly to follow him, and to ſpread his Doctrine thro all the World? Chriſtianity did not keep thoſe Perſons from following their Maſter; for on the contrary there was not any Sect more fit to maintain Paganiſm than that was, which purifyed it with a vaſt number of falſe Ideas. Moreover, they were not afraid of being ſomewhat conformable to that Religion, ſeeing they have cited the beginning of the Goſpel of St John, and were willing to have the firſt Words of it engraven in Characters of Gold. We will not ſeparate therefore the Diſciples from the Maſter, ſince they afford us Succours and Light, the better to underſtand him.

Secondly, the Alterations imagined to be in Plato's Theology, are ill proved. The Diſciples ſaid, that from the firſt Being, which was One and All Good, came the Unities and all the Goodneſſes. That queſtionleſs was Plato's Principle, who had got it from Pythagoras. It was a neceſſary conſequence from his Principles; for if the Ideas ſprang from the Intellect, he muſt ſay by the ſame Reaſon, that the Unities proceeded from the One, and the Goodneſſes from what is all Good. He ſaid alſo, that All that is beautiful and good came from the firſt Being.

VII. All the World agrees that Plato call'd Ideas inviſible Subſtances, divine, eternal and immaterial, as Tertullian charged him with. But beſides, he attributed to thoſe Subſtances eſſential Operations, becauſe he looks upon them as the phyſical Cauſes of every thing that is done. In ſhort, he has made Gods of thoſe Ideas, and conſequently has looked on them as Beings that are real, living and acting with a great Authority in the Univerſe. He has brought in again Polytheiſm under another form; he has deified Ideas inſtead of Heroes who were adored out of pious Gratitude; he has, in a word, made to come out of the Soul a World of Souls; he has ſaid in formal and expreſs terms, that the World was a God. We ought not therefore to ſeparate him any longer from his Interpreters, and as we do not find either in the Intellect, the true Son whom we ſeek, or in the Soul the holy Spirit; we are not to make of him one of the Doctors of the Chriſtian Trinity. Theſe are but general Remarks, but that we may have a clearer light of this matter, we will add hereto ſomething more particular.

VIII. Plato may have had two different Views in eſtabliſhing three Principles cloſely united. Firſt, he had not perhaps any other deſign than to explain the three Perfections of the Deity, which are neceſſary for the production and preſervation of the Univerſe. Thoſe three Perfections are his Goodneſs which induced God to create the World; his Wiſdom, which form'd to him the Plan of it, and his Power, which enabled him to execute it. He made of theſe Perfections ſo many different Principles, and of thoſe Principles as many Perſons as we worſhip and adore; whether it was becauſe he had a mind to ſuit himſelf to the humour and taſt of the People, that were ſtiff Maintainers of a plurality of Gods, and had but newly before put Socrates to death for denying it; or rather that he thonght it was a means to give a more pure Idea of thoſe Perfections and Principles, to form them into Perſons, and to diſtinguiſh their Operations, as if they were ſo many Beings that really and diſtinctly exiſted. There is nothing ſurpriſing in that; the Cabaliſtical Jews have followed the ſame method; and have faſhioned the Attributes of God into Perſons; and how many Doctors in the Church, in their frequent ſaying that J. Chriſt is the eternal Wiſdom of the Farher, have changed that

* Auguſt, de Civit. Dei. l. 7. c. 5. † Plato Ep. 2 ad Dionyſ. p. 707.

Perfection of God into a Perſon, and have believed it to be the Son of God? What means Clemens Alexandrinus *, when he aſſures us, that the word of the Father is not that which we preach, but the wonderful Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God. St Athanaſius † apologiz'd for one of his Predeceſſors, who maintain'd that the Lord was the Wiſdom, that there was no other Wiſdom which had produced it. That Word made Sabellius triumph, and did not hurt the Arians; for if there be not in God any other eternal Wiſdom beſides his Son, that Son is an Attribute of God which we call Wiſdom. Alphonſius || deſiring to convert the Jews whom he had quitted, fell into the ſame Error by endeavouring to prove to them the Trinity; for he obſerved that there was in God one Subſtance, one Wiſdom that deliberates and purpoſes, and one Will that executes. It would not have been a matter of wonder if Plato had ſpoken of Goodneſs, Wiſdom, and Power, as different Perſons, ſince both Jews and Chriſtians have done it ſo often. It ſeems alſo that Dr Cudworth was forced to confeſs as much; for deſigning to prove that Arius was no Platoniſt, he obſerves that if that Philoſopher had ſpoken of the Intellect, as Arius did of the Son, he would have * deprived the Wiſdom of God of his Eternity, ſince the ſecond Hypoſtaſis was nothing eſſentially but the Wiſdom; that Wiſdom by which God is wiſe. It was then but one of the Perfections of God which made Plato's ſecond Hypoſtaſis, and which he cauſed to be adored by the People inſtead of Heroes: And thus his Trinity was but a Trinity of Names.

IX. But tho this Opinion be ſupported by ſome learned Men, yet Plato might alſo have a Deſign of making a gradation of the Sovereign Being to us, or, if you had rather, a Scale or Ladder for us to aſcend up to God.

Indeed moſt Men conſidering that Abyſs which is betwixt God and us, and not knowing how to fill it up, have endeavoured to leſſen thoſe great and vaſt ſpaces that ſeparate us. To this end they have imagin'd that between the Sovereign Being and us, there are Intelligences, intermediate Gods, Angels, Saints; a Soul of the World, Mens agitat molem; a plaſtick Virtue, a vital Spirit; and God makes uſe of all theſe Beings more perfect than our own, to bring himſelf nearer to the Creatures, and to communicate his Vertue to them, by acting either in way of Production or Preſervation.

Plato has had this deſign as well as other Men, conceiving God to be a ſimple Being, without any compoſition; he could not conceive that this Being ſhould encloſe in his own Simplicity, ſuch a prodigious number of Ideas as ought to go towards the making of the World; wherefore he has cauſed a ſecond Being to flow from, and be dependant on the firſt; which lodg'd within it ſelf all theſe Ideas, and that is what he calls the Intellect.

He conſidered likewiſe this firſt Being as enjoying a perfect Repoſe, and which ought neither to move it ſelf, nor to ruffle its own Tranquility, by the Actions that muſt neceſſarily attend the formation of the Univerſe; wherefore he conceived to himſelf a third Principle. acting and animating the Creatures, as the Soul does the Man and all other Animals; whence it came to paſs, that he gave it the Name of the Soul, and by that means the diſtance was made leſs, and the Commerce with the Creature more eaſy.

From the Intellect (or underſtanding) iſſued forth a Crowd of Ideas which were ſo many Spirits and petty Gods, rais'd above the Soul of the World; and the Souls that came from thence, and thoſe Ideas made a new Channel of Communication. The Souls that the Soul of the World produced, were alſo noble, great, and rais'd above the matter to which they were faſtened. Some there are that add Nature as an eternal Principle, from whence came out all the material Beings, which form the Univerſe; but they pretend that this matter was purely paſſive; and that it is the Soul which has impreſs'd on it the motion it had need of. From Matter they aſcend again to the Soul of the World, from the Soul to the Intellect, and from the Intellect to the Being One and Good: Thus is the Ladder form'd by which the Creatures are united to the Creator, and ſo aſcend up again to him. This Syſtem is fixed; but here is nothing in common with the Chriſtian Trinity.

X. Plato had copied Timæus of Locri, who * thus explain'd the Production of all things. He maintain'd that there was one firſt and good Being, which having ſeen abundance of Matter in motion, and taking up different ſhapes and forms without Order and Digeſtion, reſolved to confine it within certain bounds, and to give it a regular form. To effect this, he made a model of what he was going to produce, and called it the intellectual Idea and World, In ſhort, he reſolved to give a Soul to the World, that it might govern and animate it. Here now are four very different Principles or beginnings of the Perſons of the Trinity whom the Chriſtians adore.

XI. Marcilius Ficinus † will not ſuffer us to doubt but that this was Plato's true Sentiment; for he obſerves, 1ſt, that that Philoſopher eſtabliſhed a firſt Principle, which was the Father of all things. He did not deſign to ſay, that the firſt Effects ought to be carryed up to God, for fear leſt it ſhould be thought that they are only thoſe that depend upon him; but he makes him the Author of all, becauſe he is the Father of them. He is called One becauſe of his Simplicity, and Good becauſe of his Goodneſs whereby he made all things. This was the firſt Principle; but this Principle which gave Exiſtence to Matter, did not finiſh the Work: 'Twas the Intellect that gave it the Form and Soul that moves it.

2. He gives of this Subordination the ſame reaſon as we do, becauſe the diverſity of Creatures, their Matter, their Vileneſs, not agreeing with the Excellence and Simplicity of the Sovereign Being, he cauſed another Intellectual World to proceed from him, which ſhuts up again all the Ideas that are in it; and that is what is called the Intellect. That is not the Being, but the Son of the Good: To mean with the Chriſtians that this ſecond Being is of the ſame Subſtance with the firſt, this is what is proclaimed by the whole School of Plato.

In a Word, Marcilius Ficinus explains this Subordination, by comparing it to the Sun and its Effects. He counts ſix things to be in that great Luminary, viz. Subſtance, its eſſential Light, that which comes from it, Splendour or Brightneſs, Heat, and the generation which that Heat produces. The two firſt are the Unity and Goodneſs of the Sovereign Being; the Light which proceeds from that Light, is the Intellect (or Underſtanding) from whence come forth the Ideas, as ſo many Rays from the Light; after this Architype of the World follows the Soul of the World, which is as the Brightneſs that ſhoots and darts from the Light; and the World comes up in the rear. They ſee there a Climax or Gradation, ſuch as we ſuppoſe it, by which the Sovereign Being approaches his Creatures, and the Creatures mount up again to him. He affirms this was the Opinion of Plato and of his School.

* Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 5. p. 547. † Athanaſ. de Sent. Dionyſ. p. 567. || Alphonſi Dialogi Bibl. Max. pat. t. 21.
* Cudw. ibid p. 575. † Timæus Locrus de animâ Mundi apud Platon. p. 554. || Marcil. Ficin. in Timæum Platonis. c. 8, 9, 10. in Oper. Plat. p. 814.

XII. Plato was obliged to make a Subordination among his Hypoſtaſies, ſince he made them as ſo many ſteps or degrees to come up to the Being that is the One and the Good. Tho he gave to them an ineffable Generation which was nothing like to thoſe of Nature, becauſe it was Eternal; yet he did not forbear to ſay, that the moſt perfect begat the leſs; that the Intellect look'd up to the firſt Being, and had need of him; whereas the Sovereign Being had no need of any thing. The Soul looked up to the Intellect as its Father. They were productive one of the other, as when a Stone falling into the Water forms there I know not how many Circles which are begotten one of anothet; for all the Circles depend on the firſt point. They ſaid, that the Intellect was the Echo of the divine Voice; his Image; that it bore his Character; but at the ſame time they acknowledged a Subordination. The firſt Hypoſtaſis was greater than the ſecond, and the ſecond was ſuperior to the third, and the third commanded Matter, or Nature which was purely paſſive, and which they called a God created. The Principle of every thing, ſaid Plotin, ought to be more ſimple than the thing it ſelf. Wherefore the ſenſible World ought to have been made by the World intellectual, or by the Intellect. And there muſt have been ſomething above this Intellect that is more ſimple to produce it; and, in effect, it has proceeded from Unity. Thus by gradation we mount from the ſenſible to the Intellectual World, and from the intellectual World to the Being, that is, * Sovereignly Simple and One.

XIII. Thoſe who love to find a Conformity between the Stile of J. Chriſt and that of the Heathen, and who run after thoſe manifeſt Alluſions, may content themſelves here; for the Platoniſts ſaid, that there was but One ſole Good, as J. Chriſt alſo teaches us in his holy Goſpel. If J. Chriſt has openly declared that the Father is greater than he, the Platoniſts have ſaid the ſame thing of the Intellect † which has proceeded from him. He was before all things; he contains all things. If St Paul calls the Son the Brightneſs of his Father's Glory; ſo there is nothing more common among the Philoſophers than that term to expreſs the ſecond Hypoſtaſis and its Generation, ſeeing it proceeded from the firſt Being, as a Beam from the Sun. If the ſame Apoſtle ſays that the Son is the expreſs Character and Image of his Father, the Platoniſts affirm the ſame thing of the Intellect, for they did often make uſe of the Compariſon of the Wax, on which they impreſs his Seal, his Arms, and his Image. To conclude, if the ſame Apoſtle ſaid that we now behold his Face as in a Glaſs; the Platoniſts ſaid likewiſe, that they ſaw the Sovereign being in the ſecond Hypoſtaſis as in a Mirroir; but they multiplied thoſe Mirroirs, for they would needs have it, that the third Hypoſtaſis was the Image of that Image reflected in a ſecond Mirroir. That teaches us, that we ought not to ſuffer our ſelves to be impoſed on by ſuch like Expreſſions: We are mightily pleas'd when we have diſcovered them; we think we do good Service to J. Chriſt and his Diſciples, and even to the Chriſtian Religion it ſelf, to find out thoſe weak traces of reſemblance with Paganiſm. But inſtead of ſtaying at the Bark of theſe terms, we ſhould endeavour to penetrate into the Sence of them, and find out the depth of the Tenets; for then we ſhall obſerve, that there is a great deal of difference between our Theology and that of Plato's.

XIV. To the end therefore that we may ſet this Truth in a clearer Light, let us now examine what thoſe Philoſophers ſaid on each Hypoſtaſis. We ſhall wonder perhaps at our enlargement on this matter, which reſpects the Jews moſt; but ſeeing that upon their Account we have begun to diſplay this Syſtem, 'tis beſt for us to make an end of it. And moreover as the Fathers ſuffered Platoniſm to paſs in the Chriſtian Church, from whence ſprang up a fruitful Harveſt of Errors and Hereſies, it is but juſt that we ſhould here unfold them, as the Occaſion preſents it ſelf naturally, and to unveil a Philoſophy about which Men have been ſo often deceived.

Firſt, They endeavouring to give their firſt Being an over-great Simplicity, made ſuch another God of him as was that of Epicurus. A ſluggiſh lumpy King ſitting on his Throne, who neither medled nor made with any thing; Immoveable, that contented himſelf with communicating Motion. He was idle and lazy, every thing was done for him, and he made all things to be manag'd by Reaſon and the Soul of the World. Very fortunately they did not diſpute his Knowledge, or at leaſt they left him an I know not what bright-ſhining Light which ſupplyed the defect of that Knowledge; but it cannot be denyed but that they gave him for his ſhare, Immoveableneſs and Sloth, for fear of troubling his Repoſe and Simplicity.

XV. This firſt Principle ought to have created two others. Macrobius ſays in expreſs terms || that He who is the firſt Cauſe, the Prince and Source of all things, hath created the Intellect from the ſuperabundant fulneſs of his Majeſty. This Intellect exactly reſembles his Father on the ſide where he beholds him; but on the other ſide he hath created the Soul, and that Soul deſpoiled of Matter degenerates, and enters into the Fabrick of the Body. I own this Creation is conteſted. Abelard * maintain'd long ſince, that Plato underſtood by that term, what came out from the Deity In ſhort, Plotin cryed out, let us baniſh all Temporal Generation, ſeeing we ſpeak of eternal Beings. We will give to them a Generation of Cauſe and Order, but not of Time, To conclude, Dr. Cudworth † obſerves very judiciouſly, that the Platoniſts not having had of the Creation ſo juſt an Idea as the Chriſtians, it is not to be imagined that they could have believed that the Intellect ſhould have been derived from nothing; ; or as Arius ſaid, that the Word had been made of ſomething that had not exiſted before. The Platoniſts underſtood by that, an Emanation of the Deity, as the Rays that come from the Sun, and as the ſmall ſtreams that run from a Spring-head. Macrobius inſinuates this when he ſays, that the Intellect had been brought forth from the overflowing fulneſs of the Majeſty of the firſt Being. Yet they did not believe that the Intellect was exactly of the ſame Nature as the firſt Being. Cyril || of Alexandria, blamed Numenius, ỳ when he had called thoſe three Principles, one God, he afterwards divided them, and made three different Gods of them. He cites Plotin as another Witneſs for what he advances In ſhort, he ſays * very elegantly, that God is more excellent than Reaſon, than the Soul and Sentiments, ſeeing it is He who gives all theſe things, and He is All. Maximus † of Tyre in Phœnicia, a great Platonick Philoſopher, ſaid likewiſe, that there is a God, Father and King of all things, and ſeveral Gods that are his Children command with him. We have obſerved that the ſecond Principle depends on the firſt, and conſequently that it was ſubaltern and inferior to that which gave the title to it. In a Word, the firſt God was ſimple, and immoveable; every thing was made for him. It is almoſt impoſſible for the human Mind to know him; but the ſecond is a World Intellectual, which includes the Plan of all that can be produced.

---

* Plotin. Enead. 5 l. 1 c. 6 p. 518 de Introd. ad Theol. l. 1 c. 17 p. 1013. Ennead. 5 l. 1 c. 6. p. 512. and 518. Tyr. Or. 1 p. 5.

† Plotin. Enead. 5 l. 1 c. 6. p. 513. † Cudw. Syſt. Intell. c. 4 p. 576.

|| Macrob. in ſomn Scip l. 1 .c. 14. || Cyril. contra Julian. l. 8. p. 272.

* Abel. * Plotin.

† Θεὸς εἷς πάντων βασιλεύς, καὶ θεοὶ πολλοὶ θεῶν παῖδες συνάρχοντες θεῷ Max.

XVI. There have been great Eulogies given to this eternal Intellect. Porphyry * quite stunned Cyril of Alexandria, and made him believe that he had been ſpeaking of the eternal Generation of J. Chriſt, when he had ſaid, "that the firſt Principle had produced an "Intellect inconceivable to Man, that ſubſiſts by him-"ſelf; in whom are all things; who came out from "the Deity, who ſhone forth before all Ages; who "begot himſelf; who is his proper Father; who is E-"ternal before all time; for there was no time when he "firſt appeared. It was not by any Command, or "even by any Act of the Will that the Deity brought "him forth; but by a neceſſary Emanation. It ſeems "nothing can be ſaid greater or ſtronger for the Ge-"neration and Divinity of this ſecond Principle.

XVII. Yet it is avowed, that He was much leſs perfect than the firſt Being; and when we enter into the Examination of his Nature, We find it only the collection and aſſembling of all the Ideas of things that were to be brought forth, Philo †, who was imbued with Platonick Principles, very handſomely explains how this was done. The Deity deſigning to bring forth a ſenſible and material World, reſolv'd to make the Plan of it, and to this end to produce an intelligible World, wherein ſhould be found all the Images of the Creatures he had a mind to create. This intelligible World was Plato's Intellect; for he frequently called it by that Name. Thus the ſecond Perſon was an amaſs of Ideas, of which that Philoſopher afterwards made ſo many Gods, and the Intellect thereby became an aſſemblage of many Gods; a Being compos'd of almoſt an infinite number of Divinities. Let it not be thought that we give the Philoſophers too groſs a Sentiment, that ſo we may make 'em odious: This naturally flows from their Principles; for the firſt Being not being able to act by himſelf, proceeds by degrees. He frames to himſelf a Plan of the viſible World, and to render it more juſt, he paints out all the Ideas of it in the intellectual World, and of that intellectual World he has made a God under the Title of Word and Intellect, and after this they have made Ideas which they transform into ſo many Eternal Gods. The Intellect, ſays Plotin || having been begotten by the firſt God, he begat with him all the Entities; the beauty of Ideas, which are all as ſo many intellectual Gods. Apuleius affirms likewiſe that Plato look'd on the Ideas as ſo many true, ſpiritual, eternal Gods, without beginning and without ending. From thence alſo it happens, that Proclus, that great Diſciple of Plato, ſaid, that there was no Idea of Evil, becauſe all the Ideas being God, Evil would be God. In fine, Julian the Apoſtate reduced the Gods whom the Heathen World adored, to theſe Ideas, Apollo was the Idea of a ſenſible Sun, and Diana that of the Moon. This Syſtem appears yet more ridiculous when we weigh their Expreſſions nicely, and as we ſay with rigour, and obſerve that they call thoſe Ideas diſtinct Subſtances, and animal Gods, as Apuleius ſpoke; for then how can we look upon this ſecond God, begotten from all Eternity, as an Aſſemblage of different Subſtances and Animals, which are all re-united in him. Dr. Cudworth maintains, * that Plato had only a deſign to oppoſe Ideas to periſhable Accidents, and that it is in this Sence he has called them neceſſary Subſtances, and that he has given them alſo the Title of Animals, to ſhew that they were not dead Figures, like to thoſe sketch'd upon Canvaſs nor immovable Statues. There is ſomething true in this Conjecture. The deſign of Plato was to give an advantageous Idea of theſe Ideas. He would not have them really looked upon as being ſimple Accidents which periſh without the Subſtances being deſtroyed to which they are attached: But it is alſo moſt certain, that to render theſe Ideas more perfect, he changed them into real Subſtances and into Perſons. As he has done with the Intellect and intellectual World; that is to ſay, with the Univerſal Idea, One Perſon and One eternal Being, that he might make it more intelligible, he has been forced to make of the particular Ideas, of which this intellectual World was compos'd, ſo many ſubſtances and different perſons. This ſeem'd ſo much the more rational and ſenſible, as it gave them the power of producing all things: Thus did they believe that the Souls of Men were ſo many real Beings, and Parties detach'd from the World, divinæ particula auræ. They had perſonaliz'd this Soul of the World, as they had made a Perſon of the Intellect; and they made of the Souls detach'd from the Soul of the World ſo many diſtinct Beings, as they made of the Ideas ſo many real and living Subſtances.

Now to make the Syſtem of the Platoniſts juſt, we muſt of neceſſity take one of theſe two ways, either to ſay, that thoſe Philoſophers acknowledging but one ſole principle, look'd on its Intellect, or the wiſdom which had made the Plan of the Univerſe, as one of his Attributes, and then it is no more than a Trinity of Names. As the Philoſophers, who diſtinguiſh the Subſtance of the Soul, the Intellect and the Will, do not make three diſtinct Souls; they conſider only the Soul in it ſelf as far as it thinks and wills. Plato by giving to the Deity a Wiſdom and an Underſtanding (or Intellect) which has ſupplyed the Ideas of this lower World, and a power to execute what the Intellect had conceived; he hath no farther eſtabliſhed a Trinity of Perſons.

Or elſe, we ought to ſay, that he hath made of the Intellect as well as of the Soul of the World, different Perſons; and then alſo he muſt have believed that the Ideas, wherewith that Intellect was filled, were ſo many different Beings of the Intellect, as the Intellect and intellectual World is different from the firſt Principle. Not only the connection of his Syſtem carries us to this; but we have good ground to believe it from his own words, and from the modeſt reflections that Ariſtotle made on his Maſter upon that detachment of Ideas. But which way ſoever we turn our ſelves, Plato's Trinity we find quite different from that of the Chriſtians, ſeeing that the ſecond Perſon is an aſſemblage of different Ideas, and that his Ideas are ſo many Subſtances and real Beings; and, (if I may ſo ſpeak) ſo many Animals that have Life, Breath and Sence.

XVIII. Neither is there leſs trouble and difficulty about the third principle, which is, the Soul of the World. Origen † ſaid, that God was as the Soul of the World. He compared this Univerſe to a great Animal, which was governed by the power of God as by a Soul, becauſe it is he who by his Power communicates to all Creatures the Life and Motion they enjoy. The Platoniſts maintain the ſame thing of that Soul which made up the third principle. As Moſes aſſures us, that the Spirit of God moving upon the face of the Waters communicated to them that fruitfulneſs which was neceſſary to produce all things; ſo the Platoniſts affirmed that it was the Soul had brought forth all things, wherefore they called it the Framer and Author of the Univerſe. But at the ſame time they ſubjoyn three things that are incompatible with the third perſon in the Trinity.

Firſt, They object || againſt Julian the Apoſtate ſome paſſages of the Platonick Philoſophers, which made the third principle inferior to the ſecond in order and Nature. Secondly, this Soul of the World was fouud wrapt up, and as it were buryed in the Creatures to which it was united: It did there the ſame offices that the Soul does in human Bodies, where it is clogged with heavy matter, and even ſwallowed up by the infirmities of the Body; and as the Soul united to the Body makes the Man, ſo the Soul of the World united to the Univerſe, made the Third God. The Platoniſts made no ſcruple of ſpeaking after this manner, and to confeſs that the World was the third God. For which reaſon Philo the Jew, who had follow.d Plato till then, found himſelf obliged to leave him. He had very favourably receiv'd the Word, the Wiſdom, the God intelligible, who made the ſecond Perſon of the Platoniſts; but he would not look upon the World as the third God, becauſe that ruined the foundations of his Religion. In fine, the Platoniſts, jealous of the Glory of their Soul, affirmed that it was of the ſame Nature and Species with the Soul of the World. This firſt Soul was only the elder Siſter of the reſt of them, which were of the ſame Eſſence with it; they called it Omouſios, as the Fathers of the Council of Nice have ſaid it of the Son with the Father.

* Porphyr. Hiſtor. Philoſ. l. 4. apud Cyril. contr. Jul. lib. 1. p. 32. 46 + Philo de Opific. Mundi. p 3. || Plotin. Enne. 5. l. 1. c. 7. * Cud. Syſt. Intell. c. 4. p. 563. † Orig. Περὶ ἀρχῶν. || Cyril contr. Jul. l 3. p. 97.

der

XIX. This Sentiment has ſhocked Dr Cudworth, who was a zealous Defender of the Platonick Trinity; wherefore he endeavours to juſtify it by the help of the diſtinction of two Souls of the World owned by the Platoniſts. They called One the Celeſtial Venus. Saturn, was the Father of that Daughter, but ſhe had not any Mother; ſhe was born pure of a pure Beiug; ſhe continued always in Heaven, without being able either to come down here below, or be ſubmerged by the Creatures: She was diſengaged of Matter, wherefore they might look on her as a Divinity; and they imagined there was another inferior Venus, that was not ſeparated from the other, always cloſely united to her; but which however fail'd not to come down into the Creatures. This was that ſecond Soul, or ſecond Love, which was born with the World, and which animated it by uniting it ſelf to it; as the Soul is with the Body, whilſt the firſt eternal Soul continued in Heaven.

'Tis true, Plotin has ſpoken of this firſt Venus; but that ſtile is particular to him, and even the fourth Soul of the World, which moves all things, which is united to the third, and which yet ceaſes not to be looſened from it, makes another Gradation very obſcure and puzzling to People that deſire to have diſtinct Ideas. All Platoniſts did acknowledge but One Soul of the World, which they called Venus, or Love, and which was the Power that God had diſplayed for the Production of the Univerſe: But by making a Perſon of this third Principle, they did not for all that ſet up and eſtabliſh a true Trinity, ſeeing that after they had believed this Soul of the World to be Eternal, they gave it at the ſame time baſe Functions that were unworthy the Divinity. In following their Principles we muſt acknowledge the Souls to be as ſo many portions of the Deity; but according to all appearances that third Perſon was only the Power of the Sovereign Being, which they cloathed into a Perſon.

XX. It is plain and eaſy to ſee what it was that ſo blinded the Fathers, that they were very near making Plato a Chriſtian, before ever the Goſpel had been publiſhed; that Plato comes forth and appears here, cry'd a Divine of the 5th Age*; 'tis a wonderful thing 'that ſo many Ages before the lying in of the Virgin 'and the Incarnation of a God; long before the Tri 'nity of Perſons in one ſole Eſſence had been preach'd 'to the Nations, he had by a bold ſtep by a happy 'Genius, and an inimitable ſtile, ſpoken of God the Father, of the Word of the Father, who was his Council, and the Love of both the one and the other, that he made One ſole Deity, that was undivided, eternal and Sovereign. That Love, of which he made the third Principle, was the Soul of the World, the Love, or Venus of the Platoniſts. There was diſcovered among the Philoſophers a Sovereign Being, an eternal Wiſdom, to which they gave the ſame name of Word, or Reaſon, which St John hath applyed to the Son of God. To conclude, they owned a Spirit, a Soul of the World. Behold what ways they made uſe of to blind the Simple who do not throughly penetrate into a Syſtem to diſcover all the parts of it.

XXI. The antient and modern Chriſtians are fallen into five different Exceſſes by the Philoſophy of Plato. 1ſt, The Fathers of the firſt Ages that ent'red into the Church, after they had ſtudied this Philoſopohy which obtained at that time in the Schools, would not have loſt their time, nor the Fruit of their Labours. They extravagantly boaſted of the Principles of their Philoſophy, and endeavoured to introduce them into the Chriſtian Theology. As the Scholaſticks have been vainly proud ſince the Philoſophy of Ariſtotle, and have raiſed him up to ſo high a Veneration, that it was reckon'd a kind of Hereſy to contradict any Opinions of his; in ſo much that Ramus became a Martyr upon the account of his Animadverſions againſt them: So theſe firſt Fathers were extravagantly tranſported with Plato and his Principles, and by that means they often wander'd from the truth they were in ſearch of only in the Goſpel, without ever being aſhamed to diſguiſe it, and to cover it under the Livery of human Philoſophy. It was from this Principle that Gobar, of whom Photius has given † the Extracts, maintains with the Platoniſts, that the Soul proceeds from the divine Subſtance. But he was not the only Man of this Opinion. Juſtinian || condemn'd the Origeniſts for holding that Souls had the ſame Subſtance, the ſame Nature, and the ſame Light as the Word; and they had taken up this Opinion from their Maſter, one of the moſt zealous Platoniſts.

Secondly, they conceived that by adopting this Philoſphy, they opened the door of Chriſtianity to the Platoniſts, and ſo made their Converſion the more eaſy. Their Intention was good. They flattered themſelves that they could no more attack the Doctrine of the Trinity on its weakeſt ſide, which is that of Reaſon, if they ſtrengthened it upon an antient Authority, and which at that time was moſt of all reſpected. Inſtead of diſplaying all the Syſtem which might have appear'd monſtrous by the Perſonality of Ideas, or would have furniſhed but a Trinity of Names, they principally applyed themſelves to that which was more dazeling, the number of three, as to what they call'd Perſons, and ſhut their Eyes hard upon what was different and contrary to that Doctrine, as we have made it appear. Now was not there a little Inſincerity in the Hearts of thoſe who cry'd up Platoniſm at ſo high a rate? It was not altogether real; for we find but too many Divines whoſe Heads are this way turn'd and over heated, being deceived in their Underſtandings by a Shadow of truth found among their Enemies, and particularly among the Heathen. They make a ſmall glimmering to paſs for a glorious divine Light; they are over-joyed in having diſcovered this Light in the midſt of Darkneſs; they exult and triumph, and oftentimes lay a great ſtreſs on their Faith, without ever minding whether that Truth which is imperfect, ſophiſticated, covered with Fables and lying Stories, be of any great Support and Comfort to them. They may make uſe of it as an Ornament in their Diſcourſes to diſplay their

* Claud. Mamert de ſtatu. Animæ l. 2 c. 7. Bibl. max. Patr. t. 6 p. 1062. † Phot Cod 32. || Juſtin. Ep. ad V. ſynod apud Cedren.

Learn-

Learning, or to form a Judgment in the Minds of the People; but they are almoſt always perverting and wreſting things with a deſign to find Treaſures in the Dunghil where there is very little Gold, and Chriſtianity in Principles that are Erroneous and full of Contradictions.

